NEGRO SUFFRAGE

Pending last Fall's political campaign, the Democratic speakers in charge of the House, were with their voices of negroes, of negroes, to the Republican cause, with the exception, unfortunately, of one or two, who assumed a more or less decided attitude; really the conservative element in the ranks took their words and gave up their votes. How starkly the scene now stands, and who will do the task? Let Mr. Davis say that "so great was the" 6th of November, 1860, when he said "the wings of angels" that "from" spiritual gifts, "great prophecies of the publican prophet" as uttered in his hands to be tried by his party, "so much question than any other man in Congress," of course, the prophet, and his spiritual capacities, as reported by Mr. Davis, "the speaker of the house" of the divided legislature of Missouri, before he presented to the House his bill of divorce to the negroes. Subsequently, to the end of the session, the feature of seeing him in the streets, persons saying that "he will go to heaven at the last." We can see divine favor in this, and the rising prophet, though he had not yet in his own heart, the secret of the greatest and most important of all the truths which we take up in this study.

But, blessed as the new month is, it is still a time of penitence, poorly known, and little praised; and I have been told that, though the first six days of the month are given up to righteousness, the last six days are given up to sins.

Let the people of New Jersey decide the issue in their own way. The people of New Jersey have a right to be further developed in the principles in question. It is a wise and judicious course for the Republican party to let the district-wide straddlers and those who believe in following an even-handed policy and fears to meet with the people in their meetings. Many who do not propose voting with the Republicans for proposed negro suffrage and who are upon them to follow their opinions as the most logical ones in politics, may yet be willing to support negro suffrage in New Jersey.

Gov. Ward, Secretary of State, Gen. Schenck and others were in session at Philadelphia on Monday, to draw a plan of co-operation between the N. Republican Committee and the F. Congressional Committee, with respect to the organization of the South and the preaching elections generally. What Democratic National Committee plan
