Dorcas Caledon,
THE HEIRESS OF CALEDON HEIGHTS.
AN AUTOBIOGRAPHY.
BY FLORENCE E. DIAMOND.

[Copyrighted, 1887, by The A. N. Kellogg News paper Company.]

CHAPTER XI.—CONCLUDED.

But time wore on, and it was at last declared that Master Phillip had at last fallen a victim to the tender passion. Pretty Senora Eldridge, with her black eyes and winning smiles, had awakened a feeling of love hitherto unknown in that manly bosom. This is what the gossips said, but whether there was any truth or not in this report at the time of its spreading I know not. But that it was wrong was evident when, a month later, as Mr. Caledon, in company with Miss Eldridge, was out on a pleasure excursion in company with a large crowd, a young lady accidentally fell overboard and must have drowned had it not been for the timely aid of Phillip Caledon, who springing into the water, rescued her and brought her safely to land. She, it proved, was a young teacher who, intent upon a holiday, had come unattended on board the yacht. She was not handsome, as heroines are generally painted in novels, but she was wonderfully attractive. At least so Phillip Caledon found her, for he devoted himself to her from that day, and in less than three months they were married. She was an orphan, and he took her at once to live in his grand country seat, where he had every thing fitted up in the richest style, and they were as happy as two birds, they said, being entirely devoted to each other.

But how fared it with Lenora Eldridge, who had firmly set her heart on being mistress of Caledon, and whom rumor very kindly pointed out as the jilted fair one of Phillip Caledon. That she was angry, mortified and wounded we have no doubt, but she did not choose to please her many admiring friends by wearing the willow over for Phillip Caledon. Accordingly the wedding bells had hardly ceased ringing for Phillip Caledon and Dorcas Welby when they rang again for Edgar Barrett and Lenora Eldridge.

Then all seemed settled for awhile for everybody except for Agnes Armund, the poor widow's daughter, who lived in a little cottage on the Caledon estate, and who had loved and worshiped Phillip Caledon as neither Lenora Eldridge nor Dorcas Welby ever did. It was the love of a life time, the love that is the curse of some, that also poured, all unasked, at his feet. And therefore why a careless not a kindly smile, a helping hand, was all he ever dreamed of bestowing on the coarse, lonely hireling who would have given her life for him so gladly.

But with Agnes Armund, as I said before, all seemed strangely unsettled, and people were wont to shake their heads when they passed her, for 'twas said she was a little queer. However, a year passed away, and there was born to Mr. Barrett a beautiful twin boy and girl. They were the joy of their father's heart, he said, and if rumor spoke true, he had need of something to comfort him beside the cold, unfeeling woman who had married him simply for a subsistence from gossip, and who made his life a burden by her sharp complaining about their poverty; for he was only a struggling young barrister, and could not afford many luxuries to his beautiful, but unhappy, young wife. But, suddenly, just as prospects were beginning to brighten for them, Mr. Barrett died, leaving his young wife in poor circumstances, with her two children only a year old. Simultaneously with his death was the death of Dorcas Caledon, Philip Caledon's young, much-loved wife. She left a tiny babe only a day old; a little girl—Dorcas, they called her, after her mother. Mr. Caledon was nearly crazed with grief at the loss of his wife; but gradually he began to look upon the babe with some interest and to find comfort in watching its pretty attempt at playfulness, for it was a strong, healthy child, and grew fast.

"But what was the horror and anguish of the father and the grief and consternation of the servants, when one day the little crib was found empty, and no trace of the babe could be obtained. The nurse had left it quietly sleeping in its little bed, and when she returned it was gone. In vain they searched; in vain offered immense rewards for even the faintest clue; none could be gained. It remained a mystery, as if the ground had suddenly opened and swallowed her up, so suddenly did the baby heiress of Caledon disappear from her home and the loving hearts that cherished her. Mr. Caledon was never the same man again; he grew silent and sometimes harsh. Even the presence of his father and mother failed to cheer and comfort him, as of yore, though they strove to the utmost to change his grief for his wife and child and set his mind in different channels.

"It was thus that Lena Barrett found him on her return from her parents, with whom she had been living, and she at once set about devising means for winning the master of Caledon for a second husband. In this she succeeded, for Mr. Caledon, urged by his parents, who feared their son's reason would become impaired by his grief, finally married the beautiful Widow Barrett, and installed her as the future mistress of Caledon.

"Now, indeed, was Lenora Caledon triumphant; the position she coveted was hers; she was supremely happy for a season. But there is a cross in every rose leaf, 'tis said, and Mrs. Caledon found hers to be no exception to the general rule, for she had been married but a short time when who should appear but Agnes Armund, who simply asked to see Mrs. Caledon, and in the interview that followed gave evidence of a very correct knowledge of the whereabouts of Dorcas Caledon, for whom the sorrowful father was then mourning his life away, praying ever for only one glimpse of baby Dorcas before he died.

"It would have been naturally supposed that Mrs. Caledon would have caught eagerly at this clue of restoring to her husband what would have been such a stimulant to his failing state, the restoration of his beloved child. But far from it, indeed, were her intentions, she had no idea of being second to little Dorcas in the affections and generosity of the master of Caledon; besides her own children were just gaining favor with their stepfather, and there was no doubt if he died without leaving an heir, they would inherit the Caledon property. To the fulfillment of this wish Mrs. Caledon bent all the energies of her strong, passionate nature.

"By skillful bribes she secured the promise of half-crazed Agnes Armund to keep the knowledge she possessed a secret. She also worked upon the fears of the poor creature, declaring if she were to reveal the whereabouts of the babe or even restore it to its father, she would certainly be imprisoned for abduction, and no doubt a long term of penal servitude would be her reward. She took care, also, to enlarge upon the debt of revenge that Agnes owed Philip Caledon for the slighting of the great love she bore him.

"All these combined sufficed to bewilder and confuse the already tortured mind, and so with evil tenacity she hugged the precious secret to her bosom, and lived on, ever unhappy and wretched, yet bitter and unrelenting.

"But in a few years, worn by grief and vain searching for his lost child, Mr. Caledon sank into his grave, and Caledon Heights was without a master, and the old name extinct, except for old Mr. Caledon, whose heart was broken at his son's death, and for whom he had never ceased to mourn.

"Mrs. Caledon, though she mourned her husband, it seems was not inconsolable, as she married again shortly after his death. Irma and Irving Barrett, on coming the will of Phillip Caledon, were found to be his sole heirs with one clause only in the will—that was should the last heir of his estate, his beloved daughter, Dorcas Caledon, ever be discovered, then the estate should be hers with the exception of a legacy to both Irma and her brother.

"It was after the death of Phillip Caledon that a glimpse of the great wrong she had committed to this man began to dawn upon the mind of Agnes Armund. But even then the desire for revenge was too strong to allow her to make reparation. She loved to think of the heiress of Caledon as a dependent, among strangers, to gloat over the thought that when she should have grown she should go out into the hard world and be a poor, oppressed, hard-worked drudge for the same pitiless world that had treated her (Agnes) so cruelly.

"So the years flew on. Dorcas Caledon was still an inmate of an orphans home and Caledon Heights still was the property of the Barretts. It was when Dorcas Caledon was ten years old that Agnes Armund conceived the idea of bringing her to her rightful home and there have her educated and reared as were the Barrett children. Perhaps it was a desire to annoy the mistress of Caledon, whom she hated, or perhaps a feeling of remorse prompted this act. However it was done, and Dorcas Caledon became an inmate of her rightful home. How she was treated by the inmates of Caledon I can not justly say, but in a not too indulgent manner, I should infer, from the fact that at the age of fifteen the girl ran away and could not be traced or again heard of, though strenuous efforts were made to discover her whereabouts both by Agnes Armund and Oliver Dudley, a young man who had always felt a strong interest in the little waif who was maintained at the Heights in so strange a manner. He had just returned from abroad, and determined, as he had promised the child, to see after her welfare; but she, evidently tired of her dull, unhappy life, had fled just at the moment when her presence was most desired, and search as they might no clew could be obtained of her."

"Here the lawyer paused, and Mr. Dudley handed him a folded paper. He opened it and again read on:

"One, two years passed, and Agnes Armund and Oliver Dudley were beginning to despair of ever finding the girl, concluding she must have died unheard of, when, what was Agnes' surprise and delight, one day, while driving in the park, to suddenly meet the long looked-for one, and not poor, wretched or haggard, as her feverish fancy had painted her, but blooming, beautiful and happy, and richly dressed and in company with ladies of unmistakable wealth and high standing.

"Little more is there to tell; you are all familiar with the burning of the opera house. Agnes Armund and Oliver Dudley were present and had just discovered the person they sought when the alarm of fire was given. By a mere accident they succeeded in saving her life and their own.

"This is the end. I, Agnes Armund, on my dying bed, have freely confessed the crime I committed seventeen years ago, and for which I have suffered a living death ever since. But what reparation is in my power I make. The rightful heiress of Caledon is, or should be, present in the person of Dorcas Lynn, adopted daughter of Mrs. Kent. Her rightful name is Dorcas Caledon, and she is the only living descendant of Phillip Caledon.

"Having made this reparation I rest content, trusting at all-merciful Providence will not judge me too harshly, for the crime committed in a moment of frenzy, and concealed afterward by fear, revenge and avaricious influence."

