PREPARING FOR THE FRAY.

FIRST ACTUAL WORK OF THE FALL CAMPAIGN BEGUN.

William Hyres Making a Tour of the County in the Interest of His Candidacy For Sheriff—Other Candidates For Various Offices.

William Hyres of Freehold was in Red Bank yesterday. He was making a little preliminary tour of the county to see how his boom for the Republican nomination for sheriff this fall was growing. He called on a number of the Republican politicians of Shrewsbury township, and he said he was satisfied with the way things were looking throughout the county.

Mr. Hyres's visit was the first that has been paid to Red Bank by the men who want the nomination for any of the offices in either party. There has been a good deal of talk about candidates by the leaders of both parties, but very little has been decided on. Everybody knows that David S. Crater will be nominated for surrogate by the Democrats and that he will be elected. Some of the Republican big guns of the county, who have been declaring for months and years past that Mr. Crater would be an easy man to beat this time, and that they would put up money to help beat him, are hauling in their horns. They say now that he can't be beaten and that it would be good policy for the Republicans not to nominate anybody against him.

That's as far as anything is definitely settled. All the Republican assemblymen can be re-nominated this fall if they want the nomination, but it is not known for certain that any of them want to run again. William T. Hoffman of Englishtown, who was elected last fall, is said to be willing to run again this fall for assembly, but he isn't particularly anxious to run. He will be nominated, however, and will undoubtedly accept. John A. Howland of Long Branch, another of the assemblymen elected last fall, is said to be a candidate for sheriff. A good many Republicans say it would be unwise to take the candidate for sheriff from Ocean this fall, and they say that Mr. Howland can easily be talked out of the notion of trying to get the nomination for sheriff, and that he will accept the assembly nomination again. Others say that he is in dead earnest in trying for the nomination for sheriff, and that he won't run for the assembly again.

If Mr. Howland does become an active candidate for sheriff he will get a solid delegation from Ocean township. He is likely to get a big part of the Middletown delegation also, unless Omar Sickles should ask for the votes of Middletown delegates for that office. In the latter case Omar Sickles would be reasonably certain of the solid vote of Middletown in the convention for a complimentary vote at least.

The other prominent candidate for sheriff is Samuel W. Kirkbride of Asbury Park. Mr. Kirkbride is a fine man but he has created a lot of animosities in his own township during the past few years. There are a number of Republicans in Asbury Park who say he can't get the delegation from his own township to vote solid for him in the convention, and that if he did get the nomination he could hardly carry Neptune township in the election, as strongly Republican as it is. It is said that Mr. Kirkbride took sides in a contest for a license in Neptune township which hurt him a great deal, and that he has also created unnecessary antagonism against himself from some of the big Republicans of the township. The men in Neptune township who are opposing Mr. Kirkbride say that he can be left out of the calculation when any figuring on sheriff is going on.

Mr. Kirkbride and his friends do not agree with this idea at all. They are unanimously of the opinion that Mr. Kirkbride is the biggest thing there is in the contest for the nomination for sheriff. They say the opposition to him in his own township is not sufficient to make any sort of a showing at the township primary, or at the convention, or in the election. Mr. Kirkbride is represented as a good "putter-up," and that counts for a good deal. It is certain, however, that Mr. Kirkbride has lost strength in the county at large during the past two years. The opposition to him in Neptune township and the trouble over that license matter may not have actually hurt him there, but many Republicans fear that it has, and they are afraid to take chances in nominating him.

Senator Francis has been mentioned over and over again as a candidate for the Republican nomination for sheriff. Over and over again his friends have declared that he is not a candidate, but the rumor will not be quieted. Every discussion in relation to the nomination for sheriff takes in the possibility of Mr. Francis being a candidate.

It is generally thought that if Mr. Francis wants the nomination for sheriff he will get it. Mr. Howland will step aside for him, and Francis would get the solid vote of Ocean in the convention. Middletown would be almost sure to be for him. Wall would have to be, because O. H. Brown expects to be the candidate for senator and he would have to hold his township in line for Francis as a sort of a return compliment. County Clerk McDermott would have to make a fight for Francis in Freehold, and he would have to make a showing there, if he expected to retain the favor of the county Republican machine. Various other local leaders in other townships would have to be for Francis if he were a candidate, in return for favors granted in the past and for other favors expected in the future. Mr. Francis's closest friends, however, say that he will positively not be a candidate for anything at this fall's election.

There is some talk that Somers T. Champion of Atlantic Highlands may not run for the assembly this fall. If he does not, the nomination will probably come to Shrewsbury township, provided a candidate who is satisfactory to the convention is found.

Oliver H. Brown of Spring Lake will be the Republican nominee for senator. The Republican machine, and the Republican faction which is opposed to the machine, are both very strongly in favor of Mr. Brown.

The only candidate for surrogate on the Republican side who has so far appeared is Benjamin B. Ogden, the postmaster at Keyport. Mr. Ogden ran for this office against Mr. Crater five years ago and did not carry a single township in the county.

Three coroners are to be elected this fall and Dr. O. W. Budlong of Belford wants to be one of the Republican candidates. No other applicants for these nominations have yet appeared.

On the Democratic side things remain as they have been. Amzi Posten, William F. Lefferson and Charles McDonald, the three men who ran for the assembly last year, can have the nominations this year if they want them. There are no indications of a let-up in the strife between John Guire and William R. Joline for the Democratic nomination of sheriff. Each man is sure he will get the delegates from Ocean township, and whoever gets these delegates is pretty certain of getting the nomination. In case the strife should get too hot between these two candidates, there are several Democrats in the county who would be willing to be compromise candidates in the interests of party harmony. William R. Stevens of Eatontown and Dr. O. C. Bogardus of Keyport are more prominently mentioned as compromise candidates than any others.

For senator James E. Degnan of Red Bank appears to be the only man in sight. He is the chairman of the Democratic county committee this year, and the indications are that he will be nominated unanimously.

No democrats have as yet poked up their heads through the troubled political waters to say that they will take the nominations for coroner, but candidates will no doubt be found when the time comes.

It hardly looks as though Benjamin F. Howell would have as pleasant a time in running for congress this fall as he has had in the past. The appointments of postmaster have now all been given out. Heretofore all the persons who wanted to be postmaster in the various towns have done everything possible for Mr. Howell, in the hope that they would be selected for the place when the time came. Within the past two years the last appointments have been made, and as only one candidate could get the place, there have been a lot of disappointments. Up at Freehold Maxcy Applegate declares that Congressman Howell made a distinct promise to appoint him as postmaster and then broke his promise. Mr. Applegate runs the Freehold Inquirer, which is the county Republican organ, and he declares that he will oppose Mr. Howell the coming fall. In other quarters there is also considerable antagonism manifested. This antagonism may not amount to very much on election day, but it will make Mr. Howell's path to Washington less flowery and less pleasant than it has been in the past. He has received nothing but honeyed words and cordial handshakes in the past; in the future there will be open opposition in some Republican quarters, and there will be lukewarmness, if not secret opposition, in many other localities.

The Democrats are counting more or less on this feeling of antagonism. They say that if it changes only 250 or 300 Republican votes in the district it will be enough to elect their man, provided he is a man that can hold the strength of his own party. So far, Jacob A. Geissenhainer of Freehold appears to be the possible candidate on the Democratic congressional horizon.

FRANK M. TAYLOR'S FUNERAL.

A Large Attendance and Many Handsome Floral Pieces.

Frank M. Taylor, the editor of the Long Branch Record, who died on Tuesday night of last week, was buried on Friday afternoon. The funeral was held at his late home on Westwood avenue at Long Branch. The service was conducted by Rev. H. H. P. Roche. Hobart Smock, the baritone soloist of All Angels' church, New York, sang "Abide With Me" and "Crossing the Bar." Theodore W. Moses, the organist of St. Peter's church, Galilee, presided at the piano.

A very large number of floral offerings were received, many of them being exceptionally large and handsome. The body was on view in the morning, and the funeral in the afternoon was intended to be private, but the large number of friends who wished to pay a last tribute of respect to the man they had known and loved caused this idea to be abandoned. The house was filled at the hour set for the funeral, and a number were unable to gain admisson.

The carriers were selected from the employees of the Record office and were Frank C. Quinn, Edward D. Shrope, William P. Embley, William E. Armstrong, Joseph Wehner, V. V. Crawford, John P. Jeffrey and Daniel Doran. There were six honorary pallbearers, three being selected from the late editor's personal friends at Long Branch, and three representing the newspaper men of the county. They were Charles O. McFaddin, John Terhune, Dr. Walter S. Reed, Alex Moreau of the Freehold Transcript, Jesse L. Kinmonth of the Asbury Park Press, and John H. Cook of THE RED BANK REGISTER. The interment was at West Long Branch.

A POCKETBOOK RECOVERED.

Why Justice Sickles Believes in Advertising.

Justice James H. Sickles of Mechanic street was among the Red Bankers who went to Sea Girt last Thursday to see President Roosevelt. When he left the camp grounds he discovered that his pocketbook was missing. In the pocketbook were some cash and papers. After he got home Mr. Sickles telephoned an advertisement to an Asbury Park paper, instructing the finder of the pocketbook to keep the cash and return the papers. The advertisement was published and on Saturday Mr. Sickles got a letter from a man at Belmar who had found the pocketbook. Mr. Sickles was as good as his word and he allowed the finder to retain the cash.

CASES OF DIPHTHERIA.

Afflictions in the Family of Martin Maloney of Allen Place.

The thirteen-year-old daughter of Martin Maloney of Allen place is sick with diphtheria. Mr. Maloney's ten-year-old son, who has been sick with the same disease, is recovering. He has three other children, one of whom, a son, is working away from home. The other children are home. Mrs. Maloney died a few years ago and the sick children and the house are cared for by Mr. Maloney's oldest daughter, who is about sixteen years old. Mr. Maloney is a flagman at one of the Red Bank railroad crossings.

Mrs. Edward E. Wardell of Pleasure Bay fell from her bicycle at Long Branch on Saturday and sprained her ankle. The fall was caused by a bundle which she was carrying on the handle bars of her bicycle.

MERCANTILE BANK AFFAIRS.

Application for a New Receiver—Examining the Bank's Books.

Edmund Wilson of Red Bank, who is acting for himself as one of the depositors of the Mercantile Co-Operative bank of New Jersey, and who is also acting for some of the other depositors, secured an order from Vice Chancellor Pitney last week, fixing next Monday as the day for hearing argument in the case of the bank as to whether a receiver would be appointed. Four weeks ago Michael Barrett and John W. Newbury were appointed receivers for the institution. These appointments were made by Judge Kirkpatrick, of the United States court. Mr. Wilson's application was made to the New Jersey court.

The application in the United States court was made for a receiver for the Monmouth Savings and Loan association. Mr. Wilson's application to the New Jersey court was made for a receiver for the Mercantile Co-Operative bank of New Jersey. Both concerns were organized under the laws of New Jersey in 1894. On June 23d of this year the directors of the Mercantile bank voted to change the name of the concern to the Monmouth savings and loan association. The certificate of this change was filed in the clerk's office of Hudson county on July 2d of this year. It is claimed by some that this change of name was not valid, and that the courts will hold that the Mercantile bank was a separate concern, so distinct that receivers should be appointed for that concern, wholly irrespective of the fact that receivers have been appointed for the Monmouth savings and loan association.

In case the New Jersey courts should appoint a receiver there is likely to be a clash between the receivers appointed by the United States court and the receiver appointed by the New Jersey court. This will probably result in protracted litigation over the matter as to which receiver or set of receivers has authority. The receivers appointed by the United States court are in possession of all the property of the bank, or of the savings and loan association, whichever may be the legal name of the concern. They are not likely to relinquish their positions, and the fees that go with the positions, without a long legal battle to retain their places.

When Vice Chancellor Pitney set next Monday as the date for arguing the motion for the appointment of a receiver, he also issued an injunction restraining the Mercantile bank officers from taking in or paying out any money on behalf of the bank and from disposing of any of the assets of the bank. Mr. Pitney ordered that this injunction be served on the president of the bank, or on one of the directors, in the state of New Jersey. Mr. Wilson was unable to find either the president or any of the directors of the bank in this state, and he then applied for a new order, which was granted. This order permitted the service of the injunction on the president or on any director in the state of New York. This injunction was served last Wednesday on A. L. Chatterton, the secretary of the bank, who is also one of the directors.

The receivers appointed by Judge Kirkpatrick have begun an examination of the bank's assets and liabilities. The expert accountant in charge of this work is Richard F. Stevens, who has had considerable experience in unraveling tangled accounts. The books of the Mercantile bank are said to be in excellent condition, and it is also said that there will be no difficulty in making up the accountant's report. This report will show the amount of money which has been taken in by each of the branches of the Mercantile bank, the amount of money paid in on the various classes of stock issued by the bank, the amount of money paid out by the bank and the purposes for which it was paid out, the securities on hand, and the real estate owned by the bank. Mr. Stevens began work on the bank's books on Monday.

This report, when it is made, may be supplemented by another report, showing the appraised value of the securities and the appraised value of the real estate owned by the bank.

TWO FAMILIES POISONED.

POT CHEESE AND BUTTERMILK CAUSE DISTRESS.

Five Persons Who Partook of These Food Products Seized With Severe Spells of Vomiting Last Night—They Are Much Better To-Day.

