LETTER FROM Paul J. Stellato, Head of School

Director of College Counseling Sarah Graham always has one eye trained on the next big thing. Several years ago, as she prepared to offer the first in a string of college nights for junior parents, she asked herself this question: Instead of providing for our parents and their children the best, most up-to-date advice from college admissions deans on how to gain admission to their hallowed institutions, what might we learn if we used the night to gain some insight into what colleges are seeing and experiencing once our students pass through their ivy-covered gates? Sarah fashioned an answer to her own question with her choice of speaker for the night: the director of health services from a local, highly selective university.

For nearly an hour, this remarkable health professional told a tale of joy and sorrow: of welcoming to her campus the best and brightest young men and women our country – and the world – could offer to its universities, only to see them undone by the sheer weight of expectation, competition, and....lack of sleep! She described, in sharp detail, a generation of students who had organized their young lives around achieving one goal: gaining admission to one selective university or another; who filled their resumes with AP courses, extra-curricular and community service activities, internships, world travel, and one club after another; and who, having won the prize (a fat envelope in November or May), dragged themselves to the threshold of those ivy-covered gates, unsure of what to do next and unable to recall why they had labored so long and sacrificed so much. A standing-room-only, eager and boisterous audience fell silent, as the canvas painted before them was not of the freshman class at Princeton, Columbia, or Stanford, but of their own sons and daughters.

Several months before, in the accreditation report issue by the visiting team from the Middle States Association of Colleges and Schools, we found this potentially transformative recommendation: The School should establish a system of curricular coordination so that the School's program can reach its full potential. Of course, the recommendation was directed at our academic program and the opportunities present in a curriculum that stretches across 14 grades. But given the Middle States charge; and sensitive to the reality that our children travel a path as much emotional and spiritual as it is academic, we expanded our interpretation of the committee's charge: to build a PreK to 12 health and wellness curriculum to strengthen and support every child, and provide for the balance and perspective they would need to manage disappointment and enjoy success. Conquering the daunting task became the work of our health/wellness/human sexuality task force. Its efforts and inquiry are the stuff of this Journal's focus.

As I look back to that college counseling program and reflect upon the work completed last year by the task force, I am struck by both the progress we have made and the questions we have struggled to answer. Perhaps my disquiet comes from the uncomfortable truth washing over every word of the task force's first-year report: looking always to their teachers, parents, friends, and peers for guidance and direction, our students may feel that the only answer is to try harder, work longer, and sleep less. Or, to paraphrase Walt Kelly's Pogo: we have met the taskmaster, and he is us.

So you see the dilemma. The work of the task force thus far has been to understand, as fully as we can, our students' lives. We have asked them to tell us a great deal about themselves, and they have done just that. Armed as we are with this trove of information and insight; and dedicated as we are to growing and graduating bright, productive, curious, and healthy young adults, we now endeavor to build a curriculum – and a school culture – that does just that.

Sustainability at Princeton Day School: An Update

As part of Princeton Day School's sustainability initiative, the cafeteria operated by Flik Dining Services received a three-star certification from the Green Restaurant Association. Only 15 other schools below the college level nationally have received this certification and only five schools have three stars.

Princeton Day School and Flik have partnered for the past several years to create a more sustainable food service to provide delicious, healthy, fresh cooked meals in a way that is less harmful to the environment. "Every part of a student's experience at Princeton Day School should be educational," said Liz Cutler, Sustainability Coordinator and Upper School English teacher, "and lunch is no exception."

The Green Restaurant Association certifies restaurants all over the United States and grades institutions in the areas of water efficiency, waste reduction and recycling, sustainable furnishings and building materials, sustainable food, energy, disposables, and chemical and pollution reduction. Ms. Culter went on to note, "We live in a world where fewer and fewer children sit down to a family meal and where at least a quarter of all Americans eat fast food every day. We have an opportunity here to model healthy eating habits and help students understand that everything we do, including how and what we eat, has an effect on the environment."

Among the many reasons Princeton Day School received this certification are the high percentage of locally purchased foods, the successful composting program, the many recipes that are nutritious, but low on the food chain, the reusable utensils and dishware, the daily food cooked from scratch, and the green cleaning supplies. The School achieved 177 out of 200 possible points.

PDS EnAct Club members created the posters to promote the second annual eco-conference at PDS in May.

"The next goal is to achieve four stars," notes Ms. Cutler.

In addition, Ms. Cutler and Chef Brian Mochal of FLIK announced a new source for all beef served in the cafeteria: Meyer Natural Angus (<http://meyernaturalangus.com/our-promise>). Ms. Cutler remarked, "The beef now served in our cafeteria will be from animals who are raised more healthfully, treated more humanely, and processed more carefully than most American beef. It should also taste better."

"Our Future, Our Challenge" Eco-Conference at PDS

The Upper School student club, Environmental Action Club (EnACT), organized their second eco-conference on campus in May for fellow students and community members. EnACT assembled an impressive line-up of speakers, including

Barn Week at PDS

At the end of April, Pretty Brook Farm was transformed into a working barn, complete with visiting animals, arts & crafts, and butter churning. Lower School Science teacher Aaron Schomburg organized this highly anticipated annual event with teacher Jess Hala, which integrated animal stewardship, square dancing, making yarn from raw wool, and more into the Lower School curriculum. The Middle and Upper School science and arts classes also took advantage of Barn Week and connected it to their studies.

Commencement and Carlton Tucker h'13

On Friday, June 7, the rains came, and commencement was held in the Lisa McGraw '44 Ice Rink for the first time in many years. It was a wonderful ceremony, celebrating the class of 2013, and Head of Upper School Carlton Tucker, who retired after twenty years in the role. Mr. Tucker was presented with a diploma as an honorary member of the Class of 2013 by Head of School Paul Stellato to the delight of everyone in the packed house.

Dr. Cornel West at PDS

Dr. Cornel West P '18, was a surprise guest speaker at the opening meetings for faculty and staff in August. He spoke to a rapt audience of the importance of the ancient Greek concept of Paideia, and about the vital importance of educating our children in kindness, tenderness, morality, and virtue. It was an impassioned, intellectually stimulating presentation that set an inspiring tone for the school year to come.

US Fall Play "Anon(ymous)" Nominated for 8 Awards, Wins 2

The 2012 fall production of "Anon(ymous)" by Naomi Iizuki earned a record eight nominations in the statewide 2013 New Jersey Theater Awards, and took home two awards: Best Ensemble Performance and Best Director for Stan Cahill. These awards are given to non-musical plays produced by secondary schools. Mr. Cahill remarked, "Approximately 50 private and public schools participated in this competition which 'Honors Excellence in High School Drama in New Jersey.'" He went on, "We led the state with eight nominations, which was a remarkable for our first entry. These awards have put us firmly on the Performing Arts map in front of programs from all over New Jersey."

Imagine the Possibilities at PDS

Imagine the Possibilities, the beloved school-wide program made possible through the John D. Wallace, Jr. '78 Memorial Guest Artist Series Fund, brings authors, illustrators, and poets to Princeton Day School to work directly with students each spring. The year, the School was honored to welcome poet and author Allan Wolf, author and illustrator David Wiesner (whose work was shown in the Anne Reid '72 Art Gallery), and author Linda Sue Park. These artists were gracious and incredibly inspiring, working directly with students in all three divisions.

The 8th Grade Musical: "Honk!"

In May, the 8th grade class dominated the McAneny stage with their production of "Honk!" based on the classic Hans Christian Andersen fairy tale, The Ugly Duckling.

The 4th Grade Operetta: "The Pushcart War"

This year's 4th grade operetta, "The Pushcart War," took place in March. Originally written by former Head of the Lower School Sarah Schwiebert h'05 and updated this year by 4th grade teacher Daniel Cohen, this show combined great music and as many starring roles as children. A special guest appearance by Head of School Paul Stellato was an unexpected surprise.

Anne Reid '72 Art Gallery Exhibition Schedule 2013/2014

Princeton Day School Visual Arts & Design Faculty — Extravagant Media

October 15 through November 15

Addressing several contemporary themes in painting, drawing, photography, ceramics, sculpture, woodworking and video will be inspirational work created by Princeton Day School faculty members David Burkett, Eileen Hohmuth-Lemonick, Jerry Hirniak, Chris Maher, Susan Reichlin and Stephanie Stuefer.

Adam Welch —

Deconstructing the Local

November 25 through December 20

Ceramicist Adam Welch uses the brick as a primary object. For Mr. Welch, the brick is characteristic of postmodern appropriation and the marriage of concept and form. His work has a number of metaphorical implications in that he creates sculptures where the brick can be more critically engaged. Mr. Welch is a Lecturer in Ceramics at the Lewis Center for the Arts, Princeton University.

折り紙 — Golden Nuggets

January 13 through January 30

While evidence of origami goes back to the Sung Dynasty in 1000 CE, contemporary interpretations of ori "folding" gami "paper" will be exhibited. This exhibition will feature a loan of juried work from 2013 Origami USA

Collection, folded cardboard furniture created by Zach Rotholz from New Haven, Connecticut, and folded paper installations from PDS students.

Ritter, Aanrud, Pirello — East West: A Remix of Social Progress

February 10 through March 6

After graduating from the Lewis Center at Princeton University in 2013, Samantha Ritter moved to New York to pursue her career. At Princeton Day School, she will construct site-specific armatures, or skeletons of wood, that project from the wall.

Los Angeles artist Liv Aanrud creates soft sculptures out of fabric — her abstractions are woven into irregular shapes using flannel, burlap, wool and felt. Samantha Pirello is a painter studying at Yale University's Graduate School of Art.

Paul Zelinsky —

In Search of (Im)Possibilities

March 31 through April 25

Imagine the Possibilities artist Paul Zelinsky studied at Yale University where he took a course on the history and practice of the picture book taught by renowned author Maurice Sendak. Zelinsky also studied in Rome and received a master's degree from Tyler School of Art in Philadelphia. Among his awards, he has received a Caldecott Medal for Rapunzel. He will be a visiting artist at the school for two days.

The Student Exhibition May 5 through May 23

This exhibit will be shown in the gallery, arts atrium, Upper School, Middle School and Lower School hallways. It will feature highlights from work created by students throughout the year in painting, drawing, printmaking, sculpture, photography, ceramics, woodworking, video, architecture, collage, installation and assemblage. A huge amount of creativity is celebrated around the entire school during this exhibit.

Princeton Day School Senior Projects

May 28 through June 6

Visual Art Senior Projects that have been created working with faculty in the Visual & Design Art Department will hang in the gallery for the final exhibition before Commencement.

This issue of the Journal focuses on the health and wellness of our students, and as Director of Athletics I see firsthand how participating on sports teams and making time for overall physical fitness can have such a positive impact on our kids.

Athletics are also a great motivator. I find it can be the thing that gets our students out of bed in the morning. They may want to try something new, aim to accomplish something extra, or improve their performance in some way. They may want to showcase their skills or reach new goals.

You should know that our Princeton Day School Panther athletes worked hard over the summer to hone their skills for the upcoming seasons. Each one of them had his or her own reasons for the amount of extra work they put in, and those reasons motivated them to hit the field or track or weight room with extra vigor.

Over the summer, I was counting the days until our Panthers could spring back into action. The summer is a great time for relaxation and reflection, and I spent a good amount of time thinking about how much I look forward to seeing how our young players mature in their time away from school once they return to campus for pre-season in late August.

I know one thing that gets me out of bed in the morning: the chance to see our young students strive, struggle and achieve out on our playing fields. It's the key to being healthy and well.

Hope to see you on the sidelines,

Tim Williams
Director of Athletics

Boys Varsity Tennis Record 9W – 2L

Coaches Awards – Josiah Meekins '15 and Scott Altmeyer '16

Varsity Award – Neeraj Devulapalli '14

The boys varsity tennis team fought hard this spring to grab one-third of the NJISAA Prep B Tournament championship title with Pennington and Montclair Kimberley. It was Scott Altmeyer '16 at third singles who came through for PDS, defeating an opponent from Oratory. "We don't play in a conference, so our whole year is about the county and state [tournaments]," said Coach Will Asch about the importance of winning the prep title.

Girls Varsity Lacrosse Record 6W – 5L

Coaches Awards – Hannah Levy '13 and Corinne Urisko '13

Varsity Award – Zeeza Cole '13

Panther girls varsity lacrosse team was tough competition throughout the spring, posting impressive wins over Blair Academy, Hun School, and Rutgers Prep. The team's senior players set the tone for the 2013 season. "The seniors did so much to bring the team back to the team," asserted Coach Jill Thomas, whose Class of 2013 standouts included Ellen Bartolino, Zeeza Cole, Lizzie Frieder, Louise Hutter, Carolyn Kossow, Hannah Levy, Cami McNeely, Sarah Trigg, and Connie Urisko. Coach Thomas looks forward to the contributions that the incoming seniors will make in the next season. Hannah Levy '13, PDS' low attack, is now playing at MIT.

Boys Varsity Lacrosse Record 9W – 2L

Coaches Awards – Bump Lisk '13 and Derek Bell '13

Varsity Award – Cody Triolo '13

The boys varsity lacrosse team posted an outstanding record on their way to a demanding 14-day stretch that included a state Prep B title game and the Mercer County Tournament semi-finals. Although championship titles were elusive, the fun and unique team dynamic sparked memories that will endure. Coach Tuckman, who feels this year's senior legacy will impact the program for years to come, commented, "This senior class has really set a tone and an expectation for what we looked to accomplish for the ten years that I have been a part of this program." Midfielder Cody Triolo '13 is now playing for Lehigh University.

Varsity Baseball Record 9W – 12L

Coaches Awards – Jake Alu '15 and Cole McManimon '15

Varsity Award – B.J. Dudeck '13

PDS right hander Cole McManimon '15 emerged as one of the top pitchers in the area, posting a 6-2 record with an impressive 1.94 ERA and 45 strikeouts in his 47 outings on the mound. The versatile Jake Alu '15 had a strong season at bat for PDS recording a .309 batting average along with posting two wins on the mound for the Panthers. Coach O'Brien credited his seniors, Rob Colton, B.J. Dudeck, Brad Freid, Alec Jones, Rob Hrabchak, Greg Auerbach, and Ben Weiner with giving the team some real stability. "We had a lot of tight games that could have gone either way," remarked the coach, "and the 9-12 record was not indicative of how we played." There are good things on the horizon for PDS with strong returning players on the roster. Centerfielder B.J. Dudeck '13 has is now playing ball for Virginia Military Institute.

Attend Edible Schoolyard Academy in Berkeley in July

Liz Cutler, Pam Flory, and Katy Terry journeyed to the Edible Schoolyard Academy in Berkeley, California to learn more about integrating the PDS organic garden into curriculum in all three divisions, with a particular focus on the Middle School. The Edible Schoolyard Academy is an outgrowth of the Edible Schoolyard Project, created by leading chef Alice Waters and former principal of Martin Luther King, Jr. Middle School Neil Smith, and serves to teach sustainability through the lens of a school lunch program, which includes fresh ingredients from a school garden. Ms. Flory remarked, "It was an amazing, almost magical experience. There were about 90 people from all around the world sharing information. And this is information we can put in action almost immediately." She went on, "As Alice Waters pointed out in her presentation at the Academy, food is a great equalizer among students from different backgrounds. It is a great way in with kids. You are able to use food as a teaching tool, and the students are being educated without even realizing it."

LS Teacher Bev Gallagher presented "Comprehension Instruction through Children's Literature: The Key to Unlocking the Common Core Standards" at the Rutgers Graduate School of Education's Center for Literacy Development Annual Conference on Reading and Writing in the spring.

The Robert C. Whitlock Award for Distinguished Teaching

Established in 1995, the Robert C. Whitlock Award for Distinguished Teaching is the school's highest honor for a member of the faculty. This annual award is presented to the Princeton Day School faculty member who best demonstrates the exceptional teaching skills, devotion to students, courtesy, zeal for knowledge and pursuit of excellence; and the qualities of gentleness, patience, dedication, and professionalism that were the hallmarks of Bob Whitlock's 42-year teaching career.

This year's award was presented to LS teacher Bev Gallagher. Here are excerpts from Head of School Paul Stellato's remarks at the award presentation in June:

"Through and in language, Bev Gallagher awakens for her students the world they will inhabit gratefully for the rest of their lives. In her iconic programs, she has both woven words and gathered words. Language — woven or gathered — is the tie that binds her to them and them to her, as it is clear that while her third graders may be with her for just short of nine months, they never really leave her, nor she them.

