FROM THE HEADMASTER

by Duncan W. Alling

The decision to include the school's annual fiscal report in the Journal prompted me to think about many other aspects of the 1993-1994 school year. We enjoyed many successes last year; we are especially thankful for concluding successful national searches for key administrative positions and opening up our new classroom wing on time. Although I could construct quite a list of success for this column, I tend to look forward while keeping the past in my mind.

Princeton Day School now enjoys the opportunity to focus on other dimensions of the school community. We are concentrating on the direction of character development and the parent/school partnership in a day school, as well as certain curricular issues such as how will science and mathematics be taught in the 21st century. To provide readers a sense of our direction, edited versions of my remarks to faculty and new parents follow.

Opening Faculty Meeting — August 31, 1993

Good morning. I want to make a few comments, obvious as they may be to us, about school and what we must focus on.

- School is a place for serious work where students learn how to learn, develop academic skills and broaden their knowledge in various academic fields.
- School is a place to develop social skills, to play, to find a sense of spirit in oneself and within various sized groups.
- School is a place where a student's personal character is influenced, shaped via the adults (and their peers) who teach.
- School is a place where faculty have the opportunity to demonstrate the connection between freedom and responsibility.

We get high compliments on the first two points. Our students are challenged to do serious work. Their skills and intellectual curiosity are developed. The spirit of the individual is brought out, sometimes all too well as our students are lively individuals with a rich variety of interests, many of which are fostered at Princeton Day School. We get low compliments on the other two points, and the speakers at the upper school graduation last year reminded us of our challenge in these areas.

Deputy Parliamentarian of the US House of Representatives Charlie Johnson spoke about the loss of respect for each other among the members of the House. Civil public behavior, private discourse and friendships across the aisle have waned in the House. Mutual tolerance, respect and humor are not as evident.

Retiring Religion Department Head Carl Reimers raised concern over the quality of the partnership between parents and teachers. He expressed concern over the consumer attitude in many parents when dealing with teachers. While this issue in my mind is a two-way street, the fact is that we must acknowledge schools are viewed in different ways today by families.

Walter Hosey '93 spoke about the challenges of diversity; the need for all of us to address racism and ignorance. He pointed out that we must "not allow senseless stereotyping of people to cloud our ability to truly be good listeners." (Walter's speech can be seen on page 11.)

Last year we spent time assessing these values which we believe are important to the development of character in each student and to the well being of our community, as well as their bearing on understanding the relationship between responsibility and freedom.

Not surprisingly, there was common ground found in the language used by all three divisions to express those values.

- respect for all members of the community
- honesty
- · compassion, kindness
- patience
- respect for the community and environment
- · responsibility
- · helpfulness, cooperation
- · integrity

Last year at divisional faculty meetings we also discussed the relationship between these values and the quality of life at PDS. The time has now come for us to pinpoint what we will do to alter certain patterns in our school with regard to how we implement our regulations and rules. Students need boundaries, a clarified structure by which to live, as one faculty member has noted. They also need to realize that consequences with real impact must occur when severe violations occur. Faculty need to take action, not avoid a situation, when minor or major infractions occur. We all must come to realize that when we come to school, we come to a place with special meaning and purpose. We are not the beach, the mall, or the family living room.

This year we have the opportunity to improve the quality of our lives at Princeton Day School. To be sure the new wing, the return of classrooms to the middle school, and the expanded space for the upper school will help us shape better behavior in school. To be sure the commitment and enthusiasm of our administrators will help us address the affective side of education. To be sure, focusing on this area of our responsibilities as teachers will help us enhance the character development of our students. To be sure our efforts to develop a stronger partnership with the parents of our students will help our cause. We have hurdles to negotiate, but with a renewed commitment, I believe we can begin to fashion a stronger respect for all dimensions of our school, and ensure greater respect for what we are all about.

New Parent Supper - Sept. 21, 1993

Welcome to Princeton Day School. You have completed a thorough, thoughtful, humanistic admissions process which has culminated in your children being enrolled here. We have both developed expectations for your children. Now we must work together to see that your children mature as students and as human beings. This partnership, which must be characterized by appreciation for high standards, ample patience when hurdles emerge or mistakes are made, civil discourse to resolve problems when they arise, mutual respect for each other, and a good sense of humor about children and what they sometimes do, is one of the many special features of a day school.

Another feature is the opportunity for you to communicate with the advisors and teachers of your children on a regular basis. Class sizes, the commitment of our teachers and a desire to work with you in the partnership means you can discuss frequently the development of your children.

Our mission is simple yet complex.

We want each student to mature so that when each graduates he or she has had a rich experience in honoring important academic skills, developing self-confidence, finding the capacity to lead an ethical life, awakening appreciation for the aesthetic in life and maintaining a healthy body. Each student will be at a different stage in this process come graduation. Each will have been asked to grow as an individual in the context of working with other people and caring for them inside and outside the school. And, while each is being prepared for the next level of education — college each is also being asked to view learning as a lifelong pursuit. Simple, but complex.

A day school provides a vital opportunity to form a partnership with parents to ensure these goals are reached. At Princeton Day School we look forward to the challenge of working with your children. We are proud of what we have accomplished at Princeton Day School and, equally important, we look forward to fulfilling new objectives in the next five years.

WHAT WE DID ON OUR SUMMER VACATION

On September 8th students walked into a very different school from the one they left in June. While they were enjoying summer vacation, construction workers and the buildings and grounds and custodial crews labored nonstop to complete the new wing and remodel the main building.

The changes are not all in the 38,000 square feet of new space for the lower school. Most of the upper school has been renovated, rebuilt and reallocated (except for the science wing, to which a lab will be added next year). The middle school gained a renovated science lab, three classrooms and a faculty study area. Air conditioning has been installed in the middle school art room. Outside, the woods have been cleared of underbrush to give the campus a more open, manicured look. The new driveway for buses has cleared congestion around the circle and put smiles on the faces of parents who used to begin their day weaving through a slowmoving, obstacle course of noisy buses, darting children and harried drivers.

Upper School Expands

The new layout for upper school separates the academic areas from the

The building of the new classroom addition was an education in itself. All through the school year, students watched as it changed daily. Art, architecture and industrial arts classes made regular visits to the site. Lower schoolers sketched the building, older students were given on-site lectures on different aspects of construction and photography classes chronicled the various stages of construction.

social areas which was a high priority for the Space Planning Committee. The English, history and religion departments are now housed in the classrooms around South Commons their original location when the school opened in 1965. The senior lounge and computer room in North Commons have been demolished and the area rebuilt to accommodate two new computer labs, a conference room and one dean's office. The surrounding rooms are home to the math and language departments. Some language classes meet in the Carriage House and the new senior sitting area is located in room #202 of Colross. The photography rooms have moved from the basement of Colross to spacious, state-of-the-art quarters in the new wing. The stage in the upper gym has been transformed into the Dale Griffee Student Center and three rooms for student clubs have been built along the back wall of the cafeteria.

"I think upper schoolers will be pleasantly surprised by all the improvements," observed new Upper School Head Carlton Tucker. "Even many 'old' classrooms have a fresh coat of paint, new carpeting and new furniture."

Builders used enough concrete on the new wing to fill a ten by ten foot hole, 450 feet deep.

Mission Impossible

These extensive changes are remarkable considering that work on the new wing did not begin until August 1992. Before the first shovel of dirt was excavated, the school spent three years gathering the required permits and complying with the various agencies that regulate new development. The school's Director of Operations Tom Stadulis coordinated the whole project.

In any undertaking of this size, one expects the unexpected and tries to schedule accordingly. But who could have guessed that the record-breaking floods along the Mississippi would keep flooring for the lower school gym from reaching New Jersey until the delivery truck could find a safe river crossing?

"The weather killed us," said Stadulis. "It snowed every weekend just when we were trying to get the roof on the addition. The snow would freeze and the men couldn't work for days at a time. This, of course, held up work on the inside. Then came the March blizzard. We lost a month out of an already tight schedule."

Fortunately, the construction crew was able to make up the time under the direction of On-site Supervisor John Keough and Project Manager Mike Delo. They have been on campus since last August; we will miss their friendliness and calm competence.

The other unsung heroes are the men of the buildings and grounds and custodial crews. The staff, managed by Keith Geisel and Edwin Mendoza, handled innumerable odd jobs related to the construction while keeping up with the hectic pace of their regular duties. They often worked overtime to handle the increased demands, but they retained their good humor through it all. They were responsible for moving the lower school to its new quarters and then moving the upper school into the vacated spaces—a huge task they completed in less than five days.

The largest of the nine cupolas is lifted into place.

Ceremony Marks Wing's Completion

The final touch to the new wing was the laying of the cornerstone on October 8th. A reception for parents and friends of the school was held that evening after the dedication ceremony. Members of the development office will be glad to provide tours for anyone interested in seeing how a great facility can get even better.

HERBERT McANENY

Herbert McAneny was a modest man, but he attained a larger-than-life stature in the Princeton community. When he passed away this summer at the age of ninety he left an emptiness in the hearts of all who knew him.

His affiliation with the school began in 1931 when he moved to Princeton after teaching at Milton Academy and working for a while with Century Publishing in New York City. For four decades he taught English and coached athletics and drama at Princeton Country Day School and Princeton Day School. His passion for the theater inspired high quality dramatic productions at PCD, where the boys played girls' parts, and at PDS in the theater named for him. Herbert and his wife, Marguerite, who directed plays at Miss Fine's School, were charter members of the Princeton Community Players in 1933. He continued acting in their productions and others until illness prevented him last year. He even played the part of Hymen in PDS' 1990 production of As You Like It.

He not only taught generations of PDS students, he kept in touch with them throughout their lives. He made frequent trips to the PDS alumni office with newspaper clippings for the class notes of this publication. He also gave the school wonderful photographs of PCD plays and copies of the Junior Journal from his comprehensive collection.

On September 19, 1993 a memorial service was held for Herbert at the school. As his daughter, Leslie, observed, "It may be the first memorial service that requires a tech rehearsal!" In the theater which bears his name, his life was chronicled by slides and video tape highlights. Eloquent tributes were given by his family, friends, former students and fellow actors.

On behalf of his many friends we extend our sympathy to his children, Leslie MFS '54, Wendy McAneny Bradburn MFS '50 and Colin PCD '46, his brothers, Ernest and David, his sister, Elisabeth Harrison, and his seven grandchildren.

The following reminiscences provide different perspectives on a unique individual.

THE TEACHER

by Sanders Maxwell PCD '32

A VERY SPECIAL MAN

With a full measure of teenage prescience, the 1932 graduation issue of PCD's Junior Journal editorialized; "We will break up and go our separate ways and will, in all probability, forget the men who taught us."

Forget Herb McAneny? Not likely. As the same editorial noticed, "We have practically lived with the faculty for five years." And for those of us still living in the Princeton area, we have had the very great pleasure of never losing Herb to the whims of geography.

Which means becoming aware over the decades that his quiet, vastly knowledgeable and thoughtful demeanor never changed. That his vitalizing interest in PCD not only survived the transition to PDS, but grew and stimulated and helped ease the not always calm passage of those early years. That his remarkably constant love for the stage never ceased touching and enriching the many, many minds, young and old, that he taught and stimulated and in many instances introduced to the delight and knowledge the theater can impart.

And let that 14-year-old pundit please recognize, too, the simple wonder of a man who by his unadorned presence could soothe a torment of disagreement - and never shout in the process. A talent all too rare that the world today could use in immense measure.

That 14-year-old editorialist goes on to say that while the graduates may forget the men who taught them, "We will always carry in our hearts and souls the principles which they instilled in our minds, 'Manhood, Learning, Gentleness.'"

If we could only embody those principles of the PCD motto as fully as Herbert McAneny, we would do him much honor.

THE COACH

Perhaps the least-known facet of Herbert's teaching was his role as soccer and baseball coach at PCD. The December 1940 issue of the Junior Journal recounts athletic policy changes and quotes Herbert in a typically generous statement that still has application today.

"The 1940 soccer season at PCD was marked by an entirely new policy regarding outside games. It was decided to withdraw from the Mercer County Junior Soccer League and to concentrate on Blue and White games within the school. Although less emphasis was placed on outside games, the season came to a close with PCD meeting three old rivals - Hun, Princeton Township and Princeton Junior High - in a brief, but exciting four-game series. Our participation in these outside games proves that PCD can be equal to, if not superior than, well-matched opponents. It also showed how greatly our players had benefited from their strenuous workouts in the Blue and White contests.

"Mr. McAneny again served as coach

Coach McAneny and the 1939 soccer team.

for the varsity squad, and, at the end of the season, made the following statement: 'This year's soccer team deserves to be placed among the really good teams of recent years. The long series of Blue and White games developed some good players that might never have been discovered if we had played other schools at the beginning of the

'We had an unusually large number of good substitutes - so many, in fact, that it was often hard to pick one boy over another for the first team. The game with Hun, ending in a thrilling over-time victory, was one on the best games I have ever seen at PCD."

THE ADMINISTRATOR by Beverly A. Williams

My perspective on Herbert McAneny dates from the early sixties, when I began teaching and assisting in the office at Miss Fine's School. Of course everyone in Princeton knew of Herbert and his wife, Marguerite, because of their passionate involvement in local theater. In 1964-65, the last year in which Miss Fine's and Princeton Country Day were still separate schools in their old buildings, though already merged corporately, Herbert was acting headmaster at PCD. Tom Hartmann had been appointed principal of the merged schools and was also acting head of Miss Fine's, as Shirley Davis, the distinguished headmistress, was on a year's sabbatical leave.

In March of that year the Board of Trustees accepted resignations from Miss Davis and Mr. Hartmann - something of a crisis for an institution that planned to open on the new campus the following September, and hoped to lure Princeton parents to trust their ninth-grade sons to its upper school instead of following the traditional flight to boarding schools. Into this administrative vacuum the Board thrust a committee of four, to govern the school for its first year and allow time for a deliberate search for a new leader. The four were Herbert, Fowler Merle-Smith, who was to be head of the middle school, Winifred Vogt, assistant head of the middle school and I, as assistant head of the upper school.

Princeton Day Schools (the "s" was later dropped) opened a week late that fall, with the new building just barely ready for students - this year's opening is reminiscent - and in that busy, challenging, complicated year I came to know Herbert very well indeed. He quickly emerged as the person at the top, the one parents called, the one teachers turned to. The committee of four met weekly with the Board's administrative committee. Every Monday Elizabeth "Bunny" Dilworth, the Chairman of the Board, brought sandwiches from the Nassau Delicatessen (and a bottle of Harvey's Bristol Cream) and problems were aired and decisions made over lunch in the future's head's

Herbert was a figurehead for the students in the best sense of that word. He respected them profoundly and was fiercely protective of their dignity and their rights, and effective also in dealing with miscreants. Here I am, falling into Herbert's way with language. I remember going into his empty office one day to note a meeting on his calendar; across the top in his precise script were the words, "Excoriate upper school for behavior in assembly.7 dealt with colleagues with the same wry and affectionate tolerance and sanity, and always, warm support.

Herbert set the tone of the newlyhatched school for Doug McClure, who was appointed headmaster for the following year. Mr. Mac continued to teach and founded the school's strong drama program. Even after his official retirement he continued to work with whoever the current drama coach was; I believe he came to every play at PDS.

Herbert was a wonderful friend, kind, generous, wise, funny, charming. He sent me a birthday card every year. Typical.

THE DRAMA COACH by Christopher Reeve PDS '70

It may seem odd to speak of Mr. Mac in nautical terms but the image that comes to mind is of passing a sea buoy as you head offshore: you go by all too quickly and disappear over the horizon, yet your course is a bearing from that mark for a long time.

To a nine-year-old starting PCD, some teachers seemed a little formal and intimidating. But the acting headmaster was this soft-spoken older gentleman with a dry sense of humor, Herbert McAneny. Kids would test other teachers but listen when he talked.

Without trying he made you want his respect. It turned out he also directed the school plays.

From fourth grade through twelfth, Mr. Mac encouraged my interest in theater and gave me every opportunity to learn more. During rehearsals for Witness for the Prosecution he took me aside one day and quietly pointed out that before you come onstage, you should think about what your character has been doing for the past five minutes. This (to me) startling concept opened the door to researching a character. At PDS, when mononucleosis made me drop out of The Diary of Anne Frank, Mr. Machelped me through the disappointment of not being in one of the best school productions ever. Thanks to him I ended up, reasonably content, running sound effects. Once we drove a U-Haul together to Atlantic City to get boardwalk props for The Skin of Our Teeth. Actually, he wanted a chance, away from school, to ask me to think about certain problems I had at the time. I realized this was a moment of real friendship. I felt the same much later when he would come into New York to see me in Berkeley Square or A Matter of Gravity, always finding something encouraging to say about the performance.

The 23 years since our class graduated from PDS have gone by at warp speed. What strikes me most from this vantage point is the constancy and selflessness of our teachers all that time ago. First among them, to me, will always be Mr. Mac. He loved language, literature, the theater, decency, good sportsmanship - and his students, way beyond the boundaries of a job. What he offered were gifts for a lifetime. I will always be extremely grateful to have been one of the lucky ones who passed by.

Herbert McAneny welcomed Christopher Reeve '70 back to Princeton when he appeared at a PDS benefit showing of his latest movie, The Bostonians, in 1985.

SCHOOL CELEBRATES CAREERS OF RETIRING TEACHERS AND STAFF

The school took pride in honoring eleven administrators, faculty and staff members last spring as they retired from long careers at PDS. The first event was the Faculty Farewell Breakfast on Alumni Day at which alumni had an opportunity to thank the teachers who had meant so much to them. Outgoing Alumni Council President Jane Henderson Kenyon '79 welcomed the guests and spoke of the contributions of each of last year's retirees: Phyllis Bailey, Didi Bannon, Alison Shehadi, Markell Myers Shriver '46 and Arlene Smith. With humor, tears, eloquence and gratitude, former students spoke about the faculty retiring this year. John Mislow '88 remembered Quinn McCord, Ellen Fisher '73 thanked Alberto Petrella for his contributions to the school, Tom Gates '78 painted a vivid picture of Carl Reimers, Jessie Robertson '88 spoke of the influence Pat Venable has had on her life, Bob Hillier '52 paid moving tribute to the late Bob Whitlock, and newly elected Alumni Council President Anne Williams '74 recounted from her special perspective, the 30 year career of her mother, Beverly Williams. Anne also thanked Jane for her leadership over the past two years and presented her with a token of thanks from the Council.

Each of the retiring faculty received "an apple for the teacher," actually a crystal apple engraved with the school seal and an inscription that reads, "Presented to (name) by the Alumni Association of Princeton Day School with our deepest gratitude and love, May 22, 1993." A glow of pride and mutual respect was evident to all assembled as they realized how fortunate the school has been to have such extraordinary teachers and students.

Next the Board of Trustees recognized the group at a reception where teachers talked about their colleagues and the trustees presented each with a handsome captain's chair. Headmaster Duncan Alling also featured the retirees at the final faculty luncheon in mid-June.

Phyllis Bailey, Librarian
"Many found in her the uncritical listener and sympathetic friend they needed. Some of our exchange students found in her the "Mom" they were missing. Her office always had an extra chair - usually with a student on it."
Cathi Miller, Librarian

Didi Bannon, Science Teacher

"Her enthusiasm and caring for her students is evident by her long-time involvement with the Student Council and the Chess Club. Didi was good at recognizing strengths in people and bringing out and supporting those strengths. She also had the ability to cut to the heart of the matter and this skill served our department and the school well. "Jane Grigger, Science Teacher

Markell Meyers Shriver '46, Director of College Guidance (below)

"Many students who entered her office, lacking self-confidence, gloomy about college prospects, would emerge smiling and excited, waving a long list of colleges to apply to." Anne Shepherd, English Teacher & College Advisor

Arlene Smith, former Head of the Art Department, presently Director of the Anne Reid Art Gallery (below)

She would rarely make changes on a student's work, rather she would talk about it, take it out in the gallery and view it, discussing what should be done to complete the piece. ... All anyone needs to have done is view the quality of work which came out of Arlene's studio year after year and it's abundantly clear she did some heavy duty teaching." Gary Lott, History Teacher

"The best word to describe her is gracious... Her favorite expression is 'oh, my.' In the upper school we have a choice of using words or numbers for test grades. Failure is one of the word grades which Alison replaced with 'oh, my.' The students knew exactly what was meant. I also don't know if Alison could ever use the word failure."