Members of two Red Bank families were poisoned last night by food which they ate at supper. In one case the poisoning was caused by eating pot cheese and in the other case the poisoning was due to drinking buttermilk. The pot cheese and buttermilk were bought from a farmer who peddles his products in town.

The pot cheese was bought by Mrs. P. G. Warner, wife of the superintendent of the Prudential insurance company. The family lives on Leroy place. Mr. Warner and his oldest son did not eat any of the pot cheese, but all the other members of the family partook of it. About nine o'clock Mrs. Warner and her daughter and youngest son, all of whom had eaten some of the pot cheese, were seized with severe spells of vomiting, which continued till nearly midnight. By that time all the poisonous matter had been emitted and they were out of danger. The attending physician gave the victims medicine to quiet their stomachs.

The buttermilk poisoning occurred at the home of Azariah C. Hurley on Bridge avenue. The victims were Mrs. Hurley and a young man who boards there. Their symptoms were exactly the same as those who were made sick in the Warner family and a doctor was called there also.

All of the poison victims were much better this morning, though they are still suffering from the effects of the impure food which they ate.

The sickness is supposed to be due to ptomaine poisoning, the germs of which develop rapidly in milk, cheese and fish in hot sultry weather.

PICTURES OF PLUMBER BOYS.

How Boys Look When They Finish a Job of Plumbing.

George Hankins and Al. Fredricks are boys in the employ of William O'Brien, the plumber. They went in the office on Friday after having completed a job, and their faces and hands were as black as coal. Their clothing was also considerably soiled. Mr. O'Brien was amused at the boys' appearance and he told them to go to Dickopf's and have their pictures taken. The youngsters appreciated the fun of the thing and did as they were told. Mr. O'Brien prizes the picture as a genuine specimen of health due to an application of dirt. He had to label the pictures of the boys to show which was Hankins and which was Fredricks.

A FAIR AT OCEANIC.

It Begins This Afternoon and Ends To-Morrow Night.

What promises to be a very successful fair begins at Oceanic this afternoon. It is being held under the auspices of the Presbyterian church and the proceeds will be for the benefit of the new parsonage which was recently begun. The fair will be continued to-night and to-morrow afternoon and night. It will be held on Dr. Parmly's lot, back of the Presbyterian church.

The summer residents of Oceanic are taking an active interest in the fair and are coöperating in its management with the Christian Endeavor society of the church. From present indications there will be very little expense connected with the fair. Fancy articles have been contributed liberally by the business men of Red Bank and Oceanic and by New York merchants. All the ice cream and soft drinks needed are donated by one party and another party furnishes all the fruit.

The fair will comprise many features not ordinarily found at church fairs. Howard Borden will have a tent for sleight-of-hand performances, at which he is said to be very "slick." Sterling Foote will assist him. There will be an "Aunt Sallie" with three pipes in her head, at which people can try their skill at throwing. Miss Taylor will be in charge of this feature. Fred Parmly will take people on a donkey ride for a nominal sum. Bert Borden will run a launch on the river and will take people on a fifteen minutes' ride for ten cents. Mrs. Bert Borden will conduct a magic fishing pond and Miss Bliss will manage a Klondike.

All the ordinary features of fairs are also provided. A table for the sale of fancy articles will be in charge of Miss Carrie Bruce. Her assistants will be Mrs. Samuel Bruce and Misses Kitty Riddle, Emily Stevens, Leona and Emily Ligier and Daisy Ligier. A candy table will be in charge of Mrs. Bert Borden. Her assistants will be Miss Margaret Brill and Misses Jessie and Eva Bruce. John Jennings will have charge of the ice cream and soda water department. Harvey Bruce, William Bruce, Samuel Bruce and Fred Parmly will help him. Mrs. Frank Pintard will have charge of the fruit and peanut stand. Her assistants will be Mrs. H. H. Striker, Miss Gussie Pintard, Miss Chrissie Bogle and Miss Ruby Riddle. A flower stand will be under the management of Miss Loula Ligier. She will be assisted by Miss Lily Briggs, Miss Mamie Bruce, Miss Eleanor VanNest and Misses Florence and Lottie Striker. Miss Bliss's assistants at the Klondike will be Miss Bradley, Miss Hastings, Mrs. Howard Borden and Misses Susie and Nettie Briggs. A bevy of pretty girls will act as waitresses at the ice cream table.

The grounds, which adjoin the river, will be lighted with 300 Japanese lanterns. Each booth will have a canopy and will be arranged in a very attractive manner.

John Jennings is president of a committee having general management of the fair. Miss Jessie Bruce is secretary of this committee, Miss Amy Longstreet is assistant secretary and Miss Eva Bruce is treasurer.

A SURPRISE PARTY.

A Number of Folks Call on Mr. and and Mrs. Daniel Dean.

A jolly evening was spent, the amusements consisting of dancing, singing and music by Graman's orchestra.

Among the guests were Dr. and Mrs. P. P. Rafferty, Mr. and Mrs. P. G. Warner, Mr. and Mrs. James Sheran, Mr. and Mrs. James Quigley, Mr. and Mrs. John Field, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hoffman, Mrs. Henry Commes, Mrs. McMahon, Misses May and Katherine O'Brien, William Conway, William Hewell, William O'Brien, Thomas Bennett, Joseph Dickopf, John and Richard Cantillion and William Steele of Red Bank; Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Drennan and Mr. and Mrs. George A. BASEBALL AT NAVESINK.

The Old Amsterdam Team Re-organizing—Juniors Play a Game.

There is a revival of interest in baseball at Navesink. A number of the old players of the New Amsterdam team, which was one of the best teams in the county for a number of years, have got together and organized a club. The baseball field on the Stearns property is being put in good condition. The diamond has been plowed up and rolled level, and it is now receiving a coat of clay. Games will be arranged with other teams in the county as soon as the field is ready. The first game will probably be played next Saturday.

Frank Johnson of Atlantic Highlands will be pitcher of the Navesink team and Walter B. Connor of Navesink will be catcher. In the days when baseball was at the heighth of its popularity in the county these two players were considered the best in the county in their respective positions. Among local baseball enthusiasts they held about the same position as Buck Ewing and Amos Rusie once did with the New York Giants. Other players on the team will be William Stearns, Fred Snyder, Albert Sickles, Milbury Stearns and Edward Snyder.

Navesink also has a junior baseball team this year. This team played a game on Monday with the Junior team of Atlantic Highlands. The Navesink team won by a score of six to eleven. Jack Stewart, pitcher for the Navesink team, was the star player of the day. The game was refereed by Frank E. Price. The teams were made up as follows:

BASEBALL AT OCEANPORT.

Eatontowners Beaten by a Score of 47 to 3—A Sunday Clambake.

The Oceanport and Eatontown baseball nines played a game on the Passmore inn grounds at Oceanport on Wednesday afternoon. The Oceanporters had things pretty much their own way, winning the game by the score of 47 to 3. The Eatontown nine did not play their last inning. Bob Simpson pitched for the Oceanport nine and John Chatman and John VanBrackle were the catchers. Chatman's thumb was knocked out of joint in the fifth inning while trying to catch the ball and he was forced to quit the game. Ed. VanBuskirk and Charles Dennis were the pitchers for the Eatontown players and Ernest Nelson was the catcher. The Oceanport nine are confident that they are the champions of Monmouth county and are willing to defend the title against all comers. The nine had a clambake in the Monmouth Park woods on Sunday.

King Drought.

My road is fenced with the bleached white bones
And strewn with the blind white sand;
Beside me suffering dumb world moans
On the breast of a lonely land.

On the rim of the world the lightnings play,
The heat waves quiver and dance,
And the breath of the wind is a sword to slay
And the sunbeams each a lance.

I have withered the grass where my hot hoofs tread,
I have whitened the sapless trees;
I have driven the faint heart rains ahead
To hide in their soft green seas.

I have bound the plains with an iron band,
I have stricken the slow streams dumb.
To the charge of my vanguards who shall stand?
Who stay when my cohorts come?

The dust storms follow and wrap me round,
The hot winds ride as a guard;
Before me the fret of the swamps is bound
And the way of the wild fowl barred.

I drop the whips on the loose flanked steers,
I burn their necks with the bow,
And the green hide-rips and the iron sears
Where the staggering lean beasts go.

I lure the swagman out of the road
To the gleam of a phantom lake;
I have laid him down, I have taken his load,
And he sleeps till the dead men wake.

My hurrying hoofs in the night go by,
And the great flocks bleat their fear
And follow the curve of the creek burnt dry
And the plains scorched brown and sere.

The worn men start from their sleepless rest
With faces haggard and drawn;
They cursed the red sun into the west,
And they curse him out of the dawn.

They have carried my outposts out and out,
But—blade of my sword for a sign!—
I am the master, the dread King Drought,
And the great West Land is mine!

Shun Delays.

Shun delays; they breed remorse.
Take thy time, while time is lent thee.
Creeping snails have weakest force;
Fly their faults, lest thou repent thee.
Good is best when soonest wrought;
Ling'ring labors come to naught.

Hoist thy sail while gale dost last;
Tide and wind stay no man's pleasure.
Seek no time when time is past;
Sober speed is wisdom's leisure.
After wits are dearly bought;
Let the fore wit guide thy thought.

SPECIAL

Midsummer Sale of Nemo Corsets.

We inaugurate this sale to benefit the woman who is preparing for summer vacations.

It is therefore, important that she take the right corset with her. The right corset is the NEMO.

We have investigated its merits and find it superior to any other corset for vacation wear, because it is rustproof, and retains its shape.

Its wearing capacity is unequalled for the reason that where other corsets have one strip of cloth the NEMO is re-enforced by a triple strip which insures its durability.

We can safely recommend the following styles of this corset:

The Self-Reducing is indispensable to the stout woman. It positively reduces the abdomen. Price, $2.50 and $5.00.

The NEMO Hip-Spring is an actual figure builder. This corset comes with the Military Belt and has also the Delta-Dip, the producer of the fashionable long waist. Price, $1.75 to $6.00.

HEAT AND DISEASE.

The Sun's Rays Are Fatal to Many Species of Germs.

Sunlight is fatal to some of the lower forms of living things, including certain disease germs which are the cause of some of the most fatal infectious diseases that afflict the human race. In fact, the greatest disinfectant in nature is light, or, to be more exact, the radiations of the sun, including heat rays, light rays and the invisible rays at the violet end of the solar spectrum.

An infectious disease is one which may be contracted by the introduction into the living body of living disease germs, which may be contained in different kinds of infectious material. Thus the disease germ (bacillus) which produces diphtheria is contained in the "exudate" or "false membrane" deposited in the throat or nasal passages of those suffering from this disease, and the material coughed up by a patient with diphtheria is infectious material. In cholera and in typhoid fever the discharges from the bowels contain the germ and are consequently infectious material.

Now, the object of disinfection is to prevent the extension of infectious diseases by destroying the specific infectious agents—germs—which give rise to them; and this is accomplished by the use of disinfectants. Having, as I hope, made this clear.

Any chemical agent which destroys or masks bad odors is commonly spoken of as a disinfectant, and there are a large number of so called "disinfectants" in the market which are simply deodorants and which are entirely untrustworthy for the destruction of infectious material—that is, material containing living disease germs.

These disease germs belong to the class of low vegetable organisms—microscopic plants—known as bacteria, which as a rule thrive better in the darkness than when exposed to daylight, and some of them are quickly destroyed by exposure to direct sunlight. In experiments made by me in 1893 it was demonstrated that the cholera bacillus is infallibly killed by exposure to direct sunlight for an hour or two, and the distinguished German bacteriologist, Dr. Robert Koch, has shown that the bacillus of consumption —tubercle bacillus—is destroyed by similar exposure in a time varying from a few minutes to several hours, depending upon the thickness of the layer of material in which it is imbedded.

As a result of this it is evident that the material coughed up by patients with consumption and containing tubercle bacilli in vast numbers is far less dangerous to the community in regions where the patient can live out of doors and where the sun shines nearly every day in the year.

Some disease germs which are not killed outright by exposure to the sun's rays are greatly restrained in their development. This is true of the bacillus of typhoid fever. Although it has been shown by carefully conducted experiments that certain disease germs are promptly destroyed by the luminous radiations from the sun, and especially by those at the violet end of the solar spectrum, it is also true that the heat rays play an important part in the destruction of harmful bacteria.

This is partly due to the fact that certain disease germs are quickly destroyed by being deprived of all moisture—by desiccation. Thus the germs of cholera and of pneumonia quickly perish when completely dried.

Other germs, however, as those of typhoid fever, of diphtheria and of consumption, may retain their vitality in a dried condition for several months. But the germs of all these diseases are destroyed by a comparatively low temperature. In experiments which I made several years ago I ascertained that the germs of pneumonia and of cholera were killed by exposure for a few minutes to a temperature of 126 degrees F.

A still lower temperature is effective if the time of exposure is prolonged. It is therefore evident that prolonged exposure to the direct rays of the sun would destroy these germs independently of the disinfecting power or germicidal action of the luminous rays or the fatal results of desiccation.

Other disease germs require a higher temperature for their destruction. The typhoid bacillus and the bacillus of diphtheria are killed by exposure to a temperature of 140 degrees F. for ten minutes. In general, it may be stated that this temperature is fatal to all the most important disease germs.

