P DARE S

This year's theme, dare, comes with the completion of the new library, the new arts building, and all of the other new facilities which bring a whole new light and attitude into Princeton Day School. These new spaces hold an extraordinary amount of potential in aspects physically, mentally, and creatively. New and improved courses are now being offered that students would not have been able to experience without these spaces, which include a dance studio, fitness room, ceramics room, architecture room, and photo lab. In essence, these new spaces are daring the student body to step up to these new challenges presented. The dare is already there for the students to accept, whether the challenge is learning a dance recital or creating an artistic masterpiece.

Dear Seniors,

It seems slightly surreal to be writing this yearbook message to you in mid-October, when we're still enjoying the Indian summer weather and your class's terrific support of all our fall activities.

One of the reasons I was eager to return to PDS this year was the Class of 2008. Your inclusiveness, care for each other and willingness to assume the responsibilities that come with leadership will serve our school well this year and will continue to serve you well as you travel beyond PDS.

Your teachers and I are confident that the habits of the mind and habits of the heart that you have acquired here at PDS will help to frame the way you approach and embrace the new experiences that await you.

Remember your friends and teachers who cared for and helped you to stretch and grow at PDS. Travel far and wide; revel in the multitude of opportunities that await you.

Keep in touch and come back to visit us. We will always remember your terrific class.

Sincerely,

Lila B. Lohr
Interim Head of School

Dedication 2008

Dear Alison,

Throughout our high school careers you have been there every morning to greet us with a warm, bright smile. We can count on you to know each of our names and advisor, a feat unaccomplished by anyone else. Walking drowsily into school in the morning, you are there to start off our day with your friendly face and endearing personality. If we had gone home sick the day before, you are always thoughtful enough to ask us how we are feeling. PDS couldn't have asked for a better, harder working receptionist. Our community is just that much better with you as a part of the staff. The Class of 2008 is proud to dedicate the yearbook to you, with much love. Thank you for all of your care and devotion.

Love,

The Students Activities Committee (SAC), is one of Princeton Day School's most popular student government positions.

The main objective of SAC is to plan events to help the student body remain active, social, and to increase school spirit and unity. Some of SAC's most popular events are Homecoming, the Winter Dance, the Spring Dance, and B-Link. SAC has done an amazing job of building a consensus amongst the Upper School Student body, and bringing the classes together.

There is truly no better group to throw get-togethers than a group comprised of students. SAC extends all the values of PDS. At each event that we charge admission, there is a community service organization to which the money will be donated. This year on behalf of SAC I am proud to say that we have teamed up with Homefront to insure that no family goes without blankets as the seasons begin to change. To encourage kids to join our efforts on this project we created a creative marketing strategy. To get into the dance for free you could bring in a gently used blanket or comforter. All over the school there were posters reading "Homecoming for Homefront," and due to everyone's desire to help we had one of the biggest turnouts at a PDS dance, 282 PDS students and guests.

SAC represents the spirit of the school, and our willingness to help out the community at large. It embraces all the values that the PDS community has been built on, and is a great way to unite the Upper School. While looking back on PDS and SAC, I will always remember the great things we have done, and how much got accomplished each year.

spirit WEEK

Students dress up as their favorite musical artist to promote school unity during Sprit Week.

The Halloween Parade

Halloween is a holiday that thrives on spirit, energy, and imagination. It is an opportunity for even the quietest person to dress up and to wear a mask, both literally and figuratively. A timid first grader can become a fearless superhero. A 4th grade girl can become a beautiful princess. Often, however, as children grow up, their love and excitement for Halloween fades. Upper School students no longer trick or treat, and therefore see no point in creating elaborate costume.

In a valiant effort to unite the Lower, Middle, and Upper Schools, PDS holds an annual Halloween Parade. Each grade would choose a theme, and each member of the grade would sport a costume that somehow pertained to the theme. This past year, the Halloween Parade was booming with spirit. Each grade seemed to go all out with elaborate costumes and fantastic themes. The participation was fantastic, and the chants and cheering made the event all the more successful. Thanks PDS, for saving the spirit of Halloween.

The clubs at Princeton Day School are quite spectacular. They truly do show the diversity of activities here at PDS. From the dedicated and committed writers and editors at The Spokesman, to the fantasy-reading and Quidditch-loving people of the Harry Potter Club, to the African culture laced Nigerian Club. Everyone can fancy their interest with the broad activities offered.

