Fliers at pool stir pot

By David Learn
Managing Editor

A couple of fliers found at the pool last week have stirred things up, and not in the water.

The fliers, which advertised a fund-raiser for the Clark Democratic Club, prompted a lengthy discussion at Tuesday night's Township Council meeting as council members questioned Pool Director Pete Smith on the pool's policies regarding fliers.

Soliciting donations or votes for a political organization on public property is illegal under state election law.

Council President Jim Ulrich said Tuesday morning that fliers had been found all around the pool area, in the women's shower room, near the snack bar, and on the pool bulletin board. That, to him, was completely inappropriate.

"It's not something we should be doing at the pool," said Ulrich. "It's not Democratic or Republican. It's the pool."

That was the main thrust of the questions the all-Republican council directed at Smith and at Assistant Pool Director Rose Tomchak, who also is municipal Democratic vice chairwoman.

The pool as a matter of policy does not allow any outside fliers to be posted on pool grounds. The only fund-raisers that the pool does promote are ones done by the swim team, or things given approval by the Township Council.

"This is an isolated incident I was not aware of," said Smith, who said he was unaware of the fliers in the women's room for the simple reason that he's a man and does not habitually enter the women's room.

The council seemed largely satisfied with Smith's explanation that the incident was an isolated one, and that he had reminded staff that they were to remove any fliers or handbills immediately in the future.

For his part, though, Smith objected to what he considered a lack of communication between the council and the pool administration, saying he would have preferred to receive a phone call about the council meeting instead of getting a letter on Saturday without advance notice.

That was certainly how Tomchak herself felt.

"I think it would have been legitimate to call me and say, 'Rose, we'd like to know what's going on,'" she said before the council meeting. "I don't think I should be brought up in front of the council."

All told, the council spent 30 minutes talking with Smith and Tomchak, compared to the 12 minutes it spent on the first part of its meeting. But the topic soon gobbled another 20 minutes more as officers in the local Democratic Party objected to what they saw as high-handed tactics by the council in holding an "inquisition" on the incident rather than contacting local party officials privately to deal with the problem.

"There is no reason why we should call you or any members of the Clark Democratic Club," Council President James Ulrich told Nancy Sheridan, the Democratic chairwoman. "If someone doesn't pick up branches, we don't call the person who doesn't pick up branches, we call the supervisor."

"Are you talking protocol, or are you talking basic decency?" Sheridan shot back. "I'm talking about how this appears to me."

"I don't care what you think," Bonaccorso said.

"That's good to know," Sheridan interjected.

"The flier is up there," Bonaccorso continued. "You're trying to raise money ... It's an obligation the council has, to ask."

The disagreement quickly became a medium for re-airing old grudges, as Sheridan complained about an incident from previous years where politically charged literature was placed under windshield wipers of cars on municipal property, and sitting council members criticized the budget expenditures of the Democratic administration of former Mayor Robert Ellenport.

Bomb scare closes Raritan

By David Learn
Managing Editor

A portion of Raritan Road was closed for about two hours Tuesday afternoon as officials dealt with an abandoned briefcase on a bus that they believed might have a bomb inside.

The incident began about 3 p.m. when an NJ Transit driver whom police did not identify noticed the abandoned luggage on the bus. The driver became concerned because the briefcase belonged to a passenger who had left the bus in Elizabeth, and who had made remarks that the driver considered concerning.

Clark Police Capt. Denis Connell would not disclose the alleged remarks, which he said are evidence in the ongoing investigation.

After contacting a dispatcher at NJ Transit for advice, the bus driver stopped the bus on Raritan Road near Schuyler Drive and contacted police.

Clark police responded, along with members of the Union County bomb squad and the county emergency services unit. Authorities evacuated "10 or 15" houses along Raritan Road during the incident, Connell said.

After on-site X-rays of the suitcase were unable to provide bomb squad officials with a clear sense of what was inside, they took the suitcase out through a window of the bus and opened it from a safe distance away.

"It turned out to be nothing seriously dangerous in there," said Connell. The suitcase contained clothes and other personal items. "A lot of junk."

"All's well that ends well," he said.

Officials on Tuesday evening were interviewing the driver to get a description of the owner of the suitcase. Connell said he had "no clue" whether arrests could be pending in the incident.

Janet Hines, a spokeswoman for NJ Transit, was not available for comment on the incident Tuesday.

Weeks-dead body located in home

By David Learn
Managing Editor

A Clark family remains under scrutiny since the grisly discovery last week of a badly decomposed body of an 82-year-old man in their Willow Way home.

The deceased, identified as Nicola Lombardi, lived in the house of his daughter and son-in-law, Donna and Kenneth Keaveney. Police said Lombardi appeared to have been dead for weeks before his death was reported to authorities, at 10:49 p.m. Aug. 28.

The smell from the decomposing body was so intense that police officers noticed it as soon as they entered the house, said police Capt. Denis Connell.

"The big question is, how can a guy die in the house and be there two-plus weeks?" said Connell.

Lombardi lived in an upstairs room in the house and apparently had had little contact with the Keaveney adults. A 13-year-old foster child in the Keaveney's care had been taking him regular meals, and had been bringing the plates back down empty.

Mayor: County looking elsewhere for museum

By David Learn
Managing Editor

Opponents to erecting a children's museum on Madison Hill Road may have some good news coming: the county reportedly is looking elsewhere.

The former Esposito Farm on Madison Hill Road has been under consideration as a home for The Children's Museum of Central Jersey at least since Jan. 6, when Freeholder Chairwoman Deborah Scanlon announced the county's interest in developing the site. Since then, it has been a regular source of controversy.

"At this point the county is in very strong negotiations with another municipality to put the children's museum there, and not at the farm," Mayor Sal Bonaccorso announced at Tuesday night's Township Council meeting.

The county is scheduled to hold a public hearing on its plans for the Esposito Farm at 7 p.m. Sept. 15 in the municipal courtroom.

Another public hearing specifically on the Esposito Farm is planned during the Board of Chosen Freeholders' regular meeting on Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the Administration Building, 2 Elizabethtown Plaza, Elizabeth.

Freeholder Alexander Mirabella, who stressed that the county has continuously looked at all options for the museum's location, said an announcement regarding the future of the museum and one of the design plans for the farm is expected Tuesday.

Fourth Ward Councilman Brian Toal, an outspoken critic of any efforts to develop Esposito Farm, urged residents to attend the information meeting, but generally avoided saying anything else.

"It's a pure example of democracy in action" — if it happens, Toal said.

What this means for the site is far from certain. Bonaccorso has said he favors keeping the site undeveloped, but he always has been quick to point out that using the site for sports fields could draw more traffic to the site than a children's museum.

Toal consistently has advocated using the space for passive recreation. In the past, county officials have avoided committing to anything definite about the site.

Bonaccorso said he does not know the name of the other municipality being considered, and declined to comment further.

One site the county previously has identified as a possible location for the children's museum is a 5-acre site on Green Lane in Union that it bought from the YM-YWHA of Union County for $3.4 million.

The children's museum is meant to be an educational facility with hands-on interactive displays. Wherever it is built, the children's museum would be run by the nonprofit organization, with an executive director overseeing day-to-day operations and serving as a liaison between the staff and Board of Trustees.

The board currently has 20 volunteer members, but its bylaws allow for up to 30. Among its members are former Acting Gov. Donald DiFrancesco and Barbara Bagger, wife of former state Sen. Richard Bagger.

The children's museum will need to raise about $12 million to complete the project.

The county on June 19 approved giving the children's museum $1 million in seed money to plan and develop the museum's physical structure and exhibits, to be paid quarterly over an 18-month period.

The money will come from the county's Open Space, Recreation and Historic Preservation Trust Fund.

Union County bought the Esposito Farm late last year for $5.45 million, the second purchase of open space under the trust fund.

Report: Crime in Clark hit six-year high in 2002

By David Learn
Managing Editor

Crime in Clark broke a downward trend several years long in 2002, with slight to moderate increases in most forms of crime.

That's the report of the State Police 2002 Uniform Crime Report, an annual collection of data related to crimes committed throughout the state. Crimes are reported by municipality and divided into violent and nonviolent crimes.

Clark police on Tuesday were aware that the report had been issued because of reports in the news media, but had not received copies themselves.

Although the data indicate a general decline in crime throughout Union County, it shows Clark experienced increases in both violent and nonviolent crimes.

Violent crime in Clark jumped from three incidents in 2001 to 12 in 2002. That includes six aggravated assaults, five robberies and one murder, up from only three aggravated assaults the previous year.

The murder was that of Christopher Cooper, 32, of Scotch Plains, whose body was found behind ShopRite in March. Police in late May charged two Newark men with Cooper's murder.