The facts stated furnish a scientific basis for practical disinfection, and it is evident that when sunshine is available no chemical agents are essential for the destruction of disease germs. Any article of food or drink which has been heated for a few minutes to something near the boiling point of water is absolutely safe, so far as any danger from disease germs is concerned, and any article of clothing which has been put through the ordinary operations of the laundry is as safe as if it had been placed for an hour in an expensive steam disinfector or immersed in a strong disinfecting solution.

It will be seen that scientific investigations fully justify the practice of good housewives, who at frequent intervals expose their blankets and articles of woolen clothing, which cannot be placed in boiling water without injury, to a prolonged sun bath, who scald out milk pans and kitchen utensils and place them in the sun to dry and who open up their sleeping apartments for the admission of sunlight and fresh air.

TRAINING A RIDING HORSE.

The Master Made Good His Assertion as to What He Could Do.

"Yes," said the riding master, "I have to be a horse trainer as well as a riding master. In fact, I couldn't very well be the second without being the first. I always have horses in my school stables here that are sent to me to train for my pupils. One came this morning, and if you have the time to spare I will show you how I give the first lesson in obedience."

The master then ordered one of his men to bring the horse out into the "school," a great oblong space, covered with sawdust and inclosed and roofed. The horse was a fine, spirited animal, with an intelligent and kindly eye, and the master said at once that he would be a tractable and teachable subject, explaining that he had not yet had a chance to "make his acquaintance."

"Now," said he, "you must remember that this horse has never seen me before and that I am, therefore, a perfect stranger to him, and yet I think I can establish between him and myself so good a feeling that in five minutes' time he will follow me all about the school at a word of command—perhaps without a command. Let us see."

He then approached the horse, and the man stepped away. Speaking a few words gently, he patted the animal's neck and rubbed his hand over his head. Telling the man to give him a small riding whip, long and straight, with a keen lash, he placed himself with his right shoulder close to the horse's head, holding the bridle rein near the bit with his right hand and in his left hand the whip extended back horizontally so that the lash was opposite to the horse's flank.

"Now," said he, "for our lesson." And he began leading the horse around the school, keeping his shoulder close to the animal's head. Presently he took his hand off the bridle, and the horse at once began to move away from his shoulder, but a sharp turn of the master's wrist brought the lash of the whip against his flank just hard enough to make a little sting, and at the same time the master caught hold of the bridle and gently pulled the refractory head close to his shoulder again.

This was repeated half a dozen times, and then the horse evidently reasoned out the situation somewhat in this way:

"As long as I keep my head close to this man's shoulder it's all right, but the minute I take it away something back there jumps up and sticks me. Therefore I'll not take it away any, more."

That must have been the way he reasoned, for within the five minutes' time allotted by the riding master the horse was following him all around the school like a big dog, nor did the master have to touch the bridle once.

Eggs Used in Bookbinding.

It seems a somewhat surprising statement to make that eggs, condensed milk, olive oil and vinegar are all used in the binding of books. Yet such is the case. The white of egg is used for "sizing," to cause the delicate ornamental gold leaf to adhere to the leather. To make the "sizing" perform its adhesive work even more delicately a little milk is added, and to help further in the important work of adhesion, a coating of olive oil or diluted vinegar is sometimes applied to the leather. Wise old bookbinders have been seen to use the light froth of ale as a coating over a binding of silk. The froth holds the gold leaf with perfect success and does not stain the silk. Many of the old expert bookbinders have little secret methods of their own by which to produce peculiarly fine results, and these secrets they guard as jealously as the housewife does her favorite family recipes.

Does It Pay?

Does it pay, I wonder, to toil for gold
  Till the back is bowed and bent,
Till the heart is old and the hair is white
  And life's best days are spent;
Till the eyes are blind with the yellow dust
  That we strive for day by day,
Till all we hear is the coin's dull clink;
  I wonder does it pay?

Does it pay, I wonder, to strive for naught
  But the pleasures life will give,
To dance all night and to dream all day,
  To be merry while we live,
To work and worry and fume and fret
  Over what we shall wear today,
What we shall eat and what we shall drink;
  I wonder does it pay?

Does it pay, I wonder to give our strength,
  The treasures of heart and brain,
The gift of the gods and the skill of hand,
  For that which brings no gain;
To labor for that which is bread alone
  And the things that pass away
Till the heart is full of an aching void,
  I wonder does it pay?

Does it pay, I wonder, to never stop
  In the ceaseless rush and care
And list to the songs of bird and brook
  Or wander through woodlands fair;
To never think of what lies beyond
  The narrow sphere of today
Till the new life dawns on our untried souls,
  I wonder does it pay?

AN ARTIST OF NERVE.

Remarkable Daring and Coolness in an Alpine Accident.

The architect Viollet le Duc was one day on the Schwarzenberg glacier at a height of about 9,000 feet, accompanied by Baptiste, the guide, who marched in front. The two men were attached to each other by a rope, as is usual in Alpine mountaineering.

The guide had passed over a crevasse, but when M. Viollet le Duc attempted to cross it he failed and fell into the abyss. The guide tried to pull him out, but instead he found himself gradually descending.

The architect perceived that his companion, if he persisted in the attempt to save him, would surely share his fate, and he asked if Baptiste had a family.

"A wife and children," was the answer.

"Then," said Viollet le Duc quietly, "I shall cut the rope."

He did so and fell, but a block of ice thirty feet lower down stopped his descent. When Baptiste saw this and that for a time the danger was lessened, he went in search of help and returned with four stout peasants. Three hours afterward Viollet le Duc was extricated.

In spite of his perilous position the ruling passion was strong with the artist, for, although he was almost covered with icicles from the dripping water, he had contrived to make drawings of the novel effects he was able to perceive.

The Old Tintype.

He gazed on the old time picture,
  The tintype, faded and stained,
And over his face crept shadows
  That showed how his heart was pained.
'Twas only an old time picture
  Of him in the bygone days
That loom now ever so faintly
  Through memory's mellowing haze.

He sighed o'er the old, old picture,
  Dented and scratched and dim,
And smiled at the maiden, dimpled,
  Who sat by the side of him—
The maiden, dimpled and happy,
  Who was pictured there also,
The maiden who held his fingers
  In the style of the long ago.

'Twas only an old time picture
  And taken in old time style;
Each held the hand of the other,
  And each wore a tintype smile.
He frowned at the old time picture,
  The tintype scratched and depressed.
"I wonder," he muttered grimly,
  "I wonder who has the rest."

WEDNESDAY, JULY 30, 1902.

Some Manasquan people, who live in the ideas of a past age, are trying to defeat the project of a municipal water plant there. A water company wants to supply the town with water, and although the people recently voted by more than 3 to 1 in favor of the town owning the water works, those who are interested in the water company hope to knock out the election on a technicality. Even if the election should be set aside, I don't see how that would help the water company, for another election would be held and the people would unquestionably vote then the same as they did the first time.

Kill the Dogs.

(From the Asbury Park Press.)

It is time that the local authorities, township and city, should take action looking toward the killing of unmuzzled dogs that infest the streets. There have been several persons bitten in this vicinity and several deaths of hydrophobia have occurred at Long Branch. In that city 114 dogs have already been killed. We should be as wise.

TOWN TALK.

Long Branch is to vote next month on the question of a new charter. If there is any place in New Jersey that needs a new charter it is Long Branch. If Long Branch was a town, no matter how restricted its charter was, it would be all right, for it could go ahead and act under the general town laws. That's the way Red Bank does when it wants anything the charter don't provide for.

* * *

Long Branch, however, is not a town, but a "commission," and as such it cannot take advantage of the liberal laws for the government of towns. It can act only under the provisions of its charter. The charter probably furnished all the power and authority needed in Long Branch thirty years ago, but times have changed. General laws for the government of towns, boroughs and cities have been passed which provide for government under the changed conditions. But Long Branch is not a town, or a borough, or a city, and so it can't take advantage of these general laws.

* * *

Last year a law was passed permitting Long Branch to change its form of government if it chose, and also gave it power to change it to a town, a borough or city government, whichever it might deem most advantageous. The authorities have been considering the matter, and they think that the Atlantic City charter would be just about what they want. The commissioners will call a special election next month at which the people will vote on the matter.

* * *

Long Branch is going ahead fast, and under a charter that will give it a reasonable power, it ought to go ahead very much faster. A new charter will give it a great deal of power that it don't possess now. If it should organize as a town, it could take advantage of all the general laws regarding towns, the same as Red Bank or all other incorporated towns can do. But the charter of Atlantic City was schemed out by men who had had long experience in the government of seaside resorts, and a charter similar to that is probably the best that could be devised by Long Branch.

* * *

I look forward to the time when the entire coast of Monmouth county, from Atlantic Highlands to Manasquan, will be one big city, under a general city government. The various towns along the coast may keep up their separate organizations, for the purpose of effecting minor improvements, the same as do the cities which make up Greater New York; but all matters of general importance will be controlled by the city at large. The late George Washington Patterson of Asbury Park used to say that by 1925 there would be one continuous city from Sandy Hook to Cape May, but I guess that's a little too much to expect. It is not too much to expect, however, that within the next fifty years the shore section of Monmouth county will be one great city, with 200,000 to 250,000 population.

* * *

Such a city is coming, and every advancement by every town along the shore will bring the day nearer. That's one reason why every Monmouth county man ought to be glad to see the shore section advance, whether any special improvement is in his locality or not. The business push and the public spirit of Asbury Park and Long Branch will do more to bring this result about than anything else. Those towns have been largely built up by adventurous men from outside their borders. The men who go to a new community are almost always greater hustlers than the stay-at-homes. The very restlessness which makes them seek new locations shows that they are dissatisfied with present conditions and that they want things made better; and Long Branch and Asbury Park are very largely made up of these adventurous spirits.

FELL DOWN A WELL.

A Well Digger Tumbles a Distance of Nineteen Feet.

One day last week Sam Smith, a colored well digger, fell down the new well which is being dug by the Shore electric company at its works alongside the railroad. The well is nineteen feet deep and the water in it has a depth of about five feet. Smith landed on his back in the water and was not hurt in the least.

"Doc" Johnson Recovering.

"Doc" W. J. Johnson of Pine Brook, who was injured several days ago by falling from his wagon, has nearly recovered. It has been reported that Mr. Johnson was dead, but Mr. Johnson writes to THE REGISTER denying this. He also writes that he did not buy the old brick church near his home in order to use the cellar for raising mushrooms.

A LAWN SOCIABLE.

It Will be Held at Jacob C. Shutts's at Shrewsbury To-Morrow.

To-morrow afternoon and evening a lawn sociable for the benefit of Grace church will be held on the grounds of the Jacob C. Shutts residence at Shrewsbury, formerly known as the Dr. James H. Patterson place. The grounds will be lighted up with Chinese lanterns and electric lights. The festivities will begin about two o'clock in the afternoon and will continue till eleven o'clock at night. All kinds of seasonable refreshments will be provided. Aprons will also be sold. The place is close to the trolley track, which makes it very convenient for those who wish to attend the sociable. A similar sociable was held at Mr. Shutts's last year and proved to be one of the most delightful church sociables of the season. Should to-morrow be stormy the sociable will be postponed till the next clear day.

A strawride was given last Saturday night for Miss Mamie P. Crowley of Brooklyn, who is visiting relatives at Shrewsbury. The ride was arranged by Miss Bridget Regan and Miss Hannah McCarthy. The strawriders went to Highland Beach and they had great sport. Those who made up the party were Miss Mamie Lynn and Miss Sara Sullivan of Shrewsbury; Miss Hannah McCarthy, Miss Bridget Regan, Miss Mamie Higgins, Miss Kate Mead, Miss Clara Kelly of Red Bank; Misses Mamie, Sallie and Constance Cogan of Eatontown; Miss Sara Porter of Middletown; John P. Lally, John J. Crowley, Francis J. McCormack, William A. Monahan and Miss Mamie P. Crowley of Brooklyn; James Crowley of Philadelphia, and Edmund Leslie, John Glennon and Mr. Willard of Red Bank.

SPORTS AT FAIR HAVEN.

A Number of Contests Held There Last Saturday.

A series of sports was held at Fair Haven on Saturday under the management of William Arras, proprietor of the Grand View hotel. The events included a swimming race, a rowing race, a tub race and a pie-eating contest. Edgar Chambers won the swimming race and got a silver match box as a prize. The rowing race was won by William Arras, Jr. The prize in this event was a watch fob. The tub race was won by Benjamin Hendrickson. He got a pearl-handled knife as a prize. In the pie-eating contest William Arras, Jr., was first and Alfred Hawkins was second. The first prize was a silver watch and the second prize was a nickel watch.

Saturday, August 16th, will be gala day at the Grand View hotel. On that day there will be launch races, yacht races and a race for Seabright skiffs.

HOSE BOYS TO HOLD A FAIR.

It Will Begin Next Saturday and Continue For a Week.

The running team of Relief hose company of Red Bank will hold a fair in the VanSchoick building on Monmouth street, beginning next Saturday night and continuing until Saturday night, August 9th. There will be the usual voting contests. One will be for a trumpet to be given to the most popular fire company in town and another will be for a rubber outfit, which will be given to the most popular fireman. Besides these there will be contests for a woman's gold watch and a man's gold-headed cane. There will be dancing each night of the fair. The committee consists of Thomas Murphy, William Hulse, Elwood Ivins, Harry Hawkins, Howard Champlin and Roland Wolcott.

THE ALERTS WIN A GAME.