The lawyer paused, laid down the paper and sat down. A fearful stillness remained for several moments over all. Surprise, wonder, horror held every one speechless, for a time. But the silence was broken by Mrs. Clayton, a strange wild cry came from her lips; she rose, tottered a moment and then fell forward on her face. All rushed to her assistance. Irma lifted her mother's head, her own face white as the dead, her lips drawn, but outwardly she was calm. Restoratives were applied, but it was long before Mrs. Clayton regained consciousness, and then she was not herself, but raved wildly of false statements, of plots to rob her children of their inheritance, of Phillip Caledon, Agnes Armund and others, mixing up names and people in strange confusion. Mrs. Lieberg insisted on her being put to bed and a physician sent for, which was at last done, though Irma at first declared her mother must leave with her, as it was very important they should be at R— that night; but seeing how violent her mother was becoming she finally consented, but prepared herself for leaving after soliciting Mrs. Lieberg's attentions to her mother.

She would not allow the carriage to be brought, but started on foot for the railway station, though it was snowing and the wind blew fiercely. Mr. Leiberg, afraid to trust her alone, accompanied her in spite of her protestations, and saw her safely on board the train and then returned to congratulate me, to wonder and talk and wonder again over the strange events and startling revelations of the last few days.

CHAPTER XII.

I will not weary the reader with minute details of my establishment at Caledon Heights, suffice it that in less than three months after Miss Armund's death I found myself installed as mistress there, though I could hardly make myself believe it, and it was long before I could make myself at home in the grand old house whose rooms I had once stolen through like a thief. I then turned my attention to the Barretts and Claytons. They had at first attempted to dispute my claim, but unable to do so they had vacated the Heights, refusing, however, to speak or recognize me in any way—all except Bertie Clayton, who came to visit me and seemed really pleased at my reinstation. He begged me earnestly, however, to go and see if anything could be done for Irving Barrett; he was a wild, reckless fellow, Bert declared, yet he was his brother and it drove him wild to think of his disgrace. I promised to do what I could, but I feared it would be little. I will confess that at first my hatred of Irving Barrett and my remembrance of his unkind treatment of me for awhile hardened my heart and made me half decide not to keep my promise to Bert, especially when I remembered the blow he had given me and the scar I still carried of it on my temple. But I remembered the words: "Except ye forgive ye can not be forgiven," and I relented. Irma, too, excited my sympathy. Bert declared she was wearing herself to a shadow grieving over her brother's misfortune and refusing to go out and see any one. I felt for the girl after all—proud and haughty as she was. This was a terrible blow to her. I engaged the services of the best criminal lawyer in the State to defend Irving, and with the influence of Mr. Dudley, Mr. Leiberg and other rich and influential men whose favor I secured, and by a most liberal supply of money I managed to secure Irving's acquittal.

Whether he really felt the extravagant expressions of gratitude he expressed I can not tell. But that he was exceedingly glad to escape from the predicaments in to which he had gotten himself I am certain.

I then proceeded to offer the Barretts the amount of the legacy provided for them in my father's will. Irving took his share eagerly, and soon after left for the West. But Irma utterly refused to touch a cent of anxious to conciliate her if possible. I found her living with her parents in a rather small but comfortable house in B— street. I was ushered into the parlor where Irma sat, her hands folded listlessly on her lap, her golden hair hanging in careless disorder about her face and neck. She greeted me coldly, yet with a dreamy sort of absent-mindedness that made me think her thoughts were far away.

"I have come, Irma," I said, "to entreat to be friends with you. Let the past be past; we can not alter it. I know that you have been brought up to think yourself an heiress. Irma, people have honored and flattered you because you had wealth, and it is, of course, a great trial to you to find that such is not the case. Yet, I am not to blame for this. Surely you should feel no enmity against me for claiming only what is my just right. We have not been to blame, Irma, you or I, for the wicked scheme. Let us be friends. I helped your brother, let me help you. My father left you a legacy of five thousand. Please accept it, and I will aid you in any other way I can, also.

Irma did not answer me at first. Her face showed no emotion until I had finished speaking. Then she arose, her features working convulsively, and came and stood before us.

"I do not want your bounty, Dorcas Caledon," she almost hissed between her shut teeth. "You have wronged me beyond repair. Money, I do not care for that, but you have robbed me of the love of the man I love and have always loved. His love and esteem I valued ten times more than the Caledon estate, and you have robbed me of both."

She paused with a dry sob, but went on in a moment. "You offer me friendship, as if all the friendship in the world could compensate me for my love. I do not want your friendship or your money, for sooner than such a cent of it I would starve in the street. You are mistress of Caledon now. Oliver Dudley is your devoted slave. May you be very happy."

She paused. I knew not what to say. Her wild, impassioned words showed me the pitiful her passionate, willful nature, and her bold allusion to Oliver Dudley made my cheek crimson, yet my heart swelled with pity for her. Once more I endeavored to comfort her.

"You speak wildly, Irma," I said. "Mr. Dudley is nothing to me except a friend."

She shrank the next instant, though, remembering that I did regard him in a different light, though that he had aught except a friendly feeling for me remained to be seen.

"And you refuse my offer of friendship, Miss Barrett," I said, rising. She bowed her head.

"You are wrong, fearfully wrong," I cried. "Believe me, Oliver Dudley is only a friend to me."

She raised her eyes, hard and stony, to mine. "Never shall I forget their cold, hopeless look.

"You waste your words, Miss Caledon," was all she said, and I walked away, leaving her, as I had found her, sitting idly by the window, her waxen hands folded in her lap.

"Oh! the wickedness of this world!" I cried, as I went homeward.

But for her mother's wicked scheme of defrauding a helpless orphan, Irma would to-day have been a happy girl, and we should have been as dear sisters together."

"I had been at Caledon Heights a year when Mr. Dudley, returning from the North, where he had been attending the settling of his father's estate, made me a formal offer of his hand and heart.

"I have always loved you, Dorcas," he said. "You are the one woman in the world I would choose for my wife. Without your love I am miserable, indeed. Surely you will not send me away, Dorcas. Only give me this smallest share of your love and I shall be content."

It is needless to record my answer. Suffice to say that Mr. Dudley did not leave, and that he confessed the share I granted him of my love proved quite sufficient.

We were married quietly, only the dear friends I had known in the years of my adversity being present. Among these were Bertie Clayton, whose congratulations were as warm and hearty as one would wish.

My honored grandparents, in whose good graces I am happy to say I at once found myself, immediately took up their residence at the Heights at my earnest solicitation. Also my dear adopted mother became an inmate of my home, for I could not bear to be separated from her who had been to me mother, friend and sister in the time when friendly hands were rare.

A few words more, and I will close. Irma Barrett ever refused stubbornly to accept my friendship or my love; she married a wealthy planter in after years, but I fear was never happy or contented. Irving profited by the lesson taught him, for there is to-day no more upright or honest man or one more respected in the community in which he lives. Bertie Clayton is a talented young lawyer and loved by all who know him. Mr. and Mrs. Clayton are both sleeping quietly in Rose Hill Cemetery and have been for many years. Near their graves is that of Agnes Armund; let us hope after life's fitful fever their sleep is sweet.

So closes this short and simple story of my life. After all the darke louds were swept away and the sun shone brighter than ever, there is only one regret, one sorrow over which I can never feel quite reconciled, that is that my dear kind, father's dying wish and prayer for one more sight of his child could not have been granted. But after all what matters it? Will there not be another time in all eternity, when we shall meet to compensate for all the little trials here.

And so, dear reader, ends the story of Dorcas Caledon, the last heiress of Caledon Heights.

[THE END.]

Not at Home to Him.

Stubbs (hard-headed proser, to Gush, romantic young poet)—Spose you work regular hours on your poetry business, don't ye, Gush? Bone right down to it, and grind out your grist every day. Gosh! S'pose you hev money rollin in from the magazine editors by every mail!

Gush—Oh, no; I write for no mercenary reward. I tenderly woo the muse, and speak only when the spirit moves. I place myself in the mood and wait the divine influence of the goddess. A poetic soul, my good Mr. Stubbs, can not confine itself to a slavish system of routine. I work simply when the it is on me. A man can never write good poetry unless he is in the fullest communion with his own soul. Accordingly, when my inspiration fails, I accept Walt Whitman's advice, and "loaf and invite my muse."

Stubbs (who has tried to rear his poetry)—Guess she don't accept your invitation very often, bigod!

Good temper, like a sunny day, sheds a brightness over everything. It is the sweetener of toil and the soother of disquietude.

"YOU HAVE ROBBED ME."

National Democrat.

RAHWAY, N. J., SEPT. [illegible], 1887.

The Trenton Emporium, very properly, we think, considers it foolish, the provision in the state constitution that prevents any man under thirty years of age from becoming a member of the Senate. It refers to the instance of President Polk, when he was a candidate for Congress, and his opponents raised the objection that he was only twenty-seven years old. "Well," said the future President, "I am a fool at twenty-seven I'll be a fool for the rest of my life." And in tabloid good common sense, says the Emporium, is the ballot is put into the hands of a man when he is twenty-one. At that age he is supposed to have good judgment, a knowledge of his responsibilities, and a capacity to understand the political questions of the day. If the age qualification was intended to admit only men of experience to the Senate, it is quite useless. The most ignorant persons know that age is no test of experience. The man twenty-five years old may have more experience in politics than twenty men seventy years old; and this plain provision that only young men experienced in politics can be elected to the Senate, hence, if a young man can so conduct himself as to be thought worthy a seat in the Senate, he will have no more inappropriate experience than a modest one of the average number of men over thirty years of age.

As stated in our issue, the Newark [illegible] made its appearance on Tuesday under the new management. Col. [illegible] late of the Jersey edition of the N. Y. World having full control. It has been much improved, and its various departments are well filled with interesting and spicy reading, and [illegible] local news. [illegible] The Newarkers and residents of the State generally will no doubt show their appreciation of this improvement by a liberal patronage.