'Car thefts go in spurts. They work the Route 1 corridor, they work the Route 22 corridor, and they work Parkway corridor, for nine months. This was just my bad nine months.'

— Chief Anton Danco

Nonviolent crime had a proportionally much smaller increase, moving from 187 reported incidents in 2001 to 199 in 2002.

The report defines nonviolent crime as burglary, larceny and motor-vehicle theft.

Burglaries in Clark decreased, dropping from 30 reported incidents in 2001 to only 18 in 2002, while larceny moved from 149 cases in 2001 to 160 in 2002.

That comes in a sharp contrast to motor-vehicle theft, which surged from eight reported incidents in 2001 to 21 cases in 2002. That is the most vehicle thefts reported in Clark at least since 1997.

Many of those car thefts happened at retail centers located on Central Avenue, not far from Garden State Parkway Exit 135.

It's that proximity to the Parkway that Police Chief Anton "Sandy" Danco credited with the spike in vehicle thefts.

"Car thefts go in spurts," he said Tuesday night. "They work the Route 1 corridor, they work the Route 22 corridor, and they work Parkway corridor, for nine months. This was just my bad nine months."

Other crimes included in the report are arson, domestic violence and bias crime. There were no reported cases of arson or bias crimes in 2001. There was one of each in 2002.

Danco could not recall the details of the reported bias crime, but he linked the arson to an incident last spring when a pair of juveniles set fire to objects in a trash bin.

The bin was located near Zion Lutheran Church of Clark on Raritan Road. The incident was classified as an arson because the fire could have spread to the structure.

The report also indicates a substantial drop in domestic violence, from 57 incidents in 2001 to 38 cases in 2002, following a countywide trend.

The rate per 1,000 indicates the number of incidents per 1,000 residents.

Clark is a 4.53-square-mile urban suburb, with a reported population of 14,597 at the time of the 2000 U.S. census. The crime report lists an overall crime rate of 14.5 incidents per 1,000 residents. The violent crime rate is .8 incidents per 1,000 residents, and the nonviolent crime rate is 13.6 per 1,000 residents.

The Police Department was down two police officers in 2002 from its 2001 levels, with 41 men and one woman. The department also employed 12 civilians.

Delay investigated

Friday found no evidence of foul play in Lombardi's death.
Calls to the Union County Prosecutor's Office were not returned.
While police continue to investigate the circumstances surrounding Lombardi's death and the long delay in reporting it, the state Division of Youth and Family Services has removed all three children from the home.
"The primary concern for us is why a 13-year-old foster child was acting as a primary caregiver, and that is something we will be discussing with the family in the weeks ahead," said Joe Delmar, a spokesman for the division.

A decision on whether to return the children or leave them in their current foster homes should be made in the next several weeks, said Delmar.
The Keavenys have been licensed foster parents since 1998. Aside from this incident, their record with DYFS is clean. All three children, who passed physicals performed after their removal, will be monitored for signs of psychological distress connected to the discovery of Lombardi's death.
If the state does return the children to the Keaveny household, it probably will put additional measures in place, such as increased visits by DYFS caseworkers. The last caseworker visit was in July, when nothing unusual was reported.

Stick to basics

At Valley Road School, it's still possible for an entire class of students to have a joint session on the computer. Across the township at Frank K. Hehnly School, such an experience is a thing of the past.

That's an inequity that at least some Board of Education members hope to change with the potential purchase of approximately two dozen laptop computers. Not a bad idea. The board should continue to explore its options, but at the same time, it should heed the experience and advice of administration officials with reasonable objections to the board's solution.

Computers are useful tools to an education, but they are not foundational. A painting program, whether advanced as Paint Shop Pro or as basic as Microsoft Paint, is no substitute for having children dip their brushes, their fingers or even their entire hand, into a tray of colors and discovering the joy of creating art firsthand. Similarly, learning how to touch-type is no substitute for building good penmanship skills, particularly at an age when coordination and motor skills still are developing. Additionally, while a set of CD-ROMs can contain the same information as an encyclopedia, students who search through the volumes of the Encyclopedia Britannica also learn dogged patience, build persistence and develop other personal traits and skills that a computer, with its immediate gratification, just can't build.

We won't even mention how unreliable the World Wide Web is for purposes of doing research.

The chief argument for having a computer program is that computers are the way of the future, and that children who do not get adequate exposure to those computers will be left behind. That's a hard argument to counter, but mostly because it says nothing. A computer is a tool for learning, not the object of learning itself. The reasoning skills that are necessary for working a computer are basic and drilled into children from the beginning for the very reason the computer program is desired so hotly: Try as you might, you just can't get away from computers.

At the elementary level, students mostly are going to learn how to run software applications. That's not a very difficult skill to acquire, and not generally one worth spending much class time on. More advanced skills — programming in CGI, designing documents in HTML, and using logic to solve problems — are something better learned in middle or high school, or even at home.

When all is said and done, it is basic skills — not computer skills — that elementary schools and their students should concentrate on mastering. That's especially important in light of Kumpf School's failure last year to deliver a satisfactory performance on the Grade Eight Proficiency Assessment exam. If elementary schools become distracted from that purpose by the siren call of popular technology, more problems on the GEPA are likely.

Of course, computers can be useful tools in the hands of a good teacher. Business Administrator William Takacs, at the next board meeting, is supposed to make a report on what he has found it will cost the district to create a computers-on-a-cart class such as board member Karen Amalfe has suggested. The administration already has said that it would consider such an expense a waste of money.

If the district can find a workable and responsible way to provide the computers, and administrators believe a computer program would be a valuable asset to children's education, then the board should authorize the expenditure. But if administrators believe the money is better spent elsewhere — particularly if it is anywhere near the $60,000 figure Takacs has cited at prior meetings — the board needs to listen to the advice of its paid professionals, and let the computers go.

Speak

If you've ever attended a meeting of the Township Council, there's something that should be painfully obvious: Very few people are there.

The Township Council usually meets at 8 p.m. the first and third Mondays of each month. The first meeting, held at the Charles H. Brewer Municipal Building, is where councilors, the mayor and township professionals discuss the proposed ordinances and official positions the council will vote on when it meets two weeks later in the municipal courtroom. The meetings are open to the public.

On Sept. 15, if there's something you think needs to change in Clark, come to the Township Council and let them know. And even if you think everything's fine, do your civic duty and come anyway. You might be neither amazed nor entertained by what you see, but you will be informed.

And that's what makes our democracy work.

ON GUARD! — Gabrielle Guarino and Nicole Thwaites, both 16, do battle with pugil sticks as they try to knock each other off their pedestals.

I don't rule the world, and that's just fine with me

As I write this, my 33rd birthday slowly but surely is slipping further and further into the past.

Thirty-three doesn't seem like a particularly significant milestone. For one thing, it lacks that ending zero we usually associate with landmark ages and anniversaries.

Additionally, while it's too high to be considered truly young, it's also shy of what we generally consider middle-age, and nowhere near old.

Still, it's definitely something. When he died at the age of 33, Alexander the Great had conquered most of the ancient world, spreading the Greek language across three continents and seeding civilizations from Egypt to India with pockets of Hellenistic thought.

By the time of his death in 323 B.C., Alexander the Great had laid the foundations for what eventually would become modern Western civilization. In contrast, I'm the managing editor of two weekly newspapers and like to make fun of inspirational e-mail.

Somehow, that just isn't all that impressive by comparison.

Three years ago, when I turned 30, I made an ironic list of ways I would live my life differently if I were given

Speaking for Myself

By David Learn
Managing Editor

the chance. Two of my favorite regrets were that I had tried to do something self-fulfilling rather than making millions of dollars, and that I had engaged immediately in trying to make the world a better place rather than saving such altruism for my retirement years.

Three years later, I'm still not very close to making it big. As any career journalist will admit, this is not a profession that pays especially well. The salary is hard to quantify, but it's somewhere between "diddly" and "squat." Nor do I see this as likely to change, since by my nature I don't seek jobs where the principal reward is pecuniary.

The truth is that I know what my future will bring. In the next 40 or 50 years, assuming I live that long, I'll probably enjoy moderate success as a writer. I'll write and publish a few books, possibly tour a little bit to promote them, and then I'll die.

Within a few years, no one aside from family members and a few close friends will remember me.

I not only know that, I'm content with it. At the moment, the chief joys in my life are my wife, Niki, and our two daughters, Eowyn and Ruth.

They are more important to me than any career ever could be, and the time I spend with them is more exciting than any news story, no matter how hard-hitting or exclusive it is.