They Beat the Freehold Nine by the Score of 13 to 9.

The Alerts of Red Bank went to Freehold last Saturday and they gave the Freehold baseball nine a good trouncing. The score was 13 to 9 in favor of the Red Bankers. The score might indicate that the game was not well played, but each club made most of its runs in one inning and the other innings were closely contested. Cooper and Curtis were in the box for the Alerts and Fitzgibbon was the catcher. The battery for the Freehold nine were Longstreet and Storms.

Next Saturday afternoon the Alerts will play a game with the Atlantic Highlands nine at Red Bank. The visitors will bring a strong team and a hot game may be expected.

Keyport's Board of Health.

W. Con. Smith, Samuel F. Mason and Abram Huylar have been reappointed members of the Keyport board of health. Dr. D. E. Roberts and E. E. Cline declined a reappointment. C. H. Clarendon and W. A. Coe were appointed in their places.

WEDDINGS.

Tilton—Curtis.

Miss Anna B. Tilton, daughter of William A. Tilton of Scobeyville, was married last Wednesday night to Alvin C. Curtis of Fort Hancock. The ceremony was performed at eight o'clock at the Red Bank Baptist parsonage by Rev. William B. Matteson. Miss Josephine Truswell of Tinton Falls was bridesmaid and Rev. Clarence M. Johnston, pastor of the Fort Hancock Methodist church, was groomsman.

The bride was becomingly attired in a gown of white silk mulle, trimmed with Valenciennes lace and insertion and white ribbon. She wore a white picture hat and carried a bouquet of Bride roses. The ceremony was witnessed by the immediate friends of the young couple.

At the close of the ceremony a reception was held at the bride's home and a sumptuous wedding dinner was served. The presents received by the bride were numerous and valuable.

Gaunt—Duryea.

Miss Minnie Gaunt, daughter of Mrs. Rebecca Gaunt of Barnegat, was married on Sunday to Charles Duryea, son of Mrs. Sarah Duryea of Port Monmouth. The ceremony took place at the home of the groom's mother and was performed by Rev. Joseph S. Clark. A small company of friends witnessed the ceremony. The couple will live with Mr. Duryea's mother.

Wm. O'Brien Loses His Bicycle.

William O'Brien left his bicycle standing in front of his plumbing shop on Front street last Thursday afternoon and when he went to get it at six o'clock it was gone. The bicycle was a new chainless Tribune. Mr. O'Brien offers a reward of $10 for the return of the bicycle.

A Plunge!

A plunge into newspaper advertising is not necessary if your wants are not large.

If you have only a small want, a little advertisement in the want column, at a cost of 25 cents, will fill it.

If you have a small business commence with small advertising. Try an advertisement in THE REGISTER'S want column telling what you can do or what special things you have to sell, and change it every week. As your business grows you can take a bigger space in the regular advertising columns of the paper.

One reason why it pays so well to advertise in THE REGISTER is because so many people take the paper. There is hardly a family in all this part of Monmouth county where THE REGISTER is not the favorite family paper.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Annie Fountain.

Mrs. Annie Fountain, daughter of Mrs. Jacob Antonides of Bank street, died of consumption last Wednesday, aged 29 years. She was taken sick last November with the grip, which left her lungs weak. The first of March she went to Saranac Lake, New York, in the hope of improving her health. The improvement was only temporary, however, and she returned home two months later and she gradually grew weaker until she died.

Mrs. Fountain was born at Lincroft. She had lived at Red Bank for the past eight years. Her father died a few years ago. She is survived by a daughter, Flossie, aged ten years. She also leaves two sisters and two brothers. The sisters are Mrs. Thomas Scott of West Front street, Red Bank, and Mrs. Hattie Bishop of Brooklyn. The brothers are George W. Antonides of Atlantic Highlands and William H. Antonides of Oceanport.

Mrs. Fountain was baptized in the Episcopal church during her sickness and the funeral was held at that church at two o'clock on Sunday. The body was buried at Fair View cemetery. The pall bearers were Lester E. McQueen, Frank and Henry Scott, Warren Dennis, Henry Vernell and Joseph Hulse.

Henry McDonough.

Henry McDonough of Holmdel died at his home last Sunday. He was about 31 years old and his death was due to hasty consumption. For some time past he had been employed by Marshal Frank P. Stryker and Theodore W. Colyer of Red Bank. While at Red Bank he boarded with his brother, Thomas McDonough. He returned home about a week ago. The funeral was held this morning at the Bradevelt Catholic church and the body was buried at Freehold.

Julia S. Burlett.

Julia S. Burlett, daughter of Abram Burlett of Beach street, died last Saturday. The child was two years old and her death was due to pneumonia, which resulted from a severe attack of whooping cough. The funeral was held on Monday at the Durham memorial chapel and the body was buried at Fair View cemetery.

Chester Longstreet.

Chester Longstreet, son of Louise and Leon Longstreet of Oceanic, died last night of cholera infantum. The boy was ten months old. The funeral will be held at the house to-morrow afternoon at two o'clock and the body will be buried at Little Silver.

FRANK REON HURT.

He Falls Through an Opening—A Leg and Several Ribs Broken.

VanNest, Jr., of Oceanic, was injured at Long Branch on Saturday by falling through a moving platform opening at Edward Clayton's carriage factory, where he had been working. The platform is used to hoist carriages to the second floor of the building. The platform was down and Mr. Reon fell through the opening. One leg and several ribs were broken. Mr. Reon was taken to the Long Branch hospital for treatment.

An Aged Woman Sick.

Mrs. Margaret Clayton, who was taken sick with bronchitis while visiting her granddaughter, Mrs. Irving Finch of Seabright, was brought home from Seabright yesterday. She makes her home with her daughter, Mrs. L. P. Conklin of Bridge avenue. Mrs. Clayton is ninety years old and there is little improvement in her condition.

BROKEN BONES.

Arms Broken While "Showing Off," and in a Fall from a Tree.

William Clark, who works in Orville F. Bennett's grocery store at Long Branch, was "showing off" his skill in tight rope walking at the beach at that place a few nights ago by walking a clothes line that was suspended over the bathing houses. He lost his balance and fell on one of the bath houses, breaking his right arm.

Edwin Green, aged five years, son of Harry W. Green of Long Branch, fell from a tree on Monday while he was playing and broke his left arm above the elbow.

BRAINS AND BEVERAGES.

Famous Literary Lights Who Reveled In Coffee and Tea.

Famous literary men have all had their favorite beverages.

Tea and coffee, however, head the list, and these two drinks, which the famous William Cobbett denounced as "slops," have been the means of spurring many a drowsy journalist to renewed energy.

Voltaire, the king of wits and litterateurs, was a confirmed coffee drinker. In his old age he often took fifty cups a day, which sadly hurt his digestion and hastened his death. Balzac never drank anything else but coffee, and during the early hours of the morning, for he began at 12 o'clock midnight, he used to take copious drafts of this stimulating drink.

Sir James Macintosh was so fond of coffee that he used to assert that the powers of a man's mind would generally be found to be proportional to the quantity of that stimulant which he drank. Cowper pays a tribute to tea in the "Task" when he says "the cup that cheers, but not inebriates." He was very fond of the Chinese beverage. But the king of tea drinkers was Samuel Johnson. On one occasion Sir Joshua Reynolds reminded the great man that he had drunk eleven cups of tea, whereupon Johnson retorted: "Sir, I did not count your glasses of wine. Why then should you number my cups of tea?"

Cloths or Clothes.

One learns many strange uses and misuses of things at country inns, but let us hope that the following experience related by a friend of mine as having happened to himself is a rare one: He had gone to bed in an Irish inn, bidding the landlady to have him called at 8. At 6, however, next morning, she knocked at his door.

"Ye've to git up," she said.

"What o'clock is it?"

"Six, surr."

"Go away. I am not going to get up till 8."

At 7 she reappeared. "Indade, and ye must git up now. It's 7." Finding him unmoved at her next return, she said: "Git up, there's a sweet gintleman. There's two commercial gintlemen waiting for their breakfast, and I can't lay the cloth till I have yer honor's top sheet."

Big reduction in boys' summer clothing; $5.00 suits at $3.50. J. Kridel, Red Bank.—Adv.

HAVE WOMEN INTUITION?

One Writer Says They Have Never Shown It in Literature.

Literature is the final expression of human thought. If women can lay claim to a special faculty of intuition, why do they not manifest it in their writings? Intuition, if it means anything, means the faculty that gets down to the germ of actions and characteristics and focuses external traits into a central verity recognizable to the general public. Now, there are more female writers than male. No woman poet has ever written an inevitable line, a line that flashes spontaneously out of the unknown and casts an illuminating light upon the abyss. Woman has added practically nothing to our stock of familiar quotations. Take down your Bartlett or your anthology, and you may be surprised to find that from Mrs. Browning to Mrs. Meynell women have never coined a phrase which has passed into the common currency of speech. Mrs. Browning has indeed written fine lines, but nothing of hers can be said to have become a household word.

Nor has any woman novelist created any character that is generally recognized as typical. George Eliot has come closest with her Tito Melema and Mrs. Poyser. You would appeal only to the educated few if you described a person as a Tito or a Poyser. But call a man a Don Quixote, a Micawber, a Dogberry, a Falstaff, a Colonel Newcome, a Bilfil, a Parson Adams or Bob Acres, call a woman a Mrs. Malaprop, a Becky Sharp, a Beatrice, a Diana Vernon, a Meg Merrilies, and even the illiterate will mentally classify the individual as you wish him or her to be classified.

"Ah, but," you say, "in real life women are the true intuitions. They size up a man or a woman at a glance. They are never mistaken when they trust to their instincts."

I can only testify to my own experience. I have not found that women's snap judgments of character are imbued with any special verity. They form likes or dislikes quicker than a man does because they are quicker on the trigger of conjecture. They can only be one of two things, right or wrong. If time proves that they are right, as they must be in 50 per cent of cases, the right guess is remembered and treasured up by the slower minded man as an extraordinary instance of intuition. The wrong guess is forgotten.

Strange Ideas of Feminine Beauty.

An African beauty must have small eyes, thick lips, a large, flat nose and a skin beautifully black. In New Guinea the nose is perforated and a large piece of wood or bone inserted. On the northwest coast of America an incision more than two inches long is made in the lower lip and then filled with a wooden plug. In Guinea the lips are pierced with thorns, the head of the thorn being inside the mouth and the point resting on the chin.

A RED BANK BOY'S RISE.

From Telegraph Operator to Superintendent of Telegraph.

Charles H. Gaunt, son of Samuel Gaunt of Red Bank, is gaining a great reputation in the electrical world. When a boy in his teens Mr. Gaunt became interested in electrical experiments and he determined to make electrical engineering his life work. Last March he became superintendent of telegraph of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railroad company, with headquarters at Topeka, Kansas. He is not 35 years old, and yet has filled many responsible positions. Previous to assuming his present position he was assistant superintendent of telegraph of the Northern Pacific railway. His first experience as a telegraph operator was in a branch office at Jersey City. He next became manager of the Red Bank branch of the Baltimore and Ohio telegraph company, which company became consolidated with the Western Union.

The New York Telegraph Age has this to say about Mr. Gaunt: "He has been identified with various electrical engineering enterprises in Montana and has shown ability as an electrician in these undertakings. He has devised an improved method by which simultaneous telegraphy and telephony which was adopted by, and is now in operation on the line of the Northern Pacific railway. He was also, it is said, the first to call attention to the method of winding multiple relays so as to prevent the lightning trouble susceptible to the ordinary multiple-connected series-relay. Since Mr. Gaunt's induction into his present office he has established a number of quadruplex circuits from Chicago to the Pacific coast and to Galveston, Texas, and he has in contemplation the placing of a number of long distance copper telephone circuits, one of them from Topeka to Chicago, covering 524 miles."

Minor Accidents Last Week.

Harry Addler of Englishtown was driving through Old Bridge a few days ago when his horse got scared and ran away. The wagon was overturned. It landed on Mr. Addler's chest when it was overturned but he was not seriously hurt.

John Muer of Keyport caught his hand in a machine at the cutlery works at that place and the ends of two fingers were taken off.

Russell Eldridge, son of Aaron Eldridge of Ely, fell from a wagon in which he was playing and broke his arm.

Winfield Reid of Sweetman's Lane, near Freehold, fell from his bicycle and broke his left arm below the elbow.

Improving a Residence.

The improvements to Joseph V Holmes's property at Shrewsbury are nearing completion. Steam heat has been put in, a new kitchen, two new bed rooms and a bath room have been built, new floors have been laid and the rooms have been newly papered. The house has had a general renovating and overhauling and it is now a very fine and convenient residence.

Building Lots in Monmouth Park.

M. R. VanKeuren, owner of the Monmouth Park race track property, is laying out the grounds for building purposes. Streets will be cut through and many other improvements will be made. Workmen are now engaged in tearing down the wagon sheds which line the fence on the Little Silver and Oceanport road.

Ran a Nail in His Foot.

Wesley Birchell of Borden street, who works for T. E. de Sotolongo of Rector place, ran a nail in his right foot on Friday. The upturned nail was in a plank and Birchell stepped on it. The nail went nearly through the foot and Birchell had to have medical attention. He goes about on crutches.

A Road's First Coat of Gravel.

The road from Everett to Nut Swamp is being graded and graveled. The road was laid out about 150 years ago and this is the first coat of gravel that it has ever received. The improvement of this road will make a good direct highway between Nut Swamp and Holmdel.

