NOTICE OF SETTLEMENT.—Notice is Hereby Given, That the report of the Auditor to distribute the money of William S. Taylor et. al etc., vs. The Sanitary Rubber Company, has been duly filed in the Union County Clerk's Office and approved and confirmed in all things, by an order made by Hon. Barnet Van Syckle, Judge of the Circuit Court, dated June 18th, 1889, and judgment entered in favor of said plaintiffs and the applying creditors against said defendants for the respective amounts found due to them in the said report, and having sold and disposed of all the property attached and belonging to said defendants, I will make distribution of the proceeds and moneys arising from said sale among the plaintiffs and applying creditors, in proportion to the amount of their claims respectively, first paying all preferred claims and the costs of this suit as reported in above report, upon FRIDAY, THE THIRTY DAY OF JUNE, A. D. 1889, at two o'clock in the afternoon, at my office in the Exchange Building, Rahway, N. J., at which time and place a meeting of said creditors and the applying creditors is called for the purpose of making said distribution, when and where all persons interested may attend.
L. W. LUCEY, Auditor.
Dated Rahway, June 18th, 1889.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE BOARD OF CHOSEN FREEHOLDERS OF THE COUNTY OF UNION.

[OFFICIAL.]

Continued.

ELIZABETH, N. J., June 6, 1889.

To be assessed and collected in the manner and at the times prescribed by the laws for the assessment and collection of taxes for the use of the state, and the laws for the assessment and collection of taxes in the cities of Elizabeth, Plainfield and Rahway, in said county, respectively; and the board hereby direct the assessors of the respective townships and wards in said county to assess the said sum of one hundred and forty thousand dollars on the inhabitants and their estates, agreeable to the law for the time being of money by taxation for the use of the state of New Jersey; and that the said assessors meet at the court house in the city of Elizabeth, on the third Monday in July next, at 10 o'clock A. M., to adjust and ascertain the proportion of said sum to be levied in each township and ward in said county; and that the clerk of the board send a copy of this resolution to each of said assessors.

CHAS. E. REED, Clerk.

Freeholder Roll moved its adoption.

On roll call adopted unanimously.

By Freeholder Vanderbeck:

Resolved, That all the roads heretofore designated and adopted by this board as county roads, be graded, paved with telford, macadamized or otherwise improved with stone as may be set out in the specifications hereafter to be drawn up for a width of sixteen feet running the whole length of each of said roads in the centre thereof, except in such places or sections where, in the opinion of the engineer and the committee on the different roads, may find the same impracticable or necessary to make the same of a less width.

Freeholder Wright moved its adoption.

On roll call adopted unanimously.

By Freeholder Howard:

Resolved, That the bill of Marsh & Ryno, amounting to fifteen dollars, be paid when approved by the county physician.

Freeholder Doty moved its adoption.

On roll call adopted unanimously.

By Freeholder Thompson:

Resolved, That a committee of five be appointed to examine the bridge over the Robinson branch of the Rahway river, near the residence of George Bender, and report to this board at a future meeting the necessity for and probably cost of the same.

On motion of Freeholder Roll adopted unanimously.

The director named the following committee: Freeholders Thompson, Pierson, Kyte, Van Saun, Jones.

By Freeholder Wright:

Resolved, That a committee of five be appointed to report upon the advisability of repairing or rebuilding the St. George's avenue bridge near the six roads in the city of Rahway and also the Meadow avenue bridge.

On motion of Freeholder Jones adopted unanimously.

The director named the following committee: Freeholders Wright, Howard, Houston, Doty, Briant.

By Freeholder Roll:

Resolved, That Mr. F. A. Dunham, heretofore appointed as the engineer of county roads, be and is empowered in order expedite the work of surveying the county roads, to appoint additional engineers not exceeding two to assist him in surveying and getting up the specifications of the various roads adopted as county roads, and also assistants to said engineers not exceeding four.

Freeholder Kleinhans moved its adoption.

On all call adopted unanimously.

By Freeholder Houston:

Resolved, That the committee on Summer street bridge, Elizabeth, be empowered to build a wrought iron draw bridge, at a cost not to exceed $5,000.

Freeholders Donahue moved its adoption.

On roll call adopted unanimously.

By Freeholder Vanderbeck:

Resolved, That the committee on Grant avenue bridge near Cedarus mills, Plainfield, be authorized to proceed building said bridge at a cost not to exceed one thousand dollars to this county.

Freeholder Roll moved its adoption.

On roll call, adopted unimously.

By Freeholder Howard:

Resolved, That when this board adjourns it be to meet on Thursday, June 20, 1889, at 2.30 o'clock P. M.

ELECTRIC BITTERS.

This remedy is becoming so well known and so popular as to need no special mention. All who have used Electric Bitters sing the same song of praise. A purer medicine does not exist, and it is guaranteed to do all that it is claimed. Electric Bitters will cure all diseases of the Liver and Kidneys, will remove Pimples, Boils, Salt Rheum and other affections caused by impure blood. Will drive Malaria from the system and prevent, as well as cure, all Malarial fevers. For cure of Headache, Constipation and Indigestion try Electric Bitters. Entire satisfaction guaranteed, or money refunded. Price 50 cents and $1 per bottle at Brown & Smith's drug store.

"Pat," said a traveler, "why did you make the stone wall around your shanty so thick?" "Why, please your honor, I hear that they have extra high winds in America, so I thought if I built it about as thick as it was high, if it should blow over it would be just as high as it was before, your honor."

TO BE CALLED FOR

By F. W. ROBINSON.

When I had reached the shop, which was down a long passage and a good distance from the parlor, between which and the shop there were more rooms than one, the Flying Fish inn being a rambling old place, I discovered my customer to be a female, a young female and a pretty one, too, for all her pale face and big, blue, staring eyes. I did not know her for one of my neighbors—for any one in Deal, where I knew every one by sight, and I was sure she was a foreigner before she spoke a word. Her dress was very dark, but it was peculiar; her hair was very light, her hat, or bonnet, seemed rather of a queer shape, and there were two funny little crystal crosses in her ears.

"What can I get you, lady?" I asked at last, as she continued to look at me—to regard me in my turn in the light of a curiosity.

Then she spoke in English, but with a foreign accent and in a very low tone.

"You cannot be the man," she said, wondering—"you are younger, taller, different altogether. You do not answer the description; you"——

"What man do you want?"

"I wish to see Mr. Samuel Nangle, of the Flying Fish," she answered.

"This is the Flying Fish, and Mr. Nangle is my uncle."

"Is he alive?"

"O, yes."

"And well?"

"Not well. He has not been well and strong for years; but then he is very old."

"Yes, I know."

I was surprised at the extent of her knowledge, but waited for her to inform me of the object of her visit.

"Is he indoors?"

"Yes."

"Can I see him?"

"Yo—es, I think so," I said hesitatingly, "although it's late in the evening and he is not particularly nice to visitors as a rule."

"He expects me."

"My—my Uncle Samuel—expects you?" I exclaimed.

"Yes, he has been expecting me for some time," was the quiet explanation proffered, "for days, months, years, I dare say. He has been always certain I should come. Why, it was as sure I should call some day as that the sun will rise to-morrow."

For the first time she smiled, and I liked the look of her when she smiled.

"I'll tell my uncle you have come, then," I said.

"Thank you; do."

"Who—who shall I say has called?"

"Bertha Keefeland. He will know the name."

"Indeed!"

"Has he never spoken of it to you?"

"Never."

"That's strange," she remarked. "Has he altered very much of late years?"

"Yes, very much."

"People do. Well, tell him I have come, young man."

I was proceeding in a wondering, dreamlike fashion toward the long, dark passage again, when she called and said:

"Is his memory as good as it used to be? Old people forget; my father did, sadly—very sadly."

For the first time she smiled.

Her face shadowed at some reminiscence, and I said:

"I think his memory's pretty good for most things."

"Still, he may have forgotten," was the thoughtful comment here; "the name may have even passed away altogether from his recollection. He never speaks of me, you say?"

"He does not."

"Perhaps it will be as well to say Casper Keefeland's daughter."

"I'll make a point of doing so."

"And if he's too old, or too ill to see me, I will not worry him," she continued. "Only tell him to let me have the sandal wood box which was left here to be called for."

"To be called for?"

"Yes. Which my father left with him—which he told him I should fetch some day."

"Oh! did he?" I said, completely bewildered now, and wondering at all this and what it meant and what was to follow. I was borne down by grim forebodings, which closed thick and fast about me as I shambled my way along the dark passage to the inn parlor.

CHAPTER II.

Uncle Samuel Nangle was sitting very much in the same position as I had left him, only he had dropped his rum and water from his hands and the glass lay shattered into a hundred pieces on the floor. He was still staring at the picture portraying Grace Darling's heroism, or at a something beyond the picture, very far away, indeed, and which troubled him that night. I should have fancied in another minute that he had had a stroke of something if he had not said to me very plainly, but huskily, as I came into the room:

"What is it, Martin?"

"A visitor."

"A what?"

"A visitor," I repeated. "Somebody who wants to see you, and who has come a long way to see you, I should say," was my reply.

"A long way, is it?" he muttered. "You don't mean from the grave, Martin?"

"Certainly not," I cried; "is that like me?"

"Nothing is like you," he said, slowly and reflectively; "I don't call to mind anybody just now who was ever such a fool as you are."

My uncle was coming round to his old manner now and I was glad of it. His staring fit was over and it had scared me just a little. I had fancied something was going to happen, having been full of fancies all that day.

Uncle Samuel Nangle.

"Well, who is it wants to see me?" he asked, queruloously. "Who's come all of a hurry to ask after my health and to wish me joy of it?"

"It's a young girl."

"Eh?"

"A foreigner—German, without doubt, or Dutch, perhaps."