For me, I have really taken an interest in the Yearbook. I started my sophomore year, collecting photos and text to fill the pages. The whole idea of creating spreads and layouts with Adobe InDesign fascinated me, so I followed my interest and sought out a more advanced position within the publication. Fast-forward to this year, my senior year, and it has been the second year I have been editor. The wide variety of clubs and activities at PDS allowed me to try many different things and eventually find what I like to do. For me, that's producing a yearbook, but for the rest of participants in other clubs, it's a wide variety of things.

It is experience, more than mere convenience, which compels me to praise the art department; after pursuing all but one of its subdivisions during my four years here, it has become, both literally and figuratively, a sanctuary. Every time the theoretical hum-drum of "academics," or the monotony of darting from one carpeted classroom to its mirror image becomes too overwhelming, I am welcomed by the open and interactive spaces so characteristic of Furniture Design, Fine and Media Art, Ceramics, Architecture, and Photography. And while the latter subjects are often distinguished from straight education, they ultimately provide the tools for synthesizing and expressing complex or abstract philosophies. In other words, this notion of art is the application of ideas to form a concrete, physical reality; however trite it may sound, Mr. Irwin, Mr. Hirniak, Mrs. Jaeckle, Mr. Burkett, and Mrs. Hothmuth-Lemmonick teach us how to make actual use of learning, which is essentially the ongoing process of life.

I have come across teachers discussing a project, and been asked genuinely to give my opinion, a gesture that both inspires new artists, and is representative of the arts' value for variety of input, even from colleagues with whom competition could potentially arise. It is to the benefit of Princeton Day School that the art department embodies these aspects of the artistic ethos, permitting and encouraging freedom of expression within both local and global contexts so that everyone, neophyte to experienced aesthete, is able to learn from each others' thoughts. Or, perhaps more accurately, from one another's interpretations of the ideas that circulate the world and each common, carpeted classroom. Whether a chair to be sat in, a still-life painting, a film concerning a real situation, a cup thrown for a cause, a building designed for a working artist, or a journalistic photograph, art always occurs within its historical and ideological context; no site seems better equipped for its execution than this new concrete-and-glass edifice, through the windowed walls of which streams a constant vision of reality, as if permeated by that essence of life.

to be active.

For all four of my years at Princeton Day School, I have been not just a student, but also an athlete.

Being a student-athlete at PDS is a great experience because everyone respects both sides of you. After being in math class, last period on a Friday afternoon, I'd run to my lacrosse game on the turf, and find my math teacher sitting in the stands cheering us on. When May 18th rolled around, and we found ourselves playing for the state championship, standing on the sidelines were family, friends, faculty and staff, all who had made the long drive to support our team and show school spirit. As a senior and co-head of the Athletic Association, I have found that athletics aren't only about who is playing on the field, but also about the spirited fans on the bleachers. Face-painted fans in jerseys, chants for the senior stars, and a third grader holding a sign saying "You just got SCHOOLED by a Panther!" are just some of the extras that make PDS athletics more than just the final score. But that's not to mention big wins and big seasons...In my own high school career I've played for a team that visited two state championships, a county championship, held a 15-0 undefeated season, and won multiple league titles. I will be graduating among many other athletes, including a best friend who will be going on to play Division I soccer, a classmate who is a nationally-ranked tennis player, a football player who broke PDS's record for rushed yards, and a figure skater who received a gold medal at the State Games of America. Athletics are a big part of the PDS experience for lots of kids, and many of us will remember sports as a highlight of our four years in high school.

With great anticipation, we opened the season under the lights against Morrisville, in front of one of our largest crowds, and were able to come from behind and win. Our next big game was over Fall Weekend, against the George School, which we also won. Saturday, October 6, 2007 would go down as a big day for our team, as Mike Shimkin would break a 32-year-old rushing record, held by Billy Martin. We suffered our second loss of the year, after a hard fought battle against Perkiomen, but bounced back with a win against Delaware Military Academy. Our last scheduled game was played against Tower Hill, which we lost, but then found out we were invited to play one additional game against Elkton Christian Academy, for the Crusader Bowl. What better way to send out this great senior class with not only winning the game, but also bringing home a trophy, beating Elkton Christian 27-8. This year's team included seven seniors, six of whom played all four years. While they may be graduating, their hard work, team leadership, dedication, memories and heart will last a lifetime.

football

The Field Hockey team started its journey at 6:30 a.m. on the first day of preseason, when we were welcomed with two weeks of rain and a surprisingly small number of girls. The team had lost a core of strong players from the class of 2007, in addition to losing senior Emily Cook, who was out for the whole season because of an ACL injury. The seniors decided not to let any of these things deter us from our goal of having a successful season.