Through the support and generosity of the Wallace Family, Bev launched — and has been the guiding force behind — one of our school's signature programs: Imagine the Possibilities. Through her efforts to bring to all of us — students and faculty alike — artists, writers, and poets of renown, she has revealed to us the artists' hands and heart in the act of creation.

For her work at Princeton Day School, she has been honored with both the David C. Bogle Award for Excellence in Teaching; and a year-long sabbatical, during which she committed herself to one of her favorite professional pursuits: being a teacher to teachers.

She was selected as the 1999-2000 New Jersey Non-Public School Teacher of the Year by the Council for American Private Education. And, in that same year, she received the Barbara Juster Esbensen Award, a national award presented in recognition of the poetry produced by students in her classroom, and for outstanding teaching in the field of poetry.

An essential resource in the graduate schools of education at the University of Pennsylvania, Columbia University, and Rider College, Bev has presented often at both Teachers' College and at annual meetings of the National Council for Teachers of English; and she has been honored for her classroom achievements by her alma mater, Penn State University. Congratulations on this well-deserved award."

Theater Director Stan Cahill Creates Stories in Haiti

Theater Director Stan Cahill spent the first few weeks of summer in Haiti developing and implementing a workshop he designed called "Building Community through Storytelling." The workshop, designed to introduce storytelling curriculum to earthquake refugees, HIV+ and abandoned children in Haiti, was a partnership between Mr. Cahill and Worldwide Orphans (www.wwo.org), with professional development support from Princeton Day School. Working with students aged 2-22, Mr. Cahill introduced ideas of how to engage students in a storytelling format and, in the process, seamlessly combined community service and the arts. "I believe in the idea of a 'Citizen Artist' and my future plans include developing this kind of curriculum here in our community, at a senior center or with at-risk youth," remarked Mr. Cahill.

Second grade teacher Paris McLean '00 and MS Math and Science teacher Alesia Klein served on a panel at the Research Institute for Learning and Development's 28th Annual Learning and Development Conference at Harvard University in the spring. Their presentation on executive function strategies for classroom implementation was well-received. "We received wonderful feedback and learned even more about mindsets and learning styles," remarked Mr. McLean. This presentation came out of the work done through the Bogle award that Mr. McLean and Ms. Klein received in 2011.

Liz Cutler Presents on Sustainability Issues

In the spring, Sustainability Coordinator Liz Cutler gave presentations at the National Association of Independent Schools (NAIS) Conference on both sustainability at PDS and the School's organic garden. In addition, Ms. Cutler and FLIK Chef Brian Mochnal spoke at the New Jersey Farm to School Conference, and she spoke at the Green Schools Alliance Conference on "Sustainability in Teaching, Practice, and Design: A Whole School Approach" at the Allen-Stevenson School in New York City.

From the US Science Department: The PDS Periodic Table

US Science teachers Barbara Maloney and Jane Spencer decided to create a Princeton Day School Periodic Table that would be unique to the school and community. Composed of "elemental" students, faculty, and staff, the table has become a destination on campus. "We posted a sign-up sheet so that students could request elements. The only requirement was that they take a photograph that included them and their 'element' in some creative way.... One boy asked for Zinc because it was his last name. A boy named Nick wanted Nickel, of course. A lacrosse player had his stick made of Scandium. A boy wearing his Yale sweatshirt became Yttrium. And the fun began," remarked Mrs. Maloney.

Teaching Wellness, Teaching Balance

Princeton Day School Kicks Off an Ambitious PreK-12 Health, Wellness, and Human Sexuality Curriculum

by Kathryn Rosko

Princeton Day School attracts some of the most intelligent, highly motivated, and ambitious students in the country. Among the many things PDS students share with their peers in top independent schools across the country are the demands of gaining admission into the most highly selective colleges and universities in the nation. As Head of School Paul Stellato mentions in his letter in this issue, this focus can lead to extremely busy schedules packed with AP courses and extra-curriculars, such as community service clubs and sports teams. This charge to succeed comes at a high cost (notably, the cost of sleep) to our students, and may ultimately and unfortunately lead to a “what now” moment upon arrival at the college of their dreams.

Should a school be responsible for teaching students how to live a well-balanced, healthy life, in addition to helping them reach their academic goals?

The answer at Princeton Day School is a resounding yes. The School is more committed than ever to truly nurturing the mind, body, and character of each student—as our mission states—and is in the process of implementing a full-scale, state-of-the-art health, wellness, and sexuality initiative.

Mr. Stellato was inspired to launch this initiative when he attended an event several years ago organized by Director of College Counseling Sarah Graham, who was curious to hear from a director of health services at a top university about student life after admission. Mr. Stellato noted, “The response to this college night was powerful and unanticipated. The statistics were stark and the responses were dramatic. It dawned on me that what we were seeing was the future of our students. I could feel the concern of the parents, and it made me think about the responsibility of the school.”

Once the idea was in motion, things came together quickly and fortuitously. Mr. Stellato explained, “I had been speaking with former Head of the Upper School Carlton Tucker about creating a Dean of Students position as I felt that, as a school, we needed to address the non-academic, non-athletic side of our students’ lives. We were fortunate to have US Spanish teacher Doug McLane step into this role.” In 2012, Mr. Stellato formally asked Mr. McLane (who is currently Upper School Division Head at Saddle River Day School) to serve as Health, Wellness & Sexuality Chair and to assemble a committee across divisions and departments to begin work on the initiative.

In addition, the Academic Advisory Council of PDS had been reviewing the school’s academic schedule and made the recommendation to reduce the requirement of PE from four years to two years. Mr. Stellato explained, “It became reasonable to ask: what program should we be implementing now?” This too became an impetus for a wide-ranging change in the school-wide health and wellness curriculum.

Building an Innovative Curriculum at Princeton Day School

Mr. McLane assembled the Committee members from across the divisions of the school, as well as from the counseling, health, and deans’ offices. The

Should a school be responsible for teaching students how to live a well-balanced, healthy life, in addition to helping them reach their academic goals?

Committee included School Counselor Rob Tuckman, MS Spanish teacher Rachel Kamen, Garden Coordinator Pam Flory, PE Department Chair Mark Adams, MS Math teacher and Dean Donna Zarzecki, School Nurse Nina Keller, MS & US Music teacher Andrew Schmidt, US Science teacher Barbara Maloney, LS 1st grade teacher Heather Maione, and LS 2nd grade teacher and Math Coordinator Susan Ferguson.

The Committee immediately set out to accomplish the following tasks: to examine the PreK-12th grade health and wellness curriculum at Princeton Day School; to determine where the school was excelling in these topics, and where it could improve; and, ultimately, to build a leading, innovative curriculum at Princeton Day School.

The group decided to take three steps toward achieving the goals set before them. First, they met together and with faculty and staff to gather information and examine the priorities, strengths, and needs of the current program. Next, they wrote a survey to send to other independent, coeducational, PreK-12 schools across the nation to find out how they handled health and wellness at their schools. Finally, they researched national student surveys and administered the Independent Health Survey Check (IHSC) survey to students in grades 6-12.

Mr. McLane noted of the Committee's work: "Through meetings and conversations we had throughout the year, these faculty and staff members became more informed of the programs in place in each division, some of which they may not have known about before. This interdivisional collaboration was really something to celebrate."

The Current Core Curriculum

The Committee reviewed the current curriculum and determined that PDS has solid health and wellness curricula in all three divisions. In the Lower School, wellness topics such as nutrition, self-esteem, hygiene, online etiquette, bullying, and sleep are discussed in the general classrooms with students. In addition, LS students take classes in the PDS organic garden, learning about healthy eating habits, sustainability, and stewardship of natural resources. In the Middle School, 5th and 6th grade students take a RAP class, which addresses topics such as conflict resolution, binge drinking, peer pressure, sex education, social media, and nutrition. Princeton Day School 7th and 8th graders take an H.E.V. (Health, Education, Values) class which provides age-appropriate information on topics ranging from self-esteem to the prevention of substance abuse. In the Upper School, all 9th graders participate in Peer Group program, which pairs dedicated faculty and carefully selected seniors to mentor and guide the new US students on issues like peer pressure, academic stress, drug and alcohol abuse, and relationships. There is also one trimester of health class required for all 10th graders, which includes an introduction to the concept of health, substance abuse, human sexuality, sexually transmitted diseases, contraception, and nutrition. In addition to

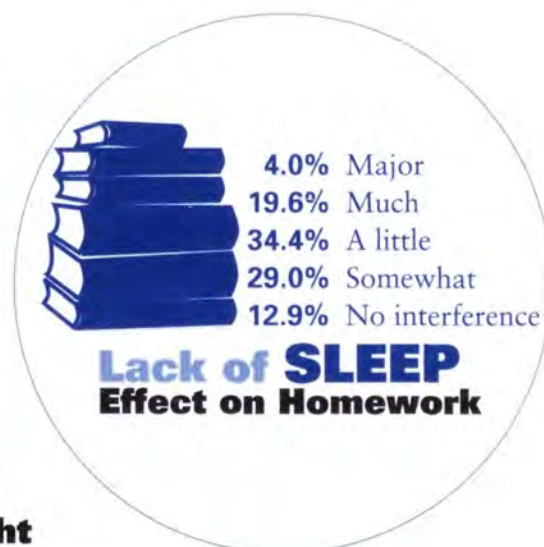

"The importance of wellness struck me when I attended a conference where counselors from a top university talked about how some of the best-prepared students in the country have sought help to deal with significant emotional and stress-related needs."

Average amount of SLEEP per night

these courses, there are other scheduled health and wellness programs throughout the year, including as the Hi-Tops seminar on substance abuse for Upper School students, and guest lecturers who often speak on topics of race, gender, ethnicity, religion, financial circumstance, and sexual orientation.

Though the Committee was heartened by the programming in place in the three divisions, the group observed the curriculum, as a whole, needs a unifying force and vision. Mr. McLane noted, "The good news is that we have space carved out in the schedule in each division—the challenge is how best to use these spaces. We need to ensure that the programs progress naturally between divisions."

Working with Other Independent Schools

Several of the schools the Committee contacted responded and some had great information to share on their health and wellness curricula but most schools, interestingly, wrote asking for help to build or strengthen their existing programs.

Mr. Stellato was struck by how little work was being done in other independent day schools in this area. "The bad news and the good news is that the field is wide open. When we heard back from our colleagues, we realized that we will have to find our way on our own," he said.

Mr. McLane concurred, and added, "PDS, in conducting this work, is poised to be a leader in the independent school world for asking these questions and doing this work. Few day schools that we heard from are giving serious consideration to their programs and to developing new, innovative ideas, so we have the opportunity to share the good work we are doing here."

The Committee made a recommendation for Princeton Day School to possibly spearhead a consortium of day schools that could work together to collaborate and exchange ideas and information on the topic of health and wellness programming.

How Do Our Own Students Rate Us?

Princeton Day School students responded to the two surveys (one for students in grades 6-8, and one for students in grades 9-12), and the results were illuminating. Mr. Stellato noted, "I knew how important the survey results were going to be—we really needed to hear directly from our students. The Committee went about it in the right way: we set aside the time to conduct the surveys and we prepared our students. And we were rewarded by really honest answers."

Mr. Stellato went on, "I learned three things from the survey results: one, our students are healthy, happy, and high-functioning—there was a lot of optimism present in the results; two, starting as early as 6th grade, our students are feeling enormous pressure to perform at the highest level; and three, nobody is getting enough sleep."

The results also illustrated to the Committee that many aspects of the school's current program are effective. The student survey indicated favorable marks in the areas of maintaining strong relationships with friends, parents, and adults at school; broad participation with volunteering; high levels of academic achievement; relatively low participation in smoking and sexual activity in comparison with national averages; and positive physical fitness.

The results from the students also highlighted areas that need further attention in the Middle and Upper Schools. These issues included difficulty getting enough sleep, dealing with stress and academic pressure, handling bullying (both in school and online), receiving proper nutrition, and substance abuse.

The Committee gathered several times to discuss the student survey results and determined that they were invaluable in helping identify gaps in the curriculum and assessing how to address these critical wellness themes with students in an effective way.

Where We Are Heading

Once the Committee compiled all of the results of their work, they presented these findings to the entire faculty and staff, as well as the Board of Trustees, and made recommendations for the future, such as beginning work tying together the curriculum through divisions, drafting a mission statement, and hiring a health and wellness coordinator to oversee the program.

Mr. Stellato is greatly encouraged by the work of the Committee and emphasizes the short-term goals: "We want to accomplish two important things in the next year: we want to create a state-of-the-art health, wellness, and sexuality curriculum for grades PreK-12, and we want to develop student, faculty, and parent programming on topics of health, wellness, and sexuality." He adds, "Though this initiative has proved to be tougher than it initially seemed, we are forging a path and making our way toward something powerful."

The I and the iPhone

By Shira Concool '06

It has been about a decade now, but I still recall the happy anticipation with which I entered Mr. Freedholm's Sacred Tradition's class to meditate. For the first five minutes we turned off the lights, closed our eyes, and found ourselves in a guided meditation. During a hectic school day those precious moments taught me to slow my mind's rapid pace. In a constantly moving, college preparatory environment where the stakes felt so high, I enjoyed those moments of peace that forced me to be present and take a real look at how I was doing.

Now as an adult, I realize that in those moments of meditation I was beginning to practice mindfulness. While finishing my Master's degree in Counseling for Mental Health and Wellness at New York University, I developed a theoretical program using Mindfulness-Based Stress Reduction (MBSR) for improving mental health. MBSR can serve a role in educational settings because it forces students to learn how to be present in the moment. This awareness, in turn, creates positive outcomes for overall wellbeing. In a world of iPhones, instant email access,

Learning how to slow down thoughts and actions could curb many teen distresses.

As a snarky, intellectualizing teenager, I thought I knew all the elements of a "healthy lifestyle." I recognized the importance of plenty of sleep, small and frequent meals, exercise, and positive interpersonal relationships. Yet, how often did I stay up late studying for an AP test, finishing a paper, or gossiping on instant messenger? Can I even count the number of times I ate quickly and mindlessly to run off to the next activity? The threat of a B+ or being left out felt much more urgent than some illness in middle age. My few moments of meditation were perhaps so welcome because they combated these daily stresses.

and a preference of texting over talking, being present is not a high priority. Yet from what I have seen in my work with adolescents, perhaps it should be.

The lack of presence in today's students often aggravates issues of insomnia, eating disorders, sexual health concerns, and academic and social pressures. Learning how to slow down thoughts and actions could curb many teen distresses. In my work as a counselor of young adults, I see how they struggle with the issue of identity. Who am I and what are my values? Who do I want to spend time with and why? How do I want to spend my time? What are my goals? Do the "should's,"

"must's," and "have to's," that plague me originate in my own mind; or do they belong to my parents, teachers, or peers? Young adults often enter my office with these questions. Youth who can begin to answer them are more likely to reach a state of wellness. Yet, especially for high school students, I wonder who has time for such questions, when SATs loom and the lacrosse scout is coming to watch the next tournament?

In my role as a mental health provider, I have found it useful to introduce concepts of mindfulness and self-awareness as a long term lifestyle. This proves difficult when modes of communication change more rapidly than a middle school boy's voice! The introduction of the smartphone means that adolescents have constant updates on the status of their friends and family. There is pressure to share thoughts and emotions on Facebook, Twitter, and even through photos on Instagram, without processing them first. Students have many modes to express themselves but little means of face-to-face feedback. Without this processing, feelings of anxiety, sadness, and anger are left to disrupt identity development. These feelings, as I often tell clients, are not inherently bad yet they do need to be explored. The best way to do this is to begin by slowing down and actually naming the emotions.

Practicing mindfulness is not easy as an adult, yet imagine the effect if we began teaching it in preschool?

Practicing mindfulness in this way is not easy as an adult, yet imagine the effect if we began teaching it in preschool? Princeton Day School has the unique opportunity to follow young people from the time they are barely learning their ABC's to the moment when they cross the stage to receive their diplomas at Colross. The privilege of having students throughout their primary and secondary education makes a case for consistency in education on physical and mental health throughout the Lower, Middle and Upper schools. Dialogue between the division heads and teachers can ensure that information on physical and mental health is being dispersed through an age-appropriate and comprehensive health curriculum.