Jim Walker, Head of Math Department

Quinn McCord, Classics Teacher
"I am sure that Quinn's students remember him... for his scholarship and the respect he had for them, respect that translated into demands for a high level of scholarship and behavior."
Bunny Webb, Head Librarian

Alberto Petrella, Groundskeeper
"As icemeister, King of the Zamboni and the PDS rink, you have touched innumerable lives of players, coaches, families and the extended hockey and skating community. You were always there for all of us - to support, cheer, pitch quarters, help tie skates, welcome guests and console the injured. Your hard work, positive spirit and endless hours of work above and beyond ...did make a difference and have been enormously appreciated." Ellen Fisher '73, Former PDS Teacher and Coach

Carl Reimers, Head of Religion Department

"I always felt comfortable going to the Rev with any question I had about life, school, the punishment that Sandy Bing had in mind for me, anything. I could always count on Rev to listen, to advise, to joke and, most important, to keep in confidence anything that needed to be so. (His classes) were not only interesting, interactive and thought-provoking, they were a ball!...Rev could see the value and conviction in people's arguments and smooth the discussion to the point where no one felt right or wrong, and no one ever felt judged." Tom Gates '78

Pat Venable, Science Teacher
"Pat helped her students understand nature's mysteries by getting them involved. Her classroom was a living museum. She played with science and taught her students to play with it as well." Carlos Cara, Head of Science Department

Bob Whitlock, late Head of the Industrial Arts Department (above, Bob Hillier '52 presents gift to Harriet Whitlock)

"The school community thanks Bob for his lifelong contributions here at PDS. Not only was he an excellent teacher, but he also was a builder. A builder of exellence which is reflected in the achievements of his students. Bob's presence is embodied in the foundation of this school. He will be with us for a long time." Andy Franz, Head of Industrial Arts Department

Beverly Williams, Director of Studies "All technical problems to her have been, first, human problems. All general situations and conflicts have been, first, individual's situations. She represents, in its ideal sense, the individual and independent spirit of independent schools.... So Beverly's importance to the day school, and I love the way she uses that phrase, as if it were the only show in town, is, I think, a subtle matter. What she stands for... is erudition leavened with humility, and great humanity." Steve Lawrence, Head of English Department

ALUMNI DAY '93

The campus was alive with activity on May 22nd as alumni, students, parents, and present and past faculty and trustees came together to celebrate Alumni Day. The festivities began at breakfast and ended after dinner with events for all constituencies.

Guests at the Faculty Farewell Breakfast enjoyed a beautiful buffet under a tent on the Colross lawn while alumni paid tribute to their former teachers.

After breakfast guests were given a sneak preview of the new building. The interior was still a skeleton and hard hats were required, but the promise of this facility was apparent.

At noon the PDS Panther led alumni, students and faculty down the lane past the headmaster's house to Pretty Brook Farm for food, games and pony rides. The sky was the brightest blue and temperatures were perfect for a fair.

Headmaster Duncan Alling made a big hit in the dunking booth wearing an old fashioned bathing suit and a PDS cap.

At 2:30 members of the PDS girls varsity làcrosse team and 14 alumnae took to the field. Although each alumna insisted she was "totally out of shape," they played like pros. They were still going strong at half-time when they posed for this picture: (L. to R., back row) Margie Wallace Gibson '84, Sarah Berkman '92, Camie Carrington Levy '81, Sophie Carpenter Speidel '80, Laura Bennett '85, Karen Callaway '85, Rena Whitehouse '83, Nika Skvir '91; (front row) Tassie Turkevich Skvir '62, Laura Farina '79, Linda Maxwell Stefanelli '62, Edith Roberts '90, Pauline Roberts '92 and Hilleary Thomas '84. Since a few alumnae played on the varsity team, the victors were hard to determine, but everyone had fun. They're already looking forward to next year's contest - and some substitutes - and challenge other alumnae to join them.

■ Beth Schlossberg '68 first suggested the school should be represented by a panther and joined the PDS mascot and Mary Hobler Hyson '68 at the Panther Parade.

The memorial service took place in the new amphitheater. The inscription on the plaque reads, "This amphitheater given to Princeton Day School in loving memory of John D. Wallace, Jr. '78 by his classmates and friends, May 22, 1993. 'His shouting days with mirth are crowned; And still I dream he treads the lawn, Walking ghostly in the dew, Pierced by my glad singing through, My Songs of old earth's dreamy youth.' W.B. Yeats."

A new tradition was introduced as close to 80 alumni and friends gathered to remember alumni and faculty who had passed away in the last year. The moving and beautiful service was held in the outdoor amphitheater of the new wing. The Rev. Carl Reimers officiated and Sherri James '91 added beauty and peace to the moment with her singing. Following the memorial service, the amphitheater was dedicated to the memory of John D. Wallace '78 and a scholarship established in memory of Frederick D. Woodbridge '78 was announced.

50th Reunion MFS Class of 1943 celebrated their 50th reunion with a luncheon in the sunroom of the farmhouse where they could watch the activity swirling around them. Seated (L. to R.) Queenie Henon Heinekamp, Mary Barlow Harvey, Liz Ralston Dill, Helen Oliphant Hoffert and Sally Burtch West; (standing) Julie Sturges O'Connor, Marjorie Libby Moore, Peggy Stokes Whitehead and Olive Schulte Brown.

The 40th Reunion MFS Class of 1953 gathered at Caroline Rosenblum Moseley's house for dinner on Friday night: (seated, L. to R.) Mary Roberts Craighill, Susan McAllen Turner, Anne Carples Denny, Hilary Thompson Kenyon, Elaine Polhemus Frost; (standing) Hope Thompson Kerr, Jane Gihon Shillaber, Ellen Kerney, Karen Cooper Lindholm, Caroline Rosenblum Moseley, Wendy Hall Alden, Caroline Savage Langan.

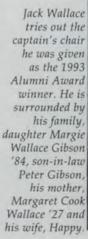

The Class of 1968 marked their 25th with a picnic behind the serpentine wall and relived their school years through a wonderful collage prepared by Mary Hobler Hyson. In the evening alumni and faculty gathered under the tent for the Headmaster's Reception and Alumni Dinner. The Alumni Council slate was approved and new president Anne Williams '74 presented Jack Wallace '48 with the Alumni Award in recognition of his years of service to the Princeton community. Jean Osgood Smyth '31 narrated a slide show that illustrated the changes that have occurred and the traditions that have remained over nearly 100 years from the founding of Miss Fine's in 1899 to the promise of the class of 2000.

MIDDLE SCHOOL GRADUATION ADDRESS

by Brandice Osborne-Gwynn '97

When I first sat down to write this speech, I was having trouble trying to decide where to begin. The more I thought, the more I realized I should begin at the beginning. I entered PDS in the seventh grade. I was coming from a public school and leaving all of my friends to come to a school with a different curriculum and a group of people I didn't know. On the first day of school, I remember everyone hugging everyone else and saying how they had missed each other over the summer. I felt so alone that day and just wanted to cry. Then came science class where we had assigned seats. I had made out fine all day and sat by myself, but now I had to sit between two people I didn't know. I sat down in my seat and then it happened. I made a friend, Janie Egan. She and I were lab partners for the entire year and now friends for life. That's how friendship happens. The person you least expect to get along with, you become so close to until you're inseparable. You can ask any teacher in the middle school and they'll tell you, if you're looking for Brandi, she's with Alakee and vice-versa. That is the type of friendship I have acquired here at PDS.

You can also ask any teacher or student in the middle school, "What is Brandi known for?" and they'll say, "making announcements." Well, you have probably been able to determine that I like to talk. Whether it be in class, when I am not supposed to, or in front of a large group to make an announcement or speech, you'll always find me talking about something. I have always had a gift for gab, but PDS has helped to enhance it by saying, "Brandi, you have a great voice and if you have something to say, say it." In public school I was thought of as being talkative, here I am encouraged to use it. This is just another example of how PDS has helped me to feel comfortable. Before coming to PDS I had never played a sport nor did I want to. But now I play field hockey, basketball and lacrosse. PDS wants to get everyone involved. Here the teachers care and see talents and capabilities in you that are not necessarily hidden, but that we sometimes choose to ignore. Everyone on this stage today is special in his or her own way. Whether they excel in sports, academics, writing short stories or poems, governing skills or singing and acting, everyone here today has a special skill or talent. It may take a while or it may take a matter of minutes before a teacher or a friend realizes where your strengths and weaknesses lie, but here at PDS, they won't quit until they have found them.

Friendship and companionship play a large role in the lives of everyone. I was brought up by my mother to believe that I have to respect myself in order for others to respect me and that I don't need to be totally dependent on anyone else, but myself. I have learned on my own that what she said was very true, but to have a friend supporting you does help and here at PDS, I have found that. Each friend I have supports me in whatever idea or belief I have and I, too, support them.

I would like to thank Mrs. Bencivengo, Mr. Atkeson, all of the teachers and my classmates for a memorable and unforgettable year.

The last message I would like to give to my class is, no matter where life may take you, make sure you enter with your heads held high, a plan to follow out, knowledge in your head, a sense of humor to keep you sane and a friend by your side to support your ideas, to congratulate you when you succeed, to comfort you when failure falls your way and most of all, to laugh with in the future about eighth grade and the years to follow.

Congratulations, graduating class of '97, and may the memories, happiness and fun continue.

In the spring 1993 issue on the community service program at PDS, we stated that the program had assumed its present structure in 1981. In fact, Dan Skvir and Bob Whitlock wrote up a proposal for student community service as early as the 1977-1978 school year that was accepted by the administration. The program referred to in our feature was a refinement of that proposal.

At the Lower School Final Assembly in June fourth grade teacher Chris Hart (left), Lower School Head Sara Schwiebert and Headmaster Duncan Alling congratulated lower school graduates including Maureen Larsen and Sydne Levine.

COMMENCEMENT ADDRESS

by Walter Hosey, Jr. '93, Community Council President

Walter Hosey was chosen by his classmates to speak at commencement. His remarks follow.

On behalf of the class of 1993 I would like to again welcome you to the Princeton Day School graduation ceremony. As I look upon the graduates today, the very people who I've spent a large portion of my life with, and been able to share countless experiences with, I find it hard to believe that this day of celebrating the completion of our high school experiences has finally come. Our grade is one made up of many different people with their own individual interests and beliefs. We have all formed our own identity and uniqueness during our high school years. But today we graduate as a family. A group of people with a common bond ... PDS. And with all of the knowledge that we have gained, we will begin to break away from this family, embarking on a new set of experiences and gaining even more knowledge.

Growing up is a process which seems to come in spurts. I can remember the many class periods that I spent working and talking in the middle school library. And then I can remember going back into that very library, and not being able to fit my legs under the tables. I can remember that as a freshman in high school the seniors seemed so much bigger and older than I was. But when I became a senior I still didn't feel as old nor as large as the seniors who had gone before me.

Even when the time came for me to get my driver's license, I couldn't believe that the times of asking my parents to drive me to the movie theater, or to one of my friends houses, were really over. Growing up in this school has provided us all with lasting memories, and some great times. But as we got older and learned more, we've all experienced our own setbacks as well.

Just about everyone in this audience today is here to support and congratulate people of my graduating class. However, understand that in order to make it to this wonderful day each of us had to endure hard times and deal with problems with which we were faced. Some of us felt lonely at times, as if no one really understood our feelings. Some people were often stressed about grades and whether they would receive admission to the college of their choice. People had problems with relationships, friends, family and other people with whom they came in contact. But through every struggle, whether victorious or defeated, we all continued to do our best to continue to move forward and to deal with setbacks and brief disappointments because we all were determined to succeed, and we found our own means of support and inspiration to do this.

My support came from my family, specifically the people with whom I live, my mom, dad and sister. They are sitting in this audience today along with other people who have given me support throughout my life, and I would like to take some of this time to thank them. Mom and Dad, thank you for all that you have given me. I understand that the decision to send me to this school was a difficult one for you. I realize that my being here was sometimes a financial and emotional burden for you, but you never tried to make me feel as though I owed you anything but trying to do my best. But I do owe you. I thank you for giving me both the strength and knowledge that I needed, as well as my independence and space. And to my sister, Devon, I know that sometimes being the second child forces you to live under my shadow, but your support has meant so much to me and your talents are only beginning to be noticed, so don't be afraid to be the

For me, my family is responsible for providing me with the help that I needed to get me to where I am today. But all of the graduates here today have found their own means of support through someone or something. Whether it has been family, friends, teachers, certain experiences, or specific goals that were determined to be achieved, we all at some time needed both a reason and assistance to help us continue growing into young adults.

What strikes me about many of my classmates is that most of us have not learned to appreciate all of our achievements. Getting into college was a goal for many of us but let us not forget to cherish all of the events that led us this far. We all know that high school is only a fraction of our lives and we have so much more to do in our lifetimes. But we cannot always look forward into the future without taking note of our daily successes. There will always be goals that we have set for ourselves. Just make sure that you enjoy life as it presents itself to you.

Although I ask all of my fellow graduates to take this day, and the days gone before it, as special, I cannot help but look toward our futures. Taking into consideration all of the various accomplishments that the people of this class have made, and all of the growth that we have all undergone, I ask a great deal of the class of 1993 as we begin to go out into the world. You see, there have been many graduating classes that have left Princeton Day School, and the many other high schools around this country, with hopes for a bright and promising future. And I have no doubt that many of us, if we continue to work hard and learn from our mistakes, will have successful careers.

mistakes, will have successful careers. But these goals are much too small and limited for a class such as ours. We must do more than strive to climb up an economic ladder of achievement. We have much more creativity and awareness than that. This is not a class that can follow the paths of those gone before us, because we are a unique group capable of much more responsibility than many before. We have the chance to begin changing the aspects of this world that we don't like. So a goal that I have for us is that we learn to appreciate each other's differences a lot more. Just as I applaud our class's individuality, I ask that as we all step away form PDS and meet new people, we continue to learn to accept the different qualities in other people.

Many of the friends that I have both inside of my class and out do not share the same beliefs that I do. Many of my friends have conservative attitudes on subjects that I have a more liberal opinion on. Many of my friends see the world, and their places in it, in a very different way than I do. In fact, each member of this class views the many aspects of the world in their own ways. But through our many differences of opinion there was never any reason why we could not build a friendship and respect for each other. Please do not forget this lesson. We must continue to break down the walls of communication. Understand that if you happened to see me in a shopping mall, or restaurant, or a business office, and did not know me, you would not be able to see my PDS education or my Morehouse education simply by looking at me. You would actually have to speak with me and listen to my words before ever being able to judge or understand me. But we cannot allow our senseless stereotypes of people to cloud our ability to truly be good and objective listeners. And with a better respect for other people we will begin to fix the problems of racism and ignorance that are so prevalent in our society today.

Good luck and, again, congratulations to my friends, the class of 1993. Thank you.

ALUMNI ASSOCIATION REPORT

by Anne Williams '74, President

Newness echoed through the halls on opening day this fall - new class-room addition to house the lower school students and faculty, new heads of the middle and upper schools, new dean of faculty position, new teachers replacing last year's retirees, new state-of-the-art photography lab, new space for upper school classrooms in the vacated lower school wing, new computer center, new Dale Griffee Student Center, new meeting spaces for student clubs in the dining hall, new food service...

Indeed it's a very exciting time for students and faculty and it's a time when alumni can feel great pride in their school. In fact, they can also be proud of the extensive alumni involvement at Princeton Day School. Not only did alumni participation in the Annual Fund increase by 66% last year, but there are more alumni volunteering for the school than ever before - nearly 170 people serving as either trustees, council members, class secretaries, class agents or reunion chairmen. Additionally, 21 alumni families have children enrolled as students and 12 alumni are teaching and coaching.

The Alumni Association offers alumni many and varied opportunities to become involved at Princeton Day School: return for reunions and other alumni events, write your class secretary with news for class notes, serve as a volunteer for your class or as a trustee or Alumni Council member, organize any one of many alumni activities, share your professional experience at Career Day, display your talents in the Alumni Art Exhibition, offer advice to aspiring thespians through the Alumni Artists Bulletin Board, support the Annual Fund by making a gift and phoning classmates to join you, coach a sport or test your own athletic prowess in an alumni/varsity contest, lend your expertise in selecting recipients of alumni awards and scholarships, help the admission office identify alumni families with school-age children, spread the good word about PDS in the community.

In an attempt to educate students sooner about what it means to be an alum of Princeton Day School, the Alumni Association is recruiting members of the senior class for an Undergraduate Alumni Council. Preliminary plans include sending a "care" package to college freshmen, organizing an evening for college alums to talk with juniors and seniors, planning the senior class breakfast, identifying class agents and class secretaries, and hosting visiting alumni. We encourage you to come back to campus for a day, visit classes with a senior, walk through the new wing, try our new food service and enjoy an afternoon cheering for a PDS team. Visits can be arranged by calling the alumni office at 609-924-5951. In the meantime, mark your calendar for Alumni Day, May 21, and check the schedule for other alumni activities.

Alumni Council representatives and development office staff from the past ten years surprised Linda Maxwell Stefanelli '62 at a party to celebrate her retirement as alumni director. Pictured are Margot Huber Heckler, Martha Sullivan Sword '73, Athletic Director Jan Baker, David Bogle, Linda, and Molly Sword McDonough '75.

Nancy Young Becomes Alumni Director

A reshuffling of responsibilities in the development office has brought new energy to several areas. Nancy Young took over as alumni director in July when Linda Maxwell Stefanelli '62 turned over that part of her job to focus entirely on publications. Nancy also coordinates the school's special events and serves as an admission associate. She passed on her duties as director of the Annual Fund to Ann Wiley '70 who coordinated the alumni fundraising effort last year.

Nancy Young is the new alumni director.

New Faculty

U.S. Science (P/T) - Frances Brindle received a B.A. and a Ph.D. from the University of Dublin, Trinity College. Her most recent work has been with American Cyanamid Company in the agricultural research division as a postdoctoral research scientist. She spent three years as a teaching assistant for biology and botany at the University of Dublin, Trinity College. Frances's two children, Alice and Alexander, are in our lower school.

U.S. Math - Christopher Butler graduated from the College of the Holy Cross. He received an M.A. in mathematics from Washington University. He conducted discussion sessions for calculus students at Washington University, worked with students on the application of computers to calculus, and tutored students in algebra I and II, trigonometry, geometry, pre-calculus and calculus. Chris will teach at PDS for one year as a replacement for Anna Olecka who is on sabbatical leave.

U.S. Math - Todd Coniff received a B.A. from the University of Minnesota. He has been working towards an M.A. at Wesleyan University. Todd has instructed three different math courses at West Haven High School where he integrated a problem-solving philosophy in a twelve-week math curriculum.

School Counselor - Roger Dillow has most recently been a clinical social worker for Princeton Psychological Associates. He has also served as a faculty member at Princeton Family Center, a mental health consultant for Princeton High School, The Newgrange School and The American Boychoir School, and was also an instructor at Rutgers University. Roger received a B.A. from The College of William and Mary, an M.A. from Syracuse University and an M.S.W. from Rutgers University.

Strings Specialist - Jocelyn Gertel taught Suzuki and traditional violin at Queens College. She has also taught group string classes in Westchester public schools through a community outreach program. Jocelyn graduated from the University of Michigan with a bachelor of music degree and has earned a master of music from the Manhattan School of Music.

U.S. Classics - Todd Gudgel spent last year earning a Ph.D. in classics at the University of Chicago. It is a pleasure to welcome him back to Princeton Day School, Todd was married in July and spent his honeymoon in Rome, on the Amalfi Coast and in Vienna.

Artist in Residence - Ross Hindley received a B.F.A. from Ithaca College and an honorary degree from the American Conservatory Theater. He is a founding member of the 29th Street Theater which was created by graduates from the acting programs at American Conservatory Theater, Yale and Juillard. He was also co-founder and former board president of Pacific Theater Ensemble and the recipient of numerous honors including two Los Angeles Theater Critics Awards for best play in 1988 and 1990. Ross has also been a visiting teacher and guest performer at Lincoln Center Institute, the Hudson Valley Shakespeare Festival's summer workshop, Princeton Day School and Lawrenceville School.

U.S. English - David LaMotte graduated from Washington College. He earned an M.A. at Princeton University and is currently a candidate for the Ph.D. in English. David received the Mellon/University Center Graduate Prize Fellowship for doctoral research from Princeton University, a Princeton University Fellowship, the Hildenbrand Medal for Highest Academic Record in English from Washington College and the Fox Medal for Varsity Athlete with Highest Academic Record from Washington College.

M.S. History/English - Matthew Levinson received a B.A. in history from Haverford College and an M.A. in history education from Teachers' College, Columbia University. He has worked for the US House Small Business Subcommittee on Regulation, Business Opportunities and Energy in Washington DC, was a certified health promoter at the Clinica del Pueblo in Washington DC, and wrote and edited a daily international executive business news summary for News Watch, The Chilean Press Roundup in Santiago, Chile.

U.S. Science - Barbara Maloney was last at Delran High School (NJ) where she taught biology, chemistry, anatomy and physiology, genetics, environmental science, earth science and unified science. She founded and promoted the Science Enrichment Club at Delran, as well as the Medical Explorer Post for the Boy Scouts of America. Barbara graduated from Beaver College in Pennsylvania.

U.S. Science - Michelle Massaros taught general chemistry and earth science at Princeton High School before coming to PDS. She received a B.A. from Rutgers University and received certification from Rutgers in chemistry and physics.

