A BREACH OF FAITH

By HJALMAR HJORTH BOYESEN.

[Copyright. All rights reserved.]

Gunnar's heart thumped in his throat. He dreaded what was to come, and yet he could not tell whether it was a wild joy or a desperate anxiety which chased the blood through his veins and made his pulse hammer in his temples.

"The fact is, Finn, "I have a wife and a son," Mr. Norman continued. "I know they are both living, and I want you to go to them. Tell them I am alive, and love them as much as ever. Tell them I am a rich man, and that I want them to come and spend the rest of their days with me."

He stared fixedly into the fire while speaking, but Gunnar saw his lip tremble and a sudden moisture clouded his eyes and made him rise abruptly and pace the floor.

"How long is it since you left your wife and son?" asked Gunnar with a mighty effort not to betray his emotion.

"Eighteen years, my boy," answered Norman huskily. "Eighteen years."

He continued to walk up and down on the floor, with his head bent.

"You think I am much to blame; and you are right. I wish I could explain it to you; but I can't. I was miserable in the Norse settlement, utterly, inconceivably miserable; because there was somebody else which no one understood, and myself least of all. I told in my innocence the Norwegian parson of it, and he said it was the devil tempting me. I thought for a while he was right. My wife agreed with the parson; I was of no use to her and gave her many a bitter hour. I had no choice but to break away. She herself consented to it. Hard and toilsome, but not unhappy years followed. I found my work and I bless God for that. I have not known a really unhappy hour since, though I have suffered from remorse and a longing for those who are dear to me."

"Why then, did you not go to them?" asked Gunnar, in a voice which no effort could steady.

"Young man, it may seem foolish to you if I say that I never had the time," answered Norman, flinging himself again into the arm chair, "but so it is that it is the fact. My work has possessed me like a first love which kept me awake at night. I postponed and again postponed doing my duty, because I dreaded to see the Norwegian parsons in my house until I should feel strong enough to fight them on their own ground. I assumed the name Norman simply to escape the same influence in my life. I wanted to be wholly an American and take the place to which my ability entitled me in the American community. I could never have done that if I had assumed again the spiritual yoke which it cost me such a dire struggle to throw off."

"Then it is as a burden you take back your child?" asked Gunnar, with a resentful glance.

"Oh, no, I love them; I have longed after them. I want them!" cried his father, starting up again and resuming his restless walk.

"But I know I can never make it plain to you how you can love a person and yet deplore certain phases of her character. Once my wife came near subjugating me, and from the best of motives crushing out that which was noblest and most precious in me. As long as I feared that I feared her. Now I fear it no longer and I can afford to let her know that I love her."

They talked on for about an hour, and Gunnar without undisguising himself assumed the proposed mission. He began dimly to comprehend that his father, driven and impelled by his genius, which was an overmastering force in his life, could not be judged by the same standard as lesser men. But just as he had risen to receive Mr. Norman's thanks something touched him with a cold horror and sent a shudder down his back. His revenge! His wretched revenge! He was about to dishonor his father just as he was showing himself most honorable.

But perhaps there was yet time. It was 10 o'clock, and the paper scarcely went to press until 1 or 2 in the morning. With his head in a whirl he rushed out of the front door, hired a horse at a neighboring stable and drove to Vicker Park. There he had a stormy interview with Mathilda, in which a dainty little cloven hoof of mercenary interest peeped forth all too plainly from under the embroidered skirts. She had a check for $50 in her pocket which she had received from The Daily Trombone for the story revelations regarding Mr. Norman's wickedness, and she was naturally reluctant to part with it. But in return for Gunnar's promissory note for $150 which he finally released her tight little clutch and gave it up; but like a great many people who are too clever for their own good, Mathilda had really outwitted herself. She had made $100, but she had lost a lover. She had a dim presentiment when her excitement had cooled that Gunnar's love for her had received a mortal wound; and in this presentiment she was right.

The return of the check, the declaration of the falsity of the alleged revelations and the threat of a suit for libel sufficed. A considerable discussion to make The Trombone renounce the promising sensation Gunnar, to make assurance doubly sure, remained to see the manuscript and proof destroyed and the type redistributed. As he caught glimpses of such monstrous head lines, "A Double Life," "A Villain Unmasked," "A Rich Man's Crime," etc., he realized what a narrow escape he had had from committing a cruel and dastardly deed.

A week after this episode Gunnar led a tall and yet stately woman into Norman's library. The manufacturer was standing with his hands in his pockets and his back to the fire. There was a vague anxiety in his face and an occasional twitching of the muscles about the mouth, as if he were trying to master a strong emotion. He started forward with both hands outstretched when the door opened, but paused in the middle of the floor, gazing with a strange uncertainty at the two persons who entered. The handsome matron became conscious of a slight embarrassment and as she noted his expression, and the joyous eagerness which had animated her features gave way to an anxious confusion. He was so different from what she had expected. Eighteen long years lay between them with the slow transformation they had wrought. They had taken her husband from her and substituted another who was a stranger to her and yet not he.

This good looking middle aged gentleman, with his well kept beard and clad in city attire, how could he ever be to her what the shabby, restless, discontented Norse peasant, Hans Matson, had been? And her, as he pressed her fondly to his breast, how could he ever be to him with the free and joyous ring she had expected, she caught a glimpse in his look and manner of the chill and the cadence of his voice rang with clear vibrations through the depth of her soul.

"But the boy, the boy?" were the first words he uttered. "He is not dead?"

"The boy," she replied, with a slow, dubious accent. "No, he isn't dead."

"But why don't you bring him?"

She started with a puzzled look, first at her son, then at her husband.

"I don't understand it at all," she ejaculated in a fever of amazement.

"Gunnar," she continued, turning to the youth. "Why do you not speak to your father?"

It was now Norman's turn to be astonished. He started back with an exclamation of surprise. He rubbed his eyes as if to clear his vision. Then with a lawning joy in his face he grasped the hand which the youth held out to him.

"Finn Varsko!" he cried; "you have robbed me of a son in return for the one you give me."

THE END.

Sheep Shearing by Machinery.

Suckling Brothers, who own a large sheep ranch near Murrurundi, New South Wales, Australia, are for the third season using an odd sheep shearing device driven by compressed air. It resembles a pair of ordinary horse clippers, and can be held in the hands. The owner causes a small piston in the base of the handle of the machine to work backward and forward with lightning like rapidity. This piston sets a bar in motion, and the bar working on a pivot causes the cutting teeth to oscillate very rapidly over the rigid teeth of the comb below. A stationary air pipe runs along the side of the sheep shed, and each machine is connected to it with a flexible rubber tube. The operator seized his sheep, the air is turned on and the fleece peels off as if by magic. There is no more danger of the animal being cut with the instrument than there is of the human head being cut with the barbers' clippers.—St. Louis Republic.

The man who has an idea that his father is an old fogy and don't know much makes a mistake that will some day cause him bitter regret.

(Deferred from last week.)

Proceedings of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union.

[OFFICIAL.]

ELIZABETH, N. J., Oct. 16, 1890.

Pursuant to adjournment the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union county met on Thursday, Oct. 16, 1890, at 2:30 o'clock p. m.

Present—Freeholders Bender, Briant, Doty, Howard, Jones, Kyte, Littell, Pierson, Thompson, Trahon, Vanderbeck, Wright, West, Sullivan—14.

Absent—Director Hubbard and Freeholders Roll, Russell—3.

Clerk of the board Charles E. Reed called the board to order in absence of the director, and William T. West was elected director pro tem.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and on motion approved.

COMMUNICATIONS.

Gentlemen—As guardian of the estate of Edward Duffy, a lunatic now confined in the Morris Plains asylum, I beg leave to report to your honorable body that the balance in my hands will only pay for the present quarter and I would therefore request that I be relieved from my bond now filled with you.

Yours very truly, T. M. KELLY.

Guardian, etc., of Edward Duffy.

On motion of Freeholder Doty received and referred to committee on lunacy and county attorney.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Oct. 16, 1890.

Gentlemen—I hereby desire to notify you that I am of the opinion and I do hereby notify in writing (as I am called on to do by the terms of the contract and specifications) that the work on Springfield avenue, New Providence township, is unnecessarily delayed and that the contractor is wilfully violating the conditions of the contract and executing the same in bad faith, and I would respectfully suggest that the board notify the contractor to discontinue all work on said contract at once.

Very respectfully, F. A. DENHAM, County Engineer.

On motion of Freeholder Jones received and placed on file.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Gentlemen—Your committee on Bank bridge would respectfully report and recommend that the present superstructure be replaced by a new iron beam deck bridge not to cost over ten hundred and fifty dollars.

Wm. T. West, Wm. J. Thompson, James Bender, Wm. C. Pierson, Wm. H. Briant, Committee.