The following sound [illegible] of the series adopted at the recent Pennsylvania Democratic convention:

"In view of the [illegible] in the public Treasury we [illegible] that the [illegible] the Treasury shall [illegible] [illegible] and [illegible] of Government [illegible] [illegible] in accordance with the foregoing declarations."

The city of Rahway should have the Savings Bank [illegible] now would be a favorable opportunity to secure it. But the question is how to do it. The cash cannot be paid for it neither can bonds safely be issued. Some have suggested that the city purchase it, pay a small amount and give a mortgage upon the property which could be readily sold for cash. That would appear to be a favorable way to do it, but it is not quite clear how to get at it.

We have received a proposition to do some very extensive advertising for a mining company and take pay in stock. We are not in need of the article at present and hence must decline the advertising. Besides we are inclined to think, with the New York Sun, that when any man or set of men get hold of a good speculation they are not apt to want to dispose of it by selling the stock as extensively as would indicate by advertising it all over the country.

It is announced that the Republican executive committee of Union county, at a meeting held last Saturday, decided to hold a late county convention after the Democrats. Some of their leaders have been boasting so much about sweeping the county this fall, that it was to be presumed they would not exhibited any such evidence of fears.

The Plainfield News, which has Republican tendencies, has the following item which is tinctured a little with sarcasm:

"Hon. Wm. H. Corbin, published a card in the Elizabeth Journal yesterday positively declining the Republican nomination for State Senator, which has not yet been offered him and which there was no probability that it would be."

The Norwich Bulletin, mentioning the death of Professor O. S. Fowler, the once famous phrenologist says: Phrenology was once quite a science, but in these days of swelled heads, wise heads, dead heads and black heads, the phrenologist's powers have proved inadequate to the occasion.

They have a "new idea" in Pennsylvania, which is denominated a "candidates' picnic," for the special benefit of candidates for offices. One was recently held at East Reading, which was largely attended, and some forty candidates were present. The time was mainly spent in buttonholing and electioneering.

Sensational stories and contradictions concerning the Rahway murder are still being printed in some of the newspapers. When the Grand Jury meets next month, further efforts will be made to unravel the mystery; also all the various loose threads will be taken hold of to discover where they lead to.

We notice the name of our old friend Hon. Manning Freeman is mentioned in connection with the Democratic nomination for Surrogate of Middlesex county. If active and efficient service to the party deserves recognition Mr. Freeman is certainly entitled to the nomination if he is desirous of it.

The Cincinnati Commercial-Gazette says the outlook for fall trade is more encouraging than it has been for many years past. This is a slight variation from the Republican programme which was proclaimed in '84—that the country would be ruined if Cleveland should be elected.

We learn from Republican sources that Hon. Wm. Chamberlain has expressed his willingness to become a candidate for County Clerk on the Republican ticket. It will make a strong local fight if both candidates come from Rahway—Crowell and Chamberlain.

It is now stated that ex-Freeholder James L. Miller, of Westfield, is in the lead for the Republican Senatorial nomination. If Nat Miller gets on the ticket he will have his grist effectually ground by a Livingstone.

The New York Tribune keeps up its references to the "distinction between loyal and disloyal citizens." In its opinion those only are loyal who vote the Republican ticket with their eyes shut and ask no questions.

The Republicans of this county are actively engaged (on paper) in carrying the election this fall. The Democrats will have something to say about it when the voting takes place.

It is now lawful to shoot rail and wood duck. Grey squirrels and woodcock may be killed after Oct. 1st, and quail, partridge and rabbits after Nov. 1st.

DEMOCRACY'S THREE YEARS RECORD.

Somebody asked the Little Rock Democrat to point out what the Democratic party has accomplished in three years in which it has had charge of the Government, and that paper replies as follows:

It has restored more than 100,000,000 acres of unearned land grants to the public domain for the benefit of poor settlers.

It has paid nearly $200,000,000 of the public debt, and at the same time paid more money for pensions than ever paid before in the same time.

The expenses of the Government have been reduced about $15,000,000.

It rid of lazy, incompetent and useless officials have been dispensed with.

It has broken up Indian rings, land rings, and tradership rings that flourished till the Democratic party came into power.

It has established business methods and strict economy for jobbery and wasteful extravagance.

It has given the lie to the charge that the Democracy, if intrusted with power, would "put the negroes back in slavery and pension the Confederate soldiers."

It has done more in three years to curb rapacity of corporations than the Republican party did in a quarter of a century.

The Democratic party repealed the odious and unjust Tenure of Office Act.

A Democratic Congress passed an act forbidding the ownership of land by aliens.

A Democratic Congress instituted a searching inquiry into the affairs and management on the Pacific Railroad—an investigation which has already accomplished much good.

The Democracy reduced the fees on postal money orders and extended the benefits of the free delivery system.

A Democratic Congress passed an act authorizing the issue of small silver certificates—a matter of great advantage to the people.

A Democratic Congress passed the act settling the succession to the Presidency, and also the act regulating the counting of the electoral vote. There could be no more important acts.

A Democratic Congress passed an act forbidding the use of convict labor upon all Government works—a just and wise act.

All this has been done by the Democracy inside of three years—and we assure our correspondent this is only a part of the "splendid record" made by the Democratic party within that time.

SUDDEN DEATH.—John S. Bishop, a lifelong resident of Bound Brook, died suddenly while sitting in a chair in the parlor of the Gaddis Hotel, at that place, about two o'clock on Saturday. He was in his usual good health and spirits, and just conversing with a lady. She rose to leave the room, but hearing a strange gasp turned just in time to see Mr. Bishop's head fall back as he sat upright in his chair. He never moved a muscle, nor never breathed again. The deceased is well known in this city and had friends here who were greatly shocked to learn of his sudden demise.

As we are getting ready for the press the argument before Master in Chancery Muirheid, upon the Savings Bank matter is taking place in the Council chamber. Mr. Garret Berry represents some of the depositors and the city, and Mr. Vail the bank managers. The Master decided to allow some citizens who had assembled to remain in the room to hear the argument, cautioned all representatives of the press not to make public anything until after he shall have submitted his report to the Chancellor.

"Please stop the advertisement—one insertion in your paper accomplished the result desired." Such notes as the above indicate the value of advertising in the DEMOCRAT.

The bravest and the best of the Union soldiers denounce the partisan attempts of demogogic ranters to rekindle the animosities growing out of the war.

Ohio, Pennsylvania and New York have already endorsed President Cleveland, and from present appearances his renomination seems to be assured.

COMMON COUNCIL.

Regular meeting Tuesday evening, Sept. 6, all present except Mr. [illegible]. Minutes of last meeting read and approved.

COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

From Police Justice Tunison recommending release of Wm. Robinson from county jail. Adopted.

From Board of Health, referring a communication from J. L. Mullin and others, complaining of unhealthy nuisance at a lot corner of Grand and Lufberry streets, covered the most of the time with stagnant water, a receptacle for dead dogs, cats, etc. Received and laid over to new business, when, after discussion, it was decided that the Board of Health is the only power to abate such nuisances on private property, and it was referred back to that board.

From J. C. Hines, late street commissioner, in reference to his unpaid bill, setting forth that he has been a taxpayer since 1865, and always paid promptly all bills sent to him by the city, a hundred cents on the dollar, and asks the authorities to treat him likewise, to inform him that they will not. Laid over to, and discussed in new business, finally referred to the city attorney for a written opinion whether the city can legally avoid paying the bill.

From Chief Engineer Luke, stating that it is thirteen years since the fire department has had a parade and inspection; that representatives of the different companies had met and decided to have one on the second Monday in October, provided the Common Council would appropriate $150 to assist in defraying the expenses. Ordered on file. Mr. McManus moved afterwards to reconsider and lay over to new business, for action, but being convinced that it could be done without such action he withdrew the motion.

From Protection Hose Co., reporting election of Wm. H. Miller, A. McManus, Jr. and Wm. Cornelius as members—referred to fire committee.

From Board of Education, asking that school funds be apportioned as follows: teachers' salaries $11,000; books and supplies $1,000; repairs $1,000; stoves and fuel $600; salaries of supt., janitors, etc. $1,400; incidentals $395.10—total $15,395.10. Referred to committee on education.

Street Commissioner Kirer reported expenses for August $442.62, and stating a number repairs to streets, filling washouts, etc. Filed.

From supt. of alms house Edmunds, reporting for August 5 inmates, expenses $47.92. Filed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

From majority of street committee Belmer and Shipman, recommending that crushed stone pavement be put on Main street from railroad to Irving, and on Monroe street from the bridge east as far as amount will allow toward Grand street.

This report caused much discussion, nearly every member having a different view of the necessities. Mr. Denike thought that in view of the bad condition of the streets by reason of recent washouts and holes in the Belgian pavements that it would be best to use the fund this year in repairs.

Mr. Farrell, said he, as a member of the street committee, had not been consulted about the report until two o'clock that afternoon, and he had refused to sign it, he being that the principal thoroughfares leading out of city should be first paved, especially referring to Grand street, and he did not believe the same amount of crushed stone as put on other streets would do any good on Monroe street.

Mr. Graves agreed with Mr. Farrell, and Mr. Rollinson reminded Mr. Denike that the appropriation was made with the distinct understanding that $2,500 was to be used for crushed stone.

Messrs. McManus and Crolius favored the report, and Mr. Jackson said he would vote for it provided it was amended so as to include the little piece of Monroe street west of the bridge to Main street. Messrs. Belmer and Shipman said they would accept the amendment, and the report was then adopted 6 to 5—Messrs. Denike, Farrell, Graves, Housman and Rollinson in the negative.