M.S. Spanish - Darryl Newman received a B.A. from Lafayette College and earned an M.A. in Spanish from Middlebury College in August, 1993. Darryl taught English as a Second Language, tutored high school A.P. Spanish and coached sports for Musiker Tours Inc. at UCLA, consulted with directors and colleagues to develop a pioneer program at the Institute of European Studies in Salamanca, Spain, and utilized Spanish to teach sports, supervise activities and tutor special groups at Cursos Internacionales Universidad de Salamanica in Leon, Spain.

Religion Department Head - Julie Raino received a B.A. from Miami University of Oxford, and a Master of Divinity degree from the University of Chicago Divinity School. She was the associate pastor at St. Paul Community Church in Illinois where she assumed full pastoral responsibilities for the 800-member non-denominational congregation. Julie also taught religion at St.

Mary's Academy in Illinois.

U.S. Math - Frank Rizzo received an S.B. from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He most recently taught math at The Hun School of Princeton. He also taught preparatory mathematics and strategies for the Scholastic Aptitude Test.

U.S. Spanish Intern - Nelson Shin is a recent graduate of Rutgers University. He also took courses (all conducted in Spanish) at La Universidad Autonoma de Madrid. Nelson has been a tutor and Spanish section advisor at Rutgers.

M.S. English/Spanish Intern - Ellen Skowronski graduated Phi Beta Kappa from Trinity College (CT). She had a double major in English and Spanish. Ellen received the President's Fellow, Modern Languages Award as well as the Ruel C. Tuttle Prize from the English department. She was a teaching assistant and writing associate at Trinity, a teacher of English in Gijon, Spain and a teaching intern for the New England Farm Worker's Council.

Returning from sabbatical leave is photography teacher Eileen Hohmuth-Lemonick. Also returning to PDS after a year's leave to earn a master's degree at Stanford University, is middle school math teacher Maryann Forcina.

Several alumni came back to campus for Architecture Career Day last spring. Pictured are Adam Bromwich '92, Robin Murray '70 who also took over Bob Whitlock's classes after his death, John Kalpin '72, Jean Bishop '83, Chip Place '73 and Ward Kuser '61.

Marika Sardar'94 is this year's Alumni Scholar. Each year the Alumni Association awards a partial scholarship to an upper school student in need of financial assistance who demonstrates enthusiasm and school spirit.

Emily Miller'93 won the Senior Alumni Award for her committment to helping others.

Former Faculty

Former upper school Spanish teacher Barbara Silberman had a baby girl on August 6th named Sarah Elise. Alan Taback, former physical education teacher, has returned from the Greek isles where he enjoyed a sabbatical to pursue his painting. Marge Whalen, former assistant to the director of college counseling, died last May after a long battle with cancer. She had worked for the school for 21 years, first in the business office and later, after a brief hiatus, in the college guidance office. Our sympathy goes out to her family and friends.

Margery Cuyler '66 visited Beverly Gallagher's second grade this fall and read some of her children's books to the class.

IN THE SPOTLIGHT: Sara Schwiebert, Head of Lower School

EDUCATION: Sara received a B.S. in education from Ohio State University where she also minored in music.

BACKGROUND: This is Sara's 20th year at PDS. Before becoming head of the lower school, she taught first grade here. Prior to that, she taught kindergarten, third and fifth grades in public schools in Colorado Springs, Hamilton Township and Princeton.

WHAT MAKES PDS SPECIAL: "Its strong commitment to academic exellence and its devotion to the arts. "All of the people who work with our children and school community. The care and thoughtfulness of our administrative assistants, maintenance crew and custodial and kitchen staff. "The faculty are creative and imaginative people who have the freedom to constantly integrate methods, materials and their unique personal talents into the curriculum at each grade level. They are hard-working people who care deeply about each child."

MOST PROUD OF: "The commitment on the part of my faculty to make those creative changes and refinements so critical in any educational setting. Curriculum, educational materials, special programs and our teaching environment must evolve as our children become more knowledgeable about their world, its technology and the cascade of information they are required to assimilate. We are constantly concerned with achieving an equilibrium between the pace of academic achievement and a child's developmental capabilities. We try to instill social skills, values and a sense of well being and security. "Obviously, I am also very proud of the teamwork that has gone on for so many years in the planning and actual building of our new classroom wing. It is testimony to the strength of the lower school program and the fulfillment of a dream many of us have had for a long time."

Sara Schwiebert awith Andrew Davidson '06 and Zach Fasola '06.

FAVORITE BOOKS/MOVIES: "Many of the wonderful children's classics. We have a library at home filled with marvelous books on art, art history, architecture, fiction, history. I enjoy reading some of Hemingway, Faulkner and histories of great battles. Most recently I've enjoyed novels by Larry McMurty and Ann Beattie. Favorite movies include Dr. Zhivago, Ladyhawke and many old movies."

INTERESTS: "Classical music. I used to do a lot of fly fishing with my husband, but my schedule has not allowed me to do that in recent years. Cooking, particularly baking because I find it good therapy. Reading a good book. Enjoying family friends and meeting new little people and their parents each year."

PERSONAL PROFILE: Sara and her husband, Ernie, moved to Princeton over 30 years ago when he was working toward his Ph.D. in architecture at the university. Her husband is a writer of numerous books on salmon and trout fishing. Their son, Erik, came to PDS in first grade and graduated in 1983. He has since received his Ph.D. in physiology from Dartmouth and is a post doctoral fellow at Johns Hopkins University.

IN THE SPOTLIGHT: Charles Elbot, Head of Middle School

EDUCATION: Charles has a B.A. from Wesleyan University and an M.Ed. from Harvard University.

BACKGROUND: Charles served as head of the upper school (grades 7-9) at Graland Country Day School in Denver since 1988. Before that, he was headmaster at Cabarrus Academy in North Carolina and at the September School in Colorado.

WHAT MAKES PDS SPECIAL: "An excellent faculty and a great group of young peole who care about learning."

GOALS FOR FIRST YEAR:

"To become intimately aquainted with the people and programs of Princeton Day School.

To earn the confidence and trust of my colleagues and of the families associated with the middle school.

To enable the faculty and students to have the best posssible year of teaching and learning.

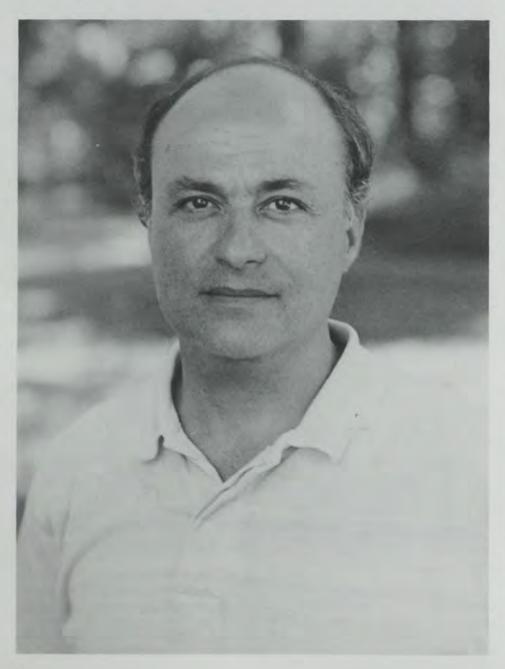

To work with faculty to develop and pursue a clear set of priorities.

To serve PDS with joy, humor, compassion, energy and wisdom."

read broadly from novels which my wife recommends to me, to adventure stories, to current educational literature. In the past 10 years I have seen primarily 'kids' movies with my family. I like the Star Wars trilogy the best."

INTERESTS: "I love to have outdoor adventures with family and friends. These include rafting, hiking, skiing and travelling."

PERSONAL PROFILE: Charles and his wife, Barbara, have two children at PDS: Jason, in sixth grade, and David, in third. The Elbots live on the PDS campus.

IN THE SPOTLIGHT: Carlton Tucker, Head of Upper School

EDUCATION: Carlton holds a B.A. from Williams College and has earned master's degrees at Stanford University in the humanities, history and education.

BACKGROUND: Carlton taught history and served as an advisor at San Francisco University High School. He was chairman of the Freshman Curriculum Committee, coached freshman basketball and was a member of the Admission Committee.

RESPONSIBILITIES AT PDS: In addition to his duties as head of the upper school, Carlton will teach freshman history and be an advisor to several students.

WHAT MAKES PDS SPECIAL: "PDS is three schools in one, providing wonderful interaction at all levels of pre-collegiate education. I am excited about the opportunity to work for the first time in a JK through twelve school. PDS is committed to nurturing students not only within the academic setting, but also through extracurricular activities and affective education. Finally, in addition to its excellent academic program, PDS has a long tradition of a strong arts program and now a new commitment to the community service program."

GOALS FOR FIRST YEAR: "My first goal is to learn about the PDS culture from as many different people as possible. Secondly, with a wonderfully new building, which is giving everyone the sense of being a newcomer to PDS, I look forward to the opportunity to lead the upper school in this new era. Thirdly, I am excited to be a member of the history department, teaching freshman courses."

FAVORITE BOOKS/MOVIES: "Recently I have enjoyed reading Colin Turnbull's The Forest People, Gretel Erlich's The Solace of Open Spaces, John Fairbank's Chinabound and Thomas Berry and Brian Swimm's Life as a Green Dragon. Some of my favorite movies are Dr. Zhivago, The Last Emperor, It's a Wonderful Life. When listening to music, I vacillate between Beethoven's Symphony #1 and Paul Simon's Graceland."

INTERESTS: "I love playing basketball and squash, sailing, travelling and photography."

PERSONAL PROFILE: Carlton and his wife, Kathleen, are residents of Pennington and are enjoying the excitement of owning their first home. They moved cross-country after 15 years in the San Francisco Bay area.

IN THE SPOTLIGHT: Chuck Burdick, Dean of Faculty.

EDUCATION: Chuck graduated from Middlebury College and has an M.A. from Rutgers University.

BACKGROUND: Chuck comes to PDS after 19 years at Milton Academy, just south of Boston. From 1974 until 1986 he taught English, headed dormitories, coached and served on or led several committees. Since 1986 he has directed a summer enrichment school sponsored by Milton for talented racially and ethnically diverse public school juniors. The project received one of four national awards from the College Board in 1992.

RESPONSIBILITIES AT PDS: Chuck will work closely with division heads, department chairs and all faculty to foster curriculum and professional development projects. He will also be responsible for coordinating faculty recruitment. For instance, he will be looking at ways to strengthen the faculty self-evaluation process so that every teacher can develop both professionally and personally. Since the dean of faculty position is a new one for PDS, the responsibilities are flexible enough to incorporate additional responsibilities as they emerge. "At the heart of every great school there is a topflight faculty, a vibrant curriculum and students eager to learn. How best to blend these three 'partners' has always been my special interest in education."

what makes PDS special: "I have yet to meet most of the students and faculty so I can only speak about the members of the search committee. (Of course, they recommended me so I admit to some special affection for them!) Their passion to teach, the range and depth of their knowledge, their honesty about the challenges facing PDS, their openhearted welcome - those are riches beyond value. If those traits extend to students, parents and trustees, as I expect they do, then PDS is more than special - it's a treasure!"

GOALS FOR FIRST YEAR: "While I do have some thoughts on what distinguishes a truly fine school and some hopes for our holding that distinction, what I want most this year is to earn the confidence and respect of my colleagues and as many students, parents and trustees as I possibly can. I am deeply honored to be the school's first dean of faculty so it is especially important to deserve that honor in the eyes of those with whom I hope to live and work - teachers and students especially."

FAVORITE BOOKS/MOVIES: Favorite books are The Sound and the Fury, King Lear, Slaughterhouse Five, Incidents in the Life of a Slave Girl. Movies include Daughters of the Dust, Babette's Feast, The Seventh Seal and "anything with Charlie Chaplin."

INTERESTS: "Time with family and friends, reading, classical music, carpentry and early 19th century furniture restoration, the outdoors."

PERSONAL PROFILE: Since arriving in Princeton this summer, Chuck has been commuting to Boston on weekends to be with his wife, Susan, who is the associate director of financial aid management for medical, nursing and allied health students at Boston University. The Burdicks' daughter, Sara, graduated from Duke in 1987 and is a teacher at the Darlington School in Rome, Georgia. Their son, Timothy, graduated from Dartmouth in 1989, taught science for three years and is now pursuing a master's degree in forestry at Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

From the Director of Advancement

Most people tend to think of annual reports in terms of money. If you are among that group, I invite you to consider another perspective while reading through the names on the following pages.

I would ask readers to consider instead the collective vision and commitment to Princeton Day School that is represented by these names. While finances are ultimately critical to any endeavor, far more important in our history - and, I submit, to our future - are the people of the Princeton Day School family who take seriously their obligation to their children and to the next generation, who believe in the value of superb education, and who share the dream that began nearly 100 years ago when Miss Fine opened the doors to a fledgling school for girls.

A blanket of support warms our school, and its fabric is comprised of men and women who graduated early in this century and those who prepare for commencement this spring. Parents are part of that fabric as well - and not just those who have students in school today. Many past parents - and indeed grandparents are involved in seeing that the good work on our campus is carried on for those in the future. The quality of education on our campus is directly tied to the nearly 8,000 alumni, parents, parents of alumni, friends, faculty & staff, grandparents, corporations and foundations who help us keep the dream strong.

It is also important to recognize that there are just as many ways to support Princeton Day School as there are people. These lists recognize those who contributed financially in 1992-1993, but there are hundreds of others who give enormous amounts of time on projects that range from baking brownies to participating in the Parents Association, to sitting on the Long Range Planning Committee of the Board of Trustees. And then there are the countless and usually quiet acts of unsolicited kindness that make our community what it is. These things too often go unrecognized in annual reports that focus on only one way, albeit an important way, of supporting a school. Our strength emanates from all of you.

As I complete my first year at Princeton Day School, I am delighted that the support for our school has never been greater. Record levels of giving were set in nearly every category, and I can only be encouraged as we look ahead. To those who supported Princeton Day School, I send my heartfelt appreciation on behalf of the students and faculty who directly benefitted.

This enterprise is only as strong as the people who believe in it and who choose to care for it. I think that Miss Fine and her colleagues who began this dream back in 1899 would be very proud of what we have become and of how many people participate in seeing that her commitment to serving the next generation continues to thrive at Princeton Day School.

Thank you.

Andrew C. Hamlin

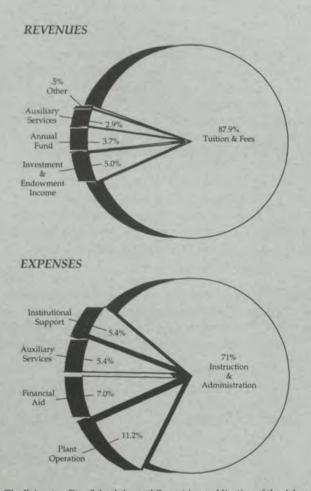

From the Director of Finance

Princeton Day School continues to maintain a balanced budget with a modest surplus at year end as a result of strategic planning, budget management and cost-effective changes. The Finance Committee is sensitive to this period of economic change and is challenged to manage our resources in a responsible and efficient manner. Tuition increases of 7.2% have slowed as compared to past increases. Our median faculty salary continues to be within the top 10% of NAIS school salaries and we strive to improve this statistic further. We remain committed to academic excellence as we continue our efforts to improve our plant facility to accommodate expanded academic programs. The excellent bond market conditions have allowed us to capitalize on the best financing available for our new wing expansion.

The school depends on the commitment of students, faculty, parents, alumni and friends to continue their generosity as noted in this report and time commitment so that it can maintain it's academic excellence and financial stability. I would like to extend my personal thanks for the dedication of our Finance Committee of the Board of Trustees. A summary of the audited financial statements prepared by the firm of KPMG Peat Marwick for 1992-1993 is presented below.

Holding the ceremonial key to the lower school are Leslie Shapiro '06 and her mother Cindy Shapiro, director of finance.

A SPECIAL THANKS

While we have so many to acknowledge for their support of our school, the Princeton Day School Parents Association stands alone in its extraordinary contribution to the life of this community. Nearly every school event and activity is touched in some way by parents who willingly - and usually without acknowledgment - go the extra mile to make the school better for everyone.

In a frenetic world of two careers, precious little time for family and relaxation, and countless demands on our time, energies and resources, we would be derelict in not acknowledging our profound gratitude for the seemingly boundless energy and vital support of our Parents Association.

MISS FINE'S SCHOOL

PDS Journal P.O. Box 75 Princeton, NJ 08542 21-25

25 Classmates and friends will be saddened to learn of the death of Helen Foster Highberger from a heart attack on May 25, 1993. Our sympathy goes to her husband, John, and their children and also to Helen's sisters, Billie Foster Reynolds '34 and Katharine Foster Watts '24. Our sympathy is doubly with Katharine who lost her husband, George, just two days after her sister. Helen was active in the Cirl Scouts and as a trustee of the Auxiliary of Presbyterian Homes of New Jersey Synod and the Visiting Nurses of North/West Bergen.

Grace Lambert, who gave so much to the Princeton community, died in April and we wish to extend our sympathy to her stepdaughters, Rachel Lambert Mellon '29 and Lily Lambert McCarthy '33. Jean Herring Rowe writes that "the most extraordinary things keep happening, the latest of which is that the famous Avatar, Sai Baba of India, has asked us if he could send us one of his associates (to train) us and our students...We studied (transcendental meditation) with him for a year in 1956. He has founded large colleges in the US as well as India where he lives and teaches now."

The editors apologize to the class and to Elizabeth Gummere Peplow who was reported as having passed away in the last column. Her name was confused with another Gummere from Trenton. We regret the distress the error caused and wish Elizabeth continued good health.

Katharine Eisenhart Brown writes, "Just back from a fine two weeks with an art group in San Miquel, Mexico. Wonderful scenery, old churches and fine weather. But Bob and I certainly felt the steepness of the streets!" Another note came in from Marjorie Munn Knapp. It reads, "My husband, Dan, and I moved from Seabrook Island, SC where we'd lived for 14 years to Heron Point in Chestertown, MD because lovely Seabrook was 35 miles from the hospital. It's lovely here. We've visited Mary Cowenhoven Coyle '35 for over 20 years in her lovely house here. Her sister, Margaretta Cowenhoven '30 is across the lane from us,"

Theresa Critchlow 11 Westcott Road Princeton, NJ 08540 '39

Louise Dolton Blackwell wrote the following note in February. "We enjoyed two weddings this (1992) summer. Grandson Scott Windels was married in Vicksburg, Mississippi to Sheila Pitchford and Scott's sister, Amy, was married on the island of Maui to Gary Meadows of New Orleans, LA. They held a lovely reception at their home after their honeymoon on Maui. I'm sure we still have some members of '39 around - get them to write!" As for me, I spent the past academic year, 1992-1993, teaching first-year Latin to two delightful children in a home school setting in Princeton Township. The girl was 12 and the boy was 10. Miss Dorwar's Latin classes from MFS days returned quickly to memory. Another project, from July 1, 1992 to June 30, 1993: I was hired on a NI State Library Grant to organize the patient's library of the NJ State Forensic Hospital in West Trenton. With the aid of hospital patient workers, I was able to pull it together and put it in organized shape to everyone's satisfaction. The Department of Human Services conducts a wellorganized education program for the patients as they prepare for court appearances or attempt to understand their mental health status. That's it so far. My sister and I plan a short trip to Newport and in September we will take another cruise to Alaska from Vancouver.

Phyllis Vandewater Clement has retired as class secretary and we thank her on behalf of the class for her years of service. Anyone interested in taking over an enjoyable job should contact Linda Maxwell Stefanelli '62 in the publications office or call 609-924-6700. Ever faithful, Phyllis sent a note for this column: "We have permanently taken in an 11-year-old grandchild, Eli, and while he's a good kid, we sometimes think there's no respite. We'll take him on an intergenerational Elderhostel in August now that my many foot (problems) seem to be healing. Our lake place has been blessed with wonderful weather this summer and my tiny new boat, Byte, goes like the wind. Do look me up if you come to California." And, from Agnes Agar Coleman: "Our big news is that, after 42 years in the same house, we have moved, about 200 yards up the same hill. We celebrated our 50th anniversary last year, and we have 10 grandchildren."

A hot steamy day is ahead, but presently the cool of early morning holds. July is nearly over and summer already half gone. Looking back to this past winter, I took a trip of five weeks in February and March to visit cousins and friends in the south. My southern-most stop was at Key West to visit Molly Grover Shallow and her husband, Bill. They are in their new condominium on the water with a wonderful view of the Gulf of Mexico and the constantly changing water traffic. I had not seen Molly for years so we had a chance to catch up on our lives. Molly has been involved in a wide scope of artistic activities through the years. One project was the creation of a marketing course for artists. She taught this in this country, in Ireland while living there, and in Paris at the Paris American Academy. It was such a success there that she was asked to present the course at École Nationale Superieure des Beaux-Arts. Artists, photographers, craftsmen working in all mediums need to know how to successfully sell their work and how to protect it. Few know the copyright laws applicable, yet this is essential knowledge, states Molly. Molly became interested in creating such a course for the selling and protection of an artist's work, when she discovered a museum had reproduced a painting by an artist Molly knew, without permission. The museum profited from the postcard sales. The artist, of course, did not. His work had not been copyrighted. Molly has received glowing acknowledgments from artists all over who have attended her workshops.