"Eh?"

"A pretty girl, but very pale."

"Eh? oh, go on. With glass crosses in her ears?"

"Why, yes. But have"——

"And what's her name, Martin?" he asked now, very eagerly.

"Bertha Keefeland!"

"No—no—no—that's a lie. That's a dreadful lie of somebody's," he roared forth suddenly. "I tell you it can't be!"

"Oh, but it is, uncle!" I exclaimed; "and she's come, she says, for the sandal wood box which was left here to be called for."

"There's no sandal wood box!" he screamed, in the same loud key. "There's no Bertha Keefeland, for she has been dead these six years. There's no"——

And then he fell forward, with a horrible screech, face foremost on the floor, and I ran to him and picked him up, and wiped the dirt off his hard, rugged cheeks and forehead, and put him back again in the big chair from which he had pitched out. I was as sorry to see him struck down like that as if I had loved him or he had loved me a little, and I scuttled into the bar again for water, for the help of the young woman, who might run for a doctor for me or mind my uncle while I ran myself. But the shop was empty, and there was no Bertha Keefeland waiting for me to come back with my uncle's answer to her message.

CHAPTER III.

The host of the Flying Fish did not recover from the fright or the malady which had seized him. He was one remove nearer to the end of his time now. I knew as well as possible that he would never want his crutches any more, and that one of these fine days or nights he would be sailing clean away.

He knew it himself, I think, though the doctor had not warned him. The doctor had left it to me, who was not likely to be a good hand at breaking to the old man such news as that, and who did not care to tell him, and thought it was well not to tell him, as it was not likely to do him any good. I did ask him if he would like to see the parson, and he swore at me with such fluency for the suggestion that I thought for a minute or two he was getting rapidly better. But he wound up in a milder fashion.

"Parsons ain't any good to me," he said; "are they?"

"Well, I don't think they are much."

"I always hated parsons. I haven't seen one of my own accord since I was christened. I've kept out of their way."

"Yes, you have."

"I know I have," he added. "I could have told the parson a blessed sight more than he could have ever told me. And, besides, salt water doesn't mix with holy water, does it?"

"I don't know."

"No. You don't know much."

He did not say any more that day. He was very thoughtful at times now, as he had been on the night when he was spoken to. From the day of his last illness to this—a fortnight afterward, nearly—he had never alluded to the girl who had called at the Flying Fish, and whom I had not set eyes on since that stormy night. And yet I believe he was thinking of her a good deal, and of the message she had sent to him by me. Presently I knew he was thinking of her, and could think of nothing else.

One day, and a very long and thoughtful day it was to him, he beckoned me to his bedside with his thick, crooked finger. He had got very hoarse, and there was a difficulty in making out all he said, but I had managed it somehow during the morning and afternoon.

"Martin," he croaked forth, almost like a raven, "I don't fancy I'm quite as well as usual to-night."

"Perhaps it is fancy, uncle?"

"Am I looking as well? I don't want any lies about it!"

"I don't see much difference in you."

"Then I don't suppose there is. You were never much of a liar, Martin. You have been over particular that way, and that's bad for a man who means to stick to business, hard and fast."

"I'm not so sure of that."

"But I am, and that's enough, ain't it?"

"All right," I said, although I knew it was all wrong, and so had begun lying on my own account. But I did not wish the old gentleman to get excited over my argument. "Give him his own way" had been the doctor's orders; "let him say and do what he pleases."

"I know I am not going to get over this, Martin," my uncle said. "That's all square enough; and I've had my things, and don't grumble. But, Martin, where the devil am I going to?"

"For mercy's sake don't go on like this!"

"I didn't reckon on her calling for me or her waiting for me," he muttered. "Fancy her always with me afterward. It's awful!"

"Do you mean"——

"Then I came to a full stop, but he understood me.

"Yes, I mean that girl."

"Bertha Keefeland!"

"Yes, Bertha Keefeland."

"How can she be waiting for you, uncle?"

"Didn't she come two weeks ago?"

"Why, yes."

"She came out of her coffin," he whispered, "and I was waiting for her that night. She had been upon my mind all day. I couldn't get her out of my mind. She was troubling it very much."

"That's all nonsense," I cried. "She was flesh and blood, I'll swear."

He shook his head.

"No, she wasn't," he said; "how could she be?"

I could not reason with him. He was so convinced to the contrary, and I was perplexed and goosefleshy. Certainly Bertha Keefeland had mysteriously disappeared after giving me the message to my uncle, but people are always disappearing and being advertised for, and turning up again. And this might have been a practical joke, only—and then I thought of a sandal wood box, which was up stairs, and had been up stairs for years, on the top of a tall, double chest of drawers belonging to my uncle, and the mystery of it was beyond my fathoming.

But he let in the light upon it presently, and it was a red light, warning him of danger—a light as red as blood.

"She couldn't have been flesh and blood, Martin," he went on slowly; "for, six years ago, when you were away in London once, she came into this house, into that shop down stairs, just as she did a fortnight since, said she was Bertha Keefeland and had called for the box her father had left with me."

"Good gracious!"

"She was tall and thin and pale, with glass crosses in her ears, and she knew very little English and spoke it very badly. Is that the girl?"

"It answers the description," I answered, with a shudder. "Well, she has called again, that's all."

"Yes, she's certainly called again," he repeated grimly.

"Well, then"——

"But," he added, with a look which I shall never forget, and which silenced me at once—a look which comes to me often and often in my sleep still, and gives me awful nightmares—"I killed her on the night she called to see me first, and for three days her body lay behind the big vat in the cellar where the whisky is, until one dark night I took it down to the beach, and the sea carried it away from me, and there was an end of it, I thought. An end! As if there can be an end to things like that—as if she was not to come back some day just as she has done. I feel that's a clean breast of it, Martin, and you're not the man to put a rope round my neck for telling you; not you."

"No. Not I."

I stood and looked at him and wondered if he were raving at the last, for I did not think there were many more hours of life in him, and his senses might have left him first, as they will do sometimes, perhaps out of politeness. Could it be possible, I thought, that my uncle was a murderer, that this was true, and that the Bertha Keefeland of a fortnight since was a spirit from another world? Were there, after all, such things as ghosts to walk the earth and avenge the deeds which made them so? To look upon this agitated, earnest old man was to believe it almost. It seemed so awfully like the truth coming from those thin white lips. And presently I did not even doubt it.

"I don't mind telling you the rest of it, Martin; you'll understand then why I haven't left you any money in my will. It's more than twenty years ago when Casper Keefeland and I were friends first—when he fell sick one day, in this very room, and was afraid he should die before he got back to his native village and the wife and baby he had left behind him there. He traveled a good deal between Russia and England, and always put up at the Flying Fish. The last time I am talking about—when he was ill, that is—he had brought with him a box made of sandal wood, a legacy, he told me, from a rich relation who had died in London that year. Before he left Deal he got the notion into his head that he should die before he reached home, and so he asked me to take care of the box and its contents, being pretty sure his mates would stick to it if he shouldn't live to get off shipboard. For some reason, too, he did not want his wife to know of this at present. 'It'll be a surprise to her some day,' he said, 'and for Bertha. I'll leave it with you to be called for, Sam,' he said; 'it's safe with you as with the Bank of England. Bertha shall come here for it some day, when she grows to be a woman, that's time enough. I don't want for anything now; I may then. I can trust you, Sam, and I can only trust you to keep it safe for her. And, if I should die before I get home, you'll take it to Germany yourself. Say that's a promise.' And I said it was a promise. So it was."

"Well?" I gasped; "go on."

"But Casper did get home, though he was taken worse on the journey. He was never fit for much work again. He was something like I've been of late years, lad. I'd heard—a staring figure head, a stuffed Guy Fawkes, a scarecrow of the cussedest. But he sent me one line, which somebody wrote for him: 'Keep it till called for,' it said; 'till Bertha comes,' and I kept it."

"And she came?"

"Yes. Don't be in a hurry; you're always in such a beastly hurry," he said. "I haven't told you what was in the box."

"Did you know?"

"One night I broke it open."

"Oh!"

"I wasn't particular. I never was over particular," he said; "and I wanted to be sure what Casper was making all this fuss about. And there were diamonds and large gold bits of foreign money, and then more diamonds in the queerest settings. They fetched a lot of money."

"Did you sell them?"

"I was in difficulties," he continued. "I had been tried for smuggling. There were heavy expenses for my defense, and heavier fines to pay, and I wanted money badly. When I wanted money badly I always got it somehow, and Keefeland's jewels came in handy."

"That was dreadful."

"Old Keefeland took no notice, and nobody called for the property. I thought he must have forgotten to tell anybody about it," he went on; "but he had gone off for good without telling wife or child—that he had thought I might as well have the things as anybody else. He was so very fond of me."

"I wonder why that was?" I said.

"You mind your own business, and wonder at what I've got to tell you," growled my uncle. "That'll be quite enough," he added, with a shudder, which lasted so long that I thought he would shudder himself out of the world, and so end himself before his story. But he suddenly rallied, and went on: "One night, though, an old man came to see his father. Like an old man time, as did this fellow, was a wonderful old man. He had been a traveler, and had seen strange sights, and had read books and had learned languages. He was a scholar, and he was a gentleman. He was a good man, too, and he was a clever man. He was a very pretty German girl, I thought.

"Now, about the box," she said, "I don't wish to trouble you concerning it till after your uncle's funeral. I will simply ask you to take extra care of it, now that it is in your sole custody, and not in the good man's up stairs, who has held it in faithful trust for me so long. I may tell you even there are jewels of considerable value in it, and I am very poor. That may interest you, perhaps—for my sake," she added, with a faint little smile.

"To be sure," I answered heartily, "and that it does. But"——

She waited for me to proceed, looking at me anxiously.

