THE RED ACORN.

BY JOHN M'ELROY,

Author of "Andersonville," Etc.

[The name given this story is made glorious by the valor and achievements of the First division of the Fourteenth Army corps, the cognizance of which was a crimson acorn, worn on the breasts of its gallant soldiers and borne upon their battle flags.]

CHAPTER I.

A DECLARATION.

On the afternoon of a perfect June day Rachel Bond sat beneath an apple tree at the crest of a moderate hill and looked dreamily away to where, beyond the village of Sardis at the foot of the hill, the Miami river marked the beautiful valley like a silver ribbon carelessly flung upon a web of green velvet. Rather she seemed to be looking there, for the light that usually slumbered in her luminous eyes was turned inward. The little volume of poems had dropped unheeded from the white hand. It had done its office; the passion of its lines had keyed her thoughts to a harmony that suffused her whole being, until all seemed as naturally a part of the glorious day as the fleecy clouds in the sapphire sky, the cheerful hum of the bees, and the apple blossom's luxurious scent.

Her love, and quite as much her girlish ambition, had been crowned with violets and boys some weeks before, when the fever heat of patriotism seemed to bring another passion in Harry Glen's bosom to the eruptive point, and there came the long-waited-for avowal of his love, which was made on the evening before his company departed to respond to the call for troops which followed the fall of Fort Sumter.

After the meeting at which Harry had signed the recruiting roll, he had taken her to one up the long, sloping hill, through moonlight as soft, as inspiring, as glorifying as that which had modeled even the frosty Goddess of Maidenhood, so that she stood from her heavenly unapproachableness, and kissed the handsome Endymion as he slept.

Though little, and that commonplace, was said as they walked, subtle womanly instincts prepared Rachel's mind for what was coming and her grasp upon Harry's arm assumed a new feeling that harassed him on to the crisis.

They stopped beneath the old apple tree, at the crest of the hill, and in front of the house. Its gnarled and twisted limbs had been but freshly clothed in a suit of fragrant green leaves.

The ruddy bonfires, lighted for the war meeting, still burned in the village below. The hum of supplementary speeches to the excited crowds that still lingered about came to their ears, mingled with cheers from three throats rapidly growing hoarse, and the throb and wail of fife and drum. Then, uplifted on the voices of hundreds who sang it as only men, and men swayed by powerful emotions can, rose the ever-glorious "Star Spangled Banner," loftiest and most inspiring of national hymns. Through its long, forceful measure, which have the sweep and ring of marching battalions, swung the singers, with a passionate earnestness that made every note and word glow with meaning. The swelling paean told of the heroism and sacrifice with which the foundations of the nation were laid, of the glory to which the land had risen, and then its mood changing to one of direness and wrath, it foretold the just punishment of those who broke the peace of a happy land.

The mood of the Sardis people was that patriotic exaltation which reigned in every city and village of the north on that memorable night of April, 1861.

But Rachel Bond had left far behind them this passion of the multitude, which had set their own to throbbing, even as the roar of a cannon will waken the vibrations of harp strings. Around where they stood was the peace of the night and sleep. The perfume of violets and hyacinths, and of myriads of opening buds seemed shed by the moon with her silvery rays through the soft, dewy air; a few nocturnal insects droned hither and thither, and "drowsy tinklings lulled the distant folds."

As their steps were arrested Rachel released her grasp from Harry's arm, but he caught her hand before it fell to her side, and held it fast. She turned her face frankly toward him, and he looked down with anxious eyes upon the broad white forehead, framed in silken black hair, upon great eyes, flaming with a meaning that he feared to interpret, upon the eloquent lines about the mobile, sensitive mouth, all now lifted into almost supernatural beauty by the moonlight's spiritualizing magic.

What he said he could never afterward recall. His first memory was that of a pause in his speech, when he saw the ripe, red lips turned toward him with a gesture of the proud head that was both an assent and invitation. The kiss that he pressed there thrilled him with the intoxication of unexpectedly rewarded love, and Rachel with the gladness of triumph.

What he said he can't never afterward recall.

What they afterward said was as incoherent as the conversations of those rapturous moments ever are.

"You know we leave in the morning!" he said, when at last it became necessary for him to go.

"Yes," she answered calmly. "And perhaps it is better that it should be so—that we be apart for a little while to consider this new-found happiness and understand it. I shall be sustained with the thought that in giving you to the country I have given more than any one else. I know that you will do something that will make me still prouder of you, and my presentiments, which never fail me, assure me that you will return to me safely."

She reached above her head, and breaking off a bud handed it to him, saying in the words of Juliet:

"Sweet, good-night!
This bud of love, by summer's ripening breath,
May prove a beauteous flower, when next we meet."

He kissed the bud and put it in his bosom, kissed her again passionately and descended the hill to prepare for his departure in the morning.

The days that followed were halcyon for her. While the other women of Sardis, whose loved ones were gone, were bewailing the dangers they would encounter, her proud spirit only contemplated the chances that Harry would have for winning fame. Battles meant bright laurels for him in which she would have a rightful share.

Her mental food became the poetry of love, chivalry and glorious war. The lyric had a vivid personal interest. Tales of romantic daring and achievement were suggestions of possibilities in Harry's career. Her waking hours were mainly spent, book in hand, under the old apple tree that daily grew dearer to her.

The exalted mood in which we found her was broken in upon by the sound of some one thutting the gate below very emphatically. Looking down she saw her father approaching with such visible signs in face and demeanor of strong excitement that she arose and went to him.

"Why, father, what can be the matter?" she said, stopping in front of him, with the open book pressed to her breast.

"Matter enough, I'm afraid, Rachel. There's been a battle near a place called Rich Mountain, in West Virginia, and Harry Glen——"

"Oh, father," she said, growing very white, "Harry's killed."

"No; not killed." The old man's lip curled with scorn. "It's worse. He seems to've suddenly discovered he wasn't prepared to die; he didn't want to rush all at once into the presence of his Maker. Mebbe he didn't think it'd be good manners. You know he was always stronger in etiquet than anything else. In short, he's shot in the white feather. A dozen or more letters have come from the boys telling all about it, and the town's talking of nothing else. There's one of the letters. It's from Joseph Pancake, who quit working for me to enlist. Read it for yourself."

The old gentleman threw the letter upon the grass and strode on angrily into the house. Rachel smoothed out the crumpled sheet and read with a growing sickness at the heart:

MR. BOND,

DEAR SIR: I talk my pen in hand to let it you no that with the exception of a secesshinal tuch of hard marchin me all right. I hope you are in the same blessin. We've jest had an awful big time and the way we warm it to the secesh couldn't be equaled. The smell of burnt powder sick all at worst, jest as the trail was gittin rather fresh, and the big cannon was the talk of the camp every minit. Harry Glen.

The smell of burnt powder sickened her. The fresh and interesting last night," growled Abe Bolton. "I suppose that's what we brought our guns along for."

"Yes; but somebody's likely to get killed." "Well, you nor me don't have to pay their life insurance, as I know on."

"But it may be by you or him."

"The devil'd be mighty anxious for green wood before he'd call you twins."

"Come, now, don't talk that way. This is a mighty serious time."

"I'll make it a durned sight serioueer for you if you don't keep them spiky feet o' your'n offen my heels when we're marching."

"Don't you think we'd better pray, or—something?"

"You might try taking up a collection."

"Try starting a hymn, Joe," said a slender young man at his right elbow, whose face showed a color more intimately connected with the contents of his canteen than the heat of the day. "Line it out, and we'll all join in. Something like this, for example:

Hark, from the tombs a doleful sound;
Mine ears attend the cry.
Ye living men, come view the ground,
Where you must shortly lie."

Pancake shuddered visibly.

"Come, spunk up, Joe," continued the slender young man. "Think how proud all your relations will be of you if you die for your country."

"I'm mad at all my relations, and I don't want to do nothing to please 'em," sighed Joe.

"But I hope you're not so greedy as to want to live always!" said the slender young man, who answered roll call to Kent Edwards.

"No, but I don't want to be knocked off like a green apple, before I'm ripe and ready."

"Better be knocked off green and unripe," said Kent, his railing mood changing to one of sad introspection, "than to prematurely fall from a wrenching gnawing at your heart."

Joe's fright was not so great as to make him forego the opportunity for a brutal retort:

"You mean the 'worm of the still,' I s'pose. Well, it don't gnaw at my heart so much as some other folkses that I know'd."

Kent's face crimsoned still deeper, and he half raised his musket, as if to strike him, but at that moment came the order to march, and the regiment moved forward.

The enemy was by this time known to be near, and the men marched in that silence that comes from tense expectation.

The day was intensely hot, and the stagnant, sultry air was perfumed with the thousand sweet colors that rise in the West Virginia forests in the first flush of summer.

