VEGETINE. Has Given Weeks Strength. Boston, Feb. 16, 1877. H. R. STEVENS, Dear Sir: For the benefit of those who may be suffering from the effects of the debilitating heat of the Summer particularly and people, as I am, who are obliged to be in the cars and in the world, I will mention instances of my own case. Last Summer I was so prostrated by the heat that I was obliged to give up my business for a time. Hearing of your VEGETINE I commenced using it, and it gave me strength from the first bottle. I continued its use, and was able to attend to my business. I have recommended it to many others, who have used it with the same results. I believe it to be the best Spring Medicine. Yours truly, A. W. WHITE, Proprietor. Rahway, N. J., Feb. 16, 1878. 6m18

HOUSEHOLD RECIPES.

[illegible]

A certain way to keep sale from sugar barrels, lard cans and preserve jars, says one who has tried it, is to wet a string well with kerosene around the top of the jar, and place the top and string of the jar, with the kerosene, every few days.

To Can an Orange.—The Lancet says is said to be an excellent remedy for the croup. Take one teaspoonful of pulverized alum, one of sulphur and the whites of two eggs; mix all well together and put it in a small piece of muslin, which is to be tied over the tube from the throat. It is said this may be repeated in little more than an hour, and smaller children less, say half a teaspoonful for a year old, and less for younger, all in proportion.

Tapioca Pie.—Take of tapioca, six ounces pulverized sugar, one ounce, lemon juice, one ounce, grated lemon peel, half an ounce, milk, one and a half teaspoonfuls cream tartar in the flour, pepper and salt, same as white mountain cake. Cut and roll crust. Half a pound of butter, half a pound of brown sugar, half a pound of flour, half a pound of fat bacon, one tablespoonful of butter, one tablespoonful of water, with the other ingredients boil in only minutes, stirring all the time; let the paste rise twice, and bake in a quick oven.

Molasses Pie or Cake.—One pound of sugar and three quarters of a pound of butter, beaten to a cream. Slightly warm two pints of molasses and mix all with the butter and sugar; add two eggs, well beaten, half a teaspoonful of soda, one teaspoonful of cinnamon, one teaspoonful of cloves, one teaspoonful of ginger if desired; two pounds of sifted flour; mix well and bake.

Try the southern chicken or sage cake; one heaping teaspoonful of soda, one of cream tartar, one cup of molasses, one cup of warm water, sifted with the flour; add one teaspoonful of cinnamon, well sifted and dried; Flour the fruit well before mixing. Bake in one large pan or a nice oven.

COULDN'T PLAY.

Charles Rich waged to explain how it is and why he got the worst end of the bargain.

"Will I and Sniffles sit down to play a game of euchre for the beer, I should not be cute?

"Can you with a knife, strike wind blown leaves?

"They are a lie on the cards. They I deals."

"You doubt him a little?"

"Oh, no! I doubt not the cards. They are bright. I deals. He throws down a king.

"Why did he throw down what he did, Sniffles asks?"

"Because I trumped the king's queen, and I took it."

"You took it eh? Did you (she is kindly, as we mostly, or how I did you take it and put it in your pocket?"

"Well Judge, if you can't play euchre I can't go into partnership with you all in one low, cute." We had a big joke about the last trick, and he called me a liar and cut and dried. I was trying to catch him when the office boy came in with the beer, and I hope this will be a great moral lesson to me never to play euchre.

"Do what?"

"To let a man cheat me after all."

"Do you think I have sinned?"

"Sinned? I have sinned, sighed, the great sinner, and I have sighed, sinner after sinning his sinning." "A Congressman should want to sit down with me to win the time away. I would like more joy in his hands—more joy than I have. I'm sorry I ever saw Sniffles. I'm sorry I ever put an ace to cover on the bed table. I'm sorry I ever let the ace through the middle seat. I don't know whether it's strife to play and mean to two throws or to know who can't get out the kingdom first. I don't know if it's sin to play euchre for fund five dollars for dinner, the poser, and if the other side had been accepted he'd have got the same dinner from the same bottle."

The poser concludes play against the hard, and he paid up and signed.

PHYSIOGNOMY.

They were in a railroad coach, journeying to Chicago. On the opposite seat was a man of commanding figure, massive brow, and thoughtful expression.

"What a fine countenance, James, I wish I have his organization."

"Maybe he's a lawyer, Amelia."

"Or a great preacher. The Lord evidently gave him the power too, too much for anything but love and worship."

"He's a bloody."

"Yes, sir, bloody. A man with such a heavenly religious mould's constitutional bloody's a money getter. He sins with a good grace, James."

"Do you think he is an editor?"

"An editor, with such a face? An editor, with that thoughtful, overpowering, chastening long forehead, and calming and unobtrusive mouth, and strong, yet gentle, determination, showing gladly man in his proper sphere, and worship displayed, the best friend he sees of a view for purposes? No, James, he is a philosopher. He's a christian minister or a great lecturer, or a great lawyer, or the good Samaritan. He has that stamp of intellection that he is all that is noble, true and true."

"A great poet's right, Amelia. I'm sick of my bargain. I'm sure he is."

"Look at him, a nation in miniature, darling such a nation as Napoleon with noble brow, and a nation in miniature his vacation. Amelia hold her breath lest we disturb the spell."

"I feel a noble and must shapen."

"Look, James, look at the—"

"This is Georgia, the Empire and an exhibitor of our works, pointing to a very slim, [illegible] thoughts over us, the land of Columbia, to [illegible] Georgia." Amelia, I'm sick of my bargain. Hoary headed Georgia, I'm sick of my bargain."

"Look, James, look at the—"