Alice Huntington Allen had this to say on a postcard: "Dean and I are spending the summer in a Berkshire summer cottage in Monterey, MA, a place to which my mother was introduced years ago by Princeton friends, the Lutz's. (Martha '34 and Barbara '42 Lutz both graduated from Miss Fine's.) There's lots of room for grandchildren and guests so that's what we do up here. In September we're taking the big trip to Europe, visiting everyone who ever said come see us. We're especially looking forward to using our Eurail Pass to travel from Norway to Switzerland and back to London, ending with a visit to a niece in Dublin. But our hearts are really in this country which we hope will survive by doing better by its children. If only the public schools could get the moral and financial support which PDS gets!" A note has come from Mary Pettit Funk with news of her husband, Peter's, successful knee surgery and a mention of her mother, Estelle Pettit, who continues to dash around in great shape at the age of 100. And from Agnes Critchlow: "I am going on a cruise to Alaska again in September with my sister, Therese '39."

I am anticipating knee surgery in the fall and am assured by the many that have undergone a similar procedure that I will be ready for my already-planned trip to Paris next spring.

(The last issue of the Journal reported the death of Mary Acuff Greey who was the mother of Mary Acuff Greey Woody, Barbara Marshall '43, Patience Vrieze '44, Charlotte Christy, and Elmer Greey PCD '43. Unfortunately, the bold face type used on her name made it appear it was Mary Woody who passed away. We deeply regret any embarrassment or distress caused by this mistake.—Ed.)

Polly Roberts Woodbridge 233 Carter Road Princeton, NI 08540 '42

Our very deepest sympathy goes out to Polly Roberts Woodbridge whose husband, Dudley, died suddenly in August. Our condolences also to their children, Don PCD '64 and Peggy Dennis '65. Dudley was a co-founder of the Dynaplex Corporation, Aydin Corporation, and NJE Corporation of Dayton. He was also the director for many years of Windings, Inc. in Paterson, NJ. The Woodbridge family was at PDS in May for the Service of Remembrance for alumni and faculty and the announcement of a new scholarship fund in memory of their son, Fred PDS '78.

The big news for this issue is our 50th Reunion and what a great time we had! Julie Sturges O'Connor and her husband, Bob, drove down from Bronxville, NY and stayed for the alumni dinner with Jerry and me at Colross that night. Sally Ann Burtch West and her husband, Evan, came from Rumford, RI and Helen Oliphant Hoffert came from Mountainside, NJ. The others who enjoyed the reunion were Olive Schulte Brown, Mary Virginia Barlow Harvey, Peggy Stokes Whitehead and her husband, Jack, Liz Ralston Dill and Dick and Aileen Heinekamp Henon, I heard from Margaret Wicks Spicer, Marie Frohling Rawlings, Judy Tatler Firman and Elizabeth Sinclair Flemer, all of whom were very disappointed that they couldn't attend. The day was picture perfect and Linda Maxwell Stefanelli '62 and Nancy Young arranged a lovely luncheon on the sunporch of Pretty Brook Farm. Of course the highlight of the luncheon was the headmaster, Duncan Alling, stopping by to greet us in his oldfashioned, 1890's bathing suit, still wet from being immersed by the students in the dunking booth on the lawn. Some of us had never seen the school so Director of Advancement Andy Hamlin gave us the grand tour after lunch - what a contrast to the old Miss Fine's!! I think I can safely say that everyone thoroughly enjoyed their 50th Reunion.

My thanks to all you ladies who sent me cards by return mail even though you received them late. Lorna McAlpin Hauslohner has just returned from a barge trip in France on the Yonne River. She reports that she managed to "weather" the storms that they had at the end of winter and had visits from her children and their children in the spring. Lorna still does committee work on an "Indian level," which is more fun. She gets to Princeton a couple of times a month for Sunday lunch with the family. Connie Kuhn Wassink has no good news to report yet on their impending jury trial as it has been postponed once again to an as yet unspecified date. A friend of hers has suggested that in civil matters, Alaskan lawyers and courts are on "Glacial time." Connie is now past president of the Society for Technical Communication and is presently membership chair. She proudly reports that the STC chapter won a Pacesetter Award for its region which will be officially presented when the VP-reg. comes up from Denver. Betsy Howe Smith and JB are taking most of their family for a two-week vacation in Spain in August. They will be renting a villa in a small town - Gaucin. They will see Granada, Seville and Cordoba and plan to cross the Straits of Gibraltar. Betsy and JB are both still working, he in his environmental lab and she doing psychotherapy at Family Service in Princeton. I'm sorry to report that Roz Earle Matthews has had a bad year healthwise. She has had problems with stasis venous ulcers related to varicose veins and she has been pretty much grounded. However, she and Joe were planning to visit one of Joe's daughters and two of his four grandchildren in New Hampshire later that week. She also got to her 45th reunion at Smith in May. She says it was great fun. Roz and Joe plan to move to a life care community in Williamsburg, VA late in 1994, if they can get their McLean house cleaned out, sold and organized. "That will be news." Ben and I are just back from a camping trip in conjunction with some geologic sampling and mapping.

As per usual, the cupboard is bare! Surprise me next time, those of you who never write! For instance, where is Patty Smith Thompson? We haven't heard from you for years. I did have a fun phone call from Barbara Cart Macauley. They are happy living in Chapel Hill, and she and Michael were leaving for two weeks at the Greenbriar, to escape the sweltering heat. There has been big excitement in the Healy family. Our second daughter, Anne PDS '71, was married in San Francisco on May 20th to Said Elbagali. Evelyn Sherwood PDS '71 came down from Seattle and my sister, Joan Taylor Ashley MFS '38, was also there and entertained them. They honeymooned in Carmel and Big Sur and are now back in New York. Mo and I are thrilled to have a wonderful son in our family. Beth PDS '69 gave them a smashing party in New York in June at the home of Blair Lee PDS '69 and Jack Cooper. We all had a marvelous time.

Anne Healy PDS '71, daughter of Sylvia Taylor Healy '45, was married in May to Said Elbaqali.

Two notes came in to the publications office, one from your Class Secretary saying, "Still at 'my game' - travel. Just returned from a lovely spring trip to England and Scotland. Always a favorite trip." And Eugenia (Fi) Warren Herbert sent a welcome note: "Still teaching African history at Mount Holyoke. I have a book coming out November '93, Iron, Gender and Power: Rituals of Transformation in African Society. Biggest news: first grandchild, Alex, born January 1993.

On May 22nd, 1993 Roger and Caroline Rosenblum Moseley hosted our 40th class reunion dinner. The following enthusiastic classmates attended: John and Wendy Hall Alden, Peyton and Mary Roberts Craighill and their daughter, Cecily, Collins and Anne Carples Denny, Elaine Polhemus Frost, Hilary Thompson Kenyon, Ellen Kerney, Hope Thompson Kerr, John and Caroline Savage Langan, Cliff and Karen Cooper Lindholm, Mike and Jane Gihon Shillaber and Susan McAllen Turner. Those classmates unable to attend but sending photographs and/or messages were Jean Ackerman Robinson and Wendy Gartner Rowland. Those of you who could not join us were fondly remembered and greatly missed. Please try to make our next reunion dinner which may be in 10 years! We began the evening with hugs, squeals, hors d'oeuvres and cocktails. This was followed by a delicious lasagne dinner. Lively conversation continued to abound. After dinner there was a 30 minute slide presentation made up of some old school photographs which had been sent to Anne Denny. This created lots of laughs, many groans and often "smarty" remarks by the men who had no respect for the dignity of the occasion! We saw Hilary and Hope who were adorable with their 7th grade braids, not to overlook Ellen in her ever-so-stylish gym tunic perched atop a hockey goal. It was generally agreed that this evening event be declared yet another success in our class history. After a rousing and enthusiastic rendition of the Miss Fine's School's alma mater, we adjourned. Many thanks to the reunion committee, Jane, Hope and Caroline for a great reunion evening. As we were taught to say, a good time was had by all! A note from Elaine provides a bit more news: "Great excitement! I became a grandmother of twins last July! Our daughter, Lisa, gave birth to twin boys, Thomas and Daniel Maynard. She and her husband live in Portsmouth, VA. Birth weights were 7 lbs. 1 oz. and 7 lbs. 2 oz."

Notice has been received from Leslie McAneny that her father, Herbert McAneny, died in July (1993). Mr. McAneny was a very visible member of the Princeton community, and will be missed. We extend our sympathy to Leslie and her family. (For more on Herbert McAneny, see front section of magazine.) Joan Kennan has written that her son, Barklie Kennan Griggs, was married in May (1993) at the Kennan family's farm in Pennsylvania to Sara Rae of Toronto, Canada. Barklie and Sara are both in the music business in California. Barklie's father was the late Lawrence Griggs PCD '52. In May (1993), after several years of on and off attendance at Sarah Lawrence College, I received an M.A. in humanities. The major portion of my work was the thesis I wrote entitled The Presentation of the Virgin in the Temple: Textual and Iconographic Problems in the Western Tradition. This rather obscure, but fascinating, topic was approached as an art history project, but also considered the New Testament apocryphal texts from which the subject was taken. Doing the research was a great and challenging experience but boy, am I glad it's finished! To celebrate the completion of this work, Saki Hart Brodsky took me to lunch in a Bronxville, NY restaurant where we had a very nice visit. I am sorry to report, however, that Saki's husband, Matthew Brodsky, died in the summer of 1992. We extend our sympathy to Saki as she adjusts to her life without him. The alumni office has informed me that Alumni Day will be held on May 21, 1994 at which time I hope we can gather to celebrate our 40th Reunion. I will be sending out some information on this in the winter, but please hold the date now and plan to attend. A get together for our class is long overdue and I hope you will agree that we should do it! Susan Creasey Gertler writes, "I have retired from teaching at the University of Alaska, Anchorage and moved south, outside Homer, Alaska. I am still consulting with the oil companies part-time and enjoying my new dome home the rest of the time. Visitors are welcome,"

Exactly one day before my deadline. I received one card from Betsy Hall Hutz! She reports: "Kristin Naumann PDS '82, my goddaughter, was here this weekend to visit. In May I went to New Mexico to photograph and visit a friend in San Juan Pueblo. Hallowe'en will find me in Northampton, MA hanging a show Los Islas Galapagos at the Alumnae House (November and December). The Smithsponsored trip was in January and February, and was exclusively Ecuador; a lovely country." Sara Sikes Prescott writes that she "became a first-time grandmother in March 1992. Win (named for my Bill and the baby's late grandfather) Anderson Prescott is a gem! All three children are married all happy!"

Rooney Eichelberger Hall sent a welcome note catching us up on her family. Husband Brinley is director of alumni programs at St. Mark's School where Rooney is co-director of athletics. Son Morgan graduated from Bowdoin in 1988 and is a first lieutenant in the Marines. Tuck graduated from UMass at Amherst this year and Wendy is in the class of '95 at St. Lawrence, Emily Vanderstucken Spencer won the tuition raffle sponsored by the PDS Angels, She wins $5,000 toward the tuition of her choice and the PDS Performing Arts Program benefits from the proceeds of the raffle. Congratulations, Emily!

The last issue reported the death of Katharine Bramwell Hamilton in the In Memoriam column but we want to take this opportunity to express our condolences to her family and friends. Katharine was a teacher with a special interest in underprivileged children. She was also a writer whose first book of poetry, A Swan's Wing, will be published soon.

Fiona Morgan Fein 10 West 66th Street, #25D New York, NY 10023-6212

I'm sitting calmly in the midst of the utter chaos of our move (to 10 West 66th Street, Apt. 25D, New York, NY 10023-6212, same telephone number) and have miraculously found the folder with this installment of the class notes. They're scanty, again,..., but heartfelt. My mother sent me a notice from the Town Topics announcing a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony (April 23 & 24) in which Tucky Ramus Grey sang the soprano solo. Unfortunately, I didn't read it until after the concert.

Tucky, will you send those of us who live nearby notices of your concerts so we can come? Joan Yeaton Seamon alerted me to Nancy Smoyer's appearance on a CBS-TV news special featuring Dan Rather called Schwarzkopf in Vietnam: A Soldier Returns. I saw the last part of it which included the segment in which Nancy was interviewed. The program was aired on June 30th and at the time copies of the tape could be purchased from Columbia House at 1-800-851-2323. The person I spoke to said that there would be copies available for as long as the demand lasted. I hope it lasts long enough for this to get in print!

Julia Cornforth Holofcener wrote in April: "Well, we're off again. This time to Charleston, SC for the Spoleto Festival. Our musical, I Don't Live There Anymore, will be making its American debut. Exciting times!" Julia wrote mid-air from Miami to London at the end of July: "I'm on my way to the Isle of Wight for three weeks for a little R&R. The enclosed article [excerpted below] will bring you up to date on at least one of our projects [the presentation at the Spoleto Festival in Charleston, SC of a play Larry has been working on for seven years]. It has really been an exciting adventure. We've now begun raising the $1 million it will take to bring [the show] to New York - Off-Broadway. We were headed for the Helen Hayes, but the people there have discouraged us because of the unions. They will kill us and I won't be able to pay back my backers as quickly as I would like. So we're looking at the Promenade Theater at 76th and Broadway. It's supposed to be charming, although I haven't seen it yet. I will on my return. The production in Charleston brought us standing ovations night after night. Larry is in seventh heaven especially since the whole adventure started with him having toxic hepatitis. He got down to 122 pounds, yellow as a daffodil and an entire body itch for three months. He played Doc Sam, directed, and rewrote constantly. He was never so happy." An article from The Post and Courier in Charleston contained the following information about Julie and Larry's play. "Forty-three years ago, a small South Carolina town drifted away. To make room for a huge plant that would help the United States build hydrogen bombs, 742 people were forced to leave their century-old community near the Savannah River. In a matter of months, the town of Ellenton was gone. The unsettling piece of American history is now the subject of a new musical. I Don't Live There Anymore, a critically praised work that is one of the highlights of this year's Piccolo Spoleto... As early as 1950, when he read early news accounts, Holoscener realized the Ellenton story was wonderfully suited for the theater. But not until seven years ago did he begin developing the project. Originally produced last year in England, the musical is making its American debut in Charleston... I Don't Live There Anymore recalls the first six days after Harry Truman announced the fictional town of Harmony and surrounding area had been chosen as the site for the Savannah River nuclear facility. It shows how the lives of its residents are affected by the traumatic change. 'A lot happened to these people's lives,' Holofcener said after a performance earlier this week at the Footlight Players Workshop. 'I wanted to simply say in order to take a town away from people and obliterate it completely, wipe it out, what you do is destroy their past." "Larry's sculpture of Churchill and Roosevelt ("Allies") quite possibly will end up in Portsmouth for D-Day celebrations, Quebec for 1943 Quebec Conference celebrations, and London - just because!" Julie and Larry have bought a house: 42 Cliff Road, Cowes, Isle of Wight, PO31 8BN and Julie's address in the States is 607-B Kingston Terrace, Princeton, NJ 08540.

Cynthia Weinrich wrote the other day saying, "Just got home for a couple of days yesterday....

no big news. Fulfilled a life-long desire to be in England in the spring and spent nine lovely days around London re-meeting the city and seeing beautiful houses and parks while visiting friends. Especially loved Osterly, Overwhelmed by the gorgeous rhododendrons (which I never even knew existed in England!). Am trying to spend as much of the summer as possible in northern New England on a 'repairing lease' and tending to things like writing and correspondence which get shortchanged during the year." I've loved my unofficial sabbatical year and am finally feeling itchy to get back to work. It looks as if I'll be involved in the 20th anniversary plans of the Lincoln Center Institute on a free lance basis starting in the fall. Our new apartment, which is practically across the street from Lincoln Center, includes an office for me so it's worked out perfectly. Harvey is totally consumed with launching a new product; a flame retardant which can be applied to yard goods, or to finished window coverings, upholstery, etc., etc. We're going to Maine this October for a 50th birthday party with some college classmates; the same group which gathered ten years ago for our 40th. I hope we're still at it on our 80th!

Happy news from Kate Saven Kirkland: "My communications are few, but in May I remarried - to a Yalie named John Kirkland. My older daughter, Anne, is moving to New York to attend the Institute at NYU and study art history, my daughter Jennifer will be a sophomore at Tulane, and John and I decided to cement our relationship by destroying his house in a remodeling project, hopefully to be complete this fall," New address: Mrs. John D. Kirkland, 2433 Stenmore, Houston, TX 77019. Thanks for your card, Kate. More good news, this time from Linda Maxwell Stefanelli. She and Tony are spending the first two weeks of October in Tuscany, where they have rented a villa with several friends. For those who enjoy the fruit of the vine (and even for those who don't), what better time to visit the Italian countryside! A few months ago, Susan Shea MacPherson and her daughter, Sandy, came to Sausalito to visit a mutual friend, and we were able to have a short visit. Much of our chat was about the last Class of '62 reunion, which I missed, and any news of MFS classmates. This brings me to my usual reminder: Please send me your news. I would love to hear from you.

I've heard from two classmates since the last notes, Laurie Rogers and Kathy Sittig Dunlop. Laurie and I exchanged letters written on our new computers sort of testing the machines out and accomplishing our letter writing at the same time. Neither of us could believe that we celebrated our 30th year as graduates this June. Laurie was planning to attend the reunion and, I trust, someone from the class will write up the activities and send them to the Journal. Each of us had a phone call from Sally Campbell Haas, and I am sure that many of you did as well. Sally did a great job inviting us all to attend June's reunion and to contribute to the Annual Fund in this our major reunion year. Laurie has decided to leave the real estate field and to attempt to find work in the field of wildlife conservation in developing countries. She hopes that her bilingual skills will come in handy, and she expects that our interest in environmental issues and in Latin America will all be pluses in her job search. At the time she wrote to me in April, Laurie was considering a move to Washington, DC if the job market were better there. Kathy writes that she is playing lots of golf and that she is running the American Cancer Society's golf fund raising program. Her daughter, Allison, graduated from Dartmouth this spring so the Dunlops set out on a 6,000 mile car trip to attend the ceremonies. Among their stops were Mt. Rushmore and Niagara Falls. Kathy ends by saying that she has been accepted to Eastern Baptist Theological Seminary and has decided to defer entrance for a year. She'll keep us posted. When you do, Kathy, let us know what degree you'll pursue. I have had a wonderful summer! I was given a two-month professional leave to work on a project related to college and university budget cutting processes, a topic I lecture on for the National Institute for Leadership Development, an organization to promote leadership skills among women faculty and administrators in two- and four-year institutions. The first month is drawing to a close as I write these notes, and it is a pleasure not to go to work every day! I have also been busy settling my mother who has moved to Portland. It's great having her here; it's the first time we've lived in the same town in 30 years! I have begun a two-year term as the Vice President for Finance of the American Association of Women in Community Colleges. When I ran for this voluntary office, I was promised by the nominating committee that 1) the person I was running against would probably win and 2) should I win, the job was a snap. Hah! I have started to learn spread sheet packages, and I feel as though I'm learning to ride a bike with the training wheels off. Hope to visit Banff, Lake Louise, and Glacier National Park in August and then it's back to work at my job in September! Hope this finds you all well. Please take a moment and write me your news so that I may share it with our classmates.

The mothers of two classmates died and we send them our sympathy on behalf of the class: Cindy Bull Tyler and Patience Outerbridge Banister. The development office received the following welcome note from Turid Helland. "Still living in Bergen (Norway) with my husband, two children and dog Ulla. I work at a national resource center for language impaired persons and am working on a master's degree. My year at Miss Fine's in 1962-63 taught me a lot, and has inspired me to work with immigrants to Norway."

Ellen Aronis Heard has once again demonstrated how resourceful she can be. When her Washington-based design business was affected by the recession, she turned to writing. Her Washington Area Health and Fitness Guide appeared in the stores last March. It's a guide book on all of the health clubs, aerobic studios and recreation centers in the Washington area. Elise Resenhaupt Noble writes that she and Tom have mixed feelings that their oldest child, Kate, will be entering Columbia University this fall. Their son, Patrick, will be in the tenth grade in Sante Fe High School. Culturally speaking, she is experiencing a vast difference between the east and the west.

39 Perry Mackay Sturges died on May 11, 1993 after a long battle with cancer. Until his retirement in 1991, he taught and chaired the history and social sciences department at the Packer Collegiate Institute in Brooklyn, NY. Just before his death, he received the Alumni Association's Award of Honor for lifetime excellence in teaching. Mac was an avid sailor who cruised the Maine coast and the waters around his home port of Shelter Island. We send our sympathy to his wife and children and to his sister, Julie Sturges O'Connor MFS '43.

