—At the Park avenue Baptist church the services were largely attended both morning and evening yesterday. At the morning service Rev. Mr. Dills drew many useful lessons from his theme "Christ's Mission." At the evening service the singing was very fine. It consisted of solos by Miss Lillie Dorman and Miss Bennett and selections by a choir of practiced voices under the leadership of Mr. Bennett.

—It is almost the eve of November. October has proven a glorious month, the atmosphere has been exceedingly temperate, the trees in all directions are almost all stripped of their foliage, housewives have about finished preserving fruit, and the patient man of the house has succeeded in finding the stove pipe which was in use last winter, and properly adjusting it for duty. The cold keeps off well in the morning, and we are made ready for every blast for the severe weather which is sure to come after awhile.

—That successful comic opera, "The Little Tycoon," will be presented Thursday, Nov. 3d, at Stillman Music Hall. This is the first appearance in this city of the original company which appeared in Temple Theatre, Philadelphia, in January, 1885. All the superb scenery, costumes, properties, electric effects, together with the Temple Theatre Orchestra of ten picked musicians, and a chorus thirty voices. An exact reproduction of the opera will be given as originally produced in Philadelphia, New York, Boston and Chicago, in which cities it has had a total run of 500 nights.

—The Board of Directors of the Art Gallery have decided to give one entire room for the Schoonmaker collection of Chinese curio. The room chosen is the one at the left of the staircase on the second story, formerly used for crayon, steel plate work and sculpture. Cases to properly display the collection are being arranged for, and when it is in the gallery Plainfield will in some material respects have the finest collection to be found in the country. It will not be so extensive as that of Charles A. Dana, or the one at Central Park, or the famous one at Baltimore, nor will it have cost $15,000 much below one, but it will consist of many rare treasures not found in any of these, and a fair representation of the wonderful skill of the Chinese for the past 1,000 years, from Mr. Schoonmaker's collection of about 600 pieces. The Board of Directors are indebted to Miss Tyler for the first lecture of a series, his being advertised in another column, and all to be of rare interest, the proceeds to be used to enable the Board to add further attractions to the gallery for the enjoyment of our people, who will no doubt gladly avail themselves of this opportunity, as show their appreciation of the efforts of the Board, actuated as the members are by no other motive than the glory and welfare of Plainfield.

—All Hallow E'en.

—Mrs. John M. Jackson, wife of the "firebug," hasn't yet made her appearance.

—It is said that not a gun in town is for sale. The shooting season opens to-morrow.

—Kenney Bros., the North avenue fruiters, will make a new announcement in our advertising columns to-morrow.

—A beautiful portrait, painted by Flower, the artist, attracts considerable attention in the show window at Werner's Clothing House.

—Messrs. John H. Sayers and Noah Pike of this city, yesterday afternoon at four o'clock addressed the members of Welcome Division, Sons of Temperance of New Brunswick, on the temperance question. The meeting was held in the new quarters of the division.

—In reply to the question asked in Saturday's paper about the cause of the delay of the prosecution in the "fire-bug" cases, we are assured there is no other motive than the best interests of justice. We state this to answer questions asked by those who are impatient to see the scoundrel properly punished.

—Professor Reynolds, whose experiments in mesmerism created so much comment while he was at Reform Hall last year, commences another week's engagement next Monday evening at the same place. Popular prices reign and there is, the manager says, no reason why all Plainfield should not see his interesting and amusing entertainment.

—Delegation from Washington, Unity, and Goodwill Lodges, Knights of Pythias, will pay a fraternal visit to-night to Somerset Lodge, No. 56 K. of P., of Bound Brook. Crescent Lodge of Flemington will be present and will confer the Third Degree. Every Knight in this city is cordially invited to be present. The delegations will leave on the 7:38 p. m., train. A special train leaves Bound Brook on the return at 11 o'clock p. m.

—The new Pool Tool Works are being rapidly finished. The workmen are now busy laying the flooring, while machinists are putting up the hangers for the shafting. Three boilers are now in position for generating the steam, and at sun fall we are hard at work laying pipes overhead for heating the establishment. The engine is also being laid down, and soon after the chimney is completed it is expected that the boilers and engine will be in running order.

—Chas. McCann, jr., of West Third street, is under bonds in the sum of $250 to appear in answer to a serious charge made by Catherine Beigold, a half-witted domestic, who, though single, is in a delicate condition. The complaint was made before City Judge Ulrich several days ago, and McCann was arrested by Chief of Police Dodd last night in a dark alley where the fellow was waiting, it is alleged, to meet a paramour. His uncle, Charles McCann of West Third street went bonds for the young man's nephew.

—A new county, to be constructed of parts of Essex, Morris and Union, is creating considerable thought among some of the residents of Summit and of certain sections of Essex and Morris Counties. The construction of a new county is possible no one will deny, but the question of its necessity, and the almost certain opposition that would be manifested against it by the counties whose limits have to be curtailed to make it, is formidable. The people of the sections whereof it is proposed to form a new county would necessarily have to be persuaded that the disadvantages and advantages would result to them from such a procedure before they would approve any measure looking to such an end. The benefit or injury that would necessarily result in legislative representation to either the one or more of the political parties, would probably have great weight in promoting affirmative or negative action among our legislators. The movement, if any be made, would have to be very popular, and would depend for its success or failure upon public approval or condemnation.—Summit Record.

Labor Men in Somerset.

Announcement was made in Somerville Saturday morning that a new party, to be known as "The Workingmen's Party of Somerset County," had organized and adopted a set of resolutions and a platform. Late in the day there were circulated copies of a handbill reading as follows:

Nominations and endorsements of the Workingmen's Party of Somerset County, N. J.: For Senator, James J. Bergen (indorsed); for member of Assembly, Geo. F. Norton; for Surrogate, Jacob Bergen (indorsed); for Coroners, John F. Brady, Dr. C. P. R. Fisher and Dr. John B. Beekman (indorsed). Workingmen, vote for the whole ticket; show the old party "bosses" of Somerset County that we have influence that they are not despise. Now is the time to show your strength.

