I do wear it pretty well—in my hand." Such was the good feeling of the Duke of Arcos toward Massniello—such was the sincerity of his esteem and affection for him— "Come, come, my dear friend; forget your stoicism for a moment, and let us talk sensibly You love Isabella? "Well, my dear friend, the times of revol are passed. You are the Head of the People the equal of the viceroy, and the betrothe of Isabella. Try to fill worthily the high position that you have achieved. I am giving you a piece of friendly advice. Good-by for a time. I see Donna Marie de Badajoz whose saucy little foot is impatiently counting the measures of the bolero. I must go and offer her my arm, and lead her to take her place in the dance." Fernandez disappeared in the crowd that blocked up the room. After having long waited in vain for Masaniello, after having sought him with her glance in every direction, Isabella had, at length, not been able to refuse the invitations of the young nobles who pressed around her. In obedience to her father's orders, she selected as her partner the Duke of Spinola. Her betrothed perceived her bending her voluptuous figure and turning aloft her charming arms in the midst of the ground that were moving in cadence to the jerking measure of the bolero. His heart was wrung with jealousy. A cry of rage and impetu ous passion burst from his breast, and h hesitated whether he should rush into the midst of this diabolical vision, stab Spinola seize Isabella, and carry her off from the dance. Who could place any obstacle in his way? Was she not his betrothed—his property-whom he had gained by talking o love to her in the bay, and in fighting like a

The Duke of Arcos had just taken his daughter's hand in order to make the tour of the room with her for the last time. Masaniello bade them adieu and hastened o shut himself up in his own apartment. Then, indeed, full of joy, and the more accessible to sweet illusions because during the evening he had felt sad and unhappy, he drew from beneath his cloak Isabella's bouquet. He kissed it a thousand times, calling o mind as he did so that it had touched her breast, that it had met her lips, that she had inhaled its delicious perfume. He then retired to rest, thinking with ecstasy that he would still behold the image of his beloved

At the very first gleam of day Masaniello started from his couch. For a few minutes he remained tottering in the middle of the nom, with his arms extended, his fingers convulsively clasped, his mouth half open and his eyes haggard, endeavoring to call to mind some of the events of the preceding Suddenly he exclaimed, in a transport of MADNESS. Masaniello kicked away with his foot th rags he had worn the day before. "Farewell to the cabin wetted by the sea waves!" he exclaimed: "farewell to the hat with its torn brim! Dress yourself, fisherman of Naples, and hasten to show yourself to Isabella in the sumptuous habits given you by the people." Speaking thus, he drew convulsively from out of the basket the costume which it contained. Hardly, however, had he put it on, creep over him. He sunk upon a chair, and leaning his whirling head upon his hand burst out on his forehead.

wiped away with his handkerchief of fine Flemish cloth the drops of perspiration which "Oh! how I suffer," he murmured. "My strength is leaving me, and life seems flying from me. What is this illness which is consuming me? Dear Isabella! is it possible that, when the day of our union draws near, there will be naught here save a corpse? Masaniello now perceived the flowers he had received the preceding night, and tried to carry them to his lips. Hardly, however, had he touched then than he started up with his hair on end, his eyes inflamed; and, pacing rapidly up and down his room, he exclaimed: "Fernandez came to Naples to marry her but it is I—I alone, the fisherman of the Mergellina, whom-she loves! Fernandez has leagued himself with Spinols to tear her from mel Do they not remember Caraffa's death! Oh! I will challenge these haughty nobles who, from their earliest infancy, have learned the art of making up for want of courage by the use of stratagem, and who kill their adversary with such grace. By Saint Januarius, I will teach them a mode of fighting they do not know-a mode of fighting always practiced by a man whose arm is strong and whose heart is inaccessible to fear. Spinols, Fernandez, defend your-selves!" cried the fisherman, drawing his sword and making sparks of fire fly from it at every one of his movements. But his strength was soon unequal to his courage, and he fell icompletely exhausted Such were the alternate fits of furious