Eowyn is almost 4, and the evenings I spend with her are the highlights of my work week. They're a nonstop whirlwind of playing hide-and-seek, holding ticklefeats and all-around commotion before we settle down for a bowl of ice cream, stories and bedtime.

On weekends, whatever we can do together, we do. She has helped me to do everything from baking cookies, to turning compost and opening my presents.

Ruth is just shy of her 10-month mark. She lightens the load on my shoulders as soon as I come in the front door and she greets me with her wide, grinning toothlessness. One of the great joys of being a father is to watch her grow, as she slowly unfolds her language skills and takes her first steps into the world.

History tells us that Alexander the Great built one of the greatest empires the world has ever known. Ruling the ancient world without descending into the barbarism other emperors were known for, he united the city-states of Greece before conquering Turkey and Phoenicia, subduing Egypt and building an empire that reached as far east as India.

That's impressive, but what we often forget is that when Alexander the Great died among the ziggurats of Babylon, it was after a night of carousing. He had conquered the entire world, and found it to be a desolate and empty thing because there were no challenges left. He died in despair.

In many ways, he's a great prototype for today's professional. Many men, including my own father, lament that they spent too much time at the office and missed the best years of their lives with their children. I hope one day to quip that I spent all my time with my family and missed the best days of my career.

That would be a good life.

Asters add needed color to fall flower gardens

Sometimes I think that I have spent my gardening life discovering the obvious. Asters are a case in point.

In western New York State, where I was raised, they teamed up with goldenrod to make a stunning rural tapestry every fall. But I took them for granted. Now, however, I have awakened, and like Sleeping Beauty, or possibly Rip Van Winkle, I have seen the light. It's time to give asters their due.

The word aster comes from the Greek word for star, a reference to the starlike configuration of the flower petals. At some times and in some places, asters have also been known as starwort, frost flowers or Michaelmas daisies.

The latter nickname is derived from the fact that asters generally bloom in the fall, often around the time of the Christian feast of St. Michael the Archangel, Michaelmas in Old English, which falls on Sept. 29.

I began gaining an appreciation of asters about the time I realized that the gardening season does not end in mid-August, and that fall means more than a few petted chrysanthemums by the front door.

Even city dwellers can see wild asters, usually one or more of the small white-flowered aster varieties that spring up just about everywhere, including sidewalk cracks and vacant lots.

The half-inch flowers have small yellow centers that darken as the blossoms age, crowding onto stems that grow to be about 18 inches tall. For years I have behaved in schizoid fashion toward the little whites, alternately ignoring them, snatching up as many as possible to use as filler in bouquets, and attempting to eradicate them from my home garden.

The Gardener's Apprentice

By Elisabeth Ginsburg

This is ultimately an act of futility because no matter what I do, they triumph in the end, returning every year.

I am much more enchanted with two other native asters, the New England aster, Aster novae-angliae, and the smooth aster, Aster laevis.

The New England variety is gorgeous, 3 to 7 feet tall, with deep, rosy purple flowers composed of numerous petals.

The authors of my wildflower book mention that professional growers often cultivate New England asters. Available cultivars include the tall, magenta-flowered Andenken an Paul Gerbe, a German selection; and Purple Dome, which at 18 to 24 inches is relatively low-growing and extremely floriferous.

The species form of smooth aster has small flowers with pale bluish-purple petals. The plant is less dramatic than its New England cousin, but, at least in the places that I frequent, somewhat more plentiful.

One of its cultivars, Aster laevis Bluebird, sports light blue-purple flowers that are one inch, somewhat larger than ordinary aster blooms.

Another medium- to tall-growing aster species is Aster Novi-Belgii. Varieties include the pink-flowered Patricia Ballard, the eponymous Bonningdale White and the vivid blue Richness, bred in England.

If your garden and pocketbook are big enough, try them all.

Though lacking an appreciation of the tribe as a whole, I have certainly had a few asters in my home garden before now.

Several years ago I acquired Aster Hella Lacey, a tall specimen that bears an obvious relationship to the New England aster.

Named for the wife of garden writer Alan Lacey, Hella has thrived and multiplied to the point where this year I will have to make some divisions.

In my former garden I also had two anonymous grocery store asters that grew to be about 18 inches tall and bore soft blue flowers.

Though they were nameless, these two asters have performed magnificently in the garden, growing more impressive every year.

Despite my best efforts, my garden usually lacks color at this time of the year. Rather than stuffing it full of chrysanthemums, I have resolved to make use of my recent enlightenment and invest in a few more asters.

The Marie Ballard New York aster — no doubt a cousin of Patricia Ballard — is as tall as Hella Lacey, with double flowers in a deeper shade of blue. I think Marie and Hella will look delightful standing shoulder to shoulder.

The only flaw that these tall varieties possess is rather unattractive legs, but fortunately there is an easy remedy.

One of the catalogs offers a collection of dwarf New York asters in assorted shades that I could plant in front of them. I also might invest in a Mönch aster, a light blue-flowered hybrid that stands taller than the dwarfs and shorter than Hella Lacey.

If in the midst of all this aster-related activity I find myself addicted to the genus, there are lots of options. It has at least 500 members.

Of course aster enthusiasm also comes wrapped in the plant lover's eternal paradox: so many varieties, so little sunny space.

Time again to watch the freeholder changes?

A new municipal chairman in Plainfield could spell potential changes for the freeholder board. Mayor Al McWilliams wrested control of the Democratic Party in June's primary from Assemblyman Jerry Green. A former freeholder, Green was the Democratic chairman for many years until the party's reorganization when McWilliams was elected chairman.

It could be that McWilliams will want his own freeholder on the county board when he gets the chance, which could be in 2004 when Freeholder Lewis Mingo's term expires. Historically, the Plainfield municipal chairman has had the courtesy of selecting a freeholder from Plainfield and word is that McWilliams is not fond of Mingo.

It seems an annual rite the rumors that float about regarding which freeholder is on the outs with party leadership.

Nicholas Scutari of Linden and Mary Ruotolo of Westfield always seem to be mentioned as possibilities for not seeking re-election. It seems Scutari is in and out of the doghouse frequently with party Chairwoman Charlotte DeFiliippo.

County Seat

By Mark Hrywna
Regional Editor

Similarly, Ruotolo's name always comes up as being the next freeholder to ride into the sunset, only she already has the state job that's usually used as the carrot. She joined the board in 1998 along with Mingo and the two have been elected together, with Daniel Sullivan of Elizabeth, each year since.

Ruotolo has said she'd like to serve a third term but there's always talk of replacing her because of her relationship with the chairwoman. If both Mingo and Ruotolo are replaced next year, one can bet that Sheriff Ralph Froehlich would remain to lead the ballot with Sullivan to complement two new freeholder candidates.

Then there's always the idea the current term will be Froehlich's last. But he has said he'll run again, which would be his ninth term. He's already the longest-serving sheriff in state history with eight, three-year terms.

Assemblyman Joseph Cryan — who also serves as Union's municipal chairman and vice chairman of the state Democratic Committee — was quietly appointed as the new undersheriff in the Union County Sheriff's Office at an annual salary of $95,000, to with his $49,000 Assembly salary, replacing the retiring William Malcolm.

Cryan's name is always first on the list when talk revolves around a successor to Froehlich. It's long been rumored that Cryan would like to be sheriff, a post his father, John, held for many years in Essex County.

But before all of next year's gossip, there's still this year's election, which Republicans are still banking on as to have some success while they have a chance. With a second straight election season with no big race on the ballot, it's the GOP's chance to capitalize. You can bet the governor's poll numbers will be highlighted in the races for Senate and Assembly at the top of the ballot this fall. Last year, Union County Republicans were excited about running against former U.S. Sen. Robert Torricelli before Dems switched candidates in September.

But speculation about a Democrat being replaced on the party line each year is sometimes just that. In 1999, the party replaced Donald Gonçalves of Elizabeth with former Elizabeth school board member Angel Estrada.

Last year it was Chester Holmes of Rahway who was speculated not to be seeking re-election this fall or being bumped off the party line after Rick Proctor, Rahway's Democratic chairman, filled Linda Stender's seat and earned election to a full term. That speculation arose out of the fact that the freeholder board rarely has two members from a city as small as Rahway. However, Holmes is on the ticket along with Deborah Scanlon of Union and Alexander Mirabella of Fanwood, formerly of Roselle Park.

Those three will be facing Republicans Kenneth Haynes of Roselle, Bob Reilly of Winfield and Stuart Kline, a councilman from Fanwood. There are two other candidates, in addition to the major parties: Joe Renna of Cranford, a county employee and Independent, and Green Party candidate Barbara Briemer of Westfield.