From fire committee approving the dropping of Thos. A. Lee and Geo. Eckert from roll of Engine Co. No. 2, on account of removal, and election of George McDonald to Hose Co. No. 2; also election of Louis Hamm to Protection Hose Co.

Mr. Rollinson inquired if the lamp committee had considered the petition for a light on Campbell street near Elm avenue, where one is very much needed.

Mr. McManus, chairman of the committee, stated that the appropriation was sufficient to allow three or four more lights, and that there had been three petitions—the one referred to by Mr. Rollinson, one on Pierce street, and one on St George's avenue. If the Council saw fit to so instruct the committee the lights would be put up. On motion of Mr. Jackson the committee was so directed.

Mr. Belmer from drainage committee, said there was great complaint of overflow at the corner of Grand and Essex streets, and something should be done to remedy it.

Mr. McManus said it was the fault of the sewer belonging to the Penn. railroad not having sufficient capacity at its mouth, by reason of the grating becoming filled and thus causing the overflow. He had spoken to some of the local officers of the road and they had promised to see that it was remdied, but it had not been done, and he moved that the drainage committee wait on the railroad authorites and have it fixed at once. Adopted.

NEW BUSINESS.

Mr. Graves offered a resolution to appropriate $100 towards paying for music for the proposed firemen's parade and inspection.

Mr. Denike said he honored the firemen and believed in recognizing their services, but he thought in the present condition of the city $100 was too much to spend thus unnecessarily; he thought there was too much unnecessary expense, also, from what he learned, in burning lights and fuel at the fire houses. The members of the department should act in a business way, and go home when their business is done.

Mr. Jackson said the last speaker was chairman of the fire committe and should see that all abuses are looked after. He thought the department however should be encouraged in a parade.

Mr. McManus heartily agreed with the resolution, and said he was about to offer a similar one. The department did good service and should be recognized, and the citizens would like to see how they looked in parade for the first time in thirteen years.

The resolution was adopted, 10 to 1—Denike.

Mr. Jackson offered a resolution to have a warrant drawn in favor of Chas. H. Lambert, city clerk for an amount not exceeding $100 for the above purpose. He said he did so at the request of the Chief Engineer who was too modest to want to handle the money, and also that the exact mount required could be put in, as the full $100 might not be needed. Adopted.

Mr. Belmer moved the necessary advertisements be published for proposals for putting down the crushed stone. Adopted.

A resolution was adopted authorizing a warrant to be drawn in favor of Woodbridge Strong & Son, for amount collected on the Kinsky [illegible]. Adopted.

Mr. Belmer stated that all the space had been taken in the burial plot belonging to the city at the Rahway cemetery, and more space should be procured.

Mr. Denike said during last year the matter was considered, and it was found a plot for 50 graves would cost $100.

Mr. McManus thought it would cost less at Hazelwood cemetery, and on motion the matter was referred to committee on city property.

The bills were then read and ordered paid as allowed and approved as follow. Mr. Shipman caused a little "agitation" of the streets again by inquiring concerning bills for teams, as he understood from Mr. Denike that the street commissioner was going to get a horse and cart, take a pick and shovel and save expenses for teams.

Mr. Farrell said the street commissioner was doing good work and had to have teams; that he had already done more with the small amount expended than was done with $4,500 last year.

Mr. McManus took this as a reflection upon him as chairman of the committee on streets last year, and emphatically denied Mr. Farrell's assertion.

Mr. Denike said Mr. Shipman was mistaken as to the horse and cart—he stated that a large amount could be saved in that way, but not all carting could be thus done.

A ROMANCE AT ASBURY PARK.

The following bit of romance will probably interest some of our local readers, the gentleman in the case having taught a class of music at the Chapel on Milton avenue, during the winter of 1885-6:

Some months ago there came to this place a young music teacher, who though personally unknown to our citizens was yet well known through his family. It was Prof. LePort VanSant, nephew of ex-Presiding Elder VanSant of the New Jersey M. E. Conference. He organized classes in vocal music, proved to be a competent and successful teacher and gave one or two concerts of unusually good character.

Among his pupils was Miss Katie L. Bulkley, a young lady who had several years of being out of her teens. She is the daughter of Mrs. A. S. Bullock of the St. Cloud, and an old resident of Asbury Park. Katie possessed an unusually good soprano voice, but it was uncultivated. The Professor discovered the heretofore hidden talent and determined to aid its young owner to properly and artistically develop it. As he made his home at the St. Cloud, he was enabled to devote much time to his pupil, and one consequence was that at the last concert, in June, Miss Katie surprised and delighted all who heard her, for she is a very modest and diffident young lady, not inclined to parade her talents and many even of her near friends were not aware of her vocal powers.

There was another consequence that followed this musical instruction. While Katie was rapidly acquiring knowledge and proficiency in music both she and her enthusiastic teacher were rapidly learning a lesson of love, the culmination of which came on Saturday evening, when Miss Katie Bulkley became Mrs. VanSant.

The event was kept a profound secret even from intimate friends. A few friends were invited to the St. Cloud under the pretext of a musicale, and it is fair to say that when the wedding procession entered the parlor there was a genuine surprise. Mr. Frank VanSant, brother of the groom, was best man and Miss Florence Johnson acted as bridesmaid. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Samuel M. VanSant, of Cranbury, a cousin of the Professor. After the wedding followed the usual feast, and a novelty was introduced in the shape of a quartette by the bride, groom, bridesmaid, and groomsman. All are beautiful singers.

Mr. and Mrs. VanSant left on the 9.40 train for Saratoga. It is understood that they and Mrs. Bullock will make their future home in Dakota.—Daily Journal, Aug. 29.

ANOTHER INCENDIARY FIRE.—The alarm of fire between one and two o'clock on Sunday morning was caused by the burning of two barns on Newton and Harrison streets. One of the barns belonged to John Tooker and was occupied by Chief of Police William Tooker, and was not insured, the loss being about $100. The other barn was owned by Levi Darby and was covered by $200 insurance; it was occupied by Lawrence Westervelt, the carman, who managed to save from it his horse and wagon, but the remainder of the contents were either totally destroyed or so much damaged that they will be of no use. Westervelt estimates his loss at over $100. It was doubtless of incendiary origin and it was reported at first that the guilty party had been arrested, which report, it is to be regretted, proved untrue. It is intimated, however, that suspicion rests upon some one, and it is hoped Rahway will follow Plainfield in the detection of some of these fire fiends.

The Morris Banner says: "It is just twenty years since we have had a season of rain equal to this one, as is proven by a record kept by Mr. Jaqui in connection with his grist mill pond on Morris Plains. He has run his mill thus far this season without the use of his steam power, and that he has been unable to do since 1867, in which year many farmers lost their hay and oats, as they have this season. 1871 was a very wet season, but not to compare with the others."

Drake's Veteran Zouave Band gave an open air concert in Plainfield last Thursday night. Why can't we obtain this fine band to give a concert at some favorable point in this city some of these fine evenings?

"Labor Day" was principally observed in this city by a large portion of the amusement loving people going to Elizabeth and Bergen Point to witness the kalsomining business of the base ball clubs.

Next Sunday evening will be devoted to the usual monthly service of song at the 1st M. E. church, when a number of choice choruses and solos will be sung; a good speaker has also been secured for the occasion.

TUA.—Teresina Tua, the young violiniste, who is in the twentieth year of her age, and whose playing has captivated the lovers of music in Europe, will play in America for the first time, at Chickering Hall, on October 17 h, under the management of C. H. Dittman.

A young lady concluded on Monday that she would assist with some of the family washing for the first time. She got along all right with the washing, but when it came to starching she was a little too liberal with the stiffening article, and her mother was considerably exasperated to find that she had starched the father's shirt from top to bottom!

Rev. Mr. Ruth will commence a series of sermons on "Psychology," or the human soul, next Sunday evening, continuing on the following Sunday evenings for some weeks, closing with one upon the intermediate state of the soul—between death and the resurrection, in response to a written request.

We have received an interesting communication upon the death of Mr. Vanderpoel, the head of the law firm of which Gov. Green is a member, from a gentleman familiar with the history of the former, correcting some errors that have appeared in the references to the deceased in the newspapers.

MR. EDITOR:—A party of young men are in the habit of running the growler, getting full and using the grounds around the Church of the Holy Comforter as a resort. As I see the authorities are determined to break up the "growler" gangs, I hope this one will not escape attention.

CHURCH.

The following is from the Asbury Park Journal of last week:

Mr. Joseph W. North and family, who were the first guests of Capt. Young at the Belvedere, in 1879, and have been there every season since, are again in their old quarters for the fall months. Mr. North was an ensign in the navy during our difficulty with the South.

Mr. A. Lewis Rynp who went from this city some time ago to Minneapolis, Minn., has been appointed a Notary Public there, being connected with a large real estate and insurance establishment. He says he occasionally meets Mr. Geo. L. Albert, who recently removed from Rahway to that city.

We have just received a pretty song, called "There's no one like Mother to me," by Charles A. Davies. For a nice home song, in which both the words and music are so very pretty, it is hard to equal. It will be sent to any address for only 22 1-cent stamps. Address the publishers, J. C. Groene & Co., 40 and 42 Arcade, Cincinnati, O., or order at the Music and Stationery Store, 121 Main street.

The Plainfield papers are showing up a swindler who has been canvassing that place for "The Lady's Book of Fashion," with chromos to be handsomely framed at a remarkably low price. He collected the money in advance, and the ladies are now waiting in vain for the magazine, pictures, etc. Look out for him.