On roll call adopted unanimously.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Oct. 16, 1890.

Gentlemen—The committee appointed to investigate certain charges affecting the integrity of the county engineer and the conduct of the administration of his office would respectfully report that a careful examination into the details and management of the county engineer's office fails to confirm or substantiate in a single particular any of the charges made or published in the public press. That in some cases the engineer has paid less and in others more for the services of certain of his assistants than he has received from the county is admitted, but is in strict conformity with the terms and conditions of his appointment, and any apparent advantage or profit to him from his source is more than offset by the very large expenses, such as railroad transportation, carriage hire, purchase of materials, stationery etc., incurred and made necessary by the employment of twenty or more men in various capacities on roads remote from each other and from the railroad by several miles, and for which the county neither allows nor has ever paid him a farthing.

A statement of his receipts and disbursements checked off by vouchers and receipts examined by your committee and herewith submitted and made a part of this report shows that his net income for services on account of county roads from May 1889 to September (1890) a period of sixteen months, amounts to $2,660.24, or about $5 per day for such time and which (night work in office as he has actually been employed on the work. As ten dollars per day is the minimum compensation charged for similar services, it will readily appear that the county's interest is fully protected by the agreements are subject to the approval of the board and every inspector is under the direct and personal supervision of a non-partisan commute responsible for and in charge of each road under contract.

The charge that the engineer has been paid for bridge work while under pay for county roads is also false and based on no other refutation than the simple statement that he is not a salaried officer of the county, and is paid at the rate of $8 per day for such time only as he is actually employed on the county roads. This does not preclude his doing outside work for the county or any one else. The only difference to the county is that how pays $8 per day for bridge engineering that heretofore has cost from $20 to $30.

Your committee in order to make this investigation complete and satisfactory both to the public and the accused have justified themselves in going outside the limit of their appointment and have extended the scope of their inquiry so as to include all charges made against the engineer or the county board in connection with the prosecution of the county road improvements.

In accordance with this determination and to this end your committee sent notices to Mr. F. E. Pope and others that they would hold a special meeting in order to hear any charges they wished to prefer against the county engineer or the board of freeholders.

Mr. D. C. Crane appeared, but was unable or unwilling to make any definite charges, although given every opportunity so to do. Mr. Pope did not appear, but sent a letter herewith submitted, referring on hear-say certain charges heretofore published under his name in the Elizabeth Journal, but failed to produce and proof or evidence helpful to your committee.

All the charges had been previously investigated and are not sustained by the facts.

Your committee are fully satisfied that the charges under investigation are not only unjust and unfair, but false and unsubstantiated by the facts.

They believe the county engineer is a faithful, honest and efficient public officer, sincerely striving without fear or favor to prosecute a great public improvement solely in the interests of the county and to secure the practical and reasonable fulfillment of the county road specifications in all their parts.

They believe the roads are being substantially and economically built and will yet prove his full and complete vindication.

Total amount paid county engineer for sixteen months:

Remarkable Rescue.

Mrs. Michael Curtain, Plainfield, Ill., makes the statement that she caught cold, which settled on her lungs; she was treated for a month by her family physician, but grew worse. He told her she was a hopeless victim of consumption and that no medicine could cure her. Her druggist suggested Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption; she bought a bottle and to her delight found benefitted from first dose. She continued its use, and after taking ten bottles found herself sound and well, now does her own housework and is as well as she ever was. Ten cent trial bottles of this Great Discovery at Brown & Smith's drug store, large bottles 50c and $1

JESUS IS CRUCIFIED.

LESSON VIII, FOURTH QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, NOV. 23.

Text of the Lesson, Luke xxiii, 33, 47. Commit Verses 33, 34—Golden Text, Isa. liii, 6—Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.]

33. "And when they were come to the place, which is called Calvary, there they crucified Him, and the malefactors, one on the right hand and the other on the left." Our last lesson left Him in their hands to do their pleasure with Him; and after the scourging and mocking we see the cross laid brutally on that torn and bleeding back, and He goes forth bearing His cross (John xix, 17). While it is not said that He fainted under it, the fact that they turned Simon the Cyrenian about, and compelled him to bear it after Jesus (ver 26), looks as if He may have sunk beneath it, or perhaps stumbled through weakness or loss of blood. Then hear Him as He says to the women who follow, "Weep not for me, but for yourselves and your children" (verse 28). And see the two malefactors both bearing his cross. Thus follow to Calvary or Golgotha, the place of a skull (Matt. xxvii, 33). And now see the three crosses each bearing its living, dying, agonizing burden; on either side an evil doer suffering justly, but in the midst the Holy Jesus suffering the just for the unjust.

34. "Then said Jesus, 'Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do.' And they parted His raiment and cast lots." Can you see Him stripped of his raiment, laid down upon the cross, the nails driven through His quivering flesh, and then hear Him p

NATIONAL DEMOCRAT.

Governor Abbett has issued his proclamation for Thanksgiving, Nov. 27th.

Before the late election the high tariff Republicans were boasting that the McKinley bill had settled the tariff question. But when election day came it appears that the people "settled" the McKinley bill and the party that passed it.

An exchange referring to the recent election says "the Republicans were not in it!" Well, they were found to be very deeply "in it" when the votes were counted. In the soup!

Tom B(usted) Reed who but recently was a colossus that bestrode the earth and all upon it (apparently) has been reduced by the Democratic cyclone, to the proportion of a pigmy. He will hereafter occupy a back seat in Congress and seldom attract the attention of the Democratic Speaker.

We are indebted to Secretary of State Kelsey for a complete official list of Senators and Members of the next Legislature, with their Post Office address. The summary shows 13 Democrats and 8 Republicans in the Senate—including Stuhr, of Hudson among the latter: 40 Democrats and 20 Republicans in the House, making a majority of 25 on joint ballot.

Chancellor McGill on Monday directed the depositors of the defunct Mechanics and Laborers' Bank of Jersey City to accept the compromise offered by the directors of $120,000, while there is actually due to the depositors $165,000. And yet the Chancellor declines to make an order by which the depositors in the Rahway Savings Bank can get a large excess of the amount due them.

It is conceded that the genial Senator Robert Adrain will be the President of the next Senate. Senator Werts could have had it again by saying the word, but with his usual magnanimity he refused to be a candidate and favored Mr. Adrain. It being the last year of the latter's term. Senator Werts will doubtless be given the place in 1892, and the people will continue his line of advancement to the Governorship in the Fall of that year.

It appears there are some inquisitive Republicans who would like to find out all the points in the city treasurer's office—some of their number probably wanting a job to examine the books. Don't fret gentlemen—the treasurer's office is being conducted on business principles and the city's financial matters generally are in good condition to meet all just obligations. If the enemies of the city at home as well as elsewhere would turn in and try to push ahead instead of pull back we could soon overcome all remaining obstacles.

Any of our brethren of the press who need a duplicate electrotype of The Youth's Companion advertisement recently sent out by Nelson Cheesman, of St. Louis, can have the one forwarded to the Democrat on application. That so many papers can afford to take business at such beggarly rates as those offered by the agent named is something which the Democrat fails to understand.—Camden Democrat.

We don't need the electro referred to for the same reason as stated, and we also have a stack of other electros from the same source, never used for like reason—such as "Scott's Emulsion," "Tutt's Pills," etc.

DEATH OF EDITOR GARDNER.

We were much surprised on Monday in taking up a daily paper and seeing the announcement of the death of our old editorial friend Edward Gardner, Esq., for many years editor and publisher of the Bayonne Times, and at time of his death Postmaster of that city. Only a few weeks ago we met him in a restaurant at Elizabeth and took lunch at the table with him, when he was apparently in his usual health and good spirits. He has, however, we understand, been for some time affected with Bright's disease, and went to Saratoga, hoping to receive benefit, but was taken worse and died at that place on Sunday at the ripe age of 75 years, being, we believe, next to the oldest editor in the state. He was a lover of the profession and always took an active interest in all that related to it, being among the first members of the state editorial association. Quiet and unassuming in his disposition yet able and determined in all his undertakings. He was the founder of the Orange Journal, which prospered under his care and became a leading paper of the state. Some years ago he disposed of it and subsequently settled at Bayonne, being also connected for a time with the Brooklyn Eagle. He leaves an interesting family of children all grown up and occupying honorable positions in business and society.

DR. KEMPSHALL SUSTAINED.