BLINDING A SHARK.

How a Pearl Diver Escaped a Voracious Man Eater.

A successful diver must possess great courage and nerves of steel. Such a man connected with a large wrecking company was visiting some years ago the pearl fisheries in the gulf of California, where sharks abounded. On one of his trips in quest of the pearl oyster he had a narrow escape from a fearful death.

He had been instructed never to stir from the bottom until he had looked up and around. Fortunately he heeded the advice. Having filled his bag he glanced quickly about and caught sight of a huge shovel nosed shark watching him.

In an emergency men think fast. Near the diver was a large rock. He moved quickly to the other side of it, hoping to dodge the ferocious monster, but the maneuver did not work. The shark watched every movement, changing his position by a slight motion of his powerful tail.

Time was precious, and the diver conceived the idea of blinding the shark by stirring up the mud. Under cover of that he might escape. He worked for dear life and had the water thick with mud in less than half a minute.

Slipping around the rock again, he rose to the surface, having barely strength enough to reach the side of the boat, and was hauled on board just as the voracious man eater made a rush for him.

Some Historical Windows.

(From the London Standard.)

In history and literature the window holds a conspicuous place. There is the window in Leven Castle tower through which the wistful eyes of Mary, queen of Scots, strained their gaze across the lonely lake; there is the window in Greenwich palace from which Elizabeth waved her farewells to her brave seamen as they set forth in their tiny "cockboats" to seek a westward path to far Cathay.

There is the window in the tower through which the aged Laud stretched his hands in benediction as Strafford passed onward to his death; there is the window "in Carlsbrook's narrow case," which baffled the unfortunate Charles in his attempt to escape; there is the window in the Louvre from which that other and guiltier Charles witnessed the massacre of St. Bartholomew.

Then there is the window in the narrow Linlithgow street from which Bothwellhaugh shot "the good Earl of Murray," and the window in the High street of Edinburgh whence Argyll watched the chivalrous Montrose borne onward to his scaffold, with never a thought or forecast of what his own fate would be.

The Prisoner's Retort.

The chaplain of the house of correction, South Bostou, frequently has amusing experiences with the prisoners who come under his care. He is required by law to have an interview with every man whose time has expired and who is about to leave the house. It is the chaplain's duty to give the departing prisoner good advice and to exhort him to be a decent and honorable man in the future.

In the course of one of these interviews the chaplain said, "Now, my friend, I hope you'll never have to come back to a place like this."

The prisoner looked at him thoughtfully and then asked, "I say, chaplain, you draw a salary here, don't you?" When the chaplain replied in the affirmative, the prisoner remarked, "Well, say, if me and the other fellows didn't keep coming back you'd be out of a job.

Ancient Gold.

In olden times gold was obtained abundantly from the rivers of Asia. The sands of Pactolus, the golden fleece secured by the Argonauts, the yellow metal of Ophir, the fables of King Midas, all illustrate the eastern origin of gold. Alexander the Great brought nearly $500,000,000 of gold from Persia. Gold also came from Arabia and from the middle of Africa by way of the Nile. But all of these famous sources of supply were long ago exhausted.

The New Moon.

Lightless and pale as pearl the new moon rose
  Over a sea of fighting clouds and smiled
  Innocent, half afraid, half glad, a child
That shyly amid strangers' faces goes.
Not much afraid she fears because not much she knows.

Her mother moon who died awhile ago
  Knew war and sorrow and was glad to pass
  Into the dark where no one says "alas,"
"Hail" or "farewell." This little moon shall know
What death and mourning mean ere full she grow.

But now she shines and does not understand;
  The funeral candles in the house of death
  Are naught to her; the name a people saith
  With pride and grief is but an empty breath;
She has not seen Time's glass of running sand.

Slowly she grows and gathers up her light
  Out of thick darkness; slower doth divine
  That moons must perish even while they shine;
That everything must darken that is bright—
The sun, whose light she never saw, the stars that stab the night.

LINCOLN'S DISPATCHES.

Why Many of Them Were Dated From the War Department.

Surprise is often expressed by very intelligent people that so large a proportion of President Lincoln's most important telegrams and some of his letters are dated from the war department instead of the executive mansion and none of them from the navy, treasury or other administrative bureaus. This is generally deemed a very singular fact, and from it writers have plausibly drawn the conclusion that Lincoln personally liked the secretary of war better than any of the other cabinet officers. While this indeed appears to have been true, it does not necessarily so follow. He certainly held Mr. Seward in high regard, yet he seldom went to the state department.

In the circumstances it was not at all singular. The explanation is easy. War was the business of that time, and Lincoln's eyes were always bent to the army, especially when great military events were impending. He habitually haunted the adjacent war department and army headquarters, where abode General Halleck, his military adviser, for news and views. Head and heart were strenuously concentrated on the fight, wherever it might be. His fertile brain saw, too, the critical points in the game oftentimes far more clearly than some of his so called "ablest generals." He not only wished to know what was going on in the field, but performed his own part nobly. In the heat of action or at crucial moments his orders, suggestions and inquiries were fired off spontaneously from wherever he might be at the moment, and at such periods he was generally "over at the war department" with Mr. Stanton. That is the chief reason why so many of his dispatches are dated at that department and not because he perhaps held Stanton in higher esteem than the secretary of the navy or state or treasury.

How Wars Begin.

"Papa, how do nations get into war with each other?" asked Tommy Seasonby.

"Sometimes one way, sometimes another," said the father. "Now, there are Germany and Spain; they came near getting into war because a Spanish mob took down the German flag."

"No, my dear," put in Mrs. Seasonby; "that wasn't the reason."

"But, my darling," said Mr. S., "don't you suppose I know? You are mistaken. That was the reason."

"No, dearie, you are mistaken. It was because the Germans"—

"Mrs. Seasonby, I say it was because"—

"Peleg, you know better. You are only trying to"—

"Madam, I don't understand that your opinion was asked in this matter anyway."

"Well, I don't want my boy instructed by an old ignoramus."

"See here, you impudent"—

"Put down your cane, you old brute. Don't you dare bristle up to me or I'll send this rolling pin at your head, you old"—

"Never mind," interrupted Tommy; "I think I know how wars begin.

A Help to Early Rising.

Milkman—You're up unusually early this morning, Johnny.

Johnny (without looking up from his dime novel)—Yeh. Mom sent me to bed last night just as Pretty Pete was about to rescue the lovely maiden.

Ambition.

A fever in the blood that burns
  By day and night!
A heart unsatisfied that turns
  Toward the height!
An eagle in the soul that yearns
  For boundless flight!

An inner self that sees a star
  Above you glow,
Then shows how poor a thing you are
  And bids you grow;
That points you to a goal afar
  And bids you go!

A hand that ever points the way
  To glories new!
Above the future's hills a ray
  That shines for you!
A voice that ever seems to say,
  "Arise and do!"

From prophecy that looks before
  A magic word,
By which your very spirit's core
  Is thrilled and stirred
And by whose power evermore
  Your will is spurred!

A fount of hope with silvery chime
  That ever springs
Within you and a song sublime
  Forever sings
And like it bids you ever climb
  To higher things!

This is the inner world I see
  With light agleam,
And yet a pawn of destiny
  I almost seem.
What means the impulse unto me?
  I only dream.

Within the smile of God seems bright,
  But things without
Look barren, as there were a blight
  On all about.
My human heart is torn tonight
  With hurt and doubt.

About the world men madly run
  By greed made blind.
There is so much that might be done
  For humankind,
So much, O God, that I for one
  My part would find.

This word from somewhere comes to me:
  "Rail not at fate.
Those who obtain self mastery
  Alone are great,
For they shall master destiny;
  Strive on and wait."

HONEY AS A FOOD.

It is of Great Value as a Medicine and Highly Nutritious.

Starch and sugar when eaten undergo a digestive change before they are assimilated. In honey this change has been made to a considerable extent by the bees. It is easy of assimilation and concentrated and furnishes the same element of nutrition as sugar and starch—imparts warmth and energy. As a medicine honey has great value and many uses. It is excellent in most lung and throat affections and is often used with great benefit in place of cod liver oil. Occasionally there is a person with whom it does not agree, but most people can learn to use it with beneficial results. Children, who have more natural appetites, generally prefer it to butter. Honey is laxative and sedative, and in diseases of the bladder and kidneys it is an excellent remedy. It has much the same effect as wine or stimulants, without the injurious effects, and is unequaled in mead and harvest drinks. As an external application it is irritating when clear and soothing when diluted. In many places it is much appreciated as a remedy for croup and colds. In preserving fruit the formic acid it contains makes a better preservative than sugar sirup, and it is also used in cooking and confectionery.

In early times, it is said, Palestine flowed with milk and honey, but we have far more of both today than the people of any age ever had. Honey does not injure the teeth as candles do.

Women and Worry.

Granting that a woman's nerves are more apt to become detraque, to borrow a French word, than a man's are, a fact which we have no wish to try to account for, we are not at all sure that it is because she is more subject to the smaller worries of life than a man is or indeed that she is really more subject to them. It is true that the cares of the household, productive as they are of much grievance and trouble, fall chiefly upon a woman's shoulders; but, on the other hand, a man's ordinary business or profession is quite as full of small annoyances and worries which are every whit as irritating as those that beset his wife.

The difference, we should say, between the two sexes lies rather in the manner in which they meet their troubles than in the apportionment of those troubles. We would not readily dispute the theory that it is the steady and persistent pressure of these small worries which works a change in the nervous system more surely than any great and sudden trouble, just as the drop of water hollows the stone, but we are inclined to believe that the reason in this case why one stone is hollowed sooner than the other is to be found in the greater softness of the stone and not in the greater frequency of the drop.

Snubbing a Snob.

Jasmin, the Gascon poet and barber, once treated a rich snob to the snubbing he deserved. Jasmin had been reciting his poems for the benefit of the poor and had afterward been escorted in triumphal procession to his hotel. Next morning while he was still in bed some one knocked at the door, a vulgar nabob entered and installed himself without invitation in a chair.

"My dear Jasmin," said he patronizingly, "I am a banker, a millionaire, as you know. I wish you to shave me with your own hand. Please set to work at once, for I am pressed for time. You can ask what you like for your trouble."

"Pardon me, sir," said Jasmin, with pride. "I shave for pay at home only."

"What do you say?"

"It is true, sir. I shave for pay only at home."

"Come, come! You are jesting. I cannot be put off. Make your charge what you like, but shave me!"

"Again I say, sir, it is impossible!"

"How impossible? Isn't it your trade?"

"It is, but at this moment I am not disposed to exercise it."

In spite of renewed bribes and entreaties Jasmin remained firm, and the millionaire went away unshaved.

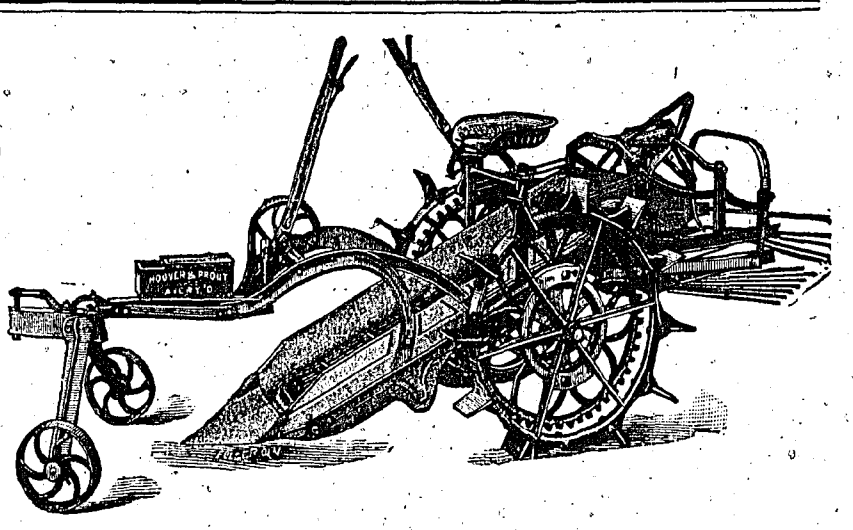
Before and After.

The woman he married was not
  In the least what his fancy depicted,
But he was content with his lot
  And didn't seem badly afflicted.
He thought of connubial life
  In a way that was purely ideal,
But later discovered his wife
  Was most unmistakably real.

She lost all her fondness for walks,
  Where the moonlight its soft shadow scatters,
And all those imagined sweet talks
  Were entirely on practical matters.
No scorn had she now for base pelf;
  She ate three square meals without trouble
And wanted a chair to herself,
  Declining with him to sit double.

In fancy he sat as she played
  And sung soft and low in the twilight;
Instead she now pulled down the shade
  And turned up the gas to a high light.
The poets together they planned
  To read, while the marriage was pending,
Now seldom or never were scanned;
  He smoked, and she sat at her mending.

Fond visions! How softly they fade
  Into gray from their tints bright and rosy!
And poems of life we see made
  Into something undoubtedly prosy.
But none of this made the man sore;
  Indeed, he'd no cause for dejection,
For she made all the dresses she wore
  And cooked pork and beans to perfection.



HOOVER POTATO DIGGER.

