THE:STRANGE:STORY OF COLLANGE:STORY OF COLLANGE: By H. Rider Handard

SYNOPSIS OF THE STORY.

This story is supposed to be founded upon a manuscript found in the papers of Allan Quatermain, which were given to the author as literary executor. In it Quatermain tells the story of his executor. In it Quatermain tells the story of his marriage.

Chapter I.—Describes Allan's first meeting, when a child, with Stella Carson, at a Christmas gathering. Stella's dress caught fire and Allan extinguished the flames. Stella's mother was Spanish, and she cloped with a cousin, leaving Stella with her father, Equire Carson. He determined to leave England on account of the disgrace, and at about the same time Allan's mother died and Allan's father took him to South Africa, where Mr. Quatermain became a missionary CHAPTER II.-Allan sold the effects and decided to go on a journey of trade and adventure. Among his men was a Kaffir named Indaba-zimbi, a witch doctor. Between him and another witch doctor there had two years before been a lightning con-test, which resulted in the death of his contestant.

CHAPTER III.—Details the start of the expedi-ion. Quatermain describes his first elephant

CHAPTER IV.—Quatermain discovered a large body of Zulus, and was surprised by two of their scouts. Acting upon the impulse of the moment, he shot both of them and retreated. The Zulus had been following a party of Dutch Boers, con-sisting of computers on sightless man, their women sisting of seventeen or eighteen men, their women and children, and a large number of cattle, with which they were removing to the north. For daba-zimbi were captured by the Zulv bazimbi had betrayed him into the hauds of the Zulus, who at first offered him no harm. The camp of the Boers was attacked and destroyed. One little child only was saved alive and Quatermain preserved her by fighting a duel with and hat Quatermain was a spirit. The Zulus dete mined to kill him, but were prevented by Indaba, who pretended himself to kill Quatermain and then bring him to life again. This frightened th Zulus, and Indaba and Quatermain, with th CHAPTER VI.-Describes the manner of escape of Quatermain with the witch doctor and Tota, the child. Indaba said "Go north," prophesying that friends would be found there. Quatermain that friends would be found there. Quatermain obeyed, though against his judgment. They crossed a broad desert, where there was no water, and at its end they became unconscious. When they recovered, they were being cared for by Stella Carson, whose life Quatermain save when a child, and who was now a beautiful youn woman. Since early childhood she had lived in the wilds of Africa with her father, never having

"No, father, dear, I have not lost my elf, but I have found somebody else." At that moment I stepped forward & that the light fell on me. The old gentleman on the couch rose with some difficulty and bowed with much courtesy. He was a fine-looking old man, with deep-set dark eyes, a pale face, that bore many traces of physical and mental some things that you don't. I can read "Be welcome, sir," he said. There has been no Englishman here for ten years, and he, I grieve to say, was an outcast flying from justice," and he bowed again and stretched out his hand. I looked at him, and then of a sudden his name flashed back into my mind. I

"I did not speak it, father. I have "Sir." I broke in, "if you will allow me, I will show you how I came to know your name. | Do you remember many years ago coming into the study of a clergyman in Oxfordshire and telling him that you were going to leave England for ever?" He bowed his head. "And do you remember a little boy who sat upon the hearthrug writing with a pencil?

"I do," he said. "Sir, I was that boy, and my name is Allan Quatermain. Those children who lay sick are all dead, their mother i dead, and my father, your old friend this is not all the story. After many adventures I, one Kaffir, and a little girl lay senseless and dying in the bad lands where we had wandered for days with out water, and there we should have perished, but your daughter Miss"----"Call her Stella," he broke in, hastily. "I cannot bear to hear that name. have forsworn it."

"Miss Stella found us by chance and saved our lives." "By chance, did you say, Allan Quater main?" he answered. "There is little chance in this; such chances spring from another will than ours. Welcome, Allan, son of my old friend. Here we live as it were in a hermitage, with Nature for our only friend, but such as we have is it. But you must be starving, talk no more. Stella, it is time for food. Tomorrow we will talk." To tell the truth I can recall very little more of the events of that evening. A kind of dizzy weariness overmastered me. I remember sitting at a table next to Stella, and eating heartily, and then I remember nothing more.

I awoke to find myself lying on a comfortable bed in a hut built and fashioned on the same model as the center one. While I was wondering what time it was, a native came bringing some clean clothes on his arm, and, luxury of luxuries, produced a bath, hollowed from wood. I rose feeling a very different man; my strength had come back again to me. I dressed and, following a covered passage, found myself in the center hut. Here the table was set for break-

"I have done all this, Allan Quatermain," he said. "When renouncing civilization first, I wandered here by chance; seeking a home in the remotest places in the world, I found this lonely spot a wilderness. Nothing was to be seen except the site, the domes of the marble huts and the waterfalls. I took possession of the huts. I cleared the patch of garden land and planted the orange grove. I had only six natives then, but by degrees others joined me; now my tribe is a thousand strong. Here we live in profound peace and plenty. I have all I need, and I ask no more. Consequently the tribemen, who, by the way, called themselves the "Children of With him. At supper we met again, with him. I stood for a moment reflecting. I was affaid of this strange creature who shared its combine the complete.

