"I have says sailed this a. m. positively."

Then, another idea coming to him, Fairfax cursed himself that he had not thought of it before. He again telegraphed Le Follet & Co.:

"If Nobbitt sailed direct for America, his steam-yacht must be soon off Cherbourg. Wire some shipping company there to charter and send out immediately a tug; intercept him, and give telegram."

By this time the Paris central office, the office of the banking company and the smaller offices along the telegraph line, were thoroughly excited; as for the operator at St. Maid, if these last messages had failed to reach Mr. Nebbitt, he would have torn his hair from very vexation and disappointment, so bent was he upon Fairfax's success.

Paris soon replied:

"All done as you say. We await result with interest."

The hands on the dial marked ten minutes past four. No reply had come.

"If any message comes before six o'clock to-night, send it to me at once. Hold all that come after that for further orders," was his parting injunction.

So saying, with firmly closed lips, but evident disappointment, he mounted his horse and had begun his headlong dash, when a yell from the rear caused him to turn his head.

There stood the youthful operator, dancing up and down in the exuberance of his joy, waving a piece of paper, and all but standing on his head.

In a second Fairfax had it in his hand. The message was from Cherbourg, and said:

"Nobbitt's yacht just appeared in harbor, suddenly changed course and went back toward Havre. Have wired all ports likely to stop at, to keep watch; and have our tug in readiness, in case she appears again. Can't fail to get her now."

A sudden and transient gleam of joy shone in the stern eyes of Fairfax. His hand, set face relaxed for a moment into a faint smile, while the operator behaved like a lunatic.

Fairfax slipped a coin into his hand. He rejected it indignantly with the remark:

"I would rather have lost a quarter's salary than seen you fail."

He wrung the other's hands at parting, notwithstanding the assertion of the American that he would return before midnight again.

CHAPTER VI.

DOES SHE CARE FOR HIM?

It was now a quarter past four. Fairfax actually made the distance from St. Malo to the village in one hour and twenty minutes, arriving about twenty-five minutes of six. Dick stood ready with the chaise.

"Look after this horse, landlord. Jeannette's all right," called Fairfax, as he leaped into the seat beside Oxford.

"Well, Mr. Richard Oxford, I've been in purgatory since I saw you last, sir, but have come out successfully," continued he, taking the reins out of his friend's hands. "And it's only a question of time and luck whether I'm successful or not in this little matter we're now going to undertake."

Dick was burning with curiosity; but awaited Fairfax's time for revealing the secret.

"I've telegraphed your bankers, and they have sent on the money. I ought to receive it to-night, when I go to St. Malo to take the chaise. You are to stay in waiting," added he, seeing Dick's look of surprise. "I shall return in a day or two."

Rapidly they drove toward the flat-rock. Dick all the time on fire with curiosity; while his companion was consumed with anxiety, although inwardly cool and conversing in an easy manner.

"Follow me and keep quiet," was his imperative sentence. Dick wonderingly obeyed; but, as they neared the cliff's edge, forgetfully exclaimed:

"What a winning view!"

Fairfax turned quickly and put his finger to his lips. Dick understood and submissively followed.

"Look below, but don't let them see you!" whispered Arthur, leading the Englishman to a sheltering bush on the edge. Oxford cautiously got down on his hands and knees and did look over. Drawing back immediately with what just escaped being a loudly-uttered word of surprise.

Taking his comrade by the arm, he led the latter further back, to a position where they could not be heard, and surveyed him from head to foot with a comical look, partly indignant and partly pleased.

"So that's the way you treat your friends, is it! Play off innocent and guileless! O, you villain of the deepest dye, my boy! How you must have smiled at my allusion to your heart."

"Advice to me about her! You never gave me any advice about her!"

"Never gave you any advice about her! I'd like to know if I didn't, sit up there and talk to you like a father about the interest she showed in you and the advantages of marrying such a woman. Humph! You needn't pretend to be so innocent again."

"But, my dear fellow, who said any thing about Lady Lydia! What has she to do with the present occasion! What put her into your head!"

"Arthur Fairfax, you must think I'm a blanked fool, if you believe I'm going to swallow any such gammon as that! What put her into my head! Do you imagine that, when a man goes on in the most ridiculous manner, making every one quake in his boots and each particular hair to stand on end, like quills upon the fretful porcupine, and then cuts up rough by taking his friend to the verge of a most horrible precipice, telling him to look down and then abandoning him to his fate—do you suppose that other fellow isn't going to have doubts of the first fellow's sincerity, if not sanity, when he asks in the most brassy manner 'What put her into your head!' What put Lydia into my head! Why, my eyes, of course! Could see, and saw, her stupid. What else!"

"What! Lady Lydia there!" exclaimed Fairfax, a shade paler and leaning against a tree, in his surprise.

"Yes, the Lady Lydia there! clever master-stroke, said you! Lucky it, too!"

"I give you my word of honor I didn't. I thought it was the Princess."

"Well, so she is, too; but, as I told you before, she don't count. Lydia is reading aloud and the Princess painting. Como and sea for yourself. But I can't understand why you should be so confoundedly myste-rious about it all. If I were running this affair, I'd slip down those rocks immediately, and have a sociable chat with 'em."

