Chetwood, Philip R. Grier, A. S. Wendroff and Oscar Parsons are authorized and appointed to receive subscription to said stock thereof, and the first mentioned three, and as such are hereby authorized and appointed to receive subscriptions to the capital stock thereof; the first three named, and as such are hereby authorized to close the subscription books of said company when the said capital stock shall be fully subscribed and distributed and apportion the same among the subscribers as they (subscribers) may respectively see aforesaid to distribute, but, if deem proper; and when the capital stock shall have been subscribed for and the first instalment has been paid thereon, by a notice published in some newspaper printed in the city of Rahway, both three weeks before the time of meeting, the said subscribers may meet together at the time and place named in said call, and adopt such by-laws, rules and regulations as may be necessary and expedient for commencing and carrying on business under this act; they may also, at the same or some subsequent time, choose a board of directors, in the manner hereinbefore provided, who shall hold their offices with all the powers given to them by this act; in the act with others are chosen to supply their places, and when the by-laws have been adopted, and the directors have been chosen as aforesaid, and when the board of directors shall have been organized by the choice of a president and secretary, the said corporation may exercise all the powers and privileges conferred by this act.

5. And be it enacted, That the directors may choose a president, vice president, treasurer and secretary, of said corporation, each of whom shall be citizens of the state of New Jersey, and such other officers, clerks and agents, and establish such agencies in this state or elsewhere, as shall be by them deemed advisable for the conducting the business of the company, for their compensation, and take bonds for any and all of them for the faithful performance of their duties, and make such agreements and agreements as may be deemed necessary; the president and vice president shall be chosen from among the directors, and may hold their appointments for one year and until officers are chosen; but the other officers, agents and servants of said company may be displaced and new ones appointed at the pleasure of the directors; in the absence or disability of the president, the vice president shall preside, and if both are absent or disabled, the directors may choose a president pro tempore, and in case any vacancy shall occur in the board of directors, the remaining directors may choose a director or directors from among the stockholders to fill such vacancy, who shall hold the appointment until others are chosen in their stead.

6. And be it enacted, That all policies of insurance and other contracts authorized by this act, may be made with or without the seal of said corporation and shall be binding, and shall also be binding and obligatory upon the said corporation according to the true intent and meaning of such policies and contracts.

7. And be it enacted, That the capital stock, moneys and personal estate of said corporation may be invested, at the discretion of the directors, either in loans upon bonds and mortgages upon real estate, or in the United States stocks, bank stocks, insurance stocks, or stocks or bonds created by any state, or of corporations created by this state, and the same may be called in or reinvested at the pleasure, under the provisions of this act; and it shall be the duty of said corporation to make annually a report to the legislature containing a full accurate statement of its condition and affairs.

11. And be it enacted, That the same at law may be maintained by any stockholder or person insured by said company, against said corporation, for losses insured against by said company; if payment shall be withheld more than thirty days after the same shall be due and payable by the terms of the policy of insurance or other contract, and after the said corporation shall have been duly notified of such loss or injury; and the said corporation shall possess the general powers and be subject to the restrictions and liabilities contained in the act entitled "An act to revise and compile a general law, the fourteenth day of February, eighteen hundred and forty six, so far as the same are applicable.

12. And be it enacted, That this act may be altered, amended, or repealed at the pleasure of the Legislature; nothing contained therein shall be so construed as to authorize said company to engage in the business of banking.

13. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 23 1865.

A further supplement to the act entitle-

"An act to fix the salaries of the officers of the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey."

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That there shall be paid to the secretary of the senate and clerk of the house of assembly, the sum of four hundred dollars, in addition to the present compensation allowed by law; to the assistant secretary of the senate and assistant clerk of the house of assembly, the sum of four hundred dollars, in addition to the present compensation allowed by law; to the sergeant-at-arms of the senate and house of assembly, the sum of one hundred dollars, in addition to the present compensation allowed by law; to each of the pages of the senate and house of assembly, the sum of fifty dollars, in addition to the compensation allowed by law.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall apply only to the present session of the present senate and house of assembly.

3. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved April 6, 1865.

given in the newspapers printed in the said city of Elizabeth, and such share or stock shall entitle the owner thereof, at each election, to be given either in person or by proxy; and that the books of the said company shall be kept in the city of Elizabeth, in the county of Union.

4. And be it enacted, That the board of directors shall have power to appoint a president, secretary and treasurer, and such other officers and agents as they may deem necessary for carrying on the business of the company, and to allow them respectively such remuneration for their services as may, in their judgment, be a just and reasonable one.

5. And be it enacted, that Jacob Davis, A. Dollman, Mulford, William G. Magie, and Amos Clark, junior, are hereby authorized to open books for receiving subscriptions to the capital stock of said company, at Elizabeth City, in the county of Union, given two weeks notice of the time and place, by advertisement in two newspapers printed in Elizabeth City, and the shares so subscribed for and commissioners shall, before they proceed to the business of their appointment, take and subscribe an oath or affirmation, faithfully and impartially to execute the duties of their appointment, according to the best of their skill and judgment.

6. And be it enacted, That the said commissioners have power, when books are opened, to administer the oath or affirmation to any person or persons, touching the business of their appointment, and to report the same, with the names of the persons so sworn, and the shares subscribed by them severally, to the president and directors of said company.

7. And be it enacted, That if any shares of said stock shall not be taken by subscription, the said commissioners have power to receive the money for such shares, and to dispose of the same, and of all the shares so subscribed for, in such manner as they shall think most for the interest of said company, and to receive payment therefor, and to make and execute a certificate of the number of shares so disposed of, and the money received therefor, and to deliver the same to the president of said company, and the same shall be deemed and taken to be a part of said company, and the money so received shall be taken and deemed to be a part of the capital of said company.

8. And be it enacted, That it shall be lawful for the directors to make dividends of the profits of the said company as shall appear advisable among the stockholders, upon such rate as shall be established by the board, when dividends shall be paid, out semi-annually to the parties entitled thereto, or to their legal representatives.

11. And be it enacted, That this act shall continue in force thirty years, provided one-fourth part of the stock of the corporation before the repeal or expiration of this charter shall be effected thereby, and the said corporation shall have a reasonable time to bring business to a final settlement.

12. And be it enacted, that this company shall pay into the treasury of this state for the use of the school fund one quarter of one per centum per annum on the capital stock and which amount shall be paid in under oath or affirmation of the president and secretary thereof.

Approved April 6, 1865.

A Further Supplement to the act entitled "An act to incorporate societies for the promotion of religion," approved April sixteenth, eighteen hundred and forty-six.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the entire property of the "Pennington Seminary and Female Collegiate Institute," be vested in a board of trustees of six ministers and six laymen, to be chosen by the New Jersey Annual Conference.

2. And be it enacted, That the board of trustees shall be authorized and empowered to fill vacancies in the board for the present year.

3. And be it enacted, That the trustees of the education fund of the New Jersey Conference be authorized and empowered to transfer funds to the board of trustees of "Pennington Seminary and Female Collegiate Institute."

4. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved April 6, 1865.

Oh! Be not the First!

Oh! be not the first to discover
A flaw in the faith of a lover,
Whose heart may prove true to the end.

We cannot to know one another,
And it may error we feel;
Or speak not about him at all.

A smile or a sigh may awaken
Suspicion most false or malicious;
And thus our belief may be shaken
In hearts that are honest and true.

How off the light smile of gladness
Is traced from the lip to the cheek,
To parody truth and affection,
Or lull a suspicion to rest!

How often the friends we hold dearest,
Their selfish emotions conceal;
And become the purest, sincerest,
Have secrets they cannot reveal!

Leave base minds to harbor suspicion,
And small ones to trace our defects—
Let not be a noble wish lost,
For base is the mind that suspects.

We cannot to know one another,
And it may error we feel;
Then let us speak well of our brother,
Or speak not about him at all.

