THE DANVERS JEWELS
AN ANONYMOUS NOVEL.
Which is Told a Thrilling Story of Baffled Crims.

"No, Hush! Don't talk anything, but just come and be turned and led the way to Sir George Danvers' room."

"Where is Charles?" he said, speaking in a hoarse whisper.

"Dear me! Sir George, I said, sympathetically, 'how you have lost your voice!'"

"He looked at me for a moment, and then turned to Ralph again."

"Here! said a quiet voice. And Charles came in and shut the door."

"I don't know," I said, feeling I had not yet been of much assistance as I could have wished.

"I am sorry, Middleton," continued Charles, "I know he is your friend, but I can't help that. Carr took the jewels."

"Send her away," came a whisper from the bed.

"The fact is," whispered Sir George, motioning to Ralph, "the jewels are gone."

"I have no grounds for suspecting Carr," he said, "but this is a very serious thing, Charles, that you are alluding to."

"What are your grounds for suspecting Carr?" he asked, "Remember this is a very serious thing, Charles, that you are alluding to."

"I have no grounds for suspecting Carr," he said, "but this is a very serious thing, Charles, that you are alluding to."