The men threw themselves down for a moment's rest on the springing moss that covered the whole mountain side. A hum of comment and conversation arose. Joe Pancake began to think that there was not likely to be any fight after all, and his spirits rose proportionately. Abe Bolton growled that the cowardly officers had no doubt deliberately misled the regiment, that a fight might be avoided. Kent Edwards saw a nodding Mayapple flower as fair as a exalted and as odorous as a pink—at a little distance, and hastened to pick it. He came back with it in the muzzle of his gun, and his hands full of violets.

A thick bodied rattlesnake crawled slowly and clumsily out from the shelter of a little ledge, his fearful eyes gleaming with deadly intentions against a ground squirrel frisking upon the end of a mossy log, near where Capt. Bob Bennett was seated, poring over a troublesome chapter in the "Tactics." The snake saw the man, and his, awkward movement changed at once into one of electric alertness. He sounded his terrible rattle, and his dull diamonds and stripes lighted up with the glare that shines through an enraged man's face. The thick body seemed to lengthen out and gain a world of sinuous suppleness. With the quickness of a flash he was coiled, with head erect, forked tongue protruding and eyes flaming like satanic jewels.

A shout unpriised Capt. Bennett of his danger. He dropped the book, sprang to his feet with a quickness that matched the snake's, and instinctively drew his sword. Stepping a little to one side as the reptile launched itself at him, he dextrously cut it in two with a sweeping stroke. A shout of applause rose from the excited boys, who gathered around to inspect the slain serpent and congratulate the captain upon his skillful disposition of his assailant.

"O, that's only my old bat stroke that used to worry the boys in town ball so much," said the captain carelessly. "It's queer what things turn out useful to a man, and when he least expects them."

A long, ringing yell from a thousand throats cleft the air, and with its last notes came the rattle of musketry from the brow of the hill across the little ravine. The bullets sang furiously overhead. They cut the leaves and branches with sharp little crashes, and struck men's bodies with a peculiar slap. A score of men in the disordered group fell back dead or dying upon the green moss.

"Of course, we might've knowed them middle-headed officers'd run us right slap into a hornets' nest of rebels before they knowed a thing about it," grumbled Abe Bolton, hastily tearing a cartridge with his teeth and forcing it into his gun.

"Hold on, my weak-kneed patriot," said Kent Edwards, catching Joe Pancake by the collar and turning him around so that he faced the enemy again. "It's awful bad manners to rush out of a matinee just as the performance begins. You disturb the people who've come to enjoy the show. Keep your seat till the curtain goes down. You'll find enough to interest you."

The same sudden inspiration of common sense that had flashed upon Capt. Bennett in encountering the snake now raised him to the level of this emergency. He comprehended that the volley they had received had emptied every Confederate gun. The distance was so short that the enemy could be reached before they had time to reload. But no time must be lost in attempting to form, or in having the order regularly given by the colonel. He sprang toward the enemy waving his sword, and shouted in tones that echoed back from the cliffs:

"Attention, Battalion! Charge bayonets! Forward, DOUBLE-QUICK, MARCH!"

A swelling cheer answered him. His own company ran forward to follow his impetuous lead. The others joined in rapidly. Away they dashed down the side of the declivity and in an instant there were swarming up the opposite side toward the astonished Confederates. Among these divided councils reigned. Some were excitedly snapping unloaded guns at the oncoming foe, others were fixing bayonets and stoutly urging their comrades to do likewise and meet the rushing wave of cold steel with a counter wave. The weaker hearted ones were already clambering up the mountain side out of reach of harm.

There was no time for debate. The blue line led by Bennett flung itself upon the dark brown mass of Confederates like an angry wave dashing over a flimsy bank of sand, and in an instant there was nothing to be done but pursue the disrupted and flying fragments. It was all over.

CHAPTER III.

A RACE.

The unexpected volley probably disturbed Private Joseph Pancake's mind more than that of any other man in the regiment. It produced there an effect akin to the sensation of a nauseous emetic in his stomach.

He had long enjoyed the enviable distinction of being the "best man" among the comparative youths of Sardis, and his real and imaginary success in the fistic tournaments which form so large a part of the interest in life of a certain class of young men in villages had led his townsmen to entertain extravagant hopes as to his achievements in the field.

But, like most of his class, his courage was purely physical, and a low order of that type. He was bold in those encounters where he knew that his superior strength and agility rendered small the chances of his receiving any serious bodily harm, but of that high pride and mounting spirit which lead to soldierly deeds he had none.

The sight of the dying men on either side shrivelled his heart with a deadly panic.

"Oh, Kent," he groaned, "lemme go, and let's git out o' here. This's just awful, and it'll be ten times wuss in another minnit. Let's git behind that big rock there as quick as the Lord'll let us."

He turned to pull away from Kent's detaining hand, when he heard Capt. Bennett's order to the regiment to charge, and the hand relaxed its hold. Joe faced to the front again and saw Kent and Abe Bolton and the rest of the boys rush forward, leaving him and a score of other weak-kneed irresolutes standing alone behind.

Again he thought he would seek the refuge of the rock, but at that moment the Union line swept up to the Confederates, sundering them as a wave does dry sand.

Joe's mental motions were now amazingly rapid. Now he was not long in realizing that all the danger was past, and that he had an opportunity of gaining credit cheaply. He acted promptly. Fixing his bayonet, he gave a fearful yell and started forward on a run for the position which the regiment had gained.

He was soon in the lead of the pursuers, and appeared, by his later zeal, to be making amends for his earlier tardiness. As he ran ahead he shouted savagely:

"Run down the hollions! Shoot 'em! Stab 'em! Bay'net 'em! Don't let one of 'em get away."

There is an excitement in a man chase that is not even approached by any other kind of hunting, and Joe soon became fairly intoxicated with it.

He quickly overtook one or two of the slower-paced Confederates who surrendered quietly and were hunted by him over to the other boys as they came up, and conducted by them to the rear.

Becoming more excited he spied one entirely unfamiliar how far he was outstripping his comrades.

A hundred yards ahead of him was a tall, gaunt Virginian, clad in butternut colored jeans of queer cut and pattern and a great bellying round hat of rough, gray wool. Though his gait was shambling, and his lunge splay feet rose and fell in the most awkward way, he went over the ground with a swiftness that made it rather doubtful whether Joe was gaining on him at all. But his latter was encouraged by the signs of his chase's distress. First the bellying hat flew off and rolled behind, and Joe could not resist the temptation to give it a kick which sent it spinning into a clump of honeysuckles. Then the Confederate flung off a haversack, whose flapping interfered with his speed, and this was followed by a limp, lily constructed canteen. Next followed the fugitive's belt, loaded down with an antique cartridge box, a savage knife made from a rasp and handled with hickory, and a fierce looking horse pistol with a flint lock.

"I seemed to be jumpin' up a mountain of revolutionary relics," said Joe afterward, in describing the incident. "The feller dropped keepsakes, from his forefathers like a fired mottin' its feathers on a windy day. I began to think that if I kept up the chase pretty long I'd gain to shed Continental money and kaog breeches."

The fugitive turned off to the right into a narrow path that plunged through the tangled thickets. Joe followed with all the energy that remained in him, confident that at short distance more would bring him so close to his game that he could force his surrender by a threat of layoutting. He caught up to a rise a rill of the Confederate, and was already forbodering his gum for a lungs in case of refusal to surrender on demand, when he was amazed to see the Confederate whirl round, level his gun at him, and order his surrender. Joe was so astonished that he stumbled, fell forward and dropped his gun. As he raised his eyes he saw three or four other Confederates step out from behind a rock and level their guns upon him with an expression of bloodthirstiness that seemed simply fiendish.

Then it flashed upon him how far away the punch'll go right smack through yer, fur-sartin. Et yer skin is so tender, what are ye doin' in the army?

They climbed the mountain laboriously, and started down on the other side. About midway in the descent they came upon a deserted cabin standing near the side of the road.

"By the Lord Harry," said one of the Confederates, "I'm almost done clean gin out, so I am. I'm tirder nor a chipmunk hoss after a hard day's pleasin, an' I'm ez dry ez a lime kiln. I motion that we stop yere an' take a rest. We kin put our Yank in the house thar and keep him. I wonder whar the spring is that the folks that lived yere got their water from?"

Leaving one of the men to guard the prisoner, the rest of the Confederates started for the hollow in search of water to cool their burning thirst.

They had gained such a distance from the scene of the fight, and were in such an out-of-the-way place, that the thought of being overtaken did not obtrude itself for an instant, either upon their minds or Joe's.

But as they came back up the hill, with a gourd full of spring water for their companion, they were amazed to see a party of blue coats appear around the bend of the road at a little distance. They dropped the gourd of water, and yelled to the man on guard:

"Git the Yank, an'run for yer life!" and disappeared themselves in the direction of the spring.

The guard comprehended the situation and the order. He fired his gun at Joe, but with such nervous haste as to destroy the aim and send the charge into the punch on a foot beyond his intended victim, and then ran off with all speed to join his companions. The Union boys sent a few dropping shots after him, all of which missed their mark.

