Christians of Today "Too Busy" to Give Proper Time to Meditation

By DR. WALTER H. NUGENT, Portland, Oregon.

THE clatter of the world is creeping into the church, and Christians have their hands so full that their hearts are empty. Real religion is deep rather than demonstrative. We need to take time to be holy. We live in a wonderful age, an age of drive and hurry and stress, an age of impatience and unrest, an age of fuss and trumpet blowing. We are always in a rush. The church is imitating the world. Christians are regulating their devotions by the clock, where they have any devotions at all.

Oh, for the lost art of meditation! For the tonic of waiting upon God! The tragic thing in the life of the world today is the absence of quietness. We have so developed the art of being strenuous that we have almost lost the art of being still.

What do busy men know about meditation? All the day long it's hurry and sweat and fume and tear with them. Christians are so busy rushing hither and thither on errands of mercy it may be that they have no time for quiet and prayer and meditation. The minister himself has a struggle to go apart himself, so insistent are the demands of a city church today. We have more faith in the whirlwind than in the still small voice. God usually speaks in whispers but we cannot hear these whispers for the clamor of the street.

Unsatisfactory Brood

Pride's chickens have bonny feathers, but they are an expensive brood to rear. They eat up everything and are always lean when brought to market.—Alexander Smith.

Friendship's Value

Every man rejoices twice when he has a partner of his joy; a friend shares my sorrow and makes it but a moiety, but he swells my joy and makes it double.—Jeremy Taylor.

CARS CRASH

In the heavy rain of Tuesday afternoon an accident took place on the approach of the Lawrence street bridge, when a coupe driven by Minde Gere, of 293 Webster avenue, Roselle Park, skidded and crashed into a truck driven by William Alexander, of 394 Wayne street, Newark. The left side of the coupe was badly damaged, while the left front spring on the truck was broken. Gere was cut on the left elbow and received medical attention. Traffic Sergeant McIntyre investigated the accident. No charges were made.

Shortly after noon Tuesday, an accident took place at the corner of Elizabeth avenue and Main street, when a car driven by Robert Armstrong, of 160 Lawrence street, was proceeding up Main street and turned into Elizabeth avenue, striking a G. M. C. one-ton truck parked in front of James Tango's store.

General Pershing in Paris Again

Gen. John J. Pershing, as he arrived at Laurent's restaurant in Paris, for the luncheon given by the Department of France American Legion. He is shown being greeted by Julian Thomas, American lawyer and commander of the Paris post of the Legion. The lunch inaugurated the "drive" for an American Legion building in Paris.

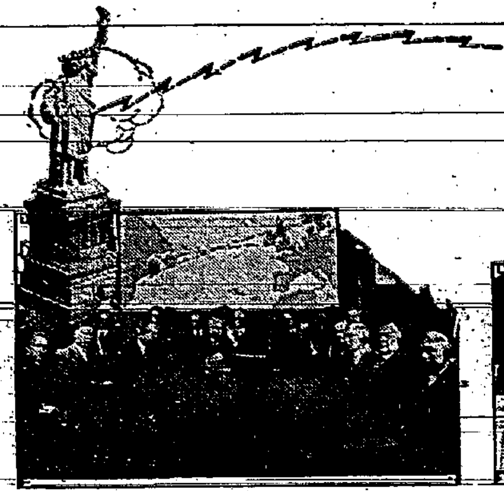
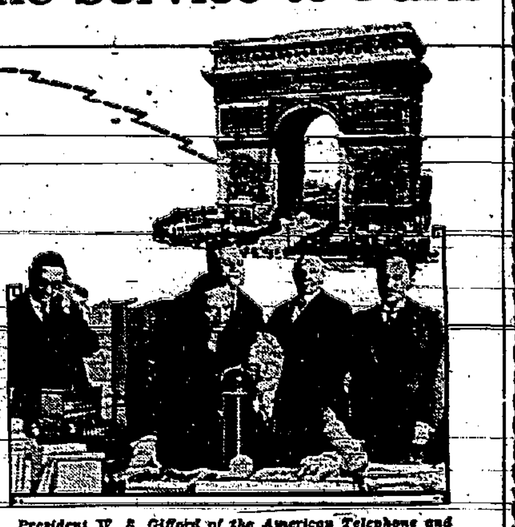
Jersey Folk Quickly Avail Selves Of New Telephone Service to Paris



General John J. Pershing, in France once again, hails a mighty peacetime triumph by conversing with Gifford on the first Paris connection in the presence of high officials of the Republic of France. The famous Arc d'Triomphe has shadowed many a victorious legion of marching men returned to Peace and might well shadow this triumph dedicated to the furthering of Peace and good will.



President W. S. Gifford of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company officially opens the circuit to Paris talking over more than 3,000 miles of sea and land in the presence of officials of the company and the Bell Laboratories and engineers who participated in the first successful transatlantic experiments in 1915. On the table before him are Alexander Graham Bell's original instruments which first transmitted the spoken word some thirty feet only fifty-two years ago.

The opening of transatlantic telephone service connecting all points in the United States and Cuba with Paris by radio telephony to England and submarine cable to France had hardly taken place March 28 when Jersey people began to place calls for the French metropolis. There was a thrill in it, not only for the people calling but for the operators on this side of the water and across, a thrill that has not worn off despite the every-day nature of the service now.

You can't stay blase long in the telephone business. Things are moving along too fast and the things that flash past the reviewing stand fade out down the street into the realm of commonplace everyday routine practice are too phenomenal to cause less than a real thrill.

The long distance girls who had forgotten all about the demonstration the opening of the transcontinental line received back in 1915 had for a long time come to feel that the phenomenal channels of conversation they had before them on their switchboard sections were quite colorless and deserving only dutiful concern.

Then—"Operator, I want to talk to London, England."

Then it was Antwerp, Berlin, Stockholm and in each request for a new old world city they had never had before there was a thrill. However, they came so fast that they were catalogued as European calls and classed in the one big thrill.

They had almost forgotten about Paris—of all the glorious old world capitals the most inspiring to the American imagination and to the majority of Americans it is the great European center of everything.

Apparently the long distance girls just hadn't thought of Paris. Paris was a place to read about and not to telephone to. Then it came.

So the long distance operators are having their newest switchboard thrill and apparently the biggest one yet.

There have been more than eighteen outgoing calls from New Jersey to Paris, sixteen from Newark and two from Atlantic City, and three incoming from Paris, all switched through Newark at the New Jersey end.

Calls from Paris are or will be coming in at all the big telephone long distance centers at Newark, Asbury Park, Atlantic City and Trenton, and this thrill will last some time, but no one could blame the girls for wondering what's next.

MAN PLACED IN BAIL ON GUNNING CHARGE

Brawler is Said to Have Pulled Trigger on Patrolman

Charged with carrying a concealed weapon, and assault with intent to kill Patrolman Robert J. Walker, Frank E. Farrell, 31, of 308 New Brunswick avenue, was placed in $2,000 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury by Judge Fayette N. Talley in police court Friday night. Farrell had spent the day in jail following his arrest by Walker, whose life was saved only by the failure of Farrell's gun, it is said.