This potato digger is the very best machine of its kind on the market. It digs the potatoes and gets them all, little and big. It sifts them free from dirt, and it lays them on top of the ground in a compact row, making them easy to pick up. It does not bruise the potatoes but leaves them in perfect condition. It is of comparatively light draft, and works well in all kinds of soils. For further particulars, prices, etc., address.

BUSINESS AT THE BANKS.

A BIG INCREASE IN DEPOSITS IN MONMOUTH COUNTY.

The Accumulated Profits of the Banks Greater Than Ever Before in Their History—The Loans, Deposits and Profits of Each Bank.

This summer, according to all accounts, has been a poor one along the shore, but the banks show a big increase of deposits. The hotel men and the business men in the towns on the coast have hardly begun to rake in their season's money, and the farmers have got in only a very small part of their returns for the year's work; but for all that, the banks of Monmouth county show deposits of over $5,760,000 on hand. This is an increase of more than $650,000 since May 1st.

This increase in deposits, as is natural, is greatest in the towns along the shore, though almost every bank in the county shows larger deposits than it had two months ago. Long Branch has more money on deposit in its banks than any other town in the county, the deposits there being over $1,400,000. Red Bank is the second town in the county in the amount of money on deposit, the deposits of the three Red Bank banks being $1,332,000. The Asbury Park and Ocean Grove banks have over $1,158,000. The amount on deposit in each town which has more than one bank is as follows:

DEPOSITS.

Long Branch	$1,400,912 07
Red Bank	1,332,743 38
Asbury Park and Ocean Grove	1,158,471 22
Freehold	420,985 08
Keyport	284,989 12

Of the individual banks in the county, the Asbury Park and Ocean Grove bank stands at the head. This bank has over three-quarters of a million of dollars on deposit. The First national of Long Branch is second with over $700,000. Then follows the First national of Red Bank, the Second national of Red Bank, and the Citizens' of Long Branch. The last named bank, although it is one of the youngest banks in the county, stands fifth in the list in the amount of its deposits, and sixth in the amount of its loans. The deposits of each bank in the county are as follows:

DEPOSITS.

Asbury Park and Ocean Grove Bank	$781,563 54
First National of Long Branch	718,497 82
First National of Red Bank	534,869 97

Ocean Grove National	78,030 82
First National of Seabright	67,316 20
Total	$5,760,572 42

In the amount of business done, which means the amount of money loaned out, the Red Bank banks lead the other towns of the county. The loans of the Red Bank banks aggregate $1,318,000. Long Branch and Asbury Park follow with over $1,100,000 each. The amount of loans made in each town where there is more than one bank is as follows:

LOANS.

Red Bank	$1,318,270 30
Long Branch	1,182,054 27
Asbury Park and Ocean Grove	1,141,437 30
Keyport	385,357 97
Freehold	244,777 04

The Asbury Park and Ocean Grove bank is the leader among the individual banks of the county in the amount of its loans as well as in the amount of its deposits. Its loans amount to $736,000. The Second national of Red Bank is second, with $571,000 of loans. None of the other banks of the county has made loans to the amount of half a million, though three of them, the First national of Red Bank, the First national of Long Branch and the First national of Manasquan, each have loans to the amount of over $400,000. The loans made by each bank in the county is given in the following table:

LOANS.

Asbury Park and Ocean Grove Bank	$736,725 11
Second National of Red Bank	571,734 65
First National of Manasquan	484,890 78
First National of Long Branch	440,022 04
First National of Red Bank	409,184 57

Central National of Freehold	119,608 14
First National of Belmar	111,716 04
First National of Spring Lake	90,271 23
Ocean Grove National	95,093 17
First National of Seabright	47,021 54
Total	$5,455,535 53

Although dividends have been declared by the banks since their last report was made, the aggregate profits of the banks are greater than they were two months ago. Five banks of the county have accumulated profits in excess of $100,000. The First national of Red Bank has $320,000, the Second of Red Bank has $244,000, the Long Branch banking company has $122,000, and the First national of Manasquan and the First national of Freehold each have accumulated profits of a little over $100,000. This table shows the surplus fund and undivided profits of each Monmouth county bank:

PROFITS.

First National of Red Bank	$320,859 54
Second National of Red Bank	244,330 80
Long Branch Banking Company	122,803 43
First National of Manasquan	105,006 53
First National of Freehold	104,406 40

Navesink of Red Bank	22,988 64
First National of Spring Lake	17,703 02
First National of Belmar	6,442 34
Ocean Grove National	5,817 88
First National of Seabright	1,000 00
Total	$1,483,910 18

One of the striking things in these tables is the standing of the Manasquan bank. Manasquan is a small town, and there are a number of small towns and villages near it which have banks of their own, and this tends to cut down its business, yet it stands close to the head of the list in the amount of its deposits, in the amount of its loans, and in the amount of its profits.

The banks are paying off the money they had borrowed to accommodate their customers earlier in the season, and their borrowed money is now only about half as much as it was two months ago. The banks which have borrowed money and the amounts borrowed are as follows:

BORROWED MONEY.

First of Asbury Park	$56,725 00
First of Manasquan	52,500 00
Farmers' and Merchants' of Matawan	45,000 00
Navesink National of Red Bank	44,091 50

A RUNAWAY AT LOCUST POINT.

Two Young Men Upset During an Early Morning Drive.

Charles Miller, who is employed by Lawrence Gaffey of Atlantic Highlands, went out driving on Friday night with Mr. Gaffey's horse and rubber-tire runabout. Arthur Davis of New York, a former resident of Atlantic Highlands, accompanied him. Their ride ended at Oceanic, and when they left there for home it was about three o'clock in the morning. At Locust Point the horse got beyond the driver's control and ran away. At the corner at Locust Point known as "graveyard corner" the horse made too short a turn and the rig was upset. The young men were thrown out. Davis's arm was injured but Miller was unhurt. The runabout was so badly wrecked that it had to be gathered up in a wagon to be taken home. The horse kept on running after it was freed from the rig and Mr. Gaffey did not find it until the early part of this week.

A CAMPING PARTY.

They were joined this week by Daniel Rue, Joseph W. Child, Jr., and Harry Norman. The campers will probably return home next Saturday. They took a big lot of provisions with them and besides these they are feasting on side dishes of fish and crabs which they catch in the river. The campers are living in two tents.

CAUGHT RIFLING POCKETS.

William Gaffey Says He Was Acting the Part of Good Samaritan.

William Gaffey of Atlantic Highlands has been held to await the action of the grand jury on a charge of having gone through a drunken man's clothes with the object of robbing him. Gaffey was discovered in the act by Marshal Charles E. Sweeney. The drunken man didn't have any money but Gaffey was arrested. When arraigned before Borough Recorder Griffin, Gaffey admitted going through the drunken man's pockets but he said that he wanted to get his money so as to keep it for him until he got sober. Gaffey was held in the sum of $500 to await the action of the grand jury. His sister, Mrs. William Kelly, became his bondsman.

A SPITE STRIP OF LAND.

WM. SOREY SHUT OFF FROM A PUBLIC ROAD.

George Walling's Economy in Not Giving Land for a Road is Likely to Cost Dear the Man to Whom He Sold His Place.

William Sorey of Hillside, near Atlantic Highlands, recently bought a piece of property from George Walling which was thought to have a full frontage on two streets. Now it develops that the property is cut off from the street on one side by a strip of land four feet wide.

The property which Mr. Sorey bought from Mr. Walling is located at the corner of the Hillside road and the road leading to Gillette Heights. Mr. Sorey and Mrs. Tillotson already owned property on the hill immediately in the rear of Mr. Walling's. They wanted the Walling property so as to remove the house and have a uniform grade from their properties to the public road. The Walling property was accordingly bought in the name of Mr. Sorey and the Walling house was removed.

In front of the Walling property was a bluff five or six feet high. Soon after purchasing the property Mr. Sorey began grading the property to a level with the road. It then developed that the Walling lot had a frontage only on the Hillside road and that the lot was shut off from the Gillette road by a strip of land about four feet wide. Mr. Sorey graded his property just the same and left a four-foot wall of earth between his property and the Gillett road.

This narrow strip of land is the result of a disagreement between George Walling and William E. Andrew at the time the Gillette road was laid out. The road was to have been laid out between the properties of Mr. Walling and Mr. Andrew. Mr. Walling would not give the amount of land for the road that Mr. Andrew thought that he ought to give. Mr. Andrew then had the road laid out entirely on his property and he laid out the line of road a few feet from Mr. Walling's property. It is this narrow strip of land that now divides Mr. Sorey's property from the Gillette road and which causes strangers as they drive by to ask "Why in the world didn't that man grade all his lot while he was about it?" It is said that Mr. Sorey has offered Mr. Andrew $300 for the narrow strip and that the offer has been refused.

BUSINESS MEN TO PLAY BALL.

They Will Tackle the Regular Nine of Eatontown.

There's going to be a spectacular game of baseball at Eatontown to-morrow afternoon between the regular nine of that town and a club made up of Eatontown business men. The business men don't like the way in which the regulars have been beaten lately and they think they will be able to show them how to play baseball. Despite this assurance on the part of the business men's team, the regulars say they are willing to give them a handicap of eighteen runs. At the last moment it is generally believed that the business men's team will accept the handicap. The players on the business men's team and their positions will be as follows:

Motorman Frank Chance, catcher.
Clerk Fred Haynes, pitcher.
Blacksmith Harry Tilton, first base.
Barber and Democratic politician Tom Dickinson, second base.
Painter John Morris, third base.
Baker John M. Roberts, right field.
Hotel Proprietor Elwood Snyder, left field.
Baker George Myers, center field.
Doctor J. C. Rush, short stop.

A WAGON UPSET.

An Editor's Boy Has a Lively Time in a Barnyard.

Hume Pinches of New York is spending the summer at Oceanport. Last Friday he went out for a drive. When he returned from the drive he got out of the wagon to unhitch the horse and the horse suddenly started to run away. It ran around the yard, upsetting the wagon and breaking the harness. The horse was slightly cut about the legs. Mr. Pinches is a son of Conrad Pinches, formerly proprietor of the Red Bank Standard and now owner of the Belmar Echo.

Making a Carriage Robe.

Jacob Soffel Closes His Hotel.

A Mail Carrier's Pet Dog Dies.

A pet pug dog belonging to Edward Slocum of Lincroft, the mail carrier, died last Wednesday. The dog was given to Mr. Slocum by Peter Valentine, who was formerly a mail carrier at Red Bank.

An Ankle Sprained.

Mrs. John R. DuBois of Holmdel got up on a chair last week to do some work about the house, and in stepping to the floor again she sprained her ankle. She was unable to get about for several days.

AN AUTOMOBILE EXPLODES.

A Machine Which Cost $18,000 Totally Destroyed.

An automobile owned by Mr. Preston, a summer resident of Monmouth Beach, exploded near Little Silver on Saturday night. The machine was said to be the most expensive automobile ever imported to this country. It was made in France and cost its owner about $18,000. After the explosion there was nothing left of it but the engine and some blackened and twisted metal.

The man who had charge of the automobile was Mr. Preston's chaffeur, which is the French word for automobile engineer and steerer. It is said that the chaffeur took the machine without his boss's permission. In company with two or three friends he went to Charlie Hill's place at Little Silver Point. The automobilists left the hotel shortly before midnight and when they started for home they rode up the road "a kitin'." The men drove the machine regardless of speed and ditches. When near John J. Gibbons's summer cottage the machine veered out of the road and landed in a deep ditch. It stopped short and the gasoline tank, disarranged by the jolt, began to leak. The chaffeur lighted a match to find the leak and instantly there was an explosion. In a short time the whole machine was in a blaze and a few moments later it was nearly consumed. The flame from the gasoline rose in the air for fifty feet or more.

The chaffeur acted like a crazy man and it is said that he tried to shoot himself. Frank Smith of Little Silver was driving home with his wife and he saw the Frenchman running around the road as if mad. The Frenchman had a pistol in his hand which he flourished continuously. Mr. Smith got the fellow quieted and after he had taken Mrs. Smith home he drove with the man to Monmouth Beach. The remains of the automobile were taken to Monmouth Beach.

A BIG POTATO CROP.

It is Said to be the Largest Ever Grown.

James S. Wilson of New York made a flying visit among the farmers of Middletown village on Monday. Mr. Wilson is the right hand man of the Middletown farmers in the New York markets. He buys and sells produce and handles a great part of that which is shipped from the Middletown freight station. Mr. Wilson is an authority on crops for the reason that he comes in contact with both the farmer and the market. He says the yield of potatoes this year promises to be greater than ever before. This is especially true of the potato crop in Middletown township. The weather has been just right for the steady and healthy growth of the potato and now the farmers are beginning to reap the benefit.

Albert Morford is one of the early potato shippers from Middletown. He has shipped a hundred barrels or more to market thus far this season. He is said to be the champion potato culturist in the township. Last week he dug four potatoes that weighed three pounds and a half. Three of the potatoes were dug from one hill. These are considered unusually large specimens for so early in the season.

Other large potato growers in Middletown are Garrett Smock, who farms the Crawford place, and William S. Heyer. Mr. Smock has about 35 acres planted in potatoes and Mr. Heyer has about 30 acres.

JOHN M. JOHNSON OUT $4.99.

His Son Gave a Five-Dollar Gold Piece in Mistake For a Cent.