The state carriage of the Duke of Arcos, a magnificent and heavy vehicle, inclosed on all sides with plates of Venetian glass fixed in frames of carved wood ornamented with gold, drove out toward evening from the stables of the Vicaria. The fresh sea breeza had arisen, and the population began to scatter themselves through the various streets, delighted at quitting their houses, where the sun had, so to speak, kept them besieged during the day. Masaniello, dressed in a suit of clothes made in the French fashion and of the most incomparable richness and elegance, occupied the seat of honor at the back of the carriage. On his left was the viceroy, and opposite him Fernandez. The Count of Spinola was sented opposite the Duke of Arcos. Officers galloped at the doors of the magnificent vehicle, while a number of reiters closed the line of march. The palmy days of Spanish tyramy had returned. In vain, during his progress through the city, did Masaniello seek among the crowd for some of the popularity he had enjoyed only the day before; in vain did he attempt to gain a few cheers by bowing to the few lazaroni that were grouped along his pas-sage. The people remained dumb. They contemplated with uneasy curiosity the fisherman of the Mergellina metamorphosed into a great nobleman; they no longer recognized in him their chief, but merely saw in him an ambitious man to whom his brethren owed nothing, since he had received from the Spaniards the price for which he had sold himself. A silent feeling of rage was boiling in Masaniello's soul when he reached the market place. He could now hear the cries of menace which rose above the murmurs of the crowd. The most violent of the lazaroni ex-"Down with the traitors! Down with Masaniello l' At this moment he had one of those fits of irrestrainable and senseless fury produced in him by the fatal disorder to which his strong system was now a prey. he outgrowth, or rest.d. of this great and woman's peculiar ailments.
As a powerful, invigorating tonic, it imparts strength to the whole system, and to the womb and its appendages in particular. For overworked, "worn-out," run-down," debilitated teachers, milliners, dressmakers, seamstresses, "shop-girls," housekeepers, nursing mothers, and feeble women generally, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription s the greatest earthly boon, being unequaled as an appetizing cordial and restorative tonic.
As a soothing and strengthening mervine, "Favorite Prescription" is unequaled and is invaluable in allaying and subduing nervous excitability, fritability, ex-haustion, prostration, hysteria, spasses and other distressing, nervous symptoms commonly attendant upon functional and organic disease of the womb. It induces refreshing sleep and relieves mental anxiety and despondency. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a legitimate medicine, carefully compounded by an experienced and skillful physician, and adapted to woman's delicate organization. It is purely vegetable in its composition and perfectly harmless in its effects in any condition of the system. For composition and perfectly harmless in its effects in any condition of the system. For morning slekness, or nausea, from whatever cause arising, weak stomach, indigestion, dyspepsia and kindred symptoms, its use, in small doses, will prove very beneficial.

"Favorite Prescription" is a positive cure for the most complicated and obstinate cases of leucorrhea, excessive flowing painful menstruation, unnatural suppressions, prolapsus, or falling of the womb, weak back, "female weakness," anteversion, retroversion, bearing-down sensations, chronic congestion, inflammation and ulceration of the womb, inflammation, pain and tenderness in ovaries, accompanied with "internal heat."

As a regulator and promoter of functional action, at that critical period of change from girlhood to womanhood, "Favorite Prescription" is a perfectly safe remedial agent, and can produce only good results. It is equally efficacious and valuable in its effects when taken for those disorders and derangements incident to that later and most critical period, known as "The Change of Life."

"Favorite Prescription," when taken in connection with the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and small laxalite doses of Dr. Pierce's Purgative Pellets (Little Liver Pilla), cures Liver, Kidney and Bladder diseases. Their combined use also removes blood taints, and abolishes cancerous and scrofulous humors from the system.

"Favorite Prescription" is the only medicine for women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee, from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. This guarantee has been printed on the bottle-wrapper, and faithfully carried out for many yeard. Large bottles (100 doses) $1.00, or six bottles for $5.00.