The road to success was not easy; we began our season with five losses. But we never gave up. Finally, in a game against the George School, during which we battled against questionable calls by the referees and a bad grass field, we achieved our first win. From that point on, we were hard to stop.

Joining the team were juniors Georgia Travers and Bryanna Mayes, sophomores Kayla Bostwick and Victoria Maloney, and freshmen Sydney Jenkins, Cameron Giles, Courtney Klein, and Ali Shockey. The returning players were seniors Erin Burns, Katherine Levinton, Marlyse Mazzeo, and Lindsey Mischner, and juniors Alison Sorrentino, Charlotte Lescroart, Becca Lavinson, Caitlin Gribbin, and Mariel Jenkins.

The best game of our season was our homecoming game, against Blair Academy. Blair is a strong team that always forces us to our limits. However, this year, we came onto the field fired up. We followed our mantra, to always sharpen our focus during the first five and the last five minutes of each half. It was not an easy game, but we succeeded in shutting out Blair 4-0. A different person scored each goal and each player contributed to the win.

The field hockey team this year came together to form a veritable team, in all senses of the word. We supported each other through wins, losses, and ties, and we had a fun time doing so. Thanks for a great season, girls!

girls' soccer

With only six returning players, including one senior, an intense, new coach, the transition to a different style of play and having six freshmen on the team, we knew this season would be a challenge. This year it was about creating a team, not only a team that worked hard together everyday, but a team built by friendship. As soon as preseason started, our team's bonding began. After our first Friday practice, we drove to the Jersey Shore and spent the weekend at one of the player's homes. Together, while we were there, we designed a team sweatshirt that we wore with pride throughout the season. Designing the sweatshirt together brought us closer and helped us learn to communicate and interact in a productive manner, which would help us out on the soccer field. Before every game, we had a team "get together." The "get together" either involved dinner at a teammate's house, which seemed like a never ending bowl of pasta, or a breakfast at school, which consisted of bagels, fruits, and muffins, giving us long lasting energy for our games.

The Girls' Varsity Soccer Team rose to the challenge and worked extremely hard. We started the season off with four wins and one tie against rival Hun, but one of the most memorable games was against undefeated, Blair Academy. After the regular 80-minute regulation time, adding two "golden goal" ten-minutes overtimes, we found the back of the net in the last 26 seconds, crushing Blair's undefeated season. At the end of the season, our record was 9-5-1, and we had more success than anyone thought we could. Our team felt more like a family, rather than just a group of girls who play soccer together at the end of the school day.

Wow, what a season! Although our record could have been a bit better, the season as a whole was a learning experience. Our fairly young team (only three Upperclassmen) spent the season practicing and perfecting our rails, drop shots, boasts, lobs, and cross court shots. We bonded and grew as a team, and that is something that a record of our matches could never show. We still managed to pull off some wins against some of our rivals, Princeton Junior Squash and Blair to name a few, and we gritted our teeth through the losses and moved on as a team. Good luck in your next seasons, squashers!

boys' soccer

The 2007 season was a great one for the PDS Boys' Varsity soccer team. Each player showed up to every practice and every game ready to work hard, and by the end of the season we had a significantly improved group of players who came together and bonded as a team on and off the field.

Headed by a large senior group including Antoine Hoppenot, Jeff Landy, James Cole, Matt Castello, Kevin Shannon, Evan Sachs, Isaac Geltzer, Nishil Patel, Stew Johnson, Alon Debiche, and Brody Sanford, the team was able to combine leadership and experience to produce a number of hard-fought games. There many close and exciting matches highlighted by the games against perennial rivals Lawrenceville and Pennington. We will always remember the intense practices with tires to build our mental and lung capacities and will never forget our tribute to Malcolm at the bonfire.

The juniors are ready to step up and lead the team next year, while the sophomores and freshman are prepared to improve and play a larger role in the team's success in years to come. With a large number of young talents, the team's future looks bright. Thanks to coach Murphy and Laughlin for their dedication and effort throughout the past four years.

girls' tennis

The 2007 Varsity Tennis Team is not one to be forgotten. After our great 2006 season, we didn't think it could get any better. With three new varisty players, Elena Bowen, Sami Leib, and Samantha Schaeffer, we were proven wrong. We were a small team, but mighty. Our highlights included our final match upset over Hopewell, in which one of our swing players, Arielle Multak, won at third singles.