Some of the congregation of Dr. Kempshall's church in Elizabeth, having complained that he took a too active part in the recent election, and that he electioneered for Senator Marsh, his elders made an examination and have reported that the charge of making any special solicitation for Mr. Marsh is not true, and they unanimously sustain the Dr. in his course. The Trenton True American, referring to this question, has the following editorial:

Mayor Rankin, of Elizabeth, who was the Republican race-course candidate for Senator, in Union county, is complaining that his pastor, the Rev. Dr. Kempshall, had opposed him in the recent election, has only succeeded in raising the Doctor higher in the public estimation. Dr. Kempshall was one of a delegation of the best citizens of Elizabeth who came to Trenton last winter and urged Governor Abbett to protect the property and people of Elizabeth by refusing to sign the bill then before him which legalized betting on the race tracks.

When the election came on, Mr. Marsh, who had voted against the bill, was nominated by the Democrats, and was being opposed by the pool-sellers and pursemakers with all their money and influence. Mayor Rankin was nominated against him, and was counted on to supply the reputation for piety while the pool-sellers put in the money to elect him as their friend. But Dr. Kempshall and those who had fought the bill, did not propose to be so deceived. They put the question squarely to Mr. Rankin as to whether he would oppose such a law, and he deliberately evaded the issue.

Whereupon, in compliance with their profession, and in defence of the sentiments which they had claimed so necessary to the well-being of their people, Dr. Kempshall and his associates publicly urged the election of Mr. Marsh, as the one of the two candidates from whom they could expect a vote against legalizing pool-selling and race-track gambling.

The people responded, and by the unheard-of majority of 1,700 votes, proved not only that they did not want pool-selling, but that they honored those who had the courage to vote against it. In so doing they purified the politics of Union county, and taught people on both sides of the issue that it is sometimes profitable to stand up for morality and good order, even against money and a political pull.

HONESTY THE BEST POLICY.

Recalling our early boyhood days, among the mottoes that hung on the wall of the little one story country school house, from which we graduated, was one which has ever since been forcibly impressed upon our mind in all our transaction, public or private—"Honesty is the Best Policy." We have always made that motto our guide, and never have, and never will knowingly submit to any dishonorable act either in the transaction of matters connected with our business establishment, or in any official capacity, we may be called to serve.

We have been led to this thought at this time by references we have heard to the settlement of the water bonds, and the fact that the Chancellor and some of the managers of the Savings Bank ask that the city of Rahway shall be a party to giving those bonds an advantage that they do not now have, over bonds held and compromised by other creditors of the city. We have very emphatically and repeatedly expressed our sentiment in that direction—which is that never by any word or act of ours either as editor or officially, shall such a dishonorable proposition be sanctioned. The other creditors of the city of Rahway have settled without asking any different stipulations than those contained in the original obligations, and the representatives of the city guaranteed that all creditors should be treated alike, when arranging the compromise. The water bonds already have their superiority over the others (if they are eventually decided to be legal) in the surplus income from the water works, and the bankrupt Savings Bank by which they are held can much more than pay its creditors in full by adjusting the bonds as proposed by the city, without further litigation. How men of supposed honor can ask any more is beyond our comprehension.

In this connection we desire to correct a wrong impression which is reported to us as existing in the minds of some people who are not posted in the situation. It appears that these people have been either imposed upon by some one, or have formed the error in their own minds. It is this: that the city commenced the fight against the Savings Bank to try to have the bonds declared illegal. The fact is the Chancellor ordered the managers of the Savings Bank to sue the city for the full amount of accrued interest at seven per cent. on the full face of the bonds, while we are paying only four per cent. on the thirty-five per cent. adjustment on other bonds. Therefore it became the duty of the city to try to protect its other creditors, and to take advantage of any point of law in the interest of honor and justice. Hence the interposition of the plea that the bonds were never regularly issued, which objection Judge Magie has not sustained, though the entire court might decide differently.

As we stated last week, if the city decides not to carry the question to the court of errors (as it has no desire to obtain any advantage of the innocent depositors) the suit will be tried and decided in the lower court. And then if judgment is obtained it will amount to no more than numerous other similar judgments which cannot be recovered unless they can be put in the tax levy by mandamus, in which attempts creditors have had a sorry time of late years. The courts have become pretty well acquainted with our situation, and the judges are inclined to consider the question of justice and common sense as well as the technical points of law.

Of course there are lawyers who will advise the bondholders to fight the city—it is their business, and they do not work for nothing; and many of the bondholders have learned by experience that their lawyers are the ones that profit by the litigation—as they have found it in the end to be to their interest to compromise and pay the lawyers besides.

In order to keep it before the people we will state again the very fair offer the representatives of the city have made for the settlement with the Savings Bank: Compromise the accrued interest the same as similar obligations have been compromised and re-issue the bonds at their full face at four per cent.

CONGRESSIONAL REDISTRICTING.

Already plans for the Congressional redistricting of this state are being evolved. Here is one that makes six Democratic, one Republican and one doubtful district:

First district—Camden, Cape May, Salem, Cumberland and Gloucester.
Second district—Atlantic, Burlington, Ocean and Monmouth.
Third district—Middlesex, Mercer, Somerset and Hunderdon.
Fourth district—Union and Essex townships.
Fifth district—Passaic, Sussex and Warren.
Sixth district—Newark and East Newark.
Seventh district—Hudson county.
Eighth district—Hamilton county.

This presupposes the creation of a new county to be known as Hamilton county. It will be taken from the northern part of Hudson county.

SHERIFF HICKS.

The newly elected Sheriff, Wm. H. Hicks, was sworn in by the Court of Common Pleas on Tuesday of last week, and commenced his duties Wednesday morning. He retains, for the present, as deputy, James H. Clark, his late opponent, who has held the same position under Sheriff Glasby. The new Sheriff's bondsmen are Messrs. Frank Brown, Thomas West, P. J. Ryan and P. H. Gilhooly.

Y. M. C. A.

This is the harvest time of the Association privileges.

Keep in mind the Fair, which is to be held Dec. 10-13.

Remember the district convention at Westfield, Nov. 28th to Dec. 2d.

The first meeting of the stenography class will be held at the rooms, Monday evening, Nov. 24, at 9 o'clock.

Pay your annual dues if the matter has not been attended to and urge other young men to join the Association at once.

Socially speaking, this will be a "warm" winter, for our social committee are making great strides in arranging for unique entertainments.

This week is being observed by the Young Men's Christian Association as a week of prayer for young men. Special services are being held every afternoon, at 4:15, for "Boys," and an attractive service every evening, at 8 o'clock, for "Men Only." A large male choir leads the singing at these meetings and all young men are cordially invited to attend.

The Cantata of "A Garden of Singing Flowers," by the well known composer Albert J. Holder, will be given under the auspices of "The Church Workers," at St. Paul's Parish Rooms, Tuesday evening, Dec. 2d, at 8 o'clock. This Cantata has been given at many churches in New York and other cities, always meeting with the greatest success. The nine characters necessary will be represented by Mrs. H. M. Sperry, the Misses Fanny Dunham, Minnie and Stella Harris, of New York, Grace Blore, and Messrs. Dunn, Liggett, Pratt and LaBaw. Tickets can be obtained from "The Church Workers," or at Terrill's drug store. Mr. Holder, the composer, will be the accompanist. nov21-2w

The Passion Play.

THE FAMOUS RELIGIOUS SPECTACLE AS PERFORMED BY BAVARIAN PEASANTS, AS SEEN BY A YOUNG JERSEY GIRL.

The Paterson Press publishes a letter from Miss Lillian Crosby, a granddaughter of Hon. Joseph T. Crowell, of this city, giving a description of the wonderful Passion-Play at Ober-Ammergau, the little village in Upper-Bavaria, of which we have all heard so much, and which was this year peformed for the last time, it having been given every ten years since 1634. The letter was written to her father with no thought for publication, but will be found extremely graceful and graphic:

We had to rise (at Munich) at four in the morning, dressed and had breakfast by candle light, and then hurried away to the station in a cab. Fraulein Baur kindly allowed us to leave all our luggage at her house, and we only had our wraps and light hand bag, which was a great comfort. At the station, an exceedingly stout individual in blue, covered with brass buttons, encountered us. "Where were we going? When were we going? How were we going?" He was an attache of the Royal Bavarian kingdom's railroad, only doing his duty in taking care of us; but after Italy and Switzerland, where one has to skirmish to find out things for one's self, it seemed rather odd to have such a fatherly interest taken in our doings! He pointed out where we should get our tickets, told us when the train left, and after a few more closing admonitions, stalked majestically off to attend to somebody else.