FRED. J. DURBANCK, Sec'y.

An interview with Mr. Durbanck was from him the statement that "we want it distinctly understood that we are not a Knights of Labor organization, and in no way connected with that association. The party is composed of workingmen irrespective of party, and it is my opinion that we will poll from 800 to 1,000 votes."

Union County Courts.

Saturday morning at the opening of the court Judge McCormick charged the jury in the case of Edward G. Delaney, the Summit saloon keeper, charged with keeping a disorderly house, and the jury retired for deliberation at 10:30 o'clock.

The court's attention was then occupied for some time on an application for a revocation of the tavern House of August Kline of Rahway, on the ground that the signers were not real estate owners.

Foster M. Voorhees appeared as counsel for the applicant, and Prosecutor Marsh for defendant. The testimony showed that all were freeholders with two exceptions, one of the latter claiming to have a title by reason of being a guardian. The Court reserved its decision until Saturday next.

Sunday Gunners Punished.

Marshal Becker's vigilant eye fell on the form of John Klopf of Scotch Plains, yesterday, as Klopf wended his way across the mountains with dog and gun, after choice game. When arrested he plead hard to be released.

"Why didn't I take my wife's advice," he blubbered, "and stay at home? She told me that I'd get caught."

Last evening he was taken before Mayor Cooley of North Plainfield and fined $20.

Two other Sunday sportsmen were caught by Game Warden Sterling and Chas. Wills and taken before Justice Deppie of Union County. Each were fined $25 and costs.

PERSONAL.

The Misses Matie and Nettie Breen of Elizabeth, spent yesterday with their friends, the Misses Weaver of Grove street.

Miss Addie McGee of North Plainfield is home again from her extended trip to Europe with other members of the McGee family.

Miss Jennie Marsh of Westfield who has been visiting her aunt, Mrs. James Sekring of West Third street, returned home to-day.

Mrs. P. M. Smith and family have returned from Liberty, Sullivan Co., N. Y., where their summer has been spent, and may now be found at their residence, No. 140 Central avenue.

At the meeting of the Grand Division of the Sons of Temperance at Camden, Oct. 26, there were present from this city G. W. P. Jerry Perine, Mr. J. M. D. Pyatt, Mrs. Sarah E. Mattox, G. I. S., and Mr. E. Chickering, all of Howell Division.

At the Trinity Reformed Church, yesterday morning, the following were ordained officers: Elders—Dr. H. Titsworth, R. R. Field and C. S. Dolliver, for two years each; R. A. Hagaman for the unexpired term of one year. Deacons—E. R. Mooney, J. K. Arnold and A. L. Force, for two years each.

Mr. M. Powell of East Sixth street, will address the White Cross Branch of the Philadelphia Young Men's Christian Association on Saturday evening, November 5th, subject: "Social Purity and the White Cross." He is regarded as the ablest of the White Cross men, and at Kennett Square, Pa., on Saturday afternoon, October 29th.

Yesterday was the seventy-fourth anniversary of the birth of Jasper G. Cadmus, and he was the recipient of many congratulatory surprises. In the morning he was visited by his son, David V. P. Cadmus and wife of West New Brighton, S. I. He notice I that his cane was a gift from the young couple to their father. The cane is a most handsome one, being of ebony with a silver handle. This handle is beautifully chased and engraved, the recesses being oxidized to make the wreathed designs of leaves stand out more prominently. The inscription on the plate reads: J. G. Cadmus, from David and Mattie, Oct. 30, 1887.

"Bruisers" Invade Plainfield.

The New York papers this morning give glowing accounts of a savage prize-fight which is said to have occurr l early Sunday morning in an open field on the outskirts of Plainfield in the presence of two hundred sporting men from various cities. The combatants were, it is stated, John Gilben of Newark and Michael Mullin, a younger brother of Pat Mullin, the English champion. The first two rounds ended with Mullin on the ground; and—the accounts continue—the third round was the hottest of the fight. "Both combatants were willing with rage and the seconds had great difficulty in separating them. For a time a free fight all around seemed unavoidable. The instant the men were parted Gilben hit Mullin a crushing blow on the left side of the neck and he fell heavily to the earth. Mullin yelled 'police!' until he was dragged into a coach by his friends. The stakeholder, David O'Dare, skipped with the receipts."

Appropriate wind-up! Only some one ought to have summoned the police before the brutal exhibition was begun.

Warren Mission.

There was a large number in attendance at the Mission chapel last evening. The song service consisted mostly of new music not altogether familiar to the congregation, and taken from the Gospel Hymns and Choir. The leader stating that he was desirous that these and others to follow should soon become well known by all attending the services, Seeley Edsall had charged of the devotional exercises and commented on a few verses found in the ninth chapter of the Acts. After all singing "Christ Receiveth Sinful Men," the meeting was given to the congregation for voluntary remarks and prayers. Those taking part were Messrs. D. M. Moore, M. M. Dunham, C. W. Hillman, Jacob Bergen and Edward Hoffman. Special invitation was given for those who desired to become Christians to manifest it, three responded, one being a young man. The meeting was closed by all singing, "We're Going Home to Jesus."

The Drink-Evil, Society's Bane.

James McGee of Willow avenue, North Plainfield, was the speaker at Reform Hall, last evening; and his address was highly interesting to the audience which was rather large.

"The basis principles of society says Mr. McGee, "are industry, frugality, kindliness, education and religion. Intemperance is the foe to all these. It destroys industry, uproots frugality; prevents kindliness, distorts education and dethrones religion. The drinking habits is the bane of society, the bar to progress and the enemy to God and man; and while we have boldly stated that the signers were hard against the rum demon. Industry is active against it through the labor organizations, frugality through the savings institutions, kindliness through the hospitals and homes, education through the schools and colleges, religion through the churches. But with a hard and bitter fight and we must help it all we can."

The Richest of Treats.