Fairfax shuddered at the bare idea and, sibling the irrepressible Dick by the collar, gave him a shake that was worthy in a way that convinced him of the necessity of secrecy, this time at least.

When they gained the bush, Fairfax's breath came faster and harder. He hesitated; but only for a moment, and again stealing almost on his stomach, crept to the edge, and, unsuspicious and lowly being, looked down.

At a glance they took in the whole state of affairs.

Directly below sat the Princess, bending over her painting. Beside Heaven! the sketch was not yet finished.

At least two days' work upon it were necessary to it could be taken away in the rough state, to finish in the studio. At the expiration of that time he hoped to return, and then!

Close beside Natalie sat Lydia, an open book in her lap, lost in a happy study.

The air was very calm and the voices, without much effort, could hear the slight-est sound below. The Princess, bending low over her painting, was saying, in a quiet, indifferent tone of voice:

"Lydia, who was that with whom you were talking last night?"

Lydia became suddenly wide-awake, and nervously replied:

"You mean the young American with whom I was tete-a-tete, as you came down the stairs, I suppose. Why!"

THE WATCHERS ON THE CLIFF.

"Because," said the Princess, turning her large dark eyes toward her questioner, in a frank, ingenuous manner, "because he had so sad a face, I felt interested in him. Do you know his history!"

"I was about to ask when you had met him, Natalie, and what you know about him!"

Fairfax's face flushed crimson at the Princess' mention of himself. Now that he had become the subject of their conversation, he could be eavesdropper no longer and attempted to pull Dick away by force. But that wide-awake individual suddenly became as obdurate as his friend. In a loud, clear whisper he said:

"If you don't unhand me I'll yell; and then your game'll be up."

Fairfax, surprised at this unexpected turn in affairs, and recognizing the fact that Richard's obstinacy had become aroused, retired in confusion.

A secret joy filled his heart. Natalie had acknowledged an interest in him—more than his wildest dreams could have realized! To be sure it was a contemplative sort of an interest, but she hadn't vouchsafed even that to any other male—at least, so Dick had said.

For the moment, the foolish young fellow gave himself up to joy, and had the effrontery to thank Heaven for his luck.

Meanwhile, the incorrigible Dick, who was now in his element, chuckled to himself and lay there listening with all his ears.

At Lydia's question, Natalie turned toward her with infeigned surprise: every thing about this girl was genuine; she expressed nothing she did not feel—and remarked, almost dropping her painting palette:

"My dear Lydia, I I never saw him before! What do you mean!"

"Then, why did you both blush so consciously when your eyes met! I never saw a man so disturbed as he was when he caught sight of you."

A slight flush suffused the face of Natalie, as she answered:

"I wasn't aware that he was disturbed. If so, it may have been at finding himself the cynosure of a staring pair of eyes. I was simply annoyed at finding myself caught gazing so boldly at an entire stranger."

"That may be true in your case, but certainly not in his. No strange man ever yet could be so visibly embarrassed as he at finding himself the objective point of a pretty woman's eye," replied the wise Lydia, with a Solomon-like air. "So there, my dear, you're only wrong, I know."

"You may just bet on that, ma chere," said the irrepressible Richard, sotto voce from above.

"And," continued she, "to tell the truth—you and I have no secrets, you know—I'm a little curious as to the history of the fellow myself."

Here she slyly bent her head down and examined her boot for a moment. "And I'm going to amuse myself by studying him a trifle. That fly-away, Dick Oxford"—Dick made a very face and scratched aside—"Thank you ma'am"—says he is of noble birth and can trace his lineage back to Lord Fairfax; that he is a gentleman of leisure; but, from a feeling of duty, has accepted a very high position in some department of Government."

"May God forgive me for that whopper!" whispered the penitential Dick to himself. "But," he added, apologetically, "he certainly is not of ignoble birth, and I do believe he is a descendant of the old Fairfaxes. He's a gentleman of leisure—at present, at least, until school-teaching begins. And I'm sure it was a feeling of duty (to himself, to save himself from emigrating to the poor-house) that led him to accept a high position in the department of Government—ahem! of a set of spoiled youngsters. So that he's not so bad after all," added he, with a feeling of comfort.

"But, at any rate," continued Lydia, "whatever his position, or from whom descended, he has interested me as few men have."

The imaginative Dick thought he could perceive a shade of jealousy creep up the Princess' book hair and spread itself over her hat. But he could not see her face, for she bent more lowly over her work and remained not a word in reply.

"Now just look at that!" meditated Dick. "Here am I dying to fall in love with that detestable Lydia and to have her fall in love with me, been trying those hundreds of years—more, or less!—he added, half-explanatorily—"and it don't work worth a fig. Along comes this penniless Yankee, confound the dog! I can't help admiring him—and scoops in, not only Lydia, but that frigid German iceberg, without the slightest effort, or apparent intention, even. Hang it all! I can't see how he does it; still he did look devilishly well last night."

Here Natalie began, humming a strain from the "Addio." Lydia interrupted her with:

"How he started when you struck into that song, last night. And I thought I heard him say: 'It points my fate!'"

