Racing fans pack track for Haskell

OCEANPORT — The Grade 1 Haskell Invitational Handicap, drawing nearly 30,000 people, had all the right elements: "Great weather. Good horses. Big crowds. Fast track."

People packed up their sand chairs and sunscreen yesterday and headed not for the beach, but for the betting booths at Monmouth Park, Oceanport.

The attraction: three of horse racing's top three-year-old thoroughbreds competing for $500,000 in the handicap.

The mile-and-one-eighth race, which celebrated its 20th anniversary, offered the rematch of Kentucky Derby/Preakness winner Alysheba and Belmont Stakes winner Bet Twice, plus the first meeting of the two with Lost Code, winner of seven consecutive stakes races.

"We've always treated the race as a major event," said Carol Hodes, public-relations manager for the park.

"But we didn't realize we were going to have three of the biggest three-year-olds competing until about a month ago."

The race drew one of the five largest crowds in its 20-year history, attracting racing enthusiasts from as far away as New York, Pennsylvania and Virginia. The largest crowd — more than 39,000 spectators — was in 1968.

Many in attendance yesterday said they came to watch the races, soak up the sun and, it was hoped, win a little money.

"I came to win," declared Evelyn Anderson of New Brunswick, who, along with her husband Bill has been coming to Monmouth Park since they were married 45 years ago.

"But, even if I didn't win any money, I'd still be back because I see RACING, Page 2A

Campers await one-of-80 chances at 'Society Hill'

TINTON FALLS — Pockets of wispy white clouds clung to the ground as dawn broke, spilling clusters of reddish-gold sunlight on the borough's most expensive campgrounds.

In the early morning haze, some hardy campers arose from the bed of chunky gray stones and began lining up. Although chaise lounges appeared to offer more comfort, most of the camping crowd, about 100 strong, chose blankets and sleeping bags to insulate them from the stoney lot as they waited for a chance to buy a piece of the rock.

The opportunity at hand was a chance to buy one of 80 single-family homes in Society Hill at Tinton Falls, a 484-unit development proposed by K. Hovnanian Cos. of New Jersey Inc.

"The price is right," said Richard Davis, Red Bank, explaining why he chose to spend the night sleeping on a bed of rocks. "I've lived in the area all my life and I've looked at a lot of houses in the past few months."

Davis said he owed his chance to spend between $180,000 to $225,000 for one of the houses to the tenacity of his wife. She arrived at 2 p.m. Friday to secure 9th place in the line, he said.

Hovnanian representatives last week announced that only 40 houses would be available for sale, but early Saturday morning changed the number to 80. Plans call for a total of 97 single-family houses and 387 multi-family units in a mix of town houses and garden-style condominiums.

By 9 a.m. when the sale opened, the supply of buyers far exceeded the supply of houses and prospective owners faced a long wait to leave a non-binding $1,000 deposit.

Proposed merger: 'beautiful marriage'

NEWARK — Banking industry analysts this weekend praised the agreement between First Fidelity Bancorporation of New Jersey and Philadelphia-based Fidelity Inc. to join in a $1.34 billion merger.

Analysts and the companies' top executives said that the merger, one of the largest ever in the banking industry, would be a natural combination that would create a powerful regional banking company in one of the nation's most prosperous areas.

"It could be the beginning of a new super-regional bank on the Eastern Seaboard," said Stephen Berman, an analyst with County See MERGER, Page 2A

Horsemen trying to 'mend fences'

By BOB NEFF

FREEHOLD — Litigation with its national parent has been settled, but the state's largest horsemen's group, based in Oceanport, may face opposition from a rival organization formed in the litigation's aftermath.

It's time either to start mending broken fences, or to put up new and improved ones, horsemen say.

At issue is local and national representation of nearly 6,000 owners and trainers who run horses in New Jersey, where thoroughbred horse racing is a multi-million-dollar industry.

Monmouth County is home to two racetracks and, when Monmouth Park is open in summer, more than 200 owners and trainers.

On June 1, state Superior Court Judge Patrick McGann Jr. signed an order ending litigation involving election of officers to the state Horsemen's Benevolent and Protective Assn.

Essentially, according to a friendly settlement, the association's national parent agreed to withdraw waivers that allowed winners of the local's October election to run for local office.

McGann ordered a new election, but until then, the local leaders in office before the last election resumed office. A new election may be held this fall.

The legal fracas is ended. But Theodore Frucht, a Long Branch veterinarian and president of the state association, says a fledgling association has become a new source of friction in an industry trying to recover from the bitter court fight.

"They have been the cause of a great many problems," Frucht says of the new group, N.J. Thoroughbred Horsemen's Assn. "We have been trying to mend fences and they just makes things worse."

William Wilson, a Middletown attorney at the fore of the new group, says the N.J. association may be necessary if horsemen are to have effective leadership in New Jersey, however.

"Our concern is, we want to be sure the interests of horsemen are represented," Wilson said. "There have been problems in the past."

Wilson says the new group is See HORSEMEN, Page 2A

LONG BRANCH — Police have charged a 17-year-old city youth with aggravated assault on the baby girl who remained in critical condition in the intensive care unit of Monmouth Medical Center last night.

City Detective Lt. Louis Napoletano said the city youth was the father of the victim, a 17-month-old girl, but could not release the name of the father because of the youth's age.

The youth also has been charged with endangering the welfare of the child. City police sources last night said the father is being held in the Monmouth County Youth Detention Center, Freehold.

Police responded to a call for help at about 4:30 p.m., Friday, Napoletano said. The caller told city police that a baby was having See LISTED, Page 2A

Long Branch police arrest Tinton Falls murder suspect

By CHRISTINE A. ROWETT
THE REGISTER

LONG BRANCH — Police arrested a suspect Friday in the 1981 strangulation murder of a 23-year-old Tinton Falls woman.

Ronald Walter Baker, 27, was charged in the killing of Yvonne Burns, whose body was found in a room at the Fountains Motel in May of 1981.

Baker is being held in the Monmouth County Jail in lieu of $160,000 bail, set by Superior Court Judge Alvin Yale Milberg.

Burns' body was found by a cleaning woman shortly after noon on a Saturday in a room she had reportedly checked into alone the night before. An autopsy revealed she was strangled to death.

Detective Lt. Patrick Lipka, the initial investigator assigned to the case, followed numerous leads over the past six years and arrested Baker Friday as the result of "a few good breaks."

"The diligent police work of Det. Lipka finally came to fruition," said Detective Lt. Louis Napoletano.

Lipka attributed his success in solving the case to his persistence in "checking every lead that turned up over the years." Napoletano added that police had established a motive for the crime, but refused further comment.

Baker was arrested after police questioned him about an unrelated burglary.

The victim's mother, Willa-Mae Burns of Fair Haven, said yesterday she was aware of the arrest, which she had come to believe would never take place.

"I had left it in God's hands. I knew He would take care of it," Mrs. Burns said. "How or when — that I didn't know."

She originally had worked with police to solve her daughter's death, and continued to follow the progress of the case over the years.

"She's a very strong woman," Lipka said of Mrs. Burns. "She's been through hell."

The Burns family had offered a $500 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderer in 1981.

"I'm numb to whatever is going on now," she said of the arrest. Burns added that the passage of time, and faith in God, have made it possible for her and family to "go on with our lives." Though she is somewhat relieved that a suspect has been arrested, Mrs. Burns said she gave up her anger long ago.

"In the beginning I wanted to know who and why," she said. "Now it's too late to wonder why — it's not for me to know."

Yvonne Burns, a mother of three, was divorced at the time of her death. Her children are currently living with their father in Long Branch, her sister, Wanda, said.

and Regina Ruther, said they viewed the purchase of a Society Hill house as a "can't-lose" investment. The Ruthers said the condominium they purchased in neighboring Shrewsbury Township two years ago has doubled in value.

Others, like Sy Bassman from East Brunswick, said they began to get skeptical when they were informed of the tax rate.

Gordon N. Gemma, a lawyer for the developer, said the borough tax office plans to assess the new construction at 100 percent of its value. With the borough's tax rate set at $2.95 for each $100 of assessed value, the tax bill for a $200,000 house will be about $5,900, he estimated.

"The tax was something I didn't count on," Bassman said. "I don't think I would have camped out if I knew about it."

Securities in New York City.

"This is going to be a beautiful marriage," said Harold W. Pote, the Fidelcor chief executive officer who would become president and chief executive of the new company.

Analysts and the companies' officials predicted that First Fidelity stock will rebound as investors study the deal.

"I think they'll view this as something very special," said Robert R. Ferguson Jr., the First Fidelity CEO who would be the chairman of the new holding company.

The bank holding company formed by the merger would have assets of $27 billion and 500 offices in New Jersey and eastern Pennsylvania.

The proposed merger, announced at a news conference here, must be approved by shareholders and by state and federal banking regulators.

First Fidelity and Fidelcor officials said they hope to have their deal completed by early 1988. Analysts said they expected no barriers to the merger.

Under the plan, Fidelcor shareholders would receive 1.16 shares of First Fidelity Bancor common stock for each share of Fidelcor common stock.

Based on the average recent price of First Fidelity Bancor common stock, the transaction would be valued at about $1.34 billion, the companies said.

like the surroundings and love to watch the horses," Anderson added.

"To me it's just relaxing," said Ida Huebner, also of New Brunswick. "It helps me unwind."

Although post-time for the event was not until 5:44 p.m., the day began earlier with the park's first annual 40-furlong road race for two-legged competitors. The five-mile mini-marathon attracted more than 250 runners who finished up on the track's turf course, according to Chris Solomon, who helped coordinate the race.

Mary Kingingham of Little Silver took first place for the women with a time of 28 minutes and 28 seconds, while Gary Wersinger of Long Branch won in the men's division, finishing in 23 minutes and 48 seconds.

As time for the big race neared, the crowd was entertained by a host of magicians, jugglers and bands including the Frank Rendell Band, a four-piece Dixieland band regularly featured at the park.

The day's event not only marked the 20th running of the Grade 1 race, but also the 21st year since the passing of its namesake, Amory Lawrence Haskell, the first president and chairman of Monmouth Park.

awaiting written confirmation of what Frucht says may be a step toward resolving those problems before scheduling a meeting to determine the organization's direction.

Frucht says problems stemmed from undue national control over the local chapter, but are being resolved after the national president resigned in the middle of the local litigation this spring.

The new national president, Frucht said, is willing to give more leeway to state organizations in electing officers and writing bylaws, and new national bylaws are being drawn to create that leeway.

Because of this and similar litigation in Florida, California and other states, the national group in a meeting last week in Minnesota said it would relinquish some control of the state groups, Frucht said.

State organizations now have the option of incorporating themselves and splitting entirely from the national, or of adopting a new set of bylaws granting state chapters more control, Frucht says.

"We're starting to work together," Frucht says of the national and state organizations.

Napoletano said police discovered the assault had taken place when they arrived at the house. Neighbors who asked not to be identified said the 17-year-old father lived with his mother at the Joline Avenue residence and that the baby girl was visiting her father and grandmother.

Napoletano said the suspect had "apparently beaten the baby repeatedly with his fists."

The baby was taken to Monmouth Medical Center and placed in the intensive-care unit. A hospital spokesperson last night said the baby's condition was unchanged.

Police arrested the father at the hospital. City Detectives Joseph Afitto and John O'Connor are continuing the investigation.

Bill Bradley 'attacks' new challenges

By RANDY BRAMEIER
THE REGISTER

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Bill Bradley used to worry about jump shots. Now he worries about a $200 billion budget deficit, home-health care and polluted beaches.

In the midst of his second six-year term as a U.S. Senator, Bradley has attacked the political arena much like he did during a 10-year basketball career with the New York Knicks.

He helped draft legislation creating the Superfund to clean up toxic wastes, supported funding to battle erosion at Sandy Hook, pushed tax breaks for research and development and blocked proposed jumps in Medicare premiums paid by senior citizens.

His record shows a strong concern for civil rights. He vehemently supported the bill to establish a national holiday in January for the late Martin Luther King Jr., for example.

That topic, in fact, helped sway him to the Democratic Party in 1964. Bradley, then working for a Republican Congressman, witnessed several Civil Rights debates and his views sided with the Democrats.

Bradley, 44, owns the reputation as a hard worker — last week, he fielded questions at the Monmouth County Fair, and conducts occasional old-fashioned town or walk-through meetings.

His work to date has produced occasional mention as a future Democratic presidential nominee.

His pat answer, when asked about his presidential ambitions, usually focuses on the job at hand, his press aides note.

He serves on four committees: Energy and Natural Resources, Finance, Intelligence and Aging. Bradley chairs the Water and Power and International Debt subcommittees.

As a member of the Intelligence Committee, he listened to 20 days of testimony in December by Lt. Col. Oliver North and Adm. John Poindexter. Both recently starred in the televised Congressional Iran-Contra hearings.

Bradley has raised questions about U.S. policy in covert operations. His New Jersey press secretary, Rona Parker, said he considers the situation a "tinderbox."

Q: What concerns do you have, after listening to testimony at the Iran-Contra hearings, about the U.S. handling of covert operations?

A: I think that what has emerged is the extent to which the Iran initiative was a tragic foreign policy blunder, one that will have repercussions into the future.

Q: What kind of repercussions?

A: What I think, frankly, that the result of the blunder is to provide an opening to the Soviets to enter the Persian Gulf — which is, in fact, what is happening.

To a very low cost to themselves, the Soviets have achieved an objective which is a diplomatic and military presence in the Persian Gulf. Our whole policy, at least until the point of this blunder, was aimed to prevent that.

Q: How can we prevent this from happening again?

A: I think there are a number of lessons. One lesson is: Follow the law that requires the executive branch to inform the legislative branch prior to, at least in a timely manner, the initiation of a covert action.

Q: What are your opinions of the testimony provided by North, Poindexter and Attorney Gen. Edwin Meese within the past few weeks?

A: Meese and North obviously disagree as to what happened. To me, the important lesson is that no one is above the law. And if someone violated the law, they should be prosecuted.

Bill Bradley: One arena to another

Q: Have they testified truthfully?

A: There are certain things (that stand out). If you have two people, Ed Meese and North, who say opposite things about the same event, one of them has to be telling a lie.

Which one, I don't know.

Q: Earlier, you supported aid to the Contras. Has your stance wavered?

A: I supported aid to the Contras in 1986. The events of the Iran-Contra hearings really deal with the time before I had supported the aid.

While I supported the aid, I do not support — in fact, I condemn and frankly, I'm outraged — about illegally subverting money (outside) of the law.

Q: Meanwhile, President Reagan has tabbed Robert Bork for a lot on the U.S. Supreme Court. Others, however, have expressed concern about his record

What are your thoughts?

A: I think the judicial hearings will answer a lot of our questions. I think we want the hearings to proceed. He seems to hold a number of positions that are extremely troubling to me.

I think the key thing is to conduct the hearings in such a way that Bork either disqualifies himself by his answers or allays fears. This is particularly the case to Civil Rights issues.

I could not support someone if I thought they would be the swing vote to turn the clock back on Civil Rights.

Q: Closer to home, the U.S. Navy proposes to build 200 houses at Naval Weapons Station Earle in Colts Neck. A residents' group and educators said the boost in population probably would create a need for school expansion. What's your view?

A: I think the school issue is totally a state issue, so it's up to the state to handle it.

Q: Also, the Navy has proposed four alternative sites for its fuel storage tanks in the Belford section of Middletown. A year ago, residents protested a selected site about 200 from homes. How should the Navy handle the issue?

A: I know the Navy has scheduled a public meeting Aug. 5 so the process is ongoing. It is absolutely essential that the Navy continue to consult with local officials and local citizens before they make a decision.

Q: So you put an emphasis on getting sufficient input from residents?

A: Absolutely. Throughout your two terms, you've supported cleaning up beaches and water. How would you grade the effort in the past five to 10 years?

A: I think that we could do better. We have made big strides in the last couple of years by moving the sludge dump 106 miles off instead of 12 miles off.

We also have gotten New York City to go to secondary treatment of their sewerage. We are monitoring it very closely.

Besides that, we need more New Jersey municipalities to put in sewerage-treatment facilities. Those are all things that have been done or need to be done.

I think that's absolutely critical, because the shore is very much a part of our self definition as a New Jerseyan. It's a place where you take your family. I take mine. I certainly don't like either not going into the water because of pollution or getting my eye infected because I'm in the water.

Q: Has New York cooperated?

A: On these issues, they have come around. They as well as a number of New Jersey sewerage districts will be dumping further out (in the ocean).

Q: What other solutions are on tap?

A: The most important thing to do now is to get sewerage treatment plants built in New Jersey in the shore communities.

Q: Is funding available?

A: The funding is a local and state matter. It's not federal dollars. We have a $200 billion budget deficit to contend with.

Q: What work have you done to improve the Sandy Hook area?

A: A couple of years ago I got money through the appropriations process to replenish the beach. Sandy Hook was about to become an island. And we successfully did that. Now I want to get some bathing facilities, change rooms and restrooms so it will be much easier for people to visit.

Q: So we're talking about a substantial amount of money. How much?

A: We're talking about some money. I don't know how substantial. There will be enough money to do it, I hope.

Brookdale program helps 'displaced' homemakers

By MIKE BURKE

LONG BRANCH — Unbridled optimism seemed to fill the room as the "invisible" women spoke of success.

It was graduation day and the class of 1987 appeared ready to conquer the job market.

Yet, only six months ago, the future looked hopeless to some of the 33 graduates. They said they felt tortured by self-doubt, "frustrated" and "helpless."

In desperation, those "invisible" women enrolled in a program they had read about, but never thought they would enter. And they didn't have much faith that the program would relieve their depression.

By graduation day though, negativity had been tuned out. Opportunity became the buzz-word of the hour and the cerebral sensations of self-confidence and accomplishment pervaded the air.

The graduates spared no superlatives in describing their instructors and the curriculum, the Displaced Homemakers Program, run by Brookdale Community College. The college receives state and federal funds to maintain the program at extension centers in Long Branch, West Keansburg and Freehold.

"Displaced homemakers are women whose principal job has been homemaking and who have lost their main source of income due to divorce, separation or the death, long-term disability or long-term unemployment of a spouse," said Frances Williams, a program counselor in Brookdale's Long Branch Learning Center.

"We offer a life skills and career development program for those women trying to get back into the job market," Williams said.

Most women who have spent a long time as a homemaker or housewife "are not aware that they have marketable skills. For example, they have organized the PTA, church functions and bus trips," Williams explained, but don't realize how those skills translate into job-market-related talents.

The program, she added, offers the education and training necessary for women to make a successful plunge into the employment pool. It also offers one-on-one counseling and group support sessions to help the women cope with the emotional trauma that often accompanies divorce or the loss of a spouse.

There are 11.5-million displaced homemakers in the nation, according to a report released last week by the Displaced Homemakers Network in Washington, D.C. Experts working with the non-profit network call the displaced homemakers "invisible," in part because their plight is underexposed compared to the "working woman of the 1980s" so frequently covered by the mass media.

John Westbrook, director of the Brookdale program, noted that 351,628 displaced homemakers live in New Jersey, while 44,900 reside in Monmouth County.

Mary, age 43, is a typical displaced homemaker, Williams said. Mary is not the woman's real name; although she freely shared her story, she asked not to be identified.

Mary worked in a factory for 12 years before a physical disability struck. Her doctor told her she could no longer pursue that occupation.

A divorced mother of three, she turned to "welfare," the well-known public assistance program, Aid to Families with Dependent Children, for support.

"My self-esteem was about this big," Mary said, drawing her index finger closer and closer to her thumb as she slowly turned the gesture into a representative "O." "I had no job, no future and I was on welfare."

"I felt helpless," Mary added. "I got very depressed — no one will ever know how depressed I was — and I just kept saying to myself, 'look where I am now.'"

"I came here as a last resort," she said Friday in the Long Branch Learning Center. "Now all I can say is 'Thank God for Brookdale.'"

Mary was graduated with word processing and clerical skills; already she has landed a job using those skills. And as she embarks on a new career, she has set her sights on a new goal — finishing college.

Marilyn Ramos, age 33, is another good example of a displaced homemaker, Williams said.

"I spent most of my life living on welfare," said Ramos, a single parent and mother of five children. "I was frustrated and started to see myself as an old woman, stuck in some job I hated."

"You wouldn't believe it, but when I came here six months ago I was so shy I could hardly talk to anyone," Ramos said. "Today I made a speech at graduation."

Before graduation, Ramos also landed a job, one she said she loves, the kind of job she had always dreamed of securing. She is Brookdale's newest data-entry operator and plans to finish college so she can teach computer science.

Frances McDonald, instructor of the word processing and clerical skills course, said both women have the aptitude and drive to achieve their goals.

Both displaced homemakers said they learned of Brookdale's six-month program through brochures that arrived in the mail. Both said they recommend the program for any displaced homemaker willing to try it. There is no fee and the three Brookdale sites meet with about 175 clients each year.

Still, Williams noted: "There are a lot of people in the community who don't know about it. We're trying to increase our visibility."

Women interested in more information may call Williams at 229-8440; the West Keansburg contact is Robin Vogel, 787-0019; the Freehold contact is Julia Nixon, 780-0020.

Advocacy group reports number of 'invisible' women rising

THE REGISTER

WASHINGTON — The number of "invisible" women, America's displaced homemakers, has more than doubled since 1976, according to a study released last week by a national advocacy group.

The study, "A Status Report on Displaced Homemakers and Single Parents in the U.S.," indicates that the population of the so-called invisible women grew to 11.5 million in 1980, up from 4.1 million in 1976.

The Displaced Homemakers Network, Washington, D.C., prepared the report based on 1980 census data. The group is a private, non-profit organization that provides technical assistance and information to 1,000 local programs across the country, said Rubie Coles, the organization's deputy director.

Experts define displaced homemakers as women whose main occupation has been as a housewife or homemaker, and who have lost — due to divorce, separation, death, long-range disability or long-term unemployment — a spouse who provided the primary source of income for the household. Generally, the category also includes single mothers and women who have lost eligibility for welfare.

"The term 'invisible' is used because so much of what's written and broadcast by the media focuses on working mothers," Coles explained. "The focus today is not on who's staying at home, but the working mothers ... every one of whom has a glamorous job."

Moreover, the "invisible" label applies because statistics distort the true status of working mothers, Coles said. While census figures indicate that 60 percent of the nation's homemakers are working, she added, a great number of working mothers are employed part-time, earning less than enough to maintain a household.

Network experts said they based the report on the 1980 census because it was the most thorough form of analysis available. In the future, the organization expects to be able to evaluate changes in the displaced homemaker population by comparing its data with the 1990 census.

None of the country's local programs are funded through the network organization, Coles noted.

The following are some key findings of the report on displaced homemakers:

■ 67 percent of the women were widowed, 30 percent were divorced or separated.

■ 32 percent of the women were in the age group considered the prime working years, 35-64 years old.

■ 43 percent of the women in the prime working age group were widowed.

■ 70 percent of the women were age 55 or older; 54 percent were more than 65.

■ 40 percent of the women over age 20 lived below the federal poverty level, which was an annual income of $7,412 for a family of four in 1980.

■ More than 60 percent of black, Hispanic and Indian women had incomes below the poverty level.

Tuesday vote set in officer's suspension case

By KENISTON W. TRAINOR

HAZLET — Township officials will wait until Tuesday night's meeting to decide whether to suspend a police officer who was arrested last Monday by the Monmouth County Prosecutor's Office.

Police Chief Holmes J. Gormerley said he has recommended that Sgt. John J. "Pete" Allen be kept on the force unless he is proven guilty by a court of law.

"My recommendation is that he stays on," Gormerley said. "I need his experience. He's not guilty until he's had his day in court."

Allen, a 19-year veteran, is scheduled to go before a grand jury Aug. 7 on charges of bribery, extortion and official misconduct — all second-degree counts — and a "blanket" count of contempt, Prosecutor John Kaye said.

The arrest was a result of a six-month investigation into condominium sales in Keansburg from M&N Associates, but did not involve Allen in his capacity as a police officer.

"I'm elated by the prosecutor's statement that he didn't use his position as a police officer," said Deputy Mayor Martin Marino. "I have an open mind about this thing as long as he didn't taint the uniform. I was glad to hear he didn't do that."

Mayor Henry Pekarsky said a decision on Allen's status was postponed until Township Attorney Harold Smith returns, and has time to review the details of the situation.

"Something like this never occurred in Hazlet before," Pekarsky said. "I don't know the procedure. To me, a person is innocent until proven guilty."

Members of the police force who knew of Allen's real-estate investments, said Allen is "being used because he's the weakest link."

Policemen said Allen invested money "out of his own pocket" to buy into Beachway Town Houses.

"(Allen's) not a mobster, he's just an average person," said the officer. "Before they ever broke ground, offers were made to early investors. Somewhere in midstream, units selling for one price were now being sold for a higher price."

"He couldn't afford the higher price and asked for the deal he settled for. Pete got mad, and he may have said some things he shouldn't have said. Anything he did was done out of frustration with a deal gone sour."

One officer compared Allen's situation with that of "an irate customer who can't get his car fixed," adding that "the only thing he may be guilty of is opening his mouth too wide. I'm sure he regrets anything he might have said."

Referring to a comment by the prosecutor that Allen "sure couldn't afford those units on his salary," Chief Gormerley said that Allen has sources of income other than his $37,000 annual salary.

"Allen's a very conscientious officer and works a lot of overtime," Gormerley said. "He's also a member of the County Strike Force where he gets $20 to $25 an hour. I have some patrolmen who take home $200 a week more than I do."

Another officer pointed out that Allen won nearly $6,000 in the lottery last year and may have also inherited some money from relatives.

"I think they should have looked into his finances a little deeper," said the officer.

KEYPORT — The Affiliated Board of the Auxiliaries of Bayshore Community Hospital and the Chamber of Commerce promotional committee held an all day health-fair Friday in conjunction with borough's sidewalk sales.

More than 200 people took advantage of the eye screening, blood pressure, hypertension and diabetes tests that were available, Bayshore Auxiliary president Sally Stat said.

Stat, who volunteered to coordinate the first Health Information Day in the borough, called the health-awareness campaign a "community responsibility."

"In every area, someone discovered they had a problem they had been unaware of," Stat said. "Now they can go and see a doctor."

The auxiliary staff also provided physician-referral lists and information on hospital services available.

Donation targets pollution

ASBURY PARK — A local merchant has donated $513 to help fight N.J. water pollution.

Sam Vacarro, owner of Palace Amusements, Lake Avenue, presented a check Friday to Debbie Keller, assistant director of N.J. Environmental Federation.

The federation, a chapter of Clean Water Action Project, is a non-profit coalition of citizens, labor organizations, environmental groups and community groups sharing a common concern for N.J.'s environment.