"But before his death my uncle spoke of those jewels, and said—whether in his sober senses or out of them, the Lord knows, Miss Keefeland—that—that," I stammered forth, "he had turned the jewels into money."

"Why should he have done that?"

"As a kind of loan, perhaps," I suggested. "His statement was not very clear, and, as there was a ghost mixed up with it, I could not make it out exactly; but the long and short of it is, he has left all of his money, every scrap of it, to you."

"To me!"

"To the next of kin of Casper Keefeland. That is you, I hope?" I asked, nervously; "or the poor old boy has made a pretty mess of it."

"Yes; it is I."

"That's all right. I'm glad."

"But you are his nephew—should he his heir," she exclaimed. "What has he left you?"

"He has not thought of me in any way."

"Oh; that is wrong!"

"No; I think it is right," I answered.

"How can it be?"

"How can anything be?" I said in my desperate bewilderment. "Don't try to make out anything just yet, Miss Keefeland, please. If you had only come before

National Democrat.

RAHWAY, N. J., JUNE 29th, 1889.

Hon. Simon Cameron died at his residence in Lancaster, Pa., on Wednesday evening, in the ninety-first year of his age. He commenced his career as a printer, and became editor, politician and statesman.

Mr. J. T. Hankins says if he is not fit to be Postmaster of Rahway, as some of the young dude Republicans assert then he is not calculated to do any hustling around the polls for that party election days as he demonstrated at the late special election.

We haven't a very excellent opinion of the Democracy of Rahway in the matter of majorities, but we do admire the common sense of the voters in placing such a good Mayor as Judge Hyer back in a position he has honored.—Elizabeth Herald

NEW JERSEY GETS A FULL MISSION.—The office of Minister to Germany, to which Hon. Wm. Walter Phelps has been appointed, is one of the most important of the Diplomatic positions. New Jersey does not often get a full mission, and the the last one held by a Jerseyman was that of Minister to Austria, under Garfield, and that by Mr. Phelps.

O, how the Republicans love the colored voters about election times! But it is only for their votes. When favors are being distributed they don't get a crumb, either officially or otherwise. And the latest tidings are that President Harrison has discharged nearly all the colored servants of the White House. Hawkins, the colored driver of the Presidential carriage during the last two administrations, being last to go.

The large number of independent and conservative Republicans who voted for the Democratic candidate for Mayor at the recent election, because they do not believe in the principles of the spoilsmen of their party, which is to let the city's interest go to the dogs for the sake of getting into power—are not highly pleased with the reputed organ of their party in its denouncing them as the scum and worst elements in the city—for it was their votes that swelled the majority.

DEATH OF MRS. R. B. HAYES.—Lucy, the wife of ex-President Hayes, died at Freemont, Ohio, on Tuesday morning, aged 56 years. Mrs. Hayes was one of the most noble mistresses the White House ever had. Her life was devoted to religion, temperance and philanthropy. During the war she spent a large portion of the time in nursing the sick and wounded soldiers. Mrs. Hayes will be longest remembered by both friends and enemies of temperance as the lady who kept wine from the White House table throughout the administration of her husband as President.

Lewis S. Hyer, Mayor of Rahway and the genial editor of the DEMOCRAT of that place, was re-elected Mayor on Tuesday last. At the regular municipal election early in the Spring, the vote was a tie between the Mayor and his opponent, Mr. Esterbrook, owing to a Prohibition complication, whereas the former defeated the latter on Tuesday by a majority of one hundred. We would like to be able to congratulate Rahway upon securing a Republican Mayor, yet if it must be a Democrat we can yet extend congratulations upon having secured so good a Mayor though a Democrat.—Morris Chronicle (Rep.)

The Connecticut Legislature has at length succeeded in passing a ballot reform law that meets with the approval of both parties and has received the Governor's signature. It provides for official paper, upon which all ballots must be printed uniformly. All ballots must be delivered by the Secretary of State five days prior to the elections, and will be printed by the political organizations under directions from the Secretary's office. Counterfeiting the blank ballots is punishable by a fine of $1,000 or imprisonment not exceeding five years, or both. Secret booths are to be provided, and peddling tickets within one hundred feet of the polls is prohibited. This law is believed to be an improvement on any similar measure adopted by other States.

The Republican spoilsmen of this city, were so dumbfounded at the result of the special election last that all they have been able to "peep out," is "Boodle! boodle!" "The majority was purchased!" etc. What makes them so sore is, they expected to obtain a large corruption fund for the purpose of securing the purchasable element, as is their custom, but, (to use the expression of one of their party who is posted) the expected money furnishers "didn't come up," and hence the voters deposited their ballots as they naturally would without corrupt influences. It is certainly a sad state of affairs in the Republican party if 200 of their voters can be purchased, as has been alleged by some of these spoilsmen.

POOR THINGS!—Some of the local Republican spoilsmen are so rantankerous over their defeat last week that they go so far as to assert that the election was illegal because the patent ballot boxes were not used, and condemn the Common Council and City Clerk because measures were not taken to obtain an order from the court to open the boxes used at the regular election, have the contents taken out, etc., so that the boxes could have been used. It is true the law of 1888 has a proviso of that kind, but the matter was not considered until too near the time of the election to obtain the necessary order—and as the old boxes and even cigar boxes have been used since the existence of the new ballot box law, and the elections declared legal there certainly was no great impropriety in using the old boxes on this occasion, for, we believe they are preferable to the new fangled ones at all times.

An old ministerial friend of the editor, who knows something of the financial history of Rahway, in closing a business letter to him just after the election last week, writes as follows:

"I am glad to hear the result of your municipal election. There was not a little fear that the mischance of the former effort to elect a Mayor, indicated a sad state of public opinion in Rahway. Was it possible that the people had become weary of an intelligent and honest effort to put the city out of the wilderness and bogs where she has suffered for her child ren these years past? It seemed that you had got near the edge of the darkness and uncertainty, with even some light from the clearing just ahead, where there is solid ground to step upon, when many became ready to close their eyes and declare that there was naught but darkness in their way, and to give themselves back to the leadership of those whose witch-fire got them astray. But this election removes our doubt. Your people have not lost their brains. Of course there is no personal congratulation to be offered you except as the result shows that you have the respect and confidence of your fellow townsmen. It is "hard work and no pay." The hardest part of the work in the future as in the past, will be contention with the sorcheads and the blockheads who stand in your way. But courage! You are looking ahead to the light, and the city and her children are following on."

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

Adjourned meeting June 20th. All present. Minutes read, and before the approval of the same Commissioner Silvers stated that at the proper time he should move for a reconsideration of the vote by which the resolution requiring teachers to reside in the city was passed, after which the minutes were approved.

The following applications were read and referred to teachers' committee:

Irving W. Story for principalship of Franklin, and D. B. Corson for principalship of Columbia school; E. A. Wilson, Kate T. Woodruff, Minnie Whitehead, M. M. Putnam, Lizzie K. Grove, Emma Scisco, Ella Hazard, G. T. Underhill, Nellie M. Martin, Clara E. Runyon Lizzie Freeman and Blanche Leonard for positions, and Lillie R. Hayward for a higher position than the one she now holds, should an opening occur. For principalships, J. H. Russell, Rockville Center, L. I., Irving Green, Northville, N. Y., R. F. Messenger, Miller, Pa., P. S. Hulsizer, Perth Amboy, Albert S. Wilson, Newark, Giles A. Geer, Schaghticoke, N. Y., Benj. E. Wooster, Paterson, and E. B. Shallon, East Orange.

The following communications were read and referred to teacher's committee:

From Ella Hazard requesting an increase of salary; from the Union Teacher's Agency, Astor Place, N. Y., from M. E. Marvin, declining to apply for a position as principal if the board intended to enforce the rule recently passed requiring all the teachers to reside in the city; from D. B. Corson notifying the board that he had suspended from Columbia school Frank Conger, George Conger and Frank Brunt, for truency, disobedience and disorder, and on motion of Com. Silvers the action was sustained.

Com. Silvers then moved that Mr. Elsworth, who was present, be allowed the privilege of presenting to the board the advantages of the Ellsworth system of Reversible Writing Books, which was granted, after which Com. Silvers moved that the matter be referred to the committee on books and supplies.

The teachers' report of the examination held in the Third Ward school on the 12th, 13th and 14th of June was read, and on motion of Com. Silvers it was received and ordered on file; also, the examination papers of the scholars were handed in by principal Corson, and on motion of Com. Silvers they were received and ordered on file.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Com. Silvers, of the teacher's committee, reported progress in relation to the matter of establishing a higher class.

Com. Meeks, chairman of the repair committee, reported that it would probably require $1,000 to make the necessary repairs of the several school houses; Com. Baumgartner, of the same committee, coincided with this view.

NEW BUSINESS.

Com. Silvers moved a reconsideration of the resolution requiring the teachers to reside in the city, which brought a general discussion by all the members, and on the call of the ayes and nays the reconsideration was unanimously rejected.

Com. White moved that the superintendent have certificates of scholarship properly engrossed and presented to the graduating scholars at the closing exercises which takes place on the evening of the 27th, at the Rahway Opera House.

The following resolution was passed:

Resolved, That the clerk, under the direction of the Supply Committee, advertise for bids for coal to be used in the schools for the coming year.

Com. Silvers moved that the clerk be directed to ask Council to appropriate for the Board of Education for the ensuing year $6,500, the same as last year. Carried. Adj.