Arthur Johnson, son of J. M. Johnson of Navesink, was sent to the Atlantic Highlands bank last week to deposit some money for his father. The money to be deposited included a five-dollar gold piece. Arthur also had two pennies with which he was to mail a letter and he put the five-dollar gold piece in his pocket along with the two pennies. He stopped at the Atlantic Highlands postoffice first and mailed the letter. From there he went direct to the bank. When he went down in his pocket for the five-dollar gold piece he found only a penny. He retraced his steps to the postoffice and stated the circumstances. The postoffice clerk could find no five-dollar gold piece in the till where pennies ought to be and he said if Mr. Johnson had given him a five-dollar gold piece for a penny he must have given it out in change for a penny. There was nothing left for Mr. Johnson to do but to wonder what fortunate person had his $4.99.

SHOT A BLUE CRANE.

Caught by Two Boys on the Eatontown Millpond.

Arthur Roberts and Arthur Ely, two Eatontown boys, shot a blue crane which was disporting itself on the Eatontown millpond on Monday afternoon. The boys shot the crane from the bank of the pond. They only wounded the bird and it was unable to fly. The boys rowed out into the pond and caught the crane. The crane was at least four feet high. They sold it for ten cents to a colored resident of South Eatontown.

GASOLINE BOAT BLOWN UP.

TWO SEABRIGHT FISHERMEN HAVE A NARROW ESCAPE.

Their Boat Blown Up and Sunk in the Night While Crossing Sandy Hook Bay—One Man Badly Burned by the Explosion.

Willis Sculthorpe and Borden White of Seabright had a thrilling experience in the bay off Atlantic Highlands about three o'clock on Sunday morning. A gasoline boat belonging to Sculthorpe had been at Brooklyn for an overhauling and Sculthorpe and White were taking it home. They left Brooklyn about eleven o'clock on Saturday night. When off Atlantic Highlands, about midway between that place and Sandy Hook, the engine exploded. White, who was acting as engineer, was in the engine room. The room became enveloped in flame. Escape through the door was shut off by fire and the only means of escape was a small window. Through this White, who was badly burned, jumped into the water. Sculthorpe hurriedly lashed two hatches together for a raft and meanwhile called lustily for help. White managed to keep above water until Sculthorpe went to his assistance with the raft. Just as Sculthorpe left the boat the gasoline tank exploded and the boat was blown to atoms.

Sculthorpe's cries for help were heard by the captain of the sloop Four Brothers, who went to the rescue. In the meantime Sculthorpe and White had clung to the improvised raft, but White was almost exhausted when help arrived and he could not have held out much longer. After being revived on board the Four Brothers the shipwrecked men were taken by skiff to Atlantic Highlands, where White's injuries were dressed by Dr. H. A. Hendrickson. Both of his arms were burned to the shoulder so that the flesh hung loose, his face was burned and the hair was burned off the front part of his head. Both White and Sculthorpe received medical treatment and they were then taken home by carriage.

Sculthorp's boat was named the Stephanie. It was 52 feet long and was used by Sculthorpe to carry bait to the Galilee fishermen. He had just spent $85 in repairs to the boat.

OPPOSING A WATER PLANT.

A Few Manasquan Citizens Opposed to Municipal Ownership.

At an election held recently at Manasquan it was voted to bond the town for $25,000 for the construction of a water supply, to be owned and operated by the town. A number of Manasquan people are interested in a private water company that wants to supply the town with water and these citizens have begun to put obstacles in the way of the town constructing the works. An order has been secured removing the election proceedings to the supreme court for review on the ground that the proceedings were defective. It is claimed that the resolution authorizing the election should have been signed by the mayor within ten days, whereas it was not signed until a month after it was passed. Should the election be upset on this technicality another election will no doubt be held, with the probability of a bigger majority for municipal ownership than at the first election. The only result of the present move will be the delay of the construction of the plant by the town.

RURAL MAIL DELIVERY.

Its Operation Will Begin at Englishtown on August 1st.

Emmons and the substitute will be Herbert W. Emmons. The route will cover 25 miles and the territory will embrace 156 residences. The other route will be known as the Manalapan route. The carrier of this route will be William E. Tracey, with George Tracey as substitute. This route is also 25 miles long and includes 130 residences. The mail wagons will make one trip a day, leaving the Englishtown postoffice at ten o'clock and returning at five o'clock. Large mail boxes will be placed at Union Hill, Danser's Corner, Gordon's Corner and Bergen's Mills.

Prizes for Collecting Money.

The Second Baptist church of Matawan recently offered prizes to the members collecting the largest amount of money toward the church debt. Last week these prizes were awarded. Mrs. H. M. Gaskins collected the largest amount of money and got a gold ring as a prize. W. H. Ham collected the next largest amount and got a gold-headed umbrella as a prize. The total amount collected was $70.

Outbuildings Burned.

A barn on George Longstreet's place at Imlaystown was struck by lightning last week and set on fire. The fire spread to the other outbuildings and all were burned. A lot of hay and farming implements were also burned. There is an insurance of $1,000 on the buildings and stock, but this will not cover the loss.

A Woman's Hip Broken.

Mrs. George C. Hulett of Freehold became confused while crossing a crowded street in front of Steinbach's store at Asbury Park last week and fell. Her hip was broken. Mrs. Hulett was spending the summer at Bradley Beach, but after the accident she was taken to her home at Freehold.

A Horse Falls From a Bridge.

A boarding horse at Howard T. Ely's at Holmdel fell from a bridge in a pasture field a few days ago and received injuries from which it died.

A COLLISION AT NIGHT.

Charles R. Magee Run Into While Returning Home.

Charles R. Magee, Jr., of Everett, was driving through Holmdel on his way home from a visit late last Wednesday night when he was run into by an unknown rig going in the opposite direction. The accident happened in front of Howard T. Ely's place. Mr. Magee was thrown out of the wagon, but he was not much hurt. The horse got scared and ran away. In front of Edward Perrine's hotel it broke loose from the wagon and ran on home. Only the shafts of the wagon were broken and the horse was not injured. Mr. Magee has been subjected to a lot of "jollying" over the accident, but he says he was not asleep when the accident happened.

The Infinite Little.

A little dreaming, and we are
Farther than the farthest star;

A little pleasure, and we gain
The fortitude to bear our pain;

A little striving, and is ours
The strength of all our latent powers;

A little purpose and a will,
And we our highest hopes fulfill;

A little doubt, intrepid ghost,
And we lose all we cherish most;

A little faith, the steadfast smile,
And we the future reconcile;

A little earnest, trustful prayer
For wildered creatures everywhere,

And that all bad is for the best;
The worst, perchance, be worthiest.

SHOT DOWN FROM AMBUSH.

HOW CAPT. BENJAMIN HARTSHORNE WAS KILLED.

Capt. Peter Vredenburgh Sends The Register an Account of the Middletown Soldier's Death, as Related to Him by an Eye Witness.

There have been many conflicting stories as to the manner in which Capt. Benjamin M. Hartshorne of Middletown met his death in the Philippines. Some reports said that he was shot from ambush, others said that he was shot by a deserter from the American army and still other reports said that he had been shot by his own men by mistake. Capt. Peter Vredenburgh of Freehold, who is a captain in the United States army in the Philippines, has sent to THE REGISTER an account of Captain Hartshorne's death as related to him by an eye witness. Capt. Vredenburgh says:

"In the wilderness of the far and distant island of Samar, in the Philippines, this young officer, marching to the relief of suffering comrades, was shot in ambush and instantly killed. It was one of those fierce, hot, forced marches through those dense tropical jungles which only those who have operated in the Philippines can appreciate. He had sent his first sergeant ahead with a lookout but they were lost in the dark, dense tropical foliage. Captain Hartshorne himself was in command of the advance guard. The guard had just emerged from the forest into the broad sunlight when from a native shack, about 250 yards off, on the edge of the foliage, there blazed a murderous volley and poor Hartshorne fell. A Remington bullet had passed through his mouth and made its exit from the back of his head. He died almost instantly. This was near Lanang, Samar, about 1:00 o'clock P. M., January 2d, 1902.

"An eye witness tells me that the attack was so sudden that it was impossible to tell at first where the bullets came from. But every man, following the mode of warfare in these islands, fell upon his face and opened the magazine chamber, awaiting an expected bolo rush. But as none came they listened for the familiar order from their captain to 'advance by rushes.' When no such order came the men realized for the first time that their captain had been slain. The next officer in rank took command and the entire guard, with tireless energy and persistence, sought to avenge Captain Hartshorne's death. But the same sad story of such affairs as has occurred so many times before was to be repeated—the enemy had disappeared into the mountain fastnesses where pursuit was impossible.

"Captain Hartshorne's remains were carried back and first interred at Lanang and afterward carried to Borongan and buried there. The grave, which is marked with a wooden head tablet, is one of several situated under the wall of an old square fort at Borongan, close to the beach, but on the side of the fort furthest removed from the sea. And there he rests by the waters of the China sea, far from his native Highlands of Navesink, far from his quiet and delightful home in Middletown. And there, in the old Spanish stone church, on the occasion of his burial, was a shapeless mass of wreaths piled in the twilight on an altar. The dreadful pomp and panoply of death, three volleys, taps, and Captain Hartshorne was at rest.

"The greatest dimension of character, and the one that Captain Hartshorne possessed fully, was courage. He had a courage that nothing could baffle, an endurance that nothing could shatter. This characteristic of courage, added to conscience, makes the martyr, and to love of country the patriot.

"'His life was gentle
And the elements so mixed in him
That nature might stand up and say
To all the world: He was a man.'"

TROLLEY PLANS FILED.

The Jersey Central Traction Company Outlines a New Route.

The Jersey Central traction company, which owns the trolley line between Keyport and Matawan, has filed in the secretary of state's office plans of proposed extensions of its line to Red Bank and Atlantic Highlands. From Keyport to Keansburg the trolley road will run parallel with the Central railroad tracks. From Keansburg to New Monmouth the right of way will be across private property. At New Monmouth the road will branch. One line will run direct to Red Bank. The other will skirt the shore to Atlantic Highlands and thence to Red Bank, where the two branches will join.

It is expected that work on this line will be commenced as soon as the necessary consents and franchises can be secured.

SENTENCES IN HORSE CASES.

Fines Imposed on Gordon B. Lord and Peter Morrell.

Gordon B. Lord of Farmingdale and Peter Morrell, Jr., of Eatontown, who were recently convicted of making false representations in horse deals, were sentenced on Thursday by Judge Heisley. Lord's horse deal was with Mr. Soffel of Long Branch and Morrell's deal was over a horse which he had borrowed from William C. Ely of Holmdel. Both Lord and Morrell had made restitution to the parties injured and they received lenient sentences on that account. Lord was fined $100 and Morrell was fined $50. Both men will have until September to pay up.

Kicked by Horses.

Cleve Thompson, son of Charles Thompson of Englishtown, was shoeing a horse at his father's shop last week when the horse kicked him against the side of the shop. A spike that was in a beam entered his leg and, severed an artery. After much difficulty a physician succeeded in stopping the flow of blood.

Claude Hurley of Farmingdale was walking behind a horse last week when the horse kicked him. His right arm was badly bruised but no bones were broken.

COLLARBONES BROKEN.

A Number of Persons Meet With Similar Mishaps.

Henry S. Little of Matawan was getting comfortably located in a hammock a few nights ago when the hammock turned over with him and threw him on the floor of the porch. He landed on his head and left shoulder. He was dazed by the blow and his shoulder was dislocated.

John Carberry, a native of South Africa, applied for work last week on the new gas tank that is being built at the Matawan gas plant. He was put to work on a scaffold fifteen feet from the ground. He had been at work but a short time when he lost his balance and fell. His collarbone was broken, his breast bone was fractured and he received a cut on the head that required seven stitches to close it up. He was taken to the Long Branch hospital for treatment.

Rudolph Smith, who is employed by Henry Curtis of Long Branch, was putting curtains on a carriage last week when he slipped and fell on the curbing. His collar bone was broken.

Keep Out of the Past.

Whatever you do in this wonderful world,
In business, in church or at play,
Whatever of gain or of loss you have met
With the others who go your way,
Keep out of the past
From the first to the last
And away from its worries stay;
The present has wealth you would never suspect,
If prudent you are and wisely elect
To live in the light of today.

The things that are past did very well once;
Today they are rusty and stale.
That trouble you had with your fellow man—
Did you struggle in vain and fail?
What of it, indeed?
There is all the more need
That you start on a different trail.
Don't take to the woods, whatever you do.
Just look right ahead; there's a fortune for you
In keeping a well trimmed sail.

So cramped can we be in our mental states,
So burdened with might-have-beens,
That life will become a woeful waste
For its many outs and ins.
But stop and reflect
You will never be wrecked
By your own or another's sins
If the past you will keep in its proper place
And meet what is yours with a candid face—
'Tis the man of today who wins.

TOWN TALK.

The women's improvement society of Atlantic Highlands has made a wonderful transformation in that town. Atlantic Highlands, like many another town, has a lot of rather careless citizens, who did not keep their door yards as tidy as they might, and who left papers and other rubbish where it would litter up the streets. The first work of the women was to try and impress on the people the need of clean and tidy streets, and so well was this work done that the streets of Atlantic Highlands are now as neat and as clean as John W. J. Bonnell's front lawn on Maple avenue, and that is saying a great deal.

* * *

I like to see neat streets, neat door yards, neatly kept flower gardens and well tended vegetable gardens. Every house and lot, however small, has opportunities for improvement, and every improvement of every kind helps the town. A town of neat streets and nice gardens attracts visitors and helps to make permanent residents of these visitors afterward.