Concerning Marshall P. Wilder, who is to give a reading at the Methodist church, as noticed among our advertisements, the New York Times has the following: "He kept the audience in roars of laughter, great applause greeted him, and he was recalled four times. It seemed as though they could not get enough of him, he was so brim-full of mirth. It should be noted that he is a fine ventriloquist, and his imitation of the telephone was such a master-piece, that he received many encore, insisting that the telephone was genuine. Tickets and reserved seats for the Marshall P. Wilder entertainment on sale at the stores of M. F. Reynolds and R. J. Shaw, on and after Tuesday Nov. 1.

The Retiring Sheriff.

Sheriff Stiles was born in this county on a farm near Elizabeth March 23, 1845. He completed his education in the public schools of Elizabeth, and his whole life is as an open book to the people of the county. It is that of a man whom they have delighted to honor, one who has never been found wanting. He has been elected three different times to the Legislature, each time with increased majorities, the last time carrying every ward and township in the District, even Union, which had always gone Democratic, giving him a majority of fifty. His term as sheriff concludes Nov. 15. He has declined offices offered him, to devote his time more fully to his undertaking business at Elizabeth and Plainfield.

G. P. Smith's Gambling-Den.

The testimony of the witnesses in the case of Chief of Police Chas. W. Dodd vs. Constable Garret P. Smith—which was tried before City Judge Ulrich, Saturday afternoon—was not surprising to those who have long known that Smith was the owner of a Park avenue gambling-den. Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh conducted the case against Smith and subpœnaed the defendant, who at first denied everything, to searching cross-examination. It was shown, despite Judge Gerow's objection, that in behalf of the defense, that Smith's den has been going in full blast under his personal direction, notwithstanding the fact that he has given it out that the place has been closed. The witnesses created considerable amusement both at the trial and at the newspaper office when they tried—by the excuses they offered for visiting the place. The case will be argued by counsel Wednesday morning at ten o'clock.

The Sturdy Leal School Boys.

The Leal School Football Team of this city swiped a team from Elizabeth private school on the Park avenue grounds, Saturday afternoon and were the victors by a score of 75 to 4. The visitors say that they were in poor condition and will go into training to give the Leal boys a harder tussle next time.

Can They Do It?

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—A few would-be leaders of the North Plainfield Democracy met in an obscure office on North avenue on Friday night to devise means (in their minds only) plans to carry that township for the Democratic candidates.

A DEMOCRAT.

WESTFIELD.

Empire Engine Co., No. 2, will hold their regular monthly meeting on Tuesday evening at the rooms of the Young Republican Club.

Application has been made by our merchants to the C. R. R. Co., for the appointment of a regular freight agent. The men employed at present have to act as freight agent, mail carrier, baggage master, etc., and our merchants are put to a great deal of inconvenience, when after freight, they have to wait until he returns with mail, or is through with his other work.

Some of our small boys will get themselves into trouble through the careless handling of firearms. Young Stephen Ruth while practicing with a Robert rifle on Saturday, along with other boys, attempted to shoot at a tin can, but missed it, and the bullet went through the bay window of Dr. J. S. Irving's residence and hit his daughter, Nellie, in the arm, while no very great harm was done, still the danger was too close enough, and parents who allow their boys the use of firearms ought to instruct them how and where to use them.

A sad ending accident occurred about half-past nine on Saturday morning at the house of Wm. H. Moore. Jenny Campbell, a young girl living with the family, was busy around the stove, when suddenly her apron caught fire, and with a scream she rushed out of the room; before Mrs. Moore could catch her she was enveloped in a mass of flames. Mr. Rhesing, who was driving past at the time, saw the girl, and jumping from his wagon he took off his coat and tried to smother the flames, assisted by a neighbor, Chas. R. Clark; but the light material of which the clothes consisted burn nearly all burned before they succeeded. Dr. Smith, who lives across the street, was called, and he did all he could to relieve the sufferings of the poor girl, whose body was burned to terribly, with but little exception, a mass of blisters. Dr. Smith, on the poor child, who had to suffer such pain all day and night. She lies somewhat better on Sunday morning, from effect of the opium, but death is her last, about one o'clock. Mr. and Mrs. Moore, the old couple, felt very sad. Jenny was a step-child of Mrs. Moore's sister, and had been making her home with the childless couple for the last few years.

"Let Him Schent Mr? Novair!"

Samuel Dreier of West Front street is an angry man. Yesterday morning David C. Allen asked him to trade revolvers, and an arrangement was effected between Allen and the wife of Dreier by which Allen's small 22 calibre shooting-iron with four dollars to boot was to be swapped for Dreier's five-dollar "British Bulldog." Allen left both pistols in Drier's charge and went after the cash. In the evening he returned and said that he had decided not to trade. He then wanted his revolver back, but Dreier insisted to adhere to until the proper sum advanced 25 cents "for cleaning and oiling dot blstol." Allen thereupon signified to Chief of Police Dodd his desire to make a complaint against Dreier for assault with a deadly firearm. Dreier heard of this and this afternoon made a long and fiery speech in City Judge Ulrich's office.

"I vould rudder look five tollars as let him schent me," he concluded. "I Valk till my vife come home. Schust five tollars. She havv a written agreement."

The case will go hard to-morrow.

O'BRIEN AGAIN ELUDES THE POLICE,

And Makes a Vigorous Speech Against the Government's Policy.

CORK, Oct. 21.—Mr. William O'Brien studied the police yesterday and addressed an immense crowd of his friends just north of here. There was a large crowd present. Mr. O'Brien said that this would probably be his last day of liberty for some time, and declared that he was proud to spend it with them. He ridiculed Mr. Balfour's idea of repressing the agitation in Ireland by confining Nationalist members of parliament, and said, we were simply the outposts of an army of 50,000,000 of the Irish race who were scattered in all parts of the world.

"Two years ago," said Mr. O'Brien, "the plan of campaign," said Mr. O'Brien, "was sure of having a decent roof over their heads this winter and a decent Christmas dinner, which is more than many an out at elbow rack renter expects. Wherever," continued he, "tenants have the manliness to use the plan and have the courage to stick to it, they protects their homes, striking God's fear into the hearts of landlords. Of 10,000 people who have evicted during the past year only 140 belonged to the plan of campaign, or at least followed the plan. This proves the advantage of the plan, which will be organized this winter on a larger scale and would reward the tenants' efforts who used it." Mr. O'Brien said that he deprecated outrage, but if patience was necessary manhood was also necessary. Ireland if they wished to win an Irish parliament and an ownership in the soil of Ireland.

