PARTIALLY MARRIED

A western paper [illegible] the following to be a fact which [illegible] of New England's quiet villages:

In old New England's [illegible] age,
When all creation [illegible]
And [illegible]
By [illegible] settlers way.

A youth and [illegible] and fair,
Had [illegible] journey, where
Through night and day, and day and night,
No [illegible] would greet their wearied sight

And [illegible] Hymen's altar stood!
[illegible] their journey through the wood
They straightway to a justice went
By love and inclination sent

The justice—good old honest [illegible]
Said it was [illegible] unfortunate
But at that time he could not bind
These two young folks of willing mind

For his commission, sad to say,
Had just expired but yesterday
Yet, after all, he would not say
That single they should go away

And so he bade them join their hands
In holy wedlock's happy bands,
And just there he would marry—
[illegible]
As they were [illegible]
[illegible]

There is only one [illegible] young lady that she would [illegible] barking [illegible] and that is a [illegible] marriage.

I want tew bet [illegible] dollars that no man ever matched himself agin the Devil [illegible] got beat.

And I want to bet [illegible] five cents more that there is [illegible] earth so greatly [illegible] a [illegible] dulge in himself.

I have [illegible] kant [illegible]

And [illegible] The man who undertakes tew jump [illegible] feet ahead [illegible] tainly make a good try.

I never knu a man who was always anxious tew repent uv his sins before he had committed them, who didn't want the [illegible] est kind uv watching.

"Don't put off till to-morrow what [illegible] did to-day." It is better even [illegible] thing at [illegible] you're mind [illegible]