Ward Kuser '61 writes that he had "a terrific evening at Jack MacCarthy's PCD reunion" in May. That comes as no surprise since Jack '62 invited all PCD alumni to his house to celebrate Alumni Day and honor several PCD teachers: Bud Tibbals, Stu Robson, Bob Whitlock, Herbert McAneny and Wes McCaughan. Those attending are pictured here: (Back row, L. to R.) The class will be shocked to learn of the sudden death of Tyler Gatchell of a heart attack in July. He was on his way to London for the opening of Sunset Boulevard, an Andrew Lloyd Webber production which has been dedicated to Tyler. Tyler and his partner, Peter Neufeld, founded a theatrical general management-production firm in 1969 that has been involved with more than 100 major theatrical productions, Tyler collaborated with Lloyd Webber on the production of such musicals as Jesus Christ Superstar, Evita, Cats, Song and Dance, Starlight Express, Aspects of Love, Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat, and Sunset Boulevard. We send our sympathy to his family and friends.

Brock Putnam was featured in an article in the New Milford Times of Connecticut in April 1992 after his students at New Milford High School became regional champions in an academic quiz that elevated them to national competition. Brock was also honored last year with a Celebration of Excellence award for "creativity in curriculum development." He combines his freshman western civilization class with a lesson in drawing, mathematics, art appreciation and history. He developed the course for right-brained students to give them an opportunity to excel and better understand linear concepts.

Four PCD '65 classmates joined forces with PDS '68 to celebrate a 25th reunion at PDS on Alumni Day in May. Though only a few of us came, it was well worth the trip. Local returnees were: Matt Young and Whit Raymond. I came in from New York and Hugh Samson came south from Massachusetts. Thanks one and all! Please read PDS '68 column for details of the reunion, updated info on classmates and photos. And thanks for the donations for PDS that were given at the reunion. The gifts will be in memory of Bob Whitlock.

Margery Cuyler Perkins writes, "I don't have much news other than to say that I've really enjoyed being back in Princeton and raising my two sons here. My newest children's book, Buddy Bear and the Bad Guys, which was originally published in PDS' alumni writing project, is being issued by Houghton Mifflin in September. My husband, Jan, just had a book published called The Forbidden Self: Incest and the Journey Within." Our sympathy to Carol Bonner Wolfe whose father died in May.

Thanks to classmates who sent news. Laura Peterson sent us a Washington Times photo of herself (which, unfortunately, cannot be reproduced here,) with Nobel Laureate economist Milton Friedman. She continues to teach law at Suffolk University Law School in Boston and is listed as an expert on business, economics, industrial and consumer regulation and regulatory agencies and the regulatory process in the Guide to Public Policy Experts, 1993 1994. Lucy Dilworth is still running her bed and breakfast in New Mexico and, in fact, expanding with a new house to rent for "burned out classmates" east of Silver City. All who are tempted can write her at 101 North Cooper Street, Silver City, NM 88061. She and Jim write they are sailing and travelling. We (Julia Lockwood and family) have moved out of our house for four months while renovations proceed for a new kitchen, family room and bedroom. As this has temporarily placed us right on the beach overlooking Caseo Bay, seals and seagulls, we can't complain. We all remember Mr. McAneny fondly, and his great contributions to school and community.

A note from Pam Erickson McConnell arrived in the development office saying, "Unfortunately, John lost the election for county judge so he is restarting his law practise in Deland. The children, Courtney, 31/2, (son) and Sarah 81/2 are wonderful and growing like weeds. I'm the classic stressed executive mother juggling many things. My latest project is developing a statewide Medicaid product for the managed care company I work for. Whew!" And another letter that missed the last issue is reprinted here. It's from Polly Smock and reads, "I dreamed of Julia Lockwood a year ago, and have been intending to write ever since. Twenty-five years have come and gone - I wonder if I missed any special event last year...l continue to be grateful for my experience at PDS, particularly for the honor system which asked for the best in me, and for Moyne Smith's rigorous training in writing and literary analysis. My ability to write well has given me a crucial edge again and again in professional situations, and the honor system and the love of literature - those are less tangible but just as crucial, I think. I live in Virginia Beach, Virginia and have a daughter, April, who is a first-year student at Earlham College, a Quaker school in Indiana. April is considering a major in comparative religion and is very active in theater. In the fall I drove out to Earlham to watch her play Beatrice in Much Ado About Nothing. I'm a social worker, but I also tutor French and algebra (!) to high school students, and that's what I really enjoy most. I still enjoy singing, and I actually won a competition at a local bar in October singing folk songs with a friend! Having sown enough wild oats when I was younger, I'm a remarkably contented single mom who prefers a minimum of excitement other than my music, meditation, walking the dog, and talking to my daughter on the phone. However, I am a bit tired of some aspects of southern living, and I'm not particularly happy with my current job. Haven't quite decided what to do about that. I'd love to receive a copy of the next alumni news and see how everyone's doing (especially Julia Lockwood - what were you doing in my dream?!).

I want to thank the 17 classmates (including 4 PCD '65, 1 MFS), 5 teachers, 4 spouses/friends and 12 children who returned for the 25th reunion at the Pretty Brook Farm at PDS in May. You all DID make the difference. I think you would agree that more than the surface was scratched by the end of the day. A few of us had the opportunity to roam the halls of PDS and view the magnificent lower school addition (extension of where the cafeteria is). Many of us continued the reunion at Colross for dinner and at the Alchemist & Barrister in town until well past midnight. Please note several photos from the reunion in this column. General notes from the reunion: John Claghorn came with his wife, Peg, and three kids: John IV/"Jake", 11, Lila, 8, and

Mary Hobler Hyson and Michael Linda Hart '68 in Bolinas, CA.

McKay, 3, from New York City where John is an investment advisor with Tucker Anthony. Gail Smith Cleare ventured south from Whately, MA with her oldest son, Matthew. (She left the two younger boys home with husband, Bruce.) Gail is the owner of an ad agency/desktop publishing service bureau. Anne Fulper came back to PDS for the first time since graduation (mirabile Dictu!) with her 4-year-old daughter, Ella, Her husband, Silvere Boureau is an artist. Anne is a co-owner of Fulper Tile Company in Yardley, PA which specializes in the Arts and Crafts period tile. Whit Raymond PCD '65 drove down the street (from Mt. Lucas Road) to join us. He is married to Shelley Roe and has two children, Collin, 10, and Travis, 7. He has his own organizational development consulting business. Punky Brewster Rutledge lives in Manchester, CT and is a "Mom, student, part-time secretary, PTA nut and wife (not necessarily in that order)." Her two kids, Erin, 10, and Luke, 7, stayed home with Kerry. Connie Saven Ban came for the day with all the family: husband Vladimir and daughters Sasha, 12, and Sophie, 10. She lives in Princeton on the Great Road. Connie continues to dabble in the arts when she finds time. Sia Godfrey Bauer lives in Burlington, CT with husband Charles and Stephanie, 11, and Justin, 10. She has just finished remodeling their home and is involved with the kid's school. Hugh Samson PCD '65 decided to come at the last minute from Nahant, MA. He is married and living on the coast just north of Boston. He is a lawyer and still loves to ski, play hockey (and any other contact sport!). Beth Schlossberg sandwiched a visit to the reunion between moving from Boston to NYC and starting a new job! She is now a vice-president for marketing for Chemical Bank in NYC. John Taylor returned for the 25th with his friend, Dianne. They continue to travel and have had two (did I get that right?) photography books published since our 20th. They are working on another one. Good luck! Nat Hutner PCD '65 lives in Brooklyn, works on Wall Street in NYC, but continues to pursue his love of poetry. He has had some of his poetry published and recently did a reading. Bob Ramsey "flew" in from Trenton for a brief visit. He is an attorney with Lindsay Burbage in Trenton. Matt Young PCD '65, who lives in Hopewell, also visited us briefly at the reunion. Lynn Behr Sanford was able to sneak in for a few minutes between picnics and a kid's ballgame. She lives in Princeton and has two young boys. Yours truly, combined this trip to see my parents (who are still on Mercer Road) and attend the reunion. I brought the entire Hyson crew:

husband Eric and kids, Christopher, 16, Katie, 13, and David, 10. Linda Baker Bogue had 4-year-old daughter, Malin, in tow for the reunion from California. She is on a committee in San Mateo Park that wants to preserve the town "as is." But she was not the long distance winner! Eliana Umbelino De Sousa and her 15-year-old daughter, Angela, came from Rio de Janeiro (that's right folks, Brazill!) for the reunion! Eliana is married to Marco Albernaz and has four children, including Angela: Andre, 17, Pedro, 8, and Paula, 6. This was a first trip to the USA for her daughter.

In making calls jointly for the 25th Reunion and Annual Fund, I also was able to draw out more news from other classmates. Kate Linker is married (Bernard) and has a 9-year-old daughter and 4-year-old son. She is an art critic for various magazines in NYC. She is having a second book published soon. She could not attend the reunion because she was off to Barcelona. (Tough choice!) Suzanne Blanchet-Hirst loves living near (in?) the Pine Barrens of New Jersey. But she commutes to Freehold. She and her brother now run her parents' business and so she makes the daily trek to do the accounting. Her husband continues to compete in water-skiing and often the family travel the east coast in his support. Sue Kleinberg MacConchie lives in Lakewood, NI and drives to Trenton to work as a deputy attorney general. Somehow she is able to juggle work and family. Her daughter is now 9 and son, Teddy is 5. Jerry Pitt has been living in Indiana for quite some time with his wife, Nancy, and children, Aaron, 11, and Amy, 6. Both Jerry and his wife are attorneys. Jerry is doing some freelancing with his pottery. Gillian Gordon calls London home now. For how long? One never knows! She wrote in April, "I had hoped to slip across the pond and join you all on the 22nd of May, but, alas, work hurls me across Europe. Since nostalgia ain't what it used to be, as they say, it is just as well...I've never been one for looking back. My eyes are still brightly focused on the future, and the revelation that I am really someone who has been out of high school for 25 years is too hard to imagine. Instead I will be tripping through Paris, Rome and Berlin filming the nineties, "La Dolce Vita." (See photo for proof!). I wish you all your dreams, and raise a glass to youth, magnolias in the spring and the sweetness of it all. Salut!" Gillian had a PS: "The yearbook blurb on me still, oddly, does apply!" Joe Chandler and his wife, Brenda, and son Nicky, 5, are living in Portland, Maine where loe runs his own scientific research and development outfit. I have done extensive traveling again this summer and was able to connect with two more classmates. My son, David, and I spent a week in the Southwest and I spoke with Lisa Lawrence in Santa Fe. (Unfortunately, we were unable to get together because of other commitments.) Lisa has been in New Mexico for over 10 years and enjoys painting, sculpture, making jewelry and writing. She is learning about hands-on healing and would like to add this skill to her many other talents. In early July my daughter, Katie, and I visited my sister, Debbie Hobler Kahane '66 for a few days in Santa Barbara, CA. (See photo.) Her book on breast cancer, No Less a Woman, will be published in paperback this fall. Katie and I drove along the coast and landed in Bolinas, a tiny village on the ocean just north of San Francisco, where we visited Michael Linda Hart for the afternoon, Michael is freelancing in marketing which she reports is "feast or famine." She looks great (see photo). She has two delightful boys (she obviously has a knack for raising children). We had a lovely time together. Finally, I would like to thank all of you who donated to the Annual Fund this year. It was quite an impressive output. Sixty-five percent (yes, 1 said 65%!) of the class contributed for a TOTAL OF $2,750!!! We surpassed last year's gift to the fund by nearly $1,500. That's quite an achievement! I guess this is a wrap. It was great to see all of you. Have a wonderful fall and keep those cards coming with news. CHEERS!

After that magnificent column, it seems incredible that anyone was left out, but Andrew Fishmann wrote the development office with the following apology. "Unable to attend the 25th reunion with regrets. Travelled to Paris two weeks before to present a paper at the first International Symposium of Acetubular and Pelvic Surgery on blood clot prevention in high risk patients. My wife returned to acting — commercials and television. Megan is almost 10 and Addie is 15 months."

The mail brought just one postcard and it just announced that Nicki Sarett Demming has moved to Pennington. I am sure by now you know that Bob Whitlock died suddenly this spring. It was quite a shock to all of us. Robin Murray taught his classes for the remainder of the year and took over the huge job of organizing Architecture Career Day. She did a wonderful job under such unhappy circumstances. I have recently been named Director of the Annual Fund. It will be quite challenging but fun, too. Robin has said she will remain class agent for one more year if someone will assist her, with the idea of taking over in '94-'95. The job of class agent really is not too difficult or time consuming and, if you really get into it, it can be great fun because you are in touch with old friends. Please let me know as soon as possible if you are interested in helping out.

Several notes and news clippings make up the news for '71. Natalie Huston Wiles writes, "Enjoying northern Virginia and DC area. Visited with Laurie Bryant Young and Louise Broad Lavine and families this spring at Laurie's. Heading north now for vacation with my family in upstate New York where I will see sister Marion Huston Lisko '73 and new (boy) offspring and brother Aubrey PCD '64 with his (girl). Also planning to visit Tom and Jean Schluter Yoder and their massive new family on the way up." For those who haven't heard, the Yoders are the proud parents of twin boys, born in June. Congratulations — and don't forget to send pictures! Diane lass Ketelhut says, "Hi! We've moved to Charlotte, NC - rather quickly. Bill is starting up a new joint venture for GE here and I've gone back to teaching at the private school my kids attend. What our headmaster calls 'the other PDS.' It's name is Providence Day School - ironic? Anyone near, give us a call. We have lots of extra bedrooms for visitors. We went to Greece to celebrate 'that' birthday and had a great time. Before I start work we're off to Australia for two and a half weeks - a last fling!" Tim Smith announced the arrival of his son, James Elias Smith. Congratulations, Tim. And congratulations also to Anne Healy who was married to Said Elbagali in a small ceremony in San Francisco in May. (For more information and a picture of the event, see MFS '45 class notes.) In December Anne was featured in an article in the local papers recounting her nine-year career as art director for NBC's Late Night With David Letterman. We assume Anne has made the move to CBS with David. Richard Kramer had a visit from Rick Bryant and his family on New Year's. "Had a great time. Received my M.B.A. in May and am thinking about a Ph.D. in business. Nancy and I are adding another room to the house this summer. I sometimes wonder if I'll ever finish this house. My son graduated from Cardigan Mountain School in June and was accepted at Brewster Academy for the fall." Greacian Goeke reports that "turning 40 is great. No mid-life crisis here. My students this spring wrote what may be the first (and only?) play about Chelsea Clinton a fantasy in which she escapes for a weekend to try to have a 'normal life' for a change - disguised as a boy! A hot property. Agents are lining up even now. A sequel is in the works." After twelve years, Georgia Myer said good-bye to the big jobs and money of Manhattan and moved, in 1990, to Charlotte, Vermont, where she earns a living wage working as a circulation manager for Eating Well and Harrowsmith Country Life magazines. Five minutes down one dirt road gets her to the office and five minutes down the other dirt road gets her to the sailboat. She also skies and ice dives. A large art studio was the incentive for her move and provides the most satisfying focus for her time. This class obviously has good correspondents, now who wants to be class secretary?

Ginny Myers Kester writes, "An exciting year! Greg graduated in May with a degree in civil and environmental engineering. He has a job at the Department of Natural Resources for the state of Wisconsin. Cici Morgan Pastuhov and her family stopped by on their way west. We had a great time visiting. We will be visiting Princeton in July and plan on seeing Nancy Farley Jarrell '73 and Scott Richardson '71. We also hope to find Jimmy Harford '73, John Paine '71 and Alex Laughlin. Also I'll be visiting Andy Scasserra in Florida at the end of the month. I will be teaching half-time next year, designing programs for high risk students. I'll also be on call to help teachers with curriculum modifications or behavior issues." From other sources we learn that Ginny was featured in Newsweek's April 19, 1993 article assessing the American educational system ten years after the release of "A Nation at Risk," a 1983 indictment of the school system. Ginny has taught science, math, English and social studies at Sennett Middle School in Madison, Wisconsin since 1978. "The days of stand-up teaching in the classroom are gone because the kids don't listen. You would have too many behavior problems. It has forced us to evaluate how we teach," Ginny told Newsweek. "We have a much higher percentage of kids who come in and don't see themselves as achievers. I'm not sure kids are actively taught to be failures, but they're not taught to be successful, either." Ginny will begin teaching special needs children part-time at Sennett so that she can be home when John, 10, and Lane, 8, come home from school. She was granted a M.A. in history from the University of Wisconsin at Madison in 1987 and credits Mrs. Ilava with her lifelong desire to teach. Carroll Stephens writes, "I recently completed my Ph.D. in business ethics at Duke. This fall I'll be joining the faculty at Virginia Polytechnic Institute with joint appointments in the business school and the sociology department. This will be a big move since I've lived in Durham, NC for 22 years. I came here as a Duke undergraduate and stayed. I've been married since 1975. My husband, John Havren, owns a printing company." John Moore is "happily living in Marblehead with my harem: wife and two daughters, 41/2 and 11/2. Challenging work at State Street Bank in the defined benefit plans are a (401K), with Fortune 500 companies as main clients. Can't believe we'll be turning 40 this year!" Not far from John is Jordan Young in Lexington, MA. He lives with his wife, Margy Levine, and two-year-old daughter, Meg. Mark (MauMau) Harrop writes that he and his wife, Lucy, "spent nine sun-filled days in January on the ski slopes in Klosters, Switzerland with his family including Ambassador William C. Harrop PCD '43, brothers Caldwell '73, Scott '75 and George '79. Spring-like weather in the village did not affect superior snow conditions above the tree line. MauMau also had two nice long weekends in Naples, FL with Lucy's parents and brother. Now it's back to work as director of publicity at McGraw-Hill in New York,"In another note, Mark wrote that he met former PDS math teacher Steve Gilbert at EDUCOM '92 in Baltimore last fall. It was a threeday conference on technology in higher education with Mark representing McGraw-Hill. Steve organized and ran the conference for EDUCOM. Jane Gaman Banfield is "still living on the beautiful island of Maui, writing and working as a wrangler for tours across Haleakala Ranch on the crater slopes. My husband, Michael, and I also spend part of each spring and fall at our working farm/ranch in central Wyoming near the Continental Divide. My aloha goes out to all classmates of '72."

Hooray for snow. Superb skiing. Best in four years!" Bill Warren says, "Hi!! am living in Providence (RI) and have bought a house here. I'll be teaching painting and drawing at Providence College in the fall. I also teach at an alternative high school in Providence. I'll be showing my art work throughout New England this summer and fall." Daryl Kent was "sorry to miss our 20th. Sounds like many of us missed it. Maybe more of us can get together for our 25th. I'd like to see Anne, Tucky, Hilary, Liz and Susan but maybe that's too much to hope for.' Pamela Tegarden Allen, her husband, Mark, and their children, Matthew, Cameron and Virginia, attended her sister's wedding on May 22, 1993. The reception was at the home of Mrs. Pepper Constable, Jr. Peter Moore writes, "Louisa and I continue to labor away in grad school (finishing in May 1993) at University of Rhode Island. My degree concentration is in fisheries management and seafood marketing while Louisa is focusing on marine habitat protection/coastal management. Next stop? Twenty years. How can more years have passed since June 11, 1974 than came before it in each of our lives? We need to commemorate that date (and see if we still look/act the same) by visiting PDS for our reunion this spring. (You can find out if Plap is still as immature as he was back then. My love for Barney and Friends doesn't give much hope.) I plan to be back in Princeton this spring, I hope all other "74ers" can make it too. Fellow member of the Commonwealth, Terry Ward, reports that he has been appointed the director of college guidance at Concord Academy. Meriel Burtle Lindley announces the relocation of her law offices to 111 Sutter Street, Suite 1900, San Francisco, CA 94104. Mer had better be planning temporary relocation to Princeton this spring. In anticipation of the reunion, no doubt, David Straut writes that he and his wife, Maureen, and their kids, Charlie, Catie and Rosemary, have moved back to Princeton. David works at Bank of America in NYC in corporate lending. David sees Annie Williams, Liz Penick and Kemp Battle from time to time, as well as John Boyd. (David would be interested in hosting a lunch or similar event in the spring for our 20th). I write these notes from my wife's grandparents' house on Long Island so it's especially appropriate that I next report on Cathy Cipolla Isam's doings. Cathy plans to visit the Vineyard this summer and hopes to be at the reunion in the spring. Her baby is almost two and leads a "happy, laugh-a-minute life." Cathy would like to find Nancy Kendall McCabe and asks her to give Cathy a call at 619-483-1170. Speaking of Nancy, she writes that she hopes to come east in the spring for our 20th with husband Pat and Will, 4, and Katie, 2. Nancy is extremely happy with her work situation, sharing a TV development position with another mother of two. Nancy works for David Wolper of Roots fame at Warner Bros. Well, Barney's over, time to hit the beach. See you this spring.