Natalie laid down her palette and brush, and leaning back in her chair, turned her face curiously toward Lydia, saying:

"Do you know that is very strange. The moment I saw his face, that song, which had been haunting me more or less during the entire evening, as associated with my last knife, flashed across me with redoubled energy. It seemed to tell his history and fate. Now you say those were his own words. Curious, is it not?"

CHAPTER VII.

AND IN THE DARK, NOW ABOUT THE CURSE!

Dick was not a clever fellow, but he certainly was not a fool. He essayed to make a mental estimate of both girls, and succeeded wonderfully well.

The Princess, and acknowledged it was a woman of singularly fine, pure and lofty character, deep and strong in her affections, simple-minded and guileless, yet not devoid of what is commonly known as strong common sense.

Lydia was of a very different stamp. Here she was living where she loves, but that she does not love, is positive. I could swear to it!"

With all her soft womanly traits, she was too susceptible to the sin of pride. It had unconsciously become a matter of pride with her to show no interest in mankind. With no other woman, except Lydia, would she have spoken so freely; and, even with that friend, she could scarcely depart from her pretty, proud, little reserve, without a visible effort unbending. Her relations were closely set—because of her interest in the man, but preceded not a word in reply.

"But I said Dick to himself, "ma chere," your interest is at present entirely platonic. What that interest might develop into under the proper circumstances, I can't say. But I do say that Mistress Lydia is most decidedly interested in this young man, and that it would require but slight effort on his part to deepen that interest. And, if she loves, 'she loves forever.' Her nature's strong, but craves something upon which to expend that strength; can't exist without it. Natalie lives in the realm of her imagination and does not ask for sympathy, delighting in her arts. Lydia is strong, but looks for sympathy and love, and something upon which to expend sympathy and love, in return. She couldn't find what she wanted among those frivolous fops of society, and now Fairfax has appeared, and unconsciously touched the deep chord that never before vibrated. Well, they'd make a splendid pair, and he'd be a fool not to try for her. She's worth four of the other in my opinion, although I acknowledge that's saying a great deal."

With this adage and indisputable conclusion Richard was about to retire, by pushing himself backward, until he deemed it safe to stand upright, as he saw a movement in the camp below that indicated preparation for flight. However, his attention was arrested by a sentence, half suggestive, half-mild, and altogether remarkable, ventured by Lydia: "I had thought of asking Mr. Fairfax to call with me at Chateau D'Or."

"I came here with the intention of receiving no visits but those of my oldest friends," said Natalie, frigidly; "and I see no reason why I should alter my intention. Besides, my dear Lydia, I leave Chateau D'Or in a few days, at the latest, for Lake Maggiore."

Lydia said no more, and the two girls, evidently both feeling a little uncomfortable, and yet both striving to conceal their emotion, prepared to depart.

"I have they started, Dick!" asked he, suddenly.

"No, but they are on the point of starting."

Fairfax turned to the left in the main road, and whipped up his horse to greater speed.

"Are you not going back to the village!" queried Richard.

"Wait," inconically answered the imperturbable Fairfax.

A short distance from the brook he reined up and drove the chaise among the trees. He then led the way to the road. The noise of clattering hoofs coming nearer, caused the pair to retreat behind the bushes that had sheltered Fairfax the afternoon previously. The men ensconced none too soon.

The two girls appeared directly, and rode to the pool, where they allowed their horses to drink. Natalie leaped to the ground and stood by Medji, holding the reins in her hands. Fairfax took note of this, and also of the fact that the servants again delayed their appearance.

It is to be hoped," sadly remarked Natalie, "that those servants will not forget any thing to-day. Catharine has just confessed that Dimitri and she had already passed the brook and gone into one of the wood-roads to gather some wild flowers, when they suddenly missed my camp-chair, and, to save time, made a short cut through the forest, coming out by the brook where you see the opening yonder." (This made clear to Fairfax the mystery of the sudden disappearance of the servants yesterday.) "Yesterday they dropped my knife, although I am sure I put it in my pocket, just before starting." (Aye! so you had, fair maiden, but even Princesses have holes in their pockets.)

With that she began, absent-mindedly, to hum. But Lydia, interrupting her, gayly trilled:

"'I know not what it meaneth,
That I am so and to-day;
But a song of the times departed
Will not from my brain away.'

"You are constantly humming that 'Addio.' Do you know it, Natalie mine!"

Whereat, Natalie, infected by her flow of spirits, laughed and said:

"How absurd it all is, is it not! And, after all, what foolish creatures we are."

Lydia, not comprehending this irrelevant remark at first, stared; then; remembering the eccentricities of her friend, ventured the equally irrelevant and non-committal statement that:

"The whole sum and substance of the matter is, as Solomon says: 'Fear God and'—ahem!—I and obey your husband, when you get one."

Laughing heartily, they could not have told why, both dashed away, two magnificent specimens of womanhood, noble-hearted girls, fearless, frank and true.

The all-observant Fairfax had noted, cautiously, one other fact—that the stone by which Natalie had mounted lay directly against the huge trunk of an enormous willow tree.

Oxford was now all eagerness to return to the village immediately.

"Wait," said Fairfax, putting out his hand to restrain him and looking steadily in the direction whence the girls had first appeared.

They waited perhaps ten minutes. Fairfax stilled and thoughtful, revolving some scheme or other in his brain, but observant all the time; Dick, too, quiet, but chiefly from curiosity.

