The existing "Local Units Permissive Consolidation Act" was enacted in 1939. Although 177 of the state's 567 municipalities are less than two square miles in area, there has been only one major successful consolidation referendam — Landis and Vineland in 1951.

The new legislation south the deficiencies of the existing law. Generally, it simplifies the procedure for iniciation and referendam on the question of creating a joint consolidation study commission, election of commission members and final vote on the question of consolidation, if so recommended.

The hill also provides some financial and technical aid for feasibility studies and financial aid for extraordinary costs of any consolidation.

The new hill is modeled from recommendations in a 1972 report by the County and Municipal Government. sharing of federally-owned aircraft and tighter control of travel hudget accounts certainly should be undertaken by all departments of the federal government. It could very well lead to a saving of millions of dollars a year.

A logical leader in this respect would be the Office of Management and Budget. I have written to OMB Acting Director James T. McIntyre, Jr., urging his office tighten the purse strings on aircraft costs.

Given the massive size of the federal budget -- which is headed for half a trillion dollars -- it is relatively easy for federal agencies to clock our sides.

relatively easy for federal agencies to cloak questionable expenditures in their operating accounts. The job of OMB is to ferret out wasteful expenditures. Air travel is clearly a fruitful ground for investigation.