From other sources we learn that Fran Treves was planning a June wedding with Cynthia Pondel according to the local papers. She is senior loss control representative for General Accident Insurance and Fran has his own architectural practise in Kingston. Evelyn Turner Counts teaches and coaches at John Witherspoon Middle School in Princeton and was featured in the local papers talking about how her college education was made possible by a four-year scholarship to Mount Holyoke raised from the Princeton Antique Show. The show has been held at PDS over spring vacation for many years. Evelyn also spoke about the importance of giving back to the community and instilling in her students the belief that they can succeed. The papers also featured John Boyd for his role in bringing ice hockey to more people in the area. He is the managing partner of Ice Land, a brand new complex that includes two rinks in Hamilton. He loves the game and, as goalie, was instrumental in leading the Princeton Hockey Club to victory over Kingston in the hotly contested Horton Cup Tournament at Ice Land this year. He enjoys seeing more players and coaches coming out for the game thanks to the facilities he's provided.

Bits and pieces of news have filtered in to the development office. Kip Herrick and her husband are expecting their second child in the beginning of August. Anne Tate is still living in the Boston area, practising architecture. This fall she will expand her part-time teaching at RISD and become a full professor. Elliot Pilshaw writes that he's living "in Brooklyn Heights with partner Andy Mirer. Performing solo, and with newly-formed a cappella group, Sons and Lovers. Also busy teaching private voice lessons. Looking forward to exciting summer, travelling to visit family and friends in Israel." Margaret DeVries Kane graduated from law school this year. Janet Rassweiler is living in New York and working as assistant director for the museum at the New Jersey Historical Society in Newark, Gary Salup owns Quaker Curtains, a store at Oxford Valley Mall in Langhorne, PA. He has two children, a daughter, Shaina, 4, who had her first ballet recital at the Trenton War Memorial this spring, and a son, Alex, 21/2. Gary is "revved and ready to go for the 20th in two years. Beware, classmates!" Bill McClellan lives in Camden, Maine and is a sales manager for Duck Trap Fish Farm. His daughter, Kate Anna, was born on March 14, 1992. Peter Lawson-Johnston has two sons, Peter, 21/2, and Dillon 11/2. Michael Hill writes, "I'm working as an attorney for Carington and Burling in DC and have two kids, Andrea, 31/2, and Tyler, about a year. We enjoyed having Molly Sword McDonough as a neighbor, briefly, only to have her leave here for the greener (and cooler!) pastures of Pennington." Yuki Moore Laurenti has joined the Board of Trustees of Young Audiences of New Jersey. Jodi Myer-Lynch gave birth to Lydia Margaret Lynch on November 3, 1992. Lydia joined her brother, Samuel Alexander Lynch, born July 3, 1990. Jody works as a graphic designer and her husband, Tom, designs computer programs. When not busy tending to children and jobs, Jody and Tom work to restore their Wisconsin farmhouse. Amy Aherns lives close by in Madison with her daughter, Sierra, 5, and continues her work as an artist. On behalf of the class, we offer our deepest sympathy to the family and friends of Julie Browder who died in March.

Mary Chapin Carpenter continues to win acclaim. People magazine pictured her with her second Grammy in as many years and enthused, "With sold-out shows, platinum sales figures, critical acclaim and hits aplenty, Mary Chapin is fast joining the ranks of the superstars." She tied Carth Brooks, Billy Ray Cyrus and Brooks & Dunn for the most Academy of Country Music Award nominations. this year and appeared on the PBS-TV Fourth of July special from Washington, DC, A Capital Fourth. Greg Matthews married Ann Elise Mumford who worked until recently as the director of resident services at the Warwick Towers Condominium in Houston, TX. Greg is an asset manager for the Centeq Companies, a commercial real estate concern in Houston. Tom Moore writes, "Daughter Caroline celebrates her first birthday June 26th and is already walking and drinking real milk. Thank goodness. Another child is on the way, due in October! My work as a private trustee and executor continues to be fun and challenging, as does my wife, Linda's, work as a probate attorney four days a week. Life is treating us well here in Manchesterby-the-Sea, MA!" Lisa Partridge Raymond reports that she's the "happy mother of three children; Peter, 6, Alex, 4, and Louisa, 1. Husband Doug practising law in Philadelphia." And Bill von Oehsen writes of his children, "Have son Nicholas, 2, and Ellie, 1, who keep us very busy. Nancy is director of St. Luke's Episcopal Church in Brighton, MD where we live next door to the church in the rectory. I am an attorney at Powell Goldstein, Frazer & Murphy in Washington, DC. I practise in health and FDA law, doing regulatory and legislative work."

Carol Katz married Mark Connelly in August 1992. They are living in Lawrenceville and Carol is a lobbyist in Trenton. George Zoukee was recently appointed executive director of the New Hampshire Municipal Bond Bank in Concord, NH. "I've moved from downtown Boston to Warner, NH, a small town located near Lake Sunapee and the King Ridge and Mount Sunapee ski areas. I'm thrilled with the move and I'm enjoying life in New Hampshire." By the end of 1993 George hopes to complete his goal of visiting all fifty states. As of 7/12/93 the score was 49 states down, one to go. George invites anyone who is in New Hampshire this fall or winter to call (603) 456-3550 (you said it, George) and visit, Congratulations to Randy Melville and his wife who are happy parents of a baby boy, Myles Anthony, 7 lbs. 2 oz., 191/2", born on 6/17/93. Randy will be leaving Proctor & Gamble to work for Frito-Lay in Dallas, TX. Classmates, Randy would like us to please forget about health, nutrition, fat and calories and begin eating lots and lots of Fritos, Doritos, Ruffles and Lays! It is the least we can do to help out Randy. Having finished her thesis and taken her board exams, Celia H. Schulz is now working at the VA Hospital in Brockton, MA where she is an occupational therapist for a 28-bed inpatient psychiatric unit for adults. "The work is enjoyable and challenging." Celia also attended the American Occupational Therapy Association Conference in Seattle, WA this past June which she seemed to really enjoy. Rachel Abelson Hickson reports that she is enjoying her job with the NI state government in Trenton spending our tax dollars. At the time she wrote, Rachel and her family were looking forward to a vacation at Long Beach Island. Rachel's daughter, Meredith, is 4 years old, enjoying summer camp and now learning to swim. Rachel and her husband are expecting their second child in January. Congratulations! Fuzz, alias Tim Brush, married Cassidy Loring in Northfield, MA on 6/15/91. They moved to Colorado in 1991 and more recently bought an old, modernized log cabin in Breckenridge, Fuzz keeps in touch with Tom Gates '78, Pete Buck and Steve Farr and is trying to catch up with Phil Glouchevitch. "Where is Phil?!?" Fuzz has also been skiing with Andy Jensen '79, who is on the ski patrol at Breckenridge Ski Area. Karin Morgenstern Papp and I got together this past May and visited PDS for the reunion. We had a good time and it was fun looking at our class graduation photo! Karin is doing well, living outside of Chicago and keeping busy with her two sons. As for me, at the time of this writing, I am in my ninth month of pregnancy and ready to begin my Lamaze breathing and give birth to our second child. I'll fill you in on the details next time. Please folks: keep those cards and letters coming!

the '96 Olympics. Saw Cindy and Steve Farr last month and their perfect, beautiful daughter, Emily. She's as smart and caustic as Steve - amazing that 1-year-olds' personalities come through! Doug and I are still working hard to avoid doing the parental thing, and succeeding." Annabelle Brainard Canning also sends news: "My husband, my son, John, 1, and I recently moved back east to Philadelphia where my husband is at CHOP and I am at Bell Atlantic. Recently attended Paul and Holly Burks Becker's 10th wedding anniversary party at Windrush Farm. All the Burks were looking great." Sandy Driver writes, sending everyone her best wishes. And finally, this from Sue Fineman Keitelman: "Since November I have been working as the assistant director of public information for a large school district here (26 schools). Most of the time I write press releases and take photographs for schools and school-related events. (I never studied PR or journalism and most of the writing skills I call upon have been acquired through common sense and Mrs. Michael's ninth grade English class! Thank you, Mrs. Michaels! We are expecting our second child September 27th. Our son, Jordan, will be three months shy of turning three then. He is quite a handful by himself. As I'm writing this, he's feeding the cat vanilla wafers."

Thanks to everyone who made the effort to attend our 15th reunion. The weekend was a success, and we had fun at the post-reunion reunion that '78 had at Colross. I think Sabrina Barton got the award for longest distance travelled (from CA), and, boy, was it worth it! Seriously, it was great fun to see Dr. Barton and Suzanne Vine back up to their old tricks. Dara Burrows is living on the Olympic Peninsula with her husband, Joseph, and two stepsons, ages 5 and 7. She is managing a publishing company that is publishing its first book. They have built two houses themselves, most recently out in the woods with the marmots and slugs. Lee Ross, who has been one of the best communicators of our entire class, (thank you, Lee) has let us know that his wife indeed has a name, and it is Susan. They were sorry not to have made the reunion, but things in North Carolina are "great and getting greater." Laura Tate gave birth to Jakob on March 22nd. She has been indulging his every whim and enjoying it immensely. In September, Lolly, husband Martin, and Jakob leave for Munich for a year where Lolly will do research if the little one allows. Lolly would like to hear from Siri at 1319 lennifer St., Madison, WI 53703. Robin Ultan had fun at the reunion and writes that she is a counselor at Family Services in Princeton. She continues to look for other counseling opportunities, particularly in educational settings. She wishes a good summer to all! We heard from Sheila Mehta for the first time! Thanks for doing so, Sheila. After completing her dissertation on Agriculturative Stress of Asian Indian Immigrants, she will be joining the faculty of Auburn University as an assistant professor of clinical psychology. Her husband is a chemistry professor at Auburn. Annie Roberts, aka Lise Anne, also had a great time at the reunion. She was sporting a belly full of baby, and is awaiting a fall delivery. Details to follow. Annie and husband Chuck Ziga have a book coming out in August called Washington Landmarks on architecture with photography. Look for it at Barnes and Noble and Crown Book Shops. This is the last column to originate from Stoneham, MA. Tracey, Ren, Sheridan, and Tom Gates are moving somewhere near Princeton as soon as the house sells in Stoneham. I am going to work in the mortgage origination business in Princeton with Phoenix Financial Services. It will be great to be back in the area, and I hope to see more of our class in the process. Please keep the letters and cards coming.

Wedding news first: Betsy Samuels Stephens was married to Scott Ellsworth in Washington, DC on July 3rd. Her husband is a writer and historian at the National Museum of American History, Smithsonian Institution. Betsy plans to enter the history graduate program at Duke this fall. Mike Shannon and Sarah Dalley planned to be married in June. Mike is president of Pacon Manufacturing in South Plainfield, the family business founded by his grandfather. Alison Lockwood was married last March to Howard Cronson, a C.P.A. for John Hancock in Boston. Alison's mother died suddenly in May and we send her and her brother, Daniel '83, our sympathy. Katrina Jannen Donnelly writes, "I'm still living in Chelmsford, MA with my husband, Bob, and 2-year-old son, Robert. Henry "Hazard" Zenzie and wife Kathleen came over for dinner recently. They just bought a house a few minutes away. Debbie Ford Cowell and husband J.C. are getting their pilot's licenses - watch out New Jersey!" Caroline Hartshorne Bush works in the family catering business that did such a great job providing the breakfast, lunch and dinner for Alumni Day. She's married and has a 1-year-old daughter and lives in Neshanic. Robert Leahy and his wife, Paula, have three children: Roy, born August 1987, Margaret, born March 1989, Tom, born March 1991. He's working with the national office of the IRS as a computer specialist and section chief. The class can boast two more lawyers. Lou Guarino has passed the law boards for New Jersey as has Ward Taggart who also is licensed to practise in Pennsylvania. Ward writes, "I practise insurance litigation in Haddonfield where I live with my wife, Alexandra, and our two cats, Preakness and Midnite." Ralph Ross is teaching sixth grade at the Waldorf School in Bourne, MA. He and JouJou and their three children live in Pohasset. Kent Wilkinson is in his "fifth straight year of graduate school. I did an M.A. in Latin-American Studies at Berkeley, and am currently pursuing a Ph.D. in radio-television-film at the University of Texas. My specialization is US Spanish-language television and the international trade in Spanish and Portuguese-language television programming."

I hope that you've all enjoyed a wonderful summer. It's been great to hear from so many old friends during this past month. There sure is a lot of baby news! Liz Segal and her husband Peter recently had a baby girl named Annabel. They live in Cambridge where Liz runs a hotline at Planned Parenthood. Susannah Rabb Bailin and husband, David, have a new baby girl named Juliet and a two-year-old daughter, Alexandra. Susannah will soon be moving to New York where she operates her own business to assist people with mid-career transitions and David works in real estate at a money management firm. Lynn Shapiro wrote to say that she, Susannah and Kara Swisher attended Kate Shaplen's wedding on Cape Cod in October, Lynn was a bridesmaid and is now busy planning her own September wedding to Alex Starr in Princeton. Kara still lives in Washington, DC where she's been gaining fame at the Washington Post for the past several years. Another Washingtonian, Sophie Carpenter Speidel had a great time catching up with old friends over the PDS alumni weekend in May. Sophie played in the alumni lacrosse game as did Camie Carrington Levy '81. The PDS varsity team won by 2! Sophie says "it was great fun to play lacrosse at PDS - something I've never been able to do!" She "would like to invite Louise Matthews

'82 and Susie Haynes Hall '82 to join her next May to help win one for the alums, along with anyone else who might be interested!" Sophie, her husband, Rusty, and baby Chapin ran into Leslie Straut Ward and her husband, Grant, Amy Stackpole Brigham, husband Tim and baby Emma and Abby Stackpole McCall and her husband, Dave, who are proud parents of a lovely baby girl named Katherine. Sounds like a super weekend, I'm sorry to have missed it! Virginia Ferrante lqbal and her husband, Manzar, are expecting their first baby in late October. Virginia works as the only medical illustrator at the Hospital for Special Surgery in Manhattan. (I apologize for the incorrect report in the last issue, Virginia.) Virginia says that the hospital was just rated as #1 in the USA for orthopaedics and rheumatology, which I agree with after having had knee surgery there two years ago. Catherine Ferrante 78 is expecting her second child in August and Philip Ferrante '81 is planning his spring wedding in Arizona, Virginia's husband, Manzar, has been very busy playing world class field hockey and is working towards the Olympic games in Atlanta. Best of luck! Dr. Samuelle Klein-Von Reiche wrote that she has completed her doctorate in clinical psychology. She consults part-time at Fair Oaks Hospital and has a thriving private practice in Lyndhurst, NJ. Congratulations, Sam! Jonathan Peter and his wife, Nancy, are expecting their first child in July. JP lives in Manhattan and plays out on Long Island where I've bumped into him on the golf course or tennis courts! Adam Barton married Dana Smith in June in San Francisco where Adam works as an architect. I wasn't able to attend the wedding but would love to hear about it from someone who was there. I have been busy working on my "new" 100-year-old home in Woodmere and have spent the summer preparing for my transition from teaching first to fourth grade. It was so nice to hear from everyone - please keep writing! From other sources we learn that Doug Atkin and Elena Ritterbusch were married. She is a manager of over-the-counter trading at Instinet Corp., a wholly owned subsidiary of Reuters Co. Doug is the managing director of Instinet, UK, Liza Stewardson Connolly is the new chef at Davio's in East Cambridge. "Having fun with my own menu. My husband, Kevin, and I have finally settled back into America after a great year in Italy." Jamie Phares writes, "I have moved back to Princeton where I live with my fiancé. We are getting married in September here in town. I have moved my advertising/ marketing business locally as well and am, thankfully, doing well." Chris Kuenne is also living in Princeton with his wife, Leslie, a genetic counselor, and their 16-month-old daughter, Olivia. Chris is the group product director of the wound care franchise for Johnson & Johnson ("just two miles past PDS on the Great Road in Skillman). Said another way, I manage the marketing of protection products for all cuts, large and small!" David Harrower just finished his first year toward his M.A. in architecture at the University of Pennsylvania. Vince Camisa writes, "I've been living in Bethlehem for almost two years now, working in the law department of Bethlehem Steel Corporation. My wife and I had an addition to our family recently - my daughter, Sydney Victoria, born May 14th. (My oldest daughter, Holly Rose is 21/2-years-old.) Also, I've been playing piano in a jazz quartet that has held down a weekly gig for the past few months at a local lounge, Cheers.

Jeffrey Rodney writes that he's a prosthodontist with his own practise in Pennington. He and his wife, Michelle, have three children, A.J., Samantha and Alexandra. Janet McAlpin returned to PDS in April to perform in the Herbert McAneny Theater with the Washington state based dance troupe UMO. The ensemble (whose initials stand for Unidentified Moving Objects), was founded in 1987 by Janet and some friends she met at the Ecole Lecog In Paris. The members are trained in acting, clowning, ballet, singing, mime, puppetry, masks and modern dance and their performance was well received by PDS students.

David Abrahams gets to lead with his news because it is the most unusual. He writes, "xnpooooh, FZyes, yes oh? .. o o ###. Ol' Yeller's got me treed agin." Hummm, very creative Dave. Sounds like some sort of code. If anyone can decipher it, please write in. Roger Holloway got married to Jennifer Ocic on July 17. The wedding took place at Roger's mother's in Pennington. Roger didn't write about how he proposed but I'm dying to share it so please don't get mad Rog. He proposed ON STAGE in front of thousands of people during an intermission at one of PHISH's concerts (Trey Anastasio's band). Sort of has a Woodstock feel to it. Way to go! He is working in education programs with Birds of Prey, travelling to Illinois and Kansas during the summer conducting educational programs. He's at World Bird Sanctuary in St. Louis 314/938-6193. Steve Eisenstein's baby looks just like him. (See photo.) He and his wife, Lara, are enjoying their one-yearold Erik. "A spry young man," Steve says. Steve has just entered his fourth year of psychiatric residency and is "chief in-patient resident." He has also just begun interviewing nationwide for a permanent position. Kang Na has just started working as a lay minister at a Presbyterian church in Atlanta. He is also working on his dissertation at Emory University. Lindsay Suter continues to teach furniture design at the California College of Arts and Crafts. He says he has "forsaken the world of commercial architecture in favor of self-employment. This means I'm making furniture myself, designing an occasional modest residence, rowing, growing vegetables and a fairly convincing mustache." Lindsay, send a photo of that 'stache. Did you know that Jeff Henkel is dabbling in furniture design as well? He is back from Taos, living in Hoboken and studying at NYU when he's not out on the town with Leslie Pell and her new Beau (who just happens to be his roommate). Leslie can be found up on her roof deck throwing great parties, or at Ogilvy and Mather Advertising where she continues to master the art of selling feminine hygiene products. She's still printing her fabulous T-shirts which matched their record sales of last year at the Hospital Fete. Robby Bowen has been in the Navy for six years. He recently moved back to Waldorf, MD from San Diego. He's been married for two years and says, "In our biased opinion (our little girl) is the most beautiful thing in the world." He's currently attending night school to receive his master's in business with a concentration in finance and investments. He plans to use his degree to get out of the Navy and into the business world. Billy Rossmassler is also going back for a master's, only his is in resource management. Come September Bill's going to be at the University of Oregon for two years. After doing so much environmentally in St. Kitts during his post there with the Peace Corps., it's great to see the trend continuing, though we're going to miss him here on the east coast. Bill, along with my husband and our baby, my brother and some others, spent some super days knee-deep in powder on the slopes of Steamboat, CO this spring. This summer, while in San Francisco, we bumped into Aaron Wolfe who is working in the film business in Los Angeles. He just happened to be in hilly San Fran for a road race. (Got to admire that.) I got to spend a good deal of time with Hilary Illick while out there. Her daughter is full of spunk and a collection of Hilary's short stories was just published. Entitled Out of Body, her book is of particular interest to our class because of the memories from our PDS middle school days. I'd forgotten about jumping out of the windows into snow banks near Madame Echeverria's and Mr. Howe's class rooms. We also got to spend time with Eric Ott '83 and his bride, Milagros, who is wonderful. Eric says he wins in that deal, and, no offense Otter, but you got that right. Kitty Ijams continues to work in the human resource department at Christie's. Kate Murdoch Kern is still living just outside of Washington with her husband and two little girls now one and three. Newell Thompson is still with USA Weekend in Manhattan, living with his bride, Sarah Griffin Thompson '84. Leslie Pell, Jennifer Powers, Sandy Danielson and I were in Bonnie Bershad's '83 wedding to George Zinn up in Maine. Melissa Marks was there, five months pregnant and more gorgeous and funny than I ever remembered her. William Hollister's father wrote in telling us that William is still in Europe after teaching English to 10-15-year-old kids in Prague during the '92-'93 school year. That's all for now. Thanks for the news. Enjoy the fall, and keep those cards coming!