ANOTHER LAKE DISASTER.

LOSS OF A PASSENGER STEAMER, WITH ALL ON BOARD.

The Greatest Lake Fatality of the Season.

Overtakes the Steamer Vernon, the Successor of the Ill-Fated Champlain—Capt. Moran's Terrible Dilemma.

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 21.—The passenger propeller Vernon was wrecked in the Chicago gale that swept Lake Michigan last day, and her entire crew of twenty-two people and her passengers, number unknown, are supposed to have been lost. It isn't even a month since the last time any of the terrible disasters on the lake this season, not excepting the propeller Champlain, which was burned early in the spring off Charlevoix, drowning twenty-four persons. A most singular coincidence is that the Vernon was the vessel that took the place of the Champlain on the Northern Michigan line, and had only been on the line since Aug. 1. She was one of the finest finished passenger boats on the lakes, and had a valuation of $75,000. Capt. Moran, of the steamship Superior, which arrived here Saturday night, brought the first news of the wreck. Capt. Moran saw the crew on four rafts, and also a small boat containing a woman and three men. Though he made an effort to save them, the high sea prevented him from rendering any assistance, the Superior being too heavily to do so. He said: "To pass one man on a raft appealing for our help, another dying from exposure, and a small boat in which we could see one woman and three men, some of the latter hailing with a coat stuck up on his oar, all being tossed about in a terrible sea, without our being able to render them any assistance, was heartrending in the extreme. We were also fighting for our lives, our steamer having become disabled in the sea. With the exception of the cooks, our entire crew of sixteen men, even to the engineer, were down below, some of them steering the vessel with a temporary tiller which we had rigged up, while the others were trying to repair the break. Our tiller had become disconnected from the rudder post, leaving us at the mercy of the sea, until we succeeded in temporarily unshackle. With this we managed to keep our vessel out of the trough of the sea and keep her before the gale. It was three hours before we had made repairs so that we could handle ourselves, and then we were out of sight of the shipwrecked men."

J. F. Klein, agent of the Northern Michigan line, after hearing the account of the disaster as reported by Capt. Moran, felt assured that it was the Vernon. He did not know what passengers were on board, and of the crew could only give the following names out of a crew of twenty-two men:

Capt. George Thorpe, of Ogdensburg, N. Y.; Capt. John Ballard, mate, who formerly sailed the schooner Golden West; Capt. Higgins, second mate, who sailed the steam barge Ionia last year; F. W. Barber, clerk, oldest son of one of the owners of the line; Charles Marcus, first engineer; Frank M. Hall, second engineer, a brother of Capt. Hall, of Chicago; Martin Burke, second J. Bean, porter, a brother of Martin, both having been on the Champlain when she burned.

The names of the following passengers who were on board the wrecked vessel are all that can be obtained at this writing: Clifford H. Bonnigras, of Chicago, Miss Sadie Durkin, of Chicago; Miss Kate Gallagher, daughter of the postmaster of Mackinac island; Mrs. Dunlaney, of St. James, Beaver island. It is estimated by some that there were from thirty to fifty persons on board, though any statement as to the exact number is mere conjecture.

The forepart of the pilot houses of the wrecked steamer, with five life preservers upon it, was found about six miles from shore yesterday. One of the life preservers was put up in a sack in which was a letter, on which had been worn and was thrown aside by the wearer, who, perhaps, becoming exhausted by the cold, preferred death to further suffering.

ANOTHER STORY OF WRECK.

Terrible Experience of the Crew of a Lost Merchantman.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Oct. 21.—On March 20 last the iron bark Derry Castle, belonging to Lonmerick, Ireland, left Geelong for Falmouth with wheat. No trace of her could be found at any port, and she was posted at Lloyds as missing. Recently eight survivors of the Derry Castle's crew reached Melbourne on the steamer Awarua. They stated that the missing bark had been cast away on Enderby Island, one of the Auckland group, eight days after commencing the homeward voyage. The captain, both mates, and twelve seamen were drowned in trying to reach the reef. Seven of the crew and the only passenger, James McGhie, endured for five months a series of adventures and adventures which seldom occur in real life. The scene of the wreck is rarely visited by vessels. The survivors had no food except sea-lush, which were very scarce, and they had but little covering. The island was explored and the party was much astonished at finding a well constructed harbor a small hut, which, it appears, was formerly used as a depot for stores for shipwrecked seamen. The place was equipped with the expectation of finding food, but it was a terrible disappointment to find that all it contained was a pot boiler. The crew of New Zealand government had maintained four depots for relief of castaways, but lately dispensed with all but one, on Dundonald island, off the coast of Port Ross, which was in sight, the survivors strained their eyes in hopeless yearning to reach it, but their efforts to make out of making a boat. Fire was finally obtained by discharging a cartridge found in one of the men's pockets. Life was maintained by parching wheat which was found in a corner from a cargo of a wrecked bark. On the ninety-second day an old axhead was discovered in the sand. By its means efforts were made to construct a boat of driftwood, but, fortunately, this was done with odds and ends of rope, and yarn was driven into the seams with a piece of hoop iron. The boat was eventually launched. Two in the party pushed off from the shore in hope of reaching Port Ross. The effort was successful, and soon signal fires at Port Ross showed that help was at hand. On July 19 the shipwrecked men were transferred to the mainland and their sufferings were at an end.

Shot While Protecting His Crops.

FRANKLIN, Ind., Oct. 21.—Frederick Kaiser, a farmer of this place, was shot and probably fatally injured yesterday while defending his crops from two peddlers. Kaiser's house is located on a peddler's wagon stop at his gate. There were two men in the vehicle. One of them jumped up and entered his garden. He waited to a cherry patch and began pulling up the vegetables. Kaiser caught hold of the plunderer's shoulder and told him to leave the premises. The man secured a shotgun, fired at the farmer. His scalp was torn from his head, leaving the skull bare. Kaiser will probably die. His assailants escaped.

