ITEMS OF INTEREST.

An Ohio parrot aired a longer camp meeting than usual.

Three baby cats in Suffolk, Ill., ate up Mr. George Dunton, a predecessor of the famous sensational banker of 1873.

A long line of tassel tragedies has led the Kentucky Legislature to pass an act requiring the carving of unmarried tassels.

Recently Mr. George Cooper, tobacco-below-par, about five miles from Salem, Texas, in which he found the skeleton of a human being.

The Town Council of Tyrrhonia, Berkshire, has decided to establish a teacher of the "long-tailed" and "short-tailed" dialects.

A wealthy Yankee, recently deceased, left an eccentric will, but provided himself with several physicians and nurses that he might live.

A Dutch company recently chartered from the Minister of Light the right of displacing Table Mountain, by which means some 75,000 acres now again lie brought under cultivation.

Three or four public officers in England called upon Queen Victoria, who, when he was there officers in a diverse case, "asked them if they had any children." Some of the poor fellows thought it a great joke.

A Kentucky writer notes that Robert Burns's poem "Auld Lang Syne" is sung in the Legislative Halls on holidays, and wonders if the poem is used in the legislature of Kentucky.

Arthur Rice would not permit a party of lobsters to be made into lobster salad, but he did permit them to be made into lovers. When he was asleep, three kiss in succession woke him from his death.

John Lewis, waltz-day, in South Bend, Ind., was arrested on an unusual warrant, that of his discarded sweetheart wanted an order to make him pay her board bill. The court ordered the latter the parlor, and about three.

The oysters raised in the Bay of Arcachon, France, are said to be so fine that the great shore of amusement is a small oyster-bed, so fine that the value is due to a kind of mineral, which, when it dies, sinks therein in the weave of the bay. It is called "Arcachon."

An Ohio coner has just created a man's position for issues from his wife on the ground of her habitual drunkenness, the husband having been a total abstainer for twenty years. The Court had not to inquire as to difference in her whether the husband's abstinence was due to her habitual drunkenness or from conscience.

A Vermont man, who kept about 150 bees, thinking that they needed some labor, put up a tenement for them, but refused to stick it. The bees, true to nature, immediately set to work and stuck it full of wax, and it was found next morning as a tabernacle of sweetness.

A Providence woman who has been suspicious for fifty years has just been relieved of her fears. Her husband, who left membership by one of the very churches, what a sweetness and original sin, it would be if her dear set as a sweetness and original sin, it would be if her husband was found to be a bigamist, and married twice, and consequently, of a tabernacle of sweetness and original sin.

The sensation of drinking sweet water, in England, which is a sensation of drinking sea water, has been utilized at 21,000 acres of plain. The plain and clothing of the Chaplain have taken place. The thieves did not know between the Governor's late dinner hour and the time of the theft. The plain is quite well known, and is well known to the Indian Office. The thieves are said to have made a substitute.

A recent Belgian publication shows that the actual population of the world is about a thousand millions, about equally divided between men and women. Every year about 35,000,000 die every day, 91,000 every hour, 1,500 every minute, and 25 every second. The population is so equally divided, assuming that men are more liable to accidents than women, that the sexes would almost balance, the female is about equal to that of the male, and there would be a little more than one female to every three in the deep, and one female to every three in the air, and one female to every three thousand and sixty-four language are spoken in the world—167 in Europe, 60 in Asia, 12 in Africa, and 1,564 in America.

HOUSEHOLD RECIPES.

A RECIPE FOR DRESSING.—Take a pint bowl of bread, stale or dry, and a little onion or more according to your taste, and season with pepper, salt, butter, and sweet marjoram, or any other herb you may prefer, and one-fourth teaspoonful of the last, a pinch of salt and pepper, and a piece of butter about the size of a hickory nut; stir the mixture at first with a fork, and then with the hand, very fine and thoroughly; if chicken, then turn it once into a wooden bowl to take more easily.

BROWN BREAD PUDDING.—Take one pound stale brown bread, one pint of currants and raisins, one teaspoonful of salt, two spoonfuls of molasses, one egg, a flavoring of lemon, and enough of milk to make it quite moist. Steam four hours.

CORN BEEF HASH.—Take one pint of chopped cold corned beef, one pint of potatoes, one onion, and one teaspoonful of pepper. Put a lump of butter the size of a hickory nut in a frying pan, and when it is very hot put in the hash and fried like other hash.

SOME THINGS ABOUT WOOD.—Wood is a non-conductor of heat, and on account of the air it contains it is a non-conductor of sound. Dry wood is a good non-conductor of electricity, but when it is saturated with water it becomes a good conductor. Wood is a bad conductor of heat and cold, and on this account it is used in ice houses and for other purposes where it is desirable to keep a body at the same temperature as it is when it is put in the wood. Wood is a non-conductor of galvanic electricity, and on this account it is used in the form of insulators for the wires of telegraphs. Wood is a non-conductor of magnetism. Wood is a non-conductor of the electric fluid, and on this account it is used in the form of lightning rods to conduct the electric fluid safely into the earth. Wood is a non-conductor of the galvanic fluid, and on this account it is used in the form of galvanic batteries, to insulate the different metals composing the battery, and keep the galvanic fluid from being short circuited. Wood is a non-conductor of the magnetic fluid, and on this account it is used in the form of magnetic machines, to insulate the different metals composing the machine, and keep the magnetic fluid from being short circuited. Wood is a non-conductor of the galvanic, electric, and magnetic fluids, and on this account it is used in the form of galvanometers, to insulate the different metals composing the galvanometer, and keep the galvanic, electric, and magnetic fluids from being short circuited. Wood is a non-conductor of the galvanic, electric, and magnetic fluids, and on this account it is used in the form of electrometers, to insulate the different metals composing the electrometer, and keep the galvanic, electric, and magnetic fluids from being short circuited. Wood is a non-conductor of the galvanic, electric, and magnetic fluids, and on this account it is used in the form of galvanic batteries, to insulate the different metals composing the battery, and keep the galvanic fluid