"Mr. Vacarro's agreement to donate money will set an example to other businesses participating in our program," Keller said. "He has supported us tremendously, and is very concerned about what is or is not happening as far as state pollution is concerned."

Vacarro's donation was an outgrowth of "Clean Water Day," a public-awareness event sponsored annually by the federation.

Last Saturday, the group held its 5th annual Clean Water Day. About 200 volunteers walked the beaches from Sandy Hook to Point Pleasant, talking to people about water-pollution problems, and raising more than $5,300 in donations. The day ended with a rally led by U.S. Rep. James J. Howard, D-N.J., and performances by four local rock bands.

"Funds were raised for lobbying, education and research to help solve N.J.'s pollution problems," Keller said.

Howard, instrumental in the passage of the Superfund Bill and the Clean Water Act, addressed the problem of non-degradable plastics production.

"Non-degradable plastics are taking over every aspect of every industry, and pose deadly hazards to the environment," Keller said.

Middletown couple awarded $775,000

NEWARK — An agent for the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms who resides in Middletown has won a $750,000 settlement from an assailant.

A U.S. District Court judge ruled in favor of Gary W. Blanch, 36, of the Port Monmouth section of the township, in his personal-injury suit against Adam "Abdulla" Nezej, 34.

Besides awarding $750,000 to Blanch, Magistrate Ronald Hedges ordered Nezej to pay Blanch's wife Janice, $25,000. Court proceedings took only day.

Nezej shot Blanch once during a Feb. 6 drug raid, Blanch's lawyer said. Blanch suffered injuries to his jaw and teeth. He also contracted pneumonia, said the lawyer, Larry S. Loigman of Middletown.

Blanch remained hospitalized for more than a week in Jacobi Hospital, New York, and Riverside Medical Center, Red Bank.

Loigman said.

The shooting occurred at the Henry Hudson Parkway and 246th Street in the Riverdale section of the Bronx.

Law-enforcement officers arrested 32 suspected drug dealers and others in the raids at two dozen locations in New Jersey and New York. Agents confiscated 30 guns and 3 pounds of cocaine.

Nezej shot Blanch as the Middletown man and two other agents entered a garden-floor apartment complex to serve a warrant on another man. Other agents returned fire before fleeing the building.

He surrendered an hour after the 8:30 a.m. shooting to a hostage-negotiating team. Earlier, Nezej had climbed through a ceiling crawl space to a nearby apartment.

New York Police identified him as a suspected drug user.

Nearly 100 agents from several departments, including the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms and the U.S. Customs Service, participated in the raid, supervised by the Drug Enforcement Administration.

Howell resident knows her utensils

FREEHOLD TOWNSHIP — Howell resident Bonnie Skurka won a $200 gift certificate to Steinbach's last week in Greater Media's "Name the Antique Farm and Household Utensils" contest at the Monmouth County Fair.

Skurka, who was one of 400 people to correctly identify the six objects pictured on the bulletin board at Greater Media's booth, said she wasn't sure what to do with the prize money.

"I don't know what I'll buy because I wasn't expecting to win, but with a baby in the house there is always something that is needed," Skurka said.

Skurka, along with her husband Martin, moved to Howell shortly before the birth of her daughter Danielle in April. The Skurkas have been married two years.

Skurka said her husband filled out the entry blank at the Greater Media booth for her while she was at another booth. "I'm very surprised and pleased at winning this and I'm certainly anxious to go to the store and spend it (the gift certificate)," Skurka said.

For all of the 1,900 people who entered the contest the correct answers were: No. 1 — corn planter, No. 2 — wagon jack, No. 3 — butter churn, No. 4 — egg candler, No. 5 — sausage stuffer and No. 6 — apple peeler.

Garden State Bankshares earnings up

Marcos' digs

This estate on Princeton Pike in Lawrence Township once was the property of Philippine ex-President Ferdinand Marcos before his overthrow by supporters of Corazon Aquino in February 1986. Marcos' daughter Imee reportedly used it when she attended Princeton University in the 1970s. The 13.5-acre estate was recently sold by the new Philippine government, it was announced Friday. A price was not given, but a 1986 valuation of the property set its worth at $825,000.

WEST NEW YORK (AP) — A local Hispanic group is training at a secret N.J. location for combat against the leftist government in Nicaragua, leaders of the organization said last week.

The group has released a 15-minute videotape showing about a dozen men in army fatigues practicing military tactics at a rural site they have dubbed Camp Oliver North.

Humberto Alvarado, operations chief of the brigade based here, said that recruits have been trained in sabotage techniques, such as blowing up bridges and cutting enemy communications.

Lorenzo Cariaga, 45, a Cuban who is the leader of the West New York-based brigade, told The Record of Hackensack in a story in Friday's editions that fighters have already been sent to Central America.

However, federal officials could not confirm that claim on Friday.

Luis Israel Abreu, who said he is president of the Committee of Solidarity for a Democratic Central America, told The Associated Press that the brigade was organized by the committee about two or three months earlier.

The brigade, named Brigade No. 1, New Jersey-New York, is comprised mostly of Cubans and Nicaraguans but also includes people from Guatemala, Puerto Rico, Honduras and El Salvador, he said.

Abreu, who said he and Cariaga were both former political prisoners in Cuba, said the brigade hopes to "very soon" send recruits to Nicaragua.

"I think we'll send the first group in 20 days, more or less," he said.

U.S. Justice Department spokesman John Russell said Friday he had no official knowledge of such a brigade, but said that a group could legally practice military tactics as long as it does not violate weapons laws.

He said that a group could also get around the Neutrality Act, which forbids U.S. citizens from engaging in military actions against any nation not at war with the United States.

For example, Russell said, a group could go first to another country before departing for Nicaragua.

Abreu refused to reveal the exact location of the camp. Asked how many people had been trained or were in training, he said, "We don't like to say the amount."

However, he said that between 30 and 50 people could train at a given time.

"It is legal as long as we have no weapons" or have only properly registered weapons, said Abreu.

Alvarado, an American citizen born in Cuba and who lived under the Castro regime, said many of the recruits have had military training in the United States, Cuba or Nicaragua.

"American people are naive and uninformed in this sense. The U.S. is a unique case in the history of mankind," Alvarado told The Dispatch of Union City. "For that, we will risk everything, as we're doing, and we'll continue to do."

He said the maneuvers in New Jersey do not include weapons training, which would be provided in resistance camps in Central America.

Alvarado said financial backing for the group has come largely from Cuban businesses and civic groups in Hudson and Union counties. He said they have received no support, financial or tactical, from the United States.

Man charged in attempted assault with snakes

HACKENSACK (AP) — A Wallington man has been charged with attempting to assault a neighbor by arranging to have three rattlesnakes slipped under her door.

Frank Giovanielli, 42, was indicted Friday on two counts of aggravated assault and one charge of possessing a weapon.

Giovanielli allegedly bought the rattlesnakes from a friend,

Rudy Komarek, and then had Komarek put them under the door to Robin Goldman's home on Oct. 7, 1986. Goldman was not bitten.

Authorities said Komarek pleaded guilty to possessing the snakes and agreed to testify against Giovanielli.

The grand jury did not indict Giovanielli on attempted murder, citing insufficient evidence.

PATERSON FACTORY FIRE — Firefighters from Paterson and four other towns fought this four alarm blaze yesterday. The fire began at 3:30 a.m., ripping through five River Street buildings.

Fire rips through 5 factories

PATERSON — A fire ripped through five factory buildings on the banks of the Passaic river yesterday, displacing about 40 workers, firefighters said.

No one was in the four- and five-story brick buildings when the fire started at about 3:45 a.m., and no fatalities or major injuries were reported, said Fire Chief William Comer.

The fire was contained by noon, but firefighters still had not brought the fire under control, said Comer.

Firefighters were spraying water on two of the buildings, where smoke billowed but no flames could be seen.

Comer said the origins of the four-alarm blaze were suspicious.

Three of the five buildings had been used by a bathroom fixture company, and the others were vacant, Comer said.

He said that the fire was difficult to fight because the buildings faced the Passaic River, cutting off one approach to the structures.

N.J. Assembly ponders auto-insurance reform

By NICHOLAS G. KATSARELAS
ASSOCIATED PRESS

TRENTON — The long-debated issue of automobile-insurance reform again will be the subject of spirited exchanges when it returns to the Assembly floor during a rare summer session Monday.

The lower house also is to take up bills that would attempt to reduce the health risks of radium-tainted dirt and ask voters to approve a $10-million bond issue for state psychiatric facilities.

The Senate does not convene until Thursday.

The insurance legislation is designed to lower premiums by imposing a rate freeze, restricting the right to sue because of injuries and requiring companies to lower rates.

"We can head off higher rates, and in fact lower them, through this legislation," said Assembly Speaker Chuck Hardwick, R-Union, who sponsored the measure with Assemblyman Ralph Loveys, R-Morris.

"We have a golden opportunity to get real rate relief in New Jersey. We can't pass it by," Hardwick said.

Under the legislation, bodily injury rates would be reduced by 55 percent on each insured car, translating to an average savings of $100 per policyholder. Also, the state would freeze rates for two years.

In return, drivers would be limited in their ability to sue for "pain and suffering" stemming from injuries suffered in motor vehicle accidents.

Gov. Thomas H. Kean supports strict limits on pain-and-suffering lawsuits. Opponents, however, charge that such legislation would rob accident victims of their right to sue.

Two Assembly-sponsored bills restricting the right to sue for pain and suffering have been approved by the lower house, but have been languishing in the Senate.

The Hardwick bill has two elements not contained in the other legislation: the mandatory rate reduction and the two-year freeze.

"We're going to try again, and this time we have an offer that will be even harder to refuse," he said.

Assemblymen Rodney Frelinghuysen, R-Morris, and Harold Colburn, R-Burlington, sponsored the bond issue proposal, which would appear on the November election ballot.

If approved, the bill would appropriate $10 million to build 242 more beds at the Greystone Psychiatric Hospital in Parsippany-Troy Hills, and expand or upgrade other mental facilities.

The Assembly also will consider a bill introduced by Assemblyman Robert Shinn, R-Burlington, that would require radium-contaminated soil to be blended with clean dirt to reduce its hazardous nature. The bill also would provide for benefits to any community volunteering to accept the dirt.

The legislation is in response to the gnawing problem of what to do with 15,000 barrels of radium-tainted dirt in Montclair and Kearny that was removed from around and under homes in Montclair.

Under a pilot project by the state Department of Environmental Protection, two truckloads of the dirt were shipped to Tennessee last week for disposal. If the project is successful, DEP officials say, more or all of the dirt could leave Essex County this way.

Also on the Assembly's agenda is a proposed bond issue to raise $90 million to develop cultural centers and preserve historic sites, and a bill that would appropriate $2 million to help the state administer the fresh-water wetlands act signed into law by Gov. Thomas H. Kean earlier this summer.

Woman admits she's not Onassis' sister

HACKENSACK (AP) — A 59-year-old woman accused of theft and forgery while claiming to be Christina Onassis, millionaire sister of the late Greek shipping tycoon Aristotle Onassis, has admitted being an impostor.

The woman acknowledged last week for the first time since her arrest last November that she is Rowena Riggs Powell, a convicted con artist.

Powell's admission came during a hearing here before state Superior Court Judge Alfred D. Schiaffino in which she maintained her innocence and withdrew her motion to be judged incompetent to stand trial.

However, her lawyers say they are still considering a defense of temporary insanity or diminished capacity.

Powell is charged with two forgery-related counts, two counts of theft by deception and one count each of attempt theft of services, attempted theft by deception and issuing a bad check, prosecutors said.

She is accused of using the Onassis name to trick businesses into treating her royally for four weeks last fall, prosecutors said.

She allegedly took $1,500 in clothes from a boutique, gave police false information, ran up nearly $800 on a hotel bill with someone else's credit card and wrote a bad check for $1 million, prosecutors said.

Powell's lawyer, Frank Lucciana, said he still plans to argue Powell was insane or had diminished mental capacity at the time of the alleged offenses, and that she did not commit any crime.

Powell, who has used 11 names and been convicted 37 times in 34 years, is being held in lieu of $30,000 bail in the Bergen County Jail.

Music video 'mirror of society'

By MICHAEL FLEEMAN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEWARK — Some critics carp that MTV is a fitting name for a music video television station because the first two letters sounded out say "empty."

But where some find a cultural void in the flashy, fast-cut mini-movies, New York University associate Professor Peggy Phelan finds art.

Phelan, a Highland Park resident, said music videos' impact has gone beyond ringing ears and sore eyes, and has been felt by feature film makers, television producers, musicians and writers.

"Everywhere, you see the arts reflecting the influence of music videos' accelerated visuals and imagination," she said. "I think, probably, music videos are the most interesting art form around."

Phelan has been lecturing on music videos since 1983, two years after videos crossed the Atlantic from London and entered millions of living rooms on cable's Music Television and scores of nationally and locally produced programs.

In 1986, she presented a paper on videos titled "Picturing Narrative in No Time" to the prestigious Modern Language Association, the world's largest organization of modern language scholars.

Phelan, an avant-garde film buff, said videos are intriguing packages that try to combine stories and advertisements for the bands and their albums.

She said that among the best videos are those by Rolling Stones lead singer Mick Jagger, Britain's Dire Straits, New York's Talking storm of controversy with its direct title and sensual images of a scantily clad woman.

MUSIC VIDEO FAN — Music videos have influenced feature films, television, music and books, says Peggy Phelan. The New York University associate professor watches them from her favorite chair in her Highland Park apartment.

Heads, former Wham! member George Michaels and Madonna.

"Even these videos do have commercial motivation, but I think that they transcend commercialization," she said.

The video even contains a disclaimer stating that it's intended to be an exploration of monogamy.

But Phelan reads the video as Michaels' "exploring his own fragmentation of women" as the lens zooms into close shots of the different parts of the woman, figuratively cutting her with the camera.

"It winds up being extremely sexist," she said. "It shows George Michaels' inability to have anything as a whole."

But not all videos deserve such close scrutiny, Phelan said. She is quick to pan works by many heavy metal groups as self-indulgent "adolescent male views of reality."

"Just about anything by Motley Crue is bad," she said of the Los Angeles-based band that is seen on the cover of the latest issue of Rolling Stone magazine.

Phelan also said that the quick camera cuts that make a statement in Michaels' video fail in the country rock band ZZ Top's "Velcro Fly."

"It's ugly and stupid and silly and doesn't mean anything," she said of the ZZ Top video.

Still, Phelan finds meaning in the energy and quickness of most videos, traits that critics claim shorten viewers' attention spans and close their minds.

"I don't think videos exist in some kind of vacuum," she said. "They are symptoms of a larger social malaise, part of a much larger phenomenon of how things come together and fall apart — society's sense of fragmentation."

Phelan added, paraphrasing the words of Dire Straits: Society wants its MTV.

Marshall murder documentary set

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A jury trial and a life sentence led two of Robert Marshall's three sons to believe the New Jersey man is guilty of arranging their mother's murder, according to a public television documentary to be aired tonight.

"Impact: A Small Town Murder" is a New Jersey Network production detailing the case of Marshall, a former Toms River insurance executive now on death row for his 1986 conviction.

The 30-minute story concentrates largely on the aftermath of the murder of Maria Marshall, 42, who was found in her car at a Garden State Parkway rest stop on Sept. 7, 1984. She had been shot twice in the chest.

After assessing the facts, two of Marshall's sons, Robert Jr., 22, and Christopher, 21, believe their father is guilty. John, 17, still corresponds with his father and believes he is innocent.

The documentary shows Chris wrote a letter to his father in April that said:

"Dear Dad ... I hate you for what you did to Mom. ... I hate you for what you did to our family."

The documentary initially began as a class project on capital punishment, said Allan Wolper, journalism director at Rutgers University, Newark. He is executive producer of the broadcast.

"The idea was to assess the impact on victims, both the relatives and friends of the person who was the victim and the relatives of the person who was charged," Wolper said.

"It became apparent that to do a really good job on this, we should focus on one case and the Marshall case was so bizarre out of all of them," he said.

Because the survivors of the victim and the accused are part of the same family, Wolper said he was able to show how divisive the situation was.

Testimony in Marshall's trial showed that in the year prior to his wife's murder, he took out more than $1 million in insurance policies on Mrs. Marshall's life while continuing his affair with a former school administrator.

For the documentary, 150 people were interviewed. Wolper also maintained a correspondence with Marshall in jail.

At first, trying to get friends, neighbors and relatives to talk was tricky, Wolper said.

"We took our chances and started knocking on doors," he said. "In the beginning, I didn't think I had a story. Many people threatened to call the cops."

Once one family friend consented to an interview, Wolper said, "word spread that we were sensitive and people started opening up."

Marshall's sons initially were reluctant to talk about the murder, Wolper said.

"John was the first to agree to talk because he wanted to say that his father was innocent," the producer said.

Chris Marshall agreed to talk, after visiting his mother's gravesite with Wolper.

Miss America pageant changes brass

By JOYCE A. VENEZIA
ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTIC CITY — Some executive changes in the Miss America Pageant staff will not affect the September event, but might signal some movement in the future, pageant officials say.

John Zerbe, appointed last year as the pageant's first executive vice president, resigned effective Friday.

Pageant Chairman Albert A. Marks, the Jr. said he has picked Leonard Horn, an Atlantic City attorney, to take over for him as chief executive officer for next year's contest.

"For most of the public, this is simply a production in September and it's forgotten until next September," Horn said. "The pageant, however, does a lot of good all through the year at the local and state levels. I feel that should be emphasized more."

The 74-year-old Marks is affectionately known as the "commander-in-chief" because he has run the event for 36 years. He said he will remain as chairman for at least one more year "to maintain any bridges that have to be maintained."

He said Horn will be appointed at the pageant's annual board meeting Oct. 7 and will assist him as co-producer of the 1988 pageant before taking over the main pageant responsibilities.

Zerbe coordinated the day-to-day operations of the Miss America Pageant, including the state pageants, sponsors and contracts. Since all the state pageants are complete and Marks will handle the national pageant on Sept. 19, the resignation will not affect operations, Marks said.

Zerbe was executive director of the Miss Pennsylvania Pageant and served one year as president of the National Association of Miss America State Pageants.

Marks described the resignation as "very amicable."

"Mr. Zerbe assisted me to a large degree and was learning the ropes rapidly," Marks said. "But something better came along," he said, not elaborating.

Zerbe could not be reached for comment, but his wife, Mary Jang, said her husband "has no idea" what job he will next take.

"He's looking at several options," she said.

Mrs. Zerbe said her husband resigned after the pageant's top management was restructured in early June.

"He chose to exercise a contractual option and leave," she said. "But it's all been very amicable."

Early release possible at Camden jail

CAMDEN (AP) — A federal judge's refusal to immediately approve a transfer of prisoners to the unfinished Camden County Jail means the county might have to release some inmates early, starting this week, an attorney says.

The county has appealed U.S. District Judge Harold A. Ackerman's ruling to the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Philadelphia. It will have to begin releasing prisoners Tuesday if a stay is not granted.

In June, Ackerman ordered the county to release prisoners and pay for monitoring them because of jail overcrowding. Thursday, the judge rejected the county's alternative plan to move some prisoners to the new jail still under construction.

Howard Goldberg, an attorney representing Camden County, said Friday the release order would cost the county an extra $350,000.

It requires the county to pay bail money for indigent inmates from a $250,000 fund and to begin a $100,000 home surveillance program that monitors prisoners wearing computerized wrist bands.

The order is part of a five-year legal battle stemming from overcrowded conditions at the jail, located at Camden City Hall.

The county's problems began after the state public advocate's office filed suit. Since January 1983, the county has been under Ackerman's order to keep the prison population under 354 inmates and to build a new jail.

When Ackerman issued the release order, he said the county had violated the conditions of the 1983 consent agreement and could face up to $1 million in contempt fines if it did not cooperate.

On Thursday, Ackerman declined to rule immediately on the alternative plan, prompting the county to withdraw the motion and concentrate on the appeal.

News In Brief

■ MIDDLETOWN — A three-year-old Hungarian girl suffering from a rare liver disease is expected to arrive at New York's John F. Kennedy Airport today for medical treatment in the United States.

Nikoletta Pecsvari, who is battling Primary Sclerosing Cholangitis, an often-fatal liver disease that causes inflammation of the bile ducts, is scheduled to arrive from Budapest this afternoon with her father, Kont, said the girl's uncle, Thomas Pecsvari of Middletown.

If all goes well, Nikoletta will be transported to Children's Hospital in Philadelphia, Pa., tomorrow where doctors are familiar with the disease.

"We had a lot of red tape to cut through to get her here, but the last couple of days things have started to come together," Thomas said.

The youngster's arrival is the result of a month-long fund drive by Thomas and parishioners at St. Catherine's R.C. Church, Holmdel.

More than $13,000 has been raised so far, Thomas said, however if Nikoletta requires a liver transplant, medical expenses could exceed $200,000.

Treatment for the disease also is expensive and the cost of a two-week examination could run between $15,000 to $20,000, he added.

Those interested in donating to the fund can send contributions to: Help Niki Fund, P.O. Box 102, Middletown, N.J., 07748.

■ MANALAPAN — The Albin family is still continuing its search for two family members who disappeared at sea during a storm last Sunday.

Although the Albins are persisting, the Coast Guard has given up the search for Richard Albin, 44, and Richard Albin Jr., 20, said a spokesman who was not permitted to identify himself.

The search for the Albin's boat has been "suspended pending further development," said the spokesman, adding that if any new information were gained, the search would be continued.

The Coast Guard did not abandon the search easily. "This was an abnormally long search. Usually, searches last between two to 2½ days. We searched 3½ to almost four days for the missing people and we worked hard," the spokesman said.

The family could not be reached for comment.

80 degrees: a reprieve

RED BANK — Not everyone had the day off yesterday to take advantage of the nice weather, but even those who had to punch a clock said the sunshine and blue skies contributed to optimum working conditions.

Gerard Miller, a 24-year old

Red Bank mail carrier, said the cool breeze and 80-degree temperatures were a welcome reprieve from last week's heat wave.

"It was a good day," Miller said. "People are more friendly on days like this."

Miller said another benefit of the pleasant conditions is that pesky dogs, the arch rival of postal carriers, are more subdued in cooler temperatures.

Workers at yesterday's sidewalk sale in Red Bank — Maggie Walter, Middletown, and Erica Livingston, Hazlet — were all smiles as the warm weather and the high volume of sales at Clayton & Magee made for a winning combination.

Jackie Macklin, manager of the Krauszer's, was not so lucky.

While others were soaking up the sun, Macklin was confined behind the counter when all of the fun was outside.

Drug arrest employs new law

FREEHOLD — Authorities last week charged a Bradley Beach man with selling marijuana within 1,000 yards of a school in what is said to be the first time a new state statute has been used in Monmouth County.

The statute creates drug-free zones around schools, and mandates a minimum three-year prison term without parole for violators.

County Prosecutor John A. Kaye said Friday authorities arrested Wednesday Richard Acerra, 600 Brinley Ave., at his home, where they confiscated more than 2 pounds of marijuana.

Acerra, 21, was charged with possession of marijuana with intent to distribute within 1,000 feet of a school and posses-

Police: Man had express-mailed cocaine

LONG BRANCH — Police arrested a man who they say picked up an express-mailed envelope full of cocaine at a post office in the Elberon section Friday.

Stephen Albert Hrivnak, 26, Beacon Court, West Long Branch, was arrested and charged with possession of cocaine, possession of cocaine with intent to distribute, aggravated assault, attempted robbery, resisting arrest and escape, Det. Lt. Louis Napoletano said.

The detective gave this account:

Hrivnak got into a car after picking up the package. He jumped from the car, dropped the envelope in a garbage can and fled on foot when Detectives William Acerra was being held on $10,000 bail set by Bradley Beach Municipal Court Judge Raymond P. Shebell.

Also arrested and charged with possession of marijuana and possession of marijuana with intent to distribute was Donald William Brandt, 24, 113 Mount Herman Way, Ocean Grove.

Brandt also was being held on $10,000 bail set by Shebell.

Arresting officers were from the Bradley Beach police and the county Narcotic Strike Force.

Kaye said he believes the charge of possession of a controlled-dangerous substance within 1,000 yards of a school is the first to be levied in Monmouth County after Gov. Thomas H. Kean signed the law in spring.

Acerra's home is less than 1,000 yards from the Bradley Beach Public School, Brinley Ave., Kaye said.

Magarino and Clarence Castle of the city police force's Narcotics Unit and U.S. Postal Inspectors Jim Miller and Ken Lagg moved to apprehend him.

As police caught up, Hrivnak assaulted Magarino and tried to grab the detective's gun. After subduing Hrivnak, police seized the envelope and obtained a search warrant to open it.

The envelope, mailed from Florida, contained about 1 ounce of cocaine with an estimated street value of $12,000.

Hrivnak was being held in Monmouth County Jail with bail set at $115,000.

Killer eligible for parole

By BOB NEFF
THE REGISTER

A former Freehold man who pleaded guilty to shooting a Farmingdale liquor store owner in 1950 is eligible for parole this month after violating his initial parole granted 14 years ago.

Scheduled to appear before the state Parole Board is Charles Traylor, 60, lodged in Trenton State Prison.

According to the state Dept. of Corrections, Traylor was paroled in 1973 on the murder conviction, but in 1982 pleaded guilty to two counts of burglary in Georgia and was sentenced to 15 years in prison there.

A department spokesman, James Stabile, said Traylor, in May 1986, was returned to prison in Trenton after violating his N.J. parole, although he said it was not immediately clear how Traylor violated the parole.

Traylor's parole officially was revoked this June, according to board records.

Traylor pleaded guilty to first-degree murder in the Nov. 25, 1950 shooting death of Irving Cohen in Cohen's Farmingdale liquor store, and was sentenced by Judge J. Edward Knight to life in prison in May 1951.

According to newspaper accounts of the shooting, Cohen, 56, was found shot once in the neck and pronounced dead at the scene.

Red Bank becomes shoppers' paradise

By CHRISTINE A. ROWETT
THE REGISTER

RED BANK — Borough businesses transformed themselves into shoppers' paradise yesterday and Friday as part of the 29th Annual Sidewalk Sales sponsored by the Retail Trade Board.

Items from diamond rings to ferrets were discounted for the two-day sale, which most merchants said was nominally successful.

"Sales were a little off this year," said Howard Mensch, owner of the Youth Style Center. "Mostly we're just trying to have a good time."

It was projected that 30,000 people from across the country would attend the sales. Police said last night they had no idea about what the actual turn out was.

Not only "a good time," the annual sales are certain sign that school days are not too far off, illustrated by the large sales of both clothing and materials suitable for studies.

"We're selling mostly school supplies," said an employee at Woolworth's, adding that tube socks were also a big seller.