SOME ONE HAS BLUNDERED,

And a Startling Employer and Brave Fireman Paid Their Possible Deaths.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 21.—Yesterday morning freight train No. 46, east bound, on the Nickel Plate railroad, passed the station at Silver Creek at a speed of about 25 miles an hour. The train was composed of twenty-four cars, and her passengers, number unknown, are supposed to have been lost. It isn't even a month since the last time any of the terrible disasters on the lake this season, not excepting the propeller Champlain, which was burned early in the spring off Charlevoix, drowning twenty-four persons. Killed by His Runaway Horse.

NEWTOWN, Conn., Oct. 21.—While Albert Kinnie, a young man of this place, was driving from this city to his home he was suddenly seized, it is supposed, with sickness. He left his horse, a spirited animal, standing in the road and withdrew to a neighboring thicket. His horse became frightened meanwhile and started on the run. A traveler, meeting the frightened animal, tried to stop him, when the horse suddenly wheeled and started in the other direction. Mr. Kinnie meeting his team now endeavored to stop it, when the horse knocked him down and killed him in the highway.

THE FRENCH GOVERNMENT

PROBABLE EARLY DOWNFALL OF THE ROUVIER MINISTRY.

President Grevy Will Not Resign—An Interview with Mr. Chamberlain—He Intends to See Something of the United States and Canada.

LONDON, Oct. 21.—The defeat of the French government in the chamber of deputies Saturday, on a motion to proceed to the order of the day, was a complete surprise to the public, and the event may be said to have been equally surprising to its opponents. The adverse vote, however, is believed to portend the downfall of the Rouvier cabinet, and will have great influence upon the course of President Grevy and several others who have been indirectly affected by the Caffarel-Boulin scandal. The opinion is generally prevalent that the action of the chamber denotes that M. Rouvier's supporters have become permanently divided, and if that be the case the days of the present government are numbered.

It is now asserted that President Grevy has abandoned all ideas of resigning, and is standing to his resolve to stick them he has ever been upon previous occasions when a clique or party has been clamorous for his withdrawal. Nevertheless it is said to be due to M. Grevy's conviction that the overthrow of M. Rouvier's government is imminent, and that he will be able to disarm opposition and placate the enemies of M. Wilson in the chamber of deputies by a judicious disposition of patronage in the formation of a new cabinet. Whether this be true or not, the assertion has elements of possibility and easily gains credence.

Mr. Chamberlain was interviewed by a United Press correspondent Saturday after he had gone aboard the Etruria. He stated that on his arrival he intended to go directly to Washington, and not to Ottawa, as some journals have stated. He said that Mr. Chamberlain said that he proposed to disregard the strictures made by certain Canadian and American journals, and that their hostile criticisms would not interfere at all in the performance of his duties. After finishing his labors in connection with the fishery commission it was his intention to see something of America, and visit Canada. When asked to talk of political subjects he said that he was out of politics for a couple of months, and did not care to talk on that subject, but that he was willing to say to those who were hoping to have a parliament at Dublin soon that they would wait much longer than they expected for such a desired event.

CAPTURED BY THE JUDGE.

A Trenton Burglar Gets a Stock Load of Buckshot to Carry Home.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Oct. 21.—Theodore Lester, who resides on Bartlett street and College avenue, retired at 9 p. m. on Saturday night. About an hour afterwards William Headon, a Trenton burglar, entered the house, and Mr. Lester aged him in the hallway from his bedroom. He shouted, and his son, armed with a double-barrelled shotgun, rushed out of an adjoining room. The burglar ran to a window and dropped into the garden. Lester's son then pursued him and fired two charges of shot, one of which entered the back of the fleeing man.

Judge Cornelisson, of the Middlesex county sessions, was awaiting his arrival. Lester's garden and and captured the burglar. He had removed his shoes before entering the house. He was taken to the police headquarters and Dr. J. W. Rice attended to his wounds, which are not dangerous. The burglar gave his name as William Headon, and said he lived in Princeton, but it was afterwards discovered that he was a well known Trenton crackerman.

Adjoining property was partially destroyed, and much was saved only through great efforts of the department. The total loss is $200,000; insured for $182,500. Nearly the entire department were at the fire. Firemen being unable to do so, the flames of Somerset street and Hudson avenue, and the combustible stock was soon ignited

RIOTS IN LONDON.

MATTERS OF HISTORY SUGGESTED BY RECENT EVENTS.

The Lord George Gordon Riots of a Hundred Years Ago—How They Originated. Their Results—Homeless Poor in the London of Today.

London has had a small riot, and there are well grounded fears of a very big one. All great cities are liable to riots, and London is no exception; but it is a notable fact that that city has in the last century had fewer popular disturbances than any other great city in Christendom. While Paris has witnessed three revolutions and many minor events, Berlin has had the students' insurrection of 1848, Vienna has been in actual possession of a mob, only beaten down by the bombardment of Wundschgratz, and New York her great draft riots and many smaller but terrible affairs, London has suffered no serious riot since the "Wellington troubles," and has not really suffered great loss of life or property since the terrible Gordon riots of 1780. The English character is conservative, the government is strong, and those who have much to lose outnumber those who have anything to hope for from a riot more than twenty to one.

Certain parks and vacant places in London have, partly by law and partly by long usage, become the property—as it were, the reserves of the poor and unemployed. Most noted of these is Trafalgar square, and of late many thousands have passed the night there sleeping on benches, on the walks or wherever they could. Of course this led to an abandonment of the square by the better classes and so to ill feeling and personal troubles. The unemployed talked over their grievances and decided to present a petition to the Home secretary, demanding work or public charity in some form. Each successive gathering became more riotous, and when a monster mass meeting was called for the 13th, in Trafalgar square, the police received orders to prevent it. The latter took possession of all entrances to the square; the people gathered in the adjacent streets; there was a rush for the gates, and a few men were clubbed. Mass meetings were held in the vicinity and very incendiary speeches made. The statement by one workingman that "they trust has just as hif we was hignorant Hirishmen" is an amusing illustration of the London laborer's view of government in the two islands. Traffic was completely stopped by these mass meetings; no more police were sent to disperse them, and the crowd moved towards Hyde park with the usual demonstrations.