In addition, although it may cause some to blush, critical to this curriculum is a discussion of sexual health. As a former intern at the Sexuality Information and Education Council of the US (SIECUS), I pored through dozens of sexual health curricula. I realized that what was missing most from these curricula was accurate information. Many health curricula detour from basic facts due to social stigma. A core component of MBSR and of another therapeutic modality, Cognitive Behavioral Therapy, is the belief that people live healthier lives when they understand the way their bodies and minds work. There is so much political hoopla around the culture of perfection (in bodies and in grades) and shame surrounding sexuality that many students go through school with unanswered questions.

As an alumna, I am pleased that Princeton Day School is now working hard to create a health and wellness curriculum that can span the divisions, bring continuity of knowledge, and challenge students to learn to relax and think about who they want to be. In a culture where even supposedly meditative practices such as yoga can become competitive and unhealthy, it is essential that students be given the academic space to question and explore their minds and bodies. Growing up is ultimately about creating an adult identity. In order to help students create this whole and comfortable sense of self we must begin where PDS always does: in the classroom.

From the Archives: Dress Code Mirrors Attitudes

By Linda Maxwell Stefanelli '62

The Class of 1968 as seniors

The struggle to define just what constitutes appropriate dress for students has been an issue ever since Miss Fine's School opened well over a century ago. It is a debate that still excites strong feelings about taste, style, independence, and personal choice. "Nothing ever works perfectly," says former Head of Upper School Sandy Bing, who was part of many spirited Community Council meetings in the seventies and eighties. "No matter what the dress code is, there will always be a small percentage of students who try to take advantage and stretch the spirit of the code. The reason discussion about the dress code (and the Honor Code for that matter) continues to come up is because there will always be questions about whether either is really working. For me, the real value of those discussions was the dialog among students, faculty and administrators concerning responsibility: personal responsibility for one's own actions, responsibility to and for one's peers, and responsibility to the institution."

PCD circa 1962

Miss Fine's School

In the December 1921 Link, junior Dorothy Reeves made a similar point when she cautioned, "We should be careful about our dress, too. Silk dresses and fancy stockings may be correct for afternoon social affairs but they are certainly not created for school. The real lady wears quiet and inconspicuous clothing and above all avoids the use of cosmetics. This greatly cheapens a girl and, of course, cheapens the school she attends."

While the use of cosmetics gained acceptance after World War II, girls continued to wear dresses or skirts and blouses, most in materials that required dry cleaning or ironing. On cold days they added sweaters or school blazers and wore stockings or knee socks with flat-heeled shoes. Sneakers were reserved for gym and team sports. School uniforms were an option that was often considered but never adopted.

Princeton Country Day School

Founded in 1924 and modeled on the English public school, PCD required that older boys wear jackets and ties. Alumni recall that if a boy forgot his tie, he was sent home — on foot — to retrieve it and had to make up the lost class time after school.

A 1963 letter to parents included the following guidelines: "All boys are requested to dress neatly and sensibly for class attendance. Boys in Forms IV, V, and VI (grades 7, 8, and 9) should wear coats and ties; younger boys (grades 4-6) may wear sweaters, 'shorts,' or gray and khaki 'longs.' No blue jeans, please! A school blazer may be bought but is optional. We expect high but reasonable standards of dress at all times."

Princeton Day School

Dress codes from the founding schools carried over to PDS but were soon challenged by changing attitudes. The first three years of the seventies saw the most significant changes to students' appearance in the School's history. The turbulent national mood and the birth of the youth movement coincided with an increased number of boys in the Upper School, causing Community Council to lobby against jackets and ties. In 1970, after much thoughtful discussion among administrators, faculty and students, and two parent polls, the rules were modified as follows.

"Boys . . . are expected to dress as gentlemen — neatly and cleanly. Boys are required to wear shirts with collars, slacks (not blue jeans - dungarees), socks, and shoes each day to school. Ties and jackets are recommended, but not required.

"Girls' dress should correspond in formality to that of the boys. Traditional skirts, sweaters, blouses and simple dresses are recommended. Extreme jewelry or makeup or play clothes are prohibited.

"Boys' (and girls') hair should be neat and clean and out of the eyes. Beards, mustaches and sideburns must be kept neat, clean and trimmed. Each athletic coach has the right to establish the hair length of team members for reasons of personal health. Shoes will be worn at all times that a student is on school grounds."

The next year, 1971-1972, saw another radical change when Council's proposal to allow girls to wear pants in school was accepted without opposition.

By the school's centennial, regulations had loosened again and attempted to avoid specific prohibitions that only seemed to challenge students' creative circumvention of the rules. The 1999-2000 Handbook & Directory gives the following guidelines for the upper school.

"The objective of the dress code is to maintain an atmosphere conducive to learning. Appropriate dress is neat and clean. Neat clothing is not ripped or frayed. It does not strain the bounds of modesty, nor does it exhibit lewd or otherwise objectionable material. T-shirts advocating tobacco, alcohol and drug use, and T-shirts with messages specifically demeaning to any group of people may not be worn. Shoes must be worn at all times." (Again, that admonition to students longing to go barefoot!)

This year, Community Council is once again wrestling with the issue of acceptable school dress. "The dress code figures prominently in many conversations I have with students," says new Head of Upper School Jason Robinson. "Dress code issues are inseparable from our core values. That's really where the conversation needs to begin. What do we value as a school? What are our aspirations for our students? And how can we create a dress code that reflects and reinforces our mission? I can't be sure where such a debate might lead, but feel that Princeton Day School is a place where we're serious about building a certain type of community."

The 1972 ski team typifies the wide variety of girls' fashion, including newly-legalized pants.

Head of School Paul Stellato came to Princeton Day School in the summer of 2008 with enormous energy and optimism. Within his first few months, however, the recession had arrived and its repercussions were broadly felt. Mr. Stellato responded quickly and thoroughly and, along with the Board of Trustees, developed a five-year financial sustainability plan that significantly reduced the school's operating budget without cutting faculty jobs, salaries, or programs. In addition, these changes were made without substantially increasing tuition. This was not the case at many other independent day schools around the country. Remarkably, while many schools were cutting back and struggling, he implemented administrative and curricular changes that have strengthened the institution and positioned the School to be able act strategically while adapting to a changing environment. Because of Mr. Stellato's foresight, and planning, PDS has emerged stronger and better than ever before.

Building on the tremendous work of his first few years, Mr. Stellato presented the Board of Trustees a bold 10-year vision plan for the School in the fall of 2011. Since then, he has dramatically enhanced the student experience through PreK-12 curriculum development and integration of the academic divisions, and he has maintained our deep commitment to faculty professional development and financial accessibility for our families. In short, the leadership, vision, enthusiasm, and energy that he brought to our school five years ago is undiminished.

So, what is next?

Mr. Stellato and the Board began the work of exploring numerous transformative plans for the school in the fall of 2012, which will form the capstone to the broad curricular and cross-divisional initiatives that have been implemented. As I reported in the spring issue of the Journal, we began the fall with a two-day retreat in November, which set the tone for thoughtful deliberation for the rest of the year. We approved a campus-wide Master Plan, the first of its kind, and also did extensive work on evaluating the need for increased funding for need-based financial aid. For the remainder of the year, using the Master Plan as a guide, we advanced ambitious plans for a new school-wide community facility for athletics and fitness, a state-of-the-art outdoor tennis complex, and a reconfigured Lower School traffic circulation and drop-off pattern. In June, we held a special meeting where we endorsed the very early stages of a campaign to support these initiatives.

I am pleased to report that we have now begun the early stage of the campaign and are in the process of exploring financial support. We anticipate that the scope and size of the effort will be determined in the next twelve to eighteen months. We will spend this year seeking the advice and support of key members of our community about the priority of the initiatives. As we gather information and move forward with specific plans, Mr. Stellato and I will update the community.

We seek to build a bold future for Princeton Day School, based on our tradition and great institutional strength, through the advancement of the initiatives outlined above. The Board is enthusiastic about the opportunities that lie ahead and, with the visionary leadership of our Head of School, we are anxious to embark on the next five years of his tenure.

Laura E. Banks "When I look back over my years as a member of the Board of Trustees at PDS, I am proud to say that the board has always served as a catalyst to light a fire for students, beginning in Pre-Kindergarten through the twelfth grade, to continue to strive for the best. A quote by Professor Robert Maynard Hutchins describes the work of the PDS Board: 'The object of education is to prepare the young to educate themselves throughout their lives.'"

Benjamin M. Frost '92 "I moved from public school to PDS in 7th grade, and it was a tough transition academically. But more than any opportunity I have had, that one move changed the trajectory that I was on completely. To have the opportunity to give back to the School and get to know the phenomenally talented administration and staff at the PDS today was a truly special experience for me. It was also completely heartening to see the passion and capability of the Board of Trustees. I have no doubt that the school is in great hands for many years to come."

Barbara S. Goldsmith '84 "Princeton Day School has been such an important part of my life in so many ways. It was an honor and a pleasure to serve as a member of the Board of Trustees."

Eleanor V. Horne "It was an honor and a pleasure to serve on the Board of Trustees to help ensure that PDS has the vision, leadership, and resources to deliver on our mission and to produce students who are well-equipped for college and beyond; to be productive citizens who will be open to new ideas, stewards of our environment, and who will genuinely respect and care for the needs and concerns of other people."

Gwyneth M. Langelier "At every meeting, I was impressed by the intelligence, commitment, and passion of the members of the PDS Board of Trustees. It was gratifying to watch the trustees focus their attention on the important issues that affect the entire PDS community. I feel privileged to have been involved over the past two years, and it gives me great confidence as a PDS parent to know that the School is being managed by such a smart, thoughtful, and dedicated Board of Trustees and Head of School."

Tobin V. Levy "I joined the PDS Board because, like so many, I feel passionate about the value of education; and because my two boys had an invaluable experience at the school. I found the board to be comprised of a group of eclectic, energetic, interesting and interested people. It has been fun to work with them and the PDS faculty. Now, I can say that all three of us have had an invaluable experience at PDS."

John D. Wallace '48 This year, Mr. Wallace stepped down as the School's longest-serving trustee, and will now assume the title Trustee Emeritus. For more on Mr. Wallace, please see the article on page 31.

From the Classroom to the Boardroom: Jack Wallace '48 Retires as Longest-Serving Trustee

By Linda Maxwell Stefanelli '62

When Jack Wallace walked into Kindergarten at Miss Fine's School on his first day of classes, he could not have imagined he would still be going to the school 75 years later. During that time, he has made an impact in almost every constituency, from Princeton Country Day School coach to Princeton Day School grandparent. His long affiliation was celebrated in June when he retired from the PDS Board of Trustees after two rotations totaling a record 23 years, and was named a Trustee Emeritus for all he has done to enrich the school's programs and shape its identity. In addition, the Alumni Association recently named its highest volunteer service award after him in recognition of his contributions to PDS and the greater community. He personifies the qualities the school seeks to instill in its students and his dedication and loyalty illustrate the enormous difference one person can make to an institution.

"Jack's greatest role, which he seems to play so naturally and effortlessly, has been that of steward of the institution," says Head of School Paul Stellato. "Although he has kept a close eye on the daily life of the school, his keenest focus has been on its long-term health and success. Jack understands and appreciates the greatness of this place, and, while he would grow uncomfortable at the mere suggestion, he has embodied that greatness."

A Team Player with a Wealth of Experience

Mr. Wallace first served as a trustee from 1978 to 1984 and was persuaded to return to the Board in 1996 by then Head of School Lila Lohr. "At some point I was probably on every committee they had," he laughs. He brought a wealth of experience from his volunteer work at the local, county and state level. In addition to chairing several area boards, he served as mayor of Princeton Township for three years and was one of the founders of the Princeton Area Community Foundation. In 1993, he received the alumni award that now bears his name.

"I love all my various activities," he says. "It's fun. I have met so many wonderful people that I admire deeply that I would have never, ever have met otherwise — people from all over. That's the real joy of getting involved, particularly with the PDS Board."

One person he may never have met if not for his volunteerism is Trustee Andy Okun, who says, "Jack has a dedication to family, friends and communities that is unequalled. Furthermore, there is a kindness to him that we should all aspire to have. It has been one of the great gifts of my life to get to know him and to be considered his friend."

Board Chair Barbie Griffin Cole '78 has a much longer history with Mr. Wallace. "His mother and my grandmother were great friends, and he and my father were in the same class at Princeton," she says. "His son John and I were classmates at PDS, and now his grandson and my youngest son are in the freshman class together. It's really rare to have that kind of continuity within a community. It's been a great privilege to work with Jack so closely on the Board and get to know him from a new perspective.

"One of the extraordinary things about Jack is his selfless devotion to PDS," she continues. "His work on the Board has been tireless. He's a mentor and a great leader who has been a guiding light for the school over many years. He continues to think of ways to help the school and plan for the next generation of students. Jack is an extraordinary human being, and while we will miss his wry sense of humor and thoughtful questions at board meetings, we are very pleased he has agreed to continue to play a key role on our Finance and Development committees."

Treby McLaughlin Williams '80 has a similar link to Mr. Wallace as a classmate of his younger son Chris. During her 13 years on the Board, and especially during her tenure as Chair, she relied on his advice and encouragement, offered during countless phone conversations and breakfast meetings.

"Jack has left an extraordinary legacy, part of which is the way he has fostered people to grow as leaders and colleagues," she says. "He enhances the performance of everyone around him. There is so much to learn from him. We affectionately call him 'Jack the Elder.' He is never led by ego. It's always about what he thinks is best for the institution. One of the best parts of working with Jack is receiving his incredibly frank and candid feedback. He delivers it in a way that is heard and internalized. I think it's because it's said with respect and true affection for the person he's directing it toward. He starts with people by trusting and respecting them."

"We've been fortunate at PDS. We've had great chairs of the Board," Mr. Wallace says. During his tenure, he has also worked with six heads of school and four interim heads and is well aware of the challenges they face. "How fortunate we are at this point in our history to have such a dynamic, visionary head as Paul Stellato. Under his leadership, PDS is in great shape."

Of the faculty he has come to know so well and admire so deeply, he says, "I can't conceive of any greater group of people than the PDS faculty. The thing that's incredible to me is that 98% of the staff and faculty give to the Annual Fund. I doubt that there's any other corporation or school that has that kind of support from its personnel."

Path to Success

For all his recent honors, Mr. Wallace's educational career got off to a shaky start. After just one year at MFS, he found himself repeating Kindergarten at Nassau Street School. He does not recall the reason for the move or why he was held back, but he absorbed the setback with his usual good humor and took advantage of the chance to make new friends. He entered Princeton Country Day School in fourth grade, maintained high academic honors, captained the White Team, and won the Headmaster's Cup for leadership at graduation in 1948. He went on to Hotchkiss and then Princeton University where he majored in international and public affairs. In his senior year, he returned to PCD as coach of the JV soccer team and led them to a 3-0-3 record. He then retired, earning a place in history as the school's only undefeated coach.

After a naval career in which he rose to become an aide to the vice admiral in command of the entire Atlantic amphibious fleet, he attended law school briefly. Then he interviewed at the State Department, the Central Intelligence Agency, and at PCD for a position teaching history.

"After much thought, I didn't accept the teaching position because I was concerned I wouldn't be able to keep the course interesting year after year," he says. "That's an ability I admire in so many PDS teachers."

Instead, he became an analyst for Morgan Stanley in New York. Some years later he moved to the Princeton area and joined First Trenton National Bank (the predecessor of New Jersey National and CoreStates/New Jersey National) where he advanced from assistant cashier to CEO before his retirement in 1993.

The Family: Coby Gibson '17, Peter Gibson, Nadia Wallace, Jack Wallace '48, Happy Wallace, Chris Wallace '80, and Margie Wallace Gibson '84

Family Ties

Mr. Wallace met his wife Happy in October 1958. Their first date spanned a weekend that included the Princeton/Dartmouth football game, "lunch on a snowy day" at the Stockton Inn, and a Rangers hockey game. They were engaged six weeks later and married within 10 months. Fifty-four years later, they still radiate a special glow in each other's company.