THIS IS H.S. FOOTBALL

By JR Parachini
Sports Editor

High school football in Union County is back and back in a big way.

Some schools are in different sections because of the NJSIAA's Reclassification for the 2003-2004 season, while two football schools dropped in group size.

All 16 football playing schools in the county open next weekend, meaning they will be participating in their game-scrimmages sometime this weekend.

Johnson won its second North 2, Group 2 playoff championship last year, defeating defending champion West Essex 29-7 on the road in the final.

However, it was only the fifth state championship won by a Union County team in the past eight seasons.

From 1995 to 2002, Elizabeth won in 1997, 1999 and 2000 and Johnson in 1995 and 2002.

Is Union County football down a bit? Tough question to answer.

North Jersey, Section 2 consisted of teams from Morris, Union, Essex and Warren counties up until this year's reclassification.

Since playoff championships began to be contested starting in 1974, Morris County claimed 47 and Union County 44 through last year's title games.

The four sectional champions in North 2 last season were Montclair in Group 4, Mount Olive for the first time in Group 3, Johnson in Group 2 and Mountain Lakes for the first time since 1976 in Group 1.

Now, Union County schools Johnson, Rahway and Roselle are situated in Central Jersey, Group 2, while Roselle Park, Brearley and New Providence are in Central Jersey, Group 1.

Westfield dropped to Group 3 and is in North 2, Group 3, while Cranford dropped to Group 2 and is situated in North 2, Group 2.

North 2 now also includes teams from Bergen, Hudson, Middlesex and Somerset counties.

Summit, with standout senior players such as quarterback Rob Schroeder, running back Jeff Della Piazza and the Reid twin brothers, Dwayne and Dwight, will be a favorite to claim North 2, Group 2 after reaching the semifinals last year.

Cranford had a winning season last year for the first time since 1992 and its 6-4 mark included a first state playoff appearance (and only second total) since 1975.

Perennial powers Union and Roselle Park have been down a bit in recent years. Both last won state titles in 1993. Will this be a bounce back season for both?

Brearley, behind first-year head coach Scott Miller, was the only team in the county last year to win all nine of its regular season games.

The Bears had two win all nine on the road as well as Ward Field was being renovated.

Brearley has six games scheduled at home this season.

Michael Katz takes over the head coaching reigns at Johnson after the retirement of Bob Taylor, who remains the principal at the Clark school.

Here's a look at last year's final county rankings:

High school football teams in Union County will be putting the finishing touches on pre-season practice this weekend as they are preparing for their game-scrimmages.

All 16 squads will kick off their 2003 seasons next weekend.

The Hilltoppers reached the sectional semifinals last year en route to a solid 9-2 season.

Cranford, which last season had its first winning campaign in 10 years, has improved a great deal and this year is situated in North 2, Group 2.

A fair share

Housing needs are back again on the front burner. Come Oct. 6, the state will be changing the rules regarding low- and moderate-income housing. Mayors, lawyers and builders will be checking their mail for the State Register which will set out the proposal. Couple this with the increased portion of income spent on housing and the subject is very important.

Early reports say the state will scuttle the requirements of the past 25 years of each town being required to provide "a fair share" of low- and moderate-income housing. Under the auspices of the Council of Affordable Housing, a formula seemingly from NASA was developed. Opponents say that after all the litigation, very little housing was actually built.

Left Out

By Frank Capece

Under the new plan, for every 10 new units of housing, one unit must be low and moderate income. A new wrinkle is the requirement that for every 30 new jobs, a new unit of low and moderate housing must be included.

A two-year moratorium will give everybody a chance to figure out the new system. It is already obvious to local mayors; if you don't grow you don't need to worry anymore about low-income housing requirements.

Sitting on Sunday with Plainfield Mayor Albert McWilliams, one thing was clear, no one is happy with the current housing rules in the state. Surprisingly, in his six years as mayor, he has not accepted any proposals for Regional Contribution Agreements. For the non housing wonks that's an agreement which permits suburban communities to send in dollars a part of their fair share obligation to urban communities rather than build.

McWilliams speaks from the position of seeing two long-term projects with housing completed, the Tepper's units and the Park-Madison project in conjunction with Union County Improvement Authority. To McWilliams, fair share applies to everyone.

The so-called RCA agreements are expected to survive the new rules. Don't look to Plainfield for help. McWilliams is a Michigan Law School graduate. He is an attorney at a fortune 500 company. He sees RCA agreements as a type of "segregation." It runs counter to McWilliams' goals of opening up opportunity and "having housing where the jobs are."

In terms of cost, you have to give Plainfield credit for putting their principals above the money. I argue to the mayor that not accepting the money of suburban towns doesn't stop the process; it just moves the money to Newark and other cities. The RCA money must go for housing rehabilitation.

McWilliams is actually a devotee of pushing for better housing and diversity becoming a strength in a community. As to the benefits of RCA he says, "I'm not convinced."

A number of common household products can be used by someone looking to get intoxicated.

Getting high at home

By Joshua Zaitz
Staff Writer

Police officers pick up two 13-year-old girls huffing spray paint on the street corner.

The girls are intoxicated — high from inhaling the gasses in the aerosol spray paint can.

"Most of this will look like the person is drunk but you won't smell any alcohol on them," said John Kriger, a certified addictions counselor and prevention specialist.

One of the girls asks an officer how he knows what they are inhaling. The officer brings the girl around the car, cranks the mirror and tells her to look at herself.

The girl's face is covered in paint. "We may laugh a lot but the reality is what's going onto her face is also going into her lungs," said Kriger.

Kids are getting high in their homes and classrooms not only by using street drugs but also by using everyday household products.

One of the primary depressants kids get involved in besides alcohol are inhalants.

Inhalants are anything that comes in a pressurized aerosol can — from spray paint to air fresheners.

Kids are huffing — or inhaling — the gas propellants that release the aerosol products into the air.

"The gas happens to be propane and butane," said Kriger, explaining that these flammable gasses are found in cigarette lighters and gas grills. "Those are things that are not intended to be in your body."

The Union County Coalition for the Prevention of Substance Abuse, an autonomous arm of Prevention Links, and the Union County Committee Against Hate, sponsored a drug prevention workshop on Aug. 27 at The Westwood in Garwood for parents and educators.

"The program is mostly an informative program that talks about all the prevention that can be done but at the same time it also talks about what is sold over the counter and how the outside media presents their products," said Coalition Coordinator Sandee Moroso, explaining that often times companies gear their advertising campaigns toward teenagers rather than adults.

John Kriger, a certified addictions counselor and prevention specialist, holds one of a number of household items that teens sometimes use to get high.

The presentation, "What's Hot & What's Not: For Adults Only," showed participants how kids can get high without ever leaving the house, how they can get high in the classroom undetected, and what to look for.

"I'm hoping to show you not only what's being done but how it's being done — what to look for, what to look for in the classroom," said Kriger. "Kids, realistically, could be using it right in the classroom and you would not even know."

More than 1,000 different household products are commonly abused.

Some of the most abused products include glues or adhesives, nail polish remover, marking pens, paint thinner, spray paint, butane lighter fluid, gasoline, propane gas, typewriter correction fluid, household cleaners, cooking sprays, deodorants, fabric protectors, whipped cream aerosols and air-conditioning coolants.

Warning signs that kids are using household products to get high include drastic changes in the child's personality, rapidly dropping grades, new friends, lack of money when they would normally have money, general apathy and an argumentative personality when the child is normally very easy going.

"The reality is with inhalants, one of the things we don't even think about is the fact that a kid can die the first time they ever use it," said Kriger, explaining that kids could have an allergic reaction to the inhalant.

"There's potential for damage to the brain just because you're huffing this gas that's not oxygen," said Kriger.

Huffing can cause sickness and death. Every year hundreds of kids suffer severe consequences from inhalant abuse including permanent brain damage, loss of muscle control, as well as the destruction of the heart, blood, kidney, liver and bone marrow.

Carol Rowe, a Clark resident who is a member of the Cranford/Clark Coalition, said she first became involved in drug prevention after she lost her son to drug abuse 10 years ago.

"Hopefully people will benefit from his story," she said. "It's important for kids to stop and think before getting involved in drugs."

Kruger said that many alcohol and tobacco advertising campaigns are geared toward underage kids who are very impressionable.

Studies show that kids will view over 180,000 beer commercials by the time they're 18 years old.

"How many of those kids have been told 'I love you' 180,000 times by the time they're 18?" said Kriger.

Historic preservation master plan released

By Joshua Zaitz
Staff Writer

Union County's Historic Preservation Master Plan, released last week, identifies historic sites within the county for preservation and possible acquisition.