Not more than 5,000 or 4,000 had got into Hyde park when the police again appeared in force, and being appealed to by the adjacent shopkeepers, who feared pillage, they closed and fastened the gates. The crowd attempted to force their way through a small gate, when the mounted police charged upon them—as act generally condemned. Two men were so badly hurt that their death is expected, and many slightly injured. So the matter rests, with the laborers threatening, the politicians defending and denouncing, and the papers commenting with various degrees of severity. Mr. Gladstone has drawn on himself a deal of Tory wrath by publicly denouncing the police, and Lord Randolph Churchill has denounced Gladstone.

The Lord George Gordon riots have been made noted among all English reading people by the genius of Charles Dickens, who makes them the sensational subject and turning point of his "Barnaby Rudge." For five days—from the 6th to the 8th of June, 1780—London was at the mercy of a mob; whole blocks of stores were sacked, numerous Catholic churches and chapels were demolished, prisons were broken open, arsenals plundered and scores of persons killed by accident or design, while on the 7th thirty-six fires were burning at one time. The police were completely defeated, nor could even the military disperse the mobs till they had killed and wounded 500 people. The total loss could not be estimated, as scores of wounded wretches crept into abandoned cellars or sewers to die, while many drunken ones perished in the fires. And all this grew out of an attempt to disperse an assembly of 60,000 to 80,000 people, who marched with Gordon to present a petition against the act removing the Catholic disabilities. He was acquitted, but afterwards sentenced to a long imprisonment for libel and died in prison at the early age of 43, after having become a convert to Judaism. He was undoubtedly insane—a sort of George Francis Train on the British model. The misery caused by the Napoleonic wars created fearful riots all over England, but not so bad in London; the "Luddites" once numbered 80,000 rioters, who went about breaking the machinery which, they said, threw men out of work. At length a mob attacked the house of the Duke of Wellington and broke his windows; this in 1832, during the agitation of the reform bill. Among those troubled years also occurred the "Massacre of Peterloo," when the police charged upon an immense and closely packed mass of people gathered in the fields to hear a radical speech. Few were hurt by the police, but hundreds were injured and many killed, being squeezed and trampled upon in the panic. Then followed that beneficent series of measures for the relief of labor, and with them such an improvement in the general condition that London has only become richer by tradition since the accession of Victoria, and the most conservative statisticians admit that "British laborers are 30 per cent. better fed, 50 per cent. better housed, 50 per cent. better clothed and 100 per cent. better educated than in the reign of George IV."

The Rawson Shooting.

We present today sketch portraits of S. W. Rawson, the Chicago millionaire, who was recently shot by his stepson, W. R. Lee; Mrs. Rawson, mother of young Lee, and of her husband. The circumstances of the shooting are too well known to need repetition in this connection, as are also the personal history of all concerned.

NINETY YEAR OLD TWINS.

Mrs. Sally Cole and Mrs. Hepsibah Everett and Their Long Life.

Sally and Hepsibah are twin sisters, 90 years old on the 28th of last May, and living in good health and vivacity in West Dedham, Mass. Formerly they are known as Mrs. Sally Cole and Mrs. Everett, but in their capacity of twins they are affectionately called Sally and Hepsibah Colburn. Their father, Isaac Colburn, was a yeoman of the New England type, living in the vine clad farm house in West Dedham, where the twins were born May 28, 1797. Hepsibah was from the start a little heavier than Sally, but the resemblance was so perfect that accounts differed as to which sister was first by a mark on Hepsibah's upper lip. She was married in 1818 to Nathan Everett, and as he had been wounded in the war of 1812 he drew a pension during life, which his widow now receives. Sally about the same time married Noah Cole, and so the twins were separated; but they regretted this so much that both husbands soon located in West Dedham, where the girls were born and have ever since lived. Though Cole had no children, the Everetts had one daughter, with whom the twins now reside. Their parents had nine girls and three boys, of which family five girls still live—Mrs. Nabby Smith, of Dedham, aged 96; Mrs. Abiatha Richards, of Dedham, aged 88; a Mrs. Lincoln, of Philadelphia, and the twins. All are in excellent health and fairly active, which they attribute to the plain fare and open air work of their early days. Their recollections of early days are of no historical value, relating chiefly to their work on the farm, attendance at the neighborhood church, the old militia musters and the like. But it is of interest to contemplate a healthy old couple like these and hear them recall the merry days when they drove the farm horses afield and did other rural work.

SALLY. HEPZIBAH.

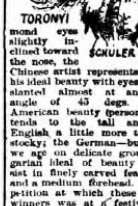
THREE PRETTY WOMEN.

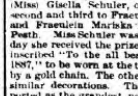
They Have Taken the Hungarian Prizes for Beauty.

We present pictures of the three most beautiful ladies in Hungary—that is, if the vote of some of the people and judges is proof of it. We need scarcely add—if the artist has succeeded, the reader will see it for himself—that the Hungarian nation has its own ideal of beauty, though the Hungarian ideal is not at all a bad one. We may say in general that the ideal beauty of any race is the race type slightly exaggerated, but harmonious. Thus, the Mongolians having almond eyes slightly inclined toward the nose, the Chinese artist represents his ideal beauty with eyes slanted at an angle of 45 degs. Similarly the American beauty (personal tastes aside) tends to the tall and willowy; the English a little more to the solid and stocky; the German—but we pause as we age on delicate ground. The Hungarian ideal of beauty seems to resist in finely carved features, good eyes and a medium forehead. The great competition at which these ladies were the winners was at a festival held on St. Stephen's day at Buda-Pesth, in aid of the sufferers by the recent fires and inundations which have brought such loss to Hungary. Several distinguished noblemen and statesmen exerted themselves to make the festival a success; over 100,000 visitors attended and the net profits were 90,000 florins (about $30,000). The first prize for beauty was awarded to Fraeulein Miss Gisela Schuler, of Croakazia; the second and third to Fraeulein Ida Toronut and Fraeulein Mariska Kolos, of Buda-Pesth. Miss Schuler was 18 years old the day she received the prize—a golden apple inscribed "To the all beautiful, Sept. 29, 1887," to be worn at the throat suspended by a gold chain. The other ladies received similar decorations. The festival is reported as the grandest, next to some royal demonstrations, that ever took place in Hungary.