The night was warm and lovely, and without speaking we walked up the gar-

The moon was not yet visible, but already the dark clouds that floated through the sky above us—for there had been rain—showed a glow of silver, telling us that she shone brightly behind the peak. Stella began to talk in her low, gentle voice, telling me of her life in the wilderness, how she had grown to love it, how her mind had gone on from idea to idea, and how she pictured the great trushing world that she had never seen as it was reflected to her from the book which she had read. It was a curious out of proportion in it; it was more like a dream than a reality—a mirage than the actual face of things. The idea of great dities, and especially of London, had a kind of fascination for her; she could scarcely realize the rush, the roar and hurry, the hard crowds of men and women, strangers each to each, feverishly seeking for wealth and pleasure beneath a murky sky, and treading one another down in the fury of competition,

"What is it all for?" she asked, earnestly. "What do they seek? Having so few years to live, why do they waste them thus?"

I told her that in the majority of in stances it was actual hard necessity that drove them on, but she could scarcely realize it. Living as she had done, in the midst of the teeming plenty of the fruitful earth, she did not seem to understand that there are millions who from day to flay know not how to stay their "I should be bewildered and frightened to death. It is not natural tollive like that. It was she who broke that holy silence, speaking in a changed voice, in soft deep notes that thrilled me like the lowest chords of a smitten harp.

"Ah, now I understand," she said. "now I know why we are lonely, and how we can lose our loneliness. Now I know what it is that stirs us in the beauty of the sky, in the sound of water and in the scent of flowers. It is love that speaks in everything, but till we hear his voice we understand nothing. But when we hear then the riddle is answered and the gates of our heart are opened, and. But as I rose my eyes fell upon something that gleamed white among the foliage of the orange bush at my side I said nothing, but looked. The breeze stirred the orange leaves, the moonlight struck for a moment full upon the white object. It was the face of Hendrika, the babyar woman as Indaba-zimbi had called her,

Why do we always talk of putting on the Consolation and Glory of Israel, a Light to lighten the Gentiles. a coat and vest? Who puts on a coat before a vest? We also say putting on shoes and stockings? Who puts on the shoes before the stockings? We also put up signs telling people to wipe their feet, when we mean their boots and shoes. And a father tells his boy he will warm his jacket, when he means to warm his pantaloons. We are a little eccentric in our phrases, aren't we at times.—[Boston Courier.]

Lord is my strength and song, and He is become my salvation" (Gen. klix, 18; Isa. xii, 2; Ex. xv, 2; Ps. cxviii, 14). But Simeon is privileged to say that he had seen the snivation of Jehovah, for whatever salvation has been, is, or ever will be manifest on this earth, is always through Jehovah, God of Israel, God manifest in the desh, Jesus of Nazareth. As the His body it is written, "A body hast Thou prepared me;" and as to His words and works hear these he shadow of a great of baboons. Perhaps his extremity—at any what I should spenk;" "The Father that dwelleth in me, He doeth the works" (Heb. x, will also the works of the commandment, what I should spenk;" "The Father that dwelleth in me, He doeth the works" (Heb. x, will also the commandment, what I should spenk;" "The Father that dwelleth in me, He doeth the works" (Heb. x, will also the commandment, what I should spenk;" "The Father who sent me, he gave the commandment, what I should spenk;" "The Father who sent me, he gave the commandment, what I should spenk;" "The Father who sent me, he gave the commandment, what I should spenk;" "The Father who sent me, he gave the commandment, what I should spenk;" "The Father who sent me, he gave the commandment, what I should spenk;" "The Father that dwelleth in me, He doeth the works" (Heb. x, with the commandment, what I should spenk;" "The Father that dwelleth in me, He doeth the works" (Heb. x, with the commandment, what I should spenk;" "The Father that dwelleth in me, He doeth the works" (Heb. x, with the commandment, what I should spenk;" "The Father that dwelleth in me, He doeth the works" (Heb. x, with the commandment, what I should spenk;" "The Father that dwelleth in me, He doeth the works" (Heb. x, with the commandment, which is the commandment, which is the commandment which is the commandme 5; John xii, 49; xiv, 10). Then as to the great salvation which He has wrought out for Israel and for all the people it is written, "I the people there was none with me" (Isa. Ixii, 3). The salvation of Jehovah is a fully prepared salvation presented to us for our accentance.
33. "A light for revelation to the Gentiles and the glory of Thy people Israel" (R. V.). The Spirit through Simeon speaks again of that which He had before spoken through the prophets; that the Messiah should not only be the glory of Israel but a light to lighten the nations (Isa. xlii, 6; xlix, 6); and in Isa.

lx, 1-3, we have the order of events, where we are told that darkness shall cover the earth and gross darkness the people, but, the Lord shall arise upon Israel and His glory shall be seen upon them, and the Gentiles shall come to their light and kings to the In the other matters I brightness of their rising. The Glory of the Lord refers to the visible manifestation of His presence, as when the manifestation of His presence, as when the manifestation of His presence, as when the Glory of the Lord filled the tabernacle and temple (Ez. xl, 34, 35; I Kl. viii, 11). Jesus Himself repeatedly referred to His future coming in power and glory (Matt. xvi, 27; xix, 28; xxiv, 80; xxv, 31); and in Ps. cli, 10 [water.] I reached the glade I it is written that, "When the Lord shall build up Zion He shall appear in His Glory." of a tree by the edge of Glory of the Lord, even as He hath sworn (Num. xiv. 21).