"We're hoping that in conjunction with the municipalities that we can preserve as much of our history as possible," said Freeholder Alexander Mirabella.

The historic preservation plan recommends that the county acquire the Belcher-Ogden Mansion, the Bonnell-Price House and St. John's Parsonage, each located in Elizabeth, as well as the Droesch's Mill site in Cranford or secure the protection of it through a local ordinance. The mill was built in 1737 and is the last mill on the Rahway River.

In 2000, Cranford resident George McDonough bought the mill, wanting to preserve it. "I want to be the last private owner of this mill," he said. "I either want Cranford to take it over or the county to take it over." A Democrat, McDonough last year lost in a bid for a seat on the Cranford Township Committee.

Other suggestions from the master plan include encouraging certain sites to develop permanent exhibits relating to particular events and people important in the county's history, such as First Presbyterian Church in Elizabeth, the Union County Courthouse in Elizabeth, Elizabeth Public Library, Caldwell Parsonage and First Presbyterian Church of Connecticut Farms in Union and the Cannon Ball House in Springfield, among others.

Some of the essential sites that should be preserved according to the master plan include — Elizabeth: Broad Street, East Jersey Street, Elizabeth Avenue and Pearl Street; Berkeley Heights: Littell-Lord House; Clark: Dr. Robinson Plantation; Hillside: Woodruff House; Plainfield: Plainfield Friends Meeting House; Rahway: Abraham Terrill Tavern/Merchants and Drivers Tavern; Scotch Plains: Stage House Inn; Westfield: Miller-Cory House.

"The Historic Preservation Master Plan was designed to assist historic properties within Union County to preserve, protect and stabilize the properties that are very important to the history and heritage of the county, the state of New Jersey and the country at large," Michael Yesenko, vice president of the Union Township Historical Society, said.

The historic master plan is the third component of Open Space, Preservation, Recreation and Historic Trust Fund, which county voters approved in 2000. The fund assesses an annual levy of 1.5 cents per $100 of assessed value for 20 years.

"We're happy to get this piece of it off the ground," said Mirabella. "It's a way for the county to preserve our history."

In addition to funding the acquisition or stabilization of historic sites through the Open Space, Preservation, Recreation and Historic Trust Fund, the county is hopeful it will receive funding from various grants, including the New Jersey Historic Trust Fund.

The state's Historic Trust Fund administers five historic preservation grant programs: the Garden State Historic Preservation Trust Fund Program, which provides competitively awarded matching grants for capital preservation projects and grants for historic site planning/management projects; the Revolving Loan Program, which offers low-interest loans for preservation, restoration, rehabilitation and acquisition of historic properties; the Emergency Grants and Loan Program, which provides small grants and loans for emergency repairs and stabilization of historic structures; the Preservation Easement Program, which ensures the preservation of privately owned historic properties in perpetuity through the use of deed restrictions; and the New Jersey Legacies Program, which encourages gifts of historic properties that are resold with protective easements.

To obtain a copy of the master plan, contact the Office of the Open Space, Recreation and Historic Preservation Trust Fund at 908-558-2278.

County counsel appointed

By Mark Hrywna
Regional Editor

A prominent Hudson County Democrat will lead the county's Law Department.

Effective this week, Robert Barry of Jersey City is the new county counsel for the Board of Chosen Freeholders at an annual salary of $125,000.

Barry is a partner with the Union City law firm of Brownstein, Booth and Barry. The firm has worked with Union County in the past, advising on some issues involving Morristown & Erie Railway as well as solid waste issues with the Union County Utilities Authority. The firm also is legal counsel to the Rahway Valley Sewerage Authority. Except for almost four years when he was county counsel for Hudson County, Barry has been with the law firm for the past 22 years. To become county counsel, Barry had to dissolve his partnership.

The all-Democratic Board of Chosen Freeholders unanimously approved the appointment, 6-0, during its meeting last month. In addition to the appointment, the freeholder board approved a waiver to the county's residency requirement.

County Manager George Devanney said the county pursued Barry for the position of county counsel.

"When you're looking at top-level people, there are times you have to consider that they can't always relocate their lives," Devanney said, adding that the board also considered the fact that Barry was earning much more money in his private practice than he will as county counsel.

There are no other county department heads who have residency waivers. Admitted to the bar in 1974, Barry said he has always enjoyed public sector work and was fortunate to have the opportunity arise.

Barry's annual salary is slightly higher than the previous two county counsels, the late Jeremiah O'Dwyer who earned $123,240 and former Freeholder Carol Cohen whose annual salary was $119,650 before resigning in late 2001 to become an administrative law judge.

AC bus trip for UCLA

On Sept. 14, UCLA, the association for legal professionals, will sponsor a bus trip to the Sands Casino in Atlantic City.

The bus will depart from the Union County Administration Building in Elizabeth, at 8:30 a.m. and return at approximately 7 p.m. There will be an additional pick up at the Cheesecake Service Area on the Garden State Parkway. The cost is $21, with a $13 return from the casino on arrival.

For information or reservations, call Helen Goworek at 908-289-7356 or 908-527-4587.

The YWCA of Eastern Union County, 1131 E. Jersey St., Elizabeth, is seeking volunteers. If you are interested in volunteering, call Lynn at 908-355-1500, ext. 18.

Women business owners host dinner meeting

The New Jersey Women Business Owners Association Union County Chapter will host a networking and dinner meeting on Tuesday from 6 to 9 p.m. at L'Affaire restaurant, Mountaintop.

The topic will be "Creating a Personal Relationship Marketing Plan" with speaker Marlene Waldo, host of a weekly television business talk show, NJ Business on News 12, and the 2003 Business Women of the Year.

Cost of the dinner is $30 for members with advance reservation, $35 for non-members and walk-ins.

For information, call Lori Bierman at 973-761-7146, or e-mail acmrs@bellatlantic.net.

Special waste collection

The County of Union will sponsor a recycling event Sept. 13 so Union County residents can get rid of unwanted computers and electronic equipment, household special waste, and old automobile tires in an environmentally proper manner. The collection will take place from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Lucent Technologies, 600 Mountain Ave., New Providence.

All residents of Union County are eligible to participate at no cost.

Preregistration is not required for this special Saturday collection.

All residents need to do is drive to the site with their household special waste, computers and other electronic equipment, and automobile tires. Workers at the site will unload the vehicles.

There is a limit of eight automobile tires — without rims — per household. This is a household recycling event. No businesses.

Household special waste includes oil-based paint and varnish, antifreeze, aerosol cans, pool chemicals, corrosives, pesticides, herbicides, solvents, thinners, fire extinguishers, motor oil and oil filters, gasoline, batteries, thermostats, unbroken fluorescent bulbs, and mercury switches.

Only materials in original or labeled containers will be accepted.

Latex, water-based paint and empty cans will not be accepted. They should be disposed of with the regular garbage. Leftover latex paint can be air-dried or, to hasten the drying process, kitty litter and/or newspaper can be added to hasten the drying.

Electronic equipment that will be accepted on Sept. 13 includes computer monitors, hard drives, modems, keyboards, CPUs, mice, printers, scanners, speakers, televisions, VCRs, fax machines, telephones and circuit boards.

Computer monitors and televisions are the source of a considerable amount of lead — about 5 pounds per screen.

Up to 95 percent of most electronic appliances can be recycled. This is a responsible way to keep hazardous heavy metals out of the environment.

Refrigerators, washers and dryers, microwaves, and air conditioners will not be accepted.

A complete list of the materials that will be accepted on Sept. 13 is available at the Union County Bureau of Environmental Services Web site at www.ucnj.org/oem.

The household special waste collection will be rain or shine, for Union County residents only and not for businesses. Proof of Union County residency is required.

For more information, call the Bureau of Environmental Services Hotline at 908-654-9889.

Two sides set to square off

The growth industry also coming to an end is those who battle against fair share numbers. Department of Community of Affairs Commissioner Susan Bass Levin said, "Town officials did risk-benefit analysis and determined it would cost less to ignore the obligation and risk a builder taking them to court."

Those who advocate for the poor are gearing up to battle against the new system. It looks like the builders who want to build and team up with minorities who want more housing opportunity will square off against the anti-growth groups. It's like moving to pause after a period of stalling.

OSPAC pulls out the stops for day-long jazz festival

By Bill VanSant
Associate Editor

In the Oscar-winning film "Chicago," Catherine Zeta-Jones kicks things off by belting out "And All That Jazz."

Kate Baker of West Orange could well be singing the same tune these days.

Baker, herself a jazz singer who's performed locally and toured Europe, is the executive director of the Oskar Schindler Performing Arts Center in West Orange and, in that capacity, is putting the finishing touches on the Jazz and World Music Festival, scheduled for this Saturday. Her goal is to make the event an annual celebration.