Joe managed to recover his nerves and wits sufficiently to stagger to the door as his comrades came up, and group one of the guns the Confederates had left.

Questions and congratulations were showered upon him, but he replied incoherently, and gasped a request for water, as if he were perishing from thirst. While some hunted for this, others sought for traces of the Confederates; he gained time to fix up a fairly presentable story of a desperate and long continued bayonet struggle in which he was left having with the greatest gallantry, although nearly hopeless of success, when the arrival of help changed the aspect of matters. He had so many gaping wounds to confirm the truth of his story that it was implicitly believed, and he was taken back to camp as one of the glorious heroes of that eventful day. The crippled made him a sergeant as soon as he heard the tale, and regretted much that he could not imitate the example of the great Napoleon and raise him to a commission on the scene of his valiant exploits. His cot at the hospital was daily visited by numbers of admiring comrades, to whom he repeated his glowing account of the fight, with marked improvements in manner and detail accompanying every repetition.

He had no desire to leave the hospital during his term of service, but his hurts were all superficial and healed rapidly, so that in a fortnight's time the surgeon pronounced him fit to return to duty. He cursed inwardly that officer's zeal in keeping the ranks as full as possible, and went back to his company to finish preparing to go into another fight.

"Hello, Joe," said his comrades, "awful glad to see you back. Now you'll have a chance to get your revenge on those fellows. They'll be enough of us with you to see that you get a fair fight."

"To the devil with their revenge and a fair fight," said Joe to himself. That evening he strolled around to the headquarters tent, and said to the commander of the regiment:

"Colonel, the doctor seems to think that I'm fit to return to duty, but I don't feel all right yet. I've a numbness in my legs, so that I can hardly walk sometimes. It's my old rheumatics stirred up by sleeping out in the night air. I hear that the man who's been drivin' the headquarters wagon has had to go to the hospital. I want to be at something, even if I can't do duty in the ranks, and I'd liked to take his place till him and me gets well."

"All right, sergeant. You can have the place as long as you wish, or any other that I can give you. I can't do too much for so brave a man."

So it happened that in the next fight the regiment was not gratified by any thrilling episodes of sanguinary, single handed combats between the indomitable Joe and bloodthirsty Confederates.

He had deferred his "revenge" indefinitely.

CHAPTER IV.

DISGRACE.

Harry Glen's perfect self-complacency did not mot a feather when the victors returned to camp flushed with their triumph, which, in the eyes of those inexperienced three-months' men, had the dimensions of a Waterloo. He did not know that in proportion as they magnified their own exploit, so was the depth of their contempt felt for those of their comrades who had declined to share the perils and the honors of the expedition with them. He was too thoroughly satisfied with himself and his motives to even imagine that any one could have just cause for complaint at anything he chose to do.

This kept him from understanding or appreciating the force of the biting innuendoes and sarcasms which were made to his very face; and he had stood so aloof from all that there was nobody who cared to take the friendly trouble of telling him how free the camp conversation was making with his reputation.

He could not help, however, understanding that in time way he had lost caste with the regiment; but he serenely attributed this to mere spite and jealousy of the superior advantage he was enjoying, and it only made him more anxious for the coming of the time when he could "cut the whole mob of beggars," as Ned Burnleigh phrased it.

A few days more would end the regiment's term of service, and he readily obtained permission to return home in advance.

The first head blow his confidence received was when he walked down the one principal street of Sardis, and was forced to a perception of the fact that there was an absence of that effusive warmth with which the Sardis people had ever before welcomed back their young townsman, of whom good looks and gentlemanliness they had always been proud. Now people looked at him in a curious way. They turned to whisper to each other, with sneering smiles and knowing winks, as he came into view, and they did not come forward to offer him their hands as of old. It astonished him that nobody alluded to the company or to anything that had happened to it.

Turning at length from the main street, he entered the lateral one leading to his home. As he did so, he heard one boy call out to another, in that piercing treble which boys employ in making their confidential communications to one another, across a street:

"S-a-y, did you know that Hank Glen'd got back? And they say he looks pale-yet?"

"Hain't," the reply came in high falsetto, palpably tinged with that fine scorn of a healthy boy for anything which does not exactly square with his young highness' ideas. "Come back to his mammy, eh? Well, it's a pity she'll ever let him go away from her. Hope she'll keep him with her now. He don't seem to do well out of reach of her apron strings."

The whole truth flashed upon him. Envious ones had slandered him at home as a coward.

He walked onward in a flurry of rage. The thought that he had done anything to deserve criticism could not obtrude itself between the joints of his triple-plated armor of self-esteem.

"Spiteful, little-minded, country loobies," he said to himself, with an impatient shake of his head, as if to adjust his hair, which was his usual sign of excitement; "they've always hated me because I was above them. They take advantage of the least opportunity to show their mean jealousy."

After a moment's pause: "But I don't care. I'd a little rather have their dislike than their good will. It'll save me a lot of trouble in being polite to a lot of curs that I despise. I'm going to leave this dull little burg anyhow, as soon as I can get away. I'm going to Washington, and be with Ned Burnleigh. There's more life there in a day than here in a year. After all there's nobody here that I care anything for, except father and mother—and—Rachel."

A new train of thought introduced itself at this tardy remembrance of his betrothed. His heart abated. He stopped, and leaning against a shady, silver maple began anew a meditation that had occupied his mind very frequently since that memorable night under the old apple tree on the hill top.

There had been for him but little of that spiritual exaltation which made that night the one supreme one in Rachel's existence; when the rapture of gratified pride and love blended with the radiant moonlight and the subtle fragrance of the flowers into a sweet symphony that would well chord with the song the stars sang together in the morning.

He was denied the intense pleasure that comes from success, after harrowing doubts and fears. His unfailing consciousness of his own worth had left him little doubt that a favorable answer would promptly follow when he chose to propose to Rachel Bond, or to an other girl, and when this came with the anticipated readiness, he could not help in the midst of his gratification at her assent the intrusion of the disagreeable suspicion that, peradventure, he had not done the best with his personal wares that he might. Possibly others there was no necessity for his committing himself whereby he did, for Rachel "would have kept," or Ned Burnleigh coarsely put it, "have made the recipient of Harry's confidence.

Three months of compulsory [illegible] Ned Burnleigh, and daily imbibition of that young man's stories of his wonderful conquests among young women of peerless beauty and exalted social station confirmed this feeling, and led him to wish for at least such shackling of the betrothal tether as would permit excursions into a charmed realm like that where Ned reigned supreme.

For the thousandth time—and in each recurrence becoming a little clearer defined and more urgent—came the question:

"Shall I break with Rachel? How can I? And what possible excuse can I assign for it?"

There came no answer to this save the pangs with which base self-love was pricking the sides of his intent, and he recoiled from it—ashamed of himself, it is true, but less grieved at each renewed consideration of the query.

"He hastened home that he might receive a greeting that would efface the memory of the reception he had met with in the street. There, at least, he would be regarded as a hero, returning laurel-crowned from the conflict.

As he entered the door his father, tall, spare and iron-gray, laid down the paper he was reading, and with a noticeable lowering of the temperature of his wonted calm but earnest cordiality, said simply:

"How do you do? When did you get in?"

"Very well, and on the 10:30 train."

"Did all your company come?"

Harry winced, for there was something in his father's manner, more than his words, expressive of strong disapproval. He answered:

"No! I was unwell. The water and the exposure disagreed with me, and I was allowed to come on in advance."

"Mr. Glen, the elder, carefully folded the paper he was reading and laid it on the stand, as if its presence would embarrass him in what he was about to say. He took off his eyeglasses, wiped them deliberately, closed them up and lustingd for a moment, holding them between the thumb and forefinger of one hand, before placing them in their case, which he had taken from his pocket with the other.

These were all gestures with which experience had made Harry painfully familiar. He used to describe them to his boy intimates as "the governor clearing for action." There was something very disagreeable coming, and he awaited it apprehensively.

"Were you"—the father's cold, searching eyes rested for an instant on the glasses in his hand, and then were fixed on his son's face—"were you too ill the day of the fight to accompany your command?"

Harry's glance quailed under the penetrating scrutiny, as was his custom when his father objected him to a rebuke cafe hisin; then he summoned assurance to his aid, and his face reddened with both genuine and assumed anger.

"Father," he said, "I certainly did not expect that you would join these mean-spirited curs in their abuse of me, but now I see that——"

"Hemy, you evade the question." The calm eyes took on a steely hardness. "You certainly know by this time that I always require direct answers to my questions. You thoroughly know that I do. You entered this company to be its leader and to share all its duties with it. I it went into a fight while you remained back in camp. Why was this so? Were you too sick to accompany it?"

"I certainly was not feeling well."

"Were you too ill to go along with your company?"

"Well——I—really—was—not—feeling—well, and the—was—some—work—in—camp—that—need—to—be—done—and there was enough without me—and—I—I——"

"Were you too ill the day of the fight?"