Yesterday's sunny skies attracted plenty of bargain hunters, but even more shoppers flocked to the area on Friday.

"Yesterday was a madhouse," said Nicole Bruno of Friday's crowd. "But it was a lot of fun." Bruno is employed at Pants Place, where she sat perched on a ladder announcing the bargains and watching for shoplifters.

Pallone denies dispute holds up Navy project

By KENISTON W. TRAINOR
THE REGISTER

State Sen. Frank Pallone, D-Monmouth, said yesterday he wants to put an end to rumors that a dispute between himself and Republican Assemblyman Anthony Villane has delayed action on a Navy project to replenish beaches in Sea Bright and Monmouth Beach.

"I just don't want people to think that either of us are holding up this project," Pallone said.

Pallone said the project is on hold because Congress has not budgeted the $18.6 million for the dredging of the Earle Naval Weapons Station.

"It makes little sense to expand the pier for new ships if the money is not allocated for the dredging," Pallone said. "If the federal government does not fund the Earle dredging project in fiscal year 1988, it is unlikely that the project will occur on schedule in early 1989."

Pallone stressed that both he

"Today is a perfect day for shopping," said Micki Levine, comparing the sales of Friday and Saturday.

Some die-hard sidewalk sale shoppers said they wait all year for the sales, and stock up on necessities when the buying is at its best.

"We only shop when things are on sale," said E. Suet Hing Au, who with her husband and son bought enough shoes and sneakers to keep them covered until next year's sale. "I know the value of different materials, and usually they jack up the prices."

Other shoppers, however, were not as impressed with the annual offerings of the sale.

"Mostly they're just selling what everybody wants to get rid of," said Grace Golden, Hazlet. "It all the things they can't sell all season."

Not surprisingly, sales at Haagen-Dazs Ice Cream Shoppe were a bit busier than normal as shoppers took a break from the bargain hunting.

"It's been steady all day," said a worker behind the ice cream counter in between scoops. "But it's usually busy on Saturdays."

Employees of Clayton and Magee Clothing Store reported they had sold almost all of their sale merchandise, though some stores, such as Pants Place, had racks of bargains that remained unsold.

Those who stayed away from the sales to avoid the crowd are out of luck, however. Most merchants said they will not be selling any of the left over merchandise. It will be sent to other retailers or stored until next season.

and Villane were instrumental in securing state funds for the replenishment project.

"The state Dept. of Environmental Protection, through our efforts, has earmarked at least $5 million from the 1983 Shore Protection Bond Act for the state share of the beachfill project," Pallone said.

"The money is available through appropriations bills that Assemblyman Villane and I have sponsored."

Earlier this week, Villane issued a press release that said the state Senate has failed to act on a $4-million appropriations bill approved by the state Assembly in October 1986.

Pallone said the Senate did not act on the Assembly version of the bill "because it had already been determined that more money was needed for the project."

Pallone said both he and Villane worked to secure the $5 million needed for the state's contribution to the project, through a bill that passed in the Senate in May.

Coastal panel

Gov. Kean's proposal for a coastal commission to regulate development along New Jersey's 128-mile coastline has a lot of merit and, with adjustments, deserves passage.

New Jersey's coast bears the signs of overdevelopment: erosion, destroyed natural habitat, inshore water pollution and dwindling shore access. As demand for shorefront housing intensifies, there's little relief in sight.

To this, Kean's call for a regional approach is welcome. Currently, under the state Coastal Area Facilities Review Act (CAFRA), a developer of any residential complex containing fewer than 25 units needn't obtain a state coastal area permit. The exemption succeeded only in fostering the construction of dozens of 24-unit housing developments in coastal areas. Proposed new regulations would do away with the exemption.

But some believe special interest groups — builders and fishermen, for example — might be too well-represented, while others, among them D.W. Bennett of the American Littoral Society, say that unless the panel includes more than one environmentalist, the society may oppose the governor's brainchild.

And, as state Sen. Richard Van Wagner warned, sparks may fly over the commission's feared encroachment on local autonomy. Municipal officials in shore communities fiercely guard their right to dictate what will be built locally and how.

Still, with the right approach, there's hope for the coastal commission. We urge local legislators to strive toward creating a well-balanced coastal commission this year.

Water costs

It's becoming an old story. The state imposes a mandate and the municipalities, with no alternatives and few resources, are forced to heft the burden.

In this case, the state ordered Monmouth County municipalities to reduce consumption of groundwater by 50 percent. But certain Bayshore municipalities are reluctant to accept a state agreement to hook up with Monmouth Consolidated Water Company, which plans to route water from the proposed Manasquan River Reservoir to make up the loss of aquifer water.

The reason: while pressured on one hand by the state Dept. of Environmental Protection to cut groundwater consumption in half by July 1990, surface water from Manasquan is a commodity with no price tag.

No one, not even the state Water Supply Authority which controls the reservoir project, professes to know how much Manasquan water ultimately will cost.

It will be local leaders, not state officials, who must face the wrath of the citizenry once the true costs of reservoir water are realized.

Bayshore officials who are still holding out on the Manasquan plan may ultimately have to sign up for an outside source of drinking water. Few towns in Monmouth County will be able to generate their own water supplies.

The state could perhaps cushion the blow of greatly increased water costs by removing some of the mystery about the cost of the Manasquan project. As suggested by Union Beach Mayor Carmen Stoppio, the state should conduct a study to gauge the project's approximate costs.

In memoriam

Jim Bishop's brilliance is local legacy

Editor's Note: Jim Bishop, nationally syndicated columnist and former Sea Bright resident, died Sunday, July 26 in Florida at the age of 80. Aside from writing countless columns and editorials, Mr. Bishop's career was distinguished by such works as "The Day Christ Died," "The Day Lincoln Was Shot," and "A Day in the Life of President Kennedy." Even after gaining national prominence, Mr. Bishop continued a special relationship with Monmouth County and The Register. Mr. Bishop's first syndicated piece appeared in the then-weekly Register Aug. 27, 1959. Following is Mr. Bishop's "farewell" column, appearing here on Oct. 16, 1983.

JIM BISHOP

This, my friend, is farewell. Not goodbye, mind you, because I expect that we shall meet over the written word again. I have filled this space three times a week for 27 years. That's a long time, and long-winded too.

It is now a repetitive shallow grave and I want no more of it. The column needs a new and younger digger with a shiny shovel. His name is James Brady and he'll be strewing words in the space shortly. He's a winner on his own, and his work can bear comparison with anyone's.

As you know, writing is a lonesome art. It is cultivated with black coffee, cigarettes and booze. If that combination doesn't make a professional of a man, my advice is to quit the booze and get a job.

There is a Chicago Tribune columnist, Bob Greene, who says he grew up reading my columns. In itself, that's a lovely carnation. Today, he writes syndicated opinions as I step down.

Do not misunderstand this stepping down as an act of heroism. Oh, no. I'm in my seventies and was prepared to keep writing until death did us part, but it almost did on July 28 and that hastened a decision.

At bedtime I had been coughing in breathless spasms. On the 28th, my best girl Kelly could see that I was disoriented. She phoned Dr. Francis X. Worthington who said: "I'll meet you both a Miami Heart Institute." He did some listening, probing and punching and called in a bearded and brilliant Brazilian, Dr. Aldo Coelho, who took a look and called in a pulmonary expert, Dr. Robert Hart.

I sat nude on the edge of a gurney, giggling. They stood around me, making tests and shaking their heads. The oxygen-carbon dioxide tests were lousy. I was breathing more poison and less oxygen than would support human life.

Cigarettes. I was sure I knew the culprit. Fifty-five years of Piedmonts, Camels, Lucky Stripes, Old Golds, Twenty Grand, etc, had broiled both lungs. But that wasn't all. This time, I learned, I was in for the full count. A heart attack came along, two electric boards shocked the hell out of me, at night my heart rate was 34, my gall bladder had to come out, but an infection of the pancreas had to be treated first.

Take my word for it, a man in his seventies isn't worth all that skill and talent. The doctors, spelled by a handsome guy with the blackest hair, the moodiest dark eyes, Dr. Daniel Cassis, labored over me like sailors trying to refloat an old scow.

The final touch: a heart pacer no thicker than two silver dollars. They say it will mind the store for 10 years. That's great. I want to hang around until Kelly is too old to attract fast-talking salesmen. Who knows? When I'm fully rested, I may start a book called "The Family."

The Bishops were always a comical group: Big John, the bull; Momma, the halo; Adele, the jumpy; John the lazy; and crazy Jim, who wanted to give up driving a horse and wagon on a milk route to become a writer. In addition, this group also had some funny relatives.

Harking back to this column, nothing that I wrote was stop-the-presses copy. I tried hard to find low-key stories which would read as well next week and next month as now. Sometimes I succeeded, a few of the stories may make an anthology or two.

Many of them were average yarns, available to any writer if he wanted to hunt for them. Some were unworthy of space, but, when the deadline clanged, I had to polish the tips of two middle fingers and make them race through two-and-a-quarter pages of copy.

Over the years, I also wrote 20 books. I will not concede that any of them were poorly thought out or written. My blood went into each one. I researched alone, except for ardent assistance from Kelly. I wrote alone and by God, I wrote once.

I never rewrote a chapter; in fact, once it was out of the typewriter, I never looked at it again. When the book was published, I hefted it, admired the cover; and never opened it. To face those facts one more time would be too much.

Another Jim will be with you soon, and I know you will welcome him with warmth and enthusiasm. As for me, I walk into the shadows temporarily. I'm too much of a ham to quit before they drop a shroud over me. And even then, my friend, don't be surprised if ...

Publisher reviews 90 days of progress at The Register

Vice President/Publisher

One of the special rewards in community journalism is the realization that readers take such a personal interest in their hometown newspaper. The larger a newspaper becomes, the more it tries to serve an increasing number of constituencies, and thus it becomes less personalized for each reader. The community newspaper, with its focus on important local matters, maintains a closeness that is simply hard to break.

Unfortunately, in recent years The Register has lost this relationship with many of its readers. The good news, however, is that we are now getting the feeling that we are re-establishing that relationship.

Anyway, I thought it might be a good idea to give readers a report of what has been going on during the 90 days since Greater Media Inc. acquired The Register.

I don't plan to write this column on a weekly basis, but so many people seem to be interested in The Register that I will make every effort to keep readers informed of what is happening at the paper. Actually, an awful lot has happened during the past three months. The organization has had almost a complete overhaul in management. The top management team is all new, and virtually every department has new leadership.

The newsroom, as you know, has a new executive editor, as well as a new managing editor. In addition, the city editor, the lifestyle editor and the sports editor also are new to their positions. And all are Monmouth County residents.

We also have installed a completely new "front-end" electronic editing and layout system to the newsroom. All the changes sometimes can be overwhelming, so it's little wonder that on occasion someone forgets the correct date, as on last Sunday's front page. Nevertheless, the news staff has done an outstanding job of coping with more changes in three months than most papers undergo over several years.

The number of local stories, which is really what we are working on, continues to grow, and, now that things have settled down, we are starting to plan even more extensive local news coverage.

Other departments have been going through the same kinds of transition. We have a new circulation manager, who has completely restructured his department, including a new supervisor for our delivery fleet. Circulation problems have plagued The Register in recent years and have contributed to the decline of the paper's readership. There is nothing more frustrating than to subscribe to a newspaper that doesn't arrive at our doorstep on time or isn't available at a newsstand at the same time each day.

Production problems in the past have contributed to the problem. The paper seems to have had a difficult time making deadlines, creating late press starts, which led to late arrival at newsstands and coin boxes. We think that problem is behind us, and — for the first time in many months — the paper came off the press at the scheduled time every night last week. There is no reason to believe that we won't continue to be on time every night.

Our advertising department also has been revamped with new management for local and classified accounts. We also offer advertisers an opportunity to reach various segments of Monmouth and Middlesex counties by using a combination of The Register and our five weekly newspapers. All of the combinations available to advertisers can get a bit complicated for our sales representatives, who do not have experience in this kind of offering. However, the advantages to the advertiser are evident. It simply allows an advertiser an opportunity to choose the areas he wants to reach, rather than force him into buying circulation throughout the whole county or even two counties when all he may need is a portion of the area.

Our finance department, which is responsible for billing and all record-keeping, also has undergone a major change. We have integrated financial data into our existing electronic systems, so that detailed information on each account is available quickly and accurately.

Taking a full data base from one system to another is a major task. This, along with personnel and payroll-record changes, has placed a special burden on the finance department during the past three months. Here, too, people have worked hard to make the changes with as little disruption as possible.

There have been other changes, too.

Several readers have mentioned how much better our photographs are these days. New equipment for color photo separations, plus better equipment throughout the process, has finally brought out the best in our photographers' efforts. Many of our recent photos have been simply outstanding, and we're pleased that our whole processing and printing operations now bring out far greater detail than in the past.

This has been what we have been doing these past 90 days. Personally, I have had little effect on all of this during July. I had surgery and am still in the recovery process. Still, it is a pleasure for me to watch so many good people succeed during a difficult time. Writing this column gives me an opportunity to publicly thank them.

Although I'm still in the recovery process, I am functioning and would find therapeutic value in hearing from readers who care to share their views with me. These can be positive or negative and on virtually any issue. Just write to me at The Register, and I will be more than happy to answer any questions.

I probably will write another column next week to outline some of the plans we have for the near future.

Lautenberg raps delay

Senators urge ramification of plastic dumping

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two coastal senators urged the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on Friday to quickly ratify an international agreement banning the dumping of plastic trash at sea, a worldwide problem that is fouling scenic coastlines and killing seabirds and marine mammals.

"It is high time that we stop using the ocean as a collective garbage dump," said Sen. John H. Chafee, R-R.I. He said an estimated 6.4 million metric tons of plastic garbage is tossed into the oceans annually, mostly from ships.

Sen. Frank R. Lautenberg, D-N.J., testifying with Chafee before Senate Foreign Relations Chairman Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., criticized the executive branch for not sending the 1973 agreement to the Senate for ratification until this year.

"This is long overdue," Lautenberg said. "The Senate should not approach the measure with the same delay as has the executive branch."

Only U.S. ratification is needed for the agreement to have the force of international law.

Under terms of the pact, known as Annex V of International Convention for the Prevention of Pollution from Ships, it would take effect one year after nations representing 50 percent of the world's shipping tonnage approve it.

In mid-July, the Soviet Union, which represents 6.2 percent of the shipping weight worldwide, became the 28th country to ratify the pact, bringing the total up to 48 percent.

The United States, with 4.9 percent, would make the agreement law.

"Mr. chairman, all eyes are upon us," Coast Guard Rear Adm. J. William Kime told Pell.

U.S. law bars the disposal of garbage from ships within three miles of the coast. Annex V would bar dumping of all trash within 12 miles and outlaw plastic dumping completely.

Marine scientists say discarded six-pack containers and other plastic junk floating in the water is often mistaken for food by birds and marine mammals. They can choke to death by getting tangled in the garbage, or starve to death or suffocate by trying to eat the plastic and having it lodge in their throats.

Plastic trash is blamed for the deaths of an estimated 1 million seabirds and 100,000 sea turtles and other marine mammals annually, according to a House subcommittee report.

NELSON SENTENCED — Former New Brunswick law director Gil Nelson, accompanied by his wife, Mary, arrive at the Newark courthouse Friday for sentencing on his conviction on obstruction of justice charges. Nelson was sentenced to five years in jail.

New Brunswick ex-law director given jail term

NEWARK (AP) — A federal judge Friday sentenced New Brunswick's former law director to five years in prison for obstructing justice in connection with a city land deal that authorities say he engineered.

Gilbert Nelson, 44, received suspended sentences for two other obstruction convictions.

He also was convicted in June of extortion and mail fraud.

But U.S. District Judge Maryanne Trump Barry threw out the two extortion verdicts just after they were returned. On Monday, she overturned the mail fraud conviction because of a recent U.S. Supreme Court ruling that limits use of federal law in prosecuting official corruption.

The original charges against Nelson carried a 60-year prison penalty.

Also sentenced Friday was former attorney George Shamy, 59, who was convicted of two counts of obstruction of justice. Barry sentenced him to two years in prison on one charge and suspended a five-year sentence on the other.

The government originally charged that then-Law Director Nelson and Police Director James V. Gassaro lobbied for the 1983 sale of property to the city for a municipal garage and then made money on the deal.

When Nelson learned that a federal grand jury was investigating, he tried to hide his involvement.

Nelson had the city tax collector alter records of the sale and changed the closing statement to make it seem that $5,000 he took for himself went to Shamy for legal fees, according to the government.

Shamy then fabricated a letter to corroborate the legal fees payment and showed it to the grand jury.

Gassaro was convicted on the mail fraud charges, but Barry also overturned that verdict on the basis of the Supreme Court decision.

No date has been set for a retrial, and prosecutors said they will wait for Barry's written opinion on dismissing the extortion charges before deciding whether to appeal that decision.

"Obstruction of justice is significant and serious," said Barry. "It's all the more serious when committed by an attorney who swore to uphold the law."

Of Nelson's crime, she said: "It is an insult to those sworn to serve and a slap in the face of every public servant."

Nelson, Shamy and their attorneys made impassioned and sometimes tearful pleas for mercy.

Nelson said he "let down" his friends, family and the black community with his conviction.

'Gloomy' 2087 seen by essayists

LAKELAND (AP) — Nuclear war, underwater volcanic eruptions and an ozone layer so thin that life on the surface of the Earth would be unsafe. That's northwestern New Jersey in 100 years as envisioned by high school students.

Their views of future gloom and doom were expressed in essays written for a contest sponsored by Lakeland Savings and Loan. The assignment was to write about Morris and Sussex counties in 100 years. About 40 high school students responded, and nearly all wrote about natural or nuclear disasters.

The only difference in their predictions was the way the despair would come about.

There are bits of optimism in some of the essays. A couple of students said the world will be a better place — after the upcoming nuclear war.

Another said that when a war occurs, "lowlife" people will die, alleviating the need for police forces.

"By the year 2087, the Lakeland area, as well as the rest of the world, will have gone through a global nuclear disaster," wrote a blunt Stephan DiCara, a Randolph High School junior.

Henry A. Becker, president of Lakeland Savings and Loan, said the tone of the essays was not at all what he expected.

"We thought we'd get a more positive outlook," he said. "The essays are depressing."

He added, however, that there are some positive aspects to the students' outlooks.

"The essays show that they know a lot about social issues, political issues and environmental issues, so we can hope that because of that knowledge, the problems they wrote about won't manifest themselves," Becker said.

The entries were received from students in northwestern Morris County and southern Sussex County. The students are vying for a $100 scholarship. Six finalists have been chosen.

Emily Cyrier, a student at Randolph High School, took many of today's problems and magnified them in her essay, which is one of the finalists. "From morning until late evening, vehicles will move at a rate of 1 inch every hour, because of the gridlock," she wrote. "With ... air traffic and pollution from cars and industries, the sky will begin to grow darker and darker. The absence of full daylight will be the final result."

"I'm sure there will be some solutions," she said in a recent interview. "But I really think the traffic is not going away."

Dr. Paul Yampolsky, assistant director of special services for the Randolph school system, offered several explanations for the dismal views, which, he said, are not unusual for today's high school students. "There are a lot of students who are very concerned about nuclear war," he said.

FANTASTIC FINISH — Bet Twice, No. 5, heads down the stretch in yesterday's Haskell Invitational Handicap along with Lost Code, No. 3, and Alysheba, No. 4. Bet Twice, with Craig Perret aboard, edged out the other two horses in a race that thrilled the crowd at Monmouth Park.

Perret guides Bet Twice to victory

By JOE HINTELMANN
THE REGISTER

OCEANPORT — Bet Twice will be written into the record books as the winner of the $500,000 Haskell Invitational Handicap yesterday at Monmouth Park, but let it be engraved in gold that it wouldn't have happened without a masterful ride by jockey Craig Perret.

Perret was little short of incredible. He refused to let Lost Code get away on the front end, herded Alysheba along the rail until the turn for home and kept a mental clock on the pace of the race, saving enough of his horse for the crucial run through the stretch.

The three horses were never more than two lengths apart during the entire one mile and one-eighth distance. At the finish, Bet Twice was a neck in front of Alysheba, who had a neck on Lost Code.

A crowd of 32,836 witnessed the memorable race, which matched three of the half-dozen top 3-year-olds in the country. It was the best crowd since Aug. 7, 1971 when 37,786 watched West Coast Scout win the Haskell on closing day. A crowd of 31,386 saw Skip Trial upset Spend A Buck in the 1985 Haskell.

The on-track handle of $4,416,618 was the largest in the history of Monmouth Park, surpassing the handle of $4,275,182 on closing day 1967.

The Meadowlands wagered an additional $775,153 and Atlantic City bet $247,146. The aggregate of $5,438,917 was the largest total handle ever bet on one racing day in New Jersey. A total of $471,622 was bet on the Haskell alone to win and place. There was no show wagering.

The gross purse value ($830,050 for 11 races, nine of them stakes) was the highest in Monmouth Park history.

Bet Twice sped the route in 1:47, tying the stakes record set by Majestic Light in 1976. The time was one-fifth of a second over the track record set by Spend A Buck when he won the Philip H. Iselin Handicap Aug. 17, 1985.

Bet Twice, trained by Jimmy Croll, paid $4.60 to win. Alysheba, off at 3-2 under Chris McCarron, forged the exacta worth $9.20. Lost Code, the early betting favorite, went off at 2.20 to one. He finished 12 lengths ahead of Clever Secret (14-1), who had 28 lengths on Born to Shop (38-1).

Perret had Bet Twice well-placed outside of Alysheba just off the pace during the run down the backstretch. Alysheba moved slightly ahead of the winner as the horses went into the far turn. Lost Code still had a one-length lead.

Turning for home, McCarron, two lengths behind Bet Twice and Lost Code, who were noses apart, suddenly angled Alysheba to the outside of the other two and began a strong stretch drive.

But neither of the other thoroughbreds gave an inch and it was a three-horse race to the finish.

Perret, who won two races earlier on the program, used one of them (his win aboard Owens Troupe in the fourth) to gauge the condition of the track. "When I walked into the paddock, I told Jimmy (Croll) that speed's been holding up all day," Perret said. "I knew that he (Gene St. Leon aboard Lost Code) was going to try to outrun me because that's how he always ran. I wasn't going to let that happen. I knew he wasn't going to change his plans in a $500,000 race."

Perret noted that the start of the race presented a slight problem. "He was the last one in the gate (post five)," he said. "He didn't have a chance to relax there. The start caught him off guard. He's not the fastest leaving out of there, but it OCEANPORT — Business was booming yesterday for all of Monmouth Park with the running of the Haskell Invitational and the tipsters that sell tout sheets near the entrance of the park were included in the bonanza.

"This is the biggest day of the year for everybody in the place," said Don Bilak, who sells Bailey's sheet.

While the touts were happy with the increase in customers, they still didn't forget that their business has been on the decline for several years.

Denis Green, who sells Jack's Green Sheet, said he has about 35 customers a day on weekdays. Yesterday, he sold

Whitaker, Tigers defeat Yankees

NEW YORK (AP) — Lou Whitaker had four hits and scored four runs, and Frank Tanana gave up six hits in eight innings as the Detroit Tigers beat New York 10-5 yesterday, ending the Yankees' five-game winning streak.

The Tigers won before 55,103 at Yankee Stadium and moved back into second place in the American League East, two games behind New York. Detroit won for just the second time in eight games against the Yankees this season.

Darrell Evans and Chet Lemon hit consecutive home runs among Detroit's 16 hits. They greeted reliever Charles Hudson with homers in the seventh inning, and Hudson was ejected when his next pitch narrowly missed Mike Heath.

The Tigers put their leadoff batter on base in the first seven innings and used four walks, two wild pitches and an error by Gold Glove first baseman Don Mattingly in the rout.

Tanana, 11-7, retired the first 11 batters before Mattingly singled. Juan Bonilla's first home run in the fifth inning provided the first run off Tanana allowed. Tanana struck out seven and walked two, and Mark Thurmond pitched the ninth inning.

The Yankees scored two in the eighth and twice more in the ninth. Roberto Kelly got his first major league RBI with a single, and Mattingly had a run-scoring single in the eighth, and Bobby Meacham hit a two-run homer, his first, off Thurmond in the ninth.

Dennis Rasmussen, recalled from Class AAA Columbus earlier in the day, took the loss. Rasmussen, 8-5, gave up four runs on seven hits in 4 1-3 innings as his five-game winning string ended.

Whitaker hit three singles and a double, walked and reached on an error. He opened the game with a double and scored when Kirk Gibson hit a line drive off Rasmussen's right leg for a single.

Giants may move to New Jersey again

Anybody from this area who has ever made a pilgrimage to the New York Giants' training camp in Pleasantville, N.Y., knows there is no good way to get there.

The trip is long, expensive and tiring. The Tappan Zee Bridge, which should be the best way, is constantly under some kind of mysterious construction and prone to aggravating traffic jams.

Those pilgrims can cheer up a bit. The Giants are getting closer to moving their training camp to New Jersey. Closer doesn't hint at immediacy, however. The move may not be completed until 1990.

The New Jersey site under consideration is the East Orange Water Preserve. The new training camp would actually be in Livingston and would be part of a convention center development. The hotel at the center would be the living quarters for the Giants during camp.

If the proposal clears all the political bodies which must approve it, the center will offer several things the Giants do not have at their current base at Pace University. Plans call for three practice facilities: natural turf, artificial turf and an indoor site for practice during bad weather.

The indoor area could also be used during the season when bad weather might restrict practice at Giants Stadium.

The Giants won't be making this move out of sympathy for anybody who has ever sat in a traffic jam on the way to Pace. They're much more practical than that. Pace has only one practice field, and that is often in bad condition. By moving to what would be called Giants Center, the team will again be able to control its own practice destiny. It will also be only about 20 miles from its headquarters in Giants Stadium.

When it comes, it will be a move which should have been made years ago. New Jersey provided the Giants with one of the best homes in the league when it built the stadium. Philosophically, the Giants could have returned the favor by maintaining a training base in the Garden State.

For two years after plans for the Meadowlands Complex were announced, they did just that, training at Monmouth College and then moving up to Roosevelt Stadium in Jersey City when the kids returned to school. Then, Alex Webster was fired as coach after the 1973 season, and a new regime, headed by Andy Robustelli, came in.

Robustelli said he was anxious to do away with anything connected to a losing tradition when he moved the camp from Monmouth College. First, the Giants went to Fairfield College, Conn., for a year and then to Pace in 1975 with a 20-year lease. That lease will expire in 1994, but all leases can be broken.

The private developer involved in plans for Giants Center will have to satisfy a long list of local, state and federal political bodies before ground is broken, but a source within the Giants' front office said, "Things look good."