Other triumphs included a defeat over Hun and Sami Leib's first place prize in the Mercer County Tournament at first singles. We concluded the season 11-4, a tremendous improvement from last year's 8-7. A special thanks to Devon and Arielle for being there to fill in when we were short a player or two.

Not only did our team have an incredibly successful year, but we also started a new tradition: Our coaches took us to Bucks County Coffee Co. to get slushies as a reward for beating Stuart (twice). We all agreed that it was too much fun not to continue. Not only will we be remembered for our excellence, but also for being the team to start this tradition. We have no doubt that the Varisty Tennis teams to come will have many victories over Stuart.

We would all like to thank Coach Headley and Coach Healey for all of their hard work this season. You both made us into better tennis players, and made the season so much fun. Although tennis is based on individual wins, we were more of a team than I could have imagined. With your support and enthusiasm, we truly grew together. We will always remember to "feed the right tiger." Thank you for all you've done for us and for the PDS Tennis Program.

All in all, I think that the PDS Fencing team had an outstanding season. We partook in some amazing matches, a good majority of them being wins, and we even succeeded in annihilating the highly reputed Voorhees team (an achievement from which we derived a tremendous amount of gratification). Best of all, we had fun, and created a foundation for an amazing team next year. Through the precarious practice of many tedious techniques, all aimed towards one point, we pulled through with a strong sense of unison and pride.

The first day the team stepped on the ice, all the hesitation left our minds. With our new head coaches Kat Smithson and Gretchen Jaeckel on board we knew we were in for an adventurous and wild ride. With numerous new skaters, the veteran players took it upon themselves to make them feel comfortable and to help them through this incredible journey of learning the sport. Regardless of any outcome, win or lose the girls always found a way to have an entertaining time. As a team we had an abundance of team bonding moments, including kickboxing and our unforgettable psyches. We also had a team sleepover at the rink that our coaches so graciously agreed to. This year, I'm truly pleased to say that I was part of the girl's basketball team. The varsity team currently has a record of 10-8 while the junior varsity team also has an impressive record of 6-6. The freshmen grade enabled both teams to occupy the spots previously held by the Class of '07. This year was filled with numerous rebounds from the new all-star freshman, Tiffany Patterson, while Lea Brown offered assistance with her super ball-handling skills. Together with Sarah Lipkin and Carly O'Brien, the varsity team foresaw a great season. Tuckman's sense of humor and Coach Katz's constant support and inability to sit still during a game, added to the enthusiastic atmosphere while Coach Jen enabled the junior varsity team to enjoy a fun season with a record that surpassed previous years in JV basketball. If Cross-country 2007 could be stripped to its barest essentials, these would be talent and a will to do well at the sport: we cannot deny gaining many able runners, but most everyone, newcomers included, challenged him- or herself to his or her best race. It seems to me that this motivation to accomplishment, more than our final, excellent record (Patriot Conference Champions!), represents our true achievement. Often, "competition"

cross country would arise between people vying for the same team placement, but, ironically, this would foster a collaboration, which propelled both to do better—and none seemed worse sports for a loss or a win. So, for all the sacredness of cross-country competitions being "meets" (veteran members react rather explosively when someone asks, unfortunately enough, when our next game is), this season was above all a game. Players dared others, as well as themselves, to success, but eventually emerged as friends on a team built and dependent upon their participation, camaraderie against our opponents.

Talent, and a socially- and personally-motivated will, constituted the core values that accompanied the 2007 Cross-country team. Perhaps fresh ability fated this season for success, but it was the exchange between veterans, newbies, and coaches which really echoes, and is the root of, our achievements. In both meets and games, we win. Thanks, everyone (parents too!), for this.

to educate.

The Ancient Romans would not approve of this year's theme "dare." The verb 'to dare' in classical Latin audere is value free, but it is linked with a term of strong moral disapprobation, audacia—reckless disregard for authority coupled with too high an estimation of one's self. To most Romans, for example, the mythic figure Icarus was not a heroic figure as much as an anti-hero— a negative exemplar of disobedience. He disobeyed his father, he followed his own impulses, he shunned the middle path, and crashed into the sea named after him—Icarian. He was, in short, audacious.