"That is sufficient," said the elder man with a look of scorn that presently changed into one of deeply wounded pride. "Henry, I know too well your disposition to shirk the un; I know too well your disposition to shirk the first time since the completion of his collegiate course, sent him forth into the world a being superior, in his own esteem, to the accidents and conditions that the mass of inferior mortals are subject to. Yet he found reasons sufficient for his parents' defection to the ranks of his enemies.

"It's no new thing," he said, while carefully dressing for a call upon Rachel in the evening, "for father to be harsh and unjust to me, and mother has one of her nervous spells, when everything goes wrong with her."

"Anyhow," he continued, "there's Ned Burnleigh, who understands me and will do me justice, and he amounts to more than all of Sardis—except Rachel, who loves me, and will always believe that what I do is right.

National Democrat.

RAHWAY, N. J., NOVEMBER 12, 1886

A Proclamation by the President.

It has long been the custom of the people of the United States, on a day in each year especially set apart for that purpose by their Chief Executive, to acknowledge the goodness and mercy of God, and to favor His continued care and protection.

In observance of such custom, I, Grover Cleveland, President of the United States, do hereby designate and set apart Thursday, the 25th day of November, next, to be observed and kept as a day of thanksgiving and prayer.

On that day let all our people forego their accustomed employments and assemble in their usual places of worship to give thanks to the Ruler of the Universe for our continued enjoyment of the blessings of a free government, for a renewal of business prosperity throughout our land, for the return which has rewarded the husbandmen for their toil on the soil, and for our progress as a people in all that makes a nation great.

And while we contemplate the immeasurable power of earthquake, fire and storm, let the grateful hearts of those who have been shielded from harm turn forth in fervent sympathy and kindness toward those who have suffered through their visitation.

Let us then in the midst of our thanksgiving remember the poor and in deed with cheerful gifts and alms, so that our service may, by deeds of charity, be made acceptable in the sight of the Lord.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed. Done at the City of Washington this first day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty-six, and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundredth and eleventh.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

By the President,
T. F. BAYARD, Secretary of State.

Green is still the popular color.

We often hear of the "blue laws" of New Jersey, but for the next three years they will be Green laws—or at least they will bear a Green approval.

HIGH BEER.—The brewers are arranging to make a large advance in the price of beer. Between high license and high beer, the saloon keepers may have to go—out of business.

The Republican papers of the state are now engaged reading the Prohibitionists out of the Republican party "for good and all." We don't suppose the Prohibitionists object.

In New York lots 25x100 feet, near Central Park and Seventieth street, that a year ago were held at fifteen thousand dollars, sold last week for twenty-eight thousand five hundred dollars. Lots can be bought in the new Bartholdi Park, Rahway, cheaper than that!

The Portland (Me.) Argus says: The St. Annis Club of Topeka, Kans., has elected Professor E. Stone Wiggins an honorary member. This is a very popular club, and a great many distinguished Americans, Mr. Blaine among the company, are qualifying themselves for membership.

Congressman-elect John Kean, Jr., of Elizabeth, paid a visit to this city last evening and called upon his political friends. He seems to regard his success with becoming modesty. Some of his friends admit that it cost him about $15,000 in the three counties.—N. B. Home News, Nov. 5th.

The Democrats will have a good working majority of from 13 to 18 in the next House of Representatives, notwithstanding the losses at first reported, which made the majority doubtful—and the U. S. Senate, according to present appearances will be nearly evenly balanced, there being Democratic gains.

Gen. Fisk, in reply to a circular from the labor element, said: "God hasten the day when the $500,000,000 now expended by laboring men for strong drink shall be devoted to greater comfort in the home, to better education for children and generally to the promotion of happiness at the fireside of the workingman."

The Trenton Emporium calls attention to the fact that "notwithstanding that deaths are occurring every day caused by the incessant smoking of cigarettes the dudes still continue to puff at them regardless of the consequences. None of the deaths reported are given as in any way affecting the brain, but attack and sap the lungs and nervous system."

The Republicans in the state are desperate in their attempts to overcome the result of the Legislative election. Some of their agents went down to Atlantic county last Friday and tried to induce the board of canvassers to disfranchise one township, upon a technical point, that there was a difference as to the boundary line. The board very properly sat down upon upon the conspirators—only four of them having the temerity to vote for the scheme, which was intended to defeat the Democratic Assemblyman.

The New York Herald, one of the leading journals of the country, remarks: "The Democratic party is the friend of labor. It is the party of the common people. While it has its share of rich men, it has more than a share of those who earn their bread by the sweat of their brows. The bulk of the nation's toilers are in its ranks. It is the party which lifts the house we live in by raising the foundation, while the Republican party is satisfied to leave the foundation in the mud and to raise the roof."

Mr. Blaine opened his starring tour in Pennsylvania by attending divine service in Philadelphia, after which "he lingered around the altar, where many of the congregation gathered around him to take him by the hand;" Mr. Blaine has an imaginative mind. We wonder if it did not flash through his plumed head that this affecting demonstration was awfully like the procedure at a funeral, after the clergyman has announced, "an opportunity will now be given to look upon the remains of our lately deceased brother. Please pass up the left aisle and down the center."—Ex.

Yes, so it appears, as far as New Jersey is concerned. He spoke in Essex county which generally gives 2,500 or 3,000 Republican majority, and this year Judge Green has over 900 majority—and Newark, where the speech was made, also strongly Republican, gives Green 1,060 majority. He also spoke in Hudson county, where the Democrats calculated on about 4,000 majority, but to their surprise it reached well on to 9,000. Yes, Blaine brought out the vote!

The result of the recent election for the Legislature makes it stand as follows: Democrats 40; Republicans 39; Labor 1; tied 1. As there are 81 Senators and Assemblymen, it requires 41 votes for a majority. The Democrats, therefore, will need the assistance of the Labor vote, giving the tie district in Passaic to the Republicans, which will probably be the result of a new election—the district being naturally Republican. The Labor member thus occupies a very important position. It is generally stated that even if the Republicans had a small majority, Senator Sewell could not be reappointed, as there are some who would refuse to vote for him.

The Advocate of this city, having criticised the old Republican paper of Plainfield, the Central Times, the latter gives the following rather caustic reply:

A RATHER SILLY ADVOCATE.

The boyish Republican editors of the Rahway Advocate think Plainfield "is in sore need of a new Republican paper" in place of the "professedly Republican Central Times." The Rahway scribes are evidently judging the Republicanism of Plainfield by that of Rahway. Our neighboring city, if the Advocate standard is correct, clearly wants a Republican journal which is a hide-bound partisan, and that never kicks against Republican bosses and Republican corruptionists. They plainly want a paper that will tickle their party vanity, one which will, for example, stuff its columns with humbug prophecies of Republican success before election and that will "whoop" up victories after election, for Republican candidates whom everybody else outside of Rahway knows were defeated.

A Republican paper that undertook to claim, on the afternoon of the day after election, the possibility of Mr. Howey's success, in double column display lines, as the Advocate did, in order to please for a moment its partisan readers, is no judge of what the Republican intelligence of a city like Plainfield expects of a Republican journal. But every journal to its mission. Some a renatural toadies and live by flattering those whom they seek to use for gain. The Times prefers a different standard of journalism from that.

"It is greatly to be regretted that the Woman's Christian Temperance Union should divide. Its energies and its influence by identifying itself with one of the political parties. If its members were voters, there might be some excuse for its partisan attitude; as it is, it becomes a divisive force in the temperance movement, which is alreadyy too much divided."

The above criticism does not apply to the Rahway W. C. T. U., as far as we can understand, as they did not in the recent election in any way take political action; on the contrary, their excellent president cautioned against any such allusions either in songs or otherwise at the entertainment the week previous to the election.

The Legislature will meet on the second Tuesday of January at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, which will be the 11th. On the following Tuesday Governor Green will be inaugurated and on the next subsequent Tuesday a vote will be taken in each house for United States Senator. Both houses failing to agree on any candidate, a joint meeting will be held on the following Wednesday, when the candidate who receives forty-one votes, which is a majority of all the members of both houses, will be declared elected. In case there is no election, then a ballot or ballots must be had from day to day until a result is reached. This is how the election is regulated by law, and it must be obeyed.

The New Brunswick Freeholder is getting pretty well advertised, under its new management—that is, if libel suits count in that score. The Elizabeth Herald referring to the subject says:

Senator Schenck of Middlesex has sued the publishers of the New Brunswick Freeholder for civil and criminal libel, laying his damages at $10,000. The same paper has also been sued for the same offense for $5,000 by H. B. Cook, and it is said that Wm. McMahon, late candidate for Congress in this district, will bring suit against the much prosecuted firm for both civil and criminal libel. The new publishing company which displaced Veteran Babcock will likely need a whole cohort of lawyers and a heavy bank account to help on its new departure.