* * *

We all hear a lot about the necessity and desirability of having factories in Red Bank, which will bring a lot of people here who would have to buy things in town and so help trade. Factories are good things, but life is not made up wholly of buying and selling nor of making money. There are other good things in life as well as money, and there are a great many things that are better than money. One of the things that is better than money is a neat home, with a neat garden, and the fact that so many people strive for this very thing shows that there is an almost universal sentiment that such a home is better than money.

* * *

I believe that every man for the sake of his town and for the sake of his locality, when he builds a home, should build just a little bit better than he thinks he can afford, and when he fixes up his garden he should fix it up on the same principle. Many gardens are poorly kept because of thoughtlessness. I believe that if the women folks of Red Bank took hold of this idea of a woman's improvement society, they could carry it through with as great a success as the women of Atlantic Highlands have done. Under the stimulus of their work, Red Bank would quickly show an improvement in all lines. Unsightly things would be removed, there would be a brightening up of houses and gardens, the town would have better sidewalks, and in many little ways there would be improvements made. The plan of interesting the children by offering prizes for the best kept beds of flowers of various kinds, and for the best tended patches of vegetables, would be a desirable feature of the work, since it would inculcate in the young a love of neatness and a fondness for garden improvement.

* * *

Not much money would be required to maintain such an organization. The work to be done consists less in paying out money for having work done than it does in encouraging property owners to do the work themselves. At Atlantic Highlands the society spends less than $200 a year for all its expenses combined and it ought not to cost more than that in Red Bank. In no other direction, for the amount of effort and money expended, could so much improvement in Red Bank be accomplished.

* * *

Broad street ought to be opened to the river. Every resident of the town knows it. But when it is opened it ought to be opened right. The extension of Broad street from Front street to the river, ought to follow the center line of Broad street in a direct route.

* * *

The opening of this road would cost a great deal of money, but it would be worth a great deal to the town of Red Bank. The property which would have to be taken is valuable, and it ought to be paid for at a fair price. Whatever buildings are in the way of this improvement should be torn down and removed.

* * *

A project is now on foot to open Broad street to the river. According to one story, John W. Stout, who owns most of the property at the foot of Broad street, has offered to give the right of way, provided the town buys Philip Kuhl's land, and uses as much of it as may be necessary to lay out the street, Mr. Stout giving the rest of the land needed. According to the other story Mr. Stout isn't to give any land on Front street at all, but wants the town to buy the right of way through the Kuhl and Weaver properties, and then he will give some land in the rear which would be needed for the street.

* * *

The first plan is the only one which should be considered. A straight road down Broad street is the only route to the river which would be of any advantage to the town of Red Bank. If a corner has to be turned to get to the river, Wharf avenue is just as convenient and just as satisfactory a road as the new road would be, and the town has Wharf avenue now.

* * *

Unless the road goes directly down Broad street to the river, cutting the street through would be no benefit to the town of Red Bank whatever. To carry it out would cost many thousands of dollars, and when the money was spent the town would be harmed instead of benefited. Under that plan Mr. Stout would have several hundred feet of land on the street leading to the river, on which he would probably put up a row of one-story business places, such as those which are now on his property at the foot of Broad street, and which add absolutely nothing to the beauty, attractiveness or business appearance of the town.

* * *

Mr. Stout has a perfect legal right to erect such buildings as he has built on his property on Front street. There is no question but those buildings bring in a very much greater per centage of profit on the investment than could be obtained from more pretentious structures. But a man ought to consider in some degree the interests of his town when he erects a building and should not be actuated wholly by a desire to squeeze out of the property every dollar that it can be made to yield.

* * *

Red Bank has no burning and overwhelming eagerness to see more business buildings of the architectural design of those now on Mr. Stout's property. Least of all have the people of the town any desire to spend $20,000 to $30,000 for the special purpose of affording sites for a couple of dozen more such buildings.

* * *

It would be all right to spend a lot of money to open Broad street direct to the river. It would be all wrong to spend a single dollar to open the street unless it did go in a direct line down Broad street to the river.

A Few Points For Smokers

The Searchlight, Perfectos and Joël Parker cigars are made at my factory. Therefore I can recommend them to smokers. They are five-cent cigars and are as good, if not better, than plenty of cigars that sell for ten cents.

I also sell the five-cent cigars which have been so extensively advertised recently in the New York papers. These include the Lillian Russell, Cubanola, George W. Child, Franklin and Cremo. I sell them at both wholesale and retail.

If you want a nice free-smoking Porto Rico cigar I would advise you to try the El Toro, made up in Brevas shape. These are unquestionably the best five-cent cigars imported from the West Indies.

Away Out in the Country.

Away out in the country,
Where there is no clang and roar,
Where it's eight miles to the railroad
And it's three miles to the store,
There is peace and there is quiet;
Men are not contending there
For the powers that seem precious
To the greedy billionaire.

Away out in the country
Surly teamsters do not try
To run men down, unless they
Pass the crossing on the fly;
A schemer isn't waiting
Everywhere a man may look
To rush in and get his earnings
All away by hook or crook.

Away out in the country,
Where the woods are full of joy
And the hens are cackling loudly
At the sunburned farmer boy,
There is never any crowding,
There is room out there to spare,
And the people aren't breathing
Flying rubbish with their air.

Away out in the country,
Where the lilacs sweetly blow
People don't pay out a dollar
To behold a ten cent show;
Men are not looked on with pity
Just because their clothes don't fit,
And the women don't go mourning
When the servants up and quit.

Away out in the country,
Where the water's cool and sweet
And the knife's a useful weapon
When the hungry people eat,
There is not the constant jangle
Nor mad clanging that subdues
And distracts the city poet
When he seeks to court the muse.

Away out in the country,
Where the funerals are few
And the people keep apprised of
All the things that neighbors do,
Here and there some queer old fellow
May not hanker to put down
The tools the farmer has to use
And move away to town.

PETE'S BABETTE.

There had always been Pete. At least so the people down at St. Michel said when a stranger would ask where he had come from. Even before the government had built the lighthouse on Presque Isle Pete's fishing hut had been there, and every night he had hung out his lantern on the end of a pole so that the boats rounding the point a mile or two below would see its flicker and steer clear of the long sand bar that ran out like an ant eater's nose from the northern corner of Presque Isle.

Everybody along the strait knew the quaint old figure, but no one knew of Babette until they saw her one morning fluttering along behind Pete, her red calico dress the one bright spot of color among the grays and browns of Presque isle. The day before Pete had been seen rowing over to the Mackinac shore, but no one knew of his return except Mere M'rie, and she was so old and deaf that all she could do was cook Pete's fish and sit out in the sunshine all day smoking in the kitchen doorway.

When Landry Dubois from Algonac island asked the question direct, Pete smiled and shook his head, his dark eyes, deep set in the small brown face, watching Babette build houses with the red bark chips around the lighthouse steps.

"She has no one but me," he said, with a dubious shrug of his thin, stooped shoulders. "Babette, who art thou, petite?"

Babette stopped playing long enough to flash a merry glance at him under the shelter of her thick brown hair.

"Pete's Babette," she laughed.

And so, all through the isles of the strait, as far as St. Ignace and even down to Mackinaw, she was known as Pete's Babette. Pete taught her all manner of wonderful things in fish lore and shipcraft, and before long she knew all the boats that passed by Presque Isle from the great iron kings and grain boats bound for Buffalo to the gay little yachts that fluttered like white butterflies here and there. But, best of all, she loved the schooners, the old monarchs of the lake, when they came sailing up the strait on a still summer's eve, like wondrous phantom ships, with the glory of the sunset behind, and she called them Babette's birds.

And the years passed by, ten of them, slow and sure and steady, one by one, as the wild geese fly to the southland, and each one left Pete browner and more wrinkled and smaller, while Babette grew up tall and slender and strong as a young pine tree, with hair and eyes brown as dry oak leaves. Then came the terrible winter of '94, when boat after boat went out on the lakes and no more was heard from them until spring waves brought in the wreckage. It was cold at the little, low house back of the lighthouse on Presque Isle, colder than even Pete could remember, and every week it was harder for him to row down to St. Michel for provisions.

One night he came home half frozen and with a dreadful cough. Babette sent him to bed and said he should go no more. They must make what food they had last until warmer weather. But instead of sunshine and fair seas the clouds swept low and gray like gulls before a storm, and the waves came rolling in, with a deep, heavy swell that sent a dull, threatening roar as they broke, up to the lighthouse. And here and there in the dark green waters could be seen something else, a clumsy, swaying mass that glinted blue white.

"The ice has come," Babette thought when she saw it from the lighthouse window one morning after she had trimmed the lamp, and there was a queer ache in her heart as she looked off down the strait and thought of how her birds would have to battle with it, but she did not tell Pete.

It was three days later when Mere M'rie showed her the empty meal bag. She smiled. There were still bacon and rice and dried fish. They were rich. At the end of the week there was no bacon, and they had saved the last of the rice for Pete, who lay on the old lounge near the stove coughing, coughing all the time.

The following day Pete was delirious. Babette stood in the old kitchen, looking from the flushed, wrinkled face on the pillow to where Mere M'rie knelt over by the stove praying. The provisions were gone. There was no medicine.

Babette took the fur jacket from its nail. Before she went out of the kitchen she leaned over the old halfbreed woman's bent form. "To St. Michel," she said slowly, pointing eastward and then at the empty meal sack and flour bag thrown in a corner. Mere M'rie understood and stopped her praying long enough to watch the strong, erect young figure pass down to the shore, the wind blowing the ends of her scarf backward over her shoulders like red wings.

Her hands worked quickly over the lines of the boat, and, taking advantage of a momentary lull, she pushed away from the small, tumbled down pier and struck out bravely for St. Michel. She had often been out with Pete when the waves were as high as now, and she loved the excitement of it all. The low, flat shore of Presque Isle vanished entirely behind the wall of waters, but she could catch a glimpse of the dear old lighthouse and its round top above the tallest wave, and the sight strengthened and nerved her for the five mile journey to St. Michel.

Suddenly, when scarcely half a mile out, the boat seemed to strike a new current. Babette caught her breath sharply as she felt the strong, resistless power sweep her from her course, and she bent over the oars with set, close lips and tense muscles, but it was useless. The deep, swelling rush of waters carried her northward, straight on to the middle channel of the strait. The wind had come up again and raged over the lake like a wild beast. Then, without warning, there rose before her the jagged, cruel line of the ice floe, and the next moment the waves had thrown the boat as if it had been a leaf full upon it. Instinctively Babette had risen at that last awful instant. As the boat crashed into the ice with a shock that made it leap and tremble she sprang forward and gained a footing on the ice floe, a slight, perilous one, to be sure, but one that meant safety for the moment at least.

Already the little boat had disappeared in the whirlpool of dashing waters, and Babette's heart beat fast as she looked about her on her new craft. It was large; it seemed as large as Presque Isle itself, and at first it appeared stationary. But when she had reached its center she could feel the slow, steady motion as it swept on toward Lake Huron.

And now came the division of the channel, and Babette's heart almost stopped its frightened beating as she thought of what would happen if the floe drifted north of Algonac island and out on the great pitiless waters of the lake.

With hushed breath she waited. The floe was heaving so that she could hardly retain her place, but at last the pine crests of Algonac showed on her left, and she knew she would pass St. Michel. With fingers stiffened by the cold she untied the red scarf from about her head and let the wind blow it like a danger signal above her as she caught a glimpse of the lighthouse on the west pier. So near, it seemed, she placed her hand to her mouth and shouted, but her voice sounded like a reedbird's pipe in the noise of the rushing waters.

She was opposite the town now. She could see the waves break on the pier, and yet there was no sign of help. With a fearlessness born of desperation she struggled to her feet and waved the scarf wildly, and suddenly a figure appeared on the lighthouse ladder. Again she waved and tried to call. The figure signaled back and ran along the pier toward town.

It was Landry Dubois. He burst into the warm back room at old Mme. Porteau's breathless and hatless.

"It is Pete's Babette," he cried to the crowd of fishermen and sailors huddled about the big wood stove. "She is on the ice, drifting out to the lake."

In five minutes the news had spread, and the shore was crowded, while the strongest boat in the place was manned, with Landry at the rudder, and stout arms pulled away to the rescue of Pete's Babette. And when they brought her back half frozen and half dead and gave her into Mme. Porteau's care she told her errand in the warm back room—told how Pete lay dying without food or medicine and how unless help was sent there would be no light shining from Presque Isle that night.

"The light shall shine," promised Landry, and the waves that had laughed at Babette's little boat bowed before the masterful stroke of ten pairs of St. Michel's strongest arms as they manned the boat that bore Babette and provisions and medicine back to Presque Isle.

"Thou hast saved his life, little one," said Landry, when they stood in the kitchen where Mere M'rie still prayed. But Babette only smiled and nodded her head, and she went on to the lighthouse.

The winter twilight was falling swiftly, and the wind had gone down like one tired with its mad play. Far to the west she could see a boat struggling slowly up the strait, its lights gleaming now and then like jewels. She lit the lamp with fingers that trembled, and the broad path of light streamed out over the point. Babette's birds could fly in safety tonight, and below Landry Dubois held aloft a red scarf and told its story, even as it is told today around the islands of the strait—the story of Pete's Babette.