The Wallace family history has been interwoven with that of the school for four generations. Mr. Wallace's mother, Margaret Cook, was a 1927 MFS alumna who co-founded The Outgrown Shop to fund scholarships. Her husband, John H. Wallace, became a PCD trustee and raised money for the school's first gymnasium/auditorium during the years their sons, Jack and Bill '50, were students there. Jack's three children attended PDS: John, Jr. '78, Chris '80, and

Margie Wallace Gibson '84, who now teaches third grade there. Three of his grandchildren are alumni: Christopher '10, Katie '11, and Connor Gibson '12, all currently students at Dartmouth, their parents' alma mater. Their brother Coby is a PDS freshman. Ever the banker, Mr. Wallace calculates the family will mark an unenviable milestone this year when it pays its 100th tuition to the school. 33

The quiet generosity of the Wallace family has enriched the educational experience of MFS, PCD, and PDS students in ways that cultivate the mind, body and spirit. The greenhouse, which underscores the school's early commitment to the natural environment, was given in memory of Mr. Wallace's sister Penny '69, who passed away in 1959. After the tragic death of their son in 1990, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace created the John D. Wallace, Jr. '78 Memorial Guest Artist Series Fund that supports "Imagine the Possibilities," an innovative program that annually brings creative artists to school to work with students in all three divisions. In addition, John's classmates and friends donated funds toward the amphitheater that bears his name at the entrance to the Lower School. A sampling of other gifts includes the Wallace Family Scholarship, music practice rooms in memory of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace's mothers, and new lighting in the art gallery donated by Chris to honor his parents' 50th wedding anniversary. Mr. Wallace may have "cycled off" the Board, but his influence is apparent every day.

A New Role

"Jack knows the critical role our school has played in the lives of countless children and families, and he understands its vital presence in our community," Mr. Stellato says. "He has constantly reminded us of our strength, our purpose, and our duty. Personally, I will miss terribly his optimism, courage, and broad perspective."

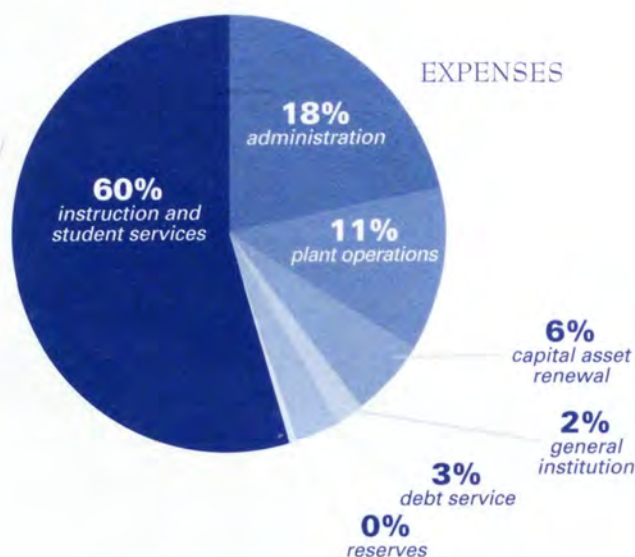

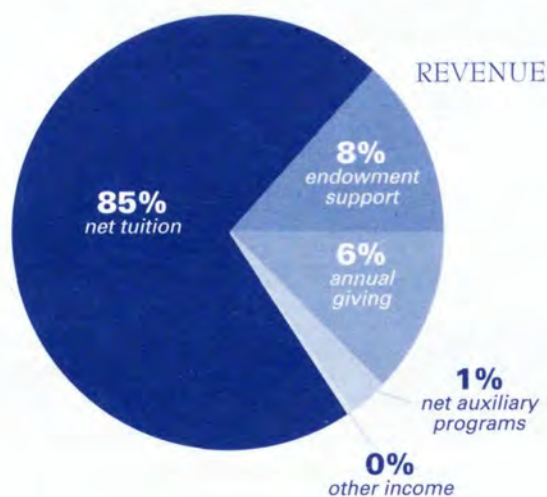

Fortunately, Mr. Stellato may still be able to draw on those qualities. With a glint in his eye, Mr. Wallace reminds Ms. Cole and Mr. Stellato not to rest too easily since, as Trustee Emeritus, he is still entitled to attend Board meetings. After so long, he may find the opportunity irresistible.

MESSAGE FROM The Advancement Office

I believe that the strength of our school can be measured by the pages that follow in this year's Annual Report. The thousands of individuals who supported Princeton Day School over the past year are a true measure of the vitality of our great school. These individuals have chosen to support Princeton Day School because of the impact PDS has had on their lives or the lives of their children. This is a truly special place and this generosity is a profound reminder.

We could not do what we do—and set the ambitious goals that we have—without the help of our volunteers. Our alumni, faculty, and parent volunteers provide unlimited time and energy, which make our fundraising efforts possible. These volunteers reach out to their peers and encourage them to support PDS and, in many cases, share with them why they have chosen to make our school a philanthropic priority.

There is one volunteer who stands out among the rest for his unwavering commitment to our school's fundraising efforts over the decades. It was my great pleasure to work with Jack Wallace '48 in his former role as Development Chair of the Board of Trustees. He has been instrumental in every fundraising effort—from the Annual Fund to capital campaigns. Jack Wallace has always given generously of his time to Princeton Day School, and there is no one who personifies volunteerism for our school better. Though I know he would not want me to bring attention to him in this publication, I cannot help it. Thank you, Jack, for sharing your passion for Princeton Day School with us and for giving so generously of your time. We are a better school because of it.

To the entire community, thank you for supporting Princeton Day School this past year. Your gift truly matters.

Sincerely,

Kathy Schulte
Director of Advancement

The May Margaret Fine Society

Established in 1998, the May Margaret Fine Society recognizes those loyal alumnae/i, parents and friends who have informed the Advancement Office that they have made provisions for Princeton Day School in their estate plans. We recognize that this is a partial listing, and ask those who have taken this important step to inform the Advancement Office and have their name(s) added to this list.

Including the school in their will, establishing a charitable trust while maintaining life income, or naming the school as a life insurance beneficiary are some of the ways these individuals have helped secure the long-term strength of Princeton Day School.

Greetings from the Alumni Board!

I am proud to be serving as the President of the Princeton Day School Alumni Board this year. Our alumni community is growing stronger each year, and I'm very pleased to announce to you that 93% of the Class of 2013 signed the 4-year Blue and White pledge to the Annual Fund. This is a tremendous vote of confidence in the strength of our School.

As this issue focuses on health and wellness, I would like to share that I just completed a 500+ mile bike tour raising funds for Anchor House, a nonprofit based in Trenton that provides resources to at-risk youth and their families (www.anchorhousenjorg). Our group rode from Burlington, VT, to Trenton over seven days, during the hottest week of the summer. As a tour, not a race, we had 200 riders of all ages, experience, and fitness levels. Whether the daily distance took you four or ten hours, it was only through good training, nutrition, and hydration that miles were completed.

Alumni Gatherings

We have hosted some amazing alumni events already this year in Boston, New York, and Washington, DC. In the coming months, look for invitations to gatherings in Princeton and New York. We are still finalizing the calendar, so if there are other locations that we should consider, please do not hesitate to contact any of the Alumni Board members.

Remember to join us over the Thanksgiving break at the annual Thanksgiving Games on November 29. This year's festivities will feature alumni hockey, soccer, and basketball games, as well as a family skate at the Lisa McGraw '44 Ice Rink.

On December 18, we look forward to celebrating with our young alums at the annual Young Alumni Pub Night at The Yankee Doodle Tap Room in the Nassau Inn in Princeton.

Welcome to our New Board Members

Please help me in welcoming these new members to the board: Allissa Crea '06, Scott Feldman '93, and Regan Hofmann '85.

Remember, you can stay connected with your fellow alums through our PDS Alums Facebook page, our PDS Alumni Community on LinkedIn, our PDS Alumni Connect app, and on the new Alumni pages on www.pds.org.

I look forward to welcoming you at our events this year!

I have heard from Louise Russell Irving who is enjoying life in Princeton; from Peggy Munro Griffin who is doing well in spite of some eyesight problems; and from Jean Williamson who has moved back to her former quarters, which are less like a nursing home and where she can play a lot of bridge.

Bob and I are spending the summer at our lake house preparing it for sale. Handling a second house is getting to be too much like work. Unfortunately the market for second homes is really bad now so even though it's lovely, we may be stuck with it for quite a while.

I received an email from Helen Keegin Hetherington: "A grand event occurred for me: my brother, Stafford '57, decided to celebrate his 70th birthday with us in South Africa. So, for Xmas 2012 arriving from San Francisco were Stafford and wife, Susan; arriving from NYC was their daughter, Emily (1 month married, but husband couldn't come); their daughter, Hillary, and husband Aaron from Paris; but not their daughter, Katie, who was working in the Situation Room in the White House and Mr. Obama wouldn't let her come. So, the five of them joined the five of us in Capetown for a gala Xmas time and then we flew on to a camp on the edge of Kruger Park for another five days of revelry and animals. A reunion I never imagined could ever happen— and will never forget. Otherwise, life continues (thank heavens) very pleasantly, with six months here in the UK and six months in South Africa, while we're still upright."

At my end, not much is new since the last time. I am still on the board of my "aging-in-place" village, and continue to sing with the Encore Chorale: Creativity for Older Adults. My husband and I recently went to Lake Tahoe, CA for a reunion with my two sons, their wives/significant others, and my two teenage grandsons. The weather was perfect and the scenery, magnificent.

Jeano Crawford "is happy to report that my granddaughter, Erika, has been hired to work at my alma mater, Wellesley, as an admissions counselor. She starts August 1. Karen (her mom) and I are looking forward to visiting her there." In September Jeano is taking the Canadian Rocky Mountaineer from Toronto to Vancouver with two good friends. As Jeano wrote her news, her granddaughter, Annie, was trekking the AMT for seven weeks!

Mary Tyson Goodridge Lund has fled to Mexico so she can get to know cartel members. "Better to join them," she said. She is very pleased with medical treatment there. If anyone lives in San Miguel de Allende, please call Ty. She also reported that Nicky Knox is fighting the fight with grace. She is interested in life— especially her grandson, Jasper.

Chloe King had a busy travel spring. "May was a marvelous trans-Atlantic cruise to Ireland and England, followed by a flight home. June was a superb trip to some of the National Parks of the West! Beautiful country! Now we are spending much time in NH on our lake away from the heat and on golf courses.

I invited "Miss Rohr" (Class X History) to join our class news. She wrote: "I am intrigued by 'hello' again to my very first and very special 10th grade at MFS. Did you all know you were my first students? Miss Davis and Mrs. Shepherd took a leap of faith with me, and I've been grateful ever since. Several of you know I married that Princeton engineering grad student. I continued teaching for a while, and quit to have five children (only one girl, four boys). After David entered kindergarten I returned to teaching via the religious school of our temple, as principal, and through curriculum development and adult education. I'm still teaching and doing teacher-training, and still love it. My far-flung family gathers here (in NJ) for Passover Seder and a week at Long Beach Island in the summer every year. MFS is among my happiest memories, and I'm grateful to still be in touch with Chloe and Hope Thompson Kerr '53. I'd love to hear from any of you who might care to write. Be well."

Connie Rohr Reiter (Miss Rohr)

Barbara Kohlsaot Von Oehsen is now in her new home in Pennington. "I moved July 28 with the help of my dear family to pack me up. The best thing I ever did was to have those four boys early in my married life. They are so wonderful to say nothing of their precious children. I've put my pet therapy and Pilates on hold for a couple of weeks. I'll try walking to town in Pennington instead! I hope to get to VT to be with my grandchildren in August—always a great time." Barb wanted to mention that she and Julia Gallup Laughlin are still doing Pilates twice a week and having a great time. Julia really is so much fun and looks fantastic. She is a very busy woman living with two old dogs she adores, but they keep her up all night. She and Jim are both very much involved with Fifi '77 and little Jim '80 and their grandchildren.

Lucy Busselle Myers wrote: "My joy these days comes from my partner, my children, and my grandchildren, and my dogs! I also love my work at a minimum security women's prison, where I've taught writing for about five years. The women are very receptive, and I am glad to make their lives a little less grim."

What a great class get-together we had in Princeton in May! The only regret is that every member of the class couldn't make it—you were missed.

In Carol Harris Bradley's words, "Our time together was really special even though Trump and I could only manage to be there for part of the time. Lockie (Stafford Proctor) is the world's most gracious hostess and many thanks are due her for making us so welcome in her beautiful home. It was very good to see Inge (Birkholm), and I was touched that she had read through all her original letters home just before coming back to Princeton so her memories of her year at MFS were very vivid. She could even tell me what kind and color car my family had and what we did on our spring break trip together in Williamsburg. Talk about nostalgia! It certainly made the years roll back and reinforced how amazing it is that our class has kept so close. What a blessing!"

Indeed! Lockie orchestrated a wonderfully relaxed weekend with plenty of flexibility and just enough "events"—a tour of the PU art museum and a delicious restaurant dinner, where we celebrated Betsy Thomas Peterson's birthday. She opened her home to all of us—Inge, Betsy, Carol and Trump, Cicely Tomlinson Richardson, Joan Pearce Anselm and Klaus, Pat Henderson Lincoln and Dick, Marina Turkevich Naumann and Bob, Rosemarie Rubino Marshall Johnson and Joe Marshall, and Charlotte Cook—offering a floating feast and home base as we drifted through, or mostly hung out. Amid many laughs and some tears, we shared recollections and formed new connections.

One amusing anecdote: the Saturday cocktail hour was punctuated with electronic props, as small groups formed around cell phones, iPads and laptops; at one point only Lockie and Dick were observed talking together with no props. One impetus for some of the e-interest: Betsy's, Joan's and Cicely's childhood homes, as well as the Kennan house (where Pat lived her first year at MFS) were all on the market, and we felt compelled to check them out—online, of course.

Other news? Betsy followed up with a grandson's graduation in Charlottesville where she visited Joan and Klaus at their home nearby and caught up with Anne Harrison—Clark and Bob Vaughn at the Richmond airport. She also

My son, James Baldwin Hillier '84, and his wife both teach at the Lake Champlain Waldorf School, where their three kids are students. Wonderful lifestyle! My grandson, pianist Willem Hillier, 13, performed his first symphony for the LCWS Spring Benefit Concert. I am enjoying family, being on the lake, teaching exercise for seniors and deepening the Shift into Awakening... awakening into oneness consciousness. Like a magnet I'll be back at Oneness University in India again this winter.

In Princeton Helen Wilmerding and Gerald Beale celebrated their eighth wedding anniversary by having "a delightful dinner out" with Alissa Kramer Sutphin and Bill.

Anne Gildar Kaufman said she had a wonderful lunch with Alissa en route to Long Beach Island where she and Larry had their grandson, Harrison, 19, Gregg's eldest, living with them this past summer. Harrison was performing in Surfflight Theatre Children's Theatre while also working at the adjacent musical comedy Show Place Ice Cream Parlour where he cajoled Anne and his Aunt Julie, Anne's daughter, to actually entertain other guests.

After some urging Nancy Miller sent her timely and amusing news: "I decided that my new Red Star chickens are quite stylish so I named them after the British royal family. Elizabeth is definitely the queen and leader, and then we have Camilla, Catherine, Beatrice and Eugenia. I can really only recognize Elizabeth and 'bad' Beatrice (she's always the last to come in at night), because they all look pretty much alike. I eagerly await their eggs, probably in early September."

From Mary Strunsky Wisnovsky, also in Princeton: "Joe and I are really enjoying retirement and are now able to do a little more traveling than when we were working. This winter we went to Anguilla for almost two weeks; we plan to visit friends in various parts of New England in August and in October we go to Paris to visit my sister and her husband and then on to Venice and the Veneto where we will meet up with friends for about 10 days. So... life is good!"

Sandy Strachan Froehlich is wonderfully busy in Northern Maine: "I have been spending my time working on a family cookbook for my grandchildren (four) and great-grandchildren (one so far), Owen WARREN Rackcliffe. Adorable little guy pushing two. Wow! This cookbook is a lot more work than I thought, but a 100-page finished project seems to be out there on the horizon and all I need to do is catch it."

Lisa Fairman Heher is living in Maplewood in a lovely addition to her daughter and son-in-law's home. She is a very active Granny, helping with driving, homework, etc. And she has planted a gorgeous garden. Lisa is very active with the Episcopal Church and women's groups in Maplewood. She has made her first "Widow Trip" taking the Queen Mary to England where she visited Suzy Scarff Webster as well as Eileen Baker Strathnaver (MFS '60).

Suzy has had lots of visitors including Ann Lea Fries and Russell, Linda Mullaly Masten and Rick, and Jinx Prather Tirana and Bardyl. Faith Wing Bieler will be visiting in September. Suzy and her husband, Colin, will be sailing in Martha's Vineyard this summer. Grandparent travel also keeps them busy with four grands in New Zealand and one in the Cayman Islands. Two grands, however, are close by in Oxford.

