"Oh, no darling, you must not—you must not speak of leaving me. We have always been together. We must never be separated—never!" said Morag excitedly.

"It will be a fight to keep—and be by—together some," remarked Elsie calmly. "We must eat, and even dry bread costs something. I saw an advertisement in today's paper, and I answered it. A lady, in—nothing matter! it says; but if it were to suit you, I think we could get, if they paid me enough."

"No, Elsie, no! You must not. I shall not let you. I'll sing, I'll work, anything rather than that. There must be some way for us, if we could only find it."

A SEVERE ARRAIGNMENT.

A prominent physician recently met a Presbyterian clergyman in the street and in the course of the conversation remarked that, to him, it seemed as if the old virtues of honor and integrity had almost died out from the race. "I have formed a very poor opinion of human nature," said the physician. He based his opinions on an experience of ingratitude and dishonesty in many of his former patients, which he described, and expressed a belief that a large proportion of mankind would refuse to pay any honest debt if they could do so without exposure to disgrace, or to the penalty of the law.

It is to be feared that the standard of integrity in society is lamentably low. The extravagant habits of the times make money a necessity to such as conform to them and honest debts largely go unpaid that the debtors may retain their money for purposes of self-indulgence. But back of this is the laxity pervading the morals of men in public life; the legalized robbery, the official plundering and the shameless distribution of public money for personal enrichment which is practiced by men prominent in official positions.

These things, which have gone on almost unrebuked for half a generation, have had their effect in lowering the general tone of morals in money matters, and it is high time, if the standard is ever to be raised to what it was in our fathers' time, that punishment should be visited on every man who wrongs another, that his own life may be made easier by the fruits of his dishonesty, beginning with those public plunderers whose crimes are already known.

What some of those men are has just been told in a pen picture drawn by Attorney General Brewster, in a communication to the President relative to the Star-Route prosecutions. We do not remember ever before to have read so terrible an arraignment of any public men in our country as is contained in the following extract from Mr. Brewster's letter. He says, speaking of Brady, Dorsey, etc:—

"They had projected, under color of official power and under color of official authority, a systematic plan of deliberate robbery of the public treasury. To carry out that plan they had had their hands upon a fund dedicated by law to a great public service, a service that is conspicuously one of the fruits and causes of our civilization, our social comfort, our commercial prosperity, our national growth. Millions of that money they perverted to their own private gain, and divided it for their own personal purposes. It was a conceived act of infamous conspiracy, and as such deserves the severest punishment the law can inflict. Such men are traitors to social and official duty, and they are public enemies, against whom the authority of the law must be exerted without hesitation or reluctance. The higher their past positions, the greater their sin, the sterner must be their punishment. I desire to call your attention to the fact that the officers of the law, and those who have directly been aiding me in the discharge of my duty in this business, have been from the first encircled with snares, pitfalls and every species of vile device that could be invented to harm them, hinder their usefulness, and prevent the administration of justice. Some portions of this community who surround these defendants, know no allegiance to anyone but this band of robbers, and render no service to anyone but these evil employers. From motives of gain or other corrupt considerations they are saturated with affinities for these bad men, and they have contributed, by every means in their power, at the bidding of their masters, to obstruct public justice and to defame its officers, with the hope of securing the acquittal and escape of the vipers of a band of organized scoundrels that ever existed since the commencement of the Government."

If the Star route conspirators and their sympathizers now in office were men of ordinary sensibility they would writhe under such a scourging. To decent men no physical suffering the law could inflict would be equal to the shame of being pilloried thus before their countrymen. But to these men, enriched by a course of crime, in which conscience has grown callous and manhood has been lost, the only punishment that would be seriously felt is one which will make them exchange the luxury of ill gotten wealth for the bare walls of the felon's cell, with the striped garb and cropped hair of the convict. It will be a triumph of justice and a step toward a better state of morals in private as well as public life, if the "band of organized scoundrels," of which Brady is chief, should receive what Mr. Brewster declares to be their desert,—"The severest punishment the law can inflict."

THANKSGIVING DAY.

