So the matter ended; and the next morning saw Major March drive away from the door of Scarfell, his destination altogether uncertain in his own mind But in such a malady as his the impulse of flight is always strong. The sufferer feels as if passive endurance is more than can be borne, as if there may be relief elsewhere, or, at all events, as if motion were in itself a sort of relief. It was with the most sincere satisfaction that Charteris bade his host adject and watched the vehicle in which he was driven away vanishing from view, "Poor fellow!" he thought; "he has certainly had a facer; but how lucky it all happens for me!"

To fully explain this luckiness, it must be stated that Mr. Charteris has