A carriage was heard approaching. It contained the lovers, Catharine and Dimitri, who seemed more delighted than ever to the surrounding world. Three horse was, clearly, the only one of the party who had his wits about him. Being a sagacious and docile beast, with a vision of oats in the distance, he was directing himself homeward with energetic steps.

After they had passed out of sight, Fairfax then motioned to his friend to follow him. Going over to the stone from which Natalie had mounted, the pair sat down.

"As I told you," began Fairfax, "I leave tonight for Havre, or for Paris via St. Malo; but I've got to leave to-morrow night at the same hour—both of us ostensibly for to return. You will tell landlord Baudray that you are going to Paris—understand! To all inform him, that I am going to take a steamer to America to-morrow. I want to create a false impression that we have gone—cleared out, vamosed the ranch, and are hundreds of miles away from this place."

"Now," continued he, "as to your occupation while here, my boy. Such of all to be retained to several important items of interest. I have noticed that twice already the Princess has ceased sketching just before sunset; that the servants follow at some distance behind; that she clamounts from that stone on which we are now sitting; and that your friend, Lydia, has been with her both times."

"Now," Sholto, speaking slowly to impress his instance, "my boy, I must ask you to take observations in my place, to-morrow. If she will return to the stone, and you can follow unobserved, do so. Do not approach her, but follow at a respectful distance, and see if she goes to the village, or where she goes. Do you understand!"

"I know not what it meaneth, currence of what I have just told you. More especially do you hear, friend!—am I anxious to learn whether Lydia will be with her again. I must positively learn that. You get those points!"

"I do," said Richard.

"Now, can that valet of yours keep a secret?"

"The rack wouldn't extract it from him, if he makes up his mind to do so."

"Will he falter; or have any qualms of conscience about taking part in a hazardous scheme!"

"He'll do whatever I tell him."

"Very well, I want his assistance, too, in this matter. I want you both to pack up; say farewell; go to St. Malo; buy your tickets to Paris—being exceedingly cautious to keep in the background, and, on no account, make known your names—send all your baggage through to that city; but get off—both of you—at Dol. I will arrive a few moments later. We will then hold a consultation together. Do you get the idea!"

"I do," replied the attentive and very much puzzled Oxford.

"Will you act accordingly!"

"I will."

"Very well, then, let's join hands on it. Meanwhile I must ask you to wait longer before I admit you to my secret."

"I see and acquiesce," meekly said Dick.

Upon which they got into the buggy and silently drove home to the inn, each one occupied with his own peculiar thoughts.

CHAPTER VIII.

IF THIS FAILS ME, EVERY THING ELSE FAILS, TOO!

At half-past nine Fairfax was off and away, having first taken Dick aside and made that now completely docile, but mystified individual, recite in order his various duties for the morrow. Oxford did this with so much precision as to win commendation from his friend, who added:

"Now, whatever else you may do, my boy, I want you to make it distinctly understood that you have gone away to Paris, to return no more, forever—this year, at least. You observed how marked I was in my adieus to all, giving out that I was going back to America immediately?"

At midnight he was in St. Malo, where he found awaiting him a telegram from Nebbitt himself.

"Message only just received. See you to-morrow on board 'Manna,' Havre, 10 a.m."

Fairfax smiled, and remarked:

"Persistence often succeeds where genius fails."

At the hour named he stood on the deck of the "Morna," as she lay at anchor off Havre. Nebbitt, looking as if he had just stepped from a sandbox, came forward, and with his prompt, clear-cut sentences, began the conversation:

"Good morning, Fairfax. Luckily for you, a mere whim of mine brought me back, and, had I followed it out entirely, I should now have been in Southampton. I should never have waited for any other man but you. I observe you're in a hurry; I'm at your service. What can I do for you!"

"Yes, I am in haste. I want to see you privately"

"Let us go into the cabin, then," said Nebbitt, leading the way

STRIKING A HIGH NOTE.

[illegible] present competition in trade [illegible] one has to strike a high [illegible] as it were, of something [illegible] offer special inducements. We think that our present stock of OVERCOATS strikes a very high note in the clothing market and will arrest the attention of a great many who otherwise might pass us by. Year by year the number of those who stop paying custom prices for clothes increases, and this is because the ready made article has been brought to such perfection that the extra money paid for the former is thrown away. Take as an example our $18 Beaver Overcoats. We are confident that no [illegible] tailor within a hundred miles of this town could think of producing the same under $30. In nine cases out of ten, [illegible] is deformed, we guarantee to fit him perfectly. See below for a few of our [illegible] in this line.

Justice Trussler was present at the canvassing of the election returns at Elizabeth and he says, notwithstanding the president of the board of canvassers, Mr. Anson Grant, of Westfield, is a Republican, his rulings were fair and impartial, and that he is the fairest and squarest Grant he has ever heard of.

Sheriff Glasby has made some changes in the government of the jail. He has appointed Mr. Cahill as Deputy Warden, or Jailer, and Constable Dixon, as assistant, in place of Philip Breen. A slight fire occurred in the plating room of Hetfield & Jackson's carriage factory last Friday night. It was thought the fire communicated in some way from the forge. The funeral took place from his residence on Irving street Thursday afternoon.