This old festival day of the Pilgrim Fathers which comes again to-morrow, will be welcomed by all classes as a pleasant visitor. Devout and thoughtful persons will employ it in its original design, as a day for reviving the mercies of the year and for rendering special thanks to the Author of all blessings. The less thoughtful will make the day one of rest and recreation, a pleasant interlude in the rush and worry of business toils and cares, and in either use of the day it will be a benefit, for none, we suppose can entirely lose sight of the fact that whether used as a day for worship, as a day of family reunions, or as a day of recreative sports, it is the Nation's day of thanksgiving to God for the bounties which have crowned the year.

Perhaps in the quiet hours of reflection to-morrow some may be tempted to question if they can honestly join in the thanks to be publicly given. Their lives have been hard and rugged. Blessings which enrich thousands of other men have not brightened their way. Some the day will find on beds of sickness; to others its coming will bring no respite from fears and cares in regard to the needs of the long winter, the first snow of which now mantles the ground. Yet even for such it would be wise on this day to recall the counsel of the Great Teacher: "Take no thought for the morrow; the morrow will take thought for the things of itself." There is much in every life for which to be thankful if men would but seek out the good they possess as readily as they discover the evils of their lot. No life is free from many discomforts, anxieties and trials; sorrows come to all without distinction of rank or of possessions, and sometimes the man most envied by others may be the one who, in secret, bears the heaviest burdens. Every life possesses also its own advantages, and where there is shelter food and raiment sufficient for life's real needs, there, with a virtuous life and love in the home, are enough to furnish occasion for thank-giving.

We once met, in a Military hospital, an old soldier who had lost both eyes. In two different battles he had been shot, first in one then in the other eye. At the time we write of he was in the hospital recovering from the last wound, which had left him totally blind. Yet he was the most cheerful of all the patients there. While others moaned over comparatively trifling wounds, or complained of everything about them, in their weariness of hospital life, the merry laugh of this old soldier would be heard ringing through the ward, or by his cheerful words he would be found encouraging others. One day a lady visitor on being introduced to him began commiserating his sad condition. It was so hard, she said, that he should lose both eyes! With a sunny smile on his bronzed countenance, the soldier lifted his vacant sockets to her face, saying: "Madam I am thankful it is no worse; it might have been my head." The lady's pity was not needed by the soldier; he was thinking of what he enjoyed, not of what he had lost.

Should all carry the philosophy of this soldier into the affairs of life, a new brightness would fall on many a path. The great Author of our being gives so much to be enjoyed that if the mind is fixed on what is possessed rather than on what may be lacked, every day would be one of grateful thanks, and the annual festival might be honestly kept by us each as a day of thanksgiving and praise."

A CHILD WITHOUT A SKULL.—A remarkable freak of nature arrived in this city yesterday in the way of a child which has managed to live for seventeen months without the bony "dome of thought" which is regarded as essential to continued existence. Moreover, the child seems to have no use for a brain, if the eyes may be believed, for in the absence of a skull, the head is translucent and almost transparent, while by the aid of a lamp properly held it may be perceived that the brain cavity is filled with a colorless fluid. Nothing exists in this seam that can be perceived. The head is larger than the body, the increase in size being almost entirely above the temples, and measures 27 inches around. The lower face is perfect and the child would be pretty but for the monstrous development. The rapid growth of the head has drawn the skin until the eyelids will not close and the eyebrows are pulled up an inch above the normal position. When an Enquirer reporter visited the child yesterday it was asleep and its mother would not allow it to be awakened for experiments. A rather dim coal oil lamp was placed behind the monstrous head and gleamed through it as though the skin formed the only obstacle to the light.

The child has every appearance, except in the color of the skin, of good health. It is fully developed, is very plump, and is said to be strong, while it has a good appetite. In all its habits it is regular and like any other child. That it should have progressed so far as to have been weaned, maintaining good health, and should have reached the teething period, is one of the wonders of physiology. Its senses are said to be perfect and acute, and it possesses enough intelligence to smile faintly when tickled, and to recognize food when it sees it. When the child was born it was known as the "headless baby," as it seemed cut off above the ears on a line sloping toward the nape of the neck, while a wrinkled skin covered the top. It suffered greatly, and its life was preserved with difficulty. At three or four weeks of age skin began to fill out, when the child's sufferings ceased and it enjoyed good health. The growth has been constant since.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