The defendant pleaded not guilty. A companion, Charles Brennan, 45, of 401 Second avenue, New York, who originally gave his name as Robert Wallace, was fined $10 on a charge of being a disorderly person.

Farrell declared on the witness stand that he was drunk and had no memory of attempting to shoot the policeman. He said he took the gun from the home of Henry Gardner, of 212 New Brunswick avenue, upon request of Mrs. Julia Gardner, who feared that her husband would shoot them with it. Farrell said he intended throwing the weapon in the south branch of the Rahway river which flows nearby. As he had crossed over the river to Leesville avenue before Patrolman Robert Walker and Joseph Jardot located him the judge wanted to know why he had not disposed of the gun. Farrell laid his failure to do so to the fact that he was drunk.

Patrolmen Walker and Joseph Jardot were called to the New Brunswick avenue address early Friday morning by residents in the neighborhood who complained that shooting was going on. When Walker stepped out of the police car, which Jardot was driving, Farrell faced him with his hands in his pockets. As the patrolman stepped forward, the invisible gun clicked, according to the police. Walker knocked the man down. Joined immediately by Jardot, he reached Farrell and found the gun. They found the mark of the firing pin on one of the cartridges, which had failed to explode, it is said.

Man Charges Stone Thrown By Neighbor Broke His Leg

Patrolmen William Smith, Daniel Rommell and Robert Walker, detailed to 308 Main street Friday evening by Lieut. Joseph Crahan, following the report of a fight, found August Hoosman, 56 years old, lying on the porch with his right leg roughly bandaged. He was rushed in the patrol wagon to the Rahway Hospital where it was found he had a fractured leg and a bursted blood vessel.

He told police that Michael Yuso, his neighbor, of 311 Main street had thrown a stone at him as he entered his house, but when Yuso was taken to police headquarters he was released by Judge Talley following his statement that he was in bed at the time of the trouble. He is to appear for trial when summoned.

Unidentified Man's Body Taken From Rahway River

The body of an unidentified man, probably 40 or 45 years old and a foreigner, was taken from the Rahway River near the Lawrence street bridge at about 3:45 o'clock Sunday afternoon. It was discovered by three boys, Vernon and Arthur Cromwell, of Main street, and Robert Gassaway, of 60 Albert street, who were standing on the bridge. They saw the head protruding from the water in such a way that it appeared as though the man was walking in the river. The tide, coming in, carried the gruesome object to the bridge, where it lodged against a pillar.

The boys told W. H. Stell, of Fulton street, watchman at the MacLac plant, which is close to the bridge, and Stell pulled the body to the bank. Police headquarters was notified, and Captain James Thompson and Patrolman Robert J. Walker went to the scene in the patrol wagon. Assisted by Thomas Brown, and using grappling irons, they took the remains from the water and turned them over to Mortician James M. Pettit.

It was found that the man had been in the river some time, probably eight or nine days, and the opinion was advanced that he might have been one of the pair who jumped from an exploding tanker at Carteret recently. There were no marks of violence upon the body.

There was little in his pockets to identify him. He had a gold fifteen-jewel Waltham watch, case number 10,510,752, works number 15,334,331. Pawn ticket No. 2,245, dated January 31, from 118 Sand street, Brooklyn, and eighty cents.

The man wore brown trousers and a striped shirt. He weighed about 150 pounds and was about 5 feet and 10 inches tall. He was 40 to 45 years old, smooth face, and his hair was mixed with gray.

HAS NARROW ESCAPE IN SPEED BOAT LEAP

Meier, of Rahway, Was Trying For Record at Belmar

Narrow escape from serious if not fatal injuries was the experience of Harold Meier, of Lake avenue, former Rahway High School football and basketball captain, on Sunday when the speed boat in which he was competing in the races at Belmar, overturned while traveling over the rough water at nearly forty miles an hour. Meier jumped clear as the boat shot ten feet in the air and overturned.

Meier, who is office manager of the West End Garage, purchased the boat this summer, together with his brother-in-law, Nelson L. Taylor, Jr., proprietor of the West End Garage, and on July 4 the boat was driven to a place in the annual races at Belmar, the Rahway pair receiving a cup. It was in an attempt to capture another race that the boat turned over as Meier was forced off his course.

The motor was torn out with a rear panel of the boat, and it sank to the bottom, where efforts were made by officials of the Belmar Yacht Club yesterday to locate it. Meier was injured on the leg and back, and returned to his home last evening.

Whirling Fan Kills Boy Working on New Theater

Struck by an air-circulating fan while on his way to the roof of the new Rahway Theater, being erected at the corner of Central avenue and Irving street, Lawrence Armeno, 17 years old, of 524 East 119th street, New York City, was fatally injured yesterday afternoon. Armeno, a worker for the S. & E. Electric Sign Company, was carrying a pot of paint to the roof of the big new Rahway structure and in passing the fan he was caught in the big blades.

His arms were caught and his body dragged into the fan. His arms were broken and badly cut. His body was badly cut and bruised. He was admitted at the Rahway Hospital shortly before 5 o'clock and died at 7:35 from shock and hemorrhage. The body was removed by Mortician James M. Pettit and the father and brother, the only living relatives were notified.

When Rahway police headquarters was notified, Traffic Sergeant George McIntyre and Patrolman Joseph Jardot and Robert Walker went to the scene and found Armeno lying on the roof of the theater, having been removed from the fan by fellow workers. Ropes were used to lower the youth to the ground, and he was then rushed to the hospital, where, in spite of the efforts of Drs. E. J. Carlin and J. L. Perkins, death took place several hours later.

Charles White, forman on the job, stated that Armeno was going to paint apart of the roof of the new structure. He had passed the fan before, according to other employees, without trouble. Bernard Engelman, one of the owners of the theater, stated that the fans were going in an effort to have the building dryed out.

Cars Collided Yesterday

Cars driven by Mrs. Margaret Morton, of 153 Bryant street, Rahway, and Stephen Mellick, of 29 Charles street, Carteret, crashed yesterday afternoon at the intersection of Main and Monroe streets. The left front fender and left door of Mrs. Morton's machine were damaged and the right side of Mellick's car also damaged. Captain James Thompson investigated but issued no summons when Mellick agreed on settling.

Early last evening a serious accident was narrowly averted at the corner of Elizabeth avenue and Grand street, when a machine driven by George Martens, of 10 Boyle place, Elizabeth, and a car operated by Armen Topalian, of Boston, Mass., collided. According to the report of the Rahway police, entered by Patrolman Cleo, Martens was driving down Grand street toward the railroad elevation while Topalian was traveling up Elizabeth avenue toward Main street. "CLEAN-UP" LEADERS TOUR STREETS TODAY PRAISING AND BLAMING

Banners With Phrases From The Mayor's Proclamation Adorn Automobiles

"Clean-up Week" got under way here yesterday with a meeting of the citizens' committee and the committee of the Common Council at City Hall, where plans were perfected for the tour of the city which got under way at 10:30 o'clock this morning from the Woman's Club.