It appears that all the fire bugs in Plainfield have not yet been caught, as a large barn belonging to Frazee and Daniel Lee was burned Tuesday morning, the loss being $3,000, with $600 insurance. The Lee brothers are the owners of the house that Jackson was setting fire to when caught.

FIRE.—The reflection of a fire noticed in this city about half-past nine o'clock Wednesday evening was from the total burning of the house and contents, belonging to Abram VanFliet, in Linden. Insured for $1,300 on the house and $600 on the furniture. The fire originated from the chimney, it is said

Our old friend Geo. W. Lawrence still carries a hickory cane which he cut in the Clark woods near this city, in the first Jackson campaign of 1824. Mr. Charles A. Gundaker also has a memento of Gen. Jackson in the form of an autograph letter and a lock of his hair sent to Mr. Gundaker's father, who was captain of a company called the Jackson Rifles.

The handsome new building of the great wholesale grocers and flour dealers, Wilkinson, Gaddis & Co., on Broad street, Newark, was formally opened on Friday last. Handsomely printed invitations had been sent to prominent men throughout the state and to newspaper representatives. Senator Sewell was in attendance, and several Congressmen, State Senators and other representative men. A collation was served, and the occasion was quite an imposing one.

Mrs. Ann H. VanLiew, an old lady formerly residing in North Brunswick township, who died recently, in Clark township, near this city, left a will by which she gave in trust to the minister, elder and deacons of the congregation of New Brunswick, now known as the First Reformed Church, eighteen shares of the capital stock of the United New Jersey Railroad and Canal Companies; also the sum of $400 in addition, to be securely invested, the interest to be used for the support and education of pious young men for the Gospel ministry; the preference to be given to a member of the said church, and who shall be chosen by the pastor, subject to the approval of elders and deacons of the said church.

WATER BOARD.

Regular meeting, Wednesday evening, September 7. Present, Commissioners Brown, Denike, Hough and LaForge, minutes of last meeting read and approved.

Communication from N. V. Compton, stating that the insurance of the Board on building and engine would expire Sept. 13th. On motion it was ordered renewed.

From Miss Iva C. Crowell, asking that a main be laid through Hazelwood avenue, so that it could be tapped and pipes laid to her premises, on Thorn street. On motion laid over for the present.

The following bills were ordered paid: John Fox, water pipe, $211.08; Lehigh Coal Co., $305.81; John Brown, labor, $23.60; George Jackson, labor, $11.25; H. A. Rogers, supplies, $11.85; Wm. O. Morse, carting, $47.42; P. R. R., freight, $5.66. Also salaries of engineer and superintendent, for August.

Reports of engineer for month of August received and ordered on file.

We do not hesitate to say that the Great World's Railroad Show of Wallace & Co., was the best that has been in this city in many years. In the forenoon there was a parade of the caravans drawn by a beautiful lot of horses, and the animals, through several streets, with fine bands of music, steam calliope, etc. The performances afternoon and evening were largely attended, many people coming from miles around. The equestrian and acrobatic feats were wonderful, Prof. Charles Ewers being the best horse rider that ever appeared in a ring in Rahway, while the tossing of the barrel and table by Prof. Frank Pirrung was marvelous. The Aerial artists Profs. Dunbar and Vernon in the "Leap for Life and the Rescue" was wonderful, Miss Cleo Hernandez made a beautiful Equestrian act and the four Walton Brothers gave some fine exhibitions of their tumbling and double summersaulting. The trained dog and the trick mules, kept the large audience in a convulsion of laughter while they were in the ring. Mr. Willis Cobb, gentlemanly Press Manager made it his especial business to show the 116 fine horses, ponies and mules to the reporter and took him through the cooking and the dining tents and the other well regulated and orderly appartments of the company's establishment.

Americans who go to Europe come back thanking God for the glorious privileges, benefits and happiness enjoyed in glorious America. Senator Fry, who has just returned says:

"You will find in the Old World much that is admirable, but what impressed me most painfully was the poverty of the masses of the people. Why, the people of Europe live on the poorest food, and mighty little of it. I found that laborers in Glasgow work for 2s. 6d. a day 62 cents. I was charmed with Edinburg, but when I saw women drunk, fighting in her beautiful streets, the modern Athens lost her charms. I cannot convey to you the picture of the degradation and want throughout Great Britain caused by drink. The drink evil is a horror. Speaking of wages I found girls in factories in Venice working with great skill for from 5 to 12 cents a day, the most experienced getting 12 cents a day, out of which they have to live. But how they live is a wonder. Their chief diet is maccaroni. Farm hands all over Europe, women, earn 20 cents a day. Women do most of the field work. I saw no improved machinery on the farms of the continent. I have seen twenty women in one field at work, not a man in sight. The plain people have no meat to eat but once a week on the continent. The condition of American wage earners is incomparably better than that of the working people in Europe. It is the difference between comfort and competition and discomfort and insufficient food and clothing."

Rev. John F. Dodd, Secretary of the Newark M. E. Conference, with which the Methodist churches of this city are connected, gives the following interesting facts: There are 209 members. Only 59 of them were in the work when the Conference was organized, in 1857. Seven of the number have been in the ministry over fifty years. The oldest member of the Conference is Rev. John Scarlett, aged 84 years; the youngest is Rev. Richard Schuh, aged 27. Three are over 80 years; five are between 70 and 80; one hundred and ten are under fifty years. The Conference is, as to nativity, distributed as follows: From New Jersey, 89; New York, 44; Pennsylvania, 20; Maryland, 5; Connecticut, 4; Delaware and Indiana, each 2; Massachusetts, Vermont, Virginia, Ohio, Illinois, Wisconsin, Louisiana, South Carolina and District of Columbia, each 1, England, 15; Ireland, 13; Scotland, 2; Wales, 1; Canada, 1; Bulgaria, 2.

Capt. E. J. Savage, late of the "City Belle," has been canvassing in this city during the week, in reference to the practicability of running a larger side-wheel steamer between Rahway and New York, landing at Tappen's Dock. He informs us that he has been promised the freight of twenty-eight factories and business places, which he deems very encouraging, and that next week he will probably commence running the boat regularly.

Now that the new school year is about to begin, I hope our street commissioner will some day take a stroll out as far as the 3d Ward school and have the damage done to the sidewalk, about two or three years ago, repaired before Winter sets in and the cavity gets filled with snow and rain water, through which the teachers and scholars have to wade or jump over, which makes it very unpleasant. The flag stone was carried away by some boys and has never since been replaced. It is located near the crossing just before the school grounds are reached.

SCHOOL GIRL.

A Philadelphia merchant, who has been residing at Asbury Park during the summer, took his first drink of liquor in seven years two weeks ago, obtaining it there, where its sale is prohibited. He then went upon a prolonged debauch. His wife, determined to punish the persons who were selling him the liquor, employed a detective, who has obtained evidence against fourteen parties. They will be prosecuted by the United States Government.

A "Harvest Festival" for the benefit of the "Loyal Temperance Legion" will be held in the rooms of the W. C. T. U. on Milton avenue, on Tuesday evening, Sept. 13th. There will be a programme commencing at quarter before eight o'clock, consisting of recitations and singing appropriate to the occasion, after which some of the products of the harvest will be offered for sale. Also cake and cream at the customary prices. Admission 10 cents.

Mrs. Catharine M. Laing, of Bristol, Pa., now over ninety years old, mother of Mr. Alve Laing and of Mrs. H. R. Shotwell is now visiting at the residence of the latter in this city, and is still smart and active. Mrs. Shotwell has been quite ill since the recent death of Mr. Shotwell, but has recovered. Mr. Laing has also come from Plainfield to visit his sister and mother.

BASE BALL NOTES.

THE BUTLERS HAVE AN ACTIVE WEEK—THEIR FIRST LOSS OUT OF THIRTY-EIGHT GAMES.

THE BUTLERS WHITEWASH THE HIBERNIAS.

An excellent game was played at Elizabethport Monday morning between the Butlers and the Hibernias, of that place, in which the Rahway boys won a decided victory, preventing their opponents from getting a single run, securing the championship of the county. The game opened with the Butlers at the bat; they got in one run, when the Hibernias took the bat and were shut out in one-two-three order. The Butlers were shut out until the seventh inning, when they got in three more runs; the Hibernians were unable to score at all during the game. In their last inning it looked as though they were going to score, when they had a man on first base and one on second, but Seitz went to the bat and hit a liner to W. Brokaw, which he caught in fine style, threw it to Smith, at first, and Smith threw it to Lawrence, at second, thus making a triple play, and the finest play that ever was made on the grounds.

The main features of the game were the battery work of Craig and Keenan, Craig having struck out fourteen men. Smith covered first base in fine style, while Lawrence, at second, and Downes, at third, played their positions well. Barber caught a nice fly at centre field; Burns, at right, and J. Brokaw did not have much to do, but they each got in good sacrifice hits when they were needed. Keenan got in a nice two-bagger, which brought in two runs. Healy, for the Hibernias, covered first in good shape, and Brady, at short, played well; Seitz and Ryan, the battery, all did well.

The Defiance Club will go to New Brunswick on Friday, September 9th (today), to play a return game with the Reserves, of the Y. M. C. A., of that place. Train leaves at 2:55 P. M.

The Young Columbians defeated the Bloodgoods' nine on the Butler grounds, Monday morning, by the score of 9 to 1.