"This has grown really fast in the last year," Baker said last week of the facility's offerings on the hill overlooking the state-of-the-art amphitheater. Under a bright summer sky, Crystal Lake sparkled off to the right, creating an idyllic atmosphere for the festival on Boland Drive.

Just completing its first full season of programming, OSPAC is putting the finishing touches on the long-anticipated musical event.

Beginning things at 12:30 p.m. will be an act dear to Baker's heart: the OSPAC All-Star Student Big Band, led by Ed Palermo. The ensemble features young musicians who participated in the Student Jazz Workshop, conducted at the facility last month. The band will feature not only youngsters from West Orange, but also from as far afield as Malcolm X. Shabazz High School in Newark and various schools in New York City.

The carry-over from the jazz camp to Saturday's event is part of what Baker hopes to maintain in OSPAC's programming. "One thing actually jumps to the next," she said. "Everybody's all hyped from the workshop, and now we go into the festival."

She also sees the workshop and festival as something that will further encourage the young musicians, especially as summer gives way to fall.

"It's a nice time for kids because it's right as they enter college or they go back to school, so it's something to inspire them to keep practicing and keep working on their music, too," she said.

While Baker describes the workshop as the "jewel in the crown" of OSPAC's first season, the work on Saturday's jazz festival began nearly a year ago.

"We started planning everything last fall," Baker said. "That's when we started to write our grants, I started to come up with the ideas for the acts, and everything that we wanted to do for the jazz festival."

Developing the concept was easy; winnowing the pool of talent was not.

"We have so many jewels right here in West Orange," she continued. "These are recording artists on major labels. We want to show off how great our town is, and what we have in this area, in New Jersey. We've got world-renowned acts coming in here. These people play internationally."

Also scheduled to appear throughout the day Saturday are the band Brasil & Co., the Renee Rosnes Quartet, Dave Samuels and the Caribbean Jazz Project, vocalist Melissa Walker, the Dave Stryker and Steve Slagle Quintet, the Jon Faddis Group, and the Grammy Award-winning Trio de Paz, which will close the day.

The name of another vocalist on the bill might be familiar: Baker, herself. The jazz singer will appear with guitarist Vic Juris, pianist Xavier Davis, drummer Quincy Davis, and bassist Jay Anderson.

In addition to the musical performances throughout the day, Baker has arranged for 10 craft vendors to display their wares along the path leading to the plaza overlooking Crystal Lake. On the plaza, visitors will find clowns, face painters and beach ball giveaways, among other things, to keep kids amused and occupied.

"We have music for the avid jazz lovers," she said, "and the other people can hear some of the music, walk around the lake, they can see the crafts, and mingle. So we have a lot of those different elements for people to enjoy."

Leaving no detail overlooked, even the weather has been taken into account: in the event of yet more rain, the Jazz and World Music Festival will take place Sept. 14.

Crowd-pleaser

Walking down the hill toward the stage, Baker looked around and commented on the crowds that have attended the various acts this year, which have ranged from the Vanguard Jazz Orchestra to the folk-funk trio GrooveLily to the Catskill Puppet Company.

"We've had about 1,000," Baker said, adding that the grounds could easily accommodate 1,500 audience members. "Each event draws completely different, it depends on what the event is."

The diversity of acts has also drawn an equally diverse range of interest, spanning beyond the borders of both West Orange and New Jersey.

"Our mailing list is from South Jersey, Connecticut, people are coming from Manhattan," Baker listed. "It's pulling from Asbury Park, it's pulling from Basking Ridge, Livingston, all over."

Also benefiting OSPAC's audience base is the fact that, during the summer, West Orange's Theater Under the Stars presents two musicals in the space. Formerly located in Degnan Park, TUTS aided in the initiative to get OSPAC off the ground; it still performs its fall, winter and spring shows at the Pleasantdale Presbyterian Church in West Orange. Baker believes that OSPAC picks up audience members from among those attending TUTS shows.

Wearing several hats

Baker's responsibilities go beyond lining up the various acts, and extend into the business aspects of OSPAC.

"It's coordinating everything, from the P.R. to the budget," she said of her position.

While Baker is the sole administrator of the facility, and in some ways "a staff of one," there is a paid technical staff. She's also aided by quite a few others, about whom she enthuses.

"I have great interns," she said, "we've got a great sound guy, we've got great tech guys, we've got volunteers that are terrific." OSPAC recruited its interns this year from Montclair State University. "And this year, we're going also to get more from Seton Hall University."

Other volunteers and interns handle such aspects as videotaping the performances and other visual elements.

"We've got Steve Longo, who did all our graphic designs and all our posters," she continued. "And then we have George Kopp and Wendy Robinson, who did all our photography."

For its inaugural season, the performing arts center extended its outreach, thanks to its Web site, www.ospac.org, administered by Web master Wendy Figueroa.

"I supply her with the information and she runs with it," Baker said.

"That's how we do it: we do it through volunteers and people who care about seeing this place go."

"That's how things work: with a team!"

The Jazz and World Music Festival will take place Saturday from 12:30 to 9 p.m. at the Oskar Schindler Performing Arts Center in West Orange. Suggested donation is $5. For information, call 973-669-7385 or visit www.ospac.org.

A.T.D. Dancenter is ready for autumn

The A.T.D. Dancecenter is known for its quality of education in dance and the performing arts.

Located at 959 Stuyvesant Ave. in Union, the studio begins its 22nd season continuing to give their students the opportunity to develop poise, grace, a sense of rhythm and self-confidence, all of which are important in the nurturing of a well-rounded dancer.

"Our school makes the difference," states director Michele Selvan-to-Kowalski. "We not only teach our students the proper technique to perform, but to feel it from inside, within themselves and from their heart. They learn to feel confident not only in the dance room but in school, sports and social activities. We do have annual performances; however proper training is our number-one priority. Therefore your child is not learning a dance routine for the stage the moment he or she walks through the door. Our professional and certified adult teachers are dedicated in teaching the finest technique and assuring the proper body placement, which is so important for growing bones. They continue to attend conventions and master classes to keep up with the latest styles and techniques that the changing world has to offer. We give all our students the opportunity to excel whether they take classes just for fun or to pursue a professional career in dance and our popular reputation will adhere to that."

Curriculum at the studio includes ballet, tap, jazz, pointe, lyrical, acrogymnastics, movement for tots and hip-hop. The pre-school program or Movement for Tots class introduces young children ages 3 and 4 to dancing in an elementary form. During these years, children will learn how to take instruction, interact with other children and how to be a part of a group while enjoying creative activity and learning basic ballet technique. The development of balance, graceful arm movements, rhythm through songs and coordination all add to the foundation of a healthy and strong body. This learning process is effective and enjoyable. The enrollment of boys in dance class has become very popular. Tap, acro-gymnastics and hip-hop not only increases their rhythm and coordination but allows their muscles to move more freely with less injury in sports. Combination classes of ballet and tap are offered to children at ages 5 and 6 and adding jazz at age 7. For the older student, classes are offered in all areas and on all levels. An annual production is presented in May showcasing the student's talents and efforts. It builds confidence and serves as a reward for the many hours of training. We also offer every student the chance to further their education with workshops in New York, guest teachers, trips, parades, community events and statewide functions.

The studio is home base for the A.T.D. Dancers International Show Troupe, a group of dancers who have been showcasing their talents to thousands in the United States, Europe and the Caribbean. Past performances include Russia, Italy, California, Carnival Cruise Lines, Royal Caribbean Cruise Lines, Dance Festival in Mexico and the halftime shows at the Miami Orange Bowl, Giant Stadium and the Woman's World Cup Soccer. They have attended almost every state and national competition and have received numerous awards including scholarships, high scores, studio spirit, over-all best performances, best choreography and several cash prizes. During the first week of August 2003, they flew to San Juan, Puerto Rico and boarding the Carnival Cruise Ship Destiny. They will be performing three shows choreographed by the faculty of A.T.D. in the Palladium Lounge while traveling to the islands of St. Thomas, St. John, Martinique, Barbados and Aruba.

"Although we have a performing troupe, they are not our main focus. Each and every student at the A.T.D. Dancecenter receives personal attention along with quality dance instruction. It is truly a great learning experience. So if parents are not seeing an improvement in their children's ability or if they seem bored, then it's time for a change. Come see what's out available at A.T.D. Dancenter. The staff offers an atmosphere that's fun, yet professional. The staff works hard to keep standards high — all the qualities that one should look for in a dance studio."