A large number of cars, hung with banners on which phrases from Mayor Thomas A. Fyffe's clean-up proclamation were plainly lettered made the tour, led by the police car. Stops were made at various points where beauty and cleanliness are at a high level, or where improvements are now being made. Praise was given in the form of loud horn-blowing. Other stops were made at places where cleaning-up and beautification are badly needed, and here a silent inspection was made.

Mrs. Ida M. Custer and Mrs. George E. Gallaway comprised the tour committee, and Mrs. A. D. Brearley mapped out the route, which carried the cars down Milton avenue to Main street, to Monroe street, to Dock street, to Milton avenue, to Lawrence street, to Hazelwood avenue, to New Brunswick avenue, to Main street, to Elizabeth avenue, to Grand street, to Lincoln Highway to Milton avenue, to the Woman's Club. The company then held a luncheon meeting at which plans for the remainder of the week were discussed.

Last night district supervisors reported on conditions in their respective territories. Several new workers were present. Mrs. Hedding B. Leech presided in place of her husband, who was unable to attend.

Progress was reported by Councilman John Thompson on the wading pool being constructed in the city yards. This is the feature which the clean-up leaders are emphasizing in the First Ward. In the Second Ward they have declared to lay stress on the Rahway River Parkway, which, they believe, should be extended to link up with Wheatena Park. In the Third Ward it will be urged that the most be made of Milton Lake. In the Fourth Ward the possibilities of Avon Way will be emphasized, and in the Fifth Ward, acceptance of the Squier Parks will be urged.

Throughout the city this week extra refuse wagons will make the rounds, prepared to collect a vast amount of rubbish. It was pointed out by Councilman Samuel D. Love that a city ordinance forbids the placing of garbage and other refuse at the curb: It must be left in the rear or at the side of the property, not more than eighty feet from the street, where the collectors are expected to go for it.

Commendation was given the merchants, all of whom have removed merchandise from the sidewalks.

Crowell Makes Position Clear; Is No Candidate

All doubts as to the availability of Walter B. Crowell as the Democratic candidate for Mayor have been removed by a statement from Mr. Crowell, which says:

"While fully appreciating the honor, I announced before the Primary election that it would be impossible for me to accept the nomination.

"Since the Primary election, I did not file a Certificate of Acceptance and my name will not appear on the ballot as a candidate for this office."

Although Mr. Crowell's name did not appear upon the primary ballot, he received enough votes to give him the majority nomination had he cared to accept it. There has been a disposition on the part of citizens and others to consider him the candidate in spite of his pre-primary announcement, but with the news that he did no accept the nomination he removes himself definitely from the field which he never entered.

District Deputy Nelson A. Brower, assisted by August Stricker, installed officers for Union Council, No. 31, Jr. O. U. A. M., last night.

Christians of Today "Too Busy" to Give Proper Time to Meditation

By DR. WALTER H. NUGENT, Portland, Oregon.

THE clatter of the world is creeping into the church, and Christians have their hands so full that their hearts are empty. Real religion is deep rather than demonstrative. We need to take time to be holy. We live in a wonderful age, an age of drive and hurry and stress, an age of impatience and unrest, an age of fuss and trumpet blowing. We are always in a rush. The church is imitating the world. Christians are regulating their devotions by the clock, where they have any devotions at all.

Oh, for the lost art of meditation! For the tonic of waiting upon God! The tragic thing in the life of the world today is the absence of quietness. We have so developed the art of being strenuous that we have almost lost the art of being still.

What do busy men know about meditation? All the day long it's hurry and sweat and fume and tear with them. Christians are so busy rushing hither and thither on errands of mercy it may be that they have no time for quiet and prayer and meditation. The minister himself has a struggle to go apart himself, so insistent are the demands of a city church today. We have more faith in the whirlwind than in the still small voice. God usually speaks in whispers but we cannot hear these whispers for the clamor of the street.

Unsatisfactory Brood

Friendship's Value

Every man rejoices twice when he has a partner of his joy; a friend shares my sorrow and makes it but a moiety, but he swells my joy and makes it double.—Jeremy Taylor.

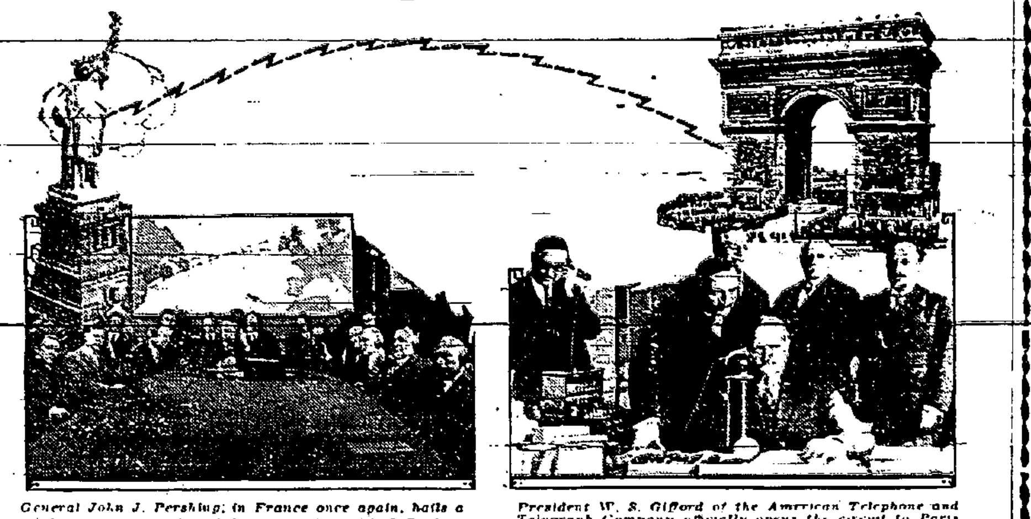
Jersey Folk Quickly Avail Selves Of New Telephone Service to Paris



General John J. Pershing, in France once again, hails a mighty peacetime triumph by conversing with Gifford on the first Paris connection in the presence of high officials of the Republic of France. The famous Arc d'Triomphe has shadowed many a victorious legion of marching men returned to Peace and might well shadow this triumph dedicated to the furthering of Peace and good will.

President W. S. Gifford of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company officially opens the circuit to Paris talking over more than 3,000 miles of sea and land in the presence of officials of the company and the Bell Laboratories and engineers who participated in the first successful transatlantic experiments in 1915. On the table before him are Alexander Graham Bell's original instruments which first transmitted the spoken word some thirty feet only fifty-two years ago.

The opening of transatlantic telephone service connecting all points in the United States and Cuba with Paris by radio telephony to England and submarine cable to France had hardly taken place March 28 when Jersey people began to place calls for the French metropolis. There was a thrill in it, not only for the people calling but for the operators on this side of the water and across, a thrill that has not worn off despite the every-day nature of the service now.