W. C. T. U. PARLOR MEETING.

The ladies of the Women's Christian Union held a very interesting and enjoyable meeting on Thursday evening last, at the residence of Mrs. Samuel Wilson, on Elm avenue, which proved to be a most agreeable innovation of the ordinary class of temperance meetings. Upwards of fifty ladies and gentlemen were present. The exercises consisted of singing by a quartet: Misses Pennoyer and Branson, and Messrs. Geo. Moore and Harper Branson; a piano solo by Mrs. Dr. Westfall, recitation by Mrs. Gage, reading by Miss Lou. Underhill, and an address by Mrs. Dr. Tomlinson, of Plainfield, who was a guest of Mrs. Wilson.

Mrs. Tomlinson is President of the Union Co. W. T. Unions, and is a fine matronly looking lady, and an interesting speaker. Her remarks related principally to the aims and methods of the Union in conducting its forty different branches of work.

Following Mrs. Tomlinson's address brief talks were given by Rev. Mr. Rollinson, Rev. Mr. Hull and others. Allusion was made to the defeated amendments in Pennsylvania and Rhode Island, and the general feeling appeared to be one of determination to press the war against the enemies of our homes with renewed vigor. The sentiment being that these victories were but the "Bull Run" of the anti-saloon war, which would arouse the hosts of those who fight for "God and Home and Humanity," to fight on until a glorious Appomattox victory shall crown their efforts and sacrifices.

The Royal Arcanum lost some members by the recent floods in Pennsylvania, but the order is so strong that it will not be necessary to call even one extra assessment. Many of the injured members have had their homes swept away and their business ruined, but the Arcanum will stand by them until they get on their feet again. There are a number of homeless members with their families, also, their wives and children of those who were lost, now having their expenses paid by the Royal Arcanum. All members in the flooded districts will have their dues and assessments paid by the Supreme Council until January 1st. The Councils all over the United States and Canada have contributed for the relief of the distressed brother and their families, besides which the death claims of $2,000 will be paid on each lost member as soon as the papers are made up.

The Royal Arcanum was organized just twelve years ago last Sunday, its membership is now 100,000 and growing every day. Since its organization it has distributed over $10,000,000 to the beneficiaries of its members. Its prompt and sure relief, its fraternal ties, its honesty of management, its fidelity to its principles, Virtue, Mercy and Charity have given it an honored name everywhere.

FOURTH OF JULY ON THE ALLEGHENIES.—The Pennsylvania Railroad Company, in order to provide an attractive tour for the holiday season of the Fourth, has arranged a grand pleasure tour for the Alleghenies and Oreson on Thursday, June 27th. This tour is fixed at a most opportune date, as every one desires to celebrate the holiday of Independence by some pleasant jaunt. The summer merits of Oreson are too well-known to need more than mention. An additional interest attaches to Cresson on account of its proximity to Conemaugh and Johnstown. Frequent trains run between the points and one has an excellent opportunity of seeing the ruins caused by the late floods. Round-trip tickets, including one day's board at the celebrated Mountain House, good for return trip within ten days will be sold from Rahway at $9.50. The special train under the supervision of the Tourist Agent, will leave Broad Street Station, Philadelphia, at 10.40 a. m. Tickets will be good on any regular train of June 27th arriving at Philadelphia in time to connect with the special. Itineraries may be procured at ticket offices of the company.

The Rev. C. M. Parkman, Rector of the Church of the Holy Comforter, of this city, is the possessor of a library of books numbering in all about 8,000 volumes. A reporter of the DEMOCRAT had the privilege and pleasure of a brief inspection of it, several days ago, and saw many volumes of valuable lore that were exceedingly interesting. Among the ancient ones we noted a copy of Boethuos De Consolatione, in the latin tongue printed at Cologne in 1497. It was in a fine state of preservation, as was also Darley's Death's Doings, an extraordinary book of great value, and Sheridan's own copy of his plays, Aristotle, etc. The Rev. gentleman is also the possessor of a bound volume of the New York Weekly Gazette and Post Boy, beginning with March, 1748. It was edited by James Parker, grandfather of Capt. Jas. Parker, of Perth Amboy. The are items in it that would interest our readers, as they are very unique in phraseology, and many of them concern old-time Rahwegians. Among the New-York city advertisers we noted many of the business cards of the progenitors of the noble "Four Hundred."

To the Editor of the Democrat:

The Advocate's Jeremiah and the discordant notes of its "Observer" on the election last week, if not instructing are very amusing. The subterfuge and inuendos employed to account for defeat, deserve the condemnation of all who deserve fair play and straight-forwardness in public life. If the republican Advocate is to be believed, the wonder is that the candidate got any votes at all. They say that the cry of "Infidel" was raised against him, which not only caused "scores of men" to vote against him, but also caused "the women of several households" to use their influence against him. Thus they attempt to insinuate that the worthy respectable citizens were scared from voting for him. They next attempt to show that "the venal and worthless class," including "the white trash and colored men" were induced to vote against their candidate also. If all this be true, which I do not believe, the Republican party here must be a contemptible lot, and liable to be bought and sold at anybody's bidding. "It's a dirty bird that fouls its own nest," but this appears to me to be the occupation of your contemporary at the corner coal hole. Although a Democrat, I have a much better opinion of the voters of either party, and believe as a class that they vote for whom they consider the best men, and those that they believe will do the most good for the city under the circumstances as they arise from time to time. The present Mayor is an old and tried servant, and there appears no serious or even trivial complaint against him; therefore, he was re-elected on his well-known merits. Mr. Esterbrook, no doubt, is a very estimable gentlemen in every sense of the word (too good a man for a Republican candidate): he is also a comparative stranger, and at least, so far as this city is concerned, an untried man—therefore he did not get elected. Besides he was unfortunately handicapped by having the dubious patronage and support of the Advocate and its satellites. This I contend is a much more reasonable, true and decent excuse for the defeat of the Republican candidate for Mayor than that advanced by its reputed organ and leaders.

"Observer" asks "some plous democrat" to explain how it is that the Second Ward in April gave Esterbrook two majority, and now it gives Hyer forty-two?" If this verdant gentleman will excuse the word "pious" and accept the opinion of a simple Democrat, I will point out to him how it was, and he must accept my authority. The Advocate says, speaking of "bribery," "that it is an evil that both sides are guilty of," but "one thing is certain and true," that "on Tuesday no ballot for Esterbrook was tainted with corruption." So you see, Mr. Observer, that your editor, speaking of this special occasion, has given his word that no bribery was resorted to—hence the difference between the figures on this and the former election, when he insinuates that both sides did it.

We are bound to accept and believe that the editor of the Advocate is filled with knowledge to his finger ends as to the doings of the Republican party, but we are not so certain that he is in possession of what goes on in the opposite party; and therefore, while we have good reason to believe him on the one point, we have an equally good excuse for objecting what he says about his opponents. I hope the explanation is satisfactory, as it ought to be, coming from such a high and reliable source.

A LOOKER ON.

Your contemporary of the coal hole reports a "bloody fracas" between an American and Englishman, on Main street, the other evening, and also states that the American "done up" the Englishman in good style, as usual. Doubtless he thinks it is a credit to his paper, and that it was a creditable exhibition and worthy of publicity, but he ought to have given the truth and not a tissue of falsehoods. There was no quarrel over their respective countries, neither was the Englishman "done up," but if the editor fancies his portege, and likes to stake 25 to 10 that he can have the "bloody fracas" over again, and doubtless with the good style referred to, and the poor Englishman "done up." He could put money in his purse, and what is better, have a little "Sullivan and Kilrain" affair all to himself, which would boom and enliven the Advocate a little, for everybody admits that the poor little thing wants some pap or something else to put life into it a bit. If the paragraph referred to was not published to maintain the empire of swagger, the editor cannot allow this to pass by without notice.

A BYSTANDER.

Come boys, wake up! Fourth of July is near at hand. Get your trumpets, drums and powder all in place for a grand old bang! bang! Can't you bring out the "antiques" in the morning for a ride or walk! Every one will be delighted to see your "distant relatives"—and in making your arrangements do not forget your fans and parasols. UNCLE JIM.

[Deferred from last week.]

A VISIT TO ORANGE.

The Newark District Conference of the A. M. E. church, of New Jersey, met at Orange, on Wednesday, June 12th. The different churches in the district were represented by their respective pastors, stewards, etc., and considerable work was done at the three sessions. Your correspondent being a delegate to the conference, started early Wednesday morning. When I reached Newark I found that I could go to Orange on the steam car in about ten minutes for twelve cents, and in the horse car in about an hour for ten cents. After due deliberation I decided in favor of the horse car, for I soon calculated that where it would cost me a little over a cent per minute one way, I could ride six minutes for a cent the other; therefore, as I always try to get the most I can for the least money, I started direct for the company's office on Market street and rode to Orange. The journey was uninteresting until after I passed Roseville, and then I noticed on both sides of the street that people were draping their houses and stores, flags were flying, and other signs of excitement were evident. Not knowing of any special event, I wondered if it were possible that the citizens of Orange had heard I was coming, and had resolved to honor me as becomes my rank as "Chief whitewasher of the city of Rahway." And when I reached my journey's end I was still more surprised to see a beautiful "arch" erected across the Main street, near the Park hotel; also, a nicely draped grand stand, and citizens in badges, men in military and G. A. R. uniforms, ladies in their holiday attire, etc. In a few seconds I had recalled my past life, and could see nothing that I had done for "Uncle Sam" to be thus honored, and I was satisfied that I was not a dead hero. But I cast this all aside to the winds and determined to accept the inevitable and do credit to Rahway in my response after receiving the anticipated hearty welcome tendered me. In my mind I had got as far in my speech as: "Ladies and gentlemen, it affords"—when I was rudely awakened from my dream by hearing one man tell another that the excitement was over the reunion of the Army of the Potomac, which was to take place at 5 o'clock, and that President Harrison would be there, hence the flags, bunting, etc. As a representative African I know I did discredit to my race, for I could feel the hot blood of fallen pride surging to my head, and I knew my cheeks must be red and my forehead blanched by the sudden blasting of all my hopes. After collecting my senses I remained there long enough to see a lame boy just escape being run over by a passing vehicle, and a little 5 year's old child fall off the grand stand and cut its head; then I went to the conference where I was sent. At 5 o'clock the people began to gather on both sides of Main street to witness the street parade, I therefore had time to examine the arch, but as the daily papers have already described it and the parade, I will simply say that it was a very imposing spectacle President Harrison did not come, but our over genial Gov. Green was there with his staff, and other military commanders. Among the various organizations in line was "our pride," the "Vets" of Elizabeth, with Gen. Drake in command. Among Rahway's representation in this company I saw the faces of Paul Noyes, John Mundrane, Fred. Mufr, and last, but not least, the company's jolly fat quartermaster, Wm. Reeder.