Classes begin on Sept. 6. For a free brochure call 908-688-8822 or visit www.atdancecenter.com.

Receiving their five-year awards at A.T.D. Dancenter in Union are Rusinel Amarante, Ashley Egoavil, Anna Irizarri, Karina Rodriguez, and Liana Valentin. A.T.D. Dancenter is about to begin its fall classes.

Variety of programs make Linden's LaDanse 'more than a studio'

LaDanse School of Performing Arts in Linden is celebrating 26 years of "Dance Excellence!"

Founded in 1978 by Tina Socci, the studio has grown not only in enrollment and studio size but in commitment to the community.

"We've always been more than just a dance studio," states Socci. "We're like one big, happy family with everyone encouraging each other. Former students bring their children to the studio because they feel that sense of family tradition and values not to mention the excellent dance instruction. Our students and their families area actively involved in community functions and are simply rewarded by the joy they bring to others."

Part of the success of the studio is due to the excellent staff. "All of my instructors are fully certified and qualified to teach" Socci said, "with many of them coming in from New York City. Joining the staff this year will be Suzanne Osterberger, certified by the Alvin Ailey Dance Center and current instructor at Steps in N.Y.C.; Caitlyn Gray, currently on the faculty of Steps in N.Y.C.; Kirsten Burke, on staff of the American Tap Dance Foundation in N.Y.C. and Tito Puente Performing Arts Academy; and Tom McKie, hip-hop master, will be adding classes to the schedule.

"Our success can clearly be seen by the many opportunities our students have been afforded to showcase their talents," Socci, continued. In July, La Danse tappers were invited to join an elite group of dancers performing on 42nd Street in New York City at the Duke Theater as part of the Tap City Festival, which featured guest appearances by Savion Glover, Harold Cromer and Ernie Brown, as well as invited students from all over the nation. Former student Daniel Vaniska is currently performing on the Royal Caribbean Cruise Line.

Registration for fall classes will be held Sept. 4 and 5 from 4 to 8 p.m., and Sept. 6 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. "We invite everyone to come see our state of the art, air-conditioned facilities," Socci concluded.

Legislation to preserve historic buildings will benefit college

New Jersey Gov. James E. McGreevey came to Felician College's scenic, tree-lined Rutherford campus July 30 to sign two historic preservation bills — Bills 2620 and 2638 — for new laws that provide more than $11 million to 60 historic sites throughout New Jersey, including $750,000 earmarked toward supporting the renovation of the 134-year-old castle that serves as a majestic centerpiece to Rutherford and the Felician College campus. Among those in attendance were Commissioner of the Department of Community Affairs Susan Bass-Levin; State Senators Henry McNamara and Paul Sarlo; Felician College Trustee and former Senator Anthony Scardino Jr.; Rutherford Councilman Bruce Bartlett, New Jersey Meadowlands Commission

Executive Director Robert Ceberio; Felician College president, Sister Theresa Mary Martin; and Felician College chairman of the Board of Trustees, Albin Obal. In addressing the crowd that gathered on the drive in front of the towering castle, McGreevey spoke of the important role the Garden State Historic Trust Fund plays in preserving New Jersey's past as a "living witness to its present and future." "This legislation," he said, "is a celebration of our quality of life. All who stand here at this college understand the importance of investing in our children's future." In referring to Rutherford's historic castle, he said the legislation will "ensure the proper restoration of the castle so it can stand as a landmark for generations to come."

Built in 1886 with brownstone from the Belleville quarries and modeled after a French chateau, the castle was constructed on the foundation of a modest two-story home built by a newspaperman Lloyd Tomkins in 1869. When renovation is complete, the castle will serve as a campus center to meet the needs of the student body.

Timing is the key for conductor

By Bea Smith
Staff Writer

There is a time and a reason for everything one plans to do with one's life, and when a drastic change is inevitable, one must contemplate and accept the change — and go on from there.

Garyth Nair, music director and conductor of the Summit Choral — really better known as Maestro Nair to his students, devotees and audiences — is ready to step down after 34 years. And he has good reason. Nair, after all, is a professor of music at Drew University in Madison, conducts the University Choral Orchestra and also serves as director of vocal studies. Additionally, he is contemplating more creativity in his world of music.

As a musicologist, he has reintroduced seldom-heard or lost works to regional audiences and has commissioned new compositions, including his own, to his Summit Choral members. He has become their mentor and their devoted friend; and they have no doubt learned as much, if not more, from him as have his college students. Unquestionably, they will be the ones who will miss him the most.

Nair also is the founding conductor of the Chamber Symphony of New Jersey and served as assistant conductor of the New Jersey Symphony Orchestra. In addition, he is a professional singer and has performed with some of the most outstanding conductors in the country. He also participated in summer concerts of Summit Choral's Diamond Hill Chorus and its Handel "Messiah" Sing, which he initiated and has conducted annually in Summit.

He now feels it's time for a change because there is so much work to be done at Drew University, his voice research and particularly his writing. Nair also is in the midst of writing a second book.

"I can't keep everything going and continue to do it justice," Nair explained during a recent chat that took precious moments from his extremely busy schedule. "I can't keep all the balls in the air. I know that conductors are being seen through the fall and the rest of the season, and I know that a good one will be found to take my place; at which time, I will be retired-as conductor of the Summit Choral. Actually, a good, strong conductor will invariably mold the organization into his own form, and that's the way it should be done."

Nair said that "I need to put my energies into my work. I need to work on my books, one of which is a new book on vocal pedagogy, and research and at Drew University, where I am building a new concert. I'm deeply involved in that. I'm also planning to go to the University of Houston in connection with my book. I should be back in the middle of the fall."

In spite of all of his future work, he indicated that being a conductor for so many years has affected him greatly. "It's been a good positive life for me," Nair said. "It's more than half of my life — a long tenure."

Exposure as a child inspired Nair's lifelong interest in music.

"I heard classical music at the age of 11," he explained, "and it struck an instant response in me, and it became a life response. You know," he mused, "it's that joy-sadness thing. Life is full of choices, and at this point, I want to leave a legacy. And seeing the impact of my first book, I realize how important the writing is going to be."

He sighed. "I can't keep everything going and continue to do it justice."

Nair said of his music, "It has been the central core of my life, emotionally, artistically and intellectually. I'm not laying down the baton. I still have a lot of years left in me in this profession."

The man of musical genius still has all of his energies, his talents, his ambitions and his pure love of music. Now, he admits, all he needs is time. And lots and lots of it.

N.J. filmmakers sought

The New Jersey Movie Makers' Network is looking for state-based independent producers with shorts or features that they would like to be seen.

Short movies — 20 minutes or less — can be aired on Cablevision's public access show, "Imagine That," produced and hosted by Robin Richie Carpenter. Carpenter is on the Network's board of directors and would like to show the works of and possibly interview independent producers once a month.

The Network would also like to hear from producers with features and shorts longer than 20 minutes. They are preparing to negotiate with a local movie theater that would allow state-based movie makers to take over the theater one day month and screen their productions. This will be a great opportunity for public viewings and to have the work reviewed by critics. However, right now the New Jersey Movie Makers' Network has no idea how many people in the state have movies they'd like to show.

Producers should contact the Network by email at njmoviemakers@aol.com or snail mail at 149 Orange St., Bloomfield, 07003. Filmmakers should send their name, address, phone, e-mail, company name, name and length of the project, format and a one-paragraph description. Everyone who writes will be contacted.

Chorale holds auditions

Summit Choral will hold auditions in all voice parts — soprano, alto, tenor and bass — on two Tuesday evenings, Sept. 9 and 16, on the Drew University campus on Madison Avenue/Route 124 in Madison.

NEWS CLIPS

For an audition appointment and information, call 732-698-1433 or visit the Web site at www.summitchorale.org.

Rehearsals begin in September and are held Tuesdays between 7:45 and 10:15 p.m. at Drew. The chorale sings works from the Middle Ages to the present.

The concert season will begin with "Alleluia, Rejoice and Sing: A Holiday Retrospective!" at 8 p.m. Dec. 6 in Madison, and at 4 p.m. Dec. 7 in New Providence. The next concert will be "Inspiration and Consolation," which includes the Durufle Requiem, at 8 p.m. March 6 in Summit. With the accompaniment of a full symphony orchestra, the concluding concert will be Brahms' Requiem at 8 p.m. May 1 at a location to be determined.

Under the leadership of music director and conductor Garyth Nair, the chorale is one of the state's most respected choral organizations, now in its 95th year. The chorale maintains a reputation for adventurous programming of lesser-known masterpieces in addition to popular works. This season is expected to be Nair's last of 34 seasons conducting Summit Choral. The Summit Choral's Chorus in Residence at Drew University.