You can't stay blase long in the telephone business. Things are moving along too fast and the things that flash past the reviewing stand fade out down the street into the realm of commonplace everyday routine—practice are too phenomenal to cause less than a real thrill.

The long distance girls who had forgotten all about the demonstration the opening of the transcontinental line received back in 1915 had for a long time come to feel that the phenomenal channels of conversation they had before them on their switchboard sections were quite colorless and deserving only dutiful concern.

Then—"Operator, I want to talk to London, England."

Then it was Antwerp, Berlin, Stockholm and in each request for a new old world city they had never had before there was a thrill. However, they came so fast that they were catalogued as European calls and classed in the one big thrill.

They had almost forgotten about Paris—of all the glorious old world capitals the most inspiring to the American imagination and to the majority of American. It is the great European center of everything.

Apparently the long distance girls just hadn't thought of Paris. Paris was a place to read about and not to telephone to. Then it came.

So the long distance operators are having their newest switchboard thrill and apparently the biggest one yet.

There have been more than eighteen outgoing calls from New Jersey to Paris, sixteen from Newark and two from Atlantic City, and three incoming from Paris, all switched through Newark at the New Jersey end.

Calls from Paris are or will be coming in at all the big telephone long distance centers at Newark, Asbury Park, Atlantic City and Trenton, and this thrill will last some time, but no one could blame the girls for wondering what's next.

MAN PLACED IN BAIL ON GUNNING CHARGE

Brawler is Said to Have Pulled Trigger on Patrolman

Charged with carrying a concealed weapon, and assault with intent to kill Patrolman Robert J. Walker, Frank E. Farrell, 32, of 208 New Brunswick avenue was placed in $2,000 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury by Judge Fayette N. Talley in police court Friday night. Farrell had spent the day in jail following his arrest by Walker, whose life was saved only by the failure of Farrell's gun, it is said.

The defendant pleaded not guilty. A companion, Charles Brennan, 46 of 401 Second avenue, New York, who originally gave his name as Robert Walace, was fined $10 on a charge of being a disorderly person.

Farrell declared on the witness stand that he was drunk and had no memory of attempting to shoot the policeman. He said he took the gun from the home of Henry Gardner, of 212 New Brunswick avenue upon request of Mrs. Julia Gardner, who feared that her husband would shoot them with it. Farrell said he intended throwing the weapon in the south branch of the Rahway river which flows nearby. As he had crossed over the river to Leesville avenue before Patrolman Robert Walker and Joseph Jardot located him, the judge wanted to know why he had not disposed of the gun. Farrell laid his failure to do so to the fact that he was drunk.

Patrolmen Walker and Joseph Jardot were called to the New Brunswick avenue address early Friday morning by residents in the neighborhood who complained that shooting was going on. When Walker stepped out of the police car, which Jardot was driving, Farrell faced him with his hands in his pockets. As the patrolman stepped toward him the [illegible] gun clicked according to the police. Walker knocked the man down. Joined immediately by Jardot, he searched Farrell and found the gun. They found the mark of the firing pin on one of the cartridges, which had failed to explode, it is said.

Man Charges Stone Thrown By Neighbor Broke His Leg

Patrolmen William Smith, Daniel Ronan and Robert Walker, detailed to 311 Main street Friday evening by Lieut. Joseph Crahan, following the report of a fight, found August Hooz [illegible] lying on the porch with his right leg roughly bandaged. He was rushed in the patrol wagon to the Rahway Hospital where it was found he had a fractured leg and a burst blood vessel.

He told police that Michael Yuso, his neighbor, of 311 Main street had thrown a stone at him as he entered his house. But when Yuso was taken to police headquarters he was released by Judge Talley, following his statement that he was in bed at the time of the trouble. He is to appear for trial when summoned.

BUSINESS TALKS

The home newspaper, as an institution, has survived many difficulties; the onslaughts of opposition, the increase in cost of publication, the peril of unpaid subscriptions, the uncertainty of advertising patronage, problems of competition, and the hazards of its own mistakes. Through all this the home newspaper still lives. The newspaper is a growth — a development made possible by the cooperative and receptive spirit

Unidentified Man's Body Taken From Rahway River

The body of an unidentified man, probably 40 or 45 years old and a foreigner, was taken from the Rahway River near the Lawrence street bridge at about 3:45 o'clock Sunday afternoon. It was discovered by three boys, Vernon and Arthur Cromwell, of Main street, and Robert Gassaway, of 86 Albert street, who were standing on the bridge. They saw the head protruding from the water in such a way that is appeared as though the man was walking in the river. The tide, coming in, carried the gruesome object to the bridge where it lodged against a pillar.

The boys told W. H. Stell, of Fulton street, watchman at the MacLac plant, which is close to the bridge, and Stell pulled the body to the bank. Police headquarters was notified, and Captain James Thompson and Patrolman Robert J. Walker went to the scene in the patrol wagon. Assisted by Thomas Brown, and using grappling irons, they took the remains from the water and turned them over to Mortician James M. Pettit.

It was found that the man had been in the river some time, probably eight or nine days, and the opinion was advanced that he might have been one of the pair who jumped from an exploding tanker at Carteret recently. There were no marks of violence upon the body.

There was little in his pockets to identify him. He had a gold fifteen-jewel Waltham watch, case number 10,510,752; works number 15,894,531. Pawn ticket No. 2,245, dated January 31, from 146 Sand street, Brooklyn, and eighty cents.

The man wore brown trousers and a striped shirt. He weighed about 165 pounds and was about 5 feet and 10 inches tall. He was 40 to 45 years old, smooth face, and his hair was mixed with gray.

HAS NARROW ESCAPE IN SPEED BOAT LEAP

Meier, of Rahway, Was Trying For Record at Belmar

Narrow escape from serious if not fatal injuries was the experience of Harold Meier, of Lake avenue, former Rahway High School football and basketball captain on Sunday when the speed-boat in which he was competing in the races at Belmar, overturned while traveling over the rough water at nearly forty miles an hour. Meier jumped clear as the boat shot ten feet in the air and overturned.

Meier, who is office manager of the West End Garage, purchased the boat this summer, together with his brother-in-law, Nelson L. Taylor, Jr., proprietor of the West End Garage, and on July 4 the boat was driven to a place in the annual races at Belmar, the Rahway pair receiving a cup. It was in an attempt to capture another race that the boat turned over as Meier was forced off his course.

The motor was torn out with a rear panel of the boat and it sank to the bottom where efforts were made by officials of the Belmar Yacht Club yesterday to locate it. Meier was injured on the leg and back, and returned to his home last evening.

Whirling Fan Kills Boy Working on New Theater

Struck by an air-circulating fan while on his way to the roof of the new Rahway Theater, being erected at the corner of Central avenue and Irving street, Lawrence Armeno, 17 years old, of 524 East 118th street, New York City, was fatally injured yesterday afternoon. Armeno, a worker for the S. & E. Electric Sign Company, was carrying a pot of paint to the roof of the big new Rahway structure, and in passing the fan he was caught in the big blades.