If temperance has anything to do toward showing a good class of people, the South must be far beyond the North in this respect. There has been some heavy voting for the last few years for prohibition or local option in South Carolina, North Carolina, Alabama, Tennessee, Georgia and Florida. And now that so-called wicked rum drinking state of Arkansas has had an election; the vote for prohibition was 75,000 while the vote for license was 65,000, the prohibitionist carrying some thirty counties.

Since the Democrats will have a majority of the House of Assembly, several candidates are in the field for Speaker, including W. S. Throckmorton, of Monmouth, Wm. Harrigan, of Essex, Chester Wolverton, of Hunterdon, and Robert S. Hudspeth, of Hudson. The first mentioned is a very able and popular young man and would make an excellent officer, but the unfortunate bad behavior of Monmouth at the late election will doubtless be used against him.

Some of the newspapers have stated that Assemblymen Chamberlain and Corbin, of this county would not vote for Wm. J. Sewell for Senator, even if the Republicans should have a majority on joint ballot. We think Mr. Chamberlain's position would be that of any party man, to vote for the caucus nominee, and we believe that is where he stands.

Green's plurality, 8,063.

There were a few scattering votes for Potter and Albright, which are not included in this table.

The Advocate of this city, having criticised the old Republican paper of Plainfield, the Central Times, the latter gives the following rather caustic reply:

A RATHER SILLY ADVOCATE.

The boyish Republican editors of the Rahway Advocate think Plainfield "is in sore need of a new Republican paper" in place of the "professedly Republican Central Times." The Rahway scribes are evidently judging the Republicanism of Plainfield by that of Rahway. Our neighboring city, if the Advocate standard is correct, clearly wants a Republican journal which is a hide-bound partisan, and that never kicks against Republican bosses and Republican corruptionists. They plainly want a paper that will tickle their party vanity, one which will, for example, stuff its columns with humbug prophecies of Republican success before election and that will "whoop" up victories after election, for Republican candidates whom everybody else outside of Rahway knows were defeated.

A Republican paper that undertook to claim, on the afternoon of the day after election, the possibility of Mr. Howey's success, in double column display lines, as the Advocate did, in order to please for a moment its partisan readers, is no judge of what the Republican intelligence of a city like Plainfield expects of a Republican journal. But every journal to its mission. Some a renatural toadies and live by flattering those whom they seek to use for gain. The Times prefers a different standard of journalism from that.

"It is greatly to be regretted that the Woman's Christian Temperance Union should divide. Its energies and its influence by identifying itself with one of the political parties. If its members were voters, there might be some excuse for its partisan attitude; as it is, it becomes a divisive force in the temperance movement, which is alreadyy too much divided."

The above criticism does not apply to the Rahway W. C. T. U., as far as we can understand, as they did not in the recent election in any way take political action; on the contrary, their excellent president cautioned against any such allusions either in songs or otherwise at the entertainment the week previous to the election.

OSBORN AND THE "DEMOCRAT."

MR. EDITOR:—You're going to catch it! You and Osborn have been caught in the act of calling the "Whoop-ee" syndicate near relatives of Annanias and Sapphira; and to add insult to injury have succeeded in proving it every time. Here is what they say of us in that little "Whoop-ee" they issued the day before election:

When we are fighting worthy foemen we cannot stop to kill gnats. When a man like Czar M. Osborn and a paper like the DEMOCRAT unite to say that the Advocate tells lies, we want no better recommendation for veracity. Mr. Osborn and the DEMOCRAT will receive our distinguished consideration when we can spare the time to administer to them a little fly poison.

You see you and I are to receive this "distinguished consideration" when they can spare time. For myself I only desire to say that having been a target for these people without any motive on my part, or any reason why they should have pursued the course they have, any more than with any other private citizen, if they think best to follow up their methods, let them go ahead; if they are positively sure they have selected the individual they want, I only ask that each one of the many writers, from the military wing down to the business management add their initials to their doses of fly-poison so that I may know to whom to give the proper credit and attention, also that these doses may not be homopathic ones; I like a good dose when I take one. As for you, I guess you can take care of yourself.

U. M. OSBORN.

[We think we shall let Bro. Osborn "Whoop(ee) er-up." As he formerly trained with some of that crowd he can probably return the "fly poison," even if it is only for nits.—ED.]

MR. EDITOR:—There was quite a party last week down our way. Invitations were given in due form, the dude element being not neglected. Mine host did his best to entertain by many generous acts; he produced a pitcher and in that pitcher was some of Springer's best apple juice right from the press; some of the smart lads conceived that it would be a smart joke to roll the barrel of cider out in the back yard and drink from the spigot ad libitum, and the funniest part would be to drink it all up and put the empty barrel back. How well they succeeded in this is not known, but there was a great rumbling soon after the attack was made on the barrel, and the combined rumbling was equal to the coming of a thunder storm; dark clouds seemed to lurge on the countenances of some of these smart young cider drinkers, and they would frequently walk out to get the fresh air, look at the moon, observe the stars and admire the celery bed. Some of the young ladies asked "What's come over the young men?" An old wiseacre answered, "sweet new cider, will have its own way, there's no use arguing agin it, don't you know."

Moral: Never impose upon good nature; never take that which is not yours; not even sweet cider, as it might go back on you.

OUR SIDER.

"RUM DID IT."—In glancing over the Jersey sheet of the New York World of Tuesday morning one could not help being impressed with the numerous crimes and accidents from the rum curse. We note the following, besides several others dubless from similar cause, but not so plainly stated:

Antonio Pappo stabbed and probably murdered an old woman in Newark, while he was drunk.

Joseph Minney, of New Brunswick, missing, and his wife almost distracted. When last seen he was intoxicated.

The above are only a few of similar terrors that appear in the newspapers daily, and yet people will go right on drinking the poison that causes this drunken insanity.

NOT TRUE, AS USUAL.—The Advocate as a favor to its friend "Dan," gives the incorrect statement that Kean led Chamberlain in the second district of the third ward by 15 votes. We don't claim to be an expert mathematician, but we give the figures, from the official: Chamberlain has 142 and Kean 143—deduct the lesser from the greater and only 6 is left. But it was the first polling district where Dan's greatest natural energies were expended, and there Chamberlain leads Kean by 13, or 7 in the ward; and, besides, in most of the other wards Kean gained more than in the 3d. Let the credit rest where it belongs.

Chancellor Runyon has just rendered a decision that speculation in stocks and securities upon margins are wagers within the act to prevent gambling, and are, therefore, illegal; and that a gift of securities to a broker to secure him against losses in such speculations is void. The Chancellor therefore orders that certain securities taken by a broker to recoup losses on marginal transactions be returned to the customer.

THE RED BAT.—"Wallace" McGrath who succeeded Henry C. Wilson, at the pool and billiard parlor, on Main street, has a natural curiosity which almost equals Pommerehene's peculiar pig. It is a "red bat nearly the size of a pigeon and weighs about four pounds." Mr. McGrath informed the dozens of spectators who called to see it on Tuesday evening, that it had been caught near Six Roads, this city. He has it in a convenient cage at the back of the billiard parlor. Each spectator as he eagerly leaned over the cage to get a glimpse, by the aid of a lighted match, of the rare plumed bird, heard a laugh that went round, both loud and long, and as he turned from the cage would meditate as to whether he had had any supper, and wonder why he had been so hungry. The bat was the usual color of its kind—the brick.

Dr. George H. Cook, State Geologist and Vice President of Rutgers College, has been designated as Chief of Signal Service Bureau for the State of New Jersey. A central station will soon be established at New Brunswick by order of United States Signal service in connection with the State Scientific School. MEMORIAL HALL.
No. 4.

Memorial Hall is receiving daily attention and approval from strangers and the citizens of Rahway. It is a pleasant thing to hear them say: "Well, we must admit, they are laying these foundation walls wisely and well." The trenches have been dug deep and carefully filled and cemented with no sparing hand. The plumb, the level, and the square, are the guides to good walls, while the trowel in skillful hands can be seen spreading daily the cement, which is to bind all together in a building meet to be a memorial to our brave soldier boys departed. Thanksgiving Day has been suggested as the day on which to lay its corner stone. At three P. M. Barry Post expects to leave their headquarters in Coles' Block, and taking Main street in their way escort LaFayette Lodge F. & A. M. who will assist them in the work according to the beautiful Ritual of that ancient free and accepted order. The citizens of Rahway, and adjacent towns are cordially invited to be present. At this hour the services of Thanksgiving will all be over and it will be, we think, a proper accompaniment to its grateful duties, to lay the corner stone of Memorial Hall, with all its holy tribute, rising to our patriot dead. Gratitude for annual gifts from God may well be mingled later in the day with the memorial of those who freely offered up their lives that the nation might live. Would it not be a fitting time to help on our Memorial Hall by generous gifts? A subscription committee has already been appointed by the authorities of the Post and are at their work. What a grand time amid our grateful remembrances of the day to enrol a kindly gift to Memorial Hall! In giving to this purpose, you are offering each gift to the divine principle of patriotism and to our patriot dead. You are doing more than this. You are looking forward to broad charities, to the sick and the wounded in your midst. The time is not far distant when the earnings of this hall shall bless the unfortunate who fall in the street, and especially those who are victims of dire accidents in the engine rooms, and workshops of the town. In all our appeals hitherto for help it has been on the plea of our brave dead. We ask help for this hall as our memorial to them. We might go further and appeal to your city's rising growth and needs. The large hall appended to Memorial Hall will meet a great want. Its dimensions are 50x70 feet, and will be well adapted to all large gatherings in the city. Town meetings, fairs, festivals and political gatherings, all these can be accommodated, and this feature of the people's interest be fully conserved. Our appeal then is first: patriotism; second: broad charities in a free hospital; and third: in an ample hall for the public.

