their reach. Farther and farther the train left the city behind: more and more desolate the country appeared. It was late October; all crops had been harvested, and many trees had shed all their leaves; the only green was that of grass and evergreens, the latter looking almost funercal under the overcast sky. The train entered a region of pine barrens, through openings in which some sand dunes could occasionally be seen. Finally they too disappeared, and their place was taken by a sallow country woman in a home made brown dress and a gray bonnet trimmed with green ribbons. He tried o console himself with the thought that the car would soon be too dark for colors to be annoying and that Haynton was but an hour took a seat. The rustic in front of him turned

DAVID SLAYS GOLIATII LESSON IX, THIRD QUARTER. IN

day of the supper to the minister. Phil's TERNATIONAL SERIES, SEPT. Commit Verses 45, 46 - Golden Texts Rom, viil. 31—Commentary by the Rdv.

D. M. Stearns. [Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by per-After the spirit of the Lord came mightily upon David, as we learned in last week's lesson the spirit of the Lord depurted from Saul, and an evil spirit from the Lore troubled him (chap, xvi, 14); and that evil spirit is mentioned five times in the closing verses of the chapter, as well as in chapter xviii, 10; xix 9. Saul, having refused to obey God and follow Him, is simply left by God to the guidance of the one whom he proferred. In II Thess. ii, 8-12, it is written that when people refuse to receive the truth God will send them strong delusion; or, in other words, leave them to the delusions and lies which they have preferred to the truth. The only safety is to hear His voice. 82. "And David said to Saul. Let no man heart fail because of him." The armies of Israel and of the Philistines were in battle array upon two mountains facing each other and between them lay a valley; for forty days, morning and evening. Goliath the giant, the champion of the Philistines, stoo and cried for some man of Israel to come and fight with him, saying. If he kill me we will be your servants, and if I kill him you will be our servants. Thus he defied or reproached the armies of Israel, and inasmuch as he was a man over nine feet high, his coat of mai weighing over 150 pounds, and the head of Israel was willing to try battle with him. The floor is covered with a carpet of a this Oriental rugs of many dull, soft colors his spear about twenty pounds, no man i 33. "And Saul said to David, Thou art no able." Saul, like an his soldiers, saw only with his natural eyes, and looking upor David's youth and apparent inexperience in matters of war, said. Thou art but a youth while this Philistine is a man of war from hi youth, and therefore thou art not able to go against him to fight with him. In Saul eyes it was simply a question of man against man, and so it seemed to be in the eyes of all Israel and the God of Israel, the Lord God of Hosts, was not thought of, much less relied upon. How could a people whose history from their very beginning was so full of tho mighty power of God on their behalf eve forget Him or fail to trust in Him! 34-36. "He hath defied the armies of the Living God." The Living God was to David a far greater reality than this mass of defian and blaspheming flesh and blood. 37. "The Lord that delivered me, * * will deliver me." This sounds like the great apostle to the Gentiles when he said "I was delivered out of the month of the lion; and the Lord shall deliver me from every evi work, and will preserve me unto His heavenly kingdom." H Tim. iv. 17, 18. It was the same spirit in each, and probably Paul learned the secret from David What simple confidence in God, what grand assurance; and vet so many Christians cannot get beyond I hope it is well with me," "I trust I am child of God." Why not come out clearly and say "I believe God," "I know whom have believed and am persuaded that He is able to keep that which I have committed 38, 89, "And David said-I cannot go with these; for I have not proved them." When Saul saw the grand confidence of David in the Living God, he said "Go, and the Lord he with theer? then he armed David with his armor and David assayed to go, but he was glad to put it off, for he had not been accustomed to rely upon such belos. He knew God, but he did not know the use of man devices for safety and self defense. Ho built no armor but the presence of God when he slew the lion and the bear, and he would go now with the same. 41-44. "When the Philistine looked about and saw David he disdained him." So the flesh always despises the Spirit, just as Ishmael mocked Isaac, but the flesh shall be conquered and the Spirit will prevail. 45. Thou comest with sword spear and shield: but I come in the name of the Loro of Hosts, the God of the armies of Israel whom thou hast defled. Goliath represent ed simply himself and his own power and skill: but David thought nothing of himself You may object to he represented the Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel, and the question was not what could David do but what could He do in whose name David went forth 46 "That n" the earth may know that you need make no there is a God in Israel Bavid says who nistakes if you God will do and that through him as the instudy carefully the strument, but the object will be to honor many examples of God and not David. Many thou-Philistines are watching the stripling and the giant as they go forth to meet each other in deadly conflict and to decide the fate of these nations. If the armies heard the conversation of the two it must have been that the faith of some in Israel was strengthened by the grand words of David and his uncerthiv courage in going forth unarmed to meet the man who for forty days had made all their hearts to tremble: while on the part of the tractive and lovely in appearance that when Phillistines the jeering of their champion must have been re-erboed by thousands. of its beauty as of its utility.