FIRE.—The buildings at Friese's coal yard were discovered to be on fire shortly before 10 o'clock on Thursday morning, having caught in the rear of a two story building used as a stable and store house for agricultural implements. The fire department responded promptly to an alarm from the dredger whistle, near by, in the river, but the fire had gained such headway that the destruction was nearly complete. The loss is covered by insurance. It is not known how the fire originated, but it is thought from some one smoking.

RAISING THE CROSS.

On Sunday afternoon a large crowd of our citizens assembled in and around St. Mark's R. C. Church on Hamilton street, to witness the ceremony of raising the large cross to the top of the new steeple, which is the highest of any in this section, being about 150 feet from the ground to the top of the cross. At 3 o'clock St. Joseph's Society, composed of members of the church, marched in. The pastor, Rev. L. Hofschneider, made an address in German and was followed by Rev. Father O'Gready, of St. Peter's church, New Brunswick, who delivered an eloquent sermon, taking his text from the day's gospel. The cross, was then (solemnly blessed and carried to the front of the church by the building committee and raised by three sets of pulleys, and placed in position by Messrs. H. Cordes and J. Furst. The cross is a gift from Mr. Michael J. Boyne, the plumber of this city, and is six by nine feet, made of metal and gilded and weighs 150 pounds. The building committee is composed of the pastor and Messrs. A. Herold, G. Andelfinger, P. Brown, A. Ritter, J. Vetter, Thomas Geis, F. Miller and A. Kimmick. This new steeple is the highest in Rahway, shows at a long distance, and is an ornament to the city.

THE DAIRY-MAIDS' FESTIVAL.

The Dairy Maids' Festival, under the auspices of the Baptist church, which took place on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings of last week, and which was continued on Saturday evening by special request, was a success, financially and otherwise, though the storm of Thursday evening somewhat interfered. A list of the Dairy-maids which was promised us for last week's issue was not received; but as they deserve recognition for their time and trouble and their excellence in drill, we here give them as furnished this week, as follows:

Lillie Brown, Hattie Kent, Annie Clark, Clara Runyon, Jennie Rollinson, Nettie Clark, Minnie Brown, Maggie Miller, Lillie Rollinson, Clara Ellis, Emma Westervelt, Millie Gabrielle, Emma Miller, Flora Plum and Grace Gabrille. The gentlemen taking part in the entertainment were Messrs. J. R. Chapin, J. R. Rollinson, Geo. C. Miller, Thompson Thorn, Harry Chapin, Robert Kent, Prof. Gulick, of Jersey City, (who led the singing), Dr. Oliver and S. G. Perkins. All wore the old fashioned continental costumes and powdered wigs with queues. Noticeable among the costumes were one of purple, trimmed with gold and lace worn by Mr. J. R. Chapin; another of black and red, by Chas. Howard; one of blue and black by Jos. R. Rollinson; another of blue satin with silver trimmings worn by S. G. Perkins, and a beautiful one of black and gold by E. A. Campen, Jr.

There were many dames, too, in costumes of the "days of yore." Miss Ida Loucks, of Brooklyn, and Miss Sarah Esterbrook (Prince Grawassa Satucka) wore Japanese costumes and presided at the "Japanese booth." Mrs. Geo. Plum wore a "Mother Goose" costume and presided at that stand. Mrs. Dr. Brown, Mrs. St. Clair Moore, Mrs. Jos. R. Rollinson, Mrs. Thompson Thorn, and Miss Mary Moore, presided at the fruit and confectionery booth.

The Oriental quarters or Turkish Cafe, in the upper hall, were under the management of Mr. Harry Chapin, who looked every inch the Prince Selim El Kirbah," in his handsome Turkish costume. His pages were Edwin Spence, Ray Avery, Wm. Morris, Louie Watson and Frank Plum. Here "Mocha" and cigars were dispensed to gentlemen desiring them and with the divan, canopies, and other eastern surroundings one would imagine that he was in Constantinople for the time being.

Each evening's festivities were preceded by a musical and literary entertainment of an hour's duration. On Friday evening there was "standing room only." That evening's programme opened with the Social Orchestra rendering several fine selections under the leadership of Charles R. Melick, who deserves especial mention for his fine cornet solo, "The Maid O' Dundee." The Dairy-maids' then appeared in their drill and choruses. Their marching and complicated movements exhibited careful training under the master hand of Mr. E. A. Campen, Jr. Mr. Robt. Kent rendered the solo of their song "Cackle, Cackle," the Dairy Maids' joining in the chorus. "The Light House by the Sea" was repeated by request by the male quartette consisting of Thompson Thorn, G. C. Miller, Chas. Seaman and S. G. Perkins, the latter taking the solo part. On being recalled they sang a comic piece. "Who Built the Ark," and the "Old Apple Tree." Miss Clara Ellis sang a solo and was encored, and when "Katura Smitchel" (Mrs. Saint Clair Moore) appeared with her ancient spinster costume and fan! and sang "Grandma's Advice," it brought down the house. Misses Hattie Kent and Lillie Brown sang "Two Many Girls" beautifully, and Miss Eva Wilson repeated her "Buy a Broom." After which the Dames, Squires, and Dairy-maids' arranged themselves across the stage, and under the leadership of Prof. Gulick sang "Auld Lang Syne."

