PREFACE.

The fourth volume of Baldwin's Directory of the Oranges goes out to its patrons with many improvements and a largely increased value to the public. The importance of the addition of Bloomfield and Montclair to the directories of the Oranges will at once be apparent to all. The work of obtaining the canvass in these townships, as would naturally be the case with work of this kind in a new field, has been attended with more or less difficulty, and therefore it may not be as perfect as could be desired or as it will be in future editions. The feature, also of post office addresses, introduced this year, while it will undoubtedly prove to be of great utility as it is, the impossibility of making it absolutely perfect at once will be readily appreciated. It has been the aim of the publisher to note the post office addresses of all, but in some cases they could not be obtained by the canvassers. In making reference to the book for that purpose it will be understood as a rule that where no post office is named, by abbreviation or otherwise, the address is understood to be the general post office of the town. In the case of Orange, East Orange or West Orange, Orange post office is understood if none is named. A greater number of New York addresses of business men living in the townships appears this year than formerly. The present edition is one-third larger than any previously issued, and it is consequently in the same ratio of greater value to advertisers. By the addition of Bloomfield and Montclair an area of territory is covered which embraces a population of more than 40,000, another fact of importance to advertisers. At considerable expense a new and carefully drawn map has been made, upon which is noted all the recent changes, and which has been finely printed in colors. Still another valuable improvement in the work is the re-arrangement of the Orange street directory, by which all intersecting streets are named. These improvements, with a constant aim and effort to maintain a high standard of completeness and accuracy, warrants the publisher in the assurance that in the Directory of the Oranges the public will find a valuable promotor of the business and social interests of the community.