Obviously, there are economic benefits to be derived from being the home of the Giants' training camp. It seems only right that those benefits should go to businessmen in New Jersey.

Who knows? By 1990, fans coming down from Westchester County and Connecticut may be cursing the traffic jams at the Tappan Zee.

QUICK KICKS: Lawrence Taylor's tirade at the media Friday is just another example of a star looking for a scapegoat. After all, the media did not write Lawrence's book, did not edit the excerpt for Sport Magazine and did not have the benefit of his wisdom about drugs until the excerpt was published.

Giants coach Bill Parcells will again appear on Madison Square Garden Network weekly with the Preston Giants Journal. The program will air Saturday nights at 6:30.

The happiest coach in the Giants' camp is Pat Hodgson, who got three new wide receivers, Mark Ingram, Stephen Baker and Odessa Turner, in the draft. The receivers coach has been looking for that kind of speed for years.

Perry entering senior season

PHILADELPHIA — Freehold's Tim Perry is being touted as a 1987 basketball All-American by Temple University. The 6-9 Perry returns for his senior season after pulling down 310 rebounds last season. He also averaged 12.9 points and 3.2 blocked shots a game. Perry was named to the Atlantic 10 All-Tournament team and was a first-team All-Conference performer last year. Perry's younger brother, Lee, is a 6-7 sophomore forward returning to Rutgers. He was a member of the Atlantic 10 All-Freshman team last year after starting 23 games for the Scarlet Knights. He had 132 rebounds, better than the record Tim compiled as a freshman at Temple. Also on the Rutgers preseason roster is senior Ed Zucker of Manalapan, who missed most of 1987 with a back problem. He gained an additional season of eligibility because of his medical redshirt status.

Grid classic had bit of everything

By JIM HINTELMANN
THE REGISTER

DOVER TOWNSHIP - Friday night's All-Shore Football Classic X had just about everything for the 3,000 spectators in attendance: good plays, bad plays, clutch passing, defense and great comebacks.

In the end, however, it all came down to a play with eight seconds remaining when quarter Todd Tarver of Jackson hit teammate Steve Carr with an 8-yard touchdown pass to give the Ocean County stars a 22-20 victory over their Monmouth County counterparts.

For Monmouth County coach Jack Levy, it was his first loss since 1985. He coached Long Branch to an 11-0 record last year.

"We had some trouble with a couple of punts," Levy said. "We had a lot of breakdowns in the kicking game and we missed a field goal which could have put us ahead 23-8. They would then have had to score two touchdowns and make both extra points."

Having scored three straight touchdowns to take a 20-8 lead at the half, Monmouth County appeared ready to put the game away late in the third quarter when it drove to the Ocean 8-yard line.

Here Levy elected to go for the field goal, but John Marotta's kick sailed just wide.

"If it goes through, it a great call," Levy said. "It was fourth and seven on that play and I figured that the field goal would ice it but it didn't go through and they got a little momentum."

The breaks continued to go Ocean's way after the missed field goal. The Monmouth stars stopped Ocean on downs and Carr went back to punt. The snap from center was low and Carr was forced to run, but he eluded several tacklers and raced 8 yards for a first down.

An even more bizarre situation occurred on the next play. Lakewood's Billy Gee took a handoff and fumbled going through the line. The ball took a few bounces forward and then came back up into Gee's arms. He grabbed the ball again and raced the remaining distance for the touchdown.

"It was probably the best we defended it," Levy said. "If he hit the hole right away, we might have had people there but he bobbled the ball and then the next thing you know, it came back to him and he went all the way."

"They had a clean bounce on that play and Gee took it in," Red Bank Catholic's Al Golden said. "That gave them the momentum."

Ocean came back following an interception and a 40-yard pass from Tarver to Carr put the ball on the 6, but Mater Dei's Derek Sininski intercepted a pass to stop the drive.

The punting game came back to haunt the Monmouth stars again as a low snap from center forced punter Tom Dexter of Holmdel to try a pass but it was incomplete and Ocean took over at the 23.

Four plays later, Tarver hit Carr in the right corner of the end zone for the winning touchdown.

"It was a set play to go inside," Carr said. "But he (Tarver) double-pumped and I changed my pattern, went to the outside and he drilled it to me. It was a perfect pass."

Monmouth had one more chance to win it. Middletown North's John Fardella grabbed the short kickoff and raced to his right but was hemmed in by Ocean players at the Monmouth 40. He lateraled back to Freehold Township's Scott Vega, however, and Vega raced across the field but he was dragged down at the Ocean 35 as the game ended.

"We got a tough break at the end," said Golden who was voted Most Valuable Player on defense for Monmouth County. "The play prior to the one that scored I had the guy (Tarver) for a loss and he just got out of my hands. I wish I had that one back."

"It was a good experience playing in this game," he said. "The coaches were great and put in a lot of work."

Golden, a 6-3, 240 pound defensive end, will be leaving for Penn State next Sunday.

"They might be red-shirting me," Golden said. "But you can't argue with it. They like to bring the kids along slowly at Penn State and they've been very successful with it. Whatever happens I'll just keep plugging away."

"They'll use me at either outside linebacker or tight end," he said. "but I'll play wherever they need me."

Spectators enjoy park's entertainment

OCEANPORT — While most of the adults in the crowd at Monmouth Park were concentrating on the Haskell Invitational, the children in attendance discovered the race track offers more than just racing.

Several bands, a contingent of clowns, and a magician were on hand to entertain the youngsters. Most of the entertainment was concentrated in the track's picnic area, where large groups of people barbecued while they bet. Monmouth Park hires the entertainment for days when large crowds are on hand.

Nancy Vasquez and 19 of her neighbors from the Laurel Manor development in Howell Township took advantage of the picnic area.

"This is the first time I've come here with the kids," Vasquez said. "It's great, the kids love it, we love it, it has been fun for everyone."

Sean Parks, one of Vasquez's neighbors, started the idea to bring the neighborhood to Monmouth for the Haskell. The children in the group enjoyed the entertainment.

"They all got balloons, watched the clowns perform, and were also placing bets with their parents," Vasquez said.

Donna Rogers, Toms River, and her family also picnicked at the park for the first time.

"I was here once before a couple of years ago," Rogers said. "The kids had a great time, they saw Mickey Mouse, jugglers, clowns, all the action. I love the way they set this up."

The entertainers enjoyed being at the park as much as the children enjoyed their acts. "The Amazing Blazing Al," otherwise known as Al Freedman, who said he is from Voorhees, New Jersey, planet Earth, performed his specialty, juggling.

Freedman's act includes juggling three metal tennis racquets that he sets fire to at both ends. He also includes the audience in other parts of his act, such as juggling baseballs and beanbags.

"Most children don't think they can juggle," Freedman said. "Even little kids can do some of the easier parts."

ing at racetracks is different than most of his other work, which frequently involves engagements at restaurants. He said the picnic area is an excellent place to work.

"This area is family-oriented," Davis said. "The response I get from the kids is great."

"The Balloon Buffoon," or "Buffo" for short, also was on hand to keep the children happy. Also known as Garrett LaMarra of Westmont, "Buffo" juggled, performed magic, did stiltwalking, and made balloon art for the youngsters.

"Kids can be the hardest crowd," LaMarra said. "You have to show them they have an imagination."

LaMarra and his cohorts did that and more yesterday, making a day at the racetrack as enjoyable for children as it was for the adults.

Lendl, Gilbert advance to final

WASHINGTON (AP) — Top-seeded Ivan Lendl stopped Jimmy Connors 6-4, 7-6 last night to join upset winner Brad Gilbert in the finals of the $232,000 D.C. Tennis Classic.

Gilbert, the No. 4 seed, advanced by winning 10 of the final 11 games to beat second-seeded Boris Becker 3-6, 6-3, 6-0 in an afternoon match.

Lendl and Gilbert will play for the $39,440 top prize tonight. Lendl, ranked No. 1 in the world, owns an 11-0 lifetime record against Gilbert.

Lendl got the only break of the first set in the fifth game. He fired six aces, including two in a row to close out the set.

Connors finally solved Lendl's serve in the fourth game of the second set, breaking at 15, but Lendl cashed in on his third break point of the ninth game and then drew even at 5-5 when he fought off a set point to hold serve.

After each player held serve at love, Lendl won the tiebreaker 7-3, pulling out of a 3-3 deadlock with a service winner and three backhand passing shots.

The loss ended Connors' bid to capture his first tournament title since October 1984, when he last beat Lendl.

Becker, the world's No. 4 player, cruised through the first set, allowing only one point in his last three service games. But he did not win another game after pulling to within 4-3 in the second set.

After the first set, Gilbert sensed that his opponent was not at the top of his game.

"Even though he won the first set, I felt he wasn't doing that well," Gilbert said. "Then, I think he got real tired and started going for winners on the first ball."

Gilbert, of Piedmont, Calif., got his first service break of the match in the sixth game of the second set, winning at 15, to take a 4-2 lead.

Becker countered with a break of his own, but Gilbert broke Becker again and then served out the set.

The final set was all Gilbert, as he opened with a break at 15, held at love, then broke serve again when Becker made an unforced error on a backhand that sailed well past the baseline.

Gilbert made it 4-0 when he held serve by placing a lob well beyond the reach of Becker, who had come to the net and could only watch as the ball landed just inside the baseline.

Becker, by now yelling at himself in frustration, lost his serve for a fifth straight time, then offered only token resistance as Gilbert served out the match at 15.

The end came when Gilbert, who had never before faced Becker, tapped a forehand volley over the net.

Becker, who helped West Germany defeat the United States in Davis Cup competition last weekend, said he was still weary from playing two five-set matches in three days.

"I had problems with my arms, elbows, legs, many things," Becker said. "I lost it. Every day this week something else was hurting. Today my left leg hurt and I couldn't run very much. The whole week I suffered."

Becker, who had not lost a set at love since December 1986, dropped only his eighth match in 44 tries this year.

Gilbert, ranked No. 17 in the world, improved to 22-11 this year in winning the match in 1 hour, 53 minutes.

"I felt like this was the worst match I've played against a really good player," Gilbert said. "But he played horrible."

doesn't take him long to get going."

Jack Van Berg, trainer of Alysheba, came out of the race vindicated. He had repeatedly said during the week that his horse did need the drug Lasix to run well and that the rash his colt developed on its girth 10 days ago would not affect him. He was right on both counts.

McCarron, because he rode in the final two races, was not available to comment on Alysheba's performance, but the genial Van Berg, winner of 5,000 races, talked readily later.

Observers noted that Alysheba might have cut inside the other two horses on the turn for home instead of going outside. "I watched all of Lost Code's races and he usually drifts out," Van Berg said. "This time he didn't. There really wasn't enough room for Alysheba to go through there."

Van Berg stated that he was very pleased with Alysheba's race. "I still have full confidence in him and I still think he's the best colt in the country," he said.

He revealed that the next race for Alysheba would be the $1 million Travers Stakes at Saratoga Aug. 22. Bet Twice is also pointing for that race.

Lost Code will definitely not go in the Travers, according to trainer Bill Donovan. "I'm not going to run him without Lasix," Donovan said. "I can't use it in New York."

Donovan's plans include the Pegasus at the Meadowlands (Sept. 19) and the Pennsylvania Derby (Oct. 4).

St. Leon was pleased with Lost Code, who had won seven straight stakes races. "He ran his eye balls out," he said. "I knew passing the half-mile pole that Bet Twice would be coming. He never came until the five-sixteenth pole. He's a super horse and this was a good race for him."

Trainer Croll gave both Lost Code and Alysheba a great deal of credit. "We were going to chase Lost Code and stay alongside Alysheba," he said. "I really didn't think Lost Code would last as long as he did. I honestly thought that when we looked him in the eye, he'd go back.

well over 100. He said the decrease in customers has brought an increase in competition between the sheets.

"There's a lot of competition," Green said. "But we also cooperate with each other. If someone has to leave for a minute the other guys will sell for him. Tip sheet sales have gone down recently, partly because the new program has analysis in it, and also because of increased newspaper concentration."

Rip McKenna, who sells Lawton's sheet, said business was once much better at the track.

"This is a real good day," McKenna said. "I wish it was like this every day. It used to be, but simulcasting has made the crowds smaller. But this is still a great track."

Bilak said the tout sheets do a good job of picking the winners in the races.

"We're generally pretty good," he said. "Over the long run, we do well. I've found that people will buy whatever sheet is picking winners, even though the program has comments in it."

Zany Tactics heads Crosby Handicap

DEL MAR, Calif. (AP) — World record-holder Zany Tactics heads a field of 10 entered in today's $60,000-added Bing Crosby Handicap at Del Mar.

Zany Tactics, a 6-year-old California-bred son of Zante, will be ridden by Jack Kaenel and is assigned high weight of 120 pounds for the 42nd running of the six-furlong race for 3-year-olds and up.

Zany Tactics, who drew the outside post position for today's race, set a world record of 1:06 4-5 for six furlongs March 8 at Turf Paradise in Arizona.

Zany Tactics will be running for the first time since finishing third in the Carter Handicap at Aqueduct in New York on May 2. In his previous start, he finished fourth in the Bold Ruler Stakes at Aqueduct on April 11.

Zany Tactics has won 12 of his 27 lifetime starts and earned $461,814.

Santacroce retires as county official

County Hall of Fame set

Alfred M. Santacroce moved out of Eatontown last week to take his family to its new home in Woodstock, Ga.

Al, recently retired from AT&T. He and his wife, Josephine, sold their home here and plan to spend the rest of their time in retirement in Georgia.

Al is one of the best-known bowling officials the Monmouth County Bowling Assn. has had over recent years. Over some 40 years I have persuaded certain people to serve on the MCBA Board of Directors. On occasion the persuasion works out to be a good one.

Being a league secretary enabled me to get to know a majority of bowlers on a personal basis. Santacroce was a member of my league. When I had something to do with local tournaments, all the members of my league were continually encouraged to fill out an entry form and participate. Any league I was secretary of had a good tournament participation ratio, and on many occasions the entire league entered.

The same type of pressure was put on my league bowlers to enter into the County Masters Tourney. It took a little pushing to get Al to participate, but he bought the sales pitch, or so I thought. I knew the experience would do him a lot of good, and, who knows ... he might do well.

But I believe Al had enough confidence to take a crack at competing with the county's best. So in 1968 he took the plunge and shot a modest 499 series to miss the first cut by a mile-and-a-half. But I was convinced the experience did him a lot of good.

The next time he entered with less reluctance and made the second cut but fell short of the finals by only a half-mile.

As the years went by, it was easy for me to realize that Al was the kind of guy who would make a good local official to represent the American Bowling Congress.

There were a few others I encouraged along these lines and I'm proud to say they have come along and served with distinction.

Al was encouraged to sit in on a few local board of directors meetings and got the feeling that he could take part in its functions.

In 1970 Al was elected to the office of Director of the MCBA.

It was about the same time that he took over league secretarial duties of the Monmouth County Holy Name League. The job he did as league secretary was outstanding. It was obvious to me that this guy was good for bowling.

He was a respectable bowler and managed to average in the 180s. Sometimes on the minus side, but mostly on the plus side.

However, he adjusted his tournament competitive skills to include all tournaments except the Masters. It was at this time that I wanted Santacroce to work the Masters as a committee member and operating official. His management talents came favorably to the surface. He stayed on for the 10 years.

Santacroce is above all a gentleman with a manner that exudes excellence to the nearest degree of perfection.

Needless to say, Al served with distinction on just about every committee on his way to serving as MCBA president in 1980-81 season.

From 1981-1987 he served as assistant secretary-treasurer of the MCBA.

In five years from 1980 to 1984 he was secretary of the County Championships Tournament. It was under his direction that the tournament entry form was drastically changed to a more professional document that enhanced many practical innovations. It was during his years as tournament secretary that the number of entries grew to its largest numbers in many years. When he gave up these duties the entry numbers once again dropped off. That is only one of the reflections that has displayed his ability to excel in a job where others struggle.

His input and execution of the Hall of Fame ceremonies brought a degree of honor and dignity that it never had previous to his six years of running the annual showcase.

There are many more areas of excellent service that can be credited to Santacroce.

ALFRED M. SANTACROCE

It always seemed that whatever anyone else could do well, Al could find a way to improve on it and do it better.

His ability to study, rationalize, evaluate and make the right decisions is perhaps the best the MCBA has ever had from any of its officials.

When one wants to review the credits that make a person worthy of special recognition, whether it is for distinguished or meritorious service, Santacroce can easily take his place among those previously honored. The only difference might be that he could have a slight edge and rank as the best among those considered the best.

HALL OF FAME SET

Friday, Aug. 7, the Monmouth County Bowling Hall of Fame will open its doors to enshrine five of its most outstanding bowlers and administrators.

Bob Serbe of Hazlet, James Murphy of Middletown and Bonnie Bartlett of Cliffwood will be inducted for superior performances, while Kay Ayles of Wanamassa and the late Frank A. Sinkleris will be recognized for Meritorious Service.

The official ceremonies will be held in the ballroom of the Squire's Pub Restaurant, West Long Branch, at 7:30 p.m. Anyone wishing to attend this showcase of bowling functions may contact Charles H. Bryde, dinner chairman at 449-3534. Only a few more can be accommodated, so act today if you want hold a table.

Several other county award winners will be honored for the achievements accomplished this past season.

Officials keep tabs on bass in Hockocksens

Because of the intense efforts of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the states of Maryland and Virginia to restore striped bass in Chesapeake Bay, biologist Peter Himchak says he was lucky to get a shipment of 18,320 fingerlings to stock in Hockocksens Brook, Tinton Falls.

The fish were released on July 15, and since they bite quite readily, Himchak said he hoped that what few trout fishermen may still be active in the brook will release the baby stripers. Himchak, who heads the striper restoration efforts in the brook will release the baby stripers. Himchak, who heads the striper restoration efforts in the Navesink River system, said he elected to release the fish immediately, rather than hold them for additional growth at the Hackettstown hatchery.

"We found that the fish released directly into the system fared as well or better than these from Hackettstown," Himchak said.

During the past three years, the state has stocked more than 100,000 stripers of varying size in the Navesink River system including a lot planted off Red Bank. They have been thriving and some now measure 14 to 16 inches.

The most recently stocked fish were obtained from the Edenton, North Carolina, hatchery which is operated by the federal service. These fish are of the Brookneal strain, the landlocked variety found in the south.

The Bureau of Freshwater Fisheries has proposed a return to the second Saturday of April for the start of the 1988 trout fishing season, and that will be debated at the public hearing on next year's fishing code at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 8 in the Wildlife Conservation Center Eldridge Road in the Assumpink Wildlife Management Area, Monmouth County.

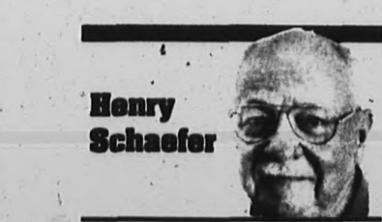

Among other proposals is a 12-inch minimum size for largemouth bass in most waters all year, with an 18-inch minimum size and only one fish, April 1-June 15.

Also proposed is the establishment of a "Trout Conservation Area" along a 1.3 mile stretch of the Pequest River through the Pequest Wildlife Management Area, in effect from May 16-Oct. 2. Flies and other artificial lures only would be allowed, and the limit would be one trout 15 or more inches long.

A Bruce Pyle, bureau chief, has always favored a second Saturday of April opener because of less danger of flooding and because of the iron acid streams in Monmouth and Ocean counties.

In very cold water, Toms River has been toxic to freshly stocked trout. Streams throughout the state were badly flooded on opening day this year and very few trout were caught.

The annual waterfowl seminar sponsored by the state will be held at 7:30 p.m. Aug. 11 in the lecture hall of Ocean County College, Hooper Avenue, Toms River.

On hand will be state officials as well as the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. Taking part will be the New Jersey Waterfowlers Assn. and Ducks Unlimited.

Until I read Outdoor Life magazine's current edition of Deer and Big Game, currently available at newstands for $2.75, I thought the only two people who knew how to grunt call a buck were the late Billy Polk and myself.

However, Tom Huggler's article, Questions Deer Hunters Ask, goes into detail about various methods hunters use to try to outwit whitetail deer, which along with elk are the wariest and most difficult of antlered game. He writes of antler rattling and grunt calling, and who now manufactures grunt calls.

Billy Polk of Costigan, Maine, ran a hunting camp near the Penobscot River in a very wild region of the state that contained a lot of deer, but nobody was going to drive one to you. You had to find your own deer, or call one to you.

Polk knew all of the sounds that deer make, bucks that snort and grunt, and does and fawns that bleat and blat, but very softly. With a couple of other super woodsmen, he managed to keep his patrons happy and many a license was filled by men who never left the cabins. The so-called guides managed to score at least once a week.

I don't know what Mr. Feather's grunt call sounds like, but Polk's was a sharp cough. We practiced and the first time I tried to call one a small buck came running in my direction within five minutes. I was hidden by a thicket and he never saw me.

Another time, on fresh snow covered by a thin sheet of ice, I came upon tracks of two deer, one moderately large. Tracking would have been useless so I hid in a clump of firs with a dead beech in front of me. I grunted and rubbed the barrel of the rifle along the bark to simulate antler rubbing.

Fifteen minutes passed before I spotted a well-racked buck staring in my direction at a range of 40 yards. The system works but probably only in a wilderness area devoid of other hunters.

Rodgers set for Penney's

EATONTOWN — Distance runner Bill Rodgers will appear at J.C. Penney in Monmouth Mall from 7-9 p.m. Thursday night. He will be available to answer questions and autograph pictures in the sporting goods department.

A four-time Boston and New York City marathon winner, Rodgers won the first Asbury Park 10-Kilometer Classic in 1981 and will run again in that race next Saturday.

Yankees put Henderson on disabled list

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Yankees outfielder Rickey Henderson, hampered by a sore right hamstring, was placed on the 15-day disabled list yesterday.

The move was made retroactive to July 26, the day after Henderson last played.

Henderson, the starting center fielder for the American League in the All-Star Game, was put the 15-day disabled list for the second time this season because of his hamstring problem. He was out of action from June 5 to June 29.

Henderson has played in 67 of the Yankees' 103 games this season. The leadoff batter is hitting .298 with 11 home runs and 25 runs batted in.

Henderson has led the AL in stolen bases for seven straight seasons. He has 26 steals, nine behind league leader Harold Reynolds of Seattle, and has been caught stealing in five of his last eight attempts.

There had been some grumbling among Yankees this week about Henderson's status. Some had questioned his desire to get back into the lineup as the AL East-leading Yankees began a three-game series Friday night against runner-up Detroit.

But Henderson, who had gone just 3-for-18 in his last five games, maintained he was hurt and did not want to take a chance on re-injuring himself.

"I get angry and upset when people think I'm faking it," Henderson said.

Stafford, Douglass share lead

SCARBOROUGH-ON-HUDSON, N.Y. — Roland Stafford, who did not play on the Senior Tour last year, shot a 5-under-par 65 yesterday to tie Dale Douglass for the lead after two rounds of the $250,000 Commemorative at the Sleepy Hollow Country Club.

Douglass, the 1986 U.S. Senior Open champion and third-leading money-winner on the Senior Tour last year, had his second straight 67 on the par-70, 6,545 course to match Stafford's 36-hole score of 6-under-par 134.

Gene Littler, third in this event last year, and Miller Barber each had 68s to tie for third at 135.

Mike Souchak, who had a 66, and Jim Ferree, with a 68, were next at 136. First-round leader Larry Mowry had a 73 and was at 139.

Arnold Palmer, the honoree at the Commemorative for winning the British Open and the Masters in 1962, also had a 73 and was at 144.

Spencer-Devlin takes one-stroke advantage

ST. MELLION, England — American Muffin Spencer-Devlin shot a 75 yesterday and took a one-stroke lead with a 222 after the third round of the $165,000 women's British Open golf tournament.

Sally Little of the United States and Britain's Alison Nicholas, winless in four years as a pro, tied for second at 223. Little shot a 74 Saturday and the Briton had a 73 in the third round.

Defending champion Laura Davies of Britain dropped into a fourth-place tie at 224 with countrywoman Katrina Douglas.

Davies survived a nightmare putting round to keep within striking distance of a remarkable golfing double.

The big-hitting Davies, who became the first Briton to win the U.S. Open title in a playoff Tuesday, holed only one putt of any note, from seven feet on the 17th green. She slumped to a third-round 79, 6-under par.

Douglas shot a 73 yesterday.

Edberg, Nystrom, advance to Swedish Open final

BASTAD, Sweden — Second-seeded Stefan Edberg and No. 5 Joakim Nystrom breezed past their semifinal opponents in straight sets yesterday to make it an all-Swedish championship tennis match in the $202,500 Swedish Open.

Edberg, a serve and volley player who prefers faster surfaces, outclassed defending champion Emilio Sanchez after a rain delay late in the opening set to win 6-4, 6-0 on the slow clay court. The victory avenged a straight-set loss to the Spanish clay court specialist here last year.

Number 13 proved to be a lucky digit for Nystrom, who upset top-seeded countryman Mats Wilander 6-2, 6-2. Wilander, ranked second in the world behind Ivan Lendl, was 12-0 lifetime going into the match with Nystrom, his close friend and doubles partner.

"Finally beating Mats is like winning the whole tournament for me," said Nystrom, who had played several tough matches against Wilander in the past but never managed to prevail.

It was the first time since 1984 that the two-time French Open champion Wilander lost to a fellow-countryman on clay.

The top-seeded team of Edberg and Anders Jarryd outlasted veterans Heinz Gunthardt of Switzerland and Balazs Taroczy of Hungary 2-6, 7-5, 7-6 to reach the doubles final against Emilio and Javier Sanchez. The Spanish brothers led Jaro Navratil of Czechoslovakia and Diego Perez of Uruguay 4-1 in the first set when Perez was forced to retire because of an injury.

Louganis wins second gold medal

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. — Greg Louganis collected his second gold medal of the U.S. Diving Outdoor Championships yesterday, winning the 10-meter platform competition and a spot on the U.S. Pan American team.

It was the 43rd national title for Louganis, 27, of Boca Raton, Fla. He won the 3-meter springboard competition Friday after finishing second in the 1-meter springboard Thursday.

Louganis, who had a score of 657.12 points in the 10-meter, will be defending his titles in that event and in the 3-meter in the Pan American Games, which begin Friday in Indianapolis.

"It's nice to know that you have it in you to rise to the occasion," Louganis said.

Defending 10-meter national champion Matt Scoggin, 23, of Great Falls, Va., finished second with 628.41 points and joined Louganis in qualifying for the Pan Am team. Kent Ferguson, 24, of Boca Raton was third with 619.71.

In the women's 10-meter platform yesterday, Mary Ellen Clark, 24, of Newton Square, Pa., won her first national title in senior competition.