Writing With a Rubber Hand.

It is generally supposed that when a human being loses both hands the power of writing is also lost by the luckless individual, unless, indeed, one can learn to write with the toes or the teeth after the fashion of certain dime museum freaks. But there is a young man in Bellville, N. J., who, having lost both hands, has had rubber cups substituted with which he is able already to write a clear, legible hand. And what is more wonderful he has decided to become a stenographer. This is the way he signs his name:



Respectfully Yours
Walter Alexander

Walter E. Alexander was and is an employe of a local rubber works. His duties included the feeding of scrap rubber into a crushing machine. On the 17th of June last he was carelessly seized with the habit of those in charge of machines. He let his hands go in a little too far; there was a crackling sound as his hands battened between the heavy rolls, a cry of anguish. Help came at last, the machine was stopped, but not in time to save Walter's hands.

Now he is time clerk for the rubber factory and is learning to use the typewriter, and, as stated, thinks of essaying stenography. He can do most things almost as well as anybody else, and can even drive a horse. He is constantly besieged for his autograph, and says he isn't a bit discouraged by the fact that his fore arms are timber and his hands rubber.

That young fellow has just the right sort of pluck.

There is a very silly crazе just now for white and gilt furniture. It looks well only in rooms specially decorated to receive it.

FALLING WALLS.

INQUIRY SUGGESTED BY THE RECENT NEW YORK CALAMITY.

The Laws in All the States Better Than Their Execution—Buildings That Have Fallen in the Past—Buddensick Now in Sing Sing—Father Kirner.

The sudden fall while in course of construction of large buildings in the United States has become altogether too common to be comfortable of late years, and the recent collapse of a school building in New York city has started a very general inquiry into the laws of different states on the security of buildings. One painful fact is apparent on a very brief examination, the laws in every state are much better than their administration. Indeed the inspection of buildings is almost invariably a mere matter of form in every state until some great calamity occurs, then there is a savage inquiry and for a long time after the law is well enforced. The moral would seem to be, if you want to be safe go where the last great calamity occurred.

Of great fires, too, accompanied with destruction of life, we have had decidedly more than our share. The laws commanding fire escapes in hotels have grown correspondingly rigid, and the most careless reader of the daily papers, when he is conducted through the devious corridors of a big hotel into a remote room, looks around nervously for the fire escape.

In cases of fire the chief danger is usually from panic, so there is frequently time for the inmates of a burning building to emerge in an orderly manner; but in the sudden fall of a building coolness is in vain and fire is often added to the horror. In all the first century of United States history there were fewer calamities from falling buildings—at any rate, fewer reported—than in the last ten years. Were builders more honest? Perhaps so, but there were then fewer cities and very few buildings over five stories in height. Building was not done in haste, and contractors were conservative. Soon after the centennial year, however, a number of casualties were reported, but as only three or four persons were killed and few injured, no special action was taken. Finally, on the 8th of February, 1881, the whole heavy iron roof of the Union depot in Buffalo, N. Y., fell with a crash that was heard all over the city, and immediately after large sections of the wall fell in on it, crushing all beneath. In a few hours every city in the country was in anxiety, for it was taken as a matter of course that the depot was crowded, as the time tables indicated several trains in the time. But by an extraordinary chance (shall we say providence?) all trains were late but one, and over that the fallen roof formed a sort of arch. Only four men were killed and few seriously injured.

On the 9th of November, 1883, the iron roof, inside walls and stone columns of one wing of the new capitol at Madison, Wis., fell and buried forty workmen. A cry of horror went through the city and state, and was echoed all over the country, but the most rigid investigation did not fix the responsibility to the general satisfaction. Ten persons were killed or mortally hurt and many disabled for life. On the same day a building fell in Cincinnati, killing one person and injuring four others. The next August one wing of the old United States hotel in Washington fell, burying the employes and two or three others, but only three deaths resulted. On the 21st of the following December a new iron hotel in process of erection at New Orleans fell at a time when nearly all the workmen were on the roof. Though they fell nearly sixty feet only two were killed. Late in the '70s there was an epidemic, so to speak, of falling buildings in Rochester, N. Y., and in '81 or '82 another, the most notable being the collapse of a four story business block near the center of the city, by which four men lost their lives. A singular incident of this calamity was the fact that the owner of the building was upon the roof at the time, and went down to the ground with the falling mass unhurt and even without suffering any appreciable shock. Another calamity of this sort was the falling of the Nebraska State capitol while building, and there were many others, records of which are not accessible to the present writer.

Down to this time, however, the public mind had not been greatly stirred, though many minor accidents of a like nature had occurred; but on April 15, 1885, an appalling calamity in New York city excited the whole nation, and to a general examination of the causes of such accidents and an overhauling of the law, and made the name of Charles Buddensiek infamous. The ponderous block of eight five story buildings on the Ninth-street side between Tenth and Eleventh avenues, CHARLES BUDDENSIEK, New York, fell in an instant. The wreck was complete. Nothing remained of the once imposing block but a pile of debris, from which rose a cloud of dust and among which a few managed to struggle forth with seen, while groans and agonizing cries for help excited the pitying spectators almost to madness. The police at once formed a guard around the ruins and hundreds of men toiled to uncover the dead and succor the wounded. The shocking details need not be repeated. By rare good fortune only a few workmen were on the buildings, of all them but one was killed, while sixty were hurt in various degrees.