Lack of space prohibits a more extended account of the affair as it is certainly deserving of it. Many were present from surrounding towns and even from New York and Brooklyn. The management and the ladies of the refreshment committee are deserving of much credit.

A LITTLE TOO CONSPICUOUS.

There is always a certain few in every town that like to make themselves conspicuous in everything that comes up in the way of a little argument or excitement, let it be in a society, club, fire company, military company, or a political squabble, it's all the same; they must show off and let the public know what they think they know. We have two or three of them in this place, one of them got most beautifully "set down on" at Elizabeth last week by the Board of Election canvassers. This knowing gentleman made himself very disagreeably conspicuous at the first meeting of the board by volunteering considerable advice that was not asked for. At the second meeting he had the cheek to take a chair and plank himself down at the table right among the canvassers. The question was asked by a member of the board if this conspicuous outsider had any right to do this, and the chairman answered, "decidedly not." The conspicuous individual was requested to withdraw, and he withdrew, and for once somewhat crestfallen.

Supervisor James R. Smith has again been awarded the premium for having the best kept section on the Penn. R. R., his supervision extending from Newark to Dean's Station. He has sent the following letter to the foremen on his line:

DEAR SIR:—It is with a great deal of pleasure that I have to inform you that Division B has again been awarded the General Manager's premium for the best line and surface on the main line of the Pennsylvania Railroad between Pittsburg and New York, a distance of four hundred and forty-nine miles. This very gratifying result has been brought about through the exertions of the foreman and men in charge of the various sub divisions. Please accept my thanks for the manner in which you and your men have performed their duties during the past year.

The November Simultaneous Meetings among the Presbyterian churches commenced on Sunday, in the interest of foreign missions, with a general interchanging of pulpits by the ministers. The ministers of this city exchanged with those of Elizabeth. Rev. Dr. Liggett preached at the 1st Presbyterian in that city in the morning, and the 2d in the evening. Rev. Wm. Alfred Gay preached in the Madison avenue church, Elizabeth in the morning. Rev. Dr. Kempshell, of Elizabeth, preached in this city at the 2d church in the morning and the 1st in the evening. Rev. Mr. Albrecht and Rev. Mr. Rudolph, of the German Presbyterian churches exchanged for the day.

Mrs. Sarah Martin, mother of Mr. Thompson Martin and Mrs. Jonathan Woodruff, died at her residence, Woodbridge township, near the Rahway line, early Wednesday morning, aged nearly 92 years, being one of the oldest residents in this section. She was the widow of Wm. Martin, who died many years ago, and had lived in the house where she died for over sixty years. She was an excellent old lady and highly respected by all, descending from one of the Crowell families who resided in the section known as Rahway Neck, being a daughter of Joseph Crowell who kept a hay scale in New York many years ago.

Misses Hattie Pennoyer and Ida Branson will sing a duet at the entertainment Thanksgiving night.

DON'T

let that cold of yours run on. You think it is a light thing. But it may run into catarrh. Or into pneumonia. Or consumption.

Catarrh is disgusting. Pneumonia is dangerous. Consumption is death itself.

The breathing apparatus must be kept healthy and clear of all obstructions and offensive matter; otherwise there's trouble ahead.

All the diseases of these parts, head, nose, throat, bronchial tubes and lungs, can be delightfully and entirely cured by the use of Boschee's German Syrup. If you don't know this already, thousands and thousands of people can tell you. They have been cured by it, and "know how it is themselves." Bottle only 75 cents. Ask any druggist. sep23-cow Neuralgia may occur in almost any part of the body, but the prevailing cause is impoverished or poisoned blood. It is the prayer of the nerves for better food. The seats, or lines, of neuralgic attacks are plainly presented to the eye in the remarkable manikin now on exhibition at Dr. J. W. Oliver's drug store, Rahway, N. J., and information is also furnished as to the principle of which Kaskine, the new quinine, relieves and cures nervous diseases. All sufferers should investigate this matter.

LOCAL POTPOURRI.

FACTS ABOUT FURNITURE AND CARPETS YOU CAN'T GET AWAY FROM!

Such a stock of furniture and carpets as we have now can hardly be found, we believe, within fifty miles of the store, and we are selling more of these goods, doubtless, than any two or three other houses in the town.

Our trade is growing steadily better. And what do best and better mean? Truer in seasoned wood and style and make, looked at by the light of the price-ticket. Price comes first; then everything else. You can find as good furniture elsewhere. Every city has its extravagant little furniture store. The furniture has a certain richness, and is apt to be good; it is the price that kills. The price? There is no price. Look at the ticket—X. Y. Z. unknown symbols. The seller looks at you, not the ticket, when you ask him the price. "How much will he pay?" he asks himself. Look through this department, and you'll say as others have, Hahn's is the place to buy after all.

On the whole, perhaps, we have the pleasantest carpet store in the country. A generous floor—80x200—with abundance of light and competent clerks (there'll be more room by-and-by); but what makes it pleasant beyond example is the carpets and how we sell them.