Well we were almost the first ones in the car; expected a dreadful rush, but were pleasantly disappointed. It may have been because the storm had undermined a part of the railroad, and there had been rumors of an accident—but more probably because the Cook's and Gaze's tourist train ran two hours later, and many people bought their tickets through either Cook or Gaze. At Oberau, we took the 'bus for Ober-Ammergau. It was quite clear, but very cold, and we were glad of our wraps. The ride is through a narrow pass in the mountains, and very beautiful. The entire range was white with snow several feet deep and reminded us of the Valley of Chamounix. We passed on the way the old Monastery of Eital, where lived the monk who wrote the Passion Play. All along the road we met peasants, men, women and children, clad in holiday attire, of the most brilliant and impossible colors and costumes imaginable, with baskets and bundles, wending their way to Ober-Ammergau. To them it seemed to be a sort of religious pilgrimage. At a cross on the road side, an old blind beggar had taken his stand, and I noticed that not a peasant passed him by, without dropping something in the tattered hat. At last we came to Ober-Ammergau, a quaint little straggling village, shielded by mountains on either side. The cottages are built after the style of Swiss chalets, except that they are of cement, instead of wood. On every house is a fresco, representing some Bible story, or a scene from the life of one of the saints. These are done in the gayest colors and give the village a very festive tone. Each house is surmounted at the roof-corners by a pretty little wooden cross. We had a great time finding the "abode of Judas," where we had engaged our rooms, nobody but tourists and peasants thronging the streets, and we felt it would be useless to inquire of them. Finally we accosted an old woman, who straightway extracted a dirty little boy from the gutter and instructed him to guide us to Anthony Leckner's. Fortunately for us, Herr Leckner had attended to our letter and had procured the best seats and the best room for us he could get. Such a funny little place it was! First we had to pass through a shoemaker's shop and then up into a kind of loft with a trap door. All the family belongings seemed to be kept in that room. The old woman remarked with a bland smile as she was showing us the room, "Of course we would not mind the schoolmaster passing through, as it was only the schoolmaster." We thought we did mind very much, and marched off for a stormy interview with Leckner. Fortunately our wrath had time to cool, as on our way we met two very nice English ladies who advised us to hasten back and take possession of what we could get, as people were sleeping anywhere and everywhere, glad even to get under cover. So back we sped, and said we would take the room, "Schulmeister" and all. I will here state that that personage arranged to climb up in some mysterious back way—probably through somebody else's window—and thus we had the room all to ourselves. How you would have sniffed at it! I gave a shudder when I lay down in my bed. There were no less than three representatives of the Crucifixion for the lodgers' edification. A large crucifix in one corner, a smaller one under the mirror, and a picture of one over my bed. After getting settled in our new quarters we went over to Leckner's to dinner. The people seemed to be very pious, as grave and solemn as a funeral, which is quite right. Even the cups and saucers on Leckner's table were dedicated to the "Silence of Bethany." No boisterous laughing or beer-drinking, all quiet and still as a Sunday morning. After dinner we went out to inspect the theatre, and see the town. The theatre proved to be a huge wooden affair, with stage in form like a Greek temple. Along the road to the theatre were a great many booths and stalls, where photographs of the play, rosaries, crucifixes and other objects of devotion, were to be had. It is quite shocking at first to read the So and So is a "Herrgott-schnitzer"—in English a "Lord God carver." At six in the evening the church bells rang out, and the players all went to vespers, and thus, "ended the first day."

I omitted to tell you that the Passion Play is the result of a vow made to God by the people of Ober-Ammergau for staying a plague which was raging in that district in the year 1633. They promised that if the plague ceased they would perform the Passion Play every ten years thereafter in commemoration of God's mercy. From that moment (so says the legend) not another person was afflicted, and those who were ill at the time recovered, and the descendants of the people have faithfully kept the promise made by their ancestors.

We were awakened very early in the morning by the noise of a cannon, that penetrated to the remotest corners of the town. The bells rang, and a noisy band of considerable brass paraded through the streets. We straightway arose from our little beds, descended from our lofts, and went out to Leckner's for our coffee, and then meandered slowly towards the playhouse. Hundreds of people of all nationalities were likewise directing their steps thither. There were so many Americans, some French people, Dutch, Belgians, Italians, etc. The peasants interested me the most. They were attired in such quaint costumes and bright colors, especially the Tyroleans. Some of the English tourists affect the Tyrolean costume. There was one very staid old party at Leckner's who was a perfect spectacle! There were a great many priests, and some few Sisters of Charity. The play began at eight o'clock sharp, and the signal to begin was indicated by a big gun. When it went off all were supposed to be in their seats; but dear me, they were not by any means. As our entire row happened to be late, there was much confusion during the prelude. The theatre is on this wise: A perfect square, divided into three parts; one part for the stage, one for uncovered seats, and one for covered seats—the latter being behind the former. It was an extremely unpleasant day, cold and cloudy. Everybody brought all the wraps and rugs they could hunt up. If you had met them on the road, you would have thought it was an Arctic expedition. We too were wrapped up within an inch of our lives, but we kept good and warm, and that was the principal thing, nicht wahr? First of all, the orchestra played a soft low prelude, rather sweet, I thought, although the music is not considered very good. Then the chorus marched upon the stage—the Genii of the play, as they were called. Before each act they always appeared to announce what was coming next, and to exhort the audience to attention and compunction. They sang pretty well together and were attired in flowing costumes of most harmonious colors. The poor women, though, looked ready to drop. They have had to sing so many times out in the pouring rain and cold that it is a wonder they are not all in their graves by this time. Before each act also was a symbolical tableaux of the part about to follow. The first of these tableaux represented Adam and Eve driven out the garden. I thought it beautiful. There was the gate of Paradise, the angel with the flaming sword, and Adam with his naughty Eve leaning on his arm (dressed in sheep skins) in the act of running away. They kept this difficult position for five minutes without moving a muscle. Then followed another tableau, of the cross, surrounded by angels, while a chorus of child voices behind the scenes sang a sweet hymn of adoration to the Redeemer. Then the curtain rose showing the streets of Jerusalem, and a bright landscape in the background. We heard a shout of "Hosanna" in the distance, and soon appeared what seemed a vast procession of people, with palm branches, singing "All hail to David's Son," to a tune something like "Old Hundred." They passed along through the side streets, and then advanced towards the middle of the stage. At last appeared the Savior, dressed in light lilac, with a red over-robe, just in the style of old Italian pictures. He was riding on the gentlest little Oriental donkey. Such a mass of beautiful colors as the garments of the people made, I never beheld. After the people get through singing, the Lord dismounts and enters the temple, where He speaks to the money-changers in the well known words of the Bible, and finally drives them out, overthrowing the tables and letting the doves and lambs free. There were two tiny lambs, and quite a whirring of wings when the doves flew out. It was all done in such a dignified and graceful manner, something as one might have imagined Him to have done it. The best thing about Josef Mayr is his wonderfully noble bearing, and so far as that goer, he impersonates the character of Christ extraordinarily well. His powers of endurance are simply marvellous. Personally one could neither like nor respect him. A most pathetic scene was Christ taking leave of his mother at Bethany. The girl who took the part of the Virgin was Rosa Lang, the Burgomaster's daughter. She was very sweet looking, and wore a lovely, delicate blue dress, with a rose colored over-dress made after the style of the early Christian era. On her head a graceful, snowy-white veil, and with her great, dark eye and long-flowing dark hair, she did look like a Madonna. The Burgomaster himself appeared as Caiaphus, the high priest. He was a fine looking man, and wore a magnificently embroidered white robe with a great high tiara on his head. The scene which followed was the Sanhedrim, and the priests in their gorgeous vestments were quite dazzling as well as instructive. After that came the supper in the house of Simon of Bethany, when Maria Magdalene anoints the Lord with ointment and wipes his feet with her hair, and the parting between Christ and his mother (during which many of the audience wept). Then the Lord and his disciples proceed on "their last journey to Jerusalem." There the priests and Pharisees conspire against Jesus, implicate Judas in the plot, and he engages for the thirty pieces of silver to betray his master to the soldiers at evening in the garden of Gethsemane. Before the scene representing the Lord's Supper was another beautiful tableau—the Lord giving manna to the people of Israel. There were over five hundred people in this—men, women and little children, and not a single one moved a quarter of an inch. It was like a grand, beautiful painting by one of the old masters. It was intended as a foreshadowing of the Bread of Heaven which the Lord gives to us now in the holy supper. A second scene in this same tableau represented the sending of the grapes from Canaan—the type of the wine which we now receive, in token of the Lord's death and passion. Then came the Last Supper. The grouping of the characters in this act was arranged after Leonardo da Vinci's celebrated fresco in Milan. In fact most of the scenes were copied as nearly as practicable after celebrated paintings of the old masters. Thus, the crucifixion was after Tintoretto's master-piece in the church of San Bocoo at Venice, and the Ascension after Raphael's great picture in Rome. I was glad to have visited Italy before seeing this play, as it lent additional interest to it all. The seventh act represented Jesus on the Mount of Olives. It was very touching; the scenery, a pleasing combination of a moonlight night and an oriental garden. Then enters Judas, followed by the soldiers with torches, who seize Jesus as their prisoner. The disciples forsake Him and He is left alone with His tormentors. After this comes the judgment, in which Pilate tries to save Him in spite of the angry protests of the priests. I rather admired the old heathen, for when the priests accused Jesus of having declared himself to be the Son of God, up spake Pilate and said: "Who knows if this man is not the Son of some God?" It was such a thoroughly old Roman answer for Pilate to make. Afterwards comes the scourging and mocking of Christ, which is softened as much as possible in the play, and, finally, the tragedy on Calvary.