Gerd and I had a wonderful trip to Antarctica—a spectacular continent with its icebergs, penguins, whales and seals. In October in an attempt to balance the Antarctic with the Arctic we plan to view the polar bears in Churchill, Canada.

From Nancy:

There are lots of threads in our report this summer: family, travel, projects, gardening and reunion!! Trudi Goheen Swain started us off, saying she is "veggy-ing out on the Cape for the summer, with grandchildren underfoot this week, making for happy times." Jeanie Shaw Byrne, too, is "spending a lot of time in the garden, caring for grandchildren and finally golf as a last resort. Princeton has changed." Hmmm, maybe we need to go back and see what's happening there.

Cynthia Weinrich enjoyed the summer, including its bugs: "Am enjoying some summer respite with lighter workloads, and summer in general. I don't know if it's just the vacation feeling, but I increasingly love summer. Don't like being cold, and I love the long summer balmy evenings, and the longer days in general, with also the birds singing like mad, starting before daybreak. How boring the world would be without all the natural sounds we take for granted. Have also been discovering insects. I never thought much about them - except for annoyance from mosquitos and ticks and flies, etc., but since I've had my own garden have been amazed by the huge variety of bugs and bug communities out there, and how astounding some of them are."

Sheila Long had rather ambitious projects in two parts: "1. A vegetable garden in raised beds, which I built together with our maintenance man, John, without whose brawn it would not have been possible. After last summer's takeover by the pumpkins, I still have almost everything to learn about plant behavior. 2. Also with John, I've been cleaning out the neglected former gift shop at the end of the driveway. It's actually a very nice space, now that the mountains of clutter have been sorted and mostly taken away by the trash collection people. Perhaps one day it will be a used book store, but for the moment, we're using it to sort the books for which there is no room in the new library."

Several of us are working on projects. Lucia Norton Woodruff wrote, "Paul and I aren't moving from our home on Cherry Lane in Austin, but we return from Maine to newly finished wooden floors in now emptied rooms in half the house and the opportunity to start over totally. Pretty fun, after having lived in the same place for 37 years. What will we keep, what will we jettison?"

And Fiona Morgan Fein says she is "still trying to learn to play classical guitar, shuffling between NYC and northwestern NJ. Will go to France (Paris and Dijon) in August for a reunion with four generations of a large family I have known for years, and Harvey and I plan a car trip to Prince Edward Island in September to mark my 70th."

The indefatigable Julia Cornforth Holofcener is still on the move, saying "I think I last wrote that we had moved to a lovely place overlooking the English Channel in Bembridge on the Isle of Wight...for at least two years! Of course, you all know better than that. We are now moving to West Palm Beach in September where we have bought a five-acre property and hope to create a sculpture garden, much like the one we envisioned for our place in Normandy back in 2005. Life is good! It's like Christmas each time we unpack, and are able to unload possessions we don't really need when we re-pack. Am I making lemonade...again?"

Peggy Wilber carries on the theme of projects and traveling, going "back to Senegal and, I hope, Mali, barring traveler's advisories, but some new places too, Cameroun and Equatorial Guinea, which is actually just a few shades off the Equator, but as there are two other Guineas already, it is important to distinguish this one. There is a book about EG called Tropical Gangsters and some think this a very apt title. There was an Equator theme park in Ecuador, but it too was off a little so it had to be moved—I am not making this up!!!!

"Interested to read about classmates mentioning trying to divest themselves of what we call 'stuff' but not so fast!!!! - things involve memories for me — so many items are from travels and bring so much with them...I am working on the republication of a book my father wrote in 1975, and I am so overjoyed to have saved so many letters, photos, etc. And yes, other things too — I think of things as memory aids!!!! The thing to do is live in a small place - that encourages self-control."

I, Nancy Smoyer, too, am keeping on the move. In January I spent five hot weeks traveling around Australia on my own, mostly in little Outback towns. On the flight home, I stopped for two fabulous days in Dubai, a place I'd wanted to see for 20 years or so. I went to Billy's 50th reunion at Andover in June, which was wonderful. I was touched by the number of men who introduced themselves to me and told me what a special person Billy was.

Cynthia said that she "had some nice visits with Tibby Chase Dennis last week, when I was in the Amherst area for a Weinrich family reunion," with which Tibby whole-heartedly concurred. Which brings up the always exciting subject of reunions. Debbie Moore Krulewitch said the magic words. "I am ready for an encore in the country and am here right now sitting by a new pool and want to share this with all for another reunion with eating, drinking, hiking, swimming and dancing." It's still a ways off before our 55th reunion, so how about making it happen next summer????!!

Kleia Raubitschek Luckner sent a note to the Alumni Office that she loves being a grandma to two darling granddaughters and is enjoying retirement after 30 years in health care administration as a Director of OB Nursing and Women's Health. She was inducted into the Ohio Women's Hall of Fame. She is volunteering in state and local medical legal committees/councils to advance women.

Our class celebrated our 50th with great enthusiasm and 14 people in attendance. To a woman, everyone there had a splendid time and thoroughly enjoyed seeing the people we had become. Those who had been to earlier celebrations alerted those of us first-timers that all the silly stuff from high school would be gone, and we would have a great time. And so we did! In addition to the activities at PDS, including a delightful lunch given by the Head of School and his wife, Pam Sidford Schaeffer entertained us at a dinner at the Nassau Club. She had prepared a group of questions for us to ponder, and we responded to some of them during dessert. My favorite was "What one trait do you think your time at MFS helped you develop?" I asked classmates to respond to it in my request for news, and the editing below is mine. Their responses were far more articulate and coherent.

Liza Maugham said it was her "love of books and her ability to navigate a library, and the honor system that formed how I view honesty."

Jane Aresty Silverman cited, "intellectual curiosity and seeing things in a larger context, which is related. I particularly valued our classical education which looked at (many disciplines) as an integrated whole."

Turid Helland '63 and her husband celebrating a Norwegian holiday.

Cindy Bull Tyler replied, "the value of a rich education and love of learning and searching for meaning."

Turid Helland said, "The year was an eye-opener to a different culture, to see my own culture in perspective."

Ginny Elmer Stafford answered, "The ability to push myself beyond what I thought were my limits. I have so often needed this in my life."

Kathy Sittig Dunlop said, "The teachers at MFS saw my potential and held me accountable... and I saw myself in a different, more positive light."

Bonnie Grad Levy replied, "When in doubt: outline it! More seriously, MFS taught me I could have a nice, comfortable life with love and friends and music. Mrs. Raubitschek, Boutelle, and Shepherd made the point."

Pamela Sidford Schaeffer said, "MFS helped me form the need to do it right, to go over my work product, to listen well and to communicate clearly."

Kleia Raubitschek Luckner said, "MFS taught me the great life-long skills of how to read, study an issue in depth, encouraged my intellectual curiosity; it provided a safe environment to fine-tune my self-confidence."

Laurie Rogers thought, "Better discipline, a heightened desire to achieve more than I thought was possible, and self-confidence."

I think that I developed the ability to put fear aside and try anything, even if I thought I wouldn't be good at it. Every once in a while, I surprised myself and was better than I thought I'd be.

Kathryn Kilgore responded, "I think our school actually introduced us to the idea that there is no one (common) trait." Perhaps, this was the best answer of all.

Kathy Dunlop wrote a wonderful description of what she saw and felt at the reunion, and she took lovely pictures. I have sent it to everyone for whom I have an email address; if you did not get it, send me word, and I'll pass it on. Her big news since reunion is that her husband

Richard had spine surgery to fix a great deal of pain in his back. On a happier note, their daughter Allison is getting married on Nantucket in September.

Pam Schaeffer and her husband Leonard are having their daughter, Jacqueline's, wedding at their home on the Cape, also in September. Otherwise, she has a cast of thousands visiting this summer, and she remains the "hostess with the mostess."

Laurie Rogers and her new beau (Pam and I give him four thumbs up) are doing lots of sailing in Long Island Sound this summer. Laurie is learning how to be crew, and they race as well as do pleasure sailing.

Liza Maugham, who spends much of the year as a social worker with special needs children from birth to age 3 in Boston, retreats for much of the summer to her home in Boothbay Harbor, Maine. Her daughter and grandchildren are also there.

Jane Silverman is working as acting Vice President for Grants and Capacity Building at the Ms. Foundation for Women. She spends as much time as she can in the summer in the Berkshires. Her daughter, Sarah, and family are moving there, and her son, Jacob, and his family have a weekend home nearby. Her daughter Rachel is spending the year in Cambridge as a Nieman Fellow. Jane will have six grandchildren when one is born in October.

Turid Helland and her husband vacationed on their olive farm in Umbria. She loves the sun and warmth of the area, and she is aware that she is missing the wonderful "white" Norwegian" summer nights. She will participate in a conference in Italy on dyslexia.

Ginny Stafford and Kleia Luckner could not make it to the reunion because they both had family responsibilities. Ginny's granddaughter graduated from high school, and two grandsons graduated from elementary school. Kleia is busy with her legal work in Toledo, Ohio, and with her children and their families. She sent very touching memories of her recollections of her time at MFS.

Prudence Morgan Bolton wrote that she was unable to attend graduation because of severe back pain. She and her husband John had just returned from a trip to India, and she had hoped to attend.

Those attending the reunion were Jane, Cindy, Bonnie Levy, Liza, Kathy Dunlop, Laurie, Pam, Sally Campbell Haas, Joan Knapp Crocker, Colleen Coffee Hall, Andy Updike Burt, Sharon Stevenson Griffith, Bonnie Strong Berge (who came all the way from South Africa!), and me.

Cindy Tyler summed up her feelings after reunion and, judging from the other comments I received from those in attendance, she spoke for many of us: "To be with such a group of intelligent, accomplished, sincere, caring, and fun women for those few hours left me soaring... and wanting more." We all pledged to not wait for our 60th to get together again. Let's make it happen!

By the time you all read this, summer will be only a memory and fall will be in full swing. Measuring time by Journal deadlines, the years just skip by.

And now we are faced with the unalterable fact that our class will celebrate its 50th Reunion next spring; an event I hope each of you will observe by joining me and a host of other classes in Princeton the weekend of May 17th, 2014.

Because it is summer and many of you are traveling or spending quality time with family and friends, I understand you didn't have time to write a short email about yourselves for this issue of the Journal. For those who did, thank you.

Susan Jamieson, who has worked tirelessly for the rights of the mentally handicapped as the Project Director of the Mental Health & Disability Rights Project of Atlanta Legal Aid Society, recently retired. Sue worked for three legal services programs during her 30-year career: Jacksonville Area Legal Aid, Legal Services of North Carolina, and Atlanta Legal Aid Society. Her emphasis was on the basic legal rights of this population under state and federal law and finding ways to expand legal and advocacy resources to protect and enforce their rights. As Sue put it, "my news is that I retired (mostly) at the end of June and Max and I have spent a month at our little cabin in the woods in the middle of Georgia fulfilling my horse fantasy. His name is Bartleby (remember the story?) There are certain times when he would 'prefer not to' but I like him and am getting to a place where he is reasonably cooperative. Meanwhile, my daughter, Emily, and husband, Dave, are expecting a baby in early August...our first grandchild! I hope we can all make the reunion...I would LOVE to see everyone."

Wendy Fruland Hopper stops by Princeton every now and again, but manages to stay in touch through emails, which is a good thing. I saw her briefly with two of her daughters at lunch celebrating her husband Art's birthday. Wendy looks great and her positive outlook never seems to change. Here's what she had to say about her life these days: "Can't believe our 50th is approaching!! Art is retired. We're spending time in NJ, the Adks and NC. Still riding every day other than when we are in the Adks. Golf, bridge etc. Love and cherish our five grands. Em has three girls living in Far Hills, NJ and Allison has two boys and is living in San Rafael, CA. Toooooooo far away!! Hilary is a single chick living in Stowe, VT and working for corporate America, Green Mountain Coffee Roasters, and loving it. We feel so blessed!! Counting our blessings constantly... Hoping our health holds. Look forward to seeing many of u at the reunion! I have two (!! ) 50ths coming up since I defected in 9th grade!!! Lordy! I hope I have the strength!!!! Xoxp."

I continue to pursue a career in real estate, but my avocation is still farming. As VP of the Board of Trustees of Northeast Organic Farming Association of NJ, and a certified Permaculture Designer, I'm all about creating awareness of the need to know where our food comes from, how it's grown, and how to make it available to everyone. Last fall we launched our Beginning Farmer program in conjunction with Duke Farms (former Duke Estate) where we're teaching people how to be organic farmers. I keep my hand in by volunteering in the fields at a local organic farm where we weed, harvest, wash, weigh, measure, and sort produce for a local market. Love spending time with the other dedicated and educated "field hands" (all 20-some-things), as they are the future farmers of America.

As joyful as I feel outdoors, standing in a field with nature all around me, nothing compares to spending time with my family. I relished spending a week with my 8-year-old grandson, Jasper (son of Elizabeth Hare '88), when he visited me, a seul, in July. A day at the beach with Jasper, spent mostly in the ocean, was totally exhilarating. Jasper and his parents (Elizabeth Hare and Todd Drake) live in Cold Spring, NY.

My daughter Katherine Hare, continues to work in New York City at Russell Reynolds, while my son Hobie Hare '93, has relocated to Boston and is currently coaching soccer at Tufts University and for The Revolution (New England pro team).

As we roll through 2013 and on to 2014, I will be looking for everyone's thoughts on how to spend our reunion time next May. Looking for 100% participation!

Karen Fraser
4411 Pompano Road
Venice, FL 34293
kmf1320@gmail.com

Fall greetings to everyone, and since I (Karen Fraser) have now moved to Florida, there may not be a Fall in my future. We'll see. Reaching out to all...I'm on the Gulf side of the state, between Sarasota and Fort Myers, in Venice, which I learn is the Shark Tooth Capital of the World. This is true. I do collect them on beach walks, but prefer to ignore their provenance. Snakes and alligators are all I am on the lookout for at the moment. Yes, there are hurricanes too, but I'll be like the natives and live in denial. Will let you know how that goes! What this means is that if any of you find a seminar or a family vacation that drags you to Orlando, I'm maybe 3 hours away or a little less, and would drive over to spring you from the Magic Kingdom for a bit.

A bit of history: in my move, I found a page from the Town Topics, April of 1964, asking the "Question of the Week" about parental censorship of children's reading. Ophelia Benson and I are pictured, defiantly somber, and we certainly come out on the NO side for censorship. But the fascinating part of the page is the ads: Dorothy Couchman Secretarial Services moved to Room 21, 20 Nassau Street; and Zinder's, at 102 Nassau Street, is having a toy sale with Duncan Yo-Yos reduced to 49 cents and 215 piece Cabin Log sets reduced to $1.47. Blakely Laundry will clean your draperies; and you can buy your graduation dress at the Princess Shop, on Palmer Square, next to the Playhouse. Memories?

Phoebe Russell MacAdams Ozuna sent word that she has retired from teaching after 30 years (English, how wonderful and appropriate) in California, living in Pasadena. You will remember from a recent Journal a poem of Phoebe's, and she has six poetry books published. Her husband, a science teacher, also has retired and they now find themselves able to travel (birds and bird photography in Colombia; camping in National Parks) and, of course, trips to see the grandkids, of which Phoebe has three, all in New York, where both her sons, Ocean and Will, live.

Grandchild visits are easiest of all for Peshe Cantor Kuriloff and her five grandchildren, with another due in October, because lucky, lucky Peshe lives in South Philadelphia within walking distance of all but two: Ruth (for Peshe's mother), Nate, Lucas, and Scotia and Henry who live in Brooklyn.

With Elise Rosenhaupt Noble's grandson and Sally Stewart Gilbert's grandson in Chicago and Dabby Bishop Palmer's grandchildren, Raven and Max, in California, and my grandson in Chicago and Phoebe's grandchildren, we are preparing the scene for the next generation. Good for us and who would have thought it!

Also moving into the future, word comes from Lauren Adams Fortmiller that, "after years of working for gay equality, we are happy that the White House, the Supreme Court, the Colorado legislature, and our church are moving in that direction. Just after midnight on May 1, we were the first couple in Colorado to complete a civil union when the new law went into effect." Lauren emphasizes that there is much more work ahead, and sent a photo of her and Pamela Thiele at their civil union.