At some point in the Late Renaissance, however, writers and artists began to mitigate the pejorative themes of the Icarus story and flesh out some positive ones—Icarus was the spitting image of his trailblazing father Daedalus—bold, inventive, and adventurous. The freethinker, Bruno, for instance, evokes Icarus in his Gl'eroici furorori and soon the child acquires Promethean qualities of derring-do and mortal curiosity. Thus, nowadays, we see Icarus as an intrepid symbol of our Air Force Academy, and we can download Icarus software on-line, so that "You play brave young Icarus as he battles through an insane number of enemies."

What's going on here? Even in the English language we have this new buzzword, devised in the 90's, "risk-taking" which denotes a positive value. A quite different meaning is implicit in a phrase like 'risky behavior'. Examine our very theme word—dare. We see it in uplifting slogans like "dare to dream", but also in reproaches like "how dare you!" or "you wouldn't dare!"

Maybe there is a generational split on the 'dare' notion. I admired the stuntman and motorcyclist, Evel Knievel as a child— an Icarus for my time, the daredevil incarnate. I had an action-figure toy of him, decked out like a latter-day-Olympian or an Elvis-on-Wheels— crash helmet and a leather body suit studded with stars and stripes and laced with white fringe. I remember when he tried to jump the Snake River Canyon on his motorcycle. (the real guy, not my toy). The stunt was broadcast "live" on major networks. I was riveted. My parents were fairly certain Western civilization had come to an end. Foolhardy stunts broadcast live before millions? Only idiots would watch that! (Don't get them started on reality television).

Perhaps, too, the word has built into it humanity's mixed feelings on the matter. We admire just enough daring in people before it shades into recklessness. Most of us have tried a roller coaster, but rocketing your Harley over a deep chasm.... Hmm. These linguistic puzzles are hard to unravel; the fun comes in thinking them through. In the meantime, dare to dream with your feet on the ground.

Interim Head of School Lila Lohr

Dear Seniors,

It seems slightly surreal to be writing this yearbook message to you in mid-October, when we're still enjoying the Indian summer weather and your class's terrific support of all our fall activities.

One of the reasons I was eager to return to PDS this year was the Class of 2008. Your inclusiveness, care for each other and willingness to assume the responsibilities that come with leadership will serve our school well this year and will continue to serve you well as you travel beyond PDS.

Your teachers and I are confident that the habits of the mind and habits of the heart that you have acquired here at PDS will help to frame the way you approach and embrace the new experiences that await you.

Remember your friends and teachers who cared for and helped you to stretch and grow at PDS. Travel far and wide; revel in the multitude of opportunities that await you.

Keep in touch and come back to visit us. We will always remember your terrific class.

Sincerely,

Lila B. Lohr

to discover.

The Lower School builds important foundations that support students throughout their years at PDS. It is here that we first nurture the sense of a community of learners where everyone has an important voice. The Lower School is a vibrant, active place. A visitor might spot the Junior Kindergarteners clapping and stomping out the syllables in songs featuring their own names, Kindergarteners learning a lively card game to help them build math concepts, a first grade class working on poetry with a group of upper school students, second graders turning their classrooms into desert, rainforest or arctic scenes, third grade classrooms exploring their own “backyards” and venturing to places like Washington’s Crossing, or fourth graders heading to the pond with their home-made mud-scoopers. Students enjoy rich experiences in music, art, foreign language and technology. The love of learning that thrives here propels our students to make great gains as independent and creative thinkers.

to grow.

The 2007-08 school year featured exiting changes in the middle school. Between September and January, we opened amazing new spaces for the visual and performing arts, a significantly expanded middle school library, and a vast, well-stocked fitness center.

As we toured each new space, we marveled at all the new possibilities for learning. We also opened up new spaces outside for recess, extended our 7th and 8th graders' sports practices, giving them more time daily to be their best on game days, launched the first-annual flea market to raise funds for 5th grade community service, and re-envisioned the student government to be a community council focused on environmental sustainability, diversity and inclusion, and social events.

Lots remained the same, of course—the 8th graders wowed us with their musical, Damn Yankees, and gave us fine Focus speeches; Destination Imagination and Lego Robotics teams thrived; the choirs, band, and strings ensemble shined; mini-week was a blast; the fall play Get Smart was a hit; students excelled at math, spelling, and geography competitions; sports teams played hard and did well; and foreign language students chatted in their target languages over lunch in the mezzanine.