Clark's victory marked the halt of a victory streak by Michele Mitchell, who took the silver medal.

Commercials, Cubs don't mix

CHICAGO — Television and baseball may not mix from now on for Chicago Cubs catcher Jody Davis, who was scratched from the starting lineup Friday and benched indefinitely over the filming of a 30-second commercial.

Davis was late for batting practice Friday because he had been taping the commercial, so team Manager Gene Michael scratched him from the starting lineup and ordered him benched indefinitely.

"Baseball is going to be No. 1, not commercials or doing other things," said Michael. "The commercials only came by the way of baseball. We're going to think baseball first and think winning."

Jim Sundberg was brought in as Davis' replacement Friday, when the Cubs committed three errors, left 12 men on base and walked six in losing 8-5 to the Philadelphia Phillies. Sundberg started against the Phillies yesterday afternoon.

Michael did not say how long Davis, who earns $1 million a year, would remain on suspension.

"I don't know, I'll have to think about it," he said when asked if Davis would be back in the lineup by the end of the weekend.

Strange, Dilliard on top after three rounds

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Curtis Strange and Andy Dillard both birdied the final hole yesterday to share a one-stroke lead after the third round of the $724,043 St. Jude Classic.

The late birdies gave Strange and Dillard matching totals of 10-under-par 206. Hubert Green, Fuzzy Zoeller, Russ Cochran, Mike Donald and Jay Don Blake were next at 207.

Second-round leader Trevor Dodds soared to a 2-over 74 and was in another group of five players at 209, three shots off the lead.

Strange turned in a no-bogey round of 4-under-par 68, while Dillard, who bogeyed two of the first four holes, rallied to birdie two of the last three holes to finish with a 70 in the 98-degree heat.

Donald birdied his final three holes for a 68, while Cochran, the first-round leader with a 66, birdied the 17th and 18th holes on the way to a 68.

Green came from far off the pace, reeling off four straight birdies on his way to a round of 7-under 65.

After starting with a pair of pars, Green birdied the third, fourth, fifth and sixth holes to go 6-under. He offset a bogey on the par-4, 447-yard 14th with four other birdies to put himself in contention.

Green's last tour victory came in the 1985 PGA Championship.

Zoeller survived a bogey-6 at the 16th hole, which came after he hit a 1-iron second shot into the water. He pulled within a stroke of the lead with an 18th-hole birdie that gave him a 70.

Blake birdied his first hole, parred the next 14 and birdied the 16th and 18th to finish at 69.

Dodds, who started the day 9-under, clipped three more shots off par on the first 10 holes before his game fell apart.

Tournament officials and the corporate sponsor, Federal Express, announced a record purse of $724,043.

Indians scalp Blue Jays

TORONTO (AP) — Scott Bailes scattered eight hits over 8 2-3 innings, and Tommy Hinzo scored two of Cleveland's runs as the Indians beat the Toronto Blue Jays 3-0 yesterday.

Bailes, 4-4, walked four and struck out six before needing help from Sammy Stewart to get the final out. Stewart earned his eighth save.

The Indians scored two of their runs in the first inning against Jim Clancy, 10-7. Hinzo singled, stole second and scored on a single by Pat Tabler. Tabler stole second and scored on Brok Jacoby's single.

Hinzo bunted for a single in the third inning and scored when Tabler's single to right bounced under the glove of a charging Juan Beniquez for an error.

Bailes allowed a leadoff double to Charlie Mobre in the ninth, then, with two out, walked Jesse Barfield to put runners at the corners when Stewart came in to face George Bell. Stewart walked Bell to load the bases, and pinch-hitter Rance Mulliniks struck out.

The Blue Jays had their first two batters aboard in the second on eight straight balls by Bailes. Willie Upshaw sacrificed the runners ahead, but Bailes got out of the jam. Charlie Moore grounded out to third as the runners held. Bailes hit Tony Fernandez to load the bases and Beniquez fouled out.

Toronto left seven men on base in the first four innings, five in scoring position. Bailes retired the Blue Jays in order for the first time in the sixth inning.

Clancy pitched 6 2-3 innings, striking out eight.

Fernandez extended his hitting streak to 10 games with a leadoff single in the seventh.

Athletics 3, Twins 2

OAKLAND, Calif. — Carney Lansford led off the ninth inning with a home run off Frank Viola, giving the Oakland Athletics and right-hander Dave Stewart a victory over the Minnesota Twins.

Stewart, 14-7, struck out a career high 14 batters and scattered eight hits for his seventh straight victory and his first career victory over the Twins. Viola, 11-7, saw his five game win streak snapped despite allowing only five hits.

Lansford's homer was his 11th.

Mets clobber Expos, Leach stays unbeaten

MONTREAL (AP) — Unbeaten Terry Leach pitched a four-hitter over seven innings for his ninth victory and the New York Mets took advantage of four Montreal errors to beat the Expos 12-4 last night.

Howard Johnson hit his third career grand slam and 26th homer this season and Len Dykstra accounted for three more runs as the Mets managed to do all their damage on only seven hits.

Leach, making his first start since coming off the 15-day disabled list last Monday, struck out two and walked three as he improved his lifetime record as a starter to 10-1. Doug Sisk and Jesse Orosco finished up for the Mets.

Floyd Youmans, 8-5, allowed only three hits, but walked six in 3 1-3 innings to take the loss.

The Mets went ahead in the first inning when Dykstra drew a leadoff walk, stole second and scored on a single by Keith Hernandez.

Tim Raines' RBI single tied it for Montreal in the bottom of the first, but New York regained the lead in the second when Dave Magadan followed a walk to Johnson with a triple.

Dykstra doubled home two more runs for the Mets in the fourth inning that started with Johnson reaching on an error by first baseman Vance Law.

A throwing error by Expos' pitcher Andy McGaffigan and a double play ball by Johnson gave New York two more runs in the fifth before Montreal got one back on pinch-hitter Wallace Johnson's single in the bottom of the inning.

Expos' third baseman Tim Wallach and center fielder Casey Candaele each made errors to help New York put the game out of reach with six runs in the sixth.

The big blow was Johnson's grand slam off Randy St. Claire.

The Expos used five pitchers, including a one-inning stint by Law in the eighth.

Cubs 5, Phillies 3

CHICAGO — Andre Dawson hit three homers and drove in five runs, leading the Chicago Cubs to a victory and breaking the Philadelphia Phillies' five-game winning streak. The Cubs had lost three in a row.

Dawson homered with two aboard in the third, and he hit homers leading off the fifth and seventh innings to give him 31 for the season, one short of his career high in 1983. Dawson lined into a double play in his first at-bat in the first inning.

All three of Dawson's homers landed in the left field bleachers. It was Dawson's fifth multi-homer game this season and the 22nd of his career. It was the second time in his career he has hit three homers in a game. He also did it in September 1985 at Chicago as a member of the Montreal Expos.

Rookie Les Lancaster, 3-1, was the winner. Tom Hume, 1-3, took the loss. Lee Smith pitched the last two innings for the Cubs to earn his 26th save.

The Phillies scored a pair in fourth when Chris James hit his 11th homer after Glenn Wilson had walked with two outs.

They added another run in the sixth on a balk by Lancaster. Von Hayes walked to open the sixth and Mike Schmidt singled. Hayes took third as Wilson filed out and after James struck out, Lancaster balked to score Hayes.

It was Lancaster's sixth balk and the Cubs' 26th, tops in the majors.

Lancaster allowed five hits, walked four and struck out four before departing in the seventh.

Giants 7, Reds 3

CINCINNATI — Will Clark had three hits and drove in three runs to pace the San Francisco Giants to a rain-delayed victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

Clark had an RBI single, a double and a two-run homer as the Giants scored six times in the first five innings off Bill Gullickson, 10-8. The right-hander has lost his last six decisions to San Francisco.

The victory left second-place San Francisco two games behind the Reds in the National League West. The game was delayed by rain for 1 hour 5 minutes in the top of the fifth.

Mike LaCoss, 9-6, allowed five hits over 5 1-3 innings, including Kurt Stillwell's solo homer in the sixth, his fourth of the season. Don Robinson, obtained from Pittsburgh in a trade Friday night, allowed Eric Davis' sacrifice fly in the sixth, then shut down the Reds until Dave Parker's RBI single in the eighth. Scott Garrelts pitched the ninth.

The Giants had seven hits in 4 1-3 innings off Gullickson, including Clark's two-run homer in the first and Kevin Mitchell's solo homer in the third. Gullickson has given up 30 homers in 23 starts, three ahead of his 1984 total when he led the league in homers allowed.

Jeffrey Leonard singled ahead of Clark's 19th homer into the second deck in right field. Robby Thompson's triple and Jose Uribe's first sacrifice fly in 1,076 major-league at-bats put San Francisco ahead 3-0 in the second.

Mitchell led off the third with his 12th homer into the second deck in left field. Leonard, Clark and Thompson had RBI singles in the fifth for a 7-0 lead.

Dodgers 5, Braves 2

ATLANTA — Pedro Guerrero and Mike Marshall hit consecutive run-scoring singles in the sixth inning to snap a tie and power the surging Los Angeles Dodgers to a victory over the Atlanta Braves.

It was the Dodgers' sixth victory in seven games, while the Braves dropped their third straight and 12th in 16 starts since the All-Star game.

Los Angeles right-hander Bob Welch, 10-6, gaining only his second victory since June 7, limited the Braves to six hits over 8 2-3 innings. He got last-out relief help from Matt Young, who recorded his ninth save.

Guerrero looped his hit to right in the sixth off Braves' starter David Palmer, 5-9, to score Steve Sax, who had singled and moved to second on a sacrifice. Marshall followed with his blooper to center, scoring Dave Anderson, who was hit by a pitch and moved to third on Guerrero's hit.

The Dodgers' first run came on John Shelby's home run in the first inning, his 12th, and first of three hits in the game. Los Angeles also got a run-scoring single from Marshall in the fifth, following singles by Shelby and Guerrero, and another in the seventh on a sacrifice fly from pinch-hitter Ken Landreaux in its 15-hit attack.

The Braves scored off Welch in the second without getting a hit. Ken Griffey walked with one out, took second on an error and moved to third on another walk before scoring on a sacrifice fly by Glenn Hubbard.

Atlanta tied it at 2-2 in the third on Dion James' double, a sacrifice and Gerald Perry's sacrifice fly before a crowd of 43,804, the second largest of the season. A crowd of 45,679 attended a Braves-St. Louis contest on July 3.

Shula seeing how other side lives

(AP)Mike Shula, who was once a ball boy at the Miami Dolphins training camp, is back at an NFL camp in Florida. But this time, he's trying to make the team.

The former Alabama quarterback was drafted in the 12th round by the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

"This is a neat experience for me because I've always seen it from the other side as a person who's been a ball boy or doing laundry," said Shula, son of Dolphins Coach Don Shula. "Now I'm getting to see it from the side of a player. Hopefully, I'll continue that for a while."

Tampa Bay is coached by Ray Perkins, who was Mike Shula's coach at Alabama. But that doesn't mean Shula is a lock to make the team.

Steve DeBerg, an 11-year veteran, is listed as the Bucs' No. 1 quarterback. No. 2 is Heisman Trophy winner Vinny Testaverde, who signed a six-year, $8.2 million contract. Geoff Torretta, Testaverde's backup at the University of Miami, is battling Shula for the No. 3 spot.

"I just wanted to have an opportunity to play in the NFL," Shula said during a break in three-a-day practices at the University of Tampa. "Now I have that opportunity. Now I feel like it's up to me to do the best that I can with that chance."

Shula's chances of making the team depend largely on whether Perkins decides to carry two or three quarterbacks. Perkins could go with just two full-time quarterbacks and use Don Smith, a college quarterback drafted as a running back, in an emergency.

"We don't know if there's going to be a spot for a third quarterback," Shula said, "but I have to prepare myself like there is."

Frosty Fridge

William "The Refrigerator" Perry doesn't want to talk about his weight.

"I'm not going to discuss it," he said at the Chicago Bears training camp. "I'm staying neutral about such things."

Bears Coach Mike Ditka had warned Perry not to report to camp if he weighed more than 325 pounds. After Wednesday's practice, the defensive tackle tipped the scales at 318.

"The Fridge is fine," Ditka declared.

Staying Home

Mark Gastineau's days as a roving lineman are over.

Last season, the New York Jets defensive end moved along the line of scrimmage to confuse opponents. But defensive coordinator Bud Carson decided the experiment was a failure, so Gastineau will stay put on the right side this season.

"This will let me concentrate on one position," Gastineau said. "Going left to right requires a different stance and I just could never get in the groove. It threw my timing off. I didn't feel at ease last year and it frustrated me."

Contracts

Veteran cornerback Leroy Irvin reported to the Los Angeles Rams camp yesterday. Irvin had been absent since last Sunday, when veterans were supposed to report. "He had signed his contract some months ago, but he was holding out for personal reasons," a Rams spokesman said.

Tyson decisions Tucker

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Mike Tyson won the undisputed heavyweight championship of the world last night, but Iron Mike had to settle for a 12-round unanimous decision over 10½-1 underdog Tony Tucker.

Tyson's victory before 7,600 fans at the Las Vegas Hilton made the 21-year-old New Yorker the first undisputed champion since Leon Spinks upset Muhammad Ali on a split decision at the Hilton on Feb. 15, 1978.

Michael Spinks, who was stripped by the International Boxing Federation for refusing to fight Tucker, contends he is the true champion. But all three sanctioning bodies — the IBF, World Boxing Council and World Boxing Association — now recognize the unbeaten Tyson.

Most observers didn't feel Tucker would last long with Tyson, despite being unbeaten himself, and many of the fans were disappointed Tyson didn't end the fight inside the 12-round limit which exists in Nevada.

But Tyson was in charge all the way and was a clear winner.

Judge Phil Newman scored it 119-111, Bill Graham had it 116-112 and Julio Roldan scored it 118-113.

The Associated Press favored Tyson 117-111.

Tyson, who weighed 221 pounds, had entered the ring as WBA and WBC champion while Tucker, 28, who also weighed 221, was the IBF champion.

The victory boosted Tyson's record to 31-0 with 27 knockouts while Tucker lost for the first time after 35 victories, 30 by knockout.

Pringle, Verga to meet in tennis final

LITTLE SILVER — Top-seed Mike Pringle of Red Bank will meet second-seed Bob Verga of Manasquan today at 3:30 p.m. in the finals of the Don Priel Clay Court Invitational tennis championship at the Little Silver Tennis Club.

Pringle advanced to the final with a resounding 6-0, 6-1 victory over George Gill of Tinton Falls in the semifinals yesterday. Verga defeated Tony Moreno of Rumson 6-0, 6-2.

In doubles action at 5 p.m., the team of Verga and Don Priel of Fair Haven will take on Pringle and Dick Long of Ocean. Verga and Priel advanced to the final when top-seeded Frank Hemberger, Middletown, and Frank Diardo, Colts Neck, had to default due to an injury.

Pringle and Long defeated Joe Marchitto, Verona, and Lou Santore, Middletown, 6-2, 6-0.

Admission to the tournament is free.

Summer scholars

Youths use summer to learn vocational skills

By CHRISTINE A. ROWETT
THE REGISTER

MIDDLETOWN — Most students would do just about anything to avoid spending their summer vacation at school.

But the kids in Middletown High School North's summer employment program are not like most students.

More than 20 of them have been receiving on-the-job training in food service, carpentry and auto mechanics for the past five weeks of the program, which is sponsored by the Monmouth County Private Industry Council.

The program, in its first year at the school, is coordinated by Marilyn Cohen, and supervised by John Edwards and George Scheer, both of the Office of Special Services and Guidance at Middletown North.

Recommended by school guidance counselors, the 25 students, who range in age from 14 to 18, work from 8:30 a.m. until about noon with a break for lunch. They are paid $4 an hour.

"We try to simulate a work experience for the students," says auto mechanics instructor Randy Lovgren. "It's not just that they know how to do something — it's more like they're coming to work."

Auto mechanics students have learned basic car repair work including tune-ups, oil changes, washing, waxing and interior detailing. They have been practicing their skills on the cars of school employees or township residents.

Customers provide the parts for the services, which cost $2. Money earned from their work, like the money earned from food sales in the cafeteria, is put back into the program, Lovgren said.

Although they are not graded, the students are rated every 2½ weeks on performance, attitude and personal characteristics.

But it is their progress that deserves recognition. The students, all of whom have learning disabilities of varying degrees, were admitted to the program from several different schools in the township.

THE REGISTER/MARTIN PETTERCHAK

"I didn't know what I was doing when we started," says Chris Casey, who with others in the carpentry program has been making picnic tables and shelves for the school. "Now I could do this myself."

Most of the students did not know each other before they started working together. Five weeks later, says 14-year-old Renee Murray, working at the school is "like spending time with your friends and getting paid for it."

"I was pretty nervous 'cause I didn't know anybody," says Rosemary O'Donnell, a 17-year-old working in food service. "But we all got together and now we have a lot of fun. I've learned a lot."

O'Donnell, who will graduate high school next June, hopes to find a part-time restaurant job while still in school.

Food service workers, led by instructor Amy Pomerantz, prepare lunch every day for other students and school employees. Normally they prepare about 30 meals. The group has invited the Middletown Senior Citizens and representatives from the Monmouth County Private Industry Council for a special luncheon tomorrow.

"The kids are all doing so well," Pomerantz says of her students. "Coming into this, they wanted to learn how to cook, to have fun and to make money ... I think they've achieved those goals." Pomerantz has also seen friendship and cooperation evolve among the students, a group she says, "normally wouldn't be working together."

"We feel like we've made a lot of progress," says one of two carpentry instructors Fred Vezzosi. "Now these boys have a good idea of what it's like to be working."

The program was made available to Middletown North under a Job Training Partnership Act grant.

Whose plate is it anyway?

Some kids are really lucky. They have parents who have themselves established good eating habits. And most likely, the children will be fed food not unlike what their parents eat. Thus life has started them on an intelligent nutritional track.

However, this is not the case for everyone. Not too long ago at a school fair, I was surprised to note that many of the children participating were very much overweight. Not a little overweight, but enough to make one take notice and wonder what was happening.

If kids in grammar school are grossly overweight, what awaits them as they get older? More weight?

Considering that for the most part, children are captive of what their parents buy for them to consume, being overweight as a child is, in a way, an adult problem. Food that does not come into the home cannot be eaten by those who live there.

Conversely, if the purchaser bought nutritional food, mostly natural foods filled with the components of a well-balanced diet, weight gain would be more difficult to achieve.

While I was growing up, we were taught to be sure to include four servings of fruits and vegetables each day along with two portions of protein, carbohydrates, milk and lots of water.

Thus, citrus fruit for breakfast, and two green leafy and one yellow, orange or red vegetable plus broiled protein were built into everyday eating. Our desserts were minimal. Milk was included and snacks just weren't served. Fairly good eating habits became ours as a parental gift. There were, however, some negatives.

Meals were to be eaten as served, and that put us in the "clean your plate club." As many know, that is a dangerous club in which to hold membership.

First, it is disrespectful of another person's appetite and taste to insist that he or she consume a specified amount of food chosen by another. And this custom sets one up for making a habit of eating more than is needed. How often as adults do we feel compelled to finish a restaurant meal only because of this earlier conditioning?

My own children quite early looked at my intention of having them finish what was on their plates in a pointed, questioning manner.

In fact, I recall one saying, "If you want it, you eat it. I don't." Sincerity of intent came through. I listened and reduced the amount of food.

In my own case, I can recall being told that starving children in Europe needed food and for that reason I should eat what was on my plate! Somehow, the logic of that argument was lost, for to me, it seemed that the wrong person was being fed. I wasn't in Europe.

Children have strong likes and dislikes in food, as well as quantity comfort levels.

However, we as parents have a responsibility to offer a nutritionally balanced menu and ourselves set good examples. After all, as role models, we are setting up life-long eating habits in our young.

Milk, protein, two leafy greens and a yellow, orange or red vegetable as well as citrus fruits, whole-grain cereal or bread each day in moderate amounts and you can't go too far wrong.

Eating natural foods rather than processed foods is a good way to inculcate good eating habits that keep health and weight at optimum levels. This prevents a lot of remedial dieting later in life. And we all know how hard that becomes.

You are in charge. Promoting good habits is a great gift to your child.

ON THE JOB — Left, school employee John McCann is waited on by Kim Sellers, 16, a student in the restaurant skills class. Above, Donna Miller, 16, of Port Monmouth, doesn't mind being the only female in the auto mechanics class. She said she took the class to "learn more about cars and be more like my dad," who is a bus mechanic.

Men's pregnancy 'symptoms' not all in their heads

By MICHAEL MCLEOD
Register Wire Services

One thing Ora Strickland always noticed as a maternity nurse was how often she heard the same reply when she asked a pregnant woman how she felt.

"I'm fine," the woman would say, "but my husband is a basket case."

Strickland, now a professor of family nursing at the University of Maryland, decided to find out if all those mothers-to-be were just exaggerating. So she interviewed 91 expectant fathers — and discovered that they weren't.

Far from it. In the study, 87 percent of the expectant fathers reported that they suffered one or more of these following symptoms during the course of their wives' pregnancies: nausea, vomiting, weight gain, food cravings, increased appetite, loss of appetite and various aches and pains.

One man reported 17 sympoms. Another man, the father of five children, reported that with every one of them he had suffered nausea, vomiting and food cravings during the course of pregnancy.

Among the men who craved a particular food during their wives' pregnancy, chocolate ice cream was the obsession of choice.

Strickland found that men who were closer to their wives were far more likely to have physical ailments during pregnancy. Men who were away from home more often, with demanding careers involving a lot of travel, were less inclined to suffer from physical discomforts.

Strickland couldn't find any other medical studies on the subject. But she did find anthropological research into what is called the couvade syndrome — the existence, in 64 different African and Caribbean cultures, of a practice among expectant fathers of miming their mates' symptoms of pregnancy and delivery.

In several of the cultures, the men also adhered to a diet during the course of the pregnancy, in the belief that what they consumed during that time would affect the health of the baby.

All that may account for the fact that in Strickland's study, black fathers consistently reported more symptoms than white expectant fathers, she said: "My hunch is that there is a cultural carryover."

But ultimately, said Strickland, the symptoms reported in her

Foundation's country dinner dance previewed

Bill Sandford

The bird in hand varies from one watcher to next

Bird watchers are not all of a feather in their methods and attitudes. Their mobility, among other things, varies widely.

There are some hard-bitten listers who will dash hundreds — even thousands — of miles to add some newly discovered rarity to their tally sheets. At the other extreme are those who may seldom leave the house, getting their kicks by watching the patrons of their feeding stations through a window.

A couple of articles in current nature magazines cater to and encourage the interests of the more sedentary member of the clan.

David B. Donally is a landscape architect in nearby Hightstown. In the September/October issue of Bird Watcher's Digest, he suggests that your own backyard may be as good a place as any to watch the fall migration now getting under way on the upland scene.

Mr. Donally advises getting comfortable, low to the ground (as in a beach chair), with binoculars, spotting scope, field guides and pencils and paper to keep notes. The morning hours are best, from sunup to noon, when the birds are active and most evident.

The article points out that September and early October are the most active periods of the fall flight and mentions the fact that avian invasions come with cold fronts out of the north, and northwest winds.

I don't know whether that's "as good a way as any" to see a migration, but it's a nice, easy way and could be fun if you are willing to settle for less than a hundred species a day. I've spent hours at a time in one spot while a parade of migrants moved by.

I suppose the "getting low to the ground" means reclining so you can see up into the trees without neck strain. I've found the best vantage point for watching a warbler movement to be a high one, as atop a bank overlooking a wooded ravine so that the birds moving through the foliage are at — or even below — eye level.

(Bird Watcher's Digest is at Box 110, Marietta, Ohio 45750.)

The success of any back-yard bird migration watch is going to depend in large measure on the surroundings. An article in National Wildlife magazine, a publication of the National Wildlife Federation, offers a suggestion for improving a yard's attractiveness for wildlife while reaping other benefits.

Author Laura Martin lists the advantages of turning part of a yard into a wildflower meadow, and offers tips on how to go about it.

Water use restrictions are going to be a recurring fact of life for most of us in over-developed areas. Lawn sprinkling is a major source of drain on our diminishing water supply. One of the attractions of wildflower gardens is that they normally require little or no watering.

The author notes that the "meadows" do not require wide expanses of land. Areas of 2,000 square feet or even less can be planted effectively.

The article details such factors as site choice; how to select the best seeds and plants for local conditions, and which will attract the desirable birds, butterflies and other wildlife; and on planting and managing the plot.

It may not be easy to break lawn worshippers of their greensward fetishes, but illustrations of the Martin meadow prove that they can be highly attractive. They can be planted in fall as well as in spring, so now would be a good time to start planning one.

The National Wildlife Federation is at 1412 16th St., Washington, D.C. 20036-2266. The article is in the April/May issue of the magazine, available at most public libraries.

Although we look on August as a pretty much of a climatic twin of July, heat sufferers are heartened when we turn the corner into the eighth month. It means that, although we may not notice any difference for a while, we are that much closer to relief.

Today is the 10th day of the 20-day-season of Dog Days, typically the hottest period of the year. But before the month is out we should be feeling the effects of a retreating sun.

August's normal mean temperature is about 1.5 degrees lower than July's in our area. Those things seldom come out right on the long-range norm, however. Last month's readings went 1.5 degrees over the average, which means this month is that much more likely to be cooler than last.

At the risk of sounding like Johnny One Note, we must note that there's another syzygy coming up next weekend. The moon will be at perigee (closest to the earth) on Saturday and reach the full on Sunday morning. That situation makes for abnormally high tides, which could be damaging if accompanied by strong easterly winds.

We pointed out a similar astronomic alignment at last month's full moon, when the tidal potential was even greater. But with it came a hot Bermuda high and relatively stagnant air, and there was no major flooding.

But if we owned tidal waterfront property, we'd be keeping an eye on the weather conditions next weekend.

Picture a sylvan country lane by a dark lake, a Fragonard sky, add a granite two-story mill with mill wheel turning. Look further toward the mill-owner's home out of an 18th-century watercolor sketchbook of Italy. Insert modern unobtrusive touches, a stone-framed, double-H-shaped swimming pool and magnificent overscale planters with bouquets by Dufy. The finishing touch: the hostess, Rachel Hovnanian, in a yin-yang dress sculptured by a disciple of Balenciaga.

This was the setting for the preview party for the 10th Annual Country Dinner Dance to benefit the Monmouth Conservation Foundation. To be held at Brennan's Due Process Stables, Colts Neck, on Saturday, Sept. 19, the plans have all the necessary ingredients for a lovely evening.