You can scarcely believe your eyes when you see Christ on the cross. You are lost in wonder at the mystery of it. How a living man can so balance himself in an upright position, with no visible support, for half an hour, and in full sight of the audience, is a marvel of marvels.

The last scene, when it is the dawn of Easter morning, and Christ rises triumphantly from the grave, and also the Ascension, are extremely comforting. After one's nerves have been on such a strain all day, the joyful music that follows these closing scenes leaves a good and tranquil impression on the mind to carry away from the Passion Play.

We were forcibly impressed by the exceedingly Evangelical character and spirit running through the entire play. It was composed by a monk in a Catholic country and acted by devout Romanists, yet there is nothing sectarian in it: simply a strict adherence to the version of the New Testament. It was a great thing to have seen, and it would take many pages to tell you all about it. I hope you have not wearied by my long account of it, and with the hope, dearest father, that ten years from now you and I may see it together, I remain you own LILLIAN.

COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

From F Co. 3rd Regt. complaining that while they were not allowing to sell beer and cigars at their ball, Hose Co. No. 3, held a ball and sold ten kegs of beer without anything being said about it; also that there was a place uptown that was known to the police that was selling beer without license and they did a good business upon election day but no effort was made to stop the same.

These charges being serious and the name of no individual accompanying the communication it was ordered sent back to the company for the names of the witnesses that the charges may be investigated.

Received and filed, and the recommendation of the chief engineer referred to the committee on fire department.

The superin'endent of the alms house reported the number of inmates to be 13; expenses for the month $85.90. Filed.

The committee on laws reported in regard to the designation of a route for the N. J. Postal Telegraph Company upon which to erect their poles that they would recommenaed that the matter be deferred for the present until it was known positively that the line would run through the city: when that became an established fact there was no doubt a route would be designated as provided by law the same as had been done for the Telephone Company. The committee further reported that the matter of Rachel Fergusen, and supplement to the ordinance concerning nuisances being somewhat complicated they had referred the matter to the city attorney.

The committee on fire department reported recommendations as follows: that John C. O'Rielly, John and Chris. Frank be dropped from roll of Washington Engine Co. No. 1, and Enos H. Daly, Wm. THE SUN FOR 1891.
Some people agree with THE SUN's opinions about men and things, and some people don't; but everybody likes to get hold of the newspaper which is never dull and never afraid to speak its mind.
Democrats know that for twenty years THE SUN has fought in the front line for Democratic principles, never wavering or weakening in its loyalty to the true interests of the party it serves with fearless intelligence and disinterested vigor. At times opinions have differed as to the best means of accomplishing the common purposes; it is not THE SUN's fault if it has seen further into the mill-stone.
Eighteen hundred and ninety-one will be a great year in American politics, and everybody should read THE SUN.

The third annual entertainment of St. Mary's Parochial School, in charge of the Sisters of St. Dominic, will take place at St. Mary's Hall, Thursday and Friday evenings, Nov. 20th and 21st. A very interesting programme has been arranged.

Perth Amboy held an election on the question of supplying the city with pure and wholesome water last Tuesday, and the majority in favor of it was 376. Some of their leading citizens favor getting the supply from Rahway, it being considered the best anywhere in reach.

The P. R. R. Co. are finishing the Vail Place entrance to the depot grounds this week. It wouldn't be amiss for the city to continue the macadam from where the R. R. Co. has carried it, to Irving street, especially as we understand the railroad representatives have offered to give the city the material that will be taken from their driveway out to Cherry street.

John O'Rourke came to the station house Tuesday morning early and reported that a sneak thief was in his house. Officer Conger went to investigate and found a man in the house quietly smoking; he was taken to the station house, and it was found the man had been sent to the house by O'Rourke's brother to sleep during the night, he having engaged him to go to work. He was therefore discharged.

Tennent Council, No. 78 Jr. O. U. A. M., was instituted at Englishtown, Monmouth county, Monday night last, by state organizer Jos. R. Rollinson, of this city. The new council starts with thirty charter members, and with the historic "Tennent church" and Monmouth battle ground near by, where "Molly Pitcher" performed her valorous deed, to incite the Juniors to patriotism, the council will doubtless grow very rapidly.

On our first page we print a picture of the Court House and City Hall base ball clubs and their friends. Among them can be recognized a number of Rahway faces including those of County Clerk Crowell and son Stewart, County Attorney Ward, Messrs. I. L. Hunt, N. Mooney, Jr., Jos. Pratt and H. Belmer; also Senator-elect Marsh, Treasurer Whelan, Comptroller Carlton, Chief of Police Austin and City Clerk Coleman, of Elizabeth, and non-elected Assemblyman Dave Brown, of Woodbridge.

The excitement attending the late election distracted attention from the adjourned tax sales of the first and second wards, under the Martin act, Wednesday of last week. There were quite a number of important pieces disposed of, including the Brewster dock property, which was taken by Mr. James T. Melick. A number of pieces still remained without purchasers and another adjournment took place until next Wednesday, when it is hoped the matter can be cleared up, as far as those two wards are concerned.

Mr. and Mrs. Egbert, of 69 Irving street, lost by death, their only child Nettie, Sunday morning last, at an early hour; Nettie was a beautiful child, bright for her age (a little over a year), and the joy of the household. The bereaved parents have the heartfelt sympathy of the residents of that part of our city, all of whom knew Nettie, who was still beautiful in death, in her little white casket strewn with flowers. The funeral took place Wednesday afternoon from the residence, services being conducted by Rev. C. F. Hull, of the Second M. E. church.

Don't forget the lecture by the Rev. I. U. Foster, D. D., at the 2d M. E. Church, Thanksgiving night, on the subject of "Prison Life in Andersonville." The lecture is an interesting and thrilling one, and the lecturer has put himself to considerable inconvenience to come to Rahway that holiday evening to favor his friend Rev. C. F. Hull, pastor of the church. Those who have not course tickets can procure a ticket for this lecture for twenty-five cents. The next one will be the popular preacher, Rev. F. G. Iglehart, of Newark, Dec. 4th—subject, "Brawn and Brain."

The Young Men's Christian Association, having their building about completed, are in need of furniture for same. The ladies of Rahway propose holding a grand fair, the proceeds of which will be applied for this purpose. We can look back with pride on some of the large fairs held in this city, such as the Library, Grand Army and Orphan Asylum, but the one contemplated we hope will out rival them all. The ladies auxiliary society are now at work organizing and planning the skeleton of the work, and to make it a success they need the co-operation of all in the city interested in the Y. M. C. A. cause.

Children's Home Anniversary.

The 2d Presbyterian church was crowded to its utmost capacity on Tuesday evening, on the occasion of the interesting exercises connected with the seventh anniversary of the Children's Home and Orphan Asylum Association of Rahway. The following programme was carried out:

Organ Voluntary, Prof. John G. Beck; Prayer, Rev. Dr. Woodbridge, of New Brunswick; Lord's Prayer, chanted by children from the Home; Reading of the Scriptures, Rev. Mr. Rollinson; Solo, Mr. George A. Liggett; Reports of Corresponding Secretary, Recording Secretary and Treasurer, read by Rev. Mr. Payson; Violin Solo, Miss Grace Esterbrook; Recitation, Miss Cooper, of Westfield; Exercises by the children; Address and appeal for funds by Rev. Mr. Hull; Address by Rev. Dr. Woodbridge, representing the New Brunswick Home; Benediction, Rev. Mr. Hayes.

The amount of subscriptions, including three life memberships, together with the plate collection, amounted to $195.82.

From the able reports of the corresponding and recording secretaries, Misses Hough and Stoddart we learn that there are now thirteen children from Rahway at the home, there being fifteen at the commencement of the year. Since May they have had to pay one-half more for the board of the children, making the expenditure for the year of $825.46, besides other expenses. The total number of children cared for since the organization is 38. There are 300 members of the association, including officers, advisory board and life members.

The report of the treasurer, Mrs. R. D. Gibby shows the amount of receipts from all sources during the year, including a balance in treasury at last report, to be $1,962.09; expenses $1,406.81; balance $555.28. Total amount of permanent investment $3,491.70.