Dabby says that she and Martha Gorman Nielsen recently got together with other PCD/MFS alums in Princeton and had "a fun time." Peshe wrote that she thought it's time for another reunion, and I agree. Perhaps Princeton this time?

I take this opportunity to say that I am stepping down from my stint as Calendar Girl for our class of 1965. I remember that Alison Hubby Hoversten served us for years and years, and Elise then took over for a goodly stint; so I am clearly the lightweight in the position. T'was ever thus. I hope someone will take over; and we are all decent writers so that shouldn't be hard. Much love to us all.

From the editor: Many thanks to Karen for her great service as class correspondent. If you are interested in taking over that role, please contact Ann Wiley '70 at awiley@pds.org.

For any classmates or others who read this, a couple of years ago my 13-year adventure as secretary for my father's class, 1925, at Princeton University came to an end because its final member died at the young age of 106. When I agreed to take on that adventure, there were some 25 members of P'25 alive, and I didn't have a lot of trouble obtaining, as the marvelous movie Short Circuit called it, "input" for my classnotes column in the Princeton Alumni Weekly. However, as you can imagine, those numbers dwindled rapidly.

After about five years, there were only five members remaining and "input" became scarcer and scarcer. Well there are only five or six of us left from PCD Class of 1946 and all I have read for the past several years in this column is "Correspondent Needed." Scarce "input!" Hence, there now begins another adventure for me, and I ask my living classmates, their children, grandchildren, relatives, friends, and any other interested parties to provide me with "input" they think would be of interest to readers (if any) of this column.

As I write this, I am in Edgartown on Martha's Vineyard, and am very hopeful of having a chance to spend some time with David Erdman who, I have heard, will soon be coming to the Erdman compound in Edgartown with his children and grandchildren. David and his bride, Ellie, live in the retirement community of Fox Hill outside of Boston, but they still summer in their home in Rockport, Maine. More on this next time. Meanwhile, please let me have your "input." Thanks.

of the Investor's Business Daily (which tracks 3000 stocks besides financial and other news). "The rest of the press is not worth a damn," he explained with a chuckle. Seems the investment banker is still part of him.

Shepherd Roberts and Celia are thrilled to have two grandsons – Walter '19 and Bennett '21 Emann – progressing through PDS, both are now in Middle School and PDS is an easy trip from the Lafayette Hill, PA retirement community.

Roland Burnstan, Jr. is staying in great shape: granddaughter Alexis is staying for the summer before starting college in San Diego this fall. "Alexis and I both enjoy working out a lot together – it really keeps you young," he explained.

As for your scribe, David Rogers, the Queen Mary 2 cruise to the UK and France we reported last time was canceled because Louisa was admitted to the local hospital ICU with double pneumonia the day the ship sailed on October 2. I played hospital advocate and caregiver until she was released on December 21, at the same time that I was working on a major defense contract with a seemingly impossible deadline.

Louisa is doing well now, and we made our traditional summer excursions to Maine, the Berkshires, and — most exciting — to greet two new grandchildren (Zoey born April 26 and Jack on July 13). This brings our grandchildren tally to an even dozen, with a great-grandchild due in September. We had the Rogers brood here for our annual lobster/steak cookout and pool party in June, a total of about 25 people.

Although Ferdie Wandelt had already led a very full and rewarding life by the time he turned 65 on February 10, 2013, his death on July 25 can only be viewed sadly as an event that occurred much too soon. Ferdie died of sudden complications of acute lymphoblastic leukemia, a form of cancer of the white blood cells. It is a great loss to all who knew him. Ferdie was one of the stars of our class, a superb athlete, all-around great guy and friend to all of his classmates. After PCD, he went to Taft and then to UNC-Chapel Hill. About a year after graduation from UNC, he returned to Taft to join the admissions office, of which he took command in 1976, as well as teach, coach, and mentor students, until a few years ago, when he took on an alumni liaison role. A fuller recounting of his life and career can be found at <http://www.taftschoool.org/alumni/ferdie.aspx>. To his wife, Joanna, and children, Allison and Christopher, and to his brother, Sandy, PCD '65/PDS '68, we express our deepest sympathies.

The Class held its 50th reunion over Alumni Weekend, May 16-18. In attendance were Hector Griswold, Jim Kilgore, Jon Linker (and wife) and John Strong (and wife).

We may be 65 years old, but clearly no one is slowing down!

Barbara Sullivan: A master gardener, Barbara has been recognized for her expertise by PBS, who interviewed her in her garden for a PBS gardening show. As we went to press, she did not have the date when the show was being aired, so keep an eye on the TV Guide for this PBS program.

Patty Morgan-Irigoyen: Patty reports that from her childhood days she always wanted to cuddle a fawn, and finally her wish was granted. This little sweetie strolled into Patty's backyard, and knew that Patty was safe to be around. They both look very peaceful together.

Katherine Becker: After 40 years of living in New York, Katherine was feeling restless and decided perhaps it was time for a change. She began to explore other options. First on her list was Portland, Oregon, where she arrived in mid-June for a two-week look and see. She wrote, "Did you know that Portland is 30% planted trees? Has two beautiful rivers running through the center of the city? Is lush and green? And has the country's largest bookstore?" But after her 14 days there, despite its beauty and attractions, she decided maybe this city wasn't her cup of tea. Next stop, Martha's Vineyard, a place she knows well. Wanting to feel fit for travel, she's also added Qigong and Tai Chi to her exercise routines.

Sally Harries Gaudie: Sally's wish for a special 65th birthday was realized as her entire family gathered together in Florida to celebrate her big day. Sons Steve and Dave created a scrapbook of congratulatory letters and e-mails from family and friends, filled with memories and good wishes. It was also Jack's 70th and Steve's 40th birthdays, so I am sure there were extra cakes. Dave and Sandra have bought a home in Toronto, and Sally loves having them back in Canada, close by.

Susan Bonthron: In addition to her own work and teaching classes, Susan's Otter Pond Bindery continues to attract the best book artists to teach classes. Paul Johnson, well-known book artist, taught two "Spirit House" workshops at Susan's place. Her artworks continue to be displayed in art galleries.

Sally Lane: I am convinced that Sally will never be bored. As always the communitarian, She impresses me by serving as a board member for the Mercer Foundation, Friends of New Jersey State Museum, and the Trenton Fire Museum, while working full-time. On Facebook about two weeks ago, she suggested her friends read an article "13 American Cities for Bacon Lovers," which of course I read immediately, which caused me to go back to eating peanut butter and bacon sandwiches for lunch, and plan a national bacon-tasting tour. How much weight could I anticipate gaining on this tour?

Sally also attended, along with Andrea Hicks and Sarah Jaeger, the PDS Reunions in May for the purpose of attending a memorial for George Packard. Rick Ross '68 organized the event. Sarah, Sally and husband Sam, Andrea, Rick Ross and his wife Judy all joined together later for dinner at Chick and Nello's (used to be the farmhouse of Sally's grandfather), where there are no menus and Sally and Sam are on a first name basis with the owner's family.

Margery Cuyler Perkins: After five-plus decades at the Barracks, Margery has officially moved to her new home in Lawrenceville. Though she said all the boxes are unpacked, she and John are still looking for more space for their book collection.

Enid Sackin Reddick: Following retirement, Enid has developed new passions: ceramics and gardening. In the past few months she says ceramics has taken a backseat to her gardening. She and John also travelled to Atlanta to visit the kids and their five grandchildren.

Lynn Wiley Hoffman: Lynn has settled into her new home in Lawrenceville. She is about to cross off one of her bucket list wishes: a tour of England, Wales, Ireland, and Scotland. Lynn will leave in late September and is very excited about the trip. In August, she also celebrates 27 years of sobriety, an anniversary worth celebrating.

Mettie Whipple: Mettie reported that her son, Arthur, was biking from Yellowstone to Colorado, which I calculate to be at least 500 miles, and her daughter, Stephanie, was hiking "The Way of St. James," or the El Camino Santiago Trail, the pilgrimage route from France to the Cathedral of Santiago de Compostela, which goes through the Pyrenees to Spain. It can take weeks or months to walk this trail depending on where you start.

Debbie Hobler: In my ongoing research on the artists of the Gilded Age, I recently read a number of books on the Titanic (several well-known artists went down on the ship) including Lynn Behr Sanford's '68, terrific book, Starboard at Midnight, in which she tells the story of her grandparents (Karl and Helen Behr) who were passengers on the Titanic and survived the disaster. In addition, it is a thorough history of both of her grandparents' fascinating lives. GO buy it!

Galey Bissell Sergio reported she and Max just completed a cruise around the Greek Isles with newlywed son Alex and his wife Kristin. Following the cruise, Max and Galey dropped into Rome to visit with Max's family, and then they returned to California and Mexico.

Hope Rose Angier: Hope and Fred celebrated their 43rd wedding anniversary this year. Congratulations! Roberta Flack once said, "Getting married is easy. Staying married is more difficult. Staying happily married for a lifetime should rank among the fine arts." Hope reports that she is still taking on challenging decorative painting commissions, while continuing to take care of their beautiful property and home.

I am deeply saddened to report that Ferdie Wandelt PCD '63 passed away on July 25 from leukemia. Our class sends heartfelt condolences to Sandy Wandelt '68, and all of the Wandelt family on the death of this wonderful man who was a compassionate friend, beloved educator and forever a gentleman.

Susan Fritsch Hunter wrote: During the past few months, I've been fortunate to have "mini-reunions" with PDS class members. My husband Bill and I celebrated our 10th wedding anniversary with a trip to Portugal and Spain in July, and we spent the last four days of our trip visiting Mary Young Bragado and her husband Max Bragado-Darman in Valladolid, a city about two hours north of Madrid. Mary and Max — whose daughter, Ilya, and grandsons, Max and Alex, joined us for a paella lunch — were great hosts and gave us wonderful tours of Segovia and Valladolid.

In June, Jennie Borgerhoff and her daughter, Corie, and Julia Lockwood and her daughter, Priyanka, made the trip to Connecticut for a weekend at the Hunter household based around Phoebe Knapp Warren missed the Connecticut reunion because she was preparing to exhibit her artwork in the "Art and Architecture" show at the Water Works Art Museum in Miles City, Montana.

Jennie Borgerhoff wrote: "It was so much fun to get together with all three of you for our mini-reunion." Also this past summer, Jennie and her sisters, PDS alums Ledlie Borgerhoff '72 and Beth Borgerhoff '69, organized a 21st birthday party for Jennie's son Arthur. "Beth and Leds, my blessed mother, and Arthur and Corie were my angels through my difficult and scary illness, central nervous system lymphoma, for two years," Jennie wrote. "The doctors at Thomas Jefferson University Hospital have been fantastic . . . I am working hard at returning to a normal life and focusing on being healthy." She reported that Corie is in the honors program at her school and Arthur won the Most Valuable Player of the Year awards in soccer and basketball all through high school and "is now working hard on his college work . . . Adopting two such amazing bright and talented kids has been the biggest gift in my life." Jennie said she has met up several times with Betsy Gilliam Brown when she visits Princeton.

Julia Lockwood wrote: "Marc and I are still in our respective practices, and retirement may not be that far away." She reported that their oldest daughter Rachel has finished her first year at the University of Michigan graduate program in American studies; their daughter, Shradha, is a senior at St. Joseph's College in Maine, majoring in environmental studies; and daughter, Priyanka, is a high school freshman. "She and I had fun at Indian culture camp SPICE where yours truly was the first runner-up in the cooking contest."

Marta Nussbaum Steele wrote: "It's been a great year for me, for my daughter, Liza Steele, and for the whole family by extension. Liza passed her dissertation defense in July at Princeton University in quantitative sociology and will be teaching as an assistant professor at SUNY-Purchase two days after her wedding in Switzerland to her beloved Romain." Marta reported that she published her first book last September on election corruption.

From Mary:

Our 45th reunion was quite a success. Although our numbers were few (Gail Smith Cleare and Sia Godfrey Bauer and Joe Chandler had to cancel at the last minute), we had lively conversations and good eats (thanks to the caterers at PDS). Saturday offered school tours—including a new woodchip trail along the PDS boundary. There was a lovely gathering in remembrance of George Packard in the Upper School library, which included two of his daughters, Susan and Cynthia. Many stories were shared by his daughters, as well as several alums—mostly '68ers, along with a handful of '66ers, a '69er and a teacher.

Other highlights of the weekend included a fine dinner at Colross with seven alums and two spouses (Andy Fishman's wife, Kim Le and Rick Ross's wife, Judy). Andy and Kim Le travelled from California to be at the reunion. Toasts were made to Mary Hobler Hyson and Rick and Sia (in her absence) for making the arrangements for the reunion. The committee also took on the challenge and managed to convince classmates to donate to the Annual Fund. With some guidance from Tracey Gates in the Alumni Office, and an extra boost from Rick offering a challenge gift, the class raised over $10,000. That's an amazing amount. Thanks to all who contributed.

Sunday morning a handful of classmates continued the reunion at Connie Sayen Ban's home. She one-handedly created an elegant brunch. Most classmates headed off by noon, but Katie Ecroyd and yours truly stayed another three hours. Fun for all. Hopefully, our 50th will find more alums returning to PDS.

Suzanne Blanchet Hirst sent her regards, sorry that she could not come to the reunion. "Lisa Lawrence and I have been in touch these last five years and it has been great renewing an old friendship. I've also heard from Joe Chandler many times. I saw that there are several alums living in the Lake Wales, Florida area. I bought a house in Winter Haven which is very close to Lake Wales. It would be fun to get together down there with other PDS classmates."

I got an email from Evan Donaldson this spring. He wrote that he has done some marathon runs, including a race on the Pacific Coast Highway with his daughter.

Mazze Madeira Gogolak was sorry to miss the 45th. "Please give my regards to Connie, Gail and Punky. I can just see them as we all were 50 years ago at MFS. Did you know I can still sing the school song by heart?! I am not sure if the 'lamp of knowledge' is still guiding our education system, but I am sure that PDS is a wonderful school."

I recently read in the Princeton Alumni Weekly of the passing of Walter Daub, Faron Daub Fahy's father. He was in the Princeton Class of '39. He died in March at the age of 97. In addition to his years teaching math, he was an avid athlete, loving the out-of-doors and always happy to be hiking or kayaking in the backwoods of Maine. Faron, we are sorry for your loss and send our condolences to you.

Gillian Gordon Crozier was sorry to miss the 45th. She was in the middle of a crucial work time. "I am Programme Director of the MA Producing Film and TV at Royal Holloway, University of London and my students are making their first film. Please pass on my best and big hugs all around. Bob and I are back in London after three years in Singapore where our daughter, Isla, lives. She works in the fashion branding biz and Mirren is a costume designer in Hollywood. Her latest effort (Short Term 12) just won SXSW best film! I am in the states a lot as we now have a home in East Hampton. We are there as much as we can. All are invited for cocktails on the terrace this summer. Please stop by." What a great offer. Maybe we can have a mini-reunion at the tip of Long Island!

I am sorry to let our readers know that Sandy Wandelt's brother, Ferdie (PCD '63) died in late July. The Wandelt family were huge supporters of sports at PCD and PDS. We extend our sympathy to Sandy and the family.

From Sandy:

Sounds like our class reunion was a great success. Sorry to have missed it! Jim Harford sent a couple of pictures taken at the reunion bash at Hillbilly Hall in Hopewell. He wrote: "All I can say is that it was great to see everyone. I had no idea Carl was in a band in high school."

'73 classmates: Susan Bauer Schwinger and Roger Williams

'73 classmates: Susan Bauer Schwinger, Sue Meigs, and Andy Katin

Hilary Morgan '73 beginning hockey

Hilary Morgan '73 learning to sail in the San Juan Islands.

Susan Bauer Schwinger sent several photos from the reunion also and wrote: "The reunion was so much fun with a really good turnout. The highlight was definitely the music that Carl Sturken put together, featuring Carl, John Bushnell, Peter Browne, Zander Kennedy, Malcolm Pollack, Joe Abelson, and Mary Fowle, who was a year behind us at PDS. Marion Huston came from Seattle and Danny Blum came from Boulder, Colorado. The night before a lot of us went over to Buzz Woodworth's house and he got out our old yearbook and we all had a good laugh looking at the old pictures." I bet!