IS CONSUMPTION INCURABLE.

Read the following: Mr. C. H. Morris, Newark, Ark., says: "Was down with Abscess of Lungs, and friends and physicians pronounced me an Incurable Consumptive. Began taking Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and am now on my third bottle, and able to oversee the work on my farm. It is the finest medicine ever made." Jesse Middlewart, Decatur, Ohio, says: "Had it not been for Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption I would have died of Lung Troubles. Was given up by doctors. Am now in best of health." Try it. Samples bottles free at Brown & Smith's drug store.

A RACY TRIAL.

The city hall was crowded on Friday by motley crowd of the curious to listen to a bastardy trial, before Justice Helm. R. Frazee, the complainant being Annie Stacy, of Clark township, and Irving Worth, of Milton, the charge being that he is the father of a child soon to be born to her—the suit being brought by Isaac Terhune, overseer of the poor of Clark township. The following jurors had been empanelled by constable Wright: E. A. Clark, foreman, A. E. Jewell, Jos. T. Mead, F. L. Schuppmann, Albert Ayers, Geo. Conger, E. A. Spence, Albert Lambert, H. B. Bunn, Clarence Martin, Harry Ribby, and S. Head. County attorney Ward appeared for the prosecutor and Thos. H. Shafer for defendant. The latter asked that the testimony of the overseer be overruled because the complaint was not made in writing, which was entertained.

The plaintiff is a very prepossessing and modest blonde, and was neatly attired, and seemed to realize that she was the cynosure of all eyes. She told her story, when put upon the stand, in a straightforward way, notwithstanding a very rigid cross-examination by Mr. Shafer. She said she was employed at Bloodgood's, as was also Worth; she had known him four years, and he had been her only gentleman attendant, and was the cause of her trouble.

The mother of Miss Stacy testified as to her daughter's general good habits, the visiting of Worth at their house and the evident affection of her daughter for him, and of his promise of marriage, after they had sent for him, one evening, and took supper with them. Mr. Stacy, the father testified to the same effect.

Mrs. Mary Hummelson, of Milton, a sister of the complainant, told of their occasional meetings at her house, and that she had overheard a conversation between them in which he was suggesting "doctoring." Mr. Shafer in his cross-examination seemed to be a little puzzled by a phrase that was used by the witness which evidently pleased the boys among the spectators.

Mr. Charles Thompson, foreman of the finishing room at Bloodgood's, where Miss Stacy works, testified that Worth was in the habit of spending the noon hour with her. The cross-examination of this witness was very frank and pointed.

Miss Annie Wilson, of Lewis street, an aunt of the complainant testified that they had occasionally met at her house.

Mr. Shafer gave all the witnesses a very severe cross-examination, but their direct testimony remained unshaken.

Mr Worth, who is a very nice looking young man and was neatly attired, took the stand in his own behalf, and testified in a very cool and composed manner. He said he had known Miss Stacy about four years, first meeting her at the mills, where they worked; he admitted meeting her at noon hours; and his visits to her sisters' but denied admitting his responsibility in this matter at any time. He went to Mr. Stacy's when sent for, and told him he was not guilty, and that Stacy said he would force him to marry her. Did not go home at the time because he "was afraid of the old man's gun"; took her to shows and picnics. On cross-examination he said he was not affectionate to her, but admitted that he "had held her on his lap and kissed her often"; visited at her house and said quite late sometimes; thought considerable of her, but emphatically denied ever being at any improper trysting with her; offered to marry her twice last summer but she said "I wasn't good enough for her," had intended some day to again offer himself; the old man's gun was a shot gun.

Miss Lena VanNess testified to seeing Miss Stacy converse with John McBirney at the mill frequently, as did also Mr. Anderson, and Frank Worth a brother of the defendant, John Fox and Jacob Kimmick testified to having met her with McBirney at dusk going toward her house.

The prosecution produced John Crosby, a reputable, who testified that he and McBirney had met Miss Stacy and Miss Eliza Fish, the evening referred to, near the water works, and the young ladies said they were afraid to go home alone, and requested the witness and McBirney to see them to the gate, which they did.

The case here rested, and Mr. Shafer made an eloquent summing up for the defendant dwelling upon his good character, and appealing to the jury in an emotional manner and saying it was better the Union county jail than a marriage for another's work.

Mr. Ward also spoke very eloquently and alluded to the straightforward manner in which the young lady gave her testimony, which convinced him, as it must the jury, that she was telling the truth.

The jury retired before three o'clock, and after many ballotings and much discussion it was evident that they could not agree, and they so reported to the Justice, who discharged them at 6 o'clock.

FOR A TEN DOLLAR BILL.

The great closing out sale of Spring Suits by Watson & Co., is attracting buyers from all directions, as the elegant garments made by this popular firm are well known, and when they commence their regular mark-down sales they seem to do almost the entire clothing business of the city. Just now their store is like a bee hive, and in their suit department on the second floor extra salesmen have been assigned to take care of the rush; $10, $12 and $18 are their reduced prices for Cheviot, Cassimere, Serge and Fancy Worsted suits, of the most elegant patterns, while whole lines of the most expensive suits, cut from imported goods, have been marked down to $15, 16 and $18, without regard to cost or value. Sample suits may be seen in their windows, but you want to go through their suit department to know how much you can buy for a ten dollar bill at this great mark-down sale of Watson & Co., which is just now the talk of the city.—Newark Press.

We claim Tulip soap to be a strictly pure soap, and is elegantly perfumed. Try a quarter's worth and you will use no other. Save the wrappers.

ANOTHER PUZZLE.—There have been numerous puzzles invented since the "Pigs in Clover" captivated the populace, and about the best one we have seen is one by a former Rahwegian, Mr. John S. Williams, the painter, now residing in Trenton. It partakes of the "Pigs in Clover" style as far as light board foundation, marbles and card board apartments are concerned, but here the similarity ends. There are three circles, with small openings, or doors; the larger circle is at one end and two smaller ones at the other end; twelve marbles are placed in the large circle, six light color and six dark color—and the puzzle is to get all of one color in each of the small circles. Mr. Williams calls it the Eureka Puzzle, but we think a more appropriate name would be "Sheep and Goats." It is certainly more difficult to make the division than it is to "put the pigs in the pen." We hope the inventor will do as well financially as did the "Pigs in Clover" men.

No laundry soap on the market is as highly perfumed as Tulip soap. As a toilet soap, it is far superior to many of the trashy toilet soaps now being sold.

The two-hundredth anniversary of the Stelton Baptist church was celebrated on Thursday of last week. There was a large attendance of Baptist clergymen from various places, and the choir of the Sixth avenue Baptist church, of Brooklyn, conducted the singing. The history of the church was presented by the Rev. J. F. Brown, pastor from 1868 to 1879. Stelton was formerly Piscataway, which was founded in 1666. A band of wandering Baptists who had been tortured and insulted in New Hampshire reached the spot where Stelton now stands, in 1665. In 1665 they built a meeting-house 20 by 30 feet, which has been remodeled into the present structure. The Baptists organized their church in 1689 with six members. The Rev. John Drake was the first pastor, having charge from 1689 to 1739. The church was recognized by the Philadelphia Association in 1707. Most of the Baptist societies in this section are offshoots from that church.

The editorial excursionists from this city departed on the 8:07 train Monday morning, for Watkins Glen, Niagara Falls, etc. The party includes Joseph Wooster, G. W. Gilby, F. A. Reinhardt, F. P. Freeman and their wives, Mrs. L. J. Morgan, Mrs. J. T. Oakley, Mrs. Angelina Jaques, Miss Sadie Melick, Messrs. Garret and Bertram Berry, Dr. C. B. Holmes, Louis Martin, Clinton Gray, and the Editor of the DEMOCRAT, wife and son, with Mrs. T. L. Betts, of Brooklyn, a friend of the family of the latter.

A WELCOME TO THE Y. M. C. A.

On Sunday evening last all paths in Rahway seemed to lead to the 2d Presbyterian church. The Uptown Presbyterian and Methodist as well as the Baptist and 2d M. E. churches all had closed doors, and their congregations thronged to the Main street church to do honor to the lusty young infant institution—the Young Men's Christian Association. Tramp! tramp! tramp! the boys came marching down Main street nearly one hundred of them, and the evil one must have trembled for the safety of his strongholds in Rahway as he gazed into their earnest determined faces and listened to their vigorous tread. Presidents S. D. Mershon and Orator Frank Halliday were in the van, and John R. Morse, with Bert Bogart brought up the rear, and the young men making up the company were of like character and ability.

The sanctuary was crowded to overflowing with the most influential of our citizens. Rev. Dr. Liggett officiated, Rev. Mr. Hull lead in prayer, Rev. Mr. Hayes read the scriptures and the choir and immense congregation sang,

"All hail the power of Jesus name
Let angels prostrate fall."