On Saturday last a party of railroad men left Rahway for a day's fishing, on Col. A. C. Dunn's steam yacht. The party was composed of W. J. Leavy, M. & N. W. R. R., G. Eggleston C. B. & Q. R. R., C. Ewald, N. P. R. R., H. Mohring, C. & N. W. R. R. James Currie, West Shore R. R., R. F. Feist, Penn. R. R., T. Thorn, Penn. R. R. and Col. Dunn. Engineer Brady made the yacht spin. They anchored in Prince's Bay and fished until 4 P. M. The run from Perth Amboy to the mouth of the Rahway river was made in 43 minutes. We don't know how the party disposed of all the fish they caught.

A DAY'S TRIP.

We left Rahway at 8:30 A. M. bound for West Point via Penn. R. R., and Iron Steamboat "Sirius." As it was the last excursion of the season, Rahway was well represented. There was a little delay at Jersey City waiting for the excursion coming over the N. Y. S. W. R. R., but finally the boat got off and headed up the river. It was a beautiful day, just warm enough in the sun, and not too cold in the shade. Off 23d street, Jay Gould's Yacht, the "Atlanta," lay waiting for the baby grandson to be ready to go to Irvington. There was a fine band aboard and they played all the popular airs, and kept right at it. On the west bank of the river were the Palisades and on the right bank were miles of beautiful residences, some partly hidden by the trees, and others with fine well kept lawn, reaching to the railroad tracks which run alongside the river. Spuyten Duyvel, Mt. St. Vincent, Yonkers, Dobbs Ferry, Irvington, Tarrytown on the east bank; then Haverstraw on the west, where the West Shore R. R., comes out of the rocks and runs along the river; this town is celebrated for being the great brick-making place; the bricks are made on the river bank and loaded from the kilns into boats. From here up the scenery gets wilder and more impressive.

West Point was reached at 1:30 P. M., where we had two hours to visit the military grounds and buildings, the cemetery, Trophy Point, where can be seen the captured guns, and the remains of the chain that was stretched across the river in 1770 or thereabouts, to keep the British from going too far up.

Among the many people from Rahway, I noticed the Misses Lizzie Grove, Lizzie Webber, Mamie Baumgartner, Mattie and Annie Littell, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Vescelius, Mr. and Mrs. W. I. Tier, Mrs. John Blore and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Garthwaite, Mrs. Hook, Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Feist, Miss Warner, Miss Addie Moore, and others whose name have escaped me. The sail down the river was much enjoyed and Rahway was reached at 8 P. M.

B. POWELL.

We find the following complimentary notice of our good friend C. A. Runkle, Esq., of New Providence, in this county, published in the New York Financial Review:

"Of the members of the New York bar who have obtained much well deserved success in the prosecution of their profession, Mr. Cornelius A. Runkle is conspicuous. Ever since his admission to practice Mr. Runkle has been prominently identified with a large number of important cases, and has for many years held a foremost place in the ranks of the lawyers of this city. Sound in his knowledge of the law and of great resource, he is a hard student and indefatigable worker, and owing to the fact that he never enters upon a case half prepared, he is a formidable antagonist, and one who is never to be caught at a disadvantage. His manner of addressing a jury, and getting right down to the facts of the case, has been instrumental in gaining him many a victory, where it would appear as if it were, at least, going to be a hard fight.

In court he is a familiar figure; keen as an examiner, though at all times courteous, he is beloved by all who know him, and few practitioners are held in higher estimation by bench and bar. As is of course but to be expected, Mr. Runkle's clientage is of a large and constantly increasing nature, and he is the trusted counsel for many of our large corporations and business firms. Mr. Runkle has been for thirty years an indefatigable worker, and to this as much as to his sterling ability is his success in his profession to be attributed."

The grandchildren of Hon. J. H. Lufbery and wife, together with many of their little friends from Elizabeth and Rahway, had a jolly time at the garden party given them by the grandparents, from two to seven o'clock last Thursday afternoon. After indulging in various games and other amusements, they were treated to a bountiful supply of refreshments and had a good time generally. The following are the names of those who participated in the festivities: From Elizabeth—Hattie Armstrong, Clara Weaver, Hattie Sherring, Emma and Minnie Henry, Mamie Coleman, Della Conner, Mollie Donald, Dottie Douglass, Mabel Codley, Jean Brown, Aggie Quinn, Florence Davis, Ida, Edna and Hattie Hand, Florence and May Williams, Eddie Hand, Ferd. Armstrong, Percy Smith, Harry Fulton, Charlie Teiple, Sammie Williams and Harry Lufbery—accompanied by Mrs. J. H. Lufbery, Jr., Mrs. I. Little, Mrs. S. Williams, Misses Howard and Jacobus. During one of the late hard thunder showers a house at Alton (formerly known as "Dog Corner") belonging to Frazee Lee, was struck by the electric current, which played some peculiar pranks. It first struck a tree near the house, (causing the leaves to wither afterward) and glanced from limb to limb, thence to the chimney of the house, where it appeared to divide, taking different directions through the house, tearing off boards, upsetting a bed, smashing out a window, sash and all. Mr. James H. Johnson lives in the house, and the members of his family were quite severely shocked, but not hurt, and the smell of sulphur was noticed for several days.

"What a piece of work is man!" said Shakespeare; yet he knew less of the human anatomy than you may know by stepping into Dr. F. W. Oliver's drug store, Rahway, N. J., any day and devoting an hour to the study of the wonderful model of the human body now to be seen there. All the organs are shown both in health and in disease, and in what way and through what channels the life forces move and work. Nothing that is upon the whole so clear and satisfactory has before been introduced to public notice, and it will well repay the attention of those who inspect it. 1

I HAD KIDNEY DISORDER and say for the good of others that Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy cured me.—Rev. S. C. Chandler, Lebanon Springs, N. Y. I had Stone in the Bladder and Gravel in the Kidneys. GIVE THEM A CHANCE!

That is to say, your lungs. Also, all your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger air-passages, but the thousands of little tubes and cavities leading from them.

When these are clogged and choked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do, they cannot do well.

Call it cold, cough, croup, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption, or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be got rid of. There is just one sure way to get rid of them. That is to take Boschee's German Syrup, which any druggist will sell you at 75 cents a bottle. Even if everything else has failed you, you may depend upon this for certain. je24-nov5 eow

LOCAL POTPOURRI.

Upper Rahway Headquarters for Pure Ice Cream, Temperance Drinks, Confectionery, Nuts, Fruit, Tobacco, Toys, &c., is at JESSE COOPER'S

To turn gray hair to its natural color and beauty, use Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer, the best and most reliable preparation science has given us.

Ayer's Ague Cure acts directly on the liver and biliary apparatus, and drives out the malarial poison which induces liver complaints and bilious disorders. Warranted to cure, or money refunded. Try it.

We know of no mode of treatment which offers to sufferers of chronic diseases a more certain hope of cure than that which is comprehended in the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. For purifying and invigorating the blood, this preparation is unequaled.

CAUTION.—In our changeable climate, coughs, colds, and diseases of the throat, lungs and chests will always prevail. Cruel consumption will claim its victims. These diseases, if attended to in time, can be arrested and cured. The remedy is Dr. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY.

TRADE IS AS LIVELY AT HAHNE & CO.'S, NEWARK, AS THOUGH IT WASN'T MIDSUMMER.

Trade is dull in stores that are out of our stream; but in the stream it is lively enough. The thing to do is to keep in the stream. The wants of prodigal fashion are satisfied; the provident million are as hungry as ever; we busy ourselves with both in their seasons. The million's season is always; but its best opportunity lies between the seasons of luxury.

That is, if your merchant understands his business the dull months of the year will bring you provident people, and so it needn't be dull in midsummer.

Now is the time for the million. Stocks are uneven. Too much of this, too much of that, a remnant of that; this is useful, but the favor of fashion is turning away from it. It's the natural working of trade, and will bring you profit if you can only distinguish for yourselves the merchant who keeps to this natural stream the year round.

Follow the stream that visits Newark and flows in Hahne & Co.'s Bazar, and notice where the crowds are thickest. There you will find the biggest bargains. Step down into the roomy and cool basement, and you'll see a crowd snapping up house furnishing goods in all kinds of ware, the prices for which having been reduced so that the poorest of families can secure the choicest goods.

Look around in the fancy goods department and see the immense amount of bargains on every side. Hundreds and hundreds of Summer articles are offered AT COST, and in many cases MUCH BELOW, and there is a stream of customers coming and going who appreciate this firm's efforts by securing many of the best bargains. By following our advice you will readily see that no such bargains can be purchased anywhere outside of Hahne & Co.'s Bazar, Broad, Halsey and New streets, Newark.

You can order anything you want by mail and get it as well as though you came for it yourself.

HER PREFERENCE.

He was handsome and tall,
The envy of all
The men as he walked by her side,
While slowly the light,
Of day changed to night,
And merrily rippled the tide.

She, pretty and sweet,
Entrancing and neat,
Demurely beside him was walking,
While softly the air
Caressed her fair hair
And listened the while to their talking.

"You'll please pardon me"—
He glanced playfully—
"If really this question should tire,
Do you care for men tall
Or those who are small—
What kind of men do you admire?"

Her lashes quick fell,
And veiled her eyes well.
"No pardon for such a request;
I liked mankind all,
Both little and tall,
But then I like Hymen the best."

A CHILD'S TEAR.

"My home—yes, it's bright and clean, sir
And I'll tell how it came to pass;
It wasn't my work or doing at all—
It's all due to that little lass.

"I was going straight down to hell, sir,
And all through the curse of the drink
How I treated poor Mary, my wife, sir
God knows, as I can't bear to think.

"I didn't know as I loved her
Till the wild dark night she died,
When I found her lying cold and still,
And that new-born child by her side.