Respectfully submitted,
LEVI W. NORTON,
DANIEL G. URMSTON,
IRA F. MORGAN.

THE REFORM CLUB.

The concert at the Second Presbyterian church, and the election excitement kept many from the Thursday night meeting. The regular business was transacted and the fair business was particularly made the order. After fully discussing matters in connection therewith the club adjourned.

The Sunday afternoon meeting resulted in another overflow. More chairs had been provided, but still there were not enough. President Branson opened the meeting, and called on Mr. Osborn, who read a letter from Rev. John Handley, who was expected and had been announced as the probable speaker, regretting his inability to be present. Mr. O. then in response to the request of the president, proceeded to give a few statistic relative to the amount expended in Rahway, by the 30 licensed places, putting the sum at only five dollars per day for 365 days equals to $54,750, and compared the amount with that received as revenue from these places. He was followed by Mr. John R. Morss, who read an extract from Col. Ingersoll, and closed with an appeal to all who are under the control of this curse to exercise their will power and become men again, pledging the assistance of the club in their efforts. Mr. Samuel Wilson followed in an earnest appeal and a number of national statistic relative to the amount expended in this traffic. On Sunday next Rev. Wm. Rollinson of the Baptist church will address the meeting.

The fair enterprise is successfully progressing notwithstanding the attempts to cast odium upon it in some quarters. The Glee Club entertainment next Monday evening promises to be a great success. The number of tickets has been limited to the seating capacity of the room and all who hold tickets will be provided with seats. At the fair the club proposes to give another of those turkey suppers for which they have become famous, where all who hold tickets are entitled to eat until they cannot eat any more. No one will be turned away unsatisfied.

PROHIBITION CLUB.—The club met on Friday evening last at its usual place and transacted its regular business, raised funds to pay all demands, passed a resolution thanking Mr. Samuel Wilson, its president, for the use of his name as a candidate, and adjourned to meet the first Friday evening in December, apparently satisfied with the work accomplished in the campaign. The County Executive Committee met on Saturday night at Elizabeth, in their rooms, and re-organized by electing Mr. Noel S. Parsons, of Cranford, chairman, and Mr. W. S. Ely, of the same place, as secretary, vice U. M. Osborn and Ira Osborn, both resigned. It was resolved to prosecute the work during the coming year with renewed zeal and to that end a committee of five was ordered appointed by the chairman, on organization in every school district; also a committee of three on rules for the government of the committee. The retiring chairman thanked the members for the aid given him in the late campaign and upon the result accomplished, it being a gain of over 300 per cent. in the county. The committee adjourned subject to the call of the chairman.

THE VERY LATEST.—The chestnut bell has had its day, and its spiteful little ring can only be heard in the rural districts, where it is yet a novelty. Like everything else, when the chestnut bell sank into oblivion something had to succeed it, and so a few smart alecks got together and had some cards printed with the following inscription: "I am something of a liar myself." These they pinned to their vests, upon the spot so recently vacated by the chestnut bell, and when a friend started to tell a story, they would throw back the lapel of their coats, and display their signs. It happened that the first man upon whom they spring their substitute for the chestnut bell was one easily convinced of the truth and so he immediately went and had a card printed which read: "I have always heard so." The next time that he met his friends he made it a point to tell the rankest chestnut that he could think of and immediately they all flashed their cards. He in turn showed his hand and as they read the startling answer upon his card, they were no longer joyful but separated to meet no more.

The Grand Lodge of Kentucky Free and Accepted Masons, has passed the following:

WHEREAS, The use of intoxicating liquors as a beverage is the greatest detriment to the growth and prosperity of the fraternity, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the business of saloon-keeping be deemed a Masonic offense, and punishable as other offenses contrary to the rules of the Order.

A clergyman in this State, who was originally a printer, attributed his success in life to the fact that he was led to choose the printing office, rather than the tailor trade, which was his mother's selection, as that was itself a school of instruction in the elementary things of spelling, reading and writing, as well as a place to learn something about the world of mind and religion.

Mr. J. Tench Davis started for his headquarters at Cincinnati, O., on the 7:59 train, from this city last Tuesday evening.

They were then put through the shaping machine which gives them a curve to fit the neck or wrist.

The railroad companies have decided to commence running cheap trains morning and evening, for workingmen, between Elizabeth and New York to New York, commencing next Monday—tickets about one cent a mile. We repeat the hope expressed last week that some of our leading and influential citizens will make an effort to have these trains extended to Rahway.

The citizens of South Amboy have given a practical testimonial of their confidence in George Liming, who shot Labue, the solicitor of Mts. Liming. They have subscribed, in sums ranging from 25 cents to $1, enough to pay the costs of his trial, $325, and L. P. Barbox, one of the jurors who convicted him, paid the $50 fine, and Liming was released. His home is broken up, and he will live with his daughter, while his wife goes to Jersey City.

JACOB STILLES.—Three or four years ago Jake Stoughton, who was employed for a long time at Laing's livery stables, became afflicted with some disease of the legs which incapacitated him for work, and he went to a hospital on Long Island for treatment. Subsequently it was reported that he had died. The surprise of the colored people of this city was, therefore, great on Saturday last when Jake appeared alive and well on our streets, and many of them hesitated to commune with him, thinking it was his ghost.

A woman in Camden claims to have been cured of kidney trouble by faith. After physicians had given her up she sent for a gentleman somewhat noted in the faith cure line. He called and found her lying on her bed, and apparently very near dead. After asking her in regard to her faith, and having received satisfactory her answers as to her belief in the teachings of the Bible, the saving power of God, etc., he prayed with her and then left, assuring her that she would recover. This was early in the day, and by night she was walking around in as good health as need be, and she has not suffered from her affliction since. When seen by a reporter she was apparently in better health and more vigorous than most ladies of her age.

THE COURTS—SENTENCES, ETC.—Saturday was sentence day in the courts. There were more prisoners from Elizabeth, and appeared for a longer time than have cases than have been disposed of. The following were disposed of:

John Markiln, assault, striking man, for striking some one—fined $5; Frank Travers, breaking a window in saloon, 30 days; Robert Hughes, under 16 years, for indecent assault on a little child, to reform school; John Kelly and John McCormick for breaking a boat, being much doubt as to their guilt, sentence was suspended; Edgar McCarter, assaulting a woman, colored, assault, 6 months in state prison; Benjamin Cromwell, assault, fined $5; Kate Dorsey, larceny, fined $10; Chas. Edwards, vagrants, colored, petty larceny, fined $5; Thos. Nally, assault, 60 days, having already been in jail 55 days; Wm. Sayre, for assault, in ejecting an impertinent stranger from his yard, early one morning, sentence suspended; John Martin, interfering with an officer, 10 days, having already been confined in jail 169 days; Frank Ingelline, an Italian ragpickers, larceny, picking up some metal from somebody's premises, which he returned when spoken to about it—sentence suspended.

On Monday James McGlynn and Thos. Brown were found guilty of larceny from Max Fisher, at the fertilizer works; Margaret Driscoll, for assault and battery, was also found guilty, as was Charles F. Courtney, of Westfield, for assaulting officer Sheppe at the depot in that place recently.

The grand jury finished its work for the term on Tuesday and were discharged about half past seven o'clock. Nineteen additional bills were presented, making fifty-one in all. There were also two presentments, one against each of the railroad companies for careless running of trains through the city of Elizabeth.

Among the last batch of indictments were those of a number of saloon keepers and signers of applications of licenses in Elizabeth, for perjury, forgery and misdemeanor.

On Thursday Wm. Furman, the engineer of the train that killed Miss Wyckoff at South Elizabeth, pleaded not guilty to an indictment found against him for manslaughter.

Jacob Wunsler, of Linden, and August Klein, of Union, pleaded not guilty to keeping disorderly houses.