Take the single item of Brussels carpets. We have as almost everybody has, American Brussels carpets, for 68c. 79c. 80c. 98c. $1.09 and $1.25, the last three are body Brussels, and the same grade that they sell in many stores for $1.25, $1.40, and $1.50; so you see that ours at one of these prices are by no means sure to be the same as another's at the same. Indeed, they are almost sure to be not the same.

The difference between these various grades is in closeness of weaving amount of wool and quality, not to mention patterns and colors. To a very large extent our styles are ours exclusively, and if you are sensible you examine the stock at Hahne & Co.'s Bazar, Broad, Halsey and New streets, Newark, before you buy elsewhere

To Cure a Cough, to relieve all irritations of the throat, to restore perfect soundness and health to the lungs, use DR. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY, which is still prepared with the same care as when it was introduced to the public by Dr. Wistar, over forty years since.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla acts directly and promptly, purifying and enriching the blood, improving the appetite, strengthening the nerves, and invigorating the system. It is in the truest sense, an alterative medicine. Every invalid should give it a trial.

We take pleasure in recommending the use of Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer as safe and reliable for restoring gray hair to its natural color.

If people, troubled with colds, will take Ayer's Cherry Pectoral before going to church, they will avoid coughing. The Pectoral soothes and heals the irritated tissues, and controls all disposition to cough.

RAHWAY, N. J., NOVEMBER 18, 1887.

"Do you know that short mustaches like mine are all the rage now?" asked a Soho youth of his girl.

"No; are they?" she replied.

"Yes; they are the latest things out."

"I might have known that, too, for if they are like yours they haven't been out long."—[Pittsburg Chronicle.

"The great cryptogram," Lord Donnelly's so called "Bacon cipher" on the Shakspeare plays, is soon to be sold by subscription. You pay your two dollars and get a cipher; or, if you keep your two dollars, you 'save your bacon and give Mr. Donnelly something more tangible to sign for.—[Saturday Spectator.

"Isn't that the gentleman who paid our fare and was so polite the other night?" she asked in a whisper.

"Yes."

"And why does he treat us so coolly to-night?"

"Hush! He has his reasons. That's his wife with him!"—[Detroit Free Press.

Omaha girl—Well, if you love each other, and he is able to support a wife, why don't you marry? New York girl—Don't speak of it, I beg of you, I can never marry. Mercy! What's the matter? At every New York wedding now the bride has to wear her grand-mother's pearls, and my grandmother hadn't any.—Omaha World.

"Would you take a poor man's last cent for a glass of gin?" asked the tramp, in a reproachful voice.

"Certainly," replied the bartender, briskly, "that's what I'm here for."

"Well," said the tramp, as he returned the glass to the counter and produced his last cent, "there you are," and then he walked sorrowfully but hastily away.—[Ex.

Wife—What absurd nonsense, that to raise an umbrella in the house is an omen of ill luck!

Husband—Not at all. Didn't Mrs. Hobson, to whom you lent your umbrella a couple of weeks ago, open it in the hallway?

Wife—I believe she did.

Husband—Well, have you seen the umbrella since?—[N. Y. Sun.

Out Enough.—Collector (to servant-girl)—Is Mr. Jones in?

Servant-girl—No; he's out.

C.—That's a fib. I saw him enter here a minute ago.

S. G.—I tell ye he's out!

C.—I say he's not out; he's in.

S. G.—Well, he's out of money, and that's out enough for you, anyway. And it was.—[Boston Courier.

Robinson—What was the account of your doctor's bill, Dumley?

Dumley—I paid him two hundred dollars.

Robinson—Two hundred dollars! That's too much.

Dumley—He saved my life, you know.

Robinson—Yes, I know he saved your life. But two hundred dollars, Dumley! That's too much.—[N. Y. Sun.

"That Mrs. Brown is the most obstinate woman I ever saw," said Mrs. Jones to Jones. "Our sewing society decided to give the pastor a present. They left it to Mrs. Brown and me to select what it should be. I thought a easy chair would be nice. She thought a album with all our pictures would be nicer. I argued with her for an hour, but she wouldn't be convinced." "And so you had to give in," said Jones. "Not a bit of it. We compromised on a dressing-gown, to be made by the society."—[New York Sun.

"I see that beastly snob Jilkins has turned up again. Where the duece has he been?"

"In Australia, I believe."

"And why didn't he stay there? I'm sure we wouldn't have missed him."

"His father or his uncle or some other incumbrance died, you know, and left him a tidy pile. He has come back to settle the estate up."

"Hum! ha! ha! Jilkins, old fellow, who are you? Come back with us for good, I hope? Gad, but you're looking like a fresh blown rose, you are, dear boy, upon my soul."—[Town Topics.

The Craze Assumes a New Form.—"Well, I shall call and see you to-morrow, Jessie.'

"Thanks. I shall be delighted to have you come, Ella."

"And I shall bring Fido with me."

"Oh! please do not."

"No? Why not?"

"Rover is not receiving at present. He is in mourning for a brother who was run-over by a South Boston car. Poor little fellow! It wrings my heart to have him going around with a crape bow around his neck. But the rules of polite society must be observed, my dear."—[Boston Courier.

Hon. C. Edwards Lester,

Late U. S. Consul to Italy, author of "The Glory and Shame of England," "America's Advancement," etc., etc., etc., writes as follows:—

New York, August 1, 1886. 122 E. 27th st.