His arms were caught and his body dragged into the fan. His arms were broken and badly cut. His body was badly cut and bruised. He was admitted at the Rahway Hospital shortly before 5 o'clock and died at 7:35 from shock and hemorrhage. The body was removed by Mortician James M. Pettit and the father and brother, the only living relatives, were notified.

When Rahway police headquarters was notified, Traffic Sergeant George McIntyre and Patrolman Joseph Jardot and Robert Walker went to the scene and found Armeno lying on the roof of the theater, having been removed from the fan by fellow workers. Ropes were used to lower the youth to the ground and he was then rushed to the hospital, where, in spite of the efforts of Drs. E. J. Carlin and J. L. Perkins, death took place several hours later.

Charles White, forman on the job, stated that Armeno was going to paint apart of the roof of the new structure. He had passed the fan before, according to other employees, without trouble. Bernard Engelman, one of the owners of the theater, stated that the fans were going in an effort to have the building dryed out.

MAN BREAKS ARM IN AUTOMOBILE CRASH

Many Minor Accidents Reported To Police Over Week-End

With through roads so thickly traveled as to be almost impassable over Saturday and Sunday, several accidents, most of them of minor proportions, were reported to police.

The most badly injured motorist was Fred Tibbetts, 30 years old, of 374 State street, Perth Amboy, who received a fractured left arm and lacerations of the scalp in a crash Saturday afternoon in Edgar road near the Linden line. His companion and the driver of the car, Andrew Lubias, 32, of Fords, was cut on the forehead and the right thumb. In the other car were Eugene and Herbert Schultz, of 454 Maple avenue, Elizabeth. Eugene was cut on the forehead and the left knee. F. J. Harnett, of 121 Coe avenue, Hillside, took the injured men to the Rahway Hospital where they were treated by Dr. J. S. Mark.

Loses Tooth

When his father, reading a sign and making the Lennington street-East Milton avenue turn at the same time, became involved in a collision, 7-year-old Jacob Reshty, son of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Reshty, of Brooklyn, had a tooth knocked out. Dr. G. Russell Atkinson, of 522 Cooper street, Camden, driver of the other car charged Reshty with reckless driving.

Two cars were damaged, but no one was injured, in a collision at Lawrence street and Woodbridge road Saturday afternoon. The cars were operated by S. Nelson Meland, of 581 Decker avenue, Port Richmond, S. I., and Miss Rose Galiada, of 454 Central avenue, Woodbridge, who was accompanied by Miss Marion Lockwood, of 81 Green street, Woodbridge.

Autos driven by Daniel C. Fanuele, of 70 Cherry street, this city, and Victor Pfluger, of 204 Pennsylvania avenue, Hillside, crashed at New Brunswick avenue and Albert street, Saturday afternoon.

At Grand and Allen streets yesterday afternoon cars operated by File Sereda, of 36 Linden avenue, and Raymond Higley, of 138 Main street, both of this city, collided. Patrolman Farber investigated. They agreed to settle their damages and no charges were made.

Drivers agreed to settle following a crash Sunday morning at Maple and St. George avenues. The cars were operated by Dr. Fred J. Farrington, of 66 Elm avenue, and Mrs. Marie McLaughlin, of Ross street. No one was injured. Patrolman Father investigated.

Mrs. Mildred Irwin, 29 years old, of 8410 Eighty-sixth avenue, Woodhaven, L. I., received a severe laceration across the left temple at 10:30 A. M. yesterday when the auto in which she was riding was hit by another machine on Lincoln Highway near Colonia station. She was treated at Rahway Hospital by Dr. J. S. Mark.

Cars Collided Yesterday

Cars driven by Mrs. Margaret Morton, of 152 Bryant street, Rahway, and Stephen Melick, of 29 Charles street, Carteret, crashed yesterday afternoon at the intersection of Main and Monroe streets. The left front fender and left door of Mrs. Morton's machine were damaged and the right side of Melick's car also damaged. Captain James Thompson investigated but issued no summons when Melick agreed on settling.

Early last evening a serious accident was narrowly averted at the corner of Elizabeth avenue and Grand street, when a machine driven by George Mertens, of 10 Boyle place, Elizabeth, and a car operated by Annen Topalian, of Boston, Mass., collided. According to the report of the Rahway police, entered by Patrolman Clos, Mertens was driving down Grand street toward the railroad elevation while Topalian was traveling up Elizabeth avenue toward Main street. The right front fender and running board of Topalian's machine were broken, while the left front fender of Merten's car was broken and the chassis knocked out of line. Both entered charges of reckless driving against the other and appeared before Judge F. N. Talley in local court last night to press these charges both of which were dismissed.

Judge Talley also dismissed similar charges made against each other by Daniel Fanuele, of 70 Cherry street, Rahway, and Victor Pfluger, of Hillside, drivers of cars which crashed at the corner of Elizabeth avenue and Grand street, on Saturday.

"CLEAN-UP" LEADERS TOUR STREETS TODAY PRAISING AND BLAMING

Banners With Phrases From The Mayor's Proclamation Adorn Automobiles

"Clean-up Week" got under way here yesterday with a meeting of the citizens' committee and the committee of the Common Council at City Hall, where plans were perfected for the tour of the city which got under way at 10:30 o'clock this morning from the Woman's Club.

A large number of cars, hung with banners on which phrases from Mayor Thomas A. Fyffe's clean-up proclamation were plainly lettered made the tour, led by the police car. Stops were made at various points where beauty and cleanliness are at a high level, or where improvements are now being made. Praise was given in the form of loud horn-blowing. Other stops were made at places where cleaning-up and beautification are badly needed, and here a silent inspection was made.

Mrs. Ida M. Custer and Mrs. George E. Gallaway comprised the tour committee, and Mrs. A. D. Brearley mapped out the route, which carried the cars down Milton avenue to Main street, to Monroe street, to Dock street, to Milton avenue, to Lawrence street, to Hazelwood avenue, to New Brunswick avenue, to Main street, to Elizabeth avenue, to Grand street, to Lincoln Highway, to Milton avenue, to the Woman's Club. The company then held a luncheon meeting at which plans for the remainder of the week were discussed.

Last night district supervisors reported on conditions in their respective territories. Several new workers were present. Mrs. Hedding B. Leech presided in place of her husband, who was unable to attend.

Progress was reported by Councilman John Thompson on the wading pool being constructed in the city yards. This is the feature which the clean-up leaders are emphasizing in the First Ward. In the Second Ward they have declared to lay strees on the Rahway River Parkway, which, they believe, should be extended to link up with Wheatena Park. In the Third Ward it will be urged that the most be made of Milton Lake. In the Fourth Ward the possibilities of Avon Way will be emphasized, and in the Fifth Ward, acceptance of the Squier Parks will be urged.

