RAHWAY, N. J., FEBRUARY 26, 1886. of My Dreams

[Enteredat the Post Office at Rahway, N.J. as s cond-classmatter.

There's a land that to me is air and bright, Where my spirit oft dwells in a sweet delight, Where life is love and where love is truth. And age is more beautiful far than youth. Where the tarmoil and strife of the mad world cease, And are buried deep 'neath the waves of peace into expression. There all around me is what it seems, "Is the beautiful land of my golden dreams,

There no cloud is so dark but through, And hope's earth-c flowers their renew; There the heart forgets it can ache with pain, And our fulth in the world comes back again. There sin can not come with its hideous blight, But is washed away in the waves of light-The fair light of purity ever that gleams In the beautiful land of my cherished dreams. There are friends that I love in that far-off land,

Whose hearts are brave and whose lives are grand: I have crowned them there with a glory of light As princes of honor, as kings of right. My own soul by error is there never strained. But reaches the heights of the unattained; And fair as the flewdrop in morning's first licamt Is my own better life in the land of my dreams.

A Life for a Life.