Dr. J. C. AYER & Co., Lowell, Mass.,

Gentlemen:—A sense of gratitude and the desire to render a service to the public impel me to make the following statements:

My college career, at New Haven, was interrupted by a severe cold which so enfeebled me that, for ten years, I had a hard struggle for life. Hemorrhage from the bronchial passages was the result of almost every fresh exposure. For years I was under treatment of the ablest practitioners without avail. At last I learned of which I used (moderately and in small doses) at the first recurrence of a cold or any chest difficulty, and from which I invariably found relief. This was over 25 years ago. With all sorts of exposure, in all sorts of climates, I have never, to this day, had any cold nor any affection of the throat or lungs which did not yield to AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL within 24 hours.

Of course I have never allowed myself to be without this remedy in all my voyages and travels. Under my own observation, it has given relief to vast numbers of persons; while in acute cases of pulmonary inflammation, such as croup and diphtheria in children life has been preserved through its effects. I recommend its use in light but frequent doses. Properly administered, in accordance with your directions, it is in any house. I speak earnestly because I feel earnestly. I have known many cases of apparently confirmed bronchitis and cough, with loss of voice, particularly among clergymen and other public speakers, perfectly cured by this medicine. Faithfully yours,

C. EDWARDS LESTER.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine.

Coughs, Sore Throat, Influenza, Whooping Cough, Croup, Bronchitis, Asthma, and every affection of the Throat, Lungs and Chest are speedily and permanently cured by the use of which does not dry up a cough and leave the cause behind, but loosens it, cleanses the lungs, and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint. CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED by a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials. The genuine is signed "I. Butts" on the wrapper. SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, Proprs., Boston, Mass. Sold by dealers generally.

READ WHAT

WATSON & CO.

HAVE TO SAY ABOUT CLOTHING!

Since our REMOVAL to our NEW BUILDING we have been busy preparing an entire NEW STOCK of THE BEST SHAPED and FINEST FINISHED GARMENTS ever shown to our customers; and to day we have an immense stock, ALL NEW, STYLISH, HANDSOME, and VERY LOW in price. Never was such a stock of ELEGANT GARMENTS shown in the city, each a perfect copy of the most expensive custom made work; and never before were such low prices named for garments of equal style and durability. It requires no expert to judge of the merits of our stock; for even the most inexperienced at a glance will see their IMPROVED DRESS APPEARANCE when they try them on. Think of the Finest Cassimere Pants, cut by special patterns, marked in plain figures, at $5, 5.50 and $6 a Pair. The new Cheviots and Shaded Striped Pants, now so popular in custom trade, selling for $3, 3.50 and $4, or our broken lots of Fine Pants Marked Down daily to close out quick at $2, 2.50 and $3 a Pair. We are quoting prices that can only be made under Low Expenses. We may not be clearing large profits; but we are selling goods, and lots of them, pleasing our old customers and making new ones; simply by giving them Better Goods than they ever saw, All Ready to Put On, and saving them all useless expenses like the cost of shows in windows, circus wagons, signs on fences, gifts, commissions or discounts to favored customers or their friends. You can surely save from 20 to 25 per cent. on your FALL SUITS by coming direct to us. We are finishing daily full lines in all the New Cuts, complete for $10 and $12. The popular Gold Thread Cheviots that merchant tailors are using, we get up very handsome, and sell at $13 and $15 for complete suits, and in Dress Suits we have a complete department, stocked with the very latest garments, where you can select a suit for $15, 18 and $20, for which a merchant tailor would surely charge you twice as much and rarely give you such elegant garments. Our New Overcoat Salesroom, on second floor, is now open; and here you can find Montaignac Beavers, satin-lined, for $25; Elysians, in all the new shades, at $22; Kerseys, in solid and mixed colors, at $18 and $20; Diagonal Velours, (new this season) at $15 and $16, and All-Wool Chesterfield Overcoats, lined with cassimere, in all the long cuts, at $10 and $12; besides a Hundred Stylish and durable designs, in all shades, at $7, 8 and $9. Remember, these garments are cut single by special patterns drafted from actual measurement taken in our custom department, kept on convenient racks, and handed to you fresh from the hands of our tailors, free from all creases, wrinkles, or any of the usually objectionable ready-made look. The materials from which Fine Clothing is made were never as low as now, and as labor is only a trifle higher you should buy your clothing from 20 to 30 per cent. below the rates of former years; and this you can do if you save all Intermediate Profits and Useless Expenses, and come direct to the makers for it. Before ordering your WINTER CLOTHING you should try on our New Garments. They are Custom Made in every detail. No tailor uses Finer or Newer Fabrics, our Trimmings are the same, and the Best Custom Tailors Work for us. Then, how can the difference in the garments be told when worn from the most expensive work? Besides you can see just how the goods Look When Made Up and have no trouble in waiting. This is where we are pushing our "fine city trade," a Really Handsome, Correct Cut Garment, Finished, with all Custom Extras, ALL READY TO PUT ON. It is a fact well known to the public, and not disputed in the trade, that our garments are extensively copied, but Never Reproduced as we set Them Out. SEE THEM and none of the ordinary styles will look right to you.
