PARTY MEASURES.

The Newark Journal in referring to the action of the Democratic party during the closing days of the Legislature speaks as follows:

"Democrats were willing to allow a reasonable time to be supposed practicable to mature the political bills of the session. These bills are important on partisan grounds. They were considered a party necessity by the Republicans when they were in control of the Legislature a year ago. They redistricted and gerrymandered portions of the State to their political advantages. They passed the negro suffrage bill, contrary to the [illegible] New Jersey, contrary to the [illegible] constitution. The [illegible] Committee of prominent Democrats from all parts of the State, appointed by the Democratic State Convention, urged the passage of such measures as might enable the people of the State to [illegible] Democratic [illegible] as far as possible the [illegible] integrity and moral influence of the Government, which the Radicals are trying to throw into the hands of the Washington authorities. This we believe was the duty of the Legislature to have done, as it was the duty of the Legislature to have perfected the measures recommended. There was never a greater apparent unanimity in any course of action than was displayed by the Democrats in the early days of the redistricting bill in the Legislature caucus, though [illegible] was unanimous in favor of the bill prepared for the caucus by [illegible]. The result we have seen. Two Democratic members were [illegible] absented themselves from the House, [illegible] Republican members [illegible] Democrat [illegible] that another Democrat was in the same kind of a [illegible], kept aboard on the last day of session, drunk, that he could not vote with the Republicans on any measure. The Senate, also, had one member gracefully [illegible] a precedent established [illegible] year, and associated with the Republicans. Perhaps nothing else could have been expected from [illegible] Senate. Now the Republican [illegible] of the Independent [illegible] Democrats as they are, urge the [illegible] of Democratic caucus. That [illegible] caucus has been [illegible] by recent [illegible] probably not an [illegible] in the State acquainted with the circumstances, who does not regard the action of these treacherous Democratic legislators in the same light as that of Alderman Cain. Let [illegible] whatever name they may [illegible] their independent [illegible] action, the Republican papers [illegible] hardly [illegible] in crediting the respectable [illegible] Democrats [illegible] place [illegible] Democratic [illegible] party [illegible] the [illegible] party [illegible] the [illegible] party [illegible] the