Co-chairwomen are Mrs. Stanley Burnham, Monmouth Beach, Mrs. Norman Heinle, Jr., Red Bank, and Mrs. Gerald Pflum, Little Silver. Honorary chairwoman is Mrs. Judith Stanley, Red Bank, who is also president of the Monmouth Conservation Foundation.

Committee chairwomen are Mrs. Dayton Beguelin, Locust, Mrs. John Duffy and Mrs. Eugene Harscar, Rumson, decorations; Mrs. Wallace Steinberg, Rumson, reservations; Mrs. Thomas Flynn, Rumson, cocktails; Mrs. Burnham, ad journal; and Mrs. Pflum, invitations.

On the committees are Mrs. John Bodnar, Mrs. Susan Clough, Mrs. William Collopy, Mrs. Walter Czarnecki, Mrs. Joseph DiFeo, Mrs. Frank DiMisa, Mrs. James Farrell, Mrs. Samuel Furman, Mrs. Rene LaComb, Mrs. Cissie Peck, Mrs. James Plate, Mrs. Theodore Sourlis and Mrs. James Zazzali, Rumson. Also, Mrs. James Cullen, Mrs. Paul Gulden, Locust, Mrs. Richard McCoy, Mrs. Joseph Robertson Jr., Fair Haven, Mrs. Robert Harris, Mrs. Joseph Turchyn, Little Silver, Mrs. Ronald Bertone, Mrs. William Dearth, Mrs. Ara Hovnanian, Atlantic Highlands, Mrs. Robert Clark, Mrs. James Finley, Mrs. Dina Liberty, Red Bank, Mrs. Ronald Acquaviva, Mrs. Anthony DeNoia, Holmdel, Miss Elizabeth Freed, Long Branch, Mrs. Joseph Roselle, West Long Branch, Mrs. Jane Freed, Elberon, Mrs. Charles Lawson, Mrs. Robert Rechnitz, Middletown, Mrs. Vincent Paten, Freehold, and Dr. Lynda Tortoriello, Tinton Falls.

Menu for the country dinner dance includes interesting hors d'oeuvres of potato pancakes with horseradish sauce, chicken and walnut finger sandwiches, stuffed mushroom caps, spinach feta tricornes, pineapple wedge boats with yogurt dip, salami cornucopias and miniature corned beef reubens.

Caterhost of Mountinside also will serve charcoal-broiled chateaubriand, spareribs and honey-dipped chicken, plus a suckling pig roasted over a pit, El Paso potatoes, fruit molds with kiwi and New Jersey's own sun-ripened tomatoes. A fruit extravaganza accompanied by raspberry tarts, chocolate brownies and caneloni make up the desserts.

There will be plenty of square dancing, western dancing and round dancing to the sounds of the 'Squan River Band. Square dancers and callers will be ready to organize those activities.

A highlight will be the presentation of the "verdant award," given by MCF to those who have made a major contribution to benefit Monmouth County in the pursuit of open space land conservation. Previous winners include Mr. and Mrs. Edward Mullen for their donation of Wainford in Upper Freehold Township, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Scudder for their donation of easements in Middletown, the J.M. Huber Corp. for the donation of Huber Woods overlooking the Navesink and Prudential Life & Casualty of Holmdel.

A raffle drawing for the real country van, a "woody," will also take place that evening, under the chairmanship of George Illmensee, MCF treasurer.

The annual fund-raiser supports the Monmouth Conservation Foundation's efforts to increase interest and support for open space land preservation projects, such as the Bowne House property of Leonardo, recently purchased by the group. Plans are to have the Bowne House designated as a National Historic Monument, but its year of construction is under investigation.

Tickets for the event are available at the Monmouth Conservation Foundation office, 671-7000.

Minnesota man's life is full of ups and downs

ST. PAUL, Minn. — Randy Geisler was 10 when he took his first roller-coaster ride. He's never been quite the same since.

Some people like roller coasters. Geisler loves roller coasters. He can rattle off coaster dimensions and safety numbers the way some men reel off baseball statistics.

He has ridden on more than 285 roller coasters. He once took a three-day round-trip bus ride to Cincinnati to spend 45 minutes on a new coaster. For fun, he used to read an amusement park trade journal for tips on new coasters. And his favorite vacation was a 16-day car jaunt that hit 19 amusement parks and 48 roller coasters.

And on his honeymoon last year — you guessed it — he and his bride went to an amusement park in Montreal to ride a roller coaster.

So it should come as no surprise to find out that Geisler, a 38-year-old St. Paul resident and Social Security claims representative, is the president of American Coaster Enthusiasts, an organization of 1,300 roller-coaster buffs from eight countries.

What is surprising is his admission that he was, well, nervous before his first roller-coaster ride.

It was a cousin who goaded him onto the wooden Wild Mouse coaster at the Wisconsin State Fair in West Allis, Wis. It was an iron restraining bar that kept him there.

"I couldn't believe what was happening," he recalls. "We were going so fast. I literally don't remember breathing on the ride. It was awe-inspiring. It seemed to go by in a blur. My arms were sore when I got off from holding the bar."

But he loved it. "That scared the hell out of me," he remembers saying. "Let's study were too widespread to be written off as a phenomenon restricted to any particular culture. In a follow-up study she is currently conducting, Strickland said she is discovering that men are affected far more profoundly during the course of a pregnancy than is commonly believed.

"It (a mate's pregnancy) deeply affects their friendships, their relationships with their parents, and their relationships with their mates," she said.

Strickland's newer work focuses more on the emotional stress men face during a pregnancy. Mood swings, guilt feelings for go again."

For the record, Geisler is not a screamer. He whoops on roller-coaster rides. He sits in the front seat, leans forward into the descent and whoops.

When he's not whooping, Geisler is busy conducting the formal affairs of ACE. The members hold two conferences and one convention every year — at an amusement park, of course, where they are often given special ride time. Two years ago, the convention was in Blackpool, England. Plans are being made now for a tour of Japan.

Between meetings, they keep in touch with a newsletter and the ACE magazine, RollerCoaster!, which runs vital statistics and critiques of the close to 400 roller coasters now standing in American amusement parks.

ACE also is interested in the preservation of roller coasters. At the last convention, held last spring in California, the group contributed money toward the renovation and re-opening of the Giant Dipper roller coaster near San Diego.

But what ACE members really like to do is ride.

"There are any number of things that can make you laugh or hoot or holler," Geisler says, when pressed to describe how ACE members judge a good roller coaster. "We look for a ride that offers good thrills, the ones that make you feel religious, the ones that make you find religion, the ones that make you say, 'Oh, my God, am I going to survive?'"

"The best rides are the ones that seem barely in control — a good ride will create a sense of danger, of risk and adventure," he continues. "We like brutal coasters, the ones that yank you down hills and whip you around corners."

ACE members are people from all walks of life who hanker after a little intensity, a little adventure, says Geisler, who has tried indoor sky diving, hang gliding and mountain climbing.

He becomes bemused at the suggestion that there are bigger thrills to be had.

putting their mates through the pain of pregnancy and fears about their ability to care for the child are some of the most common concerns of expectant fathers.

Many men said they were embarrassed about talking to other men about the symptoms.

"The first comment I got from the men was usually, 'I'm glad someone finally decided to look at this subject,'" said Strickland. "The next thing they generally said was, 'You know, I'm glad you're a woman. I'd never talk to the boys about this — they'd laugh me out of town.'"

"Normally you can't afford to or you can't arrange to go hang gliding each weekend," he says. "But I wouldn't say that roller coasters are passive. When you go from 0 to 65 mph in three seconds, when you fall 15 stories, it really pumps your adrenaline."

"To us, a roller coaster combines the thrills you can't get — most of us can't get — in real life," he says. "When you're right at the lip of a hill and you're being slowly pulled up and you know that in five seconds, you'll be going 60 mph. I love that moment. That's living life. That's grabbing for it. It's breathing life deeply."

When ACE members get together, they argue with an insider's flair about the relative merits of the different types of roller coasters — for instance, the differences between steel roller coasters and wooden roller coasters.

Wooden coasters, Geisler explains, rely on the steepness of their hills and the sharpness of their turns to provide speed and thrills. Steel roller coasters rely on their loops — the ones that take passengers upside down — for their attractions.

Wood is too flexible for the precision required for the loops and corkscrews often featured on a steel ride. The wood can contract or expand depending on the temperature, and that can alter the comfort of the ride.

But there are other variations from which roller-coaster buffs pick their favorites. Suspended roller coasters, for instance, have cars that hang below the track for a different sensation.

The Japanese have created a roller coaster where passengers stand up. Other coasters provide special effects or rugged terrain to alter the ride.

Racing coasters offer double tracks, which give passengers the sense they're racing with the car beside them. And there are "mega-coasters" which boast longer and higher tracks than average coasters.

Rich in music and Hispanic heritage, 'La Bamba' works

By John H. Richardson
Register Wire Services

REVIEW

'La Bamba' works. By the end of this biographical film about Ritchie Valens, the San Fernando Valley teen-ager who had three hits on the pop charts before his death in a plane crash at 17, you care a lot about him, his family and his music.

You leave the theater glad that the movie was made, glad that Valens had his three hits. 'La Bamba' is a good-time movie charged with the energy of Valens' music, which is performed superbly for the film by the popular Los Angeles band Los Lobos. Carlos Santana and Miles Goodman added incidental music, while Marshall Crenshaw (as Buddy Holly), Brian Setzer (as Eddie Cochran), Bo Diddley (as himself) and others contribute songs of the period.

Despite the rock-star-biography format, 'La Bamba' is basically a family film. After a black-and-white opening shot of two planes colliding, which recurs somewhat mysteriously throughout the picture, the film introduces Valens (Lou Diamond Phillips) and his mother and sisters. They are working as fruit-pickers in a California orchard in the summer of 1957.

Into this fairly idyllic scene roars Valens' half-brother, Bob (Esai Morales), wearing a black leather jacket and driving a motorcycle. We quickly learn that Bob is not long out of prison. He's wild and dashing and carries a thick and probably illegal wad of cash, insisting the family follow him out of the orchards and let him support them.

He also takes his brother's girl, Rosie (Elizabeth Pena). When next we see them, he's drinking and fighting with Rosie in their trailer, surrounded by a yard cluttered with the artifacts of '50s poverty.

While his brother gets in scrapes, Valens wanders around town, carrying his guitar. He's always carrying that guitar. When someone calls him a dreamer, he answers portentously, "My dreams are pure rock 'n' roll."

He falls in love with a blonde named Donna at high school, but his friends warn him she's out of his class. The ethnic and class differences are noticed, but not in a heavy-handed way (later we learn that Valens had to learn "La Bamba" phonetically, since he didn't speak Spanish). In time, he actually sings his hit "Donna" to her from a telephone booth.

And then one day, he sits in with a local band. From the first note out of his mouth, he shines with pure rock 'n' roll grace, sounding quite like the young Little Richard (the voice is done by David Hidalgo of Los Lobos).

Soon a producer discovers him and starts recording his songs, changing his name from Ricardo Valenzuela.

But Valens' success only makes his brother feel more and more useless and jealous. Although Morales sometimes chews the scenery in his more dramatic moments, he is very appealing as the brother and manages to make us care about his many problems. In fact, the film almost becomes his film for a while. Which is appropriate, because this movie gives us another side of rock 'n' roll — not the rebellious-youth-cliche but rocker as family man.

And what a wholesome rock 'n' roller Valens is! The first thing he does with his money is buy his mom a house. When his brother takes him to a Tijuana brothel, he stands by the stage and grooves on the Latin rhythms, picking up the chords to "La Bamba."

The film is marred by numerous cliches. Writer-director Luis Valdez, best known for his many years of work with Teatro Campesino, actually has Donna break it off with Valens by saying, "I don't know what I want anymore."

Valdez also puts in a lot of seemingly pointless mysticism. But this weirdness also helps make the film individual, so it's probably churlish to complain. "La Bamba" has many virtues, from the music to the acting to much of the directing, not to mention the rich portrait of Hispanic life.

Ann Landers

Nude woman is a hazard

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I are truck drivers who travel thousands of miles every month. We thought we had seen everything until one night last week, a few miles outside of St. Louis, we spotted a woman driving completely nude, in a nice-looking car with the lights on.

The naked lady passed us, gave a couple of friendly toots on the horn, waved and went on to pass another truck, sounded the horn, waved and smiled.

About 20 miles up the highway we decided to stop for gas. Guess who had pulled into the service station? Right. The naked lady — still naked and still smiling. My husband asked if I would mind if he went over and had a word with her. I said, "Not at all. I'm dying to know what she's up to."

He duly reported after about three minutes of conversation (trying his darndest to look only into her eyes) that she was not a prostitute and did the night ride sans clothes "for kicks." Apparently it has not occurred to her that there are some decent people out there who don't appreciate her hobby. There should be a law against this. How about it? — Seen It All in Gentry, Ark.

Dear Gent: There is a law. It's the prohibition of indecent exposure. "Lady Godiva" would surely be hauled in if she were spotted by a highway patrolman. That woman is a hazard to public safety. Such a sight could easily startle a driver, causing him or her to plow into another vehicle or straight into a ditch.

Husband takes abuse

Dear Ann Landers: I live in Utah, where physically abusing a woman is looked upon as a very serious charge. I want you to know what I've put up with for three years. (I'm now in the process of being divorced.)

When my wife doesn't get her way, she becomes violent. I'm 6-foot-5. "Mary" is 5-foot-4. She has put me in the hospital twice.

We've been married three years. In all that time I slapped her only once, when she threw her $1,500 engagement ring out the window. (I never did find it.) Since that time, I haven't laid a hand on her. But she has kicked me, torn my clothes, pulled my hair out and scratched my face and arms. The reason I let her beat on me is because in Utah you don't hit a woman.

I had to appear in court when she charged me with aggravated assault. (My wife didn't have a bruise on her body.) It was a humiliating experience. Everyone knew about it — family, friends and my employers.

A lot has been written about wife-beating, but very little about husbands who get beaten up by their wives. Husband-beating is one of the best-kept secrets of our time. Please speak out, Ann. — Salt Lake City

Dear S.L.: Husband-beating is no secret to me, or to anyone who reads this column. I've dealt with it many times. My advice to men who get clobbered by the spouse is the same as for women whose husbands beat them up: Insist that the offender seek counseling or get out pronto.

Children can't be annulled

Dear Ann Landers: My parents have been divorced nine years. The good news is that my mother recently married a wonderful man. The bad news is that my father has been seeing a widowed Catholic. She wants him to have his marriage annulled so she can accept Communion.

If my father's marriage is annulled, what does that make me? The word that comes to mind is "bastard." Right? — Null and Void in Mich.

Dear Null: Wrong. According to a research theologian at the Archdiocese of Chicago, a marriage annulment in no way affects the children. They remain legitimate.

Protect against salmonella

Dear Readers: I wanted to share some tips from the Food Safety and Inspection Service, a branch of the United States Department of Agriculture, on preparing chicken safely. Salmonella bacteria is frequently found in chicken and there are some easy steps to protect yourself from getting it.

Always rinse raw chicken well with cold water prior to cooking, this helps wash some of the bacteria off and the rest will be killed during thorough cooking. Chicken should be cooked so there is no pink color left. If you use a meat thermometer, insert it into the meatiest part and it should register 180-185F. to insure proper doneness.

Any utensils used while preparing raw chicken should be washed in hot, soapy water to remove all bacteria.

If you cut raw poultry on a cutting board, particularly a wooden one, be sure to wash the board with a chlorine bleach and water solution. Also, if you happen to use your counter top the same will apply. If you take these few precautions, they should prevent contamination with this bacteria and isn't it worth it? — Heloise

Wrap small items in onion bag

Dear Heloise: When I have small items that I would like to wash in the dishwasher, I put them in a plastic net onion bag and lay the bag in the top rack.

Then I fold the open end around a piece of the rack and secure it with a clip clothespin. — Velma Schanke, Phoenix, Ariz.

Help for bobbin thread problems

Dear Heloise: Don't you just hate it when you are sewing and the bobbin thread runs out — especially if you don't have another bobbin to match the thread?

Did you know it isn't necessary to unthread your needle when reloading the bobbin, or at least not with my machine? All you have to do is pull enough thread through the needle to start the bobbin, and place the bobbin on the bobbin-winding shaft. Then fill the bobbin as you normally would.

When the bobbin is full, remove it, tighten the wheel and you're ready to start again. Be sure to adjust the thread tension on your machine so the thread does not break, both before and after filling the bobbin. — Anita Smither, Oklahoma City, Okla.

Store hamburgers in sandwich bags

Dear Heloise: Back to ground meat and making hamburger patties!

All you need is several sandwich bags. Put your hand in the sandwich bag and take as much meat as you want and pull the bag over your hand and flatten the meat into a patty. Your hand never touches the meat. Perfect patties every time. — Arlene Lapietra, Salt Lake City, Utah

HOROSCOPE

By Stella Wilder

SUNDAY, AUG. 2

Born today, you have a way with words and will likely seek a career in journalism or literature. You have a colorful, witty style, and you incorporate much original thought into otherwise mundane subject matter. You and your ideas may not be accepted immediately within established circles, however, you must be prepared to wait until the time is right — when others realize you have something to offer that they indeed need. You are determined and hard-working.

You are highly emotional and possess a strong love nature. You will likely fall in love a great many times while you are young — and break a great many hearts along the way! Age and experience should see you settle down into happy, long-term marriage. You yearn to own a home of your own.

Also born on this date are Myrna Loy, actress; Peter O'Toole, actor.

To see what is in store for you tomorrow, find your birthday and read the corresponding paragraph. Let your birthday star be your daily guide.

MONDAY, AUG. 3

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — Complications that arise during morning hours are quickly overcome — provided you play by the rules.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — You may find yourself unable to get started this morning. However, by p.m. you can claim a great victory!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) — Don't wait too long before setting out toward a new goal. You can count on numerous distractions along the way.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) — A busy day — and one in which your influence over people will be widely felt. Make your feelings known.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — You have an opportunity today to restate your authority. Begin to get things done at a faster rate.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Peers support you today as you attempt something difficult — if not previously impossible. Superiors look on.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — Success of current project depends upon enthusiasm of those involved in all aspects — major and minor.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — You come in ahead of schedule today; please superiors and co-workers alike. More opportunity comes your way.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — A good day to rid yourself of all that is superficial and unnecessary in your life. Take more streamlined approach.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — Artistic endeavors pay off mightily today. You receive recognition, chance to work again! Profits grow.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — Personal sacrifice early in the day will likely result in considerable gain by day's end. Paradoxes abound today!

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — Let others tell you what to do today only as long as you continue to progress. Then strike out on your own.

Baryshnikov bows out

Dance superstar Mikhail Baryshnikov, who aggravated an old ankle injury during the first of two shows in Atlanta, was forced to skip part of a performance on his summer tour.

Baryshnikov danced all three numbers Wednesday and was left with fluid and soreness around his ankle. He withdrew Thursday from the demanding pas de deux in "Don Quixote," but danced two other works as planned.

A capacity Fox Theatre crowd of 4,600 — some of whom paid $100 for their seats — murmured in disappointment when the injury was announced, but applauded warmly for Atlanta Ballet dancers Maniya Barredo and Nicolas Pacana, who replaced Baryshnikov and partner Cheryl Yeager.

Baryshnikov came on stage after their performance and congratulated his "new dancers."

Atlanta was the fifth stop on the 27-city tour. Officials said plans remain unchanged for yesterday's performance in Savannah.

"Injuries like this occur all the time with dancers," said producer Bernie Lawrence. "Baryshnikov has never missed a performance, though occasionally he does not do certain things."

Was Hopkins a ghostwriter?

Rhode Island Gov. Edward D. DiPrete and Secretary of State Kathleen S. Connell have signed a proclamation honoring former colonial governor Stephen Hopkins for signing the Constitution. If Hopkins did it, he deserves the recognition.

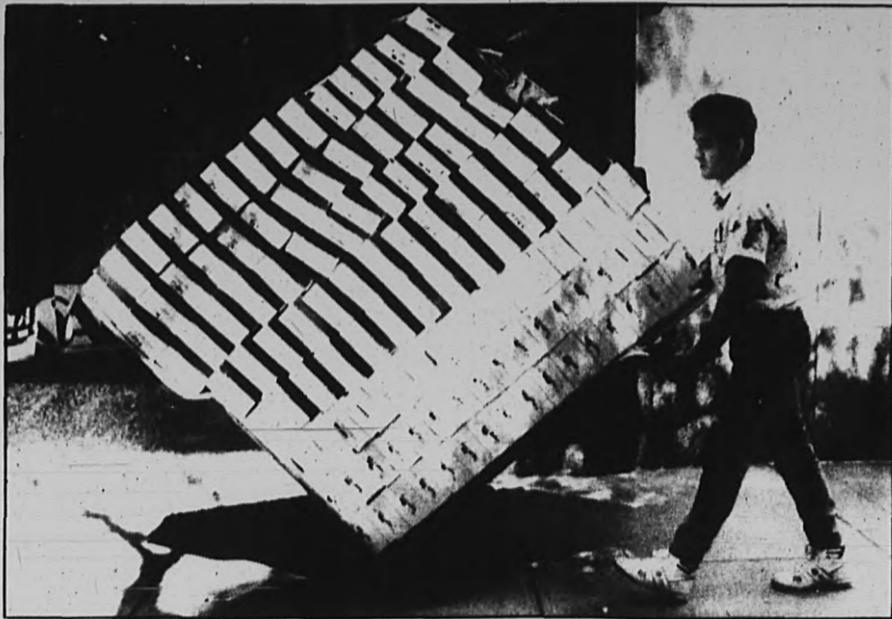

"Unless he rose from the grave and snuck into Philadelphia in the middle of the night, that statement's wrong," said Patrick T. Conley, a professor of history at Providence College.

Hopkins signed the Declaration of Independence, but died in 1785, two years before the Constitution was drafted, Conley said.

Italian film seeks U.S. audience

Trudie Styler, wife of British rock singer Sting, and American actor Gregg Henry star in "Fair Game," an Italian production filmed in English and aimed at the U.S. market.

"It is the first time that an Italian director shoots a movie directly in English especially for the American audience," director Mario Orfini said recently.

Villain in Disneyland

Joe Don Baker likes playing the villain in "The Living Daylights," but he was enthused with just the idea of being in a James Bond movie.

"It's a nice role," Baker said of the ruthless international arms dealer Brad Whitaker. "He's a crazy guy, he's got weird ideas."

"But mostly I wanted to be in a Bond movie. It's like Disneyland, and when someone says, 'Do you want to go to Disneyland?' you say yes. It's like going to a family reunion; they have it every two years, and it's first class."

Baker, who played Sheriff Buford T. Pusser in "Walking Tall," said he doesn't get many prime roles in Hollywood and his career was "saved" by going to England.

American filmmakers "don't make movies about human beings anymore," he said during a recent publicity tour. "Producers don't understand human beings. Producers now want to get rich fast, they only want to make one movie and get rich off it."

Concert to benefit Amerasian children

As part of its newly launched "Forget-Me-Not" campaign, the Pearl S. Buck Foundation is organizing a benefit concert for Amerasian children, titled, "Lost & Found" Aug. 8 at San Francisco's Davies Symphony Hall.

"Lost & Found" is the first rock-oriented show in the seven-year history of Davies Hall, permanent home of the San Francisco Symphony. Artists scheduled to appear include Master of Ceremonies Greg Kihn, who will also perform an acoustic set; Jesse Colin Young; Richard Page of Mr. Mister, debuting songs from the group's soon-to-be-released album including "Dust," a song about the Amerasian children; Pete Sears, formerly of Jefferson Starship, dueting with singer Mimi Farina, sister of Joan Baez and organizer of the innovative "Bread & Roses" concert program for prisons; George Johnson of the Brothers Johnson; Eddie and the Tide, a rising California band; and the Channel, a group specially assembled for the benefit featuring touring members of the Talking Heads, the Pretenders and Santana. The title of the benefit is taken from the anthemic song of the same name recorded by the Channel, which will be debuted on San Francisco radio this week.

A post-concert "Party With the Stars" will be held at Zephyr Studios featuring the 16-piece Up-tones.

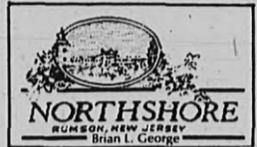

"Lost & Found" is the first of a proposed four-concert series that will go to Los Angeles and Philadelphia before returning for a grand finale back in San Francisco, home of the foundation's newest domestic office, over the next year. Proceeds will benefit the foundation's work with fatherless half-American children abandoned in Southeast Asia by American men.

The benefit is being hosted by foundation Executive Director Grace C.K. Sum.

VOLUNTEERS IN ACTION

The Volunteer Center of Monmouth County places volunteers in more than 150 non-profit human service, health, cultural, educational, civic, and environmental organizations, always matching the volunteer's interest to the opening. Each week, The Register publishes a few of the 300 volunteer positions available. The telephone number for more information is 741-3330 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays.

Get your feet wet

Enjoy the sun, surf and sand while volunteering for this beachside recreation program. Participate in swim instruction for handicapped children, Tuesday and Wednesday mornings. Volunteers should be comfortable in the water.

It's in the mail

A Red Bank cultural organization is planning a major mail campaign. Volunteers are needed to stuff envelopes, label and sort zip codes.

Typists needed

A local charity needs typists to assist with general clerical duties and computer input, weekdays, Aug. 17 to 28. Computer training will be provided, if needed.

Collect for needy animals

Collect and replace canisters at local businesses for an animal welfare organization. Volunteers must have their own transportation.

Learn to supervise

An organization that supplies needy families with clothes and furniture needs volunteer supervisors. Direct workers and correspond with families and social service agencies. Four-hour positions are available Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays.

Help the epileptic

Volunteers are needed to educate the public about epilepsy and make presentations to public and professional organizations, and health fairs.

On a musical note

A Freehold nursing home needs a music therapy aide. Volunteers will supervise patients' musical activities. Bring your own instrument or use the piano.

Summer assistant

An organization for handicapped children needs a volunteer to work with children aged 3 to 7, Wednesdays and Thursdays until Aug. 13. If you are looking for a challenge, this is an excellent opportunity.

Visit a home of Bonaparte

By LINDA STEWART
Register Travel Writer

In the early evening of May 3, 1814, when the "H.M.S. Undaunted" sailed into Portoferraio, Elba's capital on that island's north coast, Napoleon Bonaparte, deposed Emperor of France, was on deck. Moody and silent, he surveyed his new kingdom, hastily composed of Elba and two neighboring islands, Palmaiola and Pianosa. His new (also hastily composed) title: King of Elba.

Today anyone who visits this Italian island, in the Tuscan Archipelago, just six miles off Italy's west coast, must wonder why, once banished to this idyllic spot, did he ever want to leave. For it would be difficult to imagine any place more thoroughly pleasing in scenery or citizenry than these 86 square miles of piney peaks and secluded beaches.