Middle schoolers wrote papers, took tests, did their nightly homework, bumped their book bags down the steps, and gathered around the ping pong tables. They came out in hoards for the dances, ice skating socials, and fun night and gave Blue and White Day their best.

Through it all, and guided by caring teachers who sparked their interests, coached them on and off the playing fields, directed them on stage and in ensembles, and met with them for extra help or inspiration, our students made lasting friendships, learned lots, and helped make the Princeton Day School middle school a great place.

to achieve.

Educational relationships are central to the upper school experience. Teachers engaging students to think critically, be creative, communicate clearly, and act thoughtfully are at the heart of that experience. The facilities in which these relationships are nurtured are also important. They provide a sense of place and home in which to engage in these meaningful relationships.

This year is unique in PDS's history. The gorgeous new spaces in which faculty can teach and students can learn, have brought out a new energy, spirit, and excitement to their daily lives. The opening up of the stunning new arts wing, music rooms, dance studio, Fox multi-purpose room, library and fitness center has infused the school culture with a great new sense of opportunities.

Just before the new library opened, there was a memorable moment that speaks volumes about the uniqueness of PDS students. Jody Gerlock, the upper school librarian, began her announcement to the entire student body saying, "tomorrow is an exciting day." The theater erupted with a thunderous ovation. Just as there was a lull, she finished her sentence, "the new library will be opening tomorrow." Again, the place went wild with enthusiasm. What a statement about students who would be wildly cheering for their library to be opened. And, when it did open the next day, it lived up to its expectation. Students have loved the openness of the space, the comfortable seating, the special light and windows looking outside, and the different places where one can study. They have quickly been impressed by the new space and expressed pride in it.

Similarly, students have been in awe of the new art and dance studios and music rooms, including the Fox room. The arts faculty have felt renewed in spirit and energized by these new spaces. This has translated into a excitement in their teaching. PDS was daring in its building project, and in doing so, it has led to an institutional re-invention. The same excitement, enthusiasm, and energy that went into the building is evident in the renewed spirit and pride in PDS. It has also created unique spaces in which teachers and students can engage in those meaningful dialogues that are central to the educational relationships here at PDS.

to complete.

We came into the upper school four short years ago as separate individuals. Many of us were new to PDS; some of us had been at PDS since JK; all of us were at the start of a new journey, which we would travel together. I look now at the pictures of us from way back then, in the fall of 2004, and we looked like babies. At the time, 2008 seemed like it was a million years away. Now, amazingly, it is just around the corner. The future beckons, but even as we look ahead to the exciting events that are coming our way, we already are starting to feel nostalgic about the place we have called home for the past four years, the place that has nurtured us and taught us amazing lessons about life and friendship that we will carry with us forever.

The first part of my PDS experience was scarred when I broke my leg in my first soccer game. Not a great way to start high school, but the cloud had a silver lining. One of my first great memories happened right after that accident. I was rushing off to my group voice class, trying to balance my books and negotiating myself down the stairs with my sore arms and my crutches. Another freshman saw me struggling and suggested we get a wheelchair. Over the next couple of days, my classmates rallied behind me, quite literally, pushing me around from class to class. Their kindness and consideration made my difficult situation infinitely more tolerable and certainly more fun. This is one of my first memories of my class, and it colors my perception of the kind of people we are. Our class is great simply because, regardless of the situation or the person, we are there for each other. This support system has been especially important these last couple of years with the stress of SATs, AP classes, and the college application process adding to the general stress of being a teenager.

Since freshman year, our class unity has grown stronger each year. This year our class spirit came shining through at Homecoming and the Halloween parade, when we swept all three awards categories. As classes have become more challenging and the workload has grown, the senior class has gelled together, supporting each other every step of the way, making the work seem less arduous and each class seem more enjoyable. We have come such a far way since that first day of school in September 2004. I am extremely proud of our class. Forever I will remember PDS not by what I did as an individual, but by the strength of our class and all that we accomplished. We entered the upper school as individuals, but we leave as an unbreakable union, a truly unified class, the class of 2008.

Message from the Dean...

I am never good with goodbyes, as it feels like a relationship is ending. Instead, I want to look at this as parting in a different way, as you enter a new phase of your lives. There is some responsibility in sending you on; that said, I hope that your experience at PDS has been the best possible for each of you.