We've found a bit more news for '82. Bob Szuter writes, "trying to subsist/exist and work for NJN, the state's only local public television. Anybody writing fiction, send me some; I write notes in the margins and send it back." And from April Barry, "I'm in grad school full-time now in San Francisco, studying philosophy and religion with a women's spirituality focus. Peter Wisnovsky '85 (younger brother of Rob Wisnovsky) lives in my neighborhood. He lives, appropriately enough, on Jersey Street! And I on Church with my religious studies." Jeff Perlman was recently named to the Board of the Mercer County Chamber of Commerce and to the board of ELSA, the Ewing-Lawrence Sewer Authority. Stefan Schriber and Rhonda Lantz were married in the Office of the Lord Mayor of Oxford, England, following Stefan's senior rotation in plastic surgery at the John Radcliffe Infirmary of the Oxford School of Medicine. After a wedding trip to Paris, the couple returned to New Orleans where Stefan received his degree from Tulane as a doctor of medicine. They plan to live in Santa Barbara, CA where Stefan will begin a surgical residency. Laird Landmann is engaged to Kathleen Kinney, an associate in a law firm in Newport Beach, CA. Laird is the director of fixed income portfolio management at Hotchkis & Wiley in Los Angeles.

From Rena: For those of you who missed it, our 10th reunion was a great success. Although most people only attended the cocktail party Friday night at Colross, we had about 30 class members turn out, and it seemed a good time was had by all. Ms. Grigger was kind enough to stop by and show us a movie from our seventh grade trip to Blairstown including the Fantasy Island spoof with Mike Roth as Tatoo and Geordie McLaughlin as Mr. O'Rourke. I was busy running around worrying about details, but here are my best recollections of who attended and what they are up to. John Firester is running his own computer consulting company in New York City. Chris Franz and his wife are probably proud parents now, it was her due date on the day of the reunion. Matt Kohut is teaching in the Princeton area and playing in a band with Peter Cottone '82. Ben Horrigan is working for a theatrical group in Connecticut. Craig Phares, Vicki Curtin, Ellen Pinkus, Hannah Fuller-Boswell, Jeanne Hagerhorst, Steve Schluter, and Chris Lariche are all living in New York City. Stephanie Bogart - the bestdressed person there - is in graduate school. Michael Sand, who was with our class until the eighth grade, made a surprise appearance. The famous duo Zoe Nicholich (now blonde) and Sue Charen are now going back to school and practicing law, respectively. Norman Callaway and his fiancée, Lisa Settle, will be married this September 18th. Andy Hawkes has relocated from San Francisco back to the east coast. In fact, when he arrived at Colross, he had just arrived in Princeton from driving across country. Jon Erdman is engaged to be married to Nathalie Day, originally of Provo, Utah, and now living in Princeton. Andrew Cross has been teaching, and if I remember correctly, was going to go back to school to get his master's. Kelly Lambert Walker, another teacher, teaches at Tabor Academy. Katherine Lonergan Main is living in Michigan with her husband and son, Alexander. Tom Haroldson has one more year at Harvard Law School. Noelle Damico and her fiancé are getting married this fall and completing their studies at the Princeton Theological Seminary. Steve Ramsey, who came all the way from San Jose, is working as a paralegal. Laurie Gallup Fusco brought by her new baby girl, Kerry Jesser Fusco, for a visit. Kerry was born February 27, 1993 and weighed 5 lbs. 8 oz. Many thanks to Sarah Cragg, Laurie Gallup Fusco, Mac McDougald, and Stewart von Oehsen for their help with the party. It could not have been done without them. Although he couldn't make it to the event Friday night, Erik Schweibert and his fiancée, Lisa Marshall, were able to drag themselves away from their respective laboratories to attend the Alumni Dinner at Colross on Saturday. Both Erik and Lisa have Ph.D.'s from Dartmouth Medical School and are conducting medical research in Baltimore; Erik at Johns Hopkins Medical Center, and Lisa at the University. They are planning to be married in Thetford, Vermont (not far from Hanover) in early November 1993. Other good news to share is that at his (and Lisa's) graduation from medical school, Erik received the John Strobehn Prize, awarded to a medical school graduate for distinguished independent work in medical research. Karri Bowen was married on July 24, 1993 to Donny Poole of Rye, New York. Like Karri, Donny is a graduate of St. Lawrence University. The wedding took place at the Princeton University Chapel and the reception at nearby Prospect House. Many other PDS/St. Lawrence grads attended including Erik Ott and new wife Millie, Andy Hawkes, and Jon Erdman, to name a few. Karri promises to send pictures for the next issue of the PDS Journal. Ken Mencken is sorry that he missed the reunion and writes, "After several years in Rabbinic schools in Israel, I am back in the States directing Project Genesis, a Jewish identity movement for college students. I promise a great press release soon, complete with photos from the new radio show they're doing in Rockland County, New York's all-Jewish station." Haleh Bakhash writes that she graduated from Georgetown Law School last year and is now working as an attorney for the law firm of Jones, Davis, Reavis & Pogue in New York.

A few more notes: Bonnie Bershad and George Zinn were married on May 22nd - Alumni Day in Maine. Bonnie's an associate with the law firm of Carpenter, Bennett and Morrissey in Newark and George is a commodities trading advisor with Lora Trading Group in Norwalk, CT. Ashley Ammidon and Dan Quinlan followed with a July 10th wedding in Princeton attended by many PDS alumni. Louise Matthews was a bridesmaid. Ashley even found time to write, "We had a wonderful wedding and an incredible trip to Glacier Bay, Alaska. Lots of wild life; bears, moose, eagles, whales... Amazing fishing and glacier viewing." And the long distance award goes to Dan Goldman who writes, "Living in Singapore and managing Arthur D. Little's Asian energy practise. Unfortunately, I won't be able to attend the 10th." That's understandable, but on behalf of all who did, a big thank you to Rena and her committee who did so much to make it a great

From Ted: Not much news this time around but, what I have to report is as exciting as having heard from the entire class. Wendy White Brockelman moved to Minneapolis on July 2nd! Her husband Peter has graduated from Yale with two master's and has gotten a great job to boot. Wendy's now retired, for as long as she can get away with it. She's occupying her time setting up their new home, while entertaining their various dog and cats. She loves Minneapolis and believes the lakes make up for the lack of shoreline. She figures that once she's settled she'll get back into her artwork and begin to sell some crafts she began in New Haven. She can be found at: 217 W. Franklin Ave., Apt. 2, Minneapolis, MN 55404. As for me, my life has taken a step in the right direction. On May 7th, I proposed to M. Courtney Brown at my fifth college reunion in Virginia. Courtney is a textile designer and works at Maharam Fabric Corporation in NYC. We've set the date for November 27th and have planned a Royal Caribbean Cruise of the Southern Caribbean for our honeymoon. I hope that everything is fine with everyone and that possibly we'll hear from more of our classmates next time.

Christopher Hayes wrote that he's teaching history and coaching and running a dorm at Shady Side Academy in Pittsburgh. Margie Wallace Gibson had a baby girl named Katie in March. She joins a brother at the Gibson home in Princeton. Jennifer Lamb has announced her engagement to Florimond Smoor. They are both chefs at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel in New York.

From Louise: I had a visit from Lizzie O'Leary who was in Portland during July. Lizzie lives in Cambridge and teaches third grade at The Fessenden School. She was spending the summer in Florida, Portland and the Adirondacks. I received a phone call from Liz Socolow late one evening last week. She was calling from Moscow to touch base with me. She said life is good there, but she is working long hours at The Soros Foundation. Liz is a bridesmaid in my wedding. Danielle Coppola is doing her residency for internal medicine at Yale. I spoke to her mother who is, needless to say, very proud. A note from Regan Hofmann reads, "I'm still in NYC working for Cliff Freeman & Partners, the ad agency for Little Caesar's Pizza. I recently got engaged to Andrew Whiteley, a UVM/Taft alum - he's a terrific guy. We plan to get married in Princeton in May. I bumped into Tom Foster who is also engaged, and saw Mimi Lawson-Johnston, Chandler Hopkins and Birgit Enstrom at an engagement party for Mimi and Nat who will be married this Labor Day weekend." Brad Smith is working and living in Princeton. He is also a member of our wedding party. Jared Stark is still at Yale working on his doctorate. He teaches French and literature. Kate Reavey just finished getting her master's in poetry at UC Davis and she is job hunting. Lynne Erdman is spending the summer in Salt Lake City working. In the fall she is going back to Portland State to finish up her master's in math. I am getting married in August in Rumson and will be permanently residing in Portland, Oregon, as Eric and I just bought a house. After a honeymoon in Bermuda, I am going to get my master's degree in secondary Spanish education at Lewis & Clark,

From other sources we learn that Steve Sinaiko is working this year as a law clerk to the Hon. Henry A. Politz of the US Court of Appeals in Shrevesport, LA. Next year he plans to work as an associate with Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison in NYC. Jim Hall has been in business school at Duke and was married to Brice Batchelor on June 5th in Somers, CT. The couple met at Hamilton where they both went to college. After their honeymoon in Bermuda, they returned to Durham, NC where Jim will finish his last year of business school and Brice works as a loan officer for Wachovia. During the summer, Jim worked as the CFO of a cellular phone joint venture between GE and Erixson, a Swedish company. Jon McConaughy writes, "After two years of travelling the world (Europe, Africa, Asia), while travelling through the city of Bangi in the Central African Republic, I saw someone who looked like Becky Stoltzfus. So if she was there during July or August of 1990, then I saw her. I did not stop because I could not, I was on top of a transport truck. Now I am trading stock option on the floor of the Chicago Board of Options Exchange and love it. Thanks to Mrs. Rothrock for the education in stocks." The death of Peter Gallup in June was a terrible shock and on behalf of the class, we send our very deepest sympathy to his friends and family, especially Chris Gallup '88 and Laurie Fusco '83.

To those of you who sent in your cards over the winter, sorry for the delay. Here is some late, possibly outdated, news as well as some recently. arrived notes: January, 1993 - Biz Carleton writes that: "I am living in Princeton (much to my dismay - the economy, you know) after having spent several years living and working in New York. I'm working for an agency in Rocky Hill, and will be graduating from college in March. I am hoping to go to The New School for grad school, but that is not definite yet. The only other PDSers I keep up with are Vanessa Chase and Mitchell Klein. Vanessa is living in New York, getting her Ph.D. in art history at Columbia. She spent two years in London getting he M.A. and working for a member of Parliament, but she decided to return stateside this fall. Mitchell now lives in Florida and, last I heard, was working for a ticketing agency. He has not given up his acting ambitions, but I think he's leaning toward directing now. I saw Amber Watson at the Gap about a year ago, she was managing it. She said that she often sees Don Gilpen, and is still in touch with Stacey Feldman. That is all I have to report. If there are any alumni still in the area, I would love to hear from them." In and around Rocky Hill, Amy Kohut returned home this winter from Denver and spotted Sue Neider and daughter Annie at the Rocky Hill Grand Union from whom we learn that Stacey Feldman is engaged to be married and living in the Princeton area. Amy is currently living outside Boulder, CO, working with a group of artists painting Native American artifacts and catching trout in her backyard. I ran into Ben Tregoe in the checkout line at the very same Grand Union on Christmas Eve and he told me he is living and working in New York. Anna Barrow's mother, while dining at the Rocky Hill Inn, reports Anna is working on Wall Street and had just run the New York Marathon. Karl Chaing was also back in the area, working at the Nickel along with Brad Smith '85. Yvette Pelletieri is pursuing a certification in education at Rider and had been substitute teaching at PDS. When I last spoke with Andy Smith, he wanted you all to know he finally did the ultimate Cally thing and bought a pair of roller blades. He made me swear to tell you that I have been seen driving around New Jersey listening to Bruce Springsteen with the windows down in return for that juicy tidbit. April, 1993 - Cleis Nicholich called. She is back in the USA, living in New Brunswick with her daughter, Bianca, working as a dental technician. July, 1993 - Lani Firester writes, "I'm presently studying for the New York and Pennsylvania bar exams, having just graduated from Washington University School of Law in St. Louis, MO. This fall I will be working as a staff attorney at the United States Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit (in Chicago). Along with bar study, I'm also working in New York City this summer at an intellectual property law firm, Morgan and Finnegan." Dave Sullivan has moved to New York where he continues to work in sales. Rebecca Sugerman was home in the spring after playing in a lacrosse tournament in Ohio. Rebecca lives in San Francisco where she works as an environmental consultant. Look for her in the jeep with no doors. From Jamie Mayer: "In a week I'm headed for Austin, TX for the shooting of a film. I'm assistant to the director (he's the guy who directed all of MC Hammer's videos). I'll be there for two months at the Four Seasons Hotel (!). If you, or anyone else, in your world travels comes through, find me. Things are good and I hope you all are well," Brian Lebovitz writes, "Still living in Pittsburgh attending my final year of medical school. I had the pleasure of attending a concert at a local dance club/coffee house and hearing the inspired performance of God Street Wine (with Lo Faber '84 and Tom Osander '85) who are busy touring the U.S." Brian's address is 120 Ruskin Ave. #209, Pittsburgh, PA 15213. Anthony Milo Miller has been getting as much golfing in as work will permit him. Henry Clancy is still playing music and working as a carpenter for Lasley Construction. Lasley recently did a lob at Alexa Richman's house. Alexa is finishing law school. John Totaro finished his law degree at the University of Richmond and is studying for the bar while pursuing international law in Amsterdam. I ran into Susan Salkind at a Rocky Hill Firehouse pancake breakfast who told me she is working on Capitol Hill and has seen Maya Birmingham there who is working for the House Finance Committee. My brother, Chris Franz '83, and his wife, Tina, are expecting their first child in the next few weeks. A lot of people are guessing twins...I am keeping busy. Between all the work, I have managed to fit in a lot of fishing, I look forward to hearing from even more of you. Drop me a note, but please use my father's address. This one in Hopewell may be null and void in the next few months! Take care!

A bit more news found its way to the alumni office. Mitch Warren writes that he's interning at the White House this summer and will be starting his second year at the Woodrow Wilson School this fall. Arnold Ropeik devoted one of his Trenton Times columns to Mitch and his internship, praising Mitch's enthusiasm about the 12-week program in which he has been doing research on the federal budget. Some of the information he gathers has been used in Presidential briefings. Tim Howard and Andrew Bushnell are both in medical school: Tim at UVM and Andrew in his last year at the University of Maryland in Baltimore. Liz White writes, "Spent year teaching in Hartford and I'm heading around the world in September with my mainstay being Nepal. I'll be teaching in a small village near Katmandu. I've seen a lot of Jen Hawkes, Anna Barrows, and Christy Curtin which has been great! They were all living together in Boston." Speaking of Boston, Brian Thorner writes, "I'm finishing up work here in Boston in August. I'm going to visit fellow class of '86 alum Mark Burman who is living and working in Hawaii and then I'm starting on my M.B.A. this fall at Babson College.'

Andrew Blechman helped out as class secretary for the last issue but now his mail is being returned to school, "Address Unknown." Please let us know where you've settled, Andrew. Meanwhile, the news comes as various notes to the development office. Miriam Pollard writes, "I'm enjoying a beautiful Colorado summer despite the July 4th snowstorm! I'll be in Breckenridge for at least another year, so come visit." Sheila Mackey was married and is living with her husband in Lumberville, PA. Lisa Somerstein says, "I am currently working for Fellisimo as an assistant buyer in NYC. I was recently engaged to Matthew Kulka on February 13th. The wedding will be April 30, 1994." Andre Barros writes, "After completing my B.S. in mechanical engineering from Rutgers in December 1991, I worked in Brazil as an engineer at an Ethanol Mill. I returned near the end of '92 and worked locally until I got my current position as a product engineer for Ford Motor Company in Dearborn, MI," And from Jane Podurgiel, "I'm still in Washington at George Washington University, studying for my master's, hoping to follow in the footsteps of Mr. Newell and Mr. Achinstein as a high school math teacher. If you look closely, I'm in the Mary Chapin Carpenter '76 video for "Passionate Kisses." My boyfriend kisses me on the nose!" Carla Taylor is also working in Washington, "for a child advocacy organization. I'll be attending the Medill School of Journalism at Northwestern to get an M.A. in broadcast journalism this fall. I decided to pursue a career as a reporter. And — last but not least — I'm engaged!"

Notes to the development office provide the news for this column. Jeff Walker is attending the Bread Loaf School of Journalism at Middlebury College, pursuing his master's in English. He's been living and working as a writer in Hoboken. Gillian Flato graduated from Rutger's with a degree in journalism and went to work for Radio Shack in their management training program. She's been promoted to manager of their West Broad Street store. "Tell Jack Alvino I'm still writing scripts." John Mislow lives in NYC and works as a research associate for the National Resource Defense Council, an environmental organization. He also volunteers for the Boys Club of New York, and a local ambulance squad as well as Recording for the Blind. He hopes to enter medical school in the future. Taylor Hwong says, "California is nice, but I'm still not sure about the Californians. Amy and Liz, I had dinner with Heidi Puchner in January. I also saw someone I could swear was Holly Greenberg. Is she out here? I can be reached for the next four years at MSME Department, Hearst Mining Bldg., UC Berkeley, Berkeley, CA 94720." And from Heidi herself, we hear, "Moved to San Francisco. Working in an investment bank. Want to go to business school. Elaine Chou is studying law at Fordham." Christine Grounds writes, "I'm still working at Christie's in NYC which means I've temporarily put my graduate school plans on hold. I'm working ridiculous hours but learning more than I could ever imagine. I love it!" George Paci graduated from Cornell this May with a double major in philosophy and computer science. He's looking for a job in software development because, as he says, "the big philosophy corporations aren't hiring this year!"

From Lauren: Hello everyone, and a belated congratulations to all the college graduates! As embarrassing as it is, this column makes "Return of the Lost Class Secretary, Part II." My apologies about the last issue. I was thrilled to receive some of those little white postcards we all know and love. Unfortunately, by the time they arrived in Oberlin (via N.J.), the Journal's deadline had long come and gone. Thankfully, a few people persisted with the cards. For Karen Fredericks, I'm afraid my graduation tidings are a year overdue. She graduated from Wellesley in three years, and in September she will be starting her second year at University of Pennsylvania Law School. Karen is keeping herself busy over the summer working at the U.S. Attorney's office in Newark. Peter Guzik, rumor has it, and I quote, "miracle of miracles" did everything possible to graduate on time, but somehow missed a core requirement. He is taking one class this summer, while teaching at summer camp. Hang in there, Guze! The same "rumor" source wrote that Debby Jones is home for the summer, and was waiting to hear on a job. I hope the wait proved worthwhile, Debby. Kate Baicker is getting ready to move form one lyy on to the next! She will be a Ph.D. candidate at Harvard in economics, with a National Science Foundation Grant, having just graduated from Yale. Kate is spending the summer in Princeton teaching Kaplan GRE courses (and probably being very glad she won't ever have to take them again). Howard Katz graduated form Colby College in May with a physics major. Having barely stopped to catch his breath, Howard continues to study physics this summer in preparation for some comprehensive exams at University of Massachusetts (Amherst) where he will be a graduate student. Good luck, Howard! I ran into Greg Gordon (with Marcy Webster '92) in the Lodge in Princeton, so I am able to share a little dirt about him. He has graduated from NYU, and this summer, I believe he is going to drive out to Colorado with Marcy. In the fall he is planning to head out to California to look for work doing, guess what! Here's a hint: keep an eye out for him on the TV and movie screens! I bet it won't be long before we see him in something big. Heather Hunter is still out there in the real world. She is working in the academic advising office at Syracuse University, and finishing up her English major. The grapevine says that in her spare time (?!) she is writing the Great American Novel. As for me, I just graduated from Oberlin College, and I will be joining the ranks of Ph.D. hopefuls in the neurobiology department at Cornell (home to many other PDSer's, I hear). For the summer (as of July) I am up in Ithaca, getting to know my way around the town, as well as the lab in which I am working. I am really psyched that I have recently met a fellow flutist in the department who will play duets with me, and from whom I can get the Cornell music scoop. That is about all the news I could collect this time around. Our fifth year reunion will be next summer already. Perhaps we could work towards having a party some time that would be convenient for as many people as possible. Thank you to the folks who did write to me, and to everyone - please let me know what you are doing these days; to make a good full column, and also to satisfy my curiosity.

From other sources we've picked up some more graduation news. Alicia Collins has been named to the 1993 GTE/College Sports Information Directors of America District 1 Academic All-America Women's Second Team for her performance in soccer and lacrosse coupled with her academic standing. She graduated from Bowdoin magna cum laude with a double major in English and Spanish. Laine Alston has played varsity lacrosse at Wesleyan University for four years and won the Jones Award for the team's outstanding player. Carlos Sagebien also had an illustrious four-year athletic career, but in baseball at Hamilton. He played second base and had a team-high 48 assists. He hit a home run in the 1992 Hartwick College Tournament at Doubleday Field in Cooperstown. Having graduated, Carlos will return to PDS as a football and baseball coach while he finishes his pre-med requirements at Rutgers. Susan Lebowitz graduated from Brown with a B.A. in art history. She was travelling in Canada with friends this summer and then trying to find a job. She reports that Nikki Dunn is working as a paralegal in NYC and doing well. Alicia Collins tells us that Dina Johnson is going to law school at the University of Virginia this fall. Lauren Hendler was cast in the Vassar College drama department's production of Female Parts by Franca Rame and Dario Fo. It was presented in February and is a work based on women's stories through the ages. Sarah Ackley writes, "I finally thought our lack of class notes was ridiculous enough to write in myself! Bucknell was lots of fun, but after four years in central PA, I'm ready for a change in pace. I majored in art history, minored in French and religion and this summer am checking out the 'art world' through an internship at the National Museum of American Art in DC. I've been in touch with Carrie Regan who is doing well and planning on driving across the country before thinking about real life. Alicia Collins was captain of the Bowdoin soccer team this year and also doing well when I spoke with her. Heather Roberts and I had a great time living together for two years at school. She is looking to find a job in NYC and will be living with Libby Griffith who is breaking into show business with a job at Showtime TV. That's all the gossip I know!" That's pretty good, Sarah, Thanks.