Dr. Liggett then introduced Mr. Drake, of Newark, chairman of the State Committee of the Y. M. C. A., who spoke earnestly of the association work and its results. He pointed out the fact that, as a rule, in Sunday Schools, fully two-thirds of the pupils are girls, and the same proportion as to sex holds good in the church attendance, whereas on the street corners, in the saloons, and at places of immoral tendencies the boys and men had it all their own way. As a startling fact to illustrate the need of more earnest christian work for young men, he stated that on last Saturday night one of the young men of the association watched the door of one of our saloons for an hour between 8 and 9 p. m. and during that time one hundred and forty seven young men entered. As a contrast, in the largest church in the city the next morning but thirty-five young men were in attendance.

The next speaker was Prof. Wilbur, of Rutger's College, New Brunswick, who pointed out the great work accomplished by the christian young men, in helping to break down denominational barriers and prejudices, stimulating study of the English Bible, and especially stimulating christian work among young men in the colleges. He gave extracts from the diary of the New Brunswick Association for a single week, showing a varied, and wide range of useful work, and urged that from a standpoint of self interest alone, to say nothing of philanthropy, it was money in the pocket of the citizen to tax himself to maintain a comfortable and pleasant resort for youth, free from immoral surroundings as a preventive of crime and vagrancy, rather than to pay taxes to the state for maintaining reform schools, prisons, etc. On the principle of the old adage that "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

Frank Halliday, as one of the young men, then spoke a few words of appreciation for the efforts of the officers and executive board of the association, and gave an earnest exhortation to the members.

The pastors present then gave the movement their hearty approval, and Dr. Liggett introduced Mr. J. G. Withrow the General Secretary of the association, who, with a few earnest words, won the good will of all present.

We feel assured that the society which has received so hearty a public welcome, will receive from our citizens an equally hearty support when their canvass is made for practical evidence of good will to young men.

A peculiar disease among horses, which broke out in Union county and other parts of New Jersey a short time ago, is spreading. The animals are seized with dizziness, and stagger, often falling to the ground. The disease is not identical with what is known as "blind staggers," and is a puzzle to the veterinary surgeons.

Say, what shall we dance?
Shall we bound along, or lightly prance
To music of Italy, Germany, or France?
(Who said that Ryno couldn't dance?)

Mr. Richard Strassburger, editor of the New Brunswick Journal, the leading German paper of that city, paid our city a visit last Saturday evening. Mr. Strassburger, not only wields a pen of might that pleases his fellow citizens, but dexterously draws the bow, that makes the big fiddle say "Do not forget me. Remember the maid of the mill.

Mr. and Mrs. M. T. Gay, of Seminary street, returned from an extended European tour Friday last, on the elegant transatlantic steamship, "City of New York." They visited France, Germany, Scotland, Ireland and Wales, called on U. S. Consul at Belfast, Ireland, (the Hon. George W. Savage, of this city), and were at Paris during the opening of the Worlds Exposition.

The Columbia Drum and Fife Corps gave a dancing social at Rahway Opera House on Saturday evening. There was a large attendance, and those present spent a very pleasant evening. The management are determined to preserve good order at these socials, which will be much appreciated. Prof. Cortelyou's orchestra, from New Brunswick, furnished good music.

The Union County Board of Freeholders is holding such frequent meetings this year that it is impossible for the newspapers to, keep up their official reports with anything like regularity—requiring so much space. The amount of compensation should have been doubled to make it proportionable with the work. We are still two or three meetings behind, we believe.

WILSON-GLANHAM.—Mr. Wm. R. Wilson, the county prosecutor, who sailed for Europe on June 1st, was married on Thursday of last week to Miss Glanham, daughter of a wealthy Londoner. The ceremony took place in St. Peter's church, West End, London. The attachment was formed during Miss Glanham's visit to this country, where she has a number of relatives. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson will return on August 20th.

An unknown Tenton, who was hurrying to catch a train collided with a resident of Campbell street near the station on Saturday evening last. Without wasting any time with the selection of a referee or timekeeper, the pair proceeded to thump each other, go-as-you-please rules. After a minute or two of vigorous slugging, the Tenton remembered that he wanted that train, and vanished in a cloud of dust.

The members of St. Mark's band looked and appeared very natty in their new band caps last Monday afternoon, as they paraded about town prior to holding the annual picnic at Katz's Grove in the evening. The caps are of the naval type, and a broad gold band encircles each one of them. Lamberti the Hatter, furnished them. Under the careful tuition of Father Hoffschneider, the band continually improves.

Messrs. Moses A. Turner and John Jeffries, not wishing to see the 113th anniversary of American independence pass by without some celebration, are around soliciting our citizens this week for funds to defray expenses attendant on the ringing of the church bells, the firing of a salute of one hundred guns, and an evening concert by the Rahway Cornet Band. Give them a lift, and, if the funds will warrant it, let us have the fireworks too.

We last week stated that the $10 prize offered by the A. O. U. W., to the scholar in the public schools receiving the highest percentage in the graduating examination, would be divided, as there were two receiving the same amount. We have learned since that the stipulations made in the offer of the prize was that the average should be at least 95 per cent. 94.5 was the highest, therefore the prize was not won. The examination was much more difficult this year than ever before, being pronounced as fully equal to the ordinary teachers' examination.

Use Dr. Dam's Remedy for the blood.

A new pest has made its appearance in Burlington county, that bids fair to ruin the potato crop. It is a small green worm, about one inch in length, and resembles very much the dread wire worm, but it is a great deal more destructive. It works near the top of the ground and cuts the vine of the potato off close, thus totally destroying it. Nearly every field of potatoes have visible signs of the destructive power of this new pest. The Columbus Grange, Patrons of Husbandry, is investigating the pest in order to ascertain some method for its extermination.

At the sale of the estate of George P. Gordon, dec., which occured last Thursday, at the rooms of Richard Harnett & Co., 73 Liberty street, New York, the following property in this city was purchased by Rahwegians: lot situated on Grand street, Mr. L. Murray Perkins, $1,000; lot on Irving street, formerly occupied by opera house, Mr. F. P. Freeman, $1,625; two lots on Cherry street, Mr. John Farrell, $365 each. The five lots on Elizabeth avenue were sold to Mr. Cornlah, of New York, for $130 each, who also purchased the three lots on Scott avenue, for $445, and the farm outside the city limits for the consideration of $9,050.

One thousand dollars for a better soap than Tulip. For purity and general excellence of its washing qualities, it has no equal. Save the wrappers.

A report was current last Friday that Hackman Joe Stell had so surprised his chestnut horse with a new suit of harness that the nag ran away and upset the carriage in his exuberance. An investigation proved the truthful story to be that the presentation had duly been made, but the old charger took the matter in his usual grave and gentle way, as become a Rahway hack-horse. In the meantime, however, as the case was deemed worthy of the consideration of the muse, our machine poet ground out the following:

"A John from Guinea named Stell,
Gave his old nag some new apparel:
But the foolish beast he
Jumped and capered with glee,
Till he smashed the whole rig all to—pieces."

Tuesday night last, shortly after 8 o'clock, a sudden break in the armature of the dynamo, that gives the lower part of our city light, broke the circuit and put that portion of the city in the dark for the space of two hours. During that time Messrs Mueler and Brady, the electricians at the works, were working like trojans, with tackles, hoisting out the broken armature and replacing it with an extra one, that they always have in readiness in case of emergencies of this nature, though such accidents seldom occur. A bank clerk and a reporter for the DEMOCRAT had hold of the chains, and did what they could to aid these gentlemen, and know whereof they speak when they say it was heavy work. The armature weighed 800 pounds, and the magnet 1,200 pounds.

Will it cure everything. No! Dr. Dam's Remedy cures chronic blood diseases only.

The band of St. Mark's R. C. church gave its second annual picnic at Katz's Garden, St. George's avenue, on Monday evening last. It was a very successful affair. A number of visitors were present from Woodbridge, Amboy, and other places, as well as many Rahwegians. Much interest was taken in the different amusements, the chief of which was dancing to the fine music of Prof. Corrado, of New York. The ice cream and other refreshment counters were largely patronized. All the members of the band worked hard to secure the comfort and pleasure of the guests, everything being under the able direction of their popular pastor, Father Hoffschneider. The band officers are, John Fetter, Treasurer; Jacob Drexler, Secretary; Jacob Kraus, Leader.

Father Hoffschneider went to Hoboken last Tuesday night, and while a niece, whom he had left at home in charge of his residence, had gone down town on an errand, some miscreant broke the panel in a rear door, and gained access. When the young lady returned and found the door open that she had locked a short time before, she became alarmed and went to Mr. John Fetter, on Main street, for assistance. When they returned to the house they found that no robbery had been committed. It is supposed that parties came there with the intent to rob. They were presumably after the funds belonging to St. Mark's Band, that had such a successful picnic the previous evening. Probably the parties had witnessed the departure of Father Hoffschneider and his niece, and considered it an opportune time to get the cash.

Never give up. Try Dr. Dam's Remedy.

At the meeting of the Board of Freeholders last week, the committee appointed to examine the St. George's avenue bridge near the Six Roads, reported that in their opinion the structure was unsafe and not worth repairing, and recommended that a new span be built 43 feet in length, the same not to exceed in cost the sum of $700. Whereupon Freeholder Wright offered a resolution to that effect, which was adopted. There was some discussion in relation to the commencement of the work of macadamizing the county roads. Mr. Howard thought work should be commenced as soon as possible on one or more of the roads, and not wait until all are surveyed and ready, as it would be impossible to properly look after them all at once. It was stated that the plans and specifications on Morris avenue and St. George's avenue were nearly ready, and a resolution was adopted that the engineer have ready at the next meeting the plans and specifications of one or more roads.