Charles Buddensiek, the builder, was arrested, and then all the horrible details of his career came out. He was a reckless speculator of the law—building unsafe tenements, using poor mortar and weak supports in insufficient walls. As the inquiry extended houses built by him were found condemned, and out of twenty-three it was shown that not one was really safe. This roused the people at last, and in New York at least the law for the inspection of buildings was rigidly enforced. Since the notorious Miss Restell no person in New York has been the object of such universal horror as Buddensiek was at that time. It was a charity to hide him from the public eye in Sing Sing, where he is now serving out a term of ten years.

Public opinion was thoroughly roused and inspectors did their work so well that no serious calamities occurred in New York city till the recent one of Oct. 17, when the new Catholic school building at No. 445 East One Hundred and Fifteenth street fell, by which persons lost their lives, among them being Father Kirner, the priest in charge of the work, and injuring many more. Of the killed three were Italians, Father Kirner's assistant being among that people. The building was 100 by 50 feet, of brick, and the workmen all ascribe the calamity to bad mortar—"it wasn't mortar at all, 'twas only sand," says one—and the lack of supports as required by law under the center of the long joists. The person alleged most to blame in the case is Inspector William J. Martin, to whose district the building was located, as it was his duty to forbid the continuance of the work unless the law was complied with. Martin has been dismissed and placed under arrest, and the board of fire commissioners has also dismissed several other inspectors. The penalty likely to be inflicted upon Martin is somewhat more disagreeable than that meted out to a delinquent contractor the writer knows of, whose work collapsed, killing several men and injuring others. There an investigation in his case, the jury could not fix the blame, and the people of his district elected him to the state legislature!

The Whistler.

If for a gun
That would carry a ball,
Or a saber keen
That would cut shingles clean,
To smite for once and forever more that terrible, conscienceless midnight bore who ruthlessly breaks on a placid snore with airs that were popular years before—the man who is always whistling.
He starts at morn
With his tune forlorn,
And he'll never stop,
Though his hearers drop.

His neighbors for mercy vainly sue; he'll merrily whistle "Mikado" clear through, will turn back to "Patience" and "Pinafore" too, avoiding with care all the music sheets new—the man who is always whistling.—Merchant Traveler.

LITTLE FOLKS' BRIGHT SAYINGS.

Mary to Alice—Your doll looks very poorly. What ails it?

Alice—It frets a great deal. Alfred knocked out one of its eyes last week, and it lost a great deal of sawdust, and hasn't been the same doll since.

MAKING SURE OF HIS IDENTITY.

Not many weeks since a little girl received a visit from an uncle she had never before seen, but had heard much about. He was known to her as "Uncle Benny." At the close of her customary evening prayer she said, "God bless mamma, papa and Tommy and Uncle Benny," then, after a pause, she added: "Dod, his other name is Hopkins!"

A QUESTION OF REFERENCE.

Sunday School Teacher—Now, children, we have all been bitten by bad boys.

Children (in chorus)—Yes, marm.

Teacher—And our first parents were bitten, too, were they not?

Children (in chorus)—Yes, marm.

Teacher—Now, who bit them?

Bright Little Boy from Avenue A—Skeeters, marm.

SHE KNEW HER BIRTHPLACE.

A bright little 5-year-old was greatly attracted by a figure in the Metropolitan Museum of Art. "Say, aunty, who's that?" "That's the figure of Minerva." "Who's Minerva, aunty?" "She is the Goddess of Wisdom." "And does she come from Boston?"—Texas Siftings.

Seasonable Rhymes.

HERE AFTER.

When on the ground the red leaf lies,
And sere, and sere, the summer sighs,
And fields are brown, we then surmise
That autumn's here.

THEY PUT ME AWAY.

When shorter daily grows the day
And harvested are summer's fruits,
Then gentle maidens put away
Their bathing suits.

GET READY FOR A CHILL.

When twittering swallows leave the eaves,
And songsters leave the rural grove,
And harvested are all the sheaves,
Put up the stove.

CONTRARY TO THEIR PREDICTIONS.

When weather prophets do begin
To prophesy with all their zeal
A winter mild and warm, put in Ten tons of coal.—Boston Courier.

To Even Up.

Editor of a Western Literary Weekly (to young man)—Your article is excellent, sir, and we shall be glad to publish it.

Young Man—Thanks, about how much is it worth to you?

Editor—Oh, we don't pay for contributions.

Young Man—Oh! (after a moment's thought) Well, I will see my landlord tonight, and the butcher and grocer, and if I can make an arrangement with these gentlemen by which I can procure rent, meat and provisions without the unpleasant formality of paying for them, I think you and I can establish literary relations, sir, that will prove mutually agreeable. Which is the nearest way out?—Speech.

An Artful Shopper.

A woman entered a dry goods store, and approached one of the clerks. "Please do these up," she said, handing him two old newspapers.

He looked surprised, and she explained.

"I ain't out on a reg'lar shopping sorter, and ain't agoin' to buy anything, but there's that Mrs Simpson, that has half of our pew at church, just loaded down with bundles. She'll never know the difference."

As the clerk was tying up the newspapers she said in a low voice:

"Make it look as much like a silk dress pattern as you can, mister; it'll worry her nuxiv."—Detroit Free Press.

A California View.

Omaha Man (on railroad train)—There is a very interesting article in this paper about the coal mines of Pennsylvania.

Los Angeles Lady—I am tired reading about strikes, thank you.

"This is about their homes. It says the average miner's home is a story and a half high, with three rooms."

"Story and a half high and with three rooms! Dear me! How rick they must be."—Omaha World.

He Was Discharged.

Reporter—I've a good item here this morning. I found a person who had been confined to one room his entire life.

City Editor—Good! Send it right up. Who is it?

Reporter—Why, a three days' old baby down at our house.—Judge.

Discounting the Old Sultan's Death.

The young sultan of Morocco is only 16 years old, and has about $15,000,000 in his treasury. Understand he writes an American comic opera and puts it on the road, he will not be obliged to negotiate a 6 per cent. loan for a year or two at least.—Morrowtown Herald.