"The little lass, she has grown, sir—
Last June she was eight years old,
And what she has been to me, sir,
Can never on earth be told.

"When a kid, there was no one to mind her
But a woman as lived next door;
And she being given to drink, too,
Let her fall one day on the floor.

"And ever since, the poor creatur'
Has been lame with a crooked knee;
So I'd often lift her up in my arms
To take her about with me.

"For I really loved the poor mite, sir,
And her sweet little eyes of blue,
Was as blue and as bright as her mother's were,
And they looked me through and through.

"One night I was off to the 'public'—
I'd been drinking already—'twas late,
And I took little Mary to carry her,
But I couldn't walk quite straight.

"'Oh, daddy, don't go!' she whispered,
But I quickened my drunken pace,
And I said, 'Not another word, young 'un,
Or I'll give you a slap in the face.'

"I was brutal, sir—I know it;
But the devil was in me then,
And when he gets hold of us with the drink
We are only brutes—not men.

"And the little lass, she wor quiet,
But I felt a hot tear fall;
And it seemed to burn right into my hand.
Though she wiped it off with her shawl.

"Straight into my soul it entered—
It melted my hardened heart;
So I said, 'I'll go home, lassie.'
That night I made a new start.

"Now, every morning and evening,
I kneel, and with heart sincere
I bless my God for saving a soul
By the touch of a little one's tear."

A RAILWAY LESSON.

It was a hot, dusty day, when two or three passengers entered the train on the Iowa Division of the Chicago & Northwestern Road at Bridgewater. Among them was a stylishly-dressed young man who wore a stiff white hat, patent-leather shoes, the neatest of cuffs and shiniest of stand up collars. He carried a cane, and carefully brushed the dust from the seat in front of me before he sat down.

Just across the aisle, opposite him, sat a tired woman holding a sick baby. I never saw on any face a more discouraged, worn-out, despairing look than that on the mother's face. The baby was too sick even to cry. It lay moaning and gasping in its mother's lap, while the dust and cinders flew in at the open door and windows. The heat and the dust made traveling, even for strong men, almost unbearable.

I had put down the style young man in front of me as a specimen of the dude family, and was making a mental calculation on the probable existence of brains under the new hat, when, to my astonishment, he leaned over the aisle and said to the woman:

"Madam, can I be of any assistance to you? Just let me hold your baby awhile." You look very tired."

The woman seemed much surprised, though the request was made in the politest and most delicate manner.

"Oh, thank you, sir!" said she tremulously, "I am tired," and her lips quivered.

"I think the baby will come to me," said the young man, with a smile. "Poor thing! it's too sick to make any objection. I will hold it carefully, madam, while you lie down and rest awhile. Have you come far?

"From the Black Hills."

"What! by stage?"

"Yes; but the baby was well when I started. I am on my way home to friends in the East. My husband—my—"

"Ah yes, I see, I see!" contined the young man in a sympathetic tone, as he glanced at the bit of crape in the little traveling hat. By this time he had taken the baby, and was holding it in his arms.

"Now you can lie down and rest a little. Have you far to go?"

"To Connecticut," replied the woman almost with a sob, as she wearily arranged a shawl over a valise, and prepered to lie down in the seat.

"Ah yes, I see! And you haven't money enough to go in a sleeping-car, have you, madam?" The poor woman blushed faintly, and put one hand over her face, while the tears dropped between her worn fingers.

I looked out of the window and a mist came over my eyes, while I changed my calculation of the young man's mental ability. He looked thoughtfully and tenderly down at the baby, and in a short time the mother was fast asleep.

A woman sitting across the aisle from me, who had heard as much of the conversation as I had, came and offered to relieve the young man of his charge. "I am ashamed of myself for not offering to take the baby from the mother before. Poor little thing! It's asleep."

"So it is. I'll surrender it to you now," with a cheerful smile.

At this point the train stopped at a station, and the young man rose in his seat, took off his hat, and said in a clear, earnest voice:

"Ladies and gentlemen, here is an opportunity for each one of us to show that we have been brought up in a Christian land, and have had Christian fathers and mothers. This poor woman," pointing at the sleeping mother, "has come all the way from the Black Hills, and is on her way to Connecticut. Her husband is dead, and her baby is ill. She hasn't money to travel in a sleeping car, and is all tired out and discouraged. What will you do about it?"

"Do!" cried a big man down near the water-cooler, rising excitedly. "Do! Take up a collection—the American citizen's last resort in distress. I'll give $5."

The effect was electrical. The hat went around, and the way the silver dollars and quarters and ten cent pieces rattled in it, would have done any true heart good.

I wish I could describe the look on the woman's face when she awoke, and the money was given to her. She tried to thank us all, and failed; she broke down completely. But we didn't need any thanks.

There was a sleeping car on the train, and the young man saw the mother and child transferred to it at once. I did not hear what she said to him when he left her, but it must have been a hearty "God bless you sir!"

More than one of us in that car took that little lesson to himself, and I learned that even stylish as well as poor clothes may cover a noble heart.—C. H. Sheldon in Companion.

A TRUE STORY.

About seventy years ago there lived in the eastern part of Pennsylvania a little boy named Abram H. Like boys nowadays, Abram liked to see all the sights; and so, one beautiful autumn day, his father took him to a neighboring village to see the soldiers drill, as it was the annual "training day." Nearly everybody in those days drank whisky, even the children being taught to drink it; and in almost every cellar a big barrel of the awful stuff was kept. On these "training days" there was a good deal of drinking, many of the men going home drunk. Little Abram saw these drunken men the day he went to the training, and when he got home in the evening, he said to his mother, after telling her of the things he had seen: "Ma, I am never going to drink a single drop of whisky, nor use a bit of tobacco, as long as I live."

His mother said: "I am glad to hear you say that. You shall be my little temperance boy." This was the first temperance speech he made. Don't you think it was a good one?

About ten years after this, Abram, now a boy of seventeen, left his home and went on foot over the mountains to Pittsburg, a journey of two hundred miles. Here he hired out to a sign painter, and began to learn the business.

It was the custom in the shop for the workmen to send one of their apprentice boys every day for a quart of whisky, which they brought in an old stone jug. Of course, when Abram began working in the shop as an apprentice boy, the men sent him after the whisky. He went two or three times, and then made up his mind that he would not go again, as he felt that it was not right.

Next day while Mr. Jones, the owner of the shop, was at dinner, one of the men handed a shilling to Abram, and ordered him to go for the whisky, which he refused to do, saying that it was not right, and he would bring no more whisky for them to drink. This made the man angry; and while he was talking very loud, and threatening to whip Abram unless he would go, Mr. Jones, the proprietor, came in, and asked what the trouble was. Abram said: "Mr. Jones, I came into your shop to learn to paint signs, not to help make men drunkards. I am willing to do all the honorable work I can, but I will not carry whisky for these men to drink. If I can't stay here unless I do this, why, then I will leave."

Mr. Jones said nothing for a moment; then seizing the whisky jug, he smashed it to pieces on the hard floor, and exclaimed: "The last drop of liquor has come into this shop that ever shall, with my consent. This boy has preached me a temperance sermon that I shall never forget; and I will never touch another drop of liquor."—St. Louis Observer.

A correspondent from New Mexico tells this story of
THE CURIOUS PRONUNCIATION OF THE LETTER "J."

A few days since a stranger from the unconverted wilds of the East, where mugwumpery was born and tender feet attain their highest state of sensitiveness, came out to Albuquerque to visit a friend. While walking along Railroad avenue he said to his friend:

"There goes a man I met up at La Junta," giving the J its natural pronunciation.

"You mean LaHunta," the friend replied. "That is a Spanish name, and in that language J takes the sound of H."

"Is that so? Well, I must try to catch on to that."

After strolling along a short distance further he asked:

"Where are these Jemez Springs, of which I see so much in the papers?"

"You should say Haymess Springs; they are over here in the mountains about sixty miles."

"Darn the language—it breaks me all up. That's a pretty nice house over there—that Armijo House, isn't it?" and again he gave the J its proper pronunciation.

"You mean the Armijo house: yes, it's a good one, too."

"Damsicha way of abusing the English alphabet. I reckon, then, that must be the Hafid Brothers' store down the street there?"

"No, that is not a Spanish name, I think it is French. However, it is pronounced as spelled."

"Well, how in Santa Fe—is a fellow goin' to tell what's Spanish and what isn't? Why couldn't they build their language accordin' to the original plans?"

"Oh, you'll soon catch on. You will find it safest to give the Spanish pronunciation to nearly everything here."

An hour later they sat down at the table of the San Felipe Hotel, and, after scanning the bill of fare, the stranger said to the waiter:

"You may bring me a nice, huicy piece of roast beef, some pig's howl with caper sauce, some fricaseed hack-rabbit, some pork with apple helly, some boiled potatoes with the hackets on—unskun, you know—some tarts with current ja—I mean current ham, and ah, some—"

At this point the waiter swooned, and the guests in the room let out a roar of laughter that gave the chandeliers the chills and fever.

This made the stranger mad, and he leaped to his feet like a crazy man, took off his coat and threw it down on the floor and stamped on it and howled.

"You fellers are tryin' to play me for a sucker, but by the Eternal, you've struck the wrong snag! Whoopee! (and he jumped and slapped his fists) I'm a kin lick the bull crowd! Spanish! I kin sling more Spanish in a holy minute than Montezuma could in a year! Kin I? Well, I should calculate that I kin! Let some idiot pull of his jacket and hump onto me, an' the first time I hit 'im he'll think he has hinhams! Spanish? Oh, I guess not! My name's Jeremi—I mean Heremiah Hones, from Hacksonville, Illinoy—and when my dander's up I'm a ravin' hyena! You played me for a sucker, but you mustn't hudge a man by his looks. Whoop, go sound the hubilee. Somebody come out and face me. Let some himcrow galoot come to the front and criticise my Spanish hargon?"

