THE FRECKLE ON HER NOSE.

Upon her nose so cunningly,

Apparent to the sight,

Quite away and quite stunning,

Behold the freckle shining—

A summer sun, I suppose,

'Tis worthy of a sonnet.

This little brown speck,

Denotes her dainty beauty,

Above her graceful neck,

Just near the cheek of rose,

This sunny little freckle,

The freckle on her nose.

She's tried to rid her of it;

She doesn't think of it!

Her eyes flash out above it,

In indignation mute.

I think 'tis very tasty,

This knowing little freckle,

The freckle on her nose.

"OLD MAIDS."

The thirtieth anniversary of the natal day of a woman, unmarried, is generally understood to entitle her to a membership with a class usually designated by the term "Old Maids."

There is nothing disrespectful in this appellation. "Old Maids" is a sort of honorary title, and is conferred upon a woman who, by her own choice, has remained single. It is a title of