I have watched you grow up, change, and make the most of yourselves. Most of you were 14 when I met you; now many of you are 18. We've been through a lot together, and we've (or at least I've) had some great times. The beach trip, sophomore research paper (the last of an era!) and promo themes, a GREAT prom and elections too close to call—so many memories! From the Red Sox beating the Yankees (I had to get that in there) to the first attempt at a senior skip day, each day has been an adventure. Four years later—classes, grades, trips, games, performances, events later—you have made it. You did all you could do, you found yourselves, and you supported each other through it all. You evolved from a diverse group of freshmen to become the scholars, athletes, performers, and friends that make you the Class of 2008.

Now you are ready to move on. Feel good about yourselves and look back on your high school experience with pride! I am proud of you and I will miss you all. You are in my heart, truly.

This is not goodbye; it is good luck. I wish the best to each and every one of you.

Signed, for the last time,
Your loving dean,
P.S. Don't you dare make me cry at graduation!

This letter goes out to My Friend Evan Sachs:

I don't know how you're doing these days, but lately I've been doing a lot of thinking. I'm currently working on my approach to everything, from relationships, to life itself. The course of action that keeps coming to mind is meditation, and other Eastern practices. I am trying to increase my awareness of things, as well as enjoy everything for what it is and when it happens. I want to realize the beauty in things, and so I am trying to slow-down-my-life. The current step of this approach is building a strong internal groundwork. With this base, I can then become content with myself, and begin to approach things clearly, truthfully, and with more compassion & kindness. Right now I am striving for this as well as finding Love and happiness. REAL and honest Love and happiness. But I don't want to try too hard, or think about this too much, I need to find a balance. Because if I spend my time looking for these things specifically, then I may have trouble finding them. But if I can step back to see things fully, and live a balanced life, I think I will enjoy my time more, and find my own truths more naturally.

I just want to live truthfully, and not fool myself.

You know that, and I hope you have been sticking to it. If you haven't been, why not start now? Just remember to be honest with yourself.

I love You Man,
Evan B. Sachs

Trevor-

So here we are. I'm not sure how old you will be when you read this, but I don't that matters. Presumably you will come back to this page at various points in your life. This presents a challenge to me - how am I to speak to myself at different times in the future? Perhaps I shouldn't try at all, for each day I live past this adds to my breadth of knowledge and ultimately makes me more wise than I was. So what good is the voice of the past if the man it speaks to is wiser? I suppose I do have something on you - I can tell you, without the haze of time or influence of future knowledge exactly what were your aspirations at this juncture. What, at the age of 18, standing on the edge of now and the rest of your life, I hoped you would be.

First off, I hope you find her. She may not be who you expect, but trust your intuition.

More than anything, though, I hope you get there. I hope you never stop thinking, and I hope you achieve what I have been so dedicated in seeking. Mental peace. True understanding. It is a pilgrimage, but not a lifelong one, I feel - there will come a point, not long from now, when your understanding is great enough that what remains is the act of doing what you have set out on paper.

What that life is like, kid, I cannot say. You will know better than I.

Godspeed.

Meghan Shapiro

Way to go Meghan!

Congratulations to the Class of 2008!

It's been incredible to watch you grow, learn and achieve so much at PDS.

Now, after a lifetime here, you can take on the rest of the world.

Enjoy life.

Keep smiling.

And always know how proud we are of who you are.

Love, Dad, Lynda, Leslie and Gene

Graeme Nowell Carvlin

Graeme,
We are so proud of all of your accomplishments at Princeton Day School!
Great Job!

Love, Mom, Dad and Alec

Erik Donovan

Erik,

Since the very beginning you have always seemed determined to do things your own way. Oh, the poor preschool teacher raising her voice to stop you from spinning on the tables!!! I would watch the other 4 year olds sitting semi-quietly, keeping themselves busy, and then there was you; a force to be reckoned with. But your teacher loved you. As did the many other teachers who have come and gone and have tried to gently guide and nourish you along the way. You certainly learned to stop spinning, but conformation has never been your thing. And although it can be frustrating at times, I believe it is this great quality in you that will help you most in life. You have a strong will and a determination to not be the next square peg, re-shaped and molded. Hold tight to being true to yourself and you will find your way. I believe PDS has helped you maintain your individuality. Never one for coloring inside the lines, PDS allowed you to create your own pictures.

To quote the Tao:

*A huge tree that you can't get your arms around Grows from a tiny seedling birth
A tower of nine stories high
Rises from a small heap of earth.*

A thousand mile journey begins with one step.