PANTOMIME IN A COURT ROOM.—The Attorney, at the date of the story, was serving the Commonwealth of Ohio and the County of Vinton in the capacity of Prosecuting Attorney at the little town of McArthur. He then bore rather a youthful and possibly somewhat verdant appearance for a man holding so responsible a position. The most conspicuous personage known to the Vinton Bar at that time was a grave and pompous barrister from a neighboring town—a man who had reached the middle age of life, and with it an extensive practice, profitable alike in fame and pecuniary gain, a man whose eloquence bent juries to his will and whose logic passed them fast, whose invective and bombast seldom failed to fire circuit courts, the Witness or the prisoner, as might be necessary to gain the case, and was alike dreaded and hated by his fellow practitioners. The Attorney referred to is living yet, one of the most prominent jurists in Southern Ohio. His ability has not diminished, nor has his knowledge that he possesses ability. One day the young Prosecutor had a tiot case to try, and to his consternation he learned that the gentleman referred to had been retained by the defense. The Prosecutor handled his case with great care, but from the first did not hope to convict the prisoner. He was stirred up somewhat, however, by the sneering allusions made to him during the examination by the imported counsel, and so when he came to make his opening speech he indulged a little in bombast himself. He expected to be torn up somewhat by the imported counsel, but was utterly unprepared for the samoon that swept through the court room when the imported counsel got fairly under way. He paced up and down in front of the Judge; he sawed the air in front of the jurors; he shook his finger in the face of the young prosecutor and shivered in imaginary horrors at the thought of so youthful a youth undertaking to measure swords with him. The voice was loud and bitter in its denunciation; the gestulations were violent and demonstrative; the manner threatening and awe inspiring, and with a face of scorn he sat down with folded arms and awaited the verdict which he did not suppose they dared to refuse to tender. The young prosecutor was mad. He felt he would like to thrash the imported counsel out of his boots. He arose to his feet, uncertain for a moment what to do. A happy thought struck him, and, throwing his head back, he cast his left arm behind him and thrust his right hand in the breast of his vest, while under overarching eyebrows he scowled out at the jury. The jury "dropped on it" in instant. So did the Judge; so did the spectators. There was the familiar pose of the imported counsel, perfect in its imitation. Then the young prosecutor began, and without opening his lips, proceeded to copy the gesticulations and movement of the eminent attorney who had preceded him.—He snorted and cavorted and stamped and rolled his eyes. He strode up and down in front of the Judge and jury, following in his gesticulations precisely those of which they had just seen the copy. He stuck his finger menacingly under the nose of the eminent gentleman, and then, assuming the statesmen like pose, he looked down upon him disdainfully. Then he would stop and twirl on his finger a martingale ring, which he had drawn from his pocket, and which was intended to represent the large seal ring on the small finger of the left hand of the opposing counsel. It was too much. The eminent attorney appealed to the court for protection, while the Judge laughed until the tears rolled down his cheeks, and the jury chuckled audibly. The Judge replied that the young man had done nothing, had said nothing to him, and he did not feel called upon to interfere with the argument. That settled it. The imported counsel broke for the door, and the jury, after fifteen minutes absence, brought in a verdict of guilty.—Columbus (Ohio) Times.

GENERAL NEWS.

Mrs. Livermore is lecturing in the South this Winter on "What Shall we Do with our Boys?" As the base ball season is over and skating has not begun, Mrs. Livermore appears to be in a pretty tight place.

The Hon Lott M. Morrell seems to be surely sinking to the grave. He has an idea that in his disease—chronic gastritis—hearty food is to be avoided. So it is with difficulty that he is induced to partake of any nourishment except milk, which he drinks freely. His mind is perfectly clear, and he is able to be partly dressed and walk around his room. But he has given up hope of ever regaining his health.

Not long ago Mr. Peter Cooper, who is within three months of being 92 years old, called on Miss Clara Louise Kellogg, and was entertained by her with several charming songs. Then he asked her if she knew, or had heard, an old ballad called "The Tortoise Shell Cat." She answered in the negative, he at once sang a verse of it for her in a clear, firm voice, and in a manner that won from her a hearty encore.

Articles of incorporation have been entered into and the $2,000 per mile in cash has also been deposited in the State treasury, as required by law, for the construction of a railroad, from the line of the West Jersey Railroad, at a point about two and a half miles south of Cape May Court House to Anglesea, on the eastern part of Five Mile Beach. The length of the road will be about four and a half miles. One half or more of the road has been graded.