The children from the Home in New Brunswick showed great proficiency in the exercises, which evidences good care and training, and the charitable ones who originated, and are carrying on this laudable enterprise are looking forward to the time when they can have a "Home" in Rahway.

A "Hoss" Trial.

Quite an amusing "hoss" trial took place before Squire Lambert and a jury at the Police Station on Thursday afternoon of last week, originating out of a trade between Frank P. Freeman, of this city, and Charles Wyckoff, of Woodbridge. Freeman traded his old horse which was warranted to pull a ton without a balk, and as to his age was no doubt to be in his "teens," for Wyckoff's mare which was said to be sound and kind, Wyckoff receiving $32.50 to boot. As Wyckoff was driving away he warned Freeman to be careful about currying as the mare was nettlesome. In due course of time the mare was put in the stable and Freeman's hired man sent to groom her, but soon came out over the top of a half door to escape the heels of the beast. Sidney Gage thought he could accomplish the job, but he came out with a skinned arm and a torn coat, and said it would have been murder if he had not been warned before going into that stable. Wyckoff and his witnesses were sworn and testified that the mare was sound and kind in harness, and that was all she was warranted to be. The case then went to the jury, Mr. Berry pleading for the plaintiff and Mr. Shafer for the defendant. Capt. Bolwell was foreman of the jury, which was composed of horse dealers as well as other citizens, including the Judge of the Police Court. The jury, after deliberating under the watchful eye of Constable Harris for two hours, brought in a verdict of $15 in favor of Mr. Freeman, and Mr. Wyckoff at once appealed.

Killed by the Cars.

About 4 o'clock, Sunday morning, the dead body of a strange man was found lying between the tracks, just beyond Grand street. It was removed to the railroad "dead house," and undertaker Ryno was notified, who removed the body to the morgue. It was found that one leg had been cut off, the other badly mangled and the base of the skull crushed. He was about 35 years old, had light hair and mustache, wore a dark blue chinchilla overcoat, a stiff straight rimmed black felt hat, dark suit of clothes, brown underclothes and white outing shirt with striped cuffs. His shoes had the stained clayey look of one who worked either in a wall paper factory or among ceramics, and the palms of his hands were also stained a pinkish color. In his pockets was found $2.51 in cash, and a pay envelope with the name "William Nicholson" written on it. He was respectably clad and evidently not a tramp. As to whether he fell from a train, or was walking on the track, nothing definite is known.

P. S.—After the above was in type (Wednesday afternoon) the body was recognized by Thomas Nicholson, of Elizabeth, as his brother William Nicholson, who left there on Saturday evening to go to New York. How he came to be in Rahway he cannot imagine. He was a single man and had been in the employ of the Elizabeth Oil Cloth Co. The body was sent to Elizabeth Thursday afternoon.

A Brown Racket.

Monday night the residents of Lewis street, east of Main, were disturbed by a racket among the Browns. It appears that they had become somewhat exhilarated and one of them became very brave and was going to wipe up that section of the city with the muscular carman George Ball, who resides near by. George was engaged at some work in a shady spot, heard the remark, and came out to protest against any such proceeding, when the Browns charged upon him, but were scattered to the four points of the compass by one sweep of his brawny arm. Officer Conger was soon at hand and ordered quiet, but Edward Brown, becoming insulting to the officer, was seized, and the nippers put on him after some resistance. The officer's family lives near by, and his second daughter hearing the row, and thinking the crowd had her father down, seized a stick and was going to rush in to his assistance, when her brother stopped her and told her that her father had his prisoner down while he put the nippers on, instead of being down himself. Brown was taken before Justice Trussler and fined $2 and costs.

At the Wrong Station.

Mrs. Thomas Kelly (colored), of Milton avenue, went to Jersey City Sunday last to visit a neice, returning on an evening train. Her husband got on the same train at Newark, not knowing that she was on the train until it reached Rahway, when on getting off he found she had been seriously injured at Linden, when, as it is stated, she endeavored to get off of the train, supposing it to be at Rahway just as the train was starting. She was knocked down, her head cut and an arm broken. The train was stopped and she was brought to this city. She is now under the care of Dr. Daly, the railroad's physician for Rahway.

The McKinley Bill Again.

Sunday morning of last week a resident took advantage of the temporary absence of Milton's Mayor and proceeded to make things "pleasant" for his wife by throwing her to the floor and striving to prove that the McKinley bill made prices lower. But his young son (a lad of six or seven years) being a true Democrat, and not appalled, raised the "price" with a base ball bat, and succeeded, with the aid of a sister, in "unseating" him, and gaining control of the "house." After looking over the "returns" the man decided not to "contest the seat"—and quiet reigned in Milton.

The Rev. Geo. H. Payson, Pastor of the First Presbyterian church, delivered a sermon of the times Sunday evening last. His subject was "Adultery," and he took his text from the seventh commandment. He said it was a difficult subject to handle, but his hearers report that he handled it in a masterly manner, taking his audience in imagination to Utah; referring to the laws of Connecticut relative to divorce and the average number granted there; deprecating hasty marriages, incompatibility, and the too frequent occurrence of divorce for causes other than that of his text.

Burned to Death.

Mrs. Elizabeth Marsh (formerly Mrs. Clinton) wife of Mr. Isaac Marsh, of Pierce street, met with a horrible death at her residence, Saturday night last. The particulars as near as we can learn, are as follows: About 5:30 that evening, a daughter of Mr. Lewis Merrick (who resides next door to Mr. Marsh) heard a moaning as if from some one in dire distress. Running around to a side porch of the Marsh house, she saw Mrs. Marsh sitting on the porch, enveloped in flames. She hurriedly notified her mother, who ran to Mrs. Marsh's aid and endeavored to smother the flames with a door mat, at the same time loudly calling for help. Several persons soon responded and plumbers Rourke and Brennan, assisted by Mr. Lewis Springer finally succeeded in subduing the flames, and Mrs. Marsh was taken in the house. Doctors Randolph and Holmes were soon at the bedside of the suffering woman, who was horribly burned, and cried continually for water. All that could be done for her was done, and she was kept under the influence of opiates until death released her at 2:30 Sunday morning. As to how it occurred nothing definite is known, but a lighted lamp in an upper room with a lengthened flame and blackened chimney, led to a theory that she had lighted it with paper from the top of the chimney after turning the wick too far up, and in some way a flame was communicated to her clothing. This lamp was subsequently thrown out of a window by Mr. Wesley Slack. At the time of the occurrence, Mrs. Marsh was alone in the house, her husband being in New York at his business of lace weaving. When found, she had evidently been on fire for some time, and her clothing was nearly burned from her, and her limbs and greater part of her body were fairly roasted. Fragments of burned clothing from where the lighted lamp stood, were visible to where she was found. Miss Merrick states that when she found Mrs. Marsh, she asked her how it occurred, but the only reply was a moan and a stupefied look. The woman had not seemed to be her former self since the loss of an only son (James Clinton) who died about four years ago, leaving her alone in the world, until her marriage to Mr. Marsh about three years ago. Funeral services were held from the residence Tuesday, the Rev. Wm. Rollinson, of the Baptist church officiating.

Obituary.

Mr. Robert C. Voorhies, an old and respected citizen and veteran of the late war, died at his home on Lewis street, Sunday afternoon last, after a protracted illness. He attended the inauguration of President Harrison, with the Veteran Zouaves, and in the terrible storm then prevailing contracted pneumonia of a severe type, which resulted in consumption, which was the cause of his death. Mr. Voorhies was a native of this city and has resided here most of his life. At the breaking out of the war he enlisted in the 8th N. J. Vols., went to the front and saw much service; being honorably discharged in 1862, he returned to his home. In 1864 he re-enlisted in the 4th Battery, N. J. Light Artillery, and served until June 17th, 1865, when peace having been declared he returned to Rahway and settled down to the life of a peaceful citizen, following his vocation most of the time as a boss carpenter, which business he continued until sickness prohibited it. He was a member of Drake's Veteran Zouaves, and wherever they went he was always with "the boys." He was also a member of Barry Post, No. 27, G. A. R., of this city. His age was sixty-five years, seven months and twenty-seven days. He leaves a widow, three sons and three daughters, all grown up. His funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon, from the Second M. E. church, Rev. C. F. Hull, Pastor, officiating.

Barry Post turned out in full numbers and several representatives of the Zouaves were in attendance, including the commander, Gen. Drake. The deceased was buried at the Rahway cemetery with the usual military honors performed by the Post. The pall bearers were from the Post and the Zouaves.

The McKinley Bill Blamed.