You are at the beginning of your journey.
Remember that one person can make a difference.

We love you so much,
Mom, Dada and Jamie

Caitlin Wollack

Congratulations Caitlin!

It's been a great ride.

Congratulations Ariel!

What a beautiful and strong young woman you've become! Your father and I join in wishing you a long and successful career. As a child you were always versatile and creative. These visionary traits have reinforced your passion for the Arts. Embrace those accomplishments and your many talents, which we are proud of.

We know that you will succeed to your highest potential in your profession. You have shown such loyalty and sincere affection towards your sisters throughout the years. Michaela and Gabrielle will miss your unconditional love. So, put those dreams into action and enjoy the journey.

With the greatest Love and Affection
Mom, Dad and the Twins

Kalla Alexis Gervasio

We have been through a difficult journey together and now I must set you free to spread your wings and fly. As you soar to new heights seeking your destiny, remember there will always be a light shining down on you from heaven. You have grown into an accomplished, sensitive, sweet young woman, all that Daddy and I hoped for. He would be so proud as am I to call you the best daughter in the world.

Jenna Glass

When I find myself in times of trouble

Mother Mary comes to me

Speaking words of wisdom, let it be

And in my hour of darkness

She is standing right in front of me

Speaking words of wisdom, let it be

Let it be, let it be

Let it be, let it be

Whisper words of wisdom, let it be

And when the broken hearted people

Living in the world agree

There will be an answer, let it be

There is still a chance that they will see

There will be an answer, let it be

Let it be, let it be

Let it be, let it be

Whisper words of wisdom, let it be

Let it be, let it be

Ah let it be, yeah let it be

Whisper words of wisdom, let it be

And when the night is cloudy

There is still a light that shines on me

Shine on until tomorrow, let it be

I wake up to the sound of music,

Mother Mary comes to me

Speaking words of wisdom, let it be

Yeah let it be, let it be

Let it be, yeah let it be

Oh there will be an answer, let it be

Let it be, let it be

Let it be, yeah let it be

Oh there will be an answer, let it be

Let it be, let it be

Ah let it be, yeah let it be

Whisper words of wisdom, let it be

Will, you have achieved what few have even attempted and many have failed. We are so proud of you and wish you many more successes in the years ahead. Lots of Love,

Dad, Mom, and Ginny

Pam Lee

You've exceeded our hopes and dreams by becoming a beautiful, intelligent, caring adult. You've made it easy for us to be parents and you've graced your brother with the kindest sister any little boy could ask for. "It's all you!" You should be proud of yourself. We certainly are! Congratulations!

Now, enjoy the big, wide world; you're ready for it. If, by chance, you want a warm fire, a cup of hot chocolate and a great big hug, you know where to find us. We'll always be here for you. Always and forever! Love you much! Mom, Dad, Norm, Brooklyn, Cody, Trivet & Nikki

Michael Malyn

Congratulations on your success during your four years at PDS, and your having been editor of the yearbook for the past two years. We wish you much success in college and beyond. We are very proud of you.

Tova Ferstenberg

It's been an honor watching you grow, strive and achieve. You have always demonstrated honorable values and integrity. This year comes with mixed emotions. To see you move forward on the last leg of your academic journey. To desire that you stay right here beside us and continue to be a light and source of our great adoration and entertainment. You are blessed with wonderful gifts-a keen intelligence, quick sense of humor, compassionate soul to care so deeply for other individuals and animals alike, a beauty so intense that it radiates from the inside/out. You have a responsibility to use your gifts to their fullest potential to benefit as many people as possible.

Go far and be great, but not too far-always stay within reach because you represent so much to so many.

We are so incredibly proud of you.

Tova,

You have amazed us.

You amaze us today and we are sure, you will continue to amaze us in all the years to come.

Your greatest fans,

Grandma and Grandpa Rich

Tessica Glancey

To our wonderful daughter and sister, Tessica, who is just as beautiful inside as you are on the outside. We love you and are so very proud of your accomplishments and the person you've become. Congratulations! You made it!

Love, Mom, Dad, Tara and Erica

Scott McCarron

You always have a smile on your face, such warmth and sincerity, unique sense of discovery and adventure, a wonderful brother, wise beyond your 18 years. It will be so hard to let you go. With so much love, Mom and Dad, Stephen, Nana and Papa

Mike Smimkin

Congratulations Mike!

Time to set the world on fire!
We're so proud of you.