OLD HEADS AND YOUNG HEARTS.

BY MRS. M. V. AMES.

The sun was shining coyly down upon a little brown house, situated on the outskirts of a New England village, that seemed battling for a place and position among the grand old mountains by which it was surrounded. For, stretching away in every direction, dwellings nestled close up to the rugged side of the hills, draped with evergreens, beautiful in a landscape, but detestable to the cultivators of the soil. Patches of snow and sod land, and of bare ground told of the warfare going on between winter and summer; and the tender germinant of territory gained by the latter told plainly which would be the victor. Green brown apple trees in and around the village stretched their tiny boughs imploringly toward the warm sunshine, like innocent pleading for charity; while the few robins that had ventured into the disputed territory twittered among the bare branches, or sang praises over the discomfiture of their old enemy, Winter.

But in the little brown house, almost hidden by tall lilacs and sweetbriar, a mother and daughter were conversing sadly of the present and future.

"It is no use, mother! This is the third time that I have been repulsed. I see so much of little matrimonial speculation; principal sends word that Judge Withcomb has recommended an old and experienced teacher, and he knows I am sorry for her. He seems to have something to do with every failure I have had yet!"

"I am afraid I do Lucy. Judge Withcomb is wealthy and purse-proud, and knowing of the intimacy between your and Morton, he wishes to keep you from a place so teacher in the village, thinking, perhaps, that it will lessen your employment farther away."

The rich color flushed into the beautiful girl's cheeks, and the bright lustre to her dark eyes.

"And you think that, too, is the reason Mr. Morton away to pursue studies that are taught in our own school?"

"I do, Lucy. Morton is a boy who continues to place every obstacle in your path that he possibly can. It is his boast that he has never yielded to your wishes cost and is foiled; and it is true, or nearly so, I believe, for I have known him for years and watched him closely."

"But he shall not succeed in this, or at least not wholly. "I will rise! I will become independent of him and then—well then—the future must take care of itself," she said, more gently.

"Lucy, I have never spoke to you of marriage! Ever asked you to become my wife."

"Mother, mother! We have been dear friends, always; and he has often told me that I was dearer to him than any one else on earth; nothing more."

"I thought I had your confidence, my daughter, and am glad that you confide in me. Now, would you be willing to leave this place and never see Morton Withcomb again, if by so doing you could be sure of an advantageous position as teacher?"

"O, mother!" and a sharp pain at her heart told how precious was the love she had treasured there.

The mother watched the struggle with the same shrinking that she would have done a surgical operation; and she thought the pain was quite as severe.

"I have been offered two thousand dollars for my place, as you know; and can still take it, if I wish. And while you were out for your answer, this morning, I received another letter from Mrs. Bloom Jamos, begging me to come to him and take charge of his motherless girls, and offering to give a place as school teacher or in one of the most fashionable families in the city where he resides, and a salary much higher than you could expect to receive here, even as principal. Your young cousins also have taken lessons on the piano, which he assures me shall not lesson your income."

"But is it one of the conditions that I shall never see Morton again?"

"Certainly not! But it is not likely that you will ever meet if you go, as Hilinto is live, you will probably be forever separated. Bound by no pledge, he may wife, Lucy, and be as you have ever been to me, the dearest object on earth!"

The weary eyes faded from her cheeks, and the bright tears stole softly to her eyes, as she answered quietly:

"I will be your wife" Morton; and, oh, how she always for them we are bound to do so now!"

Six weeks later Lucy returned a bride to the home of her childhood. No one but themselves knew the regretful father knew of their long secret engagement.

The ten thousand dollars in her own right was a more than enough for the school, and Judge Williams, who was proud of his daughter, was not a little surprised at her marriage with a poor man, but he loved her too much to oppose her wishes.

"And so my sweetheart—wife, came near obtaining your out of a fortune as well as a wife!" he said to his son, when informed of the fact. "Well, old Fogy's are poor caterers for young hearts."