A Frenchman went into a restaurant recently and called for his favorite dish of frogs' legs. When he took his check from the waiter he discovered it was ten cents more than usual and commenced to "kick" as bad as an impaled frog and told the waiter he had made a mistake—but was informed that the price had raised on account of the McKinley bill. "What has the McKinley bill to do with the price of frogs?" demanded the Frenchman. "New tariff on 'hops'," replied the waiter as he hopped out of the way.

A young father was aroused by a squalling baby the other night, and the mother hastily despatched him to get some soothing syrup: just as he jumped out of bed he uttered a squall which even exceeded the noise made by the baby. "What's the matter?" exclaimed the wife. "That cussed McKinley bill!" responded the husband—"tacks on the carpet!"

Two Republicans were discussing their great defeat when one of them laid it all to the McKinley bill. "Well, why the dickens didn't McKinley pay his bill before election?" was the retort.

Horse Clipping.

Sunday week ago, several young men decided to go to Milton and clip a horse belonging to one of them. They, being novices, did not succeed as well as an expert, and the day was far spent ere they began to near the end. When darkness came they had finished all but the head, which they had to leave for a more convenient season. Early Monday morning the man who uses the horse through the week sent his helper to get the animal as usual. The helper upon opening the stable door saw first the horse's neck and head, and becoming frightened took the shortest cut for town, and was met on the way by one of the "clippers," who asked him what he thought of the horse. He said he didn't stop to think, for he thought it was a lion in the stable. His boss told the owner of the horse that if he didn't clip the rest of him, he (the boss) wouldn't drive the horse through the street. A compromise was made and the horse was used that day, after which the clipping was finished.

The Race Track Trials.

As foreshadowed in our last the jury in the case of the New Jersey Jockey Club failed to agree and were discharged by Judge VanSyckle Thursday evening after declining to discharge them the first time they came in just before noon. It was deemed strange that they could not agree by those who heard the evidence, but it is thought by some that the members did not take kindly to the Judge's charge which was quite emphatic, and allowed their feelings to thus influence their action. Two other cases were tried—one against the Linden Park Association and one of Ike S. Thompson, a book-maker, in each of which cases the jury returned a verdict of guilty after only five or ten minutes deliberation. A number of the other indicted parties retracted their pleas and pleaded guilty, and there will probably be no more of the cases tried, the struck jurors being discharged. Both the cases where convictions were had will be carried to the court of errors.

Cut to Pieces.

A man who can never be identified was on Thursday evening of last week, torn to shreds by a Pennsylvania Railroad passenger train at Metuchen. The train was stopped and over an hour was spent in picking the pieces of the man from the machinery of the locomotive, its wheels, and the front wheels and truck of the baggage car, and placing them in a bag. Old railroaders say it was the worst case of a man chopped to pieces they ever saw. The stoppage of the Pennsylvania train delayed a Lehigh Valley passenger train nearly an hour.

Course of Lectures.

It has been arranged to have a course of interesting lectures delivered at the 2d M. E. church during the coming season, at such a price that no one can object on that account, and the talent will all be first class. There will be five lectures, and a ticket for the whole course will cost but fifty cents. The following is the list:

Nov. 27th, Rev. I. U. Foster, D.D. Subject: "Prison Life in Andersonville."

Dec. 4th, Rev. F. G. Iglehart, D.D. Subject: "Brawn and Brain." Course Tickets 50 cents.

They say that the Republican tariff tinkers put acorns free on the tariff list, to keep on the right side of the hogs. Why didn't they put brimstone on the free list, to keep on the right side of the D——l? QUIZ.

The M. S. B. A.

The Morning Star Benevolent Association, the leading organization among our colored citizens, celebrated their nineteenth anniversary at Silvers' Hall, Tuesday night. About two hundred ladies and gentlemen of color were in attendance, many of them in full dress, with corsage boquets, and African diamonds were quite numerous and effulgent. Among the guests of the evening was a large delegation from Friendship lodge, of Newark, all in full regalia, as were also local members. Messrs. Williams and Miller, of the Newark lodge, delivered fine addresses. Mr. Ernest Brown, the R. S. of the Rahway lodge, read the annual report showing that the lodge numbered 30 members and that its finances consisting of cash, bonds, mortgages, and real estate, all safely invested, were fair, and safe from the connivance of Wall street brokers. Mr. Brown also delivered an address that brought down the house. The members of the lodges executed a fine march under command of Major Peter Robinson. After the entertainment was concluded, a grand "cake walk" took place, and about fifty couples contested for the cake. A fine orchestra furnished excellent music, and the walk was watched by a large number of interested spectators, including numbers of whites. It took two walks to decide who "took de cake," when it was awarded to Miss Delia Jackson, and her gallant, Mr. Samuel Edgar. After this the remainder of the night was devoted to terpsichore.

Factory Site Wanted.

Some one has sent to the Mayor an advertisement clipped for some newspaper, for a suitable site from a factory to manufacture steam engines. Good railroad facilities are required, and to be within an hour of New York city; no objection to purchasing a large plot of land, if healthy and pleasantly located, and desirable for residence as well as manufacturing purpose. A deep navigation water front desirable. State all particulars as to location, railroad facilities, assessed valuation and surroundings, with best spot cash price. Send diagram. Address "Steam." Post Office drawer 171 Buffalo, N. Y.

The advertisement has been referred to a number of real estate representatives in the city, and it is hoped, if the concern is a substantial one, it may be induced to come to Rahway. We have not got the deep water, but that may not be absolute required, and those having eligible plots of land should forward the particulars as requested.

The Hild-Park Concert.

The first concert of the Y. M. C. A. lecture and entertainment course was given by the Hild-Park Concert Co., at the 1st Presbyterian church, on Thursday evening of last week. There was a good attendance, and the programme was carried out in a pleasing manner. The company consisted of Miss Ella Jocelyn, contralto, Miss Annie Park, cornetist, Herr Carl Hild, violinist, and Frederick Gillette, baritone. The principal attraction of the evening seemed to be Miss Annie Park, the cornetist, who was repeatedly encored; the baritone, Mr. Frederick Gillette, was also very fine, and received encores at each appearance; Herr Hild's violin playing was excellent, especially his one-string selection; in fact the company is a strong one, each one of the artists above named being well received, and the Y. M. C. A. managers deserve great credit for the excellent inauguration of their season's course of entertainments.

St. Mark's Fair.

The grand fair at St. Mark's church is in full progress and is attracting much attention. It will be continued over Thanksgiving. The various tables are finely arranged and pleasantly presided over, especially those of the Young Ladies' Society and St. Ann's Society. W. T. Cladek's shooting gallery is also well patronized. The Woodbridge band plays Monday and Thursday nights. There are a number of contests going on for prize articles, the most exciting being for a gold watch between Andrew Holzheimer and Peter Scheuer, and a handsome doll between Lizzie Hermes and Emma Sauer.

Stacy's Studio

CLOTHING THE NAKED.

"The naked every day he clad
When he put on his clothes."

In some countries it is not necessary to wear clothes, but in ours it is. And wearing clothes causes the necessity for buying them, for which latter necessity it is our business to provide. While it's our business, it is also our pleasure, because it's a business we take pleasure in it—to provide for the clothing of Men and Boys the most satisfactory garments to be found in the entire world. The hardy Scot, the rollicking Irishman, the beef-eating Britton, the sturdy German and the hustling Yankee, supply the materials and we do the making ourselves here in Newark, under our own supervision. Of course, the result is a superior article in clothing, not only in quality but in style and make up. If you want a Winter Suit or Overcoat, no matter how hard you are to fit, nor how critical or cranky, we can fit you.

We want you to look at our Overcoats between $10 and $15. We can show you Black and Blue Beavers and Fancy Mixtures, Black and Blue Chinchillas, Oxford, Blue and Drab Kerseys, and we might go on AD INFINITUM, but this "ad" isn't "infinitum," so you'll have to come in and see the balance. It's a royal line anyway.

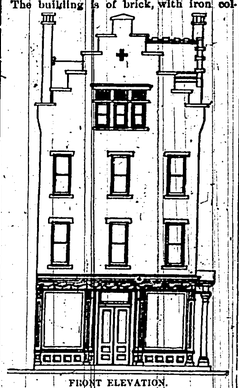
A GOOD COMBINATION BUILDING.

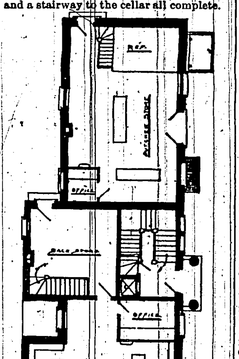
Grocery Store, Butcher Shop and Living Apartments Under One Roof.

[Copyright by American Press Association.]

