POETRY

The Tick of the Clock at Midnight.

Through the house reigns a death-like silend

While the fragments of time, like meteors

'Tis the click of the clock at midnight

Solenily, startlingly clear.

Made audible to the ear.

Like the throb of a fevered pulsat

The death like sllence of sleep.

From the coming eternity rushing.

They illume for a moment our sky,

But no power can stay their departure

They touch on the heart of the watcher.

And our soul-stirring message hear?

And we speak to you best in the silence

Who endowed you with souls at your birth

Of the quiet dead-hush of the night.

And utter these words in his ear.

' Can ye not watch for one hour.

We are God's messengers, speeding

With swift and invisible flight.

Remember we carry our message

Of what ye are doing on earth

What are ye doing, ob, mortals ! With that glorious gift of a soul 7

Pleasure, and power, and riches,

To the Bountiful Father in Heaven.

For what are your strongest yearnings,

And what is the longed-for goal?

Leisure, and freedom from care-Is it for these ye are striving ?

Such strivings must end in despair.

Pass flashing across the deep.

They touch us and hover by.