Two of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" bloodhounds got to fighting behind the scenes at Salem the other night. The singers undertook to separate them, but for ten minutes they could not compel the bloodthirsty animals to let loose of one another. After a whine the dogs, torn and bleeding, were separated by the use of clubs, bricks, whips and chairs in the hands of the attendants. The curtain was rung down during the fight, and for ten minutes the dogs had command of the stage.

Gilbert and Sullivan's new operatic venture was presented for the first time both in London and New York on Saturday evening. In New York it was given at the Standard Theatre with an excellent cast, including W. T. Carleton, J. H. Ryley of "Bunthorne" fame, Augusta Rickne and Marie Jansen. The critics in New York seem inclined to believe that it will be a success of the "Pinafore" and "Patience" kind, while English criticism gives it praise, but doubts its "staying" qualities.

New Jersey is creditably represented at the Garfield Monument Fair at Washington. Its booth is presided over by Mrs. Robert Wilson of Trenton, the Vice President of the New Jersey Association; Miss Alice Winderman, Mrs. Dr. Chas. White, Mrs. A. D. Vandervoer, Mrs. Bessie M. Hull, Mrs. H. F. Worrell, Mrs. Wm. J. Armstrong, and Miss Ada Cameron and Edith Lay, of Newark. Mrs. Gen. Rickets, Mrs. Commodore Earl English and Miss Tillie Frelinghuysen supervise the enterprise. The booth is very tastefully decorated, and filled mostly with Japanese and Chinese bric-a-brac, giving it quite an Oriental aspect.

An oil tank of the Brooklyn Oil Works at Green Point, Long Island, exploded Sunday, with fearful force. The wooden buildings in the immediate neighborhood were wrecked, and the blazing oil was scattered in every direction. One of the timbers of the building penetrated the side of the structure in which is situated the office of Livingston & Co., dealers in lumber. The stick extended more than eight feet into the building and remained there. A second piece of timber cleared away the sign of the lumber dealers, which extended along the roof of the building. The windows of many of the buildings along Borden avenue in Hunter's Point were smashed in, and the high brick walls which surrounded the oil yards on three sides were thrown down by the force of the explosion. Several sailors were on the pier at the time of the explosion, and were in immediate danger of death. They attempted to escape in a boat, but were forced to jump in the water. Six or seven of them swam safely out of danger, and were picked up by small boats. Two others, Italians, and brothers, named Polletti, were drowned. The loss to the works is about $13,000.

The daughter of Engineer Melville, of Jeannette fame, Maude by name, and fourteen years old, was given in charge of Miss Sarah Cappell of Brooklyn, a friend of Mr. Melville, when the mother and wife was taken to the lunatic asylum. Last week Mrs. Melville was discharged, cured, and early afternoon, while Miss Cappell was sitting in her parlor, the bell rang and she went to the door. A tough-looking man presented himself and said that he wanted Maude Melville. Miss Cappell, who spoke of the man as Maude's uncle, says that she told him that he could not have her. Then Mrs. Melville, who had been standing at one side unobserved, stepped quickly into the hall, and in a loud voice called distinctly, "Maude! Maude!" two or three times. The girl heard and recognized her mother's voice, and came running out and sprang into her arms. "Never mind your things, dear, but come right along," said Mrs Melville. Miss Cappell says that she attempted to restrain the girl and close the door, but the uncle held it open. Mrs. Melville, taking her daughter by the hand, led her to Willoughby street, when the three got into a coach in waiting and were rapidly driven off. Miss Cappell says that she thinks that the girl has been taken to Sharon, Penn., where Mrs. Melville lives.

THE SUN.

NEW YORK, 1883

Most people have read THE SUN during the past year or years, and know what to expect when they subscribe for it. No other newspaper published on this side of the Atlantic has been sought and read in any year by so many intelligent men and women.

We are credibly informed that people buy, read and like THE SUN for the following reasons, among others:

Because its news columns give us in attractive form and with the greatest possible economy of time, all the news of the world worth knowing. We cover it all, omitting the trivial and the vulgar, so that the busiest man can find in THE SUN the news of the day condensed, and the leisure man can have all the news of the world set before him in a form to be read with pleasure.