Leslie Sander attended the 40th reunion too, and wrote: "What a great time. It was fun to see the bands back together again and the Beach Rollos' re-creation of the final assembly when they kicked Mr. McClure off the stage was great." Leslie wrote that she is still in the music business; she had her own lighting company for twelve years working with bands in the Philadelphia area and Wildwood in the summers. After that she went to Atlantic City when the Taj Mahal opened and did 10 years there as the system tech in the lighting department. She moved to Delaware in 2000 and now runs a lighting company in Aston, PA where they do everything from concerts to graduations and corporate events. The best thing though is she has built her dream house. She and her brother designed a house in the woods in North Wilmington. The house has won numerous awards and was even featured on an HGTV show called "What's With That House." It took quite a while to get built, but she said, "it makes coming home every night a joy." You can see a picture of the house at: <http://www.sander-architects.com/filter/residential#tree-house>. Leslie had a wonderful time at the 40th and hopes to keep in touch with people with whom she reconnected.

Anne MacLeod Weeks wrote that she and husband Jim have now lived at the beach in Fenwick Island, DE, for a year and they could not be happier. Anne continues as Upper School Head at the Salisbury School in MD, a short commute through farm fields with beautiful skies overhead. Jim's SAT business is growing quickly. Anne began taking photos as a hobby this past winter and just won second place in the Delaware On View contest in Lewes, DE. Their son, Jed, is board president of Bikemore, a Baltimore Bike advocacy group he helped found. Anne has enjoyed reconnecting with Daryl Janick Kent this past year, and hears from Tucky Fussell and Hilary Morgan on occasion. She has particularly enjoyed reading the posts on the Facebook group "I grew up in Princeton," a trip down memory lane.

Roger Williams, also a reunion attendee, sent news from the Cascone Williams household. He wrote: "When Gina (Cascone) is not writing, she loves spending time with our precious 5-year-old granddaughter, Sydney Rose. Our 34-year-old daughter, Bree, is a dramatic arts teacher and expecting our second grandchild in October. Our 38-year-old son, Roger, is a professional scuba diver who works for the NY Wildlife Conservation Society. Gina's books for young readers series, Deadtime Stories, premieres on Nickelodeon this fall." Roger continues to grow his client list for his literary agency, New England Publishing Associates, Inc., check out www.nepa.com.

Last but by no means least, I heard from Hilary Morgan. She wrote: "It seems the older I get, the more inquisitive I am. I have begun to revel in doing things in which I have little or no competency. At 50, I moved back to the East Coast after a hiatus of nearly 25 years overseas, in Hawaii and Alaska. At 51, I ran my first (and last!) marathon. At 56, I took up ice hockey; no easy feat since I didn't know how to skate! We lost every game the first year, but the next year we actually came in 2nd place in our division! At 57, I became a certified National Ski Patrolter (nordic) and last week, at 58 (geez am I actually 58?), I am learning how to sail; I received my bareboat captain's license! So live long and live well my fellow PDS'ers and do one thing each day that scares you at least a little!"

Barbara Russell Flight's mother reported that Barbara is now working at Webster Banks in Boston as a senior vice president.

Jen Bonini '87 sent news about her sister, Nancy Bonini: Nancy was elected to the National Academy of Sciences and was formally inducted this past spring. The University of Pennsylvania's news release stated: "Nancy Bonini, Lucille B. Williams Professor of Biology, was elected as a member of the National Academy of Sciences, an honor considered to be one of the highest a United States scientist or engineer can receive. Members were chosen for their achievements in original research. The 2012 Academy class consists of 84 members and 21 foreign associates. Bonini's research examines the mechanisms of human neurodegenerative diseases, including Huntington's, Parkinson's, ALS and Alzheimer's diseases. Using the genetics of fruit flies, she creates models for human degeneration to provide insight into disease mechanisms. These studies aim to improve understanding of neural decline as a result of aging that will lead to new approaches for treatments."

"In 2009, Bonini was the recipient of an Ellison Medical Foundation Senior Scholar Award in Aging Research and the winner of an Exceptional, Unconventional Research Enabling Knowledge Acceleration Grant awarded by the National Institutes of Health. She was also awarded a five-year David and Lucile Packard Fellowship grant in the amount of $500,000 in 1998 and was selected as an Investigator of the Howard Hughes Medical Institute in 2000."

From Martha:

Laurie Knowlton: "What a ride the last 20 years have been! Spent ten years on Culebra Island, and then moved to mid-coast Maine (but still spend 2-3 months in the winter on Culebra). I'm a life coach, artist, teacher (photography), holistic animal services provider (animal Reiki, massage, communication, nutritional counseling, etc.), a social media consultant, and am studying to become a health and wellness coach. I've just been diagnosed with Chronic Lyme Disease (it seems I got it in 1988, when some unexplained and increasingly serious health issues started messing around with me). The treatment road I have ahead is a little rough, but I'm holding out hope that, in the end, I might finally be able to enjoy a more healed body. I am very grateful for finally finding an integrative doctor who was able to look at the big picture and diagnose me. I live in rural Alna, Maine, with my life partner, on a beautiful pond where we have a mini-farm. We have a guest room and would love to see any of you, either here in the North or South of the Border in the winter."

Dr. Doug Fein left his medical practice of fourteen years and returned to the classroom. He is pursuing a master's degree in Public Health at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, "which will enable me to fulfill my ambition of working with the underserved population. I believe this is an area where I can make a real difference, and I am very excited about this new opportunity and challenge." Doug reported that "classes are going well, but it is a whole new world compared to 1979. No more No. 2 pencils, chalkboards, erasers, paper, etc. It's all about technology. I am the 'old guy' in the class, but I am OK with that." He and Debbie (and Dixie, their 1-year-old canine "toddler") have bought a home in Chapel Hill, so it looks like they won't be around to host our 35th reunion in May! "I have seen Jay Nusblatt several times per year since our last reunion. It has been great to catch up with him. I will miss being local."

Cathy put her sleuthing (stalking?) talents to work and found Jim Billington out in California. "I haven't kept up with anyone from PDS. Got four kids, a sweet-as-can-be wife, a dog, two chinchillas (we are fighting the recession one rodent at a time), and 25 autistic teenagers we have loosely under wing. Jim gave up the rat race to become a self-described 'shoe-leather priest' and his wife Julia is a doctor. "I am 6'4", she is 5'1". All our kids, except the 7-year-old, are over 6'3" and all in high school. The oldest wears size 17 shoes. They are all cool kids. We live next to an ostrich farm, whose eggs feed 25, and since we have sunk most all our savings into Hidden Wings, we like ostrich eggs. Life is short. Art is long. God is cool." To learn more about the extraordinary school Jim and Julia started to help adults with autism discover their hidden talents, go to www.hiddenwings.org.

We also heard from Ken Keuffel, who spent his early years in PDS and went on to graduate from Lawrenceville and Webster University Vienna. "I've been married to Gabriela Rojas since 1999. Our son, Kenneth Keuffel III, turned 10 in March. We live in Winston-Salem, where I'm now freelancing. I was an arts reporter at the W-S Journal until that publication laid me off in November. Them's the breaks in newspapers these days, but I did put in about 12 really good years at the Journal and got to cover a thriving arts scene."

First it was on, then it was off when a winter storm intervened, but with some perseverance and planning, a mini-reunion happened at the lovely Needham, MA, home of Cathy White Mertz, featuring Laura Farina, Martha Hicks Leta, and Ann Gillespie. Cathy's husband, Oscar, kept the barbeque stoked and the Lemon Drop Martinis flowing so the guests could get down to the task at hand, catching up on some 37 years of news. Laura, who is a DC-based lawyer with SmithDehn, LLP, and creator of Huggy Duggy sportswear said, "That was one of the best 'reunions' of my adulthood. I know we had many experiences apart with other friends, but we had so many significant points of intersection. That became so clear during our flowing conversation for hours until we finally dropped (at 3AM!)"

Ann Gillespie, who lives in Bolton, MA, with her family, is an avid runner and works as a graphic designer. She moved to Providence with her family after 9th grade, graduating from The Wheeler School and Hamilton College. Ann says, "Princeton was such a wonderful place to grow up. Providence was great too—just different—and there's never been a simple answer when people ask where I'm from. But it's really nice to feel like I still belong there!"

Cathy summed up the gathering nicely, adding, "It was an evening of such warmth, comfort, and connection. Poignant revelations, belly laughs, and an honesty that's rarely encountered in our adult lives. It's something about the physical distance and the rarity of our gatherings that allow us to connect on the most important levels, unfettered by the day-to-day trivia, complaints, irritants. I don't think we wasted a moment!"

We hope this will entice as many of you as possible to make it to Princeton for our 35th reunion, coming up in May. Those of you who have attended past reunions can attest to how wonderful it is to see these old familiar faces and catch up. Whether you've put on a few pounds, or lost your hair, your job, your spouse, or been promoted to CEO of your multinational conglomerate, no one much cares. We just want to see YOU. Save the weekend of May 16!

Jen Bonini '87 sent the Alumni Office some information about her brother, Jamie Bonini. She sent a link (<http://mealsperhour.com>) to a video detailing work that Jamie is doing through Toyota. Jen wrote: "As you may remember Jamie initiated the community service hours requirement at PDS. This was part of his passion as a high school student and it seems it has not left him. He has had a rewarding career as an engineer and manager in the automotive industry. Now he is still with Toyota but working within their community service branch leading projects like the one shown in this video. It seems to take him around the country working on a variety of different community scale issues on behalf of Toyota. I just love the full circle that the interest in this work demonstrates as here he is back at community service, something that showed up in full colors during his time at PDS but applying his engineer background."

Kelly Lambert Walker received the 2013 Houlihan Faculty award at the Tabor Academy Commencement from Head of School John Quirk. The Class of 2001 established this award as their class gift to the school to be given annually by vote of the graduating class. Their intent was to establish a tradition of honoring one faculty member each year at the commencement ceremony to be publicly recognized for his or her service to their class. Kelly has taught Spanish and served as Assistant Director of Athletics at Tabor since 1987.

From Ted:

It was really great to finally hear from John Powers. After PDS, he graduated from West Virginia Institute of Technology, with a B.S.M.E. It was there that he met his first wife. He then started work as an engineer for Bruce Hardwood Floors. In 1998, he obtained his Professional Engineering Registration, which was a really big deal for him. He moved to London, KY 14 years ago and he loves it there; the back of his property borders the Daniel Boone National Forest, where they even have the occasional elk and bear lurking about. He has two sons with his first wife, Jack (age 12) and Frederick (age 9); he was divorced seven years ago. It was not long after that he met his second wife, Sandy. Roughly two years ago, they adopted a little girl, Ava, who is now three. There were no separation issues and she seemed to walk into her new home like she'd been there all of her life! His boys even accepted her without issue. She is their sister all the way! John lost his father a couple of years before they adopted Ava; John is sad about that for he knows his father would have really enjoyed her. He owes a lot of appreciation and gratitude to Andy Franz, Bob Whitlock, and Ron Meldrum for their inspiration and influence. He is very fortunate to be applying his skills on something a lot more significant than making houses look beautiful.

The Alumni Office received news from Jen Bonini: "Scott (Miller) and I are still in Laramie, Wyoming. I am working part-time in a lab, teaching in our kids' classrooms as much I can, and then taking care of the kids. Scott is still a professor of watershed hydrology at the University of Wyoming. A news highlight for Scott is that he is co-PI on the largest grant in the history of the university, and with this is helping to work on water management issues in the West. Quite his passion. The work is getting off the ground this year, and has been exciting."

From Sofia:

It was great seeing everyone who came out for our 25th. Thank you so much Robin and Jon for hosting us all. I am enjoying a rainy summer in central Illinois after a two-year draught. My family is getting excited for our annual three-week road trip to the East Coast. Kristen is 11 and Celeste is seven. They are a lot of fun. I just finished a two-plus year stint as president of the board of our Children's Museum. I am happy to say that it took a long time, but the museum is in much better shape. I am continuing my work there and moving on to our fabulous zoo. I still wish I could send my girls to PDS!!!

Carla Taylor reported: "Olivia is starting kindergarten in the fall. Ray is still practicing anesthesiology at George Washington University Hospital. I'm nearing the end of the product development phase of my business developing self-help tools for parents of young children (not that any of us need any help...lol). I just filed my third patent for my business and am looking to raise some capital for the official launch of my software. Can't wait to see everyone again! Look me up if you're in the Washington, DC area."

Robin Cook McConaughy wrote: "It was great to host everyone last year! We still have about 40 Sandy Bing afro wigs in the house if anyone has the need... Jon and I have finally opened our market, Brick Farm Market (www.brickfarmmarket.com) in downtown Hopewell, after three years of building and preparing. The response has exceeded our expectations and we are learning a lot about retail (and doing business in a small town!). The market has charcuterie, fresh meat, herbs, flowers and produce from our farm, a juice bar, cheese counter, bakery and prepared foods, among some other basics that are sources locally. We will be opening a farm-to-table restaurant in Hopewell next year. Kids, Finn and Drew, are 13 and 10. We occasionally see Mike Rassweiler in our farming circles and have sold some of his excellent produce from his North Slope farm in the market when we had a shortage. Also we are going to see Beth Fulmer Emery this summer in Maine. Please come visit when you're in the neighborhood!"

From Arianna:

We had an amazing reunion! Thank you to everyone who made it such an incredible weekend under the Colross tent. We kicked things off Friday night with a small gang – Collins Roth, Jeremy Rabb, Courtney Shannon, Jamie Salkind, Winnie Roberts, Amy Venable

Ciuffreda, and myself – and we made profligate use of the photo booth and costume props that brought back all sorts of Mikado backstage memories.

Saturday was awash in daytime activities and sports, with alums Andrea Hall Elish, Ron Cunningham, Taylor Hwang, Jim Strugger, Reed Newhall, and their spouses and kids.

But the main event was Saturday night. DJ Mike Lingle prepared an 80s-tastic playlist, which he posted to our class Facebook page: <https://www.facebook.com/groups/pds1988/>. Collins brought binders of his old class photo-journalism pictures, so even if you weren't there, we were all reminiscing about what you did in the senior lounge and how cute you looked (we're looking at you, Elisa DeRochi, Britt Eaton, Holly Greenberg, Paul Robertson, and that junior who thought he was part of our class). The ever-thoughtful Amy made a fantastic poster display using photos from reunions past. You'll have a chance to see it again at the 30th, updated with the great class photo her husband Brian took of us. You can visit our Facebook page to see more photos.

It was a terrific roll call: in addition to everyone who was there Friday night and Saturday afternoon, we had Miriam Pollard Cohen, Kit Greenberg Herrera, Greg Myers, Landis Greathouse, Christine Grounds, Jessie Robertson, Brian Kral, Jeremy Rothfleisch, Marc Collins, George Paci, Vince Totaro, Julia Herr Smith, Robert Ostfeld, Emily Francomano, Dawn Feldman Fakuda, Elizabeth Hare, Ed Eglin, Abigail Zimskind Schein, Brooke Murphy Kelly, Melissa Baron Murdoch (in from London!).

When PDS kicked us out an hour after we were supposed to leave, we repaired to the

'88 classmates at their 25th reunion: Arianna Rosati, Landis Greathouse, Christine Grounds, Elizabeth Hare

Jeremy Rabb '88, Elizabeth Hare '88, Vince Totaro '88 celebrating their 25th reunion.

Nassau Inn. And when the Nassau Inn closed, a handful of us went upstairs to a lounge for an after-after-party until 3 a.m. A great event made great by everyone who was there.

Now for a few other updates:

From Taylor Hwang: First I have to give thanks to everyone for making our 25th such a great reunion and for making this the givingest (don't worry, I learned that word at Lawrenceville) year to date for the Great Class of 1988. We contributed $18,899.80, which must be some intentional conflation of Miss Fine's founding year and our class. Secondly, as some of you know from my crass peddling of her story to raise money for the Annual Fund, Brooke Murphy, I am happy to report, wed in June in the Bahamian paradise of...well, the Bahamas. While she was rendered temporarily speechless by multiple sentimental readings during the ceremony, the reception's Babbling Brooke signature drink and late-night festivities evidenced that the party girl still has it in her. I understand that Felicity Wood almost attended but had to bow out, which is a shame since I haven't seen her since we randomly camped together in the Sierra Nevada foothills back in the 90's (crazy Berkeley story for another time). Congratulations, Brooke!

Sometime around Thanksgiving, we'll have a chance to see Jeremy Rabb in theaters nationally in the upcoming Spike Jonze feature, Her, starring Scarlett Johansson and Joaquin Phoenix. "I'm also very excited about performing a role I've wanted to play for many years: Clov in Beckett's Endgame," he wrote. "It opens this fall at a wonderful repertory theater in Pasadena called A Noise Within, so if you happen to be on the lower west side (of California), come check it out."