Throughout the city this week extra refuse wagons will make the rounds, prepared to collect a vast amount of rubbish. It was pointed out by Councilman Samuel D. Lofe that a city ordinance forbids the placing of garbage and other refuse at the curb. It must be left in the rear or at the side of the property, not more than eighty feet from the street, where the collectors are expected to go for it.

Commendation was given the merchants, all of whom have removed merchandise from the sidewalks.

Crowell Makes Position Clear; Is No Candidate

All doubts as to the availability of Walter B. Crowell as the Democratic candidate for Mayor have been removed by a statement from Mr. Crowell, which says:

"While fully appreciating the honor, I announced before the Primary election that it would be impossible for me to accept the nomination.

"Since the Primary election, I did not file a Certificate of Acceptance and my name will not appear on the ballot as a candidate for this office."

Although Mr. Crowell's name did not appear upon the primary ballot, he received enough votes to give him the mayoralty nomination had he cared to accept it. There has been a disposition on the part of citizens and others to consider him the candidate in spite of his pre-primary announcement, but with the news that he did not accept the nomination he removes himself definitely from the field which he never entered.

The Guest Room

A clean, cheery and daintily colored room should be the guest room. It should also contain everything which will make your guest comfortable. The room should be airy, especially for summer visitors, and should be well screened so that guests may open the windows top and bottom.

Choose a color scheme, green or blue, with an accompanying color to harmonize or subdue, it, such as gray; and dress the room up in this, from woodwork and curtains to small accessories. Such a room will charm your guest, upon first arrival, and continue a source of joy until departure, and very likely he, or she, will close his, or her eyes many times during the months to come and picture the gentle restfulness and sweet hospitality of that little room.

Have plenty of empty dresser drawers and closet room with ample hangers. The bed should be soft and immaculately clean. It may have a spread of the prevailing color, and a soft quilt, of the same color, may be rolled up at the foot for chilly nights. Some hostesses prefer a wool blanket for the extra cover as it is more possible to keep clean.

Have convenient lights, a desk stocked with writing materials, book ends between which are some good short stories, a novel, a book of poems and a dictionary. A fresh magazine introduces a touch of cheer and ties one up with the world outside. An easy chair should allure to rest. A rack for the bestoyal of baggage is a convenience and saves the guest from stooping over every time he would get something out of his traveling bag.

Joy is the keynote of the guest room. If it is a rather gloomy room with a north exposure, dress it up in warmer colors. Rugs, dresser scarfs, lamp shades and all accessories should contribute to the color scheme. The equipping of the guest room does not need to be expensive. Gay calicoes, painted furniture and very simple accessories may yield that "come hither" look.

Travel Light

Our grandmothers used to drag trunks around with them when they made a tour. Now their granddaughters take a trip to Europe, with only a suitcase to hold their needs. It is not considered smart to have too much baggage.

The ideal travel outfit is lightweight and uncrushable, the soft silk or wool things which may be rolled up in a bag and shaken out at the end of the journey and left to hang a day, when they will be unwrinkled. Do not take clothing of too light nor too conspicuous color. Match your clothes, choosing a neutral color, as beige, dark gray, or navy blue, as a base. With such a basic color, all your clothes may seem to go together and be a part of an ensemble. It will not be necessary then to have separate hats, shoes, gloves and wraps for each costume.

Clothes of too light color soil easily with the grime of travel and soon look unattractive. Better the darker shades for the road. Dark blue or black lace dresses and uncrushable chiffons, which fold into almost no space, may be easily pressed, are good choices for evening gowns when on a trip. If the dresses follow the same general color, one underslip and few stockings will be all it will be necessary to take.

If you use a satchel instead of a suitcase, do not try to fold your dresses to pack into it, but roll them up. First fold lightly together a bunch of tissue paper. Slip a rubber band over each end of this to make a roll. Lay your dresses flat upon the bed, and roll them lightly about this tissue paper roll, one dress over the other. But do not make the roll tight. When you unroll them you will be surprised at their unwrinkled state. The resiliency of the tissue paper roll has broken the force of the pressure against them. In packing dresses and coats flat, put a crushed bit of tissue paper under the sleeves and in each fold to relieve the pressure.

If the porch rug becomes faded remove the dust from it carefully with a stiff broom, then freshen it with a coat of dye. Add a package of dye to three quarts of boiling water and drop into it a handful of salt. Spread the rug on a dry, flat surface such as the driveway to the garage and paint the dye preparation in. When this has dried reverse the rug and paint the other side in the same way.

Summer Eats

Plenty of vitamins and not too much hearty food will keep the family from summer ennui. Serve raw vegetables as frequently as possible. To have them cold and served in dainty fashion will help to make them appeal to the appetite. There is all the difference in the world between wilted, soggy, luke-warm rhubarb sauce or prunes, and the same article chilled and served in a dainty dish. Lettuce, radishes, water cress, celery, green onions should be crisp and cold.

Even the despised and healthful prunes can be made delectable if stuffed with cheese or nutmeats and served on a lettuce leaf with a little mayonnaise over them. Berries should not be wilted or withered. Keep them cold. If a little pineapple juice is left from your can, save it until the next meal, then add it to a tart lemonade, serve in small glasses and see how the family will relish it.

Plenty of vitamins, plenty of mineral salts will help to keep the body fit. But do not handicap it by too much proteins and starches, too much meat and potatoes and heavy desserts.

Window Curtains

Window curtains, which have traditionally been white or ecru are now assuming the gay colors so popular. We find in the shops dainty marquisette nets in shades of blue, peach, gold and green. These may be used instead of the white lacy curtain, with or without the overdrapes.

A novel way to make these curtains is to have a sash curtain for the lower half of the window, with the drapes and valance often used for the top and sides. If desired the valance may be long enough to cover the top sash. From the outside it will look like one curtain, but the divided curtain will seem more dainty and cool looking from the inside and either half may be drawn leaving the rest of the window covered.

Cretonnes have always been popular for summer curtains and drapes. A new fabric is the figured rayon which is sunny looking with its small flowers. It is used for the breakfast nook, the sun room and bedrooms.

Mrs. Solomon Says:

Discontent and dissatisfaction write in ugly lines on your face. Interest and a cheerful philosophy inscribe sweetness there.

Old Furniture

In this day of lovely paints, old furniture is an asset because you dare do such interesting things with it. A friend had an odd assortment of cheap pieces of old furniture and she made them into such a beautiful outfit for her guest room that they quite rivaled in charm the more expensive sets in the homes of her more monied but less ingenious friends.

She used a gloss paint, not enamel and not lacquer, both of which have a high and hard finish, but a soft, lavender gloss paint. She painted the bed, an old dresser and an arm chair the same soft lavender. The color is delicate but this paint is washable. She upholstered the chair in a black and lavender cretonne and put hangings at the window to match. The accessories in the room carried out the same color scheme.

To Keep Meat

In hot weather, it is sometimes a problem to keep meat. When it comes from the market, remove it immediately from its wrappings and wrap it in a waxed paper and place it in the ice-box. Save the bread wrappers for this use. To wrap the meat keeps it moist and prevents it from mingling odors and flavors with the rest of the contents of the ice-box.