Because its tone is fearless and independent. No man or party can buy THE SUN. It is not to be had for money. No man or party can intimidate THE SUN. It is not to be had for love or fear. No man or party can induce THE SUN to depart from the path of truth and right, as it sees the truth and right, to please any man or party living or dead.

Because it is honest in its advertising columns. It will not knowingly print the lying boasts of the humbug advertiser, or allow its columns to be used to deceive the public. Its business department is conducted on the principle of right and honesty.

Because it is the best newspaper for the money. It gives more for the money than any other newspaper. It gives more than it promises. It is the best newspaper for the money because its reputation for truth and fairness is unsurpassed, and its circulation is the largest and most widely distributed of any newspaper in the world.

Because it is the best newspaper for the farmer, the mechanic, the merchant, the professional man, the young man, the old man, the man of business, the man of pleasure, the man of leisure, the man of study, the man of thought. In every field of THE SUN's discussion it is the man's paper that appeals with particular force to the individual interest of each reader.

If you desire to know what THE SUN is, and what it can do for you, we will send it to you for a month on trial for 65 cents. If you desire to know what THE SUN is, you will find it to be a faithful, able, independent, fearless newspaper, devoted to the interests of the people, and to the exposure of all frauds, shams and impostures. If you want to know what THE SUN is, you will find it to be a source of all human activity, a repository of the choicest products of intelligent thought and the abode of a humanity for the cause of liberty and enlightened civilization. It is a source for all kinds of news, a source for all kinds of amusement, and an unfailing source for good, wholesome, entertaining reading. It is a source for all kinds of information, and an unfailing source for good investment for the coming year.

Terms to Mail Subscribers.

The several editions of THE SUN are sent by mail, postpaid, as follows:

DAILY—65 cents a month, $6.50 a year; with Sunday edition, $7.70.

SUNDAY—Eight pages, $1.20 a year.

WEEKLY—$1 a year. Eight pages of the best matter of the daily issues; an Agricultural Department of unequaled merit, market reports and literary, scientific, and domestic intelligence make THE WEEKLY SUN the newspaper for the farmer's household. To clubs of ten, with $10, an extra copy free.

ALMOST AS BAD.

What the Perplexed Physicians do in Cases of Emergency.

"I'll tell you the honest truth," answered the doctor. "Bright's Disease baffles the medical men almost as badly as cancer does. Having passed a certain stage both point straight to eternity. It may be unprofessional to let out the secret, but when we are perplexed comes to me with Bright's Disease or any kindred trouble as long like it, I tell him to put on BENSON'S CAPSINE POROUS PLASTER without delay."

The doctor spoke by the card. The capsine goes right to the spot. If you can be helped, they up are will do it. Look out for frauds. Is the name CAPSINE on the middle of the plaster? If so you are all right. Price 25 cents. Sidney R. Johnson Chemists, New York. Highest awards.

EIGHT BATTLES.

Having Passed Through the War, an Old Soldier Conquers One Enemy More.

Kindled with enthusiasm as he recalled the great struggle of twenty years ago, Capt. J. R. Sandford of Newark, who raised Company H of the 31st N. J. Zouaves, and went to the front with them—and to a turbulent companion one day last summer:

"Yes, I was in eight of the hottest battles of the war, Seven Pines, Malvern Hill, Savage Station, Mechanicsville, Bridge and Harrison's Landing, are in the list. I started to go with Sherman to the sea, but my right leg was shattered by a shell at the battle of Resaca, and after the great march began. After the amputation I was taken twenty five miles and left in a tent at Ringgold, on a rainy stand, and my bed was flooded. Then I was started on my way to Chattanooga, 280 miles distant—just try to imagine the horror of that journey in a man in my condition. For years afterward I was shaken with every exertion. Yes, the doctor prescribe as they always will when you get them, but I keep my own doctor now, and he never opens his mouth.

"A dumb doctor," exclaimed the Captain, excited.

"Yes, dumb as a mummy, but smart as lightning. There he is—pointing to a bottle of Dr. David Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY standing on a corner shelf. Talks that. When I am run down it wakes me up, when I am weak it strengthens me, when I am 'off my food' it gives me an appetite, when I am sick it repairs me.

"Dr. David Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY is the great gun to the foot against disease. Ask your druggist or address, Roundout, N. Y."