THE CONCERT AT THE 2D PRES. CHURCH.—The grand concert at the 2d Presbyterian church last Thursday evening was largely attended, and was a success every way. The entire programme was very nicely arranged, and the artists acquitted themselves handsomely. Mrs. J. G. Commoss, after rendering the solo "There Sings a Bird on Yonder Tree," was encored and received two large and handsome boquets. Prof. Gruett, of Newark, received a rapturous encore and responded in both parts of the programme. It was wonderful to hear him bring out the harmonics, when imitating the "Mocking Bird." Mr. Jas. Dunn sang the "Blue Bells of Scotland" with excellent effect, and was encored. The rendition of the piano duet by Mrs. Sperry and Miss Fanny Dunham was very fine, although the selection "Rhapsodie Hongroise" No. 2, by Liszt, was a little heavy to be appreciated except by the cultivated ear. Mrs. Ross sang in fine voice, "When the Heart is Young," each note and word being distinctly heard in all parts of the church, and responded to an encore. Von Weber's "Rondo Brillante," a piano solo by Mrs. Sperry, was rendered with such force and grace that the audience gave her a hearty encore, though she did not respond. The baritone solo, "Saved from the Storm," by G. W. Liggett, was very finely rendered. The organ accompaniment, by Prof. Beck, to "The Lost Chord," sang by Mr. Jas. Dunn, was very artistically rendered. Miss Gracie Esterbrook recited in her usually good style "The Creed of the Bells," she was encored and gave "Forty Old Bachelors For Sale," which brought forth loud applause. The "Tyrolese Chorus," by Mrs. Ross, Miss Thompson, Messrs. Dunham and Barnes, was rendered in excellent manner, and was encored. The exercises closed at 10:30 and all left the church well pleased with the evening's entertainment. Prof. F. E. Drake, of Newark, who accompanied Prof. Gruett, showed a perfect mastery of the piano. We must not forget to mention the duet by Mrs. Ross and Mrs. Commoss, which was considered by many the vocal gem of the evening.

EXPOSE OF THAT PRETENDED PUBLIC INVESTIGATION OF THE QUALITIES OF THE BAKING POWDERS.

It is no new thing with the Royal Baking Powder Company to publish in the newspapers reading notice advertisements which have the appearance of emanating from the editor's pen.

Its most recent effort is an article from the Albany "Evening Journal" giving a pretended investigation as if made by the Journal of the qualities of the baking powders. The following from a later issue of the same paper (August 27, 1886) so plainly stamps the whole thing as simply an advertising dodge of huge proportions that we think the public entitled to the benefit of the expose, and accordingly give it below:

"The Journal has printed analyses and reports of various baking powders as reading notices or advertisements. It has not undertaken to say of its own knowledge which is the best powder in the market. Consumers must decide for themselves."

This price of ingenious advertising on the part of the Royal Baking Powder Company may have had its origin in the evident disappointment of the Company with its extravagant but fruitless advertising efforts to beguile the public into believing that the cream of tartar used in other baking powder, contains a large percentage of tartrate of lime, when it is a fact and well known to the commercial world that all the refiners who supply this country with cream of tartar are, and have been for a long time, in a combination under an agreement between them to produce only strictly pure, or ninety-nine per cent., goods.

The cream of tartar used in Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder is refined by a new process which frees it entirely from tartrate of lime and every impurity, and is obtained in the purest crystals and ground in our own factory, the bicarbonate of soda is prepared expressly for us; and to ensure uniform and absolute purity of our baking powder all the ingredients are subjected to searching chemical analyses, and none used unless proved to be perfectly pure.

Appreciating the fact that consumers have a right to know what they are using as food, we have for many years made known to the public all the ingredients of our powder. Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder is made only of strictly pure grape cream of tartar, bicarbonate of soda, and a small portion of flour used as a preservative, and does not contain ammonia, alum, lime, acid phosphates, or any adulteration whatever.

Has the Royal Baking Powder Company, with its much advertising, ever informed the housekeepers of the country all that enters into the composition of its powder? Or has it ever published a word openly in defence of the use of ammonia in baking powder? Information on these points might enable the public to form an intelligent opinion in regard to the merits of this much mooted question of baking powder supremacy, and we would have no misgivings as to the result.

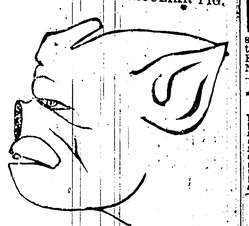
CLEVELAND BROTHERS,
Albany, N. Y.

Several fine photographs 8x10 of F Co., 3d Reg't, by Dorémus, of Paterson, were received by the company, on Monday evening. The picture shown us by Chas. H. Lambert is an excellent one, every detailed outline being perfect. In the foreground are easily recognized several of the prominent members of the company, among whom are Messrs. Morris, Runyon, Hunt, Ross, Lambert, Martin and Pierson. Mr. Hunt reclines in such position that his feet, being nearer the camera, appear somewhat larger than is natural.

The Amaranth Circle, of this city, which was organized two years ago, gave their first sociable of the season at the residence of Mr. H. F. Anderson, on Bryant street, Tuesday evening. A fine supper was served at half past eleven, after which the Circle held a business meeting and elected the following to membership: Mr. S. O. H. Mills, David A. Jewell, Frederick Dunn, Chas. Henry and sister. Prof. Stratemeyer, of Elizabeth, furnished the dancing music.

The next Sociable of the Circle will be held at the residence of Mr. George H. Waters, on William street, Tuesday evening, Nov. 23rd.

POMMEREHNE'S PECULIAR PIG.



The above wood cut by our own artist and engraver is a very fair illustration of a pig, which has been on exhibition at Henry Pommerehne's saloon, on Main street, for several days. The pig is about eight inches long. Its face is remarkably flat which gives it somewhat of a human appearance. Upon the top of the head is a peculiar horn-like protuberance which is well defined in the picture. The creases or wrinkles in the forehead form a second face which is quite marked. Mr. Pommerehne proposes to present this rare and curious specimen of nature to the curator of the Museum in Central Park, New York.

The State-Teachers' Association, which is composed of about seventeen hundred teachers, is arranging for an exhibition of practical school work, to be held at the Normal School Building at Trenton, on December 28th, 29th and 30th. All the schools of the state are expected to contribute specimens of work, embracing mathematics, grammar, composition, spelling, penmanship, drawing, map drawing and miscellaneous work. Wm. H. Barry, of Paterson, formerly of this city, is one of the committee of teachers in charge.

FREE TRADE.

The reduction of internal revenue and the taking off of revenue stamps from Proprietary Medicines, no doubt has largely benefitted the consumers, as well as relieving the burden of home manufacturers. Especially is this the case with Green's August Flower and Boschee's German Syrup, as the reduction of thirty-six cents per dozen, has been added to increase the size of the bottles containing these remedies, thereby giving one-fifty more medicine in the 75 cent size.

The August Flower for Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint, and the German Syrup for Cough and Lung troubles, have perhaps, the largest sale of any medicines in the world. The advantage of increased size of the bottles will be greatly appreciated by the sick and afflicted, in every town and village in civilized countries. Sample bottles for 10 cents remain the same size. nov5-ly

THE NEW QUININE. Kaskine

WHAT THE Physicians SAY ABOUT IT IN Rheumatism, Malaria, Dyspepsia, NERVOUS DEBILITY, Liver, Lung & Kidney Disease.
The eminent and celebrated Dr. Gessner writes: The Kaskine Co.—DEAR SIRS—"The first greatest successes I had with Kaskine were in chills and fever, malaria, nervous debility, rheumatism, dyspepsia, and liver diseases, and I considered that time it was undoubtedly the best medicine ever discovered, but I was even then unfamiliar with its real wonderful powers in curing all the other germ diseases and disorders, particularly where the blood had become diseased or impoverished and the digestion impaired. Strictly speaking, Kaskine is the only blood purifier we have. I use it also very largely with unfailing success in all diseases peculiar to women and children. In over three hundred cases I have cured there has never been the slightest bad effect following its use, and it is far superior to any tonic or nerve medicine ever known to the medical profession." Very truly yours,
L. M. GESSNER, M. D., 330 East 121st st., N. Y.
Prof. W. F. Holcombe, M. D., write: "Kaskine is superior to quinine in its specific power, and never produces the slightest injury to the hearing or constitution."
The U. S. Examining Surgeon, Dr. L. H. White, writes: "Kaskine is the best medicine made."
St. Francis Hospital, N. Y., "Every patient treated with Kaskine has been discharged cured."
Bellevue Hospital, N. Y., "Universally successful."
St. Joseph's Hospital, N. Y.: "Its use is considered indispensable. It acts perfectly."

A MARVELOUS STORY

TOLD IN TWO LETTERS.

FROM THE SON: "28 Cedar St., New York, Oct. 28, 1882.

"Gentleman: My father resides at Glover, Vt. He has been a great sufferer from Scrofula, and the inclosed letter will tell you what a marvelous effect has had in his case. I think his blood must have contained the humor for at least ten years; but it did not show, except in the form of a scrofulous sore on the wrist, until about five years ago. From a few spots which appeared at that time, it gradually spread so as to cover his entire body. I assure you he was terribly afflicted, and an object of pity, when he began using your medicine. Now, there are few men of his age who enjoy as good health as he has. I could easily name fifty persons who would testify to the facts in his case.

Yours truly, W. M. PHILLIPS."