Jonathan P. Clancy 48 Carson Road Princeton, NJ 08540

From Debby: Greetings from Mountain Camp! I've spent the summer here embarking on numerous mountain adventures while working as a chef at an outdoorsy summer camp that I like to call nature wonderland. It is located in Lake Tahoe, CA long way from Princeton. Thus I was not able to gather a wealth of information. However, I did learn that Timory Howe spent the summer working at the Rochester Medical Center Orthopaedic Unit. At the end of this year, she'll graduate with a B.S. in nursing and will be an R.N. During Fourth of July weekend, she met President Clinton and was on the evening news. Timory also reports that Laura Perhach spent last summer in Spain and is currently travelling around Europe. Julie Howard spent part of the summer in California, then returned to Burlington, VT to take classes (although Timory is not certain). Timory's new address is 102 Sturwood Way, Lawrenceville, NJ 08648: phone 609-895-1299

In other news, Elizabeth Atwood has recently graduated magna cum laude from Bryn Mawr College and has changed her name to Ellis Avery. She has since moved to San Francisco with Pam Mercy and is attending New College in San Francisco for her master's in arts and social change. Her new address is 851 Guerro Street #4, San Francisco, CA 94110. Jason Hollander spent the summer in Europe practising the arts of dubauchery and philandering a la On the Road, a book by Jack Kerouac his father insisted he read before the trip. Jason also reports he ran into Clancy...who? Oh, the other class secretary, I think. Their idle talk unwound the story of Jonathan Clancy's new band, currently a duo with his brother. "They'll be in record stores with Mary Chapin Carpenter '76 within two years mostly because Clancy is Clancy." Lien Price spent the summer doing an internship at a continuing care retirement community, earning a whopping $1.38 an hour. Her major is business administration, thus she was able to receive her position at Westminster Village as an administrative intern, an experience she considers to be invaluable. Laura Welt reports that she spent a busy summer taking chemistry at Trenton State College with Stacy Namm '92 and Michelle Kornhauser '92 and working at the Limited Express. She is looking forward to returning to school for senior year. Well, that's all for right now, as I'm off to cook a few more meals. Get ready for the home stretch — we're seniors again!

From other sources we learn that Chris Baker is finishing up his junior year at Drexel as a photography major. He's commuting from home and for the past two years has been volunteering as EMT crew chief at a local rescue squad 30 to 40 hours a week. He's planning to go to paramedic school within two years after graduation. He free-lances as a photography studio assistant and is looking into photojournalism. Nika Skvir was written up in The Michigan Daily newspaper in March for her dominant play as goalie in a fiercely contested match with Michigan State rival Ohio State. Randy Zagorin writes, "I've been working all summer as an office assistant and then as one of 18 group leaders for the Ithaca College orientation program. I have also been spending time in Ithaca's state parks getting some sun. Hope everyone's summer was good!"

Blair F. Young 339 Mountain View Road Skillman, NJ 08558

From Blair and Meg: Since there are only two people from whom we received news, we're giving them first preference. Only one day before the deadline Blair went to her mailbox to find two lone cards from Matt Kramer and Brian Ferber. Matt Kramer spent this past year in England and is starting at Dickinson in the fall. He says that he is really looking forward to it. Brian is spending his sophomore year abroad at Tel Aviv University in Israel and when he returns he'll be going to Brandeis University for his junior and senior year. His address for the upcoming year is: c/o Overseas Student Program, Tel Aviv University, Student Dormitories, Building B, Ramat Aviv, Tel Aviv ISRAEL 69978. All of our other news about classmates has come to us by word of mouth. Meg spent most of her summer working at the same company as Lisa Lake and Stacey Namm. Meg and Stacey have had time to catch up while at the gym after work. Stacey and Michelle Kornhauser have been taking a summer chemistry class at Trenton State. Apparently Michelle has been sharing an apartment with Kate Prescott. Of course, we also heard that Kate is living in an L.B.I. rental along with Stephanie Mann, Julia Tatsch, Danielle French and Tammy Meade. Jonathan Benedict has also been spending time in L.B.I. this summer. Blair has seated him a couple of times for dinner at Teresa's and Jonathan tells her he has been dividing his time between the beach and work at the Gap in town. Tricia Frank landed a great job in town this summer working at the ever-sobusy University T-shirt shop on Nassau Street. Though she doesn't like to admit it, Tricia has raced in more than one marathon this summer and has had quite a bit of success. (So we hear...) Chandra Bhatnagar stopped into Teresa's the other night and told Blair he has been working as a limo driver all summer and will be bartending in the fall at Vassar. Meg saw Harvey Bradley this fall at Hamilton. He was playing football and she was able to catch him in the locker room. Courtney Batcha also was up for the game at Hamilton. He's spending this summer working as a waiter at the Monmouth County racetrack and living in Bay Head. We'll just take this opportunity to mention another Bay Head resident, Jason Bilanin. He had a good year at Bucknell and played varsity tennis. Marc Wirstrom also played tennis at Hamilton. Sarah Berkman played both soccer and lacrosse at Trinity and coached at the PDS lacrosse camp this summer. Mark Trowbridge finished up his PG year at Choate and will be heading off to Boston College in the fall. Suzy Dolan has been working hard this summer as a counselor at the Reading and Recreation Camp during the day and, in addition, spends her evenings at Flavors Cafe in Pennington. While hiding out in Philadelphia this summer, Joey Scott has been taking classes at U. Penn and living in an apartment on Rittenhouse Square. Dave Wise has been having a great summer catching up with all his buds from grammar school (Montgomery) and has been working at a day camp for the township. Aside from Brian Ferber there are a few other PDS graduates spending time abroad. Word has it that both Dan Safer and Becca Hart are spending their summers in Europe with performing arts groups. Our most interesting info comes from Lauren Shuke. Apparently she and Fred Saab found out that they are distant cousins while they were both attending Carnegie Mellon this year. Talk about coincidence. Earlier this summer we had reason for concern: Blair encountered Jason White at a stoplight in town who seemed pretty upset since his car radio was "on the blitz." This worried us because if Jason taught us all one thing our senior year it was: "If you get confused just listen to the music play." Lastly, it has been rumored that our very own Waldo, a.k.a. Joshua Ticktin, was seen marching in the PDS Halloween parade this past autumn. As for where he is now, we just don't know...Well, this is about all we've heard, and forgive us if we're totally wrong. We'd love it if next time we heard from some more of you. By now everyone has received both letters from Mike Schragger (who is working at a jobs training program for inner city youth) about the collection of books to be donated to the library in Mrs. Jackson's honor. It is never too late to send money in, but we just wanted to take this chance to thank the people who were able to contribute. Mrs. Jackson was a special person to all of us. We hope everyone had a great summer and first year at school. Bye!

Two more cards arrived in the publications office. Mike Scarlata writes that he "had a little trouble my first year at Lehigh. Things can only improve!" And Jamie Francomano says, "I did PDS for 13 years so it's not surprising that the best thing about going to school 'Chez Eli' is probably what's good about going anywhere: New Friends! I also enjoy obscure classes like the history of garden design and Francophone Women Writers of the Caribbean. Hockey takes too much time and is really unhealthy, and even on Yale's JV, I still couldn't beat Lawrenceville, so I quit. Regards."

Candidates Sought for 1994 Alumni Award The Alumni Council asks your help in identifying candidates for the Alumni Award. The selection committee seeks alumni from Miss Fine's School, Princeton Country Day School or Princeton Day School who have given to others in an extraordinary way, people who have gone beyond expectations to fill a need. Their example of achievement, sensitivity and generosity should serve as an inspiration to present PDS students. If you know of someone you would like the committee to consider, please fill out the form below and mail it to: PDS Alumni Office, P. O. Box 75, Princeton, NJ 08542. Thanks for your help! Your name and class: Alumni Award candidate's name and class: Please give reasons for your nomination.

The first artists to showcase their talents at PDS as part of the John D. Wallace, Jr. '78 Guest Lecture Series were Steven Cragg '78, Jim Burke '80 and Tim Johnston '78 who mounted a production on A Career in the Arts last spring.

ATTENTION ALL ARTISTS

In conjunction with the John D. Wallace, Jr. '78 Guest Lecture Series, PDS is creating a bulletin board dedicated to information about the arts, specifically about PDS graduates who are working in any artistic discipline.

The board will feature pictures, samples of work, newsletters and advice. It will offer current students the opportunity to contact us about what we do, how we do it, how we made it and how we feel about it all. We want students to see that artists are alive and working, and that, though the path may not be well-defined, they too can have careers in the arts.

We will offer insight into the inner life of artists. We may share information such as greatest inspirations, most discouraging moments, greatest insights, worst comments made to you about what you do, etc. And, we promise to do it with some humor.

Mentors have been an important part of our success. As alumni we want to provide some guidance for others. But first we need information about you! Send me a postcard with your name, address, phone number and a description of what you're doing. We will follow up with you.

Send your information to: Tim Johnston Transactors Improv Company P.O. Box 2295 Chapel Hill, NC 27515-2295 (919) 942-7998

by Craig C. Stuart '87

Despite a lot that is enticing, Bangkok may be most impressive for its traffic. It is routinely snarled in jams so impenetrable that the streets are easily mistaken for long, thin parking lots. At rush hour the only way to move across town quickly is on a motorcycle, trickling between stranded cars and buses like a marble in a maze. So David Stifel '84 found when he moved here two and a half years ago.

"I tried taking the buses, and to go a kilometer and a half took me 45 minutes, so I started taking motorcycle taxis. It's said that if Vietnam tries to take over Thailand, the government is safe because the tanks won't get through the traffic."

Little could make traffic worse, but a rainy season downpour will. Still talked about here is a day two summers ago when the rain started in the morning and never stopped. David recalls that that evening he had plans to meet some friends for dinner, and so he borrowed a friend's motorcycle and began. "I was wearing a helmet, an anorak and I had plastic covering my legs," he remembers. "And when I got there I was completely soaked. Even my head was wet, and I don't know how that happened, with the helmet on."

Traffic stories like these are really comments on Thailand's astounding economic success of the last ten years. Growth and money have come so quickly that income has surged beyond the infrastructure's ability to handle it; cars have suddenly become affordable to a great many people and yet there is a simple lack of roads on which to drive them.

David is in Bangkok working for the Thailand Development Research Institute Foundation. "TDRI is an independent think tank, and the only one of its kind in Thailand. Being independent means it's not influenced by special interests, and that's really the key," he says. TDRI publishes economic policy research and analysis that move parallel to and, ideal-ly, just ahead of the Thai government. So while David can't solve the traffic problem, he is pulling together research on how Thailand might make the most of coming development opportunities.

Recently the media has been spending a lot of words to herald the approach of an "Asian Century," but it isn't just talk. In the last ten years, David Stifel has tried various modes of transportation through crowded Bangkok.

Thailand's economy has grown at a rate of about 7.5 percent, almost three times as fast as the US economy. The rest of Asia has been equally dynamic, and the result is that US trade with the region is now 40 percent greater than trade with Europe. At the moment, Southeast Asian countries are discussing various cooperative spheres that will augment development, and the US is scoping out ways to get its hooks in. By most accounts, the future of money is here.

But this description is snack food compared to the stuff David is writing for TDRI. He has already co-authored, with TDRI's president, a weighty report titled, Subproject 5: Scheme for Cooperation and Implications for Thailand. Says David, "It looks at Thailand's economic role in the Asia Pacific region, where they fit into the dynamism of the region. Who's going to listen to it? That's another question, but [the paper] is part of the debate."

The chance to give his thoughts to the debate came about three years ago as he was nearing the end of a master's program at Johns Hopkins' School for Advanced International Studies. He was invited to join TDRI in Bangkok. "The timing was perfect because I graduated and was out here the next week."

His words reveal a sense of distance from America, but David is not surprised that he came "out here." He wraps it up neatly, saying simply, "I was born here."

The Stifels lived in Bangkok for 10 years, from 1964 to 1974. David's father was an economist with the Rockefeller Foundation and both David and his sister, Laura '82, went to school here for several years. The city that David remembers from that time is a lot less crowded than the one today. Instead of the roads, he remembers the many canals that once laced the city, waterways which earned Bangkok the nickname Venice of the East.

"My father used to go jogging, and I would follow him on my bicycle. So I have memories of crossing small klongs [canals] on bridges made of bamboo poles." He returned to the comparatively ordinary Great Road bike path when he was nine and soon after started fifth grade at PDS.

Several years later though, at Colgate, David was still thinking of Asia and he decided to study Chinese.

"My father tried to talk me out of it because he thought I wouldn't follow through on it. 'You'll take it for two years and drop it,' he said."

David never dropped it but he admits he needed two years in Taiwan, his junior year and another year after Colgate, to truly learn the language. "You can't learn Chinese in upstate New York," he says now. "You need to reinforce the characters. There weren't even any Chinese restaurants in Hamilton." At SAIS he used his skills to look at practical ways of working within the state planning of mainland China.

David doesn't consider Bangkok to be much of a jump. "I had every intention of coming here. There's a large Chinese community here and the Chinese are important here, as they are everywhere in Southeast Asia." Indeed, it's often said that the Thai-Chinese control most of the money in Bangkok.

Yet David maintains that his work for TDRI focuses less on the money than on the politics that influence its movement. "I'm not, technically, an economist," he says. What is he, technically? "A generalist. They were skeptical of me when I first came to TDRI. I think they viewed me as 'the guy over there doing politics.""

David is almost apologetic when he says that it was the incident of Black May, 1992 that allowed him to show others what he knew. Black May is a term often used to refer to the violent confrontation that took place that month between soldiers and citizens protesting a recent military coup. The four-day crisis left over a hundred demonstrators dead and at least that many (still) unaccounted for, and other TDRI researchers sought David's opinion on how the political uncertainty would play into Thailand's economy. Looking back, he notes that foreign investment did drop for a period immediately following the crisis, and he hopes that's a sign to the military that intervention will interrupt future growth.

Beyond the research, working in an office with Thais reveals all sorts of cultural ends and means. The hierarchy of age is considerable, and David remarks that younger Thais in his office routinely bow their heads as they pass him. "I hate that. They're showing me respect, but I don't think I deserve that kind of respect."

TDRI has run several weekend retreats and David says he values these for getting to know Thai colleagues even while the trips themselves might not be so great. Travelling with Thais, one sometimes wonders if they believe that "getting there" isn't just half the fun, but most of it.

David recalls a four-day trip to Ko

Phi Phi, an island that fulfills any postcard-inspired imagination of the tropics. The bus there took a full day and the group stayed less than 24 hours before getting on another bus to go home. The Thais sang songs most of the time and another westerner on the trip eventually lost his patience for it all, David remembers. The story is noteworthy because Thais themselves avoid anger like the plague. And if you're surrounded by Thais, it's a trait worth emulating.

"I like the Thai culture very much because it is so laid back, so accepting. Thais have told me that I'm very Thai because I'm very jai yen (literally, cool heart) - I don't get upset at things." In Thai society, remaining tolerant at all times is on a par with virtue. The flip side is that there is little allowance for dissent. So communication can be delicate at work where, as David says, "you can't be direct in criticism or, often, even in suggestions." It couldn't have been easy, but it would appear as though David has been successful in adopting some Thai-ness. "Maybe it's not Thai-ness, but a 'diplomatic approach," " he reasons. "That's just the way I am and the way my parents are."

Looking behind the tolerance, David points to the Buddhist belief that, "If you can remove yourself from daily wants and needs you'll see they don't matter. But if everyone was a perfect Buddhist," he continues, "the place would be chaos." Most significant at the moment, in David's opinion, is that this tolerance may be partially responsible for the tremendous income disparity in Thailand. "The income disparity here wouldn't fly in the West."

A more curious aspect of cool hearts, indirect suggestions and Buddhist tolerance is that surface appearance often becomes the only reality that matters.

David recounts a conversation he had with TDRI's president, Narongchai Akrasanee, about a speech given by then-vice-president Dan Quayle on a visit to Thailand. Quayle, typically behind the eight-ball without knowing it, apparently miscalculated with his choice of a red necktie. "Really this was a problem with protocol at the embassy," David says, "But, Narongchai said, 'He should've worn a dark tie because it's a formal occasion.' Then, before speaking, Gen Chatchai, the Prime Minister of Thailand, pulled out speech notes neatly printed on letterhead stationary while Dan Quayle reached into his inside pocket and drew out a yellow legal pad. 'Terrible!' Narongchai said. And I said, 'But Narongchai, what about the speech?' and he said, 'Oh David, this is Thailand, form is much more important than substance."

Narongchai may have been only half-joking, but there can be little doubt about the substance of work at TDRI. Currently David is working on a paper that studies the gnarled European Economic Community and the proposed Canada-US-Mexico bloc, NAFTA, to see how these plans would affect Thailand.

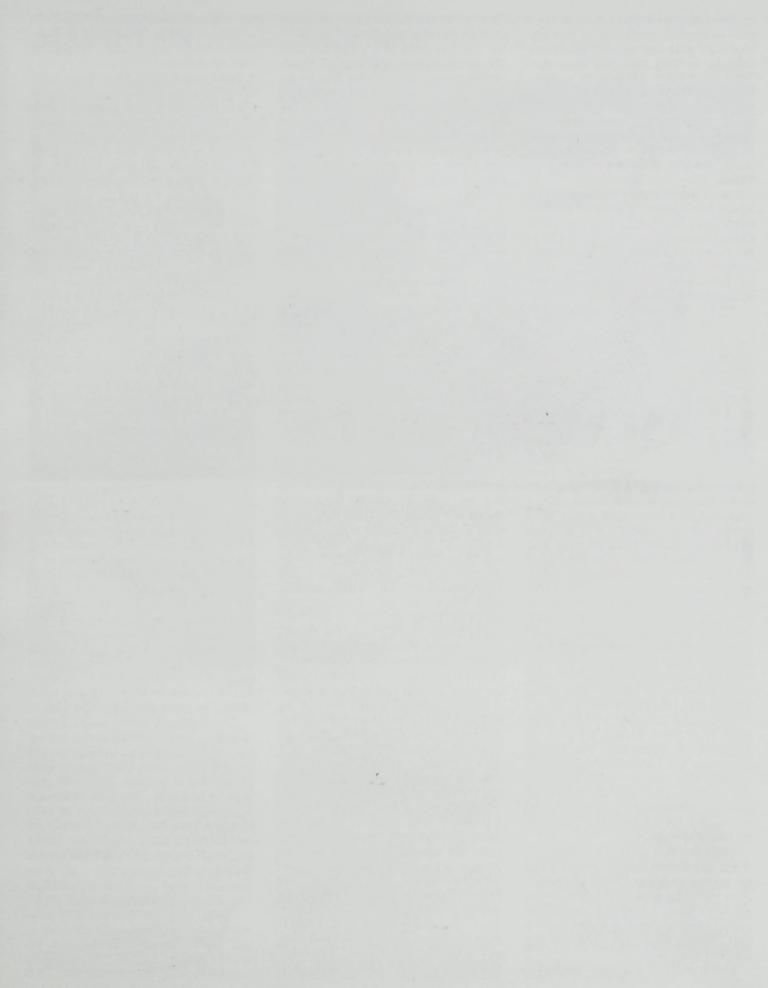

In addition, David has recently been dividing his expertise between TDRI and another job as a research consultant for General Finance and Securities Company, an investment house. So where should you put your money?

David cautions that Bangkok's stock exchange is still a young and speculative market with large investors able to control most of its movement. Moreover, regulation is a little loose. David explains that the Buddhist notion of karma - sort of a cosmic fulfillment of the idea that what goes around comes around - is sometimes taken as a way to rationalize insider trading. "People think that if some privileged information lands on their desk, then they must have [previously] done something good to deserve the good karma."

For David, what goes around definitely comes around where Southeast Asia is concerned. His parents are currently living in the Philippines where his father is the acting director of a fisheries research institute. And this Christmas Laura will return to Bangkok for a visit before they both head to Manila for the holidays. Beyond that, though, David will be returning to the US as he plans to pursue a doctorate in economics. That could mean relearning how to talk bluntly to Americans. But he has reason to believe that some of his Thai-ness might be indelible.

"A couple of months ago, in the morning, I was walking down my soi [street] and I ran into a monk who was out collecting alms. I struck up a conversation and he said, 'You look very Thai.' And I said, 'But what about my big nose?' And he said 'No, you look like you were born here or have lived here for a long time.' And before I could say 'wait!' he was gone. I couldn't work the whole day."