These drawings represent a convenient arrangement for a store, with living apartments above, fronting on the main street, with a butcher's shop on the side street. The building is of brick, with iron columns and girders in the front of the store to support the brickwork and floors above. The store has a large plate-glass window extending across the front and six feet on the side, with the door set well back, which gives an excellent opportunity for the display of goods. Counters extend along the sides of the store, with abundant shelf room back of each. An office, inclosed with sash doors and glass and lighted by a window from the outside, is placed at the back on one side, while there is a good sized storeroom in the rear for rough goods and a stairway to the cellar all complete.



FRONT ELEVATION.



STORE AND SHOP PLAN.

At the rear of the store, fronting on the side street, is a neatly arranged butcher shop, with a refrigerator counter, chopping block, office and stairs to the cellar.

Each store is provided with a hatchway in the sidewalk, closed with iron doors, for the purpose of delivering goods in the basement.

The entrance to the living apartments is on the side street, protected by a pretty stone porch. A good sized staircase hall leads to each story, with a lift available on each floor for the purpose of delivering goods to the occupants of each apartment. The cost of this building in brick is about $8,000; in wood it could be erected for $5,000.

A Trip to Mexico and California.

To break the monotony of life is to live longer and better. This desire for new scenes and varied experience which possess all intelligent persons is a natural and beautiful impulse. The course upon which we invite you involves more of the elements of delightful change from familiar surroundings than any other possible upon the continent. It is change, not only of scenery, manners, costumes, and methods; but of winter, and the wretched, uncertain travail of early Northern spring, for warmth, sunshine, flowers, and gladness. It is a change which will gladden the snow-bound worker of the North and brighten the eye of the invalid.

Pursuing either of the several well-equipped routes of travel between your home and New Orleans, you are speedily set down in that bright and busy metropolis of the delta, a city more French than American. The hotels are full with tourists, the streets gay with belles of Northern ladies on shopping bent. There is plenty to see; conspicuously the picturesque French market and the Cathedral close by; you may then visit the West End and Spanish Fort; and when you tire of the Crescent City speed westward across the beautiful sugar country of the Texas, the richest soil in America. From Houston a side trip may be made to Galveston, a bright and handsome city with a sea beach unsurpassed in the world. The great Beach hotel is one of the most popular wintering houses in the entire South.

San Antonio will claim your attention for a day or so. Here is a plaza full of picturesque groups; there the famous Alamo, where Davy Crockett, Bowie, and their garrison died fighting to the last. Ancient adobes stand "cheek by jowl" with modern iron and brick palaces of trade. The little river, fed by living springs, meanders through the valley, winding hither and yon about the city, shaded by plentiful foliage, and spanned by a score of bridges.

Little towns, full of promise, are strung like beads along the line, each the centre of a rich grazing and agricultural district. At Spofford Junction our Mexico passengers leave the "main line," and, turning southward, connect at Eagle Pass with the Mexican International Railroad, the shortest broad-gauge line to the City of Mexico from all points east of the Mississippi. Excursion tickets are on sale at all principal points to this delightful winter resort. Those who visit this region may be said to leave the nineteenth century behind them to return to the seventeenth. It is a grand journey of discovery, and is rich with memorable experiences. The Southern Pacific Company were the pioneers in running Pullman vestibule dining-car special trains, without change, from East to Mexico City.

At El Paso the Rio Grande is crossed en route westward, and in a few hours we are in Arizona. There are up ands and scattered mountain-forms of strange contour about them. There is a quaint flavor of antiquity in the air. The stations bear silvery-sounding Indian and Castilian names. The railway is yet so new that the arrival of a train is the greatest event of the day, and an inspiriting well-spring of wonder to the grotesquely costumed Indians. At Yuma, where the Gila flows from its desert path into the noble Colorado, we enter California, the wonderland of the Occident.

The route leads through a valley girt to the right and left with mountain-peaks. From Flowing Wells to Indio the way is over the sandy bed of an ancient lake 240 feet lower than the ocean-level. At Los Angeles we greet the Pacific, after a short side journey to Santa Monica, one of the most popular sea-side resorts of the Pacific.

Through the weird shadows of Tehachapi Pass, the grand central basin of the Golden State is seen spread out like a beauteous mirage upon the northern vista. Lake Tulare is here at the left. At Berenda you take the sleeper for Raymond, where stages wait to carry you into the wondrous Yosemite; and at Lathrop you take the train for Sacramento, from which point divergent lines transport you to fair-famed Tahoe, and the base of the inspiring dome of Shasta. Proceeding directly from Lathrop we soon catch the first glimpse of the Golden Gate, and, crossing the beautiful bay, approach the city of the Pacific—San Francisco.

While at San Francisco do not fail to visit the Geysers, Santa Cruz, Monterey, and other places of resort and pleasure in or contiguous to the city. The Southern Pacific Company, with its steamer lines, can offer you 13,338 miles of travel on its own property; to Florida and Havana, to Central America or Vera Cruz, by water, and by rail from New Orleans to the City of Mexico or to Portland, Oregon, through Texas, Mexico, Arizona, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Sacramento, and thence over the beautiful Mt. Shasta Route.

A journey to Japan or China, Australia, New Zealand, or Honolulu, or "Round the World," can be arranged by any of our agents, and the fullest information given as to prices of Tickets, Sleeping Car or Freight rates.

Special parties, semi-monthly, are managed by the Southern Pacific Company's "Sunset Route" by which cheap fares with tourist sleeping cars can be obtained.

For maps free descriptive illustrated pamphlets, etc., address E. HAWLEY, Assistant General Traffic Manager, 343 Broadway, or L. H. NUTTING, Eastern Passenger Agent, Southern Pacific Company, 1 Battery Place, New York.

Our European agent, Rudolph Falck, at Hamburg, Liverpool or London, can materially assist parties from any portion of Europe who desire to go to California, Texas or Mexico. We meet all such passengers consigned by Mr. Falck on their arrival in New York, and arrange every detail as to baggage, sleeping cars, etc., and see that they are safely and comfortably started on their journey. 1t5 tf.

Montana, Oregon and Washington.

The Northern Pacific Railroad passing through Minnesota, Dakota, Montana, Idaho, Oregon and Washington, was the first line to bring the region occupied by these states into communication with the east. Its main line and branches penetrate all sections of these states, reaching nine-tenths of the chief cities. It is the shortline to Helena and Butte, Mont., Spokane Falls, Tacoma and Seattle, Wash., and Portland Ore., and the only line running through train service from the east through the states of Montana and Washington. Pullman Sleepers and fur-nished Tourist Sleeping Cars are run via the Wisconsin Central and Northern Pacific, and Pullman Palace Sleeping Cars via Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul and Northern Pacific, from Chicago through to the Pacific Coast without change. This is the Dining Car and Yellowstone Park route.

The large travel on the Northern Pacific line necessitated the inauguration in June 1890, of a second through train to the Pacific Coast, thus enabling this road to offer the public the advantage of two through trains daily to Montana and points in the Pacific Northwest, carrying complete service of sleeping cars, dining cars and regular day coaches. The train leaving St. Paul in the morning runs via the recently completed Air Line of the Northern Pacific through Butte, Mont., making this the shortest line to the latter point by 120 miles.

Colonists for Washington, Oregon and British Columbia points should take no other line than the Northern Pacific, as by this line only, can all portions of the state of Washington be seen. Stopovers are allowed on second class tickets at Spokane Falls and all points west, enabling settlers to inspect the country without extra expense.

For Maps, Time-Tables and Illustrated Pamphlets, or any special information desired, address your nearest ticket agent, or Chas. S. Fee, Gen'l Pass. and Ticket Agent, St. Paul, Minn.

Seeing is Believing.

And the best lamp ever made, like Aladdin's of old, "a wonderful lamp." A lamp absolutely non-explosive and unsurpassed for brilliant white light of 85 candle power! Purer and brighter than gas light, more cheerful than either! Lamp is

"The Rochester."

And with it there is no smoke, no smell, no broken chimneys, no flickering, no sweating, no climbing up of the flame, no "tantrums" nor annoyance of any kind, and it never needs trimming. Its fonts (oil reservoirs) being rolled stanless brass, with central draft, it is absolutely unbreakable, and we offer a tattoo candle.

Only five years old and over two million of these lamps in use. It must be a GOOD lamp to make such a telling success. Indeed it is, for lamps may come and lamps may go, but the "Rochester" shines on forever. We make over 2,000 artistic variations in Hanging and Table Lamps, Banquet, Study, Vase and Piano Lamps, every kind, in Bronze, Porcelain, Brass, Nickel and Black Wrought Iron.

Ask the lamp dealer for it. Look for the trade-mark stamp: "THE ROCHESTER." If he hasn't the genuine Rochester and the style you want, or if no lamp-store is near, send to us for free illustrated catalogue (and reduced price-list), and we will box and send you any lamp safely by express, prepaid to your door.