FROM THE FATHER: "It is both a pleasure and a duty for me to state to you the benefit I have derived from the use of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Six months ago I was completely covered with a terrible humor and scrofulous sores. The humor caused an incessant and intolerable itching, and the skin cracked so as to cause the blood to flow in many places whenever I moved. My sufferings were great, and my life a burden. I commenced the use of the SARSAPARILLA in April last, and have used it regularly since that time. My condition began to improve at once. The sores have all healed, and I feel perfectly well in every respect—being now able to do a good day's work, although 73 years of age. Many inquire what has wrought such a cure in my case, and I tell them, as I have here tried to tell you, AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. Glover, Vt., Oct. 21, 1882. Yours gratefully,

HIRAM PHILLIPS."

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA cures Scrofula and all Scrofulous Complaints, Erysipelas, Eczema, Ringworm, Blotches, Sores, Boils, Tumors, and Eruptions of the Skin. It clears the blood of all impurities, aids digestion, stimulates the action of the bowels, and thus restores vitality and strengthens the whole system.

LAWS OF NEW JERSEY.

[BY AUTHORITY.]

CHAPTER CXC.

A Supplement to an act entitled "An act respecting recognizances," approved April 9th, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-six.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the first section of the act entitled "An act respecting recognizances" be and the same is hereby amended so that the same shall read as follows, viz:

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That every recognizance entered into before any court having criminal jurisdiction in this state shall remain in full force and effect until the cause in which said recognizances shall be entered into shall be finally determined or the same discharged by order of the court; provided, however, that every recognizance shall be void and of no effect after four years from the date of the forfeiture thereof.

Passed April 22, 1886.

CHAPTER CXCI.

An Act to authorize the purchase and condemnation of land and the erection of buildings for market purposes in the cities of this state and other places in which market facilities are or may be required for public use and to provide therefor.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That whenever in the judgment of the common council or other governing body of any city additional market facilities are or may be required for public uses, it shall and may be lawful for such council or other governing body to appoint five commissioners, who shall serve without any compensation, to purchase such lands and erect suitable buildings thereon to be used as a public market.

2. And be it enacted, That such council or other governing body may fix a limitation upon the amount of money which the said commissioners may expend in the purchase of such lands and in the erection of such buildings, and may require a report from them before entering into a contract therefor, with a description of lands to be purchased, and plans of buildings to be erected, for approval, and the said commissioners shall in no case proceed in the purchase of such lands or the erection of such buildings until such approval is obtained where the same is required.

3. And be it enacted, That in case it should in any case be found that suitable property cannot be purchased by agreement with the owner or owners or in case the price demanded by such owner or owners is, in the judgment of the commissioners, in any case exorbitant, and more than a fair equivalent therefor, then the said commissioners shall report the same, with a description of the said lands, to the common council or other governing body, and the said council or other governing body may order and direct the condemnation thereof.

4. And be it enacted, That if the said common council or other governing body shall, in any case, direct the condemnation of any lands as provided for in the preceding section, the said commissioners shall forthwith apply to a judge of the circuit court of the county wherein which said city or place is situate for the appointment of three commissioners to make an appraisement of the value of the lands so to be condemned for the purpose aforesaid, and of the damage which any owner or owners of such lands may suffer by reason of the taking thereof.

5. And be it enacted, That the said commissioners appointed by the circuit court, having taken an oath faithfully and impartially to execute the duties of their office, shall forthwith proceed to estimate and determine the fair value of the lands and real estate so to be taken and condemned as aforesaid, and of the damages which the owner or owners thereof will suffer by reason of the taking thereof, first having given at least ten days' notice in writing to the said owner or owners either personally or by leaving the same at his or her place of abode of the time and place when and where they may be heard in relation to the matter; in case any owner be an infant, married woman, non compos mentis, or absent from the city or place where such condemnation proceedings are taken, or be from any cause incapacitated to act in his behalf, then notice of the time and place, and object of said meeting shall be so adjudged or other notice given as the said judge may direct, and said meeting or meetings may be adjourned from time to time, at the discretion of said commissioners, and as soon as they shall have determined upon said valuation, they shall make and sign a certificate thereof, and file the same in the office of the city clerk of such city, or at such other place as the said judge may direct; and immediately upon the payment to said owner or owners of the amount of the said valuation, or in case he or they will not or cannot receive the same, upon deposit of the same in such bank or institution as the said court or judge may direct, the title to and the right of possession of such property shall immediately become vested in such city or place; and any owner so existing him-or-herself aggrieved by the proceedings of said commissioners may appeal therefrom to the supreme court of this state at any time within sixty days after the filing of the said certificate, and the said court shall on the reason order a trial by jury to assess the value of the said property and the said damages, which trial shall be conducted in all respects as in other cases of trial by jury, and the final judgment of the said court upon the verdict rendered thereon in the premises shall be conclusive on all parties as to the said valuation and damages, and the amount already paid or deposited as for said shall be increased or diminished accordingly.

6. And be it enacted, That all titles taken for the purposes mentioned in this act shall be in the name of the city or place in which the lands are purchased, and the buildings erected, by virtue of the provisions of this act.

7. And be it enacted, That the commissioners so to be appointed by the said judge of the circuit court shall receive such compensation for their services as the said judge shall order and direct, and the same shall be paid, as well as all other expenses incident to the condemnation proceedings, from the funds provided, as herein directed, for the purchase of lands and the erection of buildings.

8. And be it enacted, That to pay for the land so purchased or condemned, and for the damages for the taking thereof, and for the cost of such buildings and other expenses connected therewith, the said city or place may, from time to time, issue its temporary loan bonds or certificates of indebtedness, on which shall be indicated the purpose for which they were issued, and the proceeds thereof shall be used only to defray the expenses aforesaid; and upon the final completion of the duties hereby imposed upon the said commissioners, they shall report to the said common council or other governing body their proceeding, and shall make a full and detailed statement of the entire cost of the lands purchased, the buildings erected and of all the expenses incurred by them in the execution of their duties, and the said common council or other governing body, upon the ascertainment of such cost and expenses, are hereby authorized to issue the bonds of such city or place for an amount not to exceed three hundred and fifty thousand dollars, which bonds shall be of such denomination as the said common council or other governing body shall direct and shall be made payable within not more than thirty years nor less than ten years from the date of their issue, and shall bear interest at a rate not exceeding five per centum per annum, and be made payable at the said body may determine, and may be negotiated and sold at a rate not less than their par value; such bonds shall be denominated "market bonds," and the proceeds thereof shall be used to retire the temporary bonds or certificates hereby authorized, and for no other purpose whatever.

9. And be it enacted, That the net revenue from all lands and buildings used for market purposes in every such city or place shall be devoted exclusively to the payment of the interest which may accrue upon the said bonds, and to a sinking fund for their redemption and payment when due, where not otherwise appropriated by existing laws, and shall, where sinking fund commissioners exist in any such city or place, be annually paid over to them for this purpose, and shall be kept separate and apart from the other moneys of such city or place and exclusively devoted to this purpose.

10. And be it enacted, That if after the lapse of five years from the time when said bonds are issued, it shall be ascertained that the said revenues are insufficient in any such city or place to provide a fund sufficient to meet the annual interest upon the said bonds and furnish a sinking fund for their payment and redemption when due, that it shall be the duty of the common council or other governing body of such city or place annually thereafter to place in the tax levy and collect such sums in addition to the revenue aforesaid as will be sufficient to provide a fund to pay such interest and redeem and pay such bonds at their maturity.

11. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Passed April 27, 1886.

MANHOOD

A LECTURE ON THE NATURE, TREATMENT and Radical cure of Seminal Weakness or Spermatorrhœa, Induced by Self-Abuse, Involuntary Emissions, Impotency, Nervous Debility and Impediments to Marriage generally; Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits; Mental and Physical Incapacity, &c.—By ROBERT CULVERWELL, M. D.

The world-renowned author, in this admirable Lecture, proves from his own experience that the awful consequences of self-abuse may be effectually removed without dangerous surgical operations, bougies, instruments, rings or cordials; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

THE OLD MADE NEW.

CATCH ON TO THIS AND SUIT YOURSELF.

In these times of so much business, advertising and sharp competition, when every merchant claims to have the largest stock, the best goods, at the lowest prices, it is hard work for a man to decide where to buy. But speaking for ourselves we will say that if we have given you good satisfaction during the past twenty-five years, we will do so again, and probably this is the best way to reason. We advertise to bring you to our store. After you come here we let our stock of Ready-Made Clothing and our prices do the selling. We do not force an opinion upon you to effect a sale, nor do we argue with you to prove that our judgment is better than your own. In the matter of

Boys' and Children's Clothing,

We say that our new Fall Stock is now on hand. A great many handsome patterns are in stock for the trade of the coming season. Here is one important fact, our prices for the same quality, as can be seen in the large clothing establishments of Newark, are decidedly CHEAPER. We have recently made an addition to our store, which we have fitted up with a magnificent display of fine cloths, from which we make a suit for the most fastidious.