A large number of relatives, and the immediate friends of, Miss Annie Miller, the daughter of Andrew Miller, Esq., of Union street, assembled at the parental home last Wednesday evening, at 8 o'clock, to witness the ceremony that united Miss Miller and Mr. Charles A. Cowin, son of the Rev. J. G. Cowin. The bride was neatly attired in white silk and lace, and wore orange blossoms, and appeared very beautiful. The groom was neatly attired in a black dress suit. The bridesmaid was Miss Mattie Miller, sister of the bride, and the groom's best man, was Mr. Arthur Opdyke, of the New Jersey Tribune. The happy couple were the recipients of numerous congratulations and useful presents. A supper was served. Miss Miller, was a teacher in the primary department of the Franklin School, and among the guests were the principal Mr. J. W. Story and an number of other teachers. Among those present we noted the genial grandparents of the bride. Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Swain. Mr. and Mrs. Cowin, will in future reside at Newark.

One of the cars attached to an oil train on the Pennsylvania Railroad sprang a leak Tuesday night when passing the South Elizabeth station, and before the leak could be stopped over 6,000 gallons of petroleum escaped.

A Coroner's jury called to investigate the latest death on the railroad in New Brunswick, closed its labors Tuesday. Half the jury censured the railroad, half said the dead man himself was to blame, all censured the Common Council for allowing trains to run at a rapid rate through the city, and the Coroner censured those who gave the first verdict as contrary to evidence.

LOCAL BASE BALL NOTES.

REPORTED BY J. M. AITKEN.

THE HACKETT CARHART COMBINATION AGAIN DEFEATED.

The crack dry goods nine of New York, which represents the firm of Hackett, Carhart & Co., made its second appearance of the season on the Milton avenue grounds, on Saturday last. After the game of a month ago, in which they were defeated, their manager expressed his determination to bring out a team strong enough to win next time, but he will have to bring out one much better than that he produced on Saturday, if he desires to win a game from the Rahway aggregation. The veteran Eddie Kennedy, of the old-time champion Metropolitans, was in left field, and Clinton of the same organization was in center. There was also a new battery in the points. Fricken, who was in the box, pitched for a team called the Black Diamonds when they exhibited their inability to play ball on the uptown grounds last season. He had the same contortion at style of delivery as he had then, which, if it is a tiresome to the performer as to the spectators, must be the reason of his thin and wearied-looking countenance. He pitched good ball, though, but his support was at times of the rankest quality. Hess caught well, but was handicapped by an injured knee, the result of a foul tip which struck him in the second inning. Diven, usually a very reliable player, was away off in his work, and Carmichael and Cantlon were not any better.

The surprise of the day came when Carsey stepped into the pitcher's box for the home team. So much influence was brought to bear on the local "board of managers," that they consented to Gregg's pitching for his shop team in Newark, in a game on which considerable money was staked. Carsey was a puzzle to the Hacketts, striking out nine, and his pitching all through was fully equal to Gregg's against the same club. Jones caught the best game ever seen on the grounds. He had only one passed ball, which was a third strike, and unfortunately spoiled a perfect record, only one base was stolen on him, he threw splendidly, and batted hard and scientifically. Considering that he had never supported Carsey before, his performance was of the highest class. Martin put up a great game, leading the team in batting and base running; and Charlie Brown's field work was equal to anything ever seen in Rahway. He made a stop and throw in the eighth that was greeted with loud and deserved applause. Hall distinguished himself by making a splendid running catch in the fifth, and Stevenson took everything that came his way, in his best style. Weigand's field work was perfect, and he performed his duties as captain in a praiseworthy way. Murphy and McMahon were in nowise behind the others in good work. Taken altogether, the game put up by the home team would have reflected credit on professionals.

The umpiring of Johnson was decidedly "off." The two runs scored by the Hacketts were given them on an incorrect decision in the eighth. With men on first and second, Fricken hit to Brown, who touched the runner from first in a manner that left no doubt that he was out. But Johnson said he was not looking in that direction and declared the man safe, amid a storm of hisses. If the decision had been properly given, the Hacketts would have been shut out without a run, as the next batter put up a fly to Martin.

After the visitors' mascot had danced a jig on the home plate, Brown opened the game by striking out. Kennedy gathered in McMahon's fly. Stevenson was sent to first on balls, and Carsey ended the inning on his grounder to Fricken. For the Hacketts, Kennedy took first on balls and tried to steal second, but Jones sent the ball to Brown like a shot and Eddie resumed his place on the bench. Carmichael and Clinton were victims to Carsey's curves.

Weigand was disposed of in the second by Fricken and Diven; Martin made the first base hit of the game and immediately stole second, but was caught trying to reach third in the same way. Murphy struck out. The Hacketts were disposed of on good catches by Brown and Martin, and a neat assist from Stevenson to first.

Jones opened the third with a hummer to left center for two bags, and a passed ball and a wild pitch let him cross the plate with the first run. Errors by Carmichael and Fricken allowed Hall and Brown to get bases, but the next three men put up flies which the fielders intercepted as they returned to earth. The Hacketts could do nothing toward tieing the score, owing to excellent fielding by Weigand, Stevenson and Martin.

Weigand opened the fourth by weakly striking out. Martin bunted the ball in front of the plate, and was called out for it's striking him when he started for first. Barry made a fine running catch of Murphy's fly. For the Hacketts, Kennedy was outwitted by Carsey. Carmichael made the first base hit for his side, but fell a victim to Jones' fine throw when he tried to purloin second. Clinton also hit safely, but was forced at second on Cantlon's grounder to Brown.

Jones opened the fifth with a bunt that tickled the crowd, and beat the ball to first. Then the Hacketts went to pieces. Barry, Carmichael and Cantlon made hard hits and a wild pitch, two passed balls, a base on balls to Hall, sacrifices by Brown and Stevenson, and a cracking hit by McMahon that Fricken wisely let go past, let in three runs. The Hacketts were treated to another goose egg.

Martin opened the sixth with his second base hit and stole second, and then a succession of ragged errors helped the home team to increase their score by four runs. The dry-goods men were retired with a cypher, the feature being a fine throw to second by Jones, retiring Kennedy for the second time in attempting to steal.

The seventh was short, the best feature being some sharp base-running by Martin. Brown gave an exhibition of the same kind of work in the eighth, stealing second and third. Then it was that the Hacketts made their only runs. Jones dropped Nugent's third strike, and hits by Hess and Fricken, together with that before mentioned surprising decision, filled the bases. Carmichael's two-bagger to left brought in two runs.

Martin scored the ninth run for his side in the ninth on a base on balls, an error by Diven, and Jones' sacrifice. Diven got to first for the visitors on Martin's fumble, but the other batters were easily disposed of. Here is the full score:

BASE HITS.

The board of trustees has appointed Wm. J. Brown assistant manager. The selection is a good one.

Gregg's shop team for which he pitched on Saturday last was defeated, 7 to 4. The opposing nine was Murray's Giants, also of Newark. Gregg pitched well, but had poor support.

A game will be played on the morning of July 4, on the athletic grounds, between a nine of the Y. M. C. A. members and a nine from Union Council, Jr. O. U. A. M. The diamond presented a very neat appearance on Saturday, the sod having been taken off. If it was sprinkled lightly an hour or two before a game, the spectators and players might be saved the clouds of dust that are raised by the wind.

Last Saturday's attendance was 1,016, of which nearly 400 presented storm checks issued the previous week. The trustees have adopted a rule that no storm checks shall be issued or money refunded after the game is called, and a notice to this effect is posted at the gate.

The Bergen Point club has been playing good ball lately, and will make a big effort to win next Saturday's game. Look out for a large attendance and exciting game, if the weather clerk condescends to smile on us.

Stacy, the photographer, has pictures for sale of the doctors' and lawyers' teams, taken after their game last week. Fred. Schuppman gave half of his refreshment receipts on that date to the Johnstown fund.

Gregg will be in the box on Saturday.

Martin won the bat offered as a prize by the Columbia Fife and Drum Corps for the best general average in last Saturday's game. His percentage, reckoning base hits, sacrifice hits, fielding, and base-running, was .441. Jones was second, with .380. The corps expected to have the bat on exhibition this week, but the manufacturers has not been able to finish it yet.

The Metropolitans of New York will play the Rahways on the Milton avenue grounds on the afternoon of Thursday, July 11th.

PHUNNY GRAPHS.

THE MILLER'S WOOING.

"Love me little, love me long,"
Sang the dusty miller
To his wheat art, and his song
Did a maize and thrill her.

"Did me barley hope; oh, give
Me one grain of comfort;
I would eat on thee and live,
Holding on to some fort.

"In you rye's now love-looks shine,
There lies cereal pleasure,
Oh! homity joys are mine,
Filling up my measure."

Came the maiden's corn-full laugh
At the miller's fawning:
"You can't winnow girl with chaff—
Sir! to you, good morning."

SUNDAY-SCHOOL LESSON.

REVIEW OF THE QUARTER.

LESSON XIII, SECOND QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, JUNE 30.

Importance of the Lessons Here Reviewed. Alternative Possibilities of Happiness or Misery—Condition and Population of Palestine—Roman Law.

The lessons for the second quarter of this year deal with the later teachings and most momentous prophecy of Christ—that concerning the destruction of the Temple, the end of the world and His second coming—and with the last scenes of his life, and the thrilling incidents attendant on his resurrection.

In all literature nothing is recorded that will compare for one moment in interest with these events. The statements are so important that, if true, all other truths are by comparison unimportant; if false, all other falsehoods are by comparison harmless and insignificant. If we could believe that the writers of the New Testament and their immediate successors had fabricated this impressive narrative we should at once be driven to the conclusion that, far beyond all men that ever lived, they discovered the art of making a falsehood far more vital in its spirit and more powerful in its effects than truth, for all the admitted truths recorded in profane history have had less effect on the subsequent course of the world, and today have less effect upon the lives and consciences of men than this simple narrative. We should, in adopting that theory, be compelled to the utterly absurd conclusion that a little band of Jews, most of them ignorant and nearly all poor, had, with most marvelous ingenuity, with a skill in fiction surpassing all the masters in that art, fabricated a story which revolutionized the civilized world, forged a theology which survived all forms of government, and announced a delusion which has fired the hearts of hundreds of millions of people and led them to despise danger and welcome death. Such a theory is too preposterous for discussion.

