POETRY.

SHERIFF'S SALE.

BY E. JOHNSON.

"Gone!" to satisfy the law.
"Gone!" to Mammon's greedy maw.
God of Sabbaoth, the sighing
Of the widow in distress
Dost Thou hear it and the crying
Of the poor and fatherless?
Seest Thou the hearts that bleed,
Crushed to earth by Mammon's greed!

Blood from broken hearts to draw,
Under cover of the law!
When, O God, in Thy good pleasure,
Thou shalt end earth's paltry years,
And Thou comest down to measure
Widow's prayers and orphan's tears,
Shall not prayers and tears outweigh
Mammon's gold in that great day?

Orphan's bread to Mammon's maw,
Under cover of the law!
Oh! that love had wealth of Croesus,
Joy to bring to sorrow's door—
Oh that wealth had love of Jesus
To relieve His suffering poor—
Then might earth less sorrow know,
Less of want and less of woe.

SLAVES.

[illegible]

England, can alone determine to what extent the traffic was engaged in by the people of New Jersey. The writer has heard of barracks of considerable size that once stood in Perth Amboy, in which the slaves were confined as imported; and there as in almost every place, the labor of families, with very few exceptions was exclusively performed by blacks for many years previous to the revolution. In 1757, a young gentleman in England, writing to his father in New Jersey begs that he may be favored with a young negro boy to present to a brother of the then Duke of Grafton, to whom he was under obligations, as a present of that kind would be very acceptable.

There are notices to be found of two or three "risings" that disturbed the peace of the province. One occurred in the eastern division, in the vicinity of the Raritan, early in the year 1734 in consequence of which one negro, if not more, was hung. The object of the insurrection was to obtain their freedom. [illegible] the express [illegible] of the king [illegible] and then join the Indians in the interest of the French. That they were at that time numerous in the province is pretty evident, as is also the fact that [illegible] generally treated with kindness and [illegible] [illegible]

The instructions to Lord Cornbury from her majesty Queen Anne, were of such a character, that any disposition felt to put a stop to the traffic in slaves must have been effectually checked. The Royal African Company was particularly brought to the notice of the governor as deserving his encouragement, and the instructions then proceed: "And whereas we are willing to recommend unto the said company, that the said province may have a constant and sufficient supply of merchantable negroes, at moderate rates, in money or commodities, so you are to take especial care that payment be duly made, and within a competent time, according to agreement. And you are to take care that there be no trading from our said province to any place in Africa within the charter of the Royal African, otherwise than prescribed by an act of parliament, entitled an act to settle the trade of Africa.—And you are yearly to give unto us an account of what number of negroes our said province is yearly supplied with, and at what rates."

THE TREASURED CAVE;

ADVENTURES IN THE PINES.

BY NED IRVING.

[illegible]

CHAPTER I.

The sun rose clear and bright on a cold December morning as [illegible] on the journey to the Western Pines in search of the great Treasured Cave. The frost-covered ground [illegible] as our horses galloped through the dreary woods, [illegible]

As his ears could be more easily managed than mine, he advanced slowly to learn the cause of the alarm. But in vain; we were afraid to fire for fear [illegible] what to do we could not tell. [illegible] But I had hard work to manage my stallion and getting somewhat vexed I slipped the spurs into him and away he went. Of course I could not manage him then. Taking hold of one rein with both hands I tried to guide him, but no use. He wanted to go one way and I wanted him to go the other. I clung to him, though, as the shipwrecked mariner to the last plank, and what little time I had to think I made the best use of. I had often read of the "dark ages of the past," but I'll tell you, dear reader, they can't compare with that dark night in the Pines!

On went the maddened brute. How did I

A large amount of gold was hidden in the cave, but where, none could tell. Even Nel[illegible] was in ignorance of its whereabouts. Several bags of gold had been placed there by the pirates, and a number of interesting papers that revealed to us many a horrid tale of the pirate's eventful life.

As Christians our duty is not done until we carry the knowledge of the salvation to every human being.

Time is the only gift in which God has stinted us; for he never instructs us with a second moment till he has taken away the first, and never leaves us certain of a third.

God loves to have us pray with earnestness. The best proof of earnestness is simplicity. Better in God's sight are the broken but heartfelt utterances of a child, than the highflown utterances of some who think themselves wonderful in prayer.

A mistaken tourist was found weeping over the icehouse of Mt. Vernon, thinking he was dropping tears at the tomb of Washington.

A man with a bald head was complimented on the fact that his caput was analogous to Greenland. "Why so?" he asked, "Because it is the great white bear place," was the reply.

A South Carolina negro orator said: "We'll neber desert de ole flag boys—neber! We hab lib under it for eighteen hundred sixty-nine years and we'll die for it now!"

A healthy competition is waged by two opposition stage lines in Wis[illegible]sin. One line carries for nothing and gives a dinner to each passenger; the other carries for nothing and gives each passenger a dinner and a pair of buckskin gloves.

A young lady, while operating a telegraphic instrument in an office at [illegible], Maine, [illegible] two rather verdant looking young men pass the window. In a moment [illegible] turned and fastened his eyes upon the machine, at the same time whispering his companion, "Say Bill, just [illegible] come and see 'em make paper [illegible]. Don't she know her biz—hey, Bill?"

A Cincinnati woman, who had received from the Relief Union an unfashionable pair of shoes, was equal to the emergency. She promptly returned them with the remark that she had made a mistake, and wanted No. 4's and the request, "Please give me a finer pair, and the tops [illegible] for my daughter [illegible]."

"The cue was given to the trumpeter to rise—"the trump shall sound"—and then a sudden, solemn and thrilling pause. At that moment a gang of small boys, men who had stopped outside to hear the music, rushed at the [illegible] pressed farther into the vestibule, in order to discover, if possible, the cause of this lull in the [illegible] At that instant there came, in a baffled way, through the floor, a faint "twa-ah-ah! twa-astar!—Twa-ah-eeng-ah!" One of the hardy sailors of the inland deep clapped both his hands together, and yelled out, loud enough to be heard in the church: "By Jingo! but that's the Betsy Ann comin' into Bowler's Dock. I'd know that tooting anywhere 'twixt here and Albany." The effect was slightly spoiled. I don't think they repeated that oratorio, or if they did, I'm quite sure they didn't have Gabriel's horn in the cellar.

At a very successful seance in Cincinnati the other night, a man burst into tears when the medium described very accurately a tall blue-eyed spirit standing by him, with light side-whiskers and his hair parted in the middle. "Do you know him?" inquired a man at his side, in a sympathetic whisper. "Know him? I guess I do," replied the unhappy man, wiping his eyes—"He was engaged to my wife. If he hadn't died he would have been her husband instead of me. Oh, George, George," he murmured in a voice choked with emotion, "why, did you peg out?"