The horseshoe harbor has changed very little since that far-off balmy evening when the crowds, decked out in their sabbath finery, thronged to the docks to welcome their new sovereign. The left side of the harbor is still claimed by small craft sailors. Their single and twin-masted boats bob beside the fishing dories, their lines looped together around the massive iron cleats that edge the harbor road. The opposite side of the harbor belongs to the heavy traffic, the freighters and ferries that sustain Elba's life-line to the mainland.

The inland side of the harbor road is lined with shops, restaurants, bars and cafes. As in any resort, there's a schizoid duality to the merchandising. Windows filled with chic designer clothes and exotically-styled jewelry are flanked by greengrocers and nuts-and-bolts hardware stores. A 30-minute stroll along the waterfront can yield a $5000 Piaget watch, a $10,000 Zeiss telescope, an ice cream cone or a bushel of fragrant local melons.

But the heart of Portoferraio lies through the great stone archway that joins the harbor to the Piazza della Repubblica. Here, under century-old plane trees, farmers sell their artichokes, eggplant, onions and lemons. Here for the digging are tables heaped with shoes, wrap-around sunglasses, sequined T-shirts, pots and pans or religious statuettes. From their fold-up chairs in the shade the town elders keep tabs on the shoppers as they prowl and poke their way along the market aisles.

Just off the square is the Misericordia Church which counts among its treasures a bronze cast of Napoleon's death mask and a reproduction of his coffin. Every May 5th, anniversary of Napoleon's death, a mass is said for the eternal peace of his restless soul.

The Via Napoleone, a street of steps, leads from the square, up the hill to the Villa dei Molini, a modest, beautifully situated two-story residence where the emperor, his mother Letitia and his sister Pauline dwelt, if not in splendor, at least in considerable comfort. The rooms have been lovingly preserved and restored as closely as possible to their appearance when Napoleon lived there. In the Officer's Hall, a room of pale green walls and gilded paneling, hangs David's famous and absurdly romantic equestrian portrait of Napoleon. Astride a plunging grey steed, a scarlet cloak swirling around his shoulders, he gazes straight into the eyes of the beholder. With uplifted hand he urges them forward to some unseen but surely glorious goal.

From the gardens of the villa all spread out below. Sails glide back and forth inscribing the glassy water with ever-widening wakes. It's a scene of unspoiled beauty and serenity, doubtless ruined for the villa's V.I.P. resident by the British boats that anchored there, charged with preventing his escape.

Soon Pauline became dissatisfied with their pleasant house. She arranged to acquire a second family residence, the Villa de San Marino. Today visitors taxi out to the villa. They're deposited at the foot of its tree-lined driveway to gaze through majestic iron gates, surmounted with symbolic iron eagles, at a classical Greek facade. It looks like a public library or maybe a courthouse. But nothing that they see was there when the Bonapartes lived there. Thirty years after Napoleon's death an obscure Romanoff, married to Mathilda Bonaparte, a niece of the emperor, visited Elba in search of memorabilia of his famous uncle-in-law. He found the Villa de San Martino offensive in its simplicity. So he raised the funds to construct the grandiose and pretentious facade that today conceals the unadorned lines of the house behind.

The walls of one room are decorated with frescoes of Napoleon's Egyptian campaigns. The desert, the pyramids, the Nile and the camel caravans and must have been poignant reminders of more prosperous times. Hanging just inside the entrance to the house is a small oil painting showing the structure as it existed before its unfortunate transformation. It's a pleasing pastoral scene of a farmhouse nestled in meadows with woodlands behind.

Napoleon lived on Elba only 11 months. On February 26, 1815 he outfoxed his British captors and sailed away to land on the south French coast. (The spot of that landing is commemorated with an inscribed stone marker.) At the time of that landing, he was only 106 days away from the disaster that was the Battle of Waterloo. Just six years later he died in exile on the remote island of St. Helena in the south Atlantic.

Had Napoleon remained on Elba, welcome resident and king, who's to say he wouldn't have enjoyed any more years of healthful, happy life?

Conservation organization plans expedition to Kenya

An 18-day expedition to Kenya offering a combined wildlife safari and coastal sail is scheduled for Sept. 19 through Oct. 6 under the sponsorship of Oceanic Society Expeditions, a national non-profit conservation organization.

Safari highlights include Aberdare Forest and Treetops, a hotel overlooking a waterhole frequented by elephant, buffalo and rhino; Samburu Game Reserve situated on the banks of the Uaso Nyiro River; Lake Baringo, an acclaimed ornithological paradise with over 400 species of birds; Masai Mara, one of the finest game reserves in all of Africa with migrating wildebeeste and zebra; and Amboseli National Park in the shadow of majestic Mt. Kilimanjaro.

Along the Kenya coast aboard a traditional Arab show, expedition participants will have the opportunity to sail the tropical coastline of the Indian Ocean, exploring the marine parks and searching for whales and dolphins.

The expedition leader is Jacki Kilbride, an expert naturalist with a decade of experience as a professional international guide and leader of previous Oceanic Society trips in Micronesia and Kenya.

Participants will travel by private coaches and landrovers. Accommodations vary from luxurious lodges to simple bungalows.

The $2990 fee includes airfare from New York. For information and reservations, contact: Ocean Society Expeditions, Fort Mason Center, Building E, San Francisco, Calif. 94023, or call (415) 441-1106.

American Littoral Society opens new regional office

SANDY HOOK — A new regional office covering New England has been opened by the American Littoral Society at Woods Hole, Mass.

The office, which will serve as the society's New England chapter, is made up of society members from the six New England states plus members of the existing Coastline Project, a group established to educate the public about coastal issues through books, radio and film. Total membership will be about 1,000.

The chapter will be headed by William Sargent, an author and film producer who heads the Coastline Project. He is the author of "Shallow Waters: A Year on Cape Cod's Pleasant Bay" and the just published "The Year of the Crab," a natural history of the horseshoe crab. He is a member of the Associated Scientists at Woods Hole, and he and the society will retain that association.

The American Littoral Society, which also maintains chapters here, New York, Long Island, Miami, Sarasota, and the Delaware Valley, was founded in 1961 and promotes coastal conservation and education for its 6,500 members.

For information on the New England Chapter contact William Sargent at P.O. Box 331, Woods Hole, MA. 02543. 617-548-2673.

Two trips are offered for month of December

SHREWSBURY — Colpitts Travel center has announced its December schedule of escorted trips.

The first will depart Dec. 2 for Hong Kong, Singapore, Seoul and Bangkok. The inclusive rate of $1795 will feature scheduled air transportation, deluxe hotels, transfers and American breakfasts daily. An evening of Thai dancing with dinner will be a highlight, in addition to sightseeing at each destination.

Two New Year holiday trips are planned.

The first is a seven-day London theater tour, departing Dec. 27, priced at $949 and includes hotel, scheduled airfare and many special features, including theater tickets and a Medieval banquet. A full-day excursion to Stratford-

On-Avon will be included.

The other holiday tour is a seven-day cruise through the Panama Canal, departing Dec. 27 and celebrating New Year's Eve on board the cruise ship "Regent Star."

Ports of call will include Cartagena, Puerto Moin and Costa Rico as well as Montego Bay, Aruba and the Panama Canal Transit.

All Colpitts escorted groups will be accompanied by a Colpitts agent who will also arrange transportation to the airport for the group.

For further details, contact Norma Kohn at Colpitts Travel Center, 476 Broad St., Shrewsbury, 07701, or telephone 842-4900.

Not having to say no has its own rewards

By SUSAN STEWART
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

"NEW YORK, April 3 — Dwight Gooden, flanked by bodyguards and schoolchildren screaming his name, rushed Thursday into the clinic where he will undergo evaluation for drug abuse. Two bodyguards, one on each side, shielded him from about 80 reporters, photographers and TV cameramen."

By April 30, Gooden, the talented New York Mets pitcher, had been released from the clinic where he had gone when a urine test found traces of cocaine. After a few warm-up weeks in the minors, Gooden returned to Shea Stadium. Three "thunderous" standing ovations greeted the 22-year-old star who admitted, with his usual modesty, "I didn't expect any boos."

Of course not. Not in America in '87, where the only thing hipper than just saying no is saying, "I know I made a mistake and I regret it, but I must turn the page once again because life goes on and I want to put this behind me."

Gooden said this at his post-coke press conference. The world smiled. A fallen star had risen. Sports Illustrated fodder before cocaine, he was now People magazine fodder, on the way to the big leagues: Barbara Walters fodder.

Post-coke, Gooden was as eloquent as Stacy Keach ("I can only thank God that I now have an opportunity to speak out to others in the hope that they will not have to travel down the same road as I did"), as sincere as harness racer Mario Baillargeon ("You have to hit your bottom before you go for help"), as moving as Don Johnson, Heather Thomas, Liza Minnelli and every other celebrity who has just said no after years of saying yes.

I could be every bit as sincere and moving as those people, but I will never get the chance, because I have never kicked cocaine. I have never, in fact, used cocaine.

In pious times, not using cocaine is regarded as its own reward. Not using cocaine is the only reward I ever got for not using cocaine. I never got a cent for just saying no, or a dot of media exposure.

We think we punish sin and reward virtue. We don't. We reward sinners by staring at them, repenters by giving them standing ovations. We ignore people whose sins are small and drab, because our attention span is too short to encompass the tedium of virtue.

In a perfect world, my remarkable drug-free history would merit as much media coverage as any coke head's whiny of self-justification. ("I'm rich! I'm famous! I couldn't handle stress, so I turned to drugs!") In a perfect world, journalists would not have covered only Dwight Gooden on April 30. They would have covered me, too.

"Detroit — A characteristically sober Susan Stewart, flanked by fellow shoppers, some of them screaming 'asparagus,' rushed Thursday toward the produce section of a grocery store where that vegetable was on sale at an advertised low price of 99 cents per pound.

"Some 74 percent of these upwardly mobile shoppers, median age 36, were former drug abusers to whom the years 1971-74 meant nothing. One extreme case remembered nothing between 1969 (Woodstock) and 1976 (tall ships). All had uttered some variation of this statement: 'I smoked dope until I decided it was destroying brain cells.'

"The former drug users foraged through stacks of bundled vegetables, as intent on nourishing their bodies as they had been on destroying their minds 15 years earlier. The Beatles film 'Yellow Submarine' was now available at video stores. The former drug users would watch it straight for the first time, shrug their shoulders, and wonder what all the fuss had been about.

"Stewart, now in her 11,615th drug-free day, knew what 'natural' meant. She had seen 'Yellow Submarine' the same way she had seen 'The Rocky Horror Picture Show' and 37 rock concerts: stone-cold sober, her perceptions unenhanced by chemistry. First deprived of drugs' highs, she was now deprived of the delicious bath of remorse, love and self-congratulations that comes with delayed maturity.

"Having never said yes, Stewart could not say no. But she could say something. She could say, 'I told you so!' This felt even better than just saying no."

■ LOS ANGELES — Actor Sean Penn was to begin serving a 60-day jail sentence somewhere in California yesterday, but authorities were keeping the location a closely guarded secret.

There was no sign of Penn at the Malibu home he shares with his wife, pop star Madonna.

Penn's lawyer, Howard Weitzman, won permission for Penn to serve his sentence in two installments. He was convicted of punching a movie extra.

He is spending six days in jail, then will leave to finish film projects in New York and West Germany. He must return Aug. 22 to serve the remaining 26 days behind bars.

With time off for good behavior he will serve only 32 days of the 60-day sentence, Municipal Court Commissioner Juleann Cathey said.

Earlier this month, Penn was named in an arrest warrant issued after the city attorney's office learned he was not in Germany on a film project, as he represented when seeking a delay of his jail sentence.

The warrant, with a three-day stay attached, was issued when reports and media accounts indicated Penn was actually partying in Hollywood and New York, where he was photographed on Fifth Avenue with his wife, Madonna, during a break in her concert schedule.

The warrant was rescinded before the stay expired when the city attorney confirmed Penn had arrived in Germany and was working.

■ CHICAGO — Chicago businessman Noah Robinson has repeatedly used bankruptcy court as a refuge from court judgments, taxes and other business woes over the last decade, apparently violating federal bankruptcy laws along the way, a Chicago Tribune examination of court documents has found.

Robinson, a self-described millionaire who launched his business empire from the civil rights organization headed by his half-brother, Rev. Jesse Jackson, filed reports in federal bankruptcy court that did not fully disclose corporate assets, according to U.S. Bankruptcy Court records. He also has been accused in bankruptcy court of converting corporate holdings to his personal use.

Seven companies in which Robinson, whose financial empire includes dozens of corporations, had a financial interest have wound up in bankruptcy court.

The U.S. attorney's office has launched a wide-ranging investigation into Robinson's financial dealings.

■ OLLIE, Iowa — The Ollie Big Days Parade was held yesterday without the invited guest of honor, Marine Lt. Col. Oliver "Ollie" North.

The town invited North to be grand marshal in the parade after his fame skyrocketed when he testified in the televised Iran-Contra hearings.

City leaders decided to try to capitalize on the similarity of North's nickname and the name of this town of about 230 when the post office began to get requests for Ollie postmarks.

North was replaced as parade marshal by Ollie Rosella Paxton, a former Ollie resident, and Don Ollie of Milwaukee, Wis.

"I'm having a ball," said Ollie, who was wearing an "It's Ollie, by golly" T-shirt. Ollie, formerly of Des Moines, said he considered North a hero.

"I think what America needs is a little more patriotism," Ollie said. "Call it flag-waving, if you will. Maybe we need a little more of that."

Bulldozer destroys Indian village

Archeologists say site near Plymouth Rock turned up artifacts believed 6,000 years old

PLYMOUTH, Mass. (AP) — A bulldozer operator unknowingly destroyed an unmarked 800-year-old Indian village that archeologists had hoped would provide a rare glimpse into pre-European American culture.

Known as the Nook Farm in recent years, the 5.5-acre site was one of the last known villages that existed just prior to the arrival of the Pilgrims in 1620, Massachusetts state historical officials said Friday.

"It was one of the latest pre-contact areas to be discovered," said Valerie Talmadge, director of the state Historical Commission. "You could have seen Indian culture uncontaminated. It would have given us an incredible glimpse of Indian life before European culture."

The site is located half a mile from Plymouth Rock in a hollow surrounded by rolling farmland. A housing developer had kept the five-acre site separate from the rest of the planned development and hired archeologists to conduct a dig on it.

But, two months ago, a subcontractor hired by Hingham developer Robert Thompson to work on a planned housing development adjacent to the site accidentally graded the area.

Talmadge said the site had purposely been left unmarked because archeologists feared looting.

Archeologist Alan Leveillee of the Public Archaeology Laboratory in Providence, R.I., said it was not readily apparent that the area was an ancient site.

"We're all devastated. We worked for a year to save the site at enormous expense to us," said Leveillee.

State historical officials said they decided not to go public with the news until reporters asked about the site in order to spare the developer embarrassment.

"The developer was making a real effort to cooperate with us and we feel there was nothing malicious in this," said Talmadge.

Leveillee said the site was first discovered around the turn of the century and was considered a region rich in ancient artifacts by amateur archaeologists and diggers. But it was not until Leveillee and his associates first examined the site last year that it was determined to be an Indian village.

Leveillee said his group unearthed 12,000 artifacts including claypots, soapstone objects, bone tools, and various human and animal bones. Some objects recovered by Leveillee are believed to date back 6,000 years, he said.

Archeologists do not know which tribe of Indians lived at the site but believe they may have been the Wampanoag people, who were known to inhabit the area.

Talmadge said the accident has caused state historical officials to re-think their methods of site preservation.

"We've got a major problem with archaeological sites," she said. "We haven't had anything as serious as this but other sites we've tried to protect have had similar problems."

She said the state might try to speed its excavation projects.

Developer Robert Thompson said the subcontractor who mistakenly razed the site did not realize the area's significance and thought only that it was an "un-buildable site."

Thompson said they were both "extremely upset" about the accident.

Penthouse wins casino loan suit and $130 million

NEW YORK (AP) — A Virginia savings and loan association has posted a $50 million bond after a federal judge ordered it to pay Penthouse International Ltd. nearly $130 million for sabotaging a loan deal on an Atlantic City casino-hotel project.

But, Dominion Federal Savings and Loan Association and its lawyers are appealing the judge's ruling Friday that they pay Penthouse, parent firm of Penthouse magazine, $129.9 million in damages.

U.S. District Judge Kevin Duffy also ordered Dominion to pay $7.65 million in damages to Queen City Savings and Loan Association, the lead lender in the $97 million loan package.

In unusually harsh language, Duffy's 35-page opinion accused Dominion Chairman William Walde of launching a cover-up after a third lender pulled out of the deal, jeopardizing Dominion's credibility in the marketplace.

Duffy also said Dominion hired lawyer Phillip Gorelick as a "hatchet man intent on destroying the deal" and accused Gorelick of "outrageous perjury."

Gorelick said he had no comment when reached at his Washington law firm.

Walde was not available for comment but a spokeswoman, Jan Roy, said the McLean, Va.-based lending institution would post a $50 million bond pending appeal. She said Penthouse had agreed not to enforce the order during the appeal process.

David J. Myerson, Penthouse's chief operating officer, said the Dominion statement was accurate but declined further comment.

Dominion's statement said it was "experiencing withdrawals slightly above normal" Friday "but otherwise business is as usual."

Penthouse sued Dominion and its Washington law firm, Melrod, Redman & Gartlan in 1984, claiming breach of contract for causing numerous delays that led to the collapse of the construction project.

Dominion claimed Penthouse was to blame for the project's failure because it did not provide adequate documentation or collateral for the proposed loan.

Duffy, however, ruled that Dominion "had no intention of doing anything with the loan except cheating (Penthouse) out of the commitment fee."

He said Penthouse was entitled to more than $16 million for various expenses incurred in the project as well as $112 million in projected profits that it would have earned over 10 years if the casino and hotel were running.

Duffy also dismissed Dominion's third-party breach of contract suit against Queen City of Plainfield, N.J., and ordered Dominion to pay Queen City $7.65 million.

Penthouse President Robert Guccione spent more than $60 million on the casino project, but sought extra financing in 1983.

Dominion promised to provide $35 million in funding although it was barred by law from making a single loan of more than $18.5 million.

Community Savings and Loan of Bethesda, Md., agreed to make up the difference but later withdrew from the deal — a fact Dominion "kept secret" from Penthouse and Queen City, said Duffy.

Tornado aftermath

Emergency crews sift through the rubble of an Edmonton, Alberta, Canada, trailer park after a tornado tore through the city Friday. Of 31 casualties caused by the twister, 24 occurred in the trailer park.

Firemen battle ridge blaze

WOODFORDS, Calif. (AP) — Firefighters finished encircling a blaze yesterday that scorched 6,600 acres and destroyed 24 homes, inflicting an estimated $3.5 million damage, and said they expected to have it under control by today.

National Forest Service fire boss John Russell said firefighters worked through the day yesterday widening the fire line in rugged ridges above the town before declaring the blaze completely contained.

"We're down to the drudgery now of the final mopping up," he said. "It's not the glamorous part, but it has got to be done right or you're going to be back."

The force fighting the blaze, which broke out Wednesday in a steep canyon near this High Sierra community south of Lake Tahoe, had been reduced from a high of 1,500 to 1,250.

Alpine County Sheriff Larry Kuhl said federal and state fire damage assessment teams went over the area yesterday and came up with a value of $3.5 million just for the destroyed and damaged homes. He said the remaining damage, while slight in many cases, could easily add another $1 million to the damage total.

In addition to the 24 homes that were destroyed, six homes were nearly destroyed and an estimated 100 homes, garages, barns and other buildings suffered at least minor damage, said Kuhl. About 100 families live in the area. "And there are things that can't be counted," said Kuhl. "People come here for the aesthetic values, for fishing and all that. The Woodfords motel didn't get burned. But who's going to stay there with the scenery the way it is now?"

Plane crash kills competition horses

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Investigators on Friday examined the charred wreckage of a 35-year-old cargo plane loaded with competition horses. It had crashed into rush-hour traffic and exploded, killing at least 40 people.

The death toll rose late Friday as forensics experts and relatives identified body parts of more victims, according to Elsa Valencia, a spokeswoman in the Federal Attorney General's Office.

She said 30 bodies had been identified and turned over to relatives, and that 10 others remained to be identified.

Twenty-five people were hospitalized after Thursday's crash. Nearly all the victims were on the ground.

Those hospitalized included the four-member American crew of the Boeing 377 and five of the eight Mexican passengers who were aboard, officials at the American-British-Cowdray Hospital said.

Two of the passengers were listed among the dead, including one who died Friday. The condition of the other passenger was not immediately known.

At least 26 cars were destroyed or damaged at the site, 13 miles from Mexico City's international airport.

Sixteen of the 18 finely-bred jumping horses from the Mexican Equestrian Federation died immediately. One horse was so badly burned a police officer at the site

It seems a short circuit in the plane caused the fire. The pilot then tried to make an emergency landing that produced the crash.

Carlos Padilla
Director, Mexico City Airport

had to destroy it. Another horse, badly injured, was later found munching grass in an embankment and was also destroyed.

A charred, crate-size horse stall bearing the words "Animal Air Service" lay upturned in a muddy field farther up the road from the crash site.

The horses were bound for equestrian events in Culpeper, Va., and Hamilton, Mass., and the passengers included their handlers.

The plane was flying to Miami when it crashed in rain Thursday afternoon on a highway southwest of Mexico City less than 10 minutes after takeoff from the airport.

Airport officials said the plane was operated by Belize Air International, a charter cargo service.

Airport Director Carlos Padilla said the cause of the crash would not be known until the investigation is complete. But he said authorities have pieced together a version of what happened from Guadalupe Pina, one of the surviving passengers.

Padilla said the plane had problems from the time it took off and lost contact with the control tower. Witnesses said the plane's tail was on fire as it went down, while other accounts place the fire in the forward part of the craft.

"It seems a short circuit in the plane caused the fire," Padilla told reporters at the crash site Friday. "The pilot then tried to make an emergency landing that produced the crash."

The government news agency Notimex reported late Friday the pilot of a Mexicana Airlines jet told air traffic controllers the Boeing 377 appeared to have problems raising its landing gear after takeoff.

A transcript of control tower conversations released by the Federal Communications and Transportation Department quoted the Boeing pilot as telling the tower, "We have a problem. I'll call you in a minute."

According to the transcript, the Mexicana pilot told the tower, "Listen, tell the Stratocruiser (the Boeing) to bring up the landing gear, because the plane isn't rising. Ask him his altitude... He's really low."

crashed is mountainous with little level ground.

The plane struck a restaurant and a two-story building with 20 apartments, destroying one end of the building, and knocked down a pole supporting high tension wires.

The plane, cars parked in front of the building and part of the restaurant caught fire. Victims were pulled from cars and from the apartment building.

"I thought the plane was going to fall on our houses, but then we saw how it stopped and fell on the house," said Alfredo Guadalupe Lopez, who lives in Cuajimalpa, a suburb of Mexico City where the crash occurred. He referred to the apartment building.

Ruben Rodriguez Henriquez, 20, one of the team's top horsemen, died shortly after noon Friday from his injuries, said Rogelio Villanueva, director of medical services at the American-British-Cowdray Hospital.

Rodriguez was in the plane with his father, Ruben Rodriguez Sr. "just to be with the horses, in case the horses needed them, and to take care of the paperwork and the quarantine in Miami, Fla.," said a friend of the family, who spoke on condition he not be named. The elder Rodriguez was hospitalized.

"Both father and son told me that people in the plane knew they were in trouble and were going to crash," said another family friend, Ricardo Ramirez.

He said the elder Rodriguez had even rushed into the cockpit.

Tony Phillips, manager of Belize Air International in Miami, identified the crew members a pilot Frederick Morr, 49, of Hialeah, Fla., co-pilot Robert Banta, 61, of North Bay Village, Fla., and flight engineer Forrest Wooten, 55, of Dade County, Fla.

Officials in Mexico City identified the fourth crew member as cargo master Bryan Stewart, 23, no hometown available.

Doctors said Morr, Banta and Stewart were in good condition. Wooten's condition was not immediately available.

"They're still very upset by the impact and we fear shock, so we're keeping them very quiet," said a doctor, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Twelve of the dead have been identified, authorities. All were Mexican.

Officials at the scene said damage from the crash extended over about 1,900 square yards.

A Boeing official described the plane as virtually obsolete.

"I didn't think any of those things were still in the air," said John Wheeler, public relations manager for Boeing Commercial Airplane Co. in Seattle, Wash. He said the Pratt and Whitney engines on the 377 had been out of production for about 25 years.

Phillips said the plane was built in 1952 but had only 9,000 hours of flight time. He said the plane was leased from a Miami company called Agro Air.

HOUSE OF THE WEEK

CLASSIC STYLING—A wraparound porch completes the design of this home, offering a generous outdoor entertaining area.

Basics of yesteryear still popular

By PAT LUKAS
ASSOCIATED PRESS

More than a suggestion of the American home that made its mark in earlier years is a vital part of Design C-44.

Architect Roger Taylor Panek uses spacemaker bays on both floors to gain room areas. This accommodates a spacious family room on the first floor and a handsomely appointed master bedroom above.

Good traffic lines from the garage and backyard through the mud hall make access easy and grime-free to the kitchen. The central foyer has another protective set of traffic patterns: formally to the living room and then to the dining room, casually to the family room and, for privacy for the family, the staircase up to the bedrooms.

The exterior look of clapboard siding is impressive but the wrap-around porch adds a most attractive outdoor family area for good weather use that makes the home seem especially hospitable. The basic plans considers comfort and cost: front-to-back living and family/kitchen spaces result in expansive areas without stretching the house laterally so that it would need a larger lot.

From the foyer, the living is at the right, brightened by windows at the front and back. A side door opens to the sheltered side porch on one side of the handsome fireplace. A door to the formal dining room makes both spaces particularly easy to combine for major entertaining. The dining room adds a windowed bay at the back, so that it makes a most pleasant family eating room at all times.

The full depth of the gabled wing is given over to the kitchen at the back and, with a snack/service bar between, a well-scaled family room ending in a windowed bay at the front. The U-shaped plan makes a great working kitchen, well supplied with counters and store cupboards, windowed at the back over the sink. The setup to serve the dining room is neatly handled, out of sight of guests. For true informality, all facilities are put to use for the family room, forming combined area of 27 feet—very expansive indeed.

All utilities are provided in the practical mud hall. There's a service lavatory, useful closets and a laundry section, all very good adjuncts to homemaking but particularly if they are outside the kitchen dimensions.