On the other hand, admit the truth of this narration and what awful conceptions at once rise to impress the mind: God, eternity, sin, moral accountability, retribution and liability to eternal woe, then an incarnated Saviour, free salvation, redemption, resurrection, eternal happiness. The bare possibility of such alternative results should, even on the lowest principles of self love, awaken every man to earnest inquiry. That there are points in the prophecy not yet determined and statements in the history not fully understood should not weigh for one moment against the awful importance of what is clear. The teachings of each lesson have been noted in their turn; but it may be well to set forth a few facts in history and language which aid in making clear the meaning of the Gospel history.

First, it is to be noted that the four gospels were written in the Greek language, though there is evidence that Matthew first composed his in Hebrew, and that they were written after the Christians had become sufficiently numerous to create a demand for a complete record, each gospel being devised to meet the needs of a special class. These classes arose as follows: The Jews had lost the Hebrew language as a popular speech, and at the time of Christ spoke the Syro-Chaldaic; the country was ruled by the Romans, so the language of the laws was Latin, while the scholars of Palestine and adjoining countries wrote in Greek. The Romans had conquered all the civilized world west of Persia, including Greece, Egypt and Asia Minor, where the conquests of Alexander the Great had made Greek a common vehicle of speech and writing. The Jews retained Hebrew as their sacred language. Hence we see that the inscription over the head of Christ upon the cross was in the Hebrew and Greek and Latin, to be read by the priests and the people in Jerusalem who were not Jews as well as the residents.

Thus, too, those evangelists who wrote for Gentiles often add the interpretation of a word giving its name as the Jews had it in Hebrew and then the Greek equivalent, which their readers understood. Golgotha in Hebrew was Calvaria in Latin. Mark, Luke and Paul were Greek names, though borne by Jews. Simon, Levi, etc., were Hebrew names, while in several cases the writer gives the name one was known by in both languages, whether a totally different name or merely the same name translated. Simon is Hebrew; Peter is Greek, from "petros," a rock. As might be expected from their age, nearly all the towns retained their old Hebrew names, as Nazareth, Bethlehem, Capernaum; but towns recently built had Latin names, as Cæsarea, Philippi.

The government was in like manner composite. It was the practice of the Romans to slaughter without mercy till a country was conquered, then grant universal amnesty, take the leading men of the conquered country into the Roman service, interfere not at all with religion and as little as possible with local customs as long as government was respected and the taxes paid. The Roman governors appointed for the conquered countries were not only instructed, but it was obviously their best policy, to be considerate of local prejudices, and they often yielded to what they considered folly or injustice because they "feared a sedition of the people." Pilate, whose office included the functions of local governor and judge advocate, repeatedly interceded for Jesus and declared that he "found no fault in the man" nevertheless he gave Him up to the Jewish council, and they condemned Him under Jewish law.

The interlock of local and general law was very similar to that in British India and the territories belonging to the United States: For all offenses against the ordinary law the people retained their old courts and privileges, but if the accused was a Roman citizen or was charged with treason to Rome, he had to go before the higher court. Pilate declared that Jesus had done nothing that Romans cared to punish, and so to the rest he was willing to please the Jews; but St. Paul inherited Roman citizenship from his father, so the local authorities "durst not leave him bound," nor could he be put to death till he had had his appeal to Rome. Even when the inferior courts condemned the Romans often executed the sentence, as in the case of Jesus; crucifixion was a Roman method, as that of the Jews would have been by stoning. Despite Pilate's anxiety to please the influential Jews his troubles constantly increased (for they were restive under Roman rule), and he finally ordered a massacre in Samaria, for which he was recalled to Rome. He was found guilty and banished to Vienne, in Gaul (France), where he died nine years after the crucifixion. His enemies in Rome averred that he committed suicide in consequence of his disgrace, and there is an old tradition that he sank into a hopeless melancholy, lived alone in a hut on Mt. Pilatus, and finally drowned himself in the lake there.

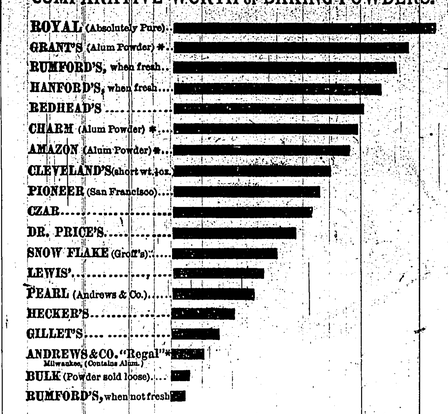
COMPARATIVE WORTH OF BAKING POWDERS.



REPORTS OF GOVERNMENT CHEMISTS

As to Purity and Wholesomeness of the Royal Baking Powder.

"I have tested a package of Royal Baking Powder, which I purchased in the open market, and find it composed of pure and wholesome ingredients. It is a cream of tartar powder of a high degree of merit, and does not contain either alum or phosphates, or other injurious substances. E. G. LOYE, Ph.D."

"It is a scientific fact that the Royal Baking Powder is absolutely pure. "H. A. MOTT, Ph.D."

"I have examined a package of Royal Baking Powder, purchased by myself in the market. I find it entirely free from alum, term alba, or any other injurious substance. HENRY MORTON, Ph.D., President of Stevens Institute of Technology."

"I have analyzed a package of Royal Baking Powder. The materials of which it is composed are pure and wholesome. S. DANA HAYES, State Assayer, Mass."

The Royal Baking Powder received the highest award over all competitors at the Vienna World's Exposition, 1873; at the Centennial, Philadelphia, 1876; at the American Institute, New York, and at State Fairs throughout the country.

No other article of human food has ever received such high, emphatic, and universal endorsement from eminent chemists, physicians, scientists, and Boards of Health all over the world.

NOTE—The above DIAGRAM illustrates the comparative worth of various Baking Powders, as shown by Chemical Analysis and experiments made by Prof. Schedler. A pound can of each powder was taken, the total leavening power or volume in each can calculated, the result being as indicated. This practical test for worth by Prof. Schedler only proves what every observant consumer of the Royal Baking Powder knows by practical experience, that, while it costs a few cents per pound more than ordinary kinds, it is far more economical, and, besides, affords the advantage of better work. A single trial of the Royal Baking Powder will convince any fair minded person of these facts.

* While the diagram shows some of the alum powders to be of a higher degree of strength than other powders ranked below them, it is not to be taken as indicating that they have any value. All alum powders, no matter how high their strength, are to be avoided as dangerous.

BELFORD'S MAGAZINE.

DONN PIATT, EDITOR.

A Complete Long Novel in Each Number.

The November number of BELFORD'S MAGAZINE completes its first volume.

The discussion in its pages of the important political and economic questions of the day, and the fearless, able and independent manner in which they have been presented, combined with literary merit of the highest order, have already placed BELFORD'S MAGAZINE in the front rank of popular monthlies.

For the season of 1889 the present popular feature—a complete novel by well-known authors, together with shorter stories and sketches by popular writers, will be continued. Both Reviews will also continue to be an interesting and instructive feature of the Magazine.

The publishers will spare no expense to make it in every way a welcome and looked for visitor in every home.

SUBSCRIBERS NOW will get the benefit of the reduction on the first volume. Sample copies sent to any address. For sale at all book stores and news stands.

☞ No more suitable present for lady or gentleman than a year's subscription to "Belford's Magazine." $2.50 per year, 25 cents a number.

Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets.

The Original LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS. ALWAYS ASK FOR DR. PIERCE'S PELLETS, OR LITTLE SUGAR-COATED PILLS.

"Being entirely vegetable, they operate without disturbance to the system, diet, or occupation. Put up in glass vials, hermetically sealed. Always fresh and reliable. As a laxative, alterative, or purgative, these little Pellets give the most perfect satisfaction.

SICK HEADACHE,

Bilious Headache, Dizziness, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the stomach and bowels, are promptly relieved and permanently cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets. In explanation of the remedial power of these Pellets over so great a variety of diseases, it may truthfully be said that their action upon the system is universal, not a gland or tissue escaping their sanative influence. Sold by druggists, 25 cents a vial. Manufactured at the Chemical Laboratory of WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Buffalo, N. Y.

$500 REWARD

is offered by the manufacturers of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, for a case of Chronic Nasal Catarrh which they cannot cure.

SYMPTOMS OF CATARRH.—Dull, heavy headache, obstruction of the nasal passages, discharges falling from the head into the throat, sometimes profuse, watery, and acrid, at others, thick, tenacious, mucous, purulent, bloody and putrid; the eyes are weak, watery, and inflamed; there is ringing in the ears, deafness, hacking or coughing to clear the throat, expectoration of offensive matter, together with scabs from ulcers; the voice is changed and has a nasal twang; the breath is offensive; smell and taste are impaired; there is a sensation of dizziness, with mental depression, a hacking cough and general debility. Only a few of the above-named symptoms are likely to be present in any one case. Thousands of cases annually, without manifesting half of the above symptoms, result in consumption, and end in the grave. No disease is so common, more deceptive and dangerous, or less understood by physicians.

By its mild, soothing, and healing properties, Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy cures the worst cases of Catarrh, "cold in the head," Coryza, and Catarrhal Headache.

Sold by druggists everywhere; 50 cents.

"Untold Agony from Catarrh."