DaSilva is on exhibit

The next-exhibit in the Les Marmut Art Gallery in the Union Public Library will be a series of paintings and ceramics by Fernando Da Silva of Edison.

The show will open with a reception Sept. 13 from 2 to 4 p.m. The exhibit will continue through Oct. 2.

Curb appeal can help during the selling of your home

Real estate professionals know that a sale can be made or lost in seconds, based solely on curb appeal. Curb appeal is often the first, most powerful impression that your home will make on a buyer. Good curb appeal will make buyers react with emotion and imagination to your home, rather than thinking practically and seeking faults.

An investment of time, and very little money, will give your home the irresistible appeal it needs to sell before the buyer even walks through the front door. Here are Weichert's top ten must-do projects to ensure curb appeal for your home this spring.

10. Take down all holiday lights and decorations.
9. Keep Fido quietly in the back, or send him/her on a vacation with a pet-sitter.
8. Straighten the garage, and keep the garage door closed.
7. Make sure that exterior light bulbs are new and bright.

6. Polish to a gleam all exterior light fixtures, mailbox, house number, kick plate, and door hardware.
5. Put away garbage cans, lawn equipment, tools, barbecue implements, older vehicles and parts.
4. Inspect and repair cracked walkways, foundation, steps, patios, siding, shingles, gutters, as well as any peeling paint.

3. Clean windows, remove anything blocking them from inside or outside.
2. Prune tree limbs, cut back shrubs, clean and mow the lawn. Add a layer of mulch around shrubs and trees to make them look cared after.

1. And the top, most important thing to do to increase curb appeal for your home is to freshen-up the front door area. Apply a fresh coat of paint to the front door, sweep the stoop and walk, add a new welcome mat, and place potted yellow flowers here and there — yellow being the first color people notice and associate with joy.

Buy your home through your local bank

The whole process of applying for and getting a mortgage can be a bit intimidating, especially for first time home buyers. However, once you know what to expect, it becomes much easier. Your community bank is a great place to start. What better place to get a mortgage than one that is familiar with your community?

"Many people turn to their community bank when looking for a mortgage for a reason — it's usually your best bet," says Mercedes Pedrick, vice president of Mortgage Originations at Spencer Savings Bank. "Community banks have a vested interest in their communities. Therefore, they offer competitive mortgages in order to make sure they do business in their community. You'll also receive better service from a bank with established roots in your community."

These tips will help speed up your approval process:

- Save three to six months of potential monthly housing expenses.

- Look for and correct inaccuracies on your credit report before applying for a mortgage.

- Bring two months of bank statements and two years of W2 forms when you apply.

While getting a mortgage does take some work, your community bank is ready to help you.

Listen to the advice of your loan officer and keep in mind that when it's all over you will be a homeowner.

Dear Jill:

We'd been looking for a house for a few weeks with no luck. One Sunday, we looked at a house in Roselle. We weren't crazy about the house but we liked the neighborhood so we drove around and saw a house for sale. The sign in front said "Call Cecile Do Amaral, Guzman Realty." The next day we did and we scheduled an appointment to look at the house. Cecile met us on a Saturday in front of this big - really big, white Colonial. Cecile was polite, professional and friendly. She let us in the side door and - wow, look at those floors!!! The beautiful inlaid wood floors knocked us over. We were hooked. The rooms were big - the kitchen tile was gorgeous, new cabinets... By the time we made it up to the huge attic (you can hold square dances in here!!), we were on the line. "If we can stand up in the basement, we are buying this house." We could. And we did. Getting from the falling in love with the house to moving into it was a tough and loooooong journey. But Cecile helped us every step of the way. From our first meeting through closing she was our guide, confidante, shoulder to cry on, "Help us fit it!!", go to girl. When, on the night before closing, everything was falling apart, it was Cecile who kept us going, calmed us down and got us to the table. Thank you Cecile. Thank you Guzman Realty. We love our new home!!!!

Thank you., Kelly Masterson & Leslie Daniels

Redesigned Maxima a true four-door predator

By Mark Maynard
Copley News Service

The 2004 Nissan Maxima is such a complete and formidable redesign that some automakers would have felt it necessary to change the car's name, too.

That's not necessary for Maxima because it never lost its reputation as a sports sedan, even though the competition became a lot tougher.

And now the styling matches the car's performance, says Kevin Lum, senior product planner at Nissan, who for the last few years has been immersed in the complete overhaul of Maxima.

This is the sixth generation of the car, but for the last couple of iterations the traditional body style made it more of a wolf in sheep's clothing. The new model is a "wolf in wolf's clothing," Lum likes to say.

The new sedan is larger in all exterior dimensions, and it has been moved up a notch in equipment and price.

It's a marketing move designed to distance the Maxima from its stablemate, the Altima, and other mainstream midsize four-doors, such as the Honda Accord, Toyota Camry or Ford Taurus.

Lum says it compares more closely with near-luxury midsize sedans, including the Acura TL, Audi A4 V-6 and even the Toyota Avalon. He left out the BMW 3-Series as a potential competitor, but he needn't be so modest.

Maxima might also appear to challenge Infiniti. Nissan's luxury division, but Infiniti is moving to rear- and all-wheel drive vehicles while Nissan remains largely front-drive, except for the 350Z and trucks.

The Maxima will be sold in two models with one engine and three transmissions, and prices will range from about $27,490 for a base SE to $29,400 for the SE. Both models can run about $31,000 nicely trimmed.

Today's test car, an SE with the

The new sedan is larger in all exterior dimensions, and it has been moved up a notch in equipment and price.

Elite Package, had an as-tested price of $33,890 and came with nearly every convenience imaginable, from a power rear shade to a heated steering wheel that also tilted and telescoped. It defined "entry-level luxury."

Built from the platform used for the new Quest minivan and Murano SUV, the Maxima has masculine styling that isn't a copy of any other car in the class. And it has a few tricks to lure the curious into the showroom.

Nissan is rethinking the shape of a car and how that space is used. The dashboard, for example, breaks from tradition with an island-like pod that is lower and easier to see over.

Instead of a big expanse of wasted space, the dashboard has become a function-enhancing art element. Switches and controls are close at hand for eyes-on-the-road control.

Visibility is uncompromised.

And remember when a sunroof was a big deal? Nissan has jumped-started the concept with a Skyview roof, a long vertical two-pane sunroof that doesn't open or tilt, but acts as a skylight to lighten even the back seat area.

The glass panels do not cut into headroom, 39.7 inches in front, and sliding shades block the sun as needed.

A traditional, power-operated sunroof is available and can be enjoyed without wind buffeting at in-town speeds.

Also unique is the four-seat Elite package that makes the back seat as comfortable as the front. Stretch out in chauffeur-driven style with 36.5 inches of leg room, which seems generous even with the front seats moved all the way back.

The five-speed automatic transmission with auto shift mode is made for enthusiastic driving. Even in standard drive, the driver-adaptive shift points are extremely intuitive to throttle input.

The transmission moves up or down a gear just as the driver begins to apply a little pedal pressure. There's a breathtaking launch when the throttle is nailed for double-down-shift acceleration, but it's completely controlled with just a light touch to the steering wheel.

The 12-inch disc brakes bring the Maxima smoothly back to Earth.

Nissan doesn't broadcast 0-60 mph times anymore, but Car and Driver magazine got a 6.3-second time. Fuel mileage is respectable at 20 miles per gallon around town and 28 on the highway.

The '04 Maxima is a killer sedan, a true four-door predator that runs as fast as it looks.

5 Star Shine saves the Navy

Copley News Service

When car-care-polish maker Glenn Canady started getting orders from the Navy, he assumed it was to help keep staff cars looking good.

"When I found out what they really had in mind I was floored — and very thrilled," he says.

Canady's firm, based in Rocky Mount, N.C., manufactures 5 Star Shine, a car-polishing system that sells for $69.95 a bottle.

The real reason the Navy needed his product, he says, is to protect the Aegis Radar defense system.

It was Aegis-equipped destroyers that helped unseat the Taliban in Afghanistan, and the Aegis system is at the heart of guided missile destroyers. The polish apparently protects the nerve center of these and other vessels from the effects of salt water and harsh marine conditions.

He's not sure how it happened, but he expects there was a problem keeping the Aegis equipment clean, because of the salt water and the amount of exhaust generated by ships.

"My hunch is that someone pretty high up in the Navy was a 5 Star customer who knew what the product could do for a car and that this person said, 'Hey, I've got an idea! The rest is history.'"

His 5 Star Shine uses acrylic elements to help seal paint from the elements. The product is guaranteed to last five years on a new car and three years on a used car with good paint.