Four bedrooms are upstairs. A hall bath is well-situated for use by the three family bedrooms, each of which enjoy two exposure comfort. Good, big closets are featured in each room and a handy linen closet is right near the family bathroom. A small but comfort keyed extra is the second closet for linen or seasonal storage. The master bedroom is an owner's pride. The room's proportions are excellent and the windowed front bay gives it a nostalgic charm. A full bathroom is a private asset and the double closet wall is out of the way to ensure good furniture arrangement.

Design C-44 has a living room, dining room, family room, kitchen, four bedrooms, two baths and a foyer, totaling 1,975 square feet of habitable area. There is a garage, mud room/laundry plus a lavatory. A door near the fireplace in the living room leads to a side porch. The overall dimensions of 71'4" by 32' include the porch and garage.

What is a buffer zone?

Q: What does the economic life have to do with property?

A: Economic life is the established period over which an improved property may be profitably utilized so that it will yield a return over and above the economic rent attributable to the land itself. The period during which an improvement has value in excess of salvage value. In the case of an older structure improvement, economic life refers to the period during which the remaining improvements to the real property (not land) are depreciated for tax purposes.

Q: Can you give me a definition of what economic obsolescence is?

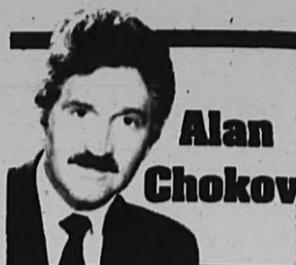

A: Economic obsolescence is a loss of value resulting from extraneous factors that exist outside of the property itself, a type of depreciation caused by environmental, social or economic forces over which an owner has little or no control and which he or she cannot cure. Economic obsolescence is likely to occur to a personal residence if there is a change in zoning which allows an industrial plant to be built next to the residence, to a motel if the county builds a new highway that results in difficult access to the motel, or to a well-maintained house in a deteriorating neighborhood.

Q: What is the one difference between a regular lease and a proprietary lease?

A: A proprietary lease is a written lease in a cooperative apartment building between the owner/corporation and the tenant/stockholder, in which the tenant is given the right to occupy a particular unit. It differs from the typical landlord-tenant lease in that the tenant is also an owner in the building.

Q: What is a recourse note when it applies to a foreclosure sale?

A: A recourse note is a debt instrument with which the lender can take action against the borrower or endorser, personally in addition to foreclosure.

Q: Define land leasing or land leaseback?

A: Land leaseback is a creative financing device (often used with raw land which a developer wants to improve) by which a developer sells the land to an investor who leases the land back to the developer under a long-term not lease and subordinates his or her fee ownership to the lender who provides development financing. The net effect of the land leaseback transaction is to obtain maximum leverage, including 100 percent land financing, probably 100 percent development financing, since the land is subordinated development financing, probably 100 percent development financing as well.

Q: What is a buffer zone?

A: A buffer zone is a strip of land separating one land use from another. Sometimes a developer of a larger residential subdivision will leave certain land undeveloped as a buffer against adjoining land which might be incompatibly zoned, such as for an industrial park.

Alan Chokov is a realtor, appraiser, developer and consultant. His office is located at 794 Highway 35, Shrewsbury, N.J., 07701.

Lowe joins Weichert Realtors

RUMSON — Weichert, Realtors Rumson branch manager, Rich Nagel, has announced that Marge Lowe, a nine-year veteran of real estate sales, has joined Weichert as a full-time sales associate.

"I joined Weichert because I feel the Weichert organization provides the most professional service, and they continually educate their associates," Lowe said. "Weichert is well-organized and strives to be the best."

A licensed sales associate since 1978, Lowe is a member of the New Jersey Association of Realtors, Monmouth County Board of Realtors and the National Association of Realtors. Over the past four years she specialized in condominium sales. Affiliated with the Woman's Club of Red Bank, The Atlantic Highlands Yacht Club, and S.E.A.R.C.H., an organization helping children, she resides in Atlantic Highlands with her husband Budd and daughter Nina.

Weichert, Realtors was founded in New Jersey in 1969.

DOCKAMINIUMS SPACE — Slips are filling up fast at Calton's Seaview Marina in Neptune on the New Jersey shoreline.

Dockaminiums selling fast

NEPTUNE — Earlier this summer, when Calton Homes, Inc. began offering to the general boating public an opportunity to purchase a dockaminium (a condominium boat slip) in the marina adjacent to its Seaview at Shark River Island townhome community, the company projected that it would take five seasons to sell all 117 slips. Now, only a few weeks after the start of the public sales, it appears as though Calton's earlier projection was far too pessimistic. Calton now believes nearly all of the slips could be gone by this time next season.

"I would agree with that assessment, based upon our first weeks of sales," says Art Netzer, a sales consultant to Marina/Consult Corp., which is marketing the slips for Calton. "Dockaminiums are still a relatively new concept on the New Jersey shore but it does appear that they are catching on far faster than anyone could have predicted two or three years ago," Netzer says.

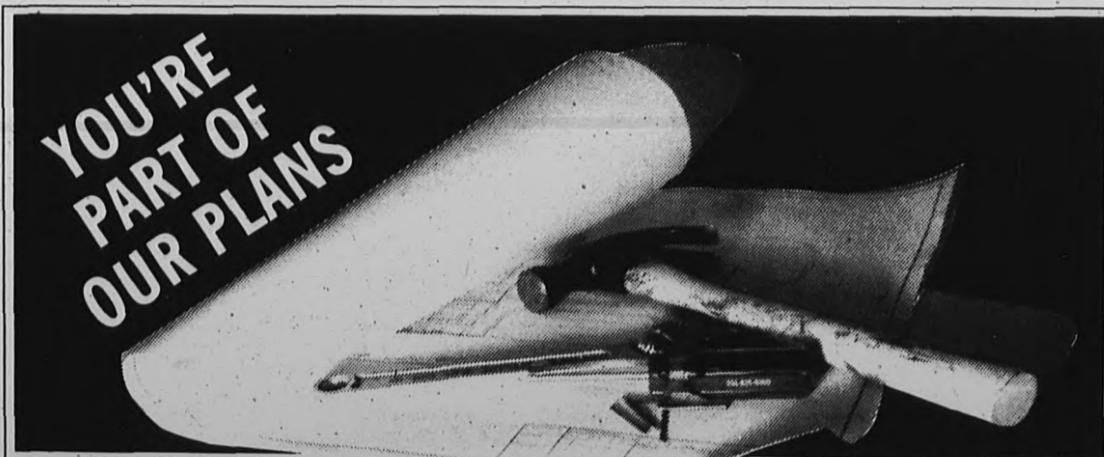

Calton's reassessment is based upon total sales of nearly 50 slips.

within four weeks of the initial offering. Through the majority of these were purchased by current residents of Seaview at Shark River Island, who were given the first opportunities to obtain these slips, the general public has shown exceptional interest, the company reports. Fully one-third of all the sales have been to members of the boating community who do not reside in the adjacent townhomes.

"At this rate, we project all of the slips will be gone after two seasons," says Richard Griffith, vice president, marketing for the Freehold-based company, which developed both the townhomes and the marina as a joint venture with First Atlantic Service Corporation.

The marina was converted to the condominium form of ownership after being developed for boat rentals.

Slips range in size from 22 feet to 40 feet and in price from $22,500 to $58,250 at press time, according to Calton, with only a very few in the 30 foot to 40 foot range still available.

WRITE IT AND REAP!

Writing a classified ad that gets results—whether it be for real estate, employment, the personals, transportation, or merchandise— is easy if you follow the guidelines below.

1. Give the reader specific information. Pretend you are someone reading the classifieds. What would you like to know about the item, service or job you are advertising? Be sure to add details such as color, size, condition, brand name, age, features and benefits. Be accurate! Don't embellish your ad with misleading information. Stick to the facts and reap the rewards!

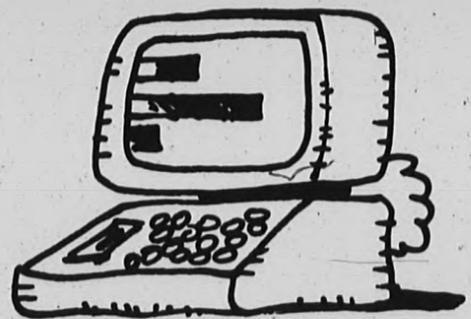

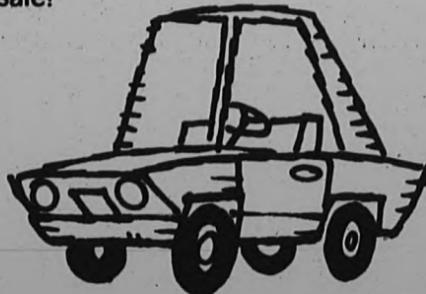

2. Include the price. Don't waste your time or a potential buyer's time. If you advertise the price of the item or service you offer, the people who respond to your ad will be those who are genuinely interested. Surveys show that readers are more interested in those items and services they know are within their price range.

3. Avoid abbreviations. Don't make a potential customer work too hard! Although you may be tempted to cut down on the cost of your ad by using abbreviations, surveys indicate that many people don't understand such abbreviations as EIK (eat-in kitchen) or WSW (white side wall) tires and won't take the time to figure them out. A confused reader is a disinterested reader. Get the most for your money and use complete words.

4. Include phone number and specify hours. Be sure to let potential customers know when and where to call. Surveys show that even if a person is very interested in your item or service, he or she will not call back after the first attempt. Stay near the phone during the hours you indicate you will be available. Don't risk missing a sale!

5. Run on consecutive days. Your ad will not get results if people don't see it! Therefore, it is important to set up a consistent and consecutive ad schedule with your telephone salesperson or outside sales representative. Run your ad for at least one week, or use our special rate

Remember, you can cancel your ad as soon as you get the desired results!

GRAVEYARD LEGAL SHIFT — Richard Moll plays court guard Bull Shannon and Marsha Warfield is Roz Russell on "Night Court." It airs on Thursday nights on NBC. The show ranked seventh in the Nielsen ratings last season.

Prop makers unsung heros of Hollywood

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — When Stanley Kubrick wanted some palm trees, vehicles and military uniforms for his movie, "Full Metal Jacket," he called Charley Biggs.

Some of the uniforms were on hand at Biggs' store, Charley's Militaria; others, he had to manufacture. Biggs got the palm trees in Spain for $30,000, the vehicles in Europe and then shipped them all to England.

"We had to make London look like Hue during the 1968 battle in Vietnam," Biggs said one recent day while resting for a few minutes in the cluttered office of his building in south Oklahoma City.

Bookcases are crammed with illustrated volumes of weapons. On one wall are sketches of uniforms for a forthcoming movie. Another wall displays advertising photographs of military equipment in use in Grenada, Honduras and Lebanon, equipment his company can provide.

The office is housed toward the rear of a 13,000-square-foot building on an acre and a half. In the front is a somewhat typical military surplus store and the rest of the building holds barrels, boxes, bins and racks of military equipment and uniforms. He plans an addition with a loading dock.

"We're really a four-part operation," Biggs said. "We have a walk-in store. We have a mail order business, probably about the fifth biggest military surplus mail order outfit there is. We have our sales to governmental units, federal, state and local and to some foreign countries. And then we have our movies."

Biggs opened Charley's Militaria in 1969 shortly after serving with the 25th Infantry Regiment in Vietnam. It was while he was in the service that he met Fred Rexer, an actor and screenwriter. Through his relationship with Rexer and others, Biggs began supplying military equipment to Hollywood prop companies.

"We've supplied equipment to maybe 20 movies since the late 1970s," Biggs said. "I imagine we've helped equip at least 100 TV shows. Whatever it takes, we get the job done."

Among the other major films for which Biggs has supplied equipment or uniforms are "Apocalypse Now," "Uncommon Valor," "Raw Deal" and the soon-to-be-released "Hamburger Hill."

Biggs' company was involved for about 2½ years with "Full Metal Jacket," and spent about 17 months on "Apocalypse Now."

While he has thousands of military items stored at his main building and in warehouses, the company also makes a lot of its equipment. Charley's Militaria has its own casting machines to turn out rubber and aluminum guns and grenades.

"When you're putting 150 men in the field, you can't afford to give each one of them a real gun," Biggs said. "Then, too, some of the equipment has to be the 'drop' type, like you see a guy fall from a building or something. And the grenades clipped to the chest need to be soft for when the actor falls on them."

When he needed thousands of yards of material to make Vietnam-era uniforms, it wasn't to be found so he went to a mill and contracted for the material.

"That has turned out good for us," he said. "It's a stock item we keep on hand now."

Biggs has developed contacts throughout the world to supply equipment he doesn't have. "We don't have any tanks, for instance, but I know where we can get

In supplying equipment and props for movies, Biggs primarily deals with the producer but also works with the director, art director, costumer and set designer. He and his staff of 19 often spend hundreds of hours on research to make sure that every piece of equipment and uniform is authentic.

"I try to work from photographs of the action if at all possible," he said. "We'll interview hundreds of soldiers who were there to find out what outfits were in the battle and who all was there."

"The Vietnam veterans are the ones now going to see those movies, and they're quick to spot something that isn't authentic."

The company also has helped equip World War II and Civil War films.

While Biggs is able to locate much of the equipment either in his warehouses or from people he knows, he readily makes what isn't available. "Right now, we have a call for a lot of Soviet gear and we're casting that now," he said.

There are tricks to making the props, just as there are for many other lines of work: A diet drink can get a coat of paint and a cap and becomes a smoke grenade; a spray can, in the same manner, is turned into a trip flare; a new pair of boots, after being sandblasted and treated with a chlorine spray, appears well-worn.

Biggs doesn't advertise but depends on word of mouth for movie and TV contracts. And his company is doing well.

"Our net worth now is about $3 million," he said. "That's not bad considering that I started 18 years ago with only $750."

MICHAEL JACKSON

On Monday, Aug. 31, CBS airs "Michael Jackson ... The Magic Returns," a half-hour special that premieres Jackson's latest video, which was directed by Martin Scorsese.

(Stations reserve the right to make last-minute changes.)

Jack Nicholson

NICHOLSON'S FLICKS - I'm a big fan of Jack Nicholson. How old is he and where was he born? Can you list his movies? - A.L., Gadsden, Ala.

Nicholson, 50, was born on April 22, 1937 in Neptune, N.J. He began his career with a bit part in the film "Attack of the Crab Monsters" (1957) and went on to star in "Easy Rider" (1969), "Five Easy Pieces" (1970) and "Chinatown" (1974). He won an Academy Award for Best Actor for his work in "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" (1975) and Best Supporting Actor for "Terms of Endearment" (1983). A complete list of his credits is far too long to print here. Check a filmography at your local library.

LEE'S DEATH - When and under what circumstances did Bruce Lee die? How old was he? - M.T., Schenectady, N.Y.

Lee, the star of many martial arts films, died under mysterious circumstances in 1973. He was 32 years old. It was reported that the coroner's inquest determined the cause of death to be edema, which is swelling of the brain, caused by a hypersensitivity to a certain type of pain killer. A second possibility, marijuana poisoning, was also listed. Some tabloids even hinted at a murder plot. Lee was born in San Francisco on Nov. 27, 1940. He was the son of Li Ho Chuen, an opera performer. He married Linda Emery in 1964, and they had two children, a son named Brandon Bruce Lee and a daughter named Shannon. For more info, you might want to read the biography written by his wife: "The Man Only I Knew."

KIRK FOR PIKE - When was Jeffrey Hunter replaced by William Shatner on "Star Trek"? When did Hunter die and how old was he? - J.P., Snyder, Texas.

Jeffrey Hunter played Captain Pike, the leading man in the original "Star Trek" pilot, which didn't sell. Hunter was not available when the second pilot was shot, so Shatner was cast as Captain Kirk. That pilot was picked up. Hunter, who died in 1969 at the age of 43, later guest starred as Pike on "Star Trek."

Barkin, Quaid generate little heat in 'The Big Easy'

By MICHAEL HEALY
Los Angeles Daily News

LOS ANGELES — On rare occasions, the heat an actress and actor generate can make a tepid movie burst into flame. Kim Basinger and Jeff Bridges performed the service for "Nadine," a delightful movie with not much of a story, little action and less suspense.

Ellen Barkin and Dennis Quaid attempt the same miracle in slightly worse circumstances in "The Big Easy." The title refers to

Review

New Orleans and has to do with lax civic morals as much as a laid-back Southern lifestyle. Quaid plays Remy McSwain, lieutenant in the city homicide squad. He's a wise-cracker and freewheeler and is not above breaking a few laws to make the Big Easy even easier for himself.

Now, who would be the worst person in the world for this guy to fall in love with? Try a straight-laced Northern investigator of police corruption. McSwain's romantic pursuit of prosecutor Anne Osborne (Barkin) is just this side of suicidal.

Now, getting this mismatch to catch fire takes a great deal of screen time, and, as a result, the movie's central mystery gets pushed far into the background. It is just an excuse to get McSwain and his gal running all over town.

McSwain tries to continue his corrupt ways, no matter what his new girlfriend thinks. This does not last long, and soon he is on the dreary road to being saved by the love of a good woman. McSwain turns into a mewling, guilt-ridden wimp eventually.

This is salvation?

Barkin's portrayal of the righteous prosecutor is extremely mannered and nervous, which contrasts with Quaid's performance, which is extremely mannered and relaxed. The characters' sexual attraction is supposed to be steamy, but it never gets much past the awkward stage. One graphic lovemaking scene, in which McSwain awakens Osborne's repressed passion, is slightly titillating but pretty silly all in all.

The filmmakers seem very proud of their exotic New Orleans locations, which are pretty and distracting simultaneously. The movie isn't a bad urban travelogue.

LYNDA HIRSCH

ALL MY CHILDREN: Following a session with Damon, Noelle is reluctant to be with Jeremy. When Jeremy mentions Noelle's withdrawn attitude, Ruth suggests Jeremy may be jealous of Damon; Jeremy disagrees claiming he is fearful of the medico and plans to do a complete check on his past. Constance tells Damon she feels badly that she must blame Noelle for her father's death — the person really responsible will pay. Jesse tells Jeremy Damon and Hodge the New York pawnbroker were in the same Vietnam unit. After making love to Matt on Martha's Vineyard, Nina tells him she wants to marry him. Mark reveals to Ellen that he and Elizabeth are Julie's biological parents. Ellen tells Ross that Elizabeth is Julie's mom, but does not mention Mark is her father. Before Travis holds a press conference to announce his engagement to Erica, Adam leaks to press that Erica is pregnant. The hand of a mysterious woman cuts out a message from magazine letters that state Erica will not live to march down the aisle with Travis. Right after Tom and Skye say "I do," Adam asks Brooke to marry him.

ANOTHER WORLD: After seeing photos of Donna with John, Vicky questions Donna about her relationship with John. Donna admits her feelings for John to Felicia, but will not reveal them to John. An unseen photographer takes another seemingly compromising photo of John and Donna. Learning Sam is Mitch's brother, Rachel feels she has been lied to and decides not to hire him. Without consulting Rachel Mac hires Mitch. Rachel decides not to reveal Sam's identity to Mac. Running into Mitch, Amanda uses a nickname. When Becky's father takes her home Vince and Mary realize they need not work or live together anymore. A frustrated Adam tells M.J. and Chad they deserve one another. When an insurance check arrives as payment for Kathleen's death, Cass tells Wally he does not want it and suggests the money be given to charity.

AS THE WORLD TURNS: Sierra is stunned when she learns Tonio is a partner in the company which purchased Craig's business. Lucinda is aware that James is involved with Tonio's buyout. Tonio skips Meg's party to attend a business meeting with James. Holden tells Snyder Lily does not plan a return to Oakdale. Andy is aware Paul is not a counselor at summer camp, but with James. James tries to reconcile with Emily. Kathy tells Andy her brother was killed in a car crash while he was under the influence of alcohol. James makes it clear to Tonio he is to do what James orders or he will be destroyed. Shannon is wary of Duncan's new servants. Sierra is certain Craig has phoned her. Tom admits to Margo there was another woman in Washington.

THERE HAVE BEEN OTHER MOVIES ABOUT VIETNAM... BUT NOT LIKE THIS ONE.

"IN ITS COMPASSION AND HUMANITY, its strong realism and brilliance...it transcends the politics of Vietnam to tell a moving story from the point of view of the men that fought."
—Harper Barnes, ST. LOUIS POST DISPATCH

"A RIVETING ACCOUNT of the Vietnam War that has never been portrayed this way on the screen before."
—John H. Johnson, EDITOR & PUBLISHER, JOHNSON PUBLICATIONS

What happened this week on the soaps

BOLD AND THE BEAUTIFUL: Mark is unable to mend fences with Beth and learns Donna lied about the source of her loan. Mark has a fight with Rocco but is able to resolve the conflict with Donna. Rocco tells Donna Katie saw them kissing causing Katie to feel betrayed by her sister. Thorne rejects his parents pleas that he stay with the family company. Bill vows to find the man responsible for Caroline's rape. After a session of counseling, Caroline decides to help police find her attacker. A witness spotted Caroline with the man who attacked her.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES: Jennifer and Frankie are aware that they are much more than friends. Overhearing Frankie and Jennifer's vows of love, Nick promises to get Jennifer for lying to him about Frankie being nothing but a pest. Nick holds Frankie and Jennifer hostage when their plan to rescue Sasha backfires. Nick tells Frankie and Jennifer he plans to force them to make a sex film. Justin is aware Adrienne is not ready to make love and plans to take things slowly. Patch tells Kiriak he may work for him again. Patch asks Kayle to return the necklace he gave her. As he grows closer to Grace, Neil tells Noel that he must start a life without Liz, but that Liz will always be a part of Noel's life. When Jack comes down with an infection, Mike tells Melissa she must think of a life without Jack. Kayla is stunned when Mike tells her Jack's condition is critical and he is losing his will to live. Diana is shocked when she finds Philip in bed with Pamela. Staying with Kim while Shane is out of town, Eve pumps Kim for information about the Donovan manor and lies to Kim about her evil step-father.

GENERAL HOSPITAL: Learning Dusty has refused to sing at Mount Rushmore, Sean connects the historical site with the tune being investigated by WSB. Monica is hurt when she suspects Alan is keeping secrets from her. Bringing Martha's children Melissa and Skeeter home she lays down rules about life in the brownstone. Camellia tells Duke she is no longer going to try to win his love — it is time for her to get on with her life. Tom tells Simone he is no longer hoping to pressure her about their relationship. He hopes they will be together one day. Enlisted to spy on Dusty, Felicia reports that he has met with Elena at Southampton. Fearful of Terry's hold on Dusty, Elena heads for Mt. Rushmore. Tony tells Lucy he needs her, but she manages to avoid an out-and-out sexual encounter.

GUIDING LIGHT: Josh is heartbroken by Kaz's death. Spotting a photo of Sunny on Josh's desk, Reva wonders who she is. Maeve becomes hysterical when Ben is hurt on the playground. Rusty interrupts an important business meeting to give Mindy flowers. Jackson learns his mother is gravely ill. Lillian is no longer certain of her feelings for Hawk. Philip and Meredith are attracted to one another. Alan is unhappy over Alex and H.B.'s growing relationship. Reva is furious when she learns Josh was married to Sunny. Josh tells Reva Sunny was killed in South America. Ross informs Vanessa that she must choose between their relationship and her job with Alan. Alan and Alan Michael grow closer. Reva tells Josh that Kyle is alive and she fears he will want custody of Marah.

LOVING: Alan manages to kidnap April and refuses to tell her why he is holding her. Unable to stand the worry about April, Marty goes off the wagon. Steve and Trish return from their honeymoon. Ava and Clay's relationship is growing serious. Jack is plagued with guilt over his relationship with Lily, and rebuffs Stacey's sexual advances. Ava and Clay's relationship deepens. Rick is amused when Anne assumes he and Gwyn are lovers.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE: Gabrielle learns that Steve is aware that Max wants to find money gotten by selling drugs. Tina is a prime suspect in Maria's murder. Frank and Sandra stage a scene which makes it look as though Jon has killed Frank. Rolo admits he was Dante's partner in the drug trade. Steve is furious when Max agrees to let Rolo free. Steve has international police arrest Rolo. Max refuses to turn the money over to police. Max uses a portion of the money for Tina's bail. Evicted from her diner, Wanda thinks of starting another career. When Joey suffers an asthma attack, Larry suggests the child be sent to a clinic in Switzerland for treatment and Clint and Viki plan to accompany him. Mari Lyn is stunned when Tom reveals that Lee Halpern is her mother.

RYAN'S HOPE: Ben arrives at church and drags Lizzie away. Everyone assumes Lizzie has been kidnapped by goons hired by Meredith Medical. After professing his love for her, Ben tells Lizzie that John and Concetta are lovers. An angry Lizzie confronts John. Rick punches out Mark when he tries to settle an argument between Rick and Ryan. Rick refuses to apologize to Mark and stalks out. Ryan has another siege of morning sickness. Pat is stunned by news that Concetta and John were lovers. Lizzie refuses to reconcile with John and runs to Ben. Ben and Lizzie make love. Frank wonders if he has set a bad example for John where women are concerned. Maeve is heartbroken by John and Lizzie's situation.

SANTA BARBARA: Eden is committed to helping Cain regain his memory. Pearl is confused by Eleanor's sudden mood swings. Eleanor switches Cain's medication. After taking a pill, Cain collapses and is rushed to the hospital. Ted plans to visit his Uncle Grant in Boston. Eden is glad that Cain's condition is stable. Jake is grateful for Hayley being supportive after his father's sudden death. Learning he can make a thousand dollars a day, Jake decides to try his hand at modeling. Kelly tells Jeffrey, C.C. will disinherit her if she marries Jeffrey. Eleanor tells Dr. Glass that she hates the fact that C.C. ditched Pamela when Pamela was pregnant with her. Brick plans to become a policeman. Julia's finds Dagmar who will testify that Paul is scum. C.C. and Sophia arrive as Jeffrey and Kelly are about to elope. Jeffrey socks C.C. in the jaw, who claims he did not come to stop the wedding; he wants the duo to wed in Santa Barbara. Willie continues to torture Mason. Julia has proof that Paul can not have been a lover of Tori's since he has been impotent due to an accident for over 10 years.

YOUNG AND RESTLESS: Lauren turns down Paul's request that they spend the night together. Lauren is stunned when Brad takes the day off from work so they can go on a picnic. Bursting into a Jabot business meeting, Philip announces Crickett took the blame for him as he was driving the car. Jill is embarrassed and Crickett is re-hired. Jill blames Kaye for Philip's drinking. Aware he needs help, Philip admits he is an alcoholic. Victor informs Ashley that Niki is in perfect health. Ashley does not believe that Niki was always in good health. Victor orders a casket to be delivered to the home and talks about Niki spending a long time in it and her death. Unaware Victor is on to her scheme, Niki tells Jack she wants to tell Victor she is in remission.