If the meat is to be kept for a long time, it is a good plan to sear it. Rub flour over it and brown it well on both sides. When cool, place in the ice-box. To marinate meat helps to preserve it and also adds to its flavor. A good marinade dressing consists of one part fat and two parts acid. The fat may be olive oil, or any other fat and the acid may be vinegar or lemon juice. Cooked meats may also be marinated as an additional protection against spoilage.

LITTLE BROWN ANTS AEROPLANE

By EVELYN BURDEN RAND, of Rahway.

A BED TIME STORY

Along the side of a road under a large ragweed, in a little brown house made of sand, lived Mr. and Mrs. Ant and their little children.

Mr. and Mrs. Ant worked very hard to gather enough food for their family. They were busy from morning until night. It did not matter, they were happy, and their children were getting [illegible].

One morning Mr. Ant awoke very early, and away he scampered to gather his food. He was hustling around picking up little pieces of cake and bread crumbs that had been left from a picnic, when all of a sudden, plunk! down fell a Hickory Nut, right on the poor Ant, catching his leg so that he was held prisoner.

"Oh dear! Oh dear!" he groaned. "What shall I do!" He tried to pull his leg from underneath the nut, but this hurt him so he groaned still louder.

Now Mr. Grasshopper was out hunting his breakfast. He heard the Ant groaning and knew he was in great trouble, so quickly flew to save him.

Mr. Grasshopper pushed the nut from the Ant's leg. "Please take me home on your nice large wings," said Mr. Ant, so away they flew. When Mr. Grasshopper reached the Ant's home, they all ran out to help carry their poor father in the house, and to thank the good kind Grasshopper.

"It will be a long while before I will be able to work again," said Mr. Ant. "We will work for you," said all the children. "Yes, but I will never be able to go out in the bright sunshine. I will have to stay home all summer."

"Let us all think," said Mrs. Ant. "How can we get your father out in the sunshine."

Little Billie Ant was the first to speak. "I know! I know!" he shouted. "Let's make an Aeroplane."

"Oh, who could do that, what a silly idea," they all cried.

"No! No!" said Mr. Ant. "That is not silly children, if you can get the wood, I will make it while you children gather the food."

"Let us all think," said Billie. "What can we build it of."

"I know! I know!" said Mrs. Ant, and clapped her hands with glee, while all the little ones danced, hopped, skipped, and cried, "What is it, Mother?" "Follow me," she said, "and we shall come back with a big surprise for your dear father."

Away they all scampered to the very spot where Mr. Ant was hurt.

Each little Ant was eager to help so they soon had it on the little sand porch. They rushed down to carry up Mr. Ant. Oh! how surprised and happy he was. "Now I will have lots of work to do and we will soon be able to travel a long distance in a fine Aeroplane."

"Come," said Little Billie, "Let us all have a dance," so they danced around and around the Hickory Nut until Mrs. Ant called, "Come everybody, it is time for supper."

Next week the Little Brown Ants will take a ride in their aeroplane.

Something Like a Memory

Billie was heard to say to his pal Jack: "I can remember everything I did since I was three weeks old." After some hesitation Jack replied: "Oh, that's nothing. I can remember from the time the doctor said to me: 'Stand up, Sonny, and have your eyes put in.'"

Chevrolet is Expecting To Exceed All Records

Detroit, July 16—Positive indication that the Chevrolet Motor Company in 1928 will again establish a new annual production record and go well beyond the million mark this year, was seen in an announcement here today by W. S. Knudsen, president, that output for the first six months of the year totalled 751,536 cars and trucks as compared with 601,149 for the corresponding period of 1927.

Responding to the greatest demand in its history, Chevrolet established new monthly production records every month this year. Like the five preceding months, June was the best sixth month in the history of the company with a total of 132,794 units, as compared with 112,794 for June of 1927.

With its fourteen great factories at the peak of efficiency and precision operation, Chevrolet in the last six months produced a finished car every five seconds of each working day. Daily production over the six months period averaged 5,815 units. All daily records were broken May 28 when 7,075 finished cars and trucks were built.

In addition to the 751,536 cars and trucks built since the first of the year, 32,719 of the "Bigger and Better" models that have since won nation wide acclaim, were built in December, bringing the total number of the present model built up to July 1st to 784,355.

Production in the first six months of the year exceeded the total output for the year of 1926 and nearly doubled the production of each preceding year.

Due to the steadily increasing popularity of the "Bigger and Better" car, [illegible] throughout the summer and fall, Mr. Knudsen announced. Schedules set for July, August and September call for more than 100,000 units each month, indicating that Chevrolet will reach the million mark before October first.

Early in the fall another mammoth assembly plant will be opened in Kansas City, increasing again by 350 units daily Chevrolet's production capacity. With the completion of the Kansas City project, Chevrolet will have an annual production of more than 1,250,000 cars and trucks annually.

Disposal Works

The plant is located in Woodbridge Township on the south bank of the Rahway River between the city of Rahway and the Borough of Carteret. The plant site comprises approximately 10 acres. The plan shows the complete installation for [illegible]. The entire plant includes [illegible] units some of which is for present construction and a grit chamber in two units one of which is for present construction and two batteries of settling tanks one of which is for present construction each with 20 units of settling tanks making 40 units in all. The settling tanks are [illegible] 100' long. They are the suppressed [illegible] tank to prevent the undesirable drying of scum and to eliminate any possibility of odor. Each tank has a sludge drain with five outlets for the convenient removal of sludge. The sludge drains connect with a line to the pump house which is for present construction where the sludge will be pumped to barges which will remove it to sea where it will be disposed of by dumping. The clarified effluent from the settling tanks passes to the sterilization tanks which are five units (three of which are for present construction) of the same size as the settling tanks providing adequate detention [illegible] for the action of the chlorine. The final effluent from the sterilization tanks is discharged into the Rahway River.

Section 7. The percentage of the capacity of such outlet or trunk sewer and appurtenances to the use of which this city shall be entitled is [illegible]

Section 8. [illegible] municipalities shall pay [illegible] the construction of the part of the improvements [illegible] their respective names in the same as provided by law.

following table, but no municipality shall be liable to pay more than the maximum liability set after its name in the said following table.

Municipalities	Percentage of Cost to be paid by each Municipality	Maximum Liability of each Municipality for present construction
City of Rahway	10.[illegible]	$262,500
Boro of Garwood	10.51[illegible]	207,700
Boro of Roselle Park	2.81[illegible]	75,500
Boro of Kenilworth	6.41[illegible]	128,700

Twp. of Clark	3.01[illegible]	77,300
Twp. of Woodbridge	2.5[illegible]	50,000

It is understood and agreed that the Woodbridge lateral (described in Section 6, paragraph (e) under the heading "Lateral Trunks") is for the benefit of Woodbridge and Rahway and is to be paid for by those municipalities on the basis of 5/8 by Woodbridge and 3/8 by Rahway. The above stated maximum liabilities of $50,000 for Woodbridge and $30,000 for Rahway (part of Rahway's $262,500) are to be segregated for the construction of the said lateral sewer and its cost is to be [illegible] Rahway and Woodbridge on the aforesaid basis. Black and White, Paris' Favorites Suit Skirts Are Slashed Full Length at Center Front or Side Front.

