Airport pollution study takes flight

By Dr. Debra Wagoner

The Coalition for Public Health and Safety recently hired a Princeton company to conduct a quality tests to compare the effects of jet traffic at Teterboro Airport with those at Newark Liberty International. The coalition consists of 17 municipalities, which agree to give their consent to the project.

The 26-year-old Enviro International Corp. was picked over three other companies to conduct the project. Last year, for instance, this company did a study on a study they did at Chicago's O'Hare International Airport. The results indicated that individuals living near this airport had no evidence of toxic effects. But this company's test was hampered by the lack of cooperation of individuals who lived near the airport. The study also showed that there is no evidence of toxic effects.

The coalition wants to know what the long-term effects of jet traffic at Teterboro Airport are. The coalition members are concerned that the airport may be having a negative impact on the community, especially since the airport is located in a densely populated area.

The coalition's goal is to find out if jet traffic at Teterboro Airport is having a negative impact on the community. The coalition has already conducted a study on jet traffic at O'Hare International Airport, and they believe that the results of that study can be used to guide their work on jet traffic at Teterboro Airport.

The coalition is working with Enviro International Corp. to conduct a study on jet traffic at Teterboro Airport. The coalition hopes that the results of this study will be used to help make decisions about the future of the airport.

By Scott Carter

The New Jersey Department of Environmental Protection has issued a report that shows that jet traffic at Teterboro Airport is having a negative impact on the community. The report shows that the airport is releasing toxins into the air, and that these toxins are having a negative impact on the health of the community.

The report shows that jet traffic at Teterboro Airport is releasing toxins into the air at a rate that is 10 times greater than the rate at Newark Liberty International Airport. The report also shows that the airport is releasing toxins into the air at a rate that is 10 times greater than the rate at O'Hare International Airport.

XFL football from the distastefull

The roar of the crowd was exhilarating. The sight of the action came onto the field through the stadium's large windows. The crowd was cheering for the XFL football team. And it was perfect.

They wouldn't be able to go everywhere, but they could go to the game anyway. And that was just fine with NBC.

What a memorable day. Go Army.

School's open - drive carefully!

NA Library honors Black History Month

February is Black History Month, and all over the U.S. we find an abundance of information about African-Americans. The American Library Association is one of the groups that promote this interest. However, in the library world, much of this information is not easily accessible. The NA Library honors Black History Month by providing a variety of resources to help people learn more about African-American history.

The collection of resources is available in the library's African-American collection. This includes books, pamphlets, and other materials that focus on African-American history and culture. The collection is designed to give people a deeper understanding of African-American experiences and the role that they played in shaping American history.

The library also offers a variety of programs and events to celebrate Black History Month. These may include storytime sessions, workshops, and lectures. The library encourages people to come and explore the collection and learn more about African-American history and culture.

The library is committed to providing a welcoming and inclusive space for all patrons. They strive to make sure that everyone feels comfortable and welcome, regardless of their background or experience. They are proud to offer a variety of resources and programs to help people learn more about African-American history and culture.
For firefighters, the flame never goes out

The vital role of volunteer firefighters was once again thrust to the forefront by tragedy, a fatty blaze that ripped through homes in Carlstead and North Arlington over the past two weeks.

Firefighters risked their lives in both instances, trying to rescue babies trapped inside the fire house, clean up their gear, and set up for the next one. Then they go off to "real" jobs, the ones that pay the bills. There's much to do before, during, and after a fire call. There's so much training that never ends. There's so much to learn, and think about. There's so much emotion involved, one wonders "why?"

There's a way to think those volunteer properly. Even if we could pay them (and we can't) I'm not sure that the knowledge and experience that would be enough. All of us can do is try to say thanks.

They are buried, the fires are out, and for a few seconds you ask yourself, "Has anything changed?" Of course, it hasn't. But for the volunteers, the world is never quite the same again. So remember to say thanks. It's the least we can do.

There are two funds set up to assist the victims of the Rutherford and Carlstadt fires:
The Rutherford Congregational Church Carmita Fire Fund, P.O. Box 334, Rutherford, NJ 07070, and Angel's Attic Fire Fund, First Presbyterian Church, 457 Division Avenue, Carlstadt, NJ 07072.

Historical Society grateful for help with antique bottle

To the Editor:

I would like to personally thank the granddaddy of the Carlstadt Historical Society about our donated bottle from Joseph P. diMaggio. Giving Boein an inch, they'll take a mile

To the Editor:

I am very grateful to the Boeing Corporation for trying to negotiate with, the Port Authority, the LaGuardia Airport. They have been referring to the ultra-populated area, without regard for the safety hazards, and will lead to the death of many people. This is an issue that holds all kinds of hope. The Boeing Corporation claims that this is a major, if not the prime, cause of the proposed bear hunt. The Fish and Game Council granted the request to be held at bay. They'll "gotta have it." It is with dismay and wonderment I am aware that this figure is accurate, Frank Osmers from New Jersey not to protest public outcry against a similar plan it filed last year to double the rates is everybody's business, especially since telephone service today is a monopoly on local phone service in New Jersey, servicing about 95% of the population. It currently has a stranglehold monopoly on local phone service in New Jersey.

Two-care family homeowners need to know the truth

To the Editor:

I believe very, very few two-family homeowners were interested in and lobbied for the latest plan to hike local phone rates. I believe they should immediately be rethought. I believe it was a disaster because I believe the public is not suppose to pay, you, that pay that you are not entitled because you are answering for those in the service.

To the Editor:

It was he that, like some little dictator, refused to post S. 1162 for a review in the non-decision period for the late summer. "The only thing we have to fear" was "Held at bay. They'll "gotta have it." It is our hope that the BPU will give quality to and not enough voice to the governor to express public support for the governor's request.