His friends got hold of him and took him from the room, and as he went through the door he remarked:

"I kin take a hoke, but Hupiter! it makes me mad for a lot of Hackasses to try to play me for a greeny!"

STYLES AT THE CENTRES.

Among the new pranks in passementeries we find the ornate Vandyke-shaped Henri II plastron with high, close collar, popular at home and abroad.

The Swiss belt or girdle with double points back and front, made of finely-faceted jet, is worn with shoulder pieces to match.

The Louis XIII epaulettes composed of silk cord and cut jet beads, are festooned with diamond shaped ornaments.

Gray berries called Job's tears, imported from the West Indies, are being threaded with jet, and used extensively for trimmings, collarettes, plastrons, fichus and Maintenon pelerines so popular this Autumn.

Shoulder capes with hood are made of Rose du Barry foulard, crepe de chine and steel-gray velvet.

Another novelty is a jacket of steel-gray cloth, braided in blue with silver thread to simulate a corslet and bretelles. It is closed with antique silver buttons.

Very handsome plastrons of cut steel with side panels en suite, constitute a resplendent accessory to black silk of the Puritan Ideal type; at least some of the exquisite models at Lord & Taylor's so finished with appropriate accessories are classed among the modistic elegancies of the season.

Double-breasted coats of rough cloths, checked, barred, plaided or striped with backs and half-loose fronts closed diagonally with a fly or supplemented by a hood lined with changeable silk and are de riguer with dark costumes for Autumn.

Long New Markets, cloaks and raglans imported for travelling wear with capes reaching to the waist line are made of Scotch tweeds in stripes and bars of rough or illuminated threads on twilled or basket-woven surfaces.

All wraps have high collars, and all are shaped at the back to meet the requirements of the bustle. The Canfield Langtry is best fitted to sustain current draperies; though many ladies supersede the necessity for a bustle by using Madame Foy's famous corset which has one attached a la postillion to the waist-line and is supplemented by broad shoulder bands, thus transferring the weight of clothing from spine and stomach to the shoulders. The Madame Foy takes front rank among the specialties of Foy, Harmon & Chadwick, whose brands are familiar to the commerce of the continents.

The rapidity of the advancement of the science of electricity, has been almost phenomenal and its still unsolved powers are destined to achieve even greater wonders than the lighting of the Suez Canal. In regard to the commercial value of electric lighting, a writer in the New York Tribune says:

"I know of no business which has had more rapidly developed, or in which so many men have grown suddenly rich. It is fast becoming recognized as one of the necessities as of public illuminant and is already one of the most important and vigorous manufacturing industries of the present day. Gas men have been educated to the necessity of combining the two illuminants, and the American Electric Manufacturing Company which originated the combination of gas and electric lights has been imitated in its policy by all the other companies.

Many of the shrewdest business men and principal capitalists of the money centres are investing largely in electric manufacturing. Goff, of the American Company, I am told, holds more stock in electrical enterprises than any other man in the United States. His surroundings at 18 Cortlandt street, certainly indicate great prosperty, as well as his income from the electric light business, which is estimated at not less than $75,000 a year. Goff deserves success for he is the most untiring and enthusiastic of workers and we have little doubt that when his favorite policy of combining gas and electric lighting is finally accepted by all the companies gas and electric light securites will be ranked as among the most popular and best paying of investments." HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

POTTED MACKEREL.

Place one dozen small makerel in a stone jar; between each layer sprinkle salt, small bits of butter, cloves, cinnamon, black pepper and a very little cayenne pepper; cover with vinegar. Tie a thick brown paper, well buttered, over the top of the jar, and bake in a slow oven six hours. Will keep a year as a good relish.

FRENCH ICE CREAM.

Thick and yellow, is made by boiling a quart of cream with a long vanilla bean and then cooling and straining it; then the volks of 12 eggs are beaten smooth with three-quarters of a pound of sugar; the flavored cream is then mixed with the eggs and stirred over the fire until it begins to thicken, directly the cream begins to thicken, take it from the fire and stir it for five minutes; then cool it and freeze it.

POTATO SALAD.

According to Miss Parloa: Cut into dice enough cold boiled potatoes to make a quart, and season with salt and pepper. Mix thoroughly in a cup six tea-spoonfulls of salad oil, two of vinegar, half a tea-spoonful of salt, a quarter of a tea-spoonful of pepper, and a tablespoonful of grated onion. Mix this dressing lightly with the potato dice. If you have parsley, a table-spoonful chopped fine and mixed with the potato adds to the flavor and appearance. The salad improves by standing an hour or more before it is served.

TO VARY THE FLAVOR OF ROAST BEEF.

This can be done by squeezing the juice of half a lemon over it and putting the other half inside the roast. Another way is to put half of a carrot, one small onion, and a little parsley in the dripping pan and, lay the roast over it. Do not be led by any bad advisor to put one drop of water in your dripping pan until you have tried the experiment of roasting beef in this way. It makes a striking difference in the flavor of the meat. The outsides browns over quickly, the juice is all kept within, and the meat is tender in consequence of this.

TOMATO OMELET FOR SUPPER.

Take equal parts of sliced onions and tomatoes, peeled and freed from pips, chop them both coarsely. Fry the onions in butter. When cooked without being colored, add the tomatoes, with pepper and salt, and keep stirring the mixture on the fire till it forms a sort of puree. Make a plain omelet in the usual way and insert this in the fold on dishing it.

CHOCOLATE CREAM.

Put on the fire one quart of milk; when it comes to a boil add three tablespoonfuls of chocolate, thicken with corn starch and sweeten to taste. Flavor with vanilla. Serve cold with cream.

SKELETONS.

Two eggs, three tablespoonfuls of sugar and one tablespoonful of butter. Flour to make very stiff, roll very thin and cut in fancy shapes.

LEMONADE AU LAIT.

To 1½ lbs. of white suggar dissolved in one quart of boiling water add one pint of lemon juice and one and one-half pints of milk. This is said to make a capital summer beverage.

THE VALUE OF PROFESSIONAL SERVICE.

"Several of our esteemed contemporaries have recently made a prodigious fuss over a bill of $7,000, which was presented by a prominent local dentist to a Venezuelan General for four days' work upon the teeth of the latter's wife. It is very evident that our esteemed contemporaries have but little idea of the expense involved in gold mining in Venezuelan back teeth, and as a simple act of justice we publish the following item. It will be borne in mind that the rules are those fixed by the College of Odonthological Ethics, and are in vogue throughout the United States and Canada:"

CHINESE AGONY.—The North China Herald gives two very curious specimens of the advertisements which appear in Chinese papers. One is from a mother to her son who has run away from home, and it is worded as follows: "Take care that you are not struck down by lightning. Your mother weeps bitterly for you as she pens these lines in order that they may be read by her son. When you ran away from home on the 30th of the eighth moon, the people of the shop came and asked us what had become of you; it was thus that we learned your flight. I nearly died of fright, and since then my food and sleep have benefited me but little. I am still crying and moaning. I have received your letter which has come from beyond the horizon, but it does not tell me where I can find you. I am now at almost the last extremity, and our family has had to put up with cruel insults from strangers.

"If you do not return I can stand all this no longer and shall assuredly put an end to my existence, in which case you would be in danger of being struck down by lighting. If you return, no matter in what way, and all will be arranged. I have even invented a plan by which your father will know nothing about your escapade. My life or death is a question of only a few more days. I entreat all well disposed persons to spread abroad the advertisement so that it may be read by all whom it may concern. They will thus earn a profusion of hidden merit. Written by a woman of Son-cho—Take care that you are not struck by lightning!"

A second advertisement is from a husband whose wife has run away with a man whom she had met in a tea house. The advertisement sets out at great length the circumstances attending this elopement and offers a reward $20 to any one giving him information as to her whereabouts.

You Carry
A whole medicine chest in your pocket, with one box of Ayer's Pills. As they operate directly on the stomach and bowels, they indirectly affect every other organ of the body. When the stomach is out of order, the head is affected, digestion fails, the blood becomes impoverished, and you fall an easy victim to any prevalent disease. Miss M. E. Boyle, of Wilkesbarre, Pa., puts the whole truth in a nutshell, when she says: "I use no other medicine than Ayer's Pills. They are all that any one needs, and just splendid to save money in doctors' bills."
Here is an instance of A Physician
who lost his medicine chest, but, having at hand a bottle of Ayer's Pills, found himself fully equipped.—J. Arrison, M. D., of San José, Cal., writes:
"Some three years ago, by the merest accident, I was forced, so to speak, to prescribe Ayer's Cathartic Pills for several sick men among a party of engineers in the Sierra Nevada mountains; my medicine chest having been lost in crossing a mountain torrent. I was surprised and delighted at the action of the Pills, so much so, indeed, that I was led to a further trial of them, as well as of your Cherry Pectoral and Sarsaparilla. I have nothing but praise to offer in their favor."
John W. Brown, M. D., of Oceana, W. Va., writes: "I prescribe Ayer's Pills in my practice, and find them excellent. I urge their general use in families."
T. E. Hastings, M. D., of Baltimore, Md., writes: "That Ayer's Pills do control and cure the complaints for which they are designed, is as conclusively proven to me as anything possibly can be. They are the best cathartic and aperient within the reach of the profession."
