CHAPTER I.

A young man was driving near to a summer afternoon.

He was looking at her face and proaching the shimmering occupant of the seat.

The sleep of the latter is less profound than it was evidenced by the fact that she had opened her eyes and was looking at him with a stare of astonishment.

"What is this?" she asked, in a voice of surprise.

"I am George," he answered, in a calm, steady voice.

"I have been waiting for you," he said, "and now you are here."

"I am not here," she said, "I am

not here."

"I am here," he said, "I am here."

"I am not here," she said, "I am