From Paul Robertson: I got on board as the general manager of a major project in Florida, the Westgate River Ranch Cowboy Theme Park. It's an awesome opportunity and continuation of my great ranch adventure! Grand re-opening of the ranch is in October.

I think we know where we're going for our 30th.

From Debby:

The class of 1990 held an impromptu 23rd reunion recently spurred by the performance of Isheeta Ganguly. Isheeta, a celebrated performer in India, sang at the esteemed Rubin Museum. Isheeta was wonderful to listen to and still commanded the same presence she did during high school. Her music weaves together Indian folk-pop, classical, lounge, elektronika, and Rabindrasangeet (the music of Nobel Laureate Rabindranath Tagore) in an unprecedented manner. We gathered from opposite ends of the earth and found our lives had taken us in vastly different directions. However, we (me, Isheeta, Rebecca Dickson, Debbie Klein Geller, Timory Howe Ridall, and Kysha White) all felt like we last saw each other just yesterday in the senior lounge. Despite not having seen each other in 20 years we spent the evening laughing and reminiscing about our PDS days.

Inspired by our 23rd reunion, Isheeta and I (Debby Bushell Gans) decided to hold a second reunion, this time with our kids (potential PDSers, class of 2026)...after three days together, there was a tearful goodbye amongst the junior set. There's nothing quite like old friends!

In other news, Mrs. H's artistic inspiration 25 years ago amongst the film and the fixer, has remained a part of me. This summer, I was awarded "Best of Show" in a juried photo exhibit at the Palm Beach Photographic Institute in Palm Beach, Florida.

I am really excited to share some more exciting news from the class of '99! My husband, Matt, and I welcomed our first child this past February 28, Samuel Flynn. Happy fall! Hope everyone had a wonderful summer. Here are the updates from the Class of 2002...

Timon Lorenzo reported: "I am living in the same apartment on the Upper West Side, working in the same family asset management office, but with Nathan Windsor's (aka Nathaniel Smith) help, I'm getting closer to the dream of playing guitar and piano, performing a great Avett Bros song at the end of the summer! Jessica Tamayo wrote in to share the following: "Spent an amazing season working in an outdoor preschool in Big Sur this year, and while on the West Coast, got to go to one of Sasha Rosse's fabulous San Francisco dinner parties with my exquisite date, Julie Wilson. Looking forward to an exciting move to Denver to teach kindergarten at the Denver Waldorf School. Life is blessed and beautiful."

Katherine Blatterfein Sorriento shared some exciting news: "My husband Jeff and I moved back to Florida last year; we just bought a house only half an hour from Jessica Schilke Mercer! I'm especially excited to have her nearby when Jeff and I welcome our first child this fall. Mackenzie Grace is due at the end of September!"

Johanna Dickson sent the following update: "I finally have some news to share! I start a new job Monday as a Marketing and Administrative Assistant at Kostow Greenwood Architects in Soho! I am also still working as a freelance writer and will be a contributing blogger to the new website of SoundSense, a company that specializes in sound proofing."

As for my update, I'm living in Bucks County and working in Princeton as the Development Associate for Morven Museum & Garden. Have had the fun of seeing many familiar PDS faces who are also living in the area (Ryan Palsho '05, Wilson Weed '01, Ashton Todd '01, to name a few...) Ryan and Grant Schmucker are actually working at the same company now, XL Group, in Doylestown, which is great. Also had a great 4th of July with Julie Wilson, who came to stay with me while on the East Coast. She is still living in California and has just moved out to Marin County with her beau and loves it out there.

If you're ever in LA give me a shout!"

Morgan Weed had an amazing summer learning how to fly at the Dallas Theater Center, where she played Tink in the World-Premiere of the new musical, FLY, directed by three-time Tony Award Winner, Jeffrey Seller.

James Ramos wrote: "We have had a great summer so far. From a trip to San Francisco during which we spent time with Allison Marshall, to time in Fripp Island, SC with my wife's family, it has been a whirlwind. We had a great time catching up with old friends at the Young Alumni Happy Hour at the NYC Boat Basin and are excited for spending the rest of summer with family and friends in Hoboken."

Erich Matthes wrote: "Hello, '03! It's been about six years since my last update, so here goes. I got married on May 11, 2013 to Jaclyn Hatala Matthes, who I met during graduate school at Berkeley (I've taken her last name as my middle name, so I'm now Erich Hatala Matthes!). We had a wonderful wedding at the Mountain Lakes House in Princeton. PDSers in attendance included: Thomas Bohnett '02, Graeme Blair '02, Brian Smith, Michael Highland, Justin Revelle, Anita Deshpande, Bianca Gersten, Brett Downey Riggall '04 and Liz Cutler (faculty). In addition to getting married, we ended up cramming a bunch of other major life-events together. The week before the wedding we filed our doctoral dissertations at Berkeley (mine in philosophy, hers in Environmental Science, Policy, and Management), and moved out of our apartment. For the moment, we've relocated to Brookline, MA, where we're both starting our first academic jobs. As of July 1, I'm an Assistant Professor of Philosophy at Wellesley College, and Jackie is a postdoctoral researcher at Boston University. Next year, though, we'll be moving up to the Hanover, NH area, where Jackie will start a job as Assistant Professor of Geography at Dartmouth. We're hoping to get a place on a lake or in the mountains so we can really take advantage of the area. We'll keep a small apartment in the Boston area to cut down on my commuting. These are really dream jobs for both of us, so we're super excited and grateful to everyone who's supported us during the long slog of grad school. Jackie's teaching and research will focus on global environmental change, and I'll be researching and teaching courses in various aspects of ethical theory and philosophy of art. We were very sorry to miss the 10th reunion, but my sister was graduating from college the same weekend. Hope to see everyone at the 15th!"

Michael Highland wrote: "Life in LA is pretty much as I expected: an endless parade of sunshine, farmer's markets, and bikini-clad rollerbladers. There is also volleyball 24 hours a day. Thankfully, my job making video games helps to keep me firmly grounded in reality. Without that sense of purpose, I'm not sure what I would do... most likely volleyball. I'm happy to say my fiancée Chrissy has really embraced the SoCal lifestyle. Unfortunately, her diet of raw kale smoothies has done little to curb her brash Philly attitude. Nathaniel Halpern '02 recently made a cameo in my life, we spent a lovely afternoon birding together. Much love to all my East Coast homies, please come visit."

Ben Johnson wrote: "Hey all, not much new to add this year but was guilted into writing something by Allison Marshall... I'm still living in New York and recently took a job at a start-up called Tough Mudder where I'm running the communications team. When I'm not at work convincing people to let us electrocute/freeze/exhaust them, I spend most of my free time biking or running around the city and trying to catch up with old friends. I'm lucky enough to still see a lot of James Ramos and his wife in Hoboken, and have a long trip planned to the West Coast later this year where I hope to see many more of you. If you're ever in New York, I'm always up for catching up over good beer, and I hope everyone else is doing well."

Joanna Bowen sent news that after five years working in Campus Ministry at Villanova University, she has accepted a position to be the Director of the Augustinian Volunteers. The Augustinian Volunteers provide opportunities for young men and women to serve with estab-

and Human Services (DHHS), Departmental Appeals Board, Medicare Operations Division. She earned her law degree at The George Washington University and received her B.A. from the University of Pennsylvania."

From Allison:

Hey everyone! The 10th reunion was a big success and from those that went I heard it was a blast.

Nick Perold wrote: "It was truly a pleasure seeing so many of my '03 classmates at our recent 10-year reunion! The event, the people, and the stories reminded me once again that PDS is an incredibly special place."

I was lucky to spend my summer having some PDS reunions at the weddings of Emily Hamlin and Katie Weber. Many classmates were in attendance at both, including Eleanor Oakes, Daniella Gold, John Patteson '02, Elif Sen '02, Daniel Mykytyn '02, Dorian Batt '02, Patrick Southern '02, and Noah Fisher.

In addition to attending these great weddings with me, and after graduating Yale Law School, Alyssa Briody spent most of the summer studying for the Louisiana Bar.

Brian Smith wrote: "I moved to Los Angeles this summer to pursue television development, lished educational, social, and health programs in five domestic cities and one international site. By building and living in community with other volunteers and forming relationships with local Augustinian communities, the volunteers' lives are enriched, as they enrich the lives of others. Joanna served with the program in San Diego in 2007-2008.

It has been seven years since we've graduated and most of what we know about each other is probably gleaned from our Facebook newsfeeds. (I say this to a few of you: I clicked on one of your posts once and now Facebook keeps on trying to tell me about your vacation, your pets, or your meals. I know way more about you than I ever intended.) But some of you still send me news the old-fashioned and less creepy-feeling way, which I appreciate.

Jessica Rich Horton wrote in with big news. She married Rob Horton on May 18. Since then, the Hortons have stormed around the Western Hemisphere, traveling to Antigua, Dominica and Alaska, running a half marathon, and completing a Tough Mudder. (I'm not sure what a Tough Mudder is, but based on pictures I see on Facebook, I can surmise that participants get muddy and tired.) Back from their travels, the couple is planning to settle in Hopewell. Horton wrote: "[We] bought a beautiful little house in Hopewell Borough. We'll move into our new home with our two dogs and our cat on September 6. I'm still working in Corporate Communications at AT&T - three years next month - and still loving it."

Arvind Thambidurai is also enjoying married life. He wrote: "Arvind and Santhra are doing well and currently living in Plainsboro, NJ."

Meanwhile, a number of unmarried members of our class are educating the next generation.

David Blitzer wrote:

"I am still teaching 8th Grade English at Boston Prep Charter Public School and having an awesome time... If anyone else is interested in teaching in or working for charters in the future, feel free to reach out to me, as there is no better job!"

Blitzer added that he spoke with Jon Hofman about Hofman's experience teaching at KIPP Delta Public Schools, an association of charter schools in Arkansas. "It sounds like the beginning of an exciting experience for him," Blitzer said.

Ally Brill is teaching Pre-Kindergarten at the Feynman School in Bethesda, Maryland. Brill wrote: "[Feynman is] a start-up private school for academically gifted kids. This year will be Feynman's fourth year open and it has been an awesome experience watching the school grow. I love what I do; the kids really keep you on your toes!"

Brill recently moved into a new apartment in Bethesda. Brill is still in school herself, working toward an M.A. in Educational Psychology with a focus on Gifted Education and Talent Development. Brill is studying at the University of Connecticut and hopes to finish her degree by August 2015.

Jessica Rich Horton '06 and her husband Rob.

Conor Meara and Kunle Onitiri have continued to make their marks in the music industry. Meara wrote, "I have been releasing recorded music as Roy Orbitron, and my son Noah is almost two."

Onitiri wrote that he is still DJ'ing on the East Coast and in West Africa. He plans to DJ in West Africa this December. He urges fans to get excited for the launch of his website [http://princeofmix.com] on his 25th birthday weekend in September. (According to my research, this information likely places the launch on the weekend of September 21-22.)

I'm entering my final year of law school, and will be in New York for the rest of the year. Although I'm still trying to figure out what I want to be when I grow up, I know that after law school I will be moving to D.C. to work for a judge on the Court of Appeals for the Armed Forces and play with her dogs (she apparently brings her dogs to the office). I was excited to see that PDS installed air-conditioning in all classrooms. Now I can finally get rid of the ice fan machines that I made senior year and was keeping in my parents' basement in case PDS ever decided that schlepping large containers of ice around the building was a good way to cool classrooms. Thanks for the updates, and I'm looking forward to hearing from everyone next time!

From Peter:

From what I've heard from my classmates, it sounds like the Class of 2012 is doing well after just one year out of PDS:

Gabi Phillips wrote that she sold Cutco Cutlery this past summer and took art history classes at Raritan Valley Community College

Eric Powers is "just chugging along at Boston College. After trying out for several a capella groups, he's bounced back and is doing great. Really great." As his brother, I can say that he did NOT audition for any a capella groups, but he is doing well.

Cara Hume emailed me this summer, reporting that she's "currently in Spain living with a grouchy old host mom and eating lots of paella while taking classes. I liked college, my sorority, and the Irish play I partook in."

Annie Nyce was initiated into Kappa Delta sorority and soon after was installed as the new Director of Events for the Panhellenic Executive Board at Rollins College. She spent her summer employed as the Store Supervisor for Jack Wills in Princeton while continuing her internship at Fred Astaire Dance Studio of Princeton. With Fred Astaire she attended regional competitions and had the opportunity to meet Val Chmerkovskiy from Dancing With The Stars at a fundraiser for the Ballroom Dancing Cancer Foundation in Brooklyn, NY.

Charlotte Williams wrote that she "deferred freshman year and was accepted into Princeton's Bridge Year Program in Peru along with six other Princeton students. She spent the academic year living with a host family in Urubamba, taking Spanish classes, volunteering on a water filter project, and teaching English in a local public school. She also traveled within the country, completing the Inca trail to Machu Picchu, visiting Lake Titicaca, and ziplining on the edge of the Amazon jungle. She also attempted to surf. She misses the beautiful landscape, the delicious food, and her friends and host family. She misses less the non-potable water and hospitalizations due to parasites. She is excited to start school in the fall and nervous that she hasn't taken a test or written a paper in over a year."

Brit Bucklee worked on Spider-Man 2 and studied in Italy with NYU this summer. This year he also joined the Delta Kappa Alpha national cinema fraternity and will be their social chair for the 2013-2014 year.

Rachel Maddox said "I had a great first year at Conn College. I did props for a show that we did in collaboration with the well-renowned Q Brothers, as well as costumes for Into the Woods, and lights for a student production. Speaking of student run, I re-wrote, re-staged, and co-directed my original play, The Pretenders, and it was performed twice for the Conn community, which was also really exciting. And besides that, I've been getting involved with at-risk youth in the New London community, and I will be a student adviser to the freshmen for the upcoming year. Holla."

Erica Glancey wrote: "I made the equestrian team at Skidmore and we tied with Saint Lawrence for the prestigious Collegiate Cup at the IHSA National Championships. Still riding and showing this summer to keep up with riding but have no job, which is so ideal."

Jessica Goldberg reported: "I basically sat in a dark classroom learning about finance and accounting from 9-4 every day since May 28 but I'm happy to say that this time next week I'll be 16 credits with Business Minor from Villanova. Not the best way to spend my summer. Also I joined Kappa Kappa Gamma."

Hunt Griffith took Organic Chemistry all summer.

Jennifer Martin danced her heart out in San Francisco this summer after a successful first year at the University of Arizona School of Dance. She also made two new YouTube videos this winter. Check her out at youtube.com/thedancindiva5678

Will Westcott's dad wrote that "though Will tends to be modest, as proud parents, we want to let you know that he was on the engineering department's dean's list for both semesters of his freshman year at Northeastern University. His interest is in civil engineering."

Maddie Miller reported: "I had a great year at RPI. I refound my love for diving, which is good since that seems to be all I do nowadays. Broke two school records, was Liberty Leagues Diver of the Year and was named the RPI Women's Swim and Dive team's Rookie of the Year and was also an alternate for Nationals. Also was Liberty League Rookie of the Week and Diver of the Week at some point. This summer, I was an assistant coach for LSA and the team came in 3rd at champs, which was pretty cool."

"It is my turn to say thank you for a bond that has lasted over 50 years."

Carl D. Reimers

Faculty member 1960 to 1999, P'80, Trustee 1999 to 2010

"My relationship with the school began in 1960 when I joined the faculty of Miss Fine's School. Since then, I have thoroughly enjoyed a long relationship with the school as a teacher, parent, and as a trustee. In my view, our faculty is second to none, and I included PDS in my estate plans because I knew the funds I gave would be used to support outstanding teaching. That I also saved on taxes and increased my income during my lifetime by funding a charitable trust for the school with low-yielding securities was a great bonus."

The May Margaret Fine Society: Established in 1998, the May Margaret Fine Society recognizes those loyal alumnae/i, parents and friends who have informed the school that they have made provisions for Princeton Day School in their estate plans. Including the school in their will, establishing a charitable trust while maintaining life income, or naming the school as a life insurance beneficiary are some of the ways these individuals have helped secure the long-term strength of Princeton Day School.

If you have included Princeton Day School in your estate plans or would like to learn more about including the school in your estate plans, contact Kathy Schulte, Director of Advancement, at 609-924-6700 ext. 1255 or kschulte@pds.org.