How far we have progressed along the road to real femininity, writes a Paris fashion correspondent to the New York Herald-Tribune, is strikingly evidenced in the collection of Lucien Lelong. One need only compare the tiered and flounced skirts of formal models with the simple, boyish evening gowns of a few seasons back to understand what a tremendous change has taken place in the temper of the mode. This change has passed its oral stage. It is now an actual established fact and no one can run counter to it and still be sartorially smart.

So far as color is concerned, Lelong is definitely committed to black and white. This preference is principally applicable to evening costumes, although it occasionally enters the daytime field. The tendency is particularly interesting in view of the exotic colors which Paris has been so partial to since the late openings. It is probably a result of more fanciful dress themes which always limit vivid colors.

Prominent among the effective themes of this Lelong collection are the draped fichu collar emphasized in the front of the frock; the handkerchief point yokes in skirts; the use of shirring not only to give fullness either to the front or the back of a frock but also to lend decorativeness to the otherwise unadorned frock; the reversed side of his full-length flowing jabot—that is, descending from the neckline in front down the length of the frock; hitherto it has been placed at the back in evening gowns. Overskirts are used bountifully with side dip flares in the underskirt at one side in front, the other in the back. There are many straight, fairly broad loose panels, some from the shoulders, others from the hips—sometimes squared at the ends, sometimes rounded.

Frocks Match Coats.

In daytime ensembles frocks frequently match the coats—in velvet surfaced fabrics with the frock in crepella, for instance. Coats are almost all collared and cuffed in fur, with the latter made to extend almost to the elbow, or at least apparently to this depth. Crepe de chine, all-over lace printed and plain velvets, printed chiffons, both soft and stiff satins and georgette crepe are used for afternoon models—in black, gray, midnight blue, nigger brown, maize and a very pink beige de rose tone. Morning glory blue, beige and pale green enter the sports mode and black comes into the tailored costumes. Suit skirts, by the way, are slashed full length at the center front or side front.

Black and white and pastel tints are used for evening, in georgette, tulle, solid beading, stiff satin for wraps, and satin and velvet for coats.

Right now principal anticipatory interest in Paris centers around the coat, which, incidentally, is autumn's leading item of dress. The new note in this field is the return of the flare, which had been quite positively banned for spring and summer. It is rather a modified species of flare that these advanced models are affecting and its place may be in front at the sides, or, on rarer occasions, in back. The appearance of slenderness, however, is still maintained and it appears that the svelte line silhouette will be the fetish of the fashionables. Velours, zibeline, English woolens, suede materials and rough woolens emphasizing small patterns are the outstanding fabrics. There is a well founded suspicion that the smart costumes of late summer and early autumn will, to a great extent, limit large garish prints and confine themselves to daintier effects.

In line with the flared type of coat is an advanced frock style which very pointedly emphasizes flounced treatments. There is a definite return to the hemline flare and there is a continuance of the uneven hemline which has been largely confined to robes du soir during the current season. Bows and scarfs serve the dual purpose of diversifying and feminizing the neckline, while velvet vies with satin as the principal dress fabric.

On one silhouette point in both afternoon coats and dresses there is general agreement—the conforming hipline still persists. This is unchanged from its midseason versions and can safely be counted upon as one of the assured advanced fashion themes.

Elaborate Fabrics for Evening.

For evening fashions the trend has never before been so clearly toward extremely rich and elaborate fabrics. Indeed, if anywhere in the mode there is a premise upon which to base predictions of a return to Victorianism in dress it is in the mode du soir. Not since the halcyon days of the fin de siecle have fabrics been more rich, and if the modern gowns lack something of the heavy swishing luxury which belonged to their predecessors they are making up for that deficiency in a diversity of themes which is really unparalleled in fashion's history. It has usually been the case in evening wraps that when rich fabrics were employed the trimmings were comparatively simple. The current trend, however, takes no notice of precedent—it combines the richest of velvets and metallic brocades with the most luxuriant trimmings, and caps the climax with perhaps the addition of silver or blue fox at the collar, occasionally both.

Charming Embroidered Gown in Black and White for Evening Wear

Fur and Skirts.

There are two fashion points which are being rather closely observed in smart circles just now. Many of the most effective coats have either partially or entirely disposed of fur trimming and there has been some wonderment as to whether pelts will again be conspicuous by their paucity next autumn. The second point concerns the much mooted question of skirt length. Shall skirts be shorter, longer or the same next autumn? Indications point definitely to a return of fur trimmings applied quite as lavishly as in the past. Silver and blue fox right now are the leading candidates among the furs. As to skirt length, Paris fashion prophets do not hesitate to predict a further lengthening of the hemline. There will be nothing epoch making about the added length, which will probably not be more than one inch, but its significance is that it proves conclusively that the tide has turned in the turbulent history of the ever shortening hemline.

One must, very subtly to be sure, affect the fall themes, which are still in the embryo. And to discover those modes one must look to Paris—not anywhere in Paris, but in those places where the next season's mode is being definitely tried out. Mannequins at Longchamp and Auteuil, style fashionables at Deauville and St. Cloud—these are the first to test the public reactions to projected fashion motifs. And if you follow them closely you may attain some of that chic which otherwise would require the psychic talents of a clairvoyant.

Coral Is Imitated by Paris Exclusive Shops

Even coral is being imitated in Paris now, some of the latest ornaments shown at exclusive shops being woven or twisted chains of tiny imitation coral beads. The chains terminate in large knots of beads or a many forked branch of genuine coral.

Another recently introduced ornament is the choker collar of flat tened beads separated by gold disks. These collars usually are in deep coral red or jade green.

The turtle has become a pet motif for costume jewelry and small art objects. Turtle belt buckles, hat pins and ash trays are shown in the luxury shops.

VOGUE FOR THE PICTURESQUE BRINGS ORGANDIE INTO FAVOR

Now's the time to be having your picture taken or your portrait done in pastels, Miss Sweet Sixteen and Miss Debutante, while the adorable organdie gowns with their full skirts and quaint berthas are in fashion. What a lovely time designers of the costume beautiful are having with organdie this summer!

What with the revival of bouffant skirts and cunning berthas and enchanting colors and a demand for crisp outstanding fabrics, also it being midsummer, why it stands to reason that the sum total of all this picturesqueness should just naturally lead up to nothing less than that beloved of all beloved materials—organdie. This very thing is happening—organdie first and foremost in the minds of those who are fashioning our prettiest summer frocks.

One really does not have to serve as [illegible] to some one near and dear in order to be eligible to wear organdie, although it must be acknowledged that bridesmaids are pretty near cornering the organdie market. They wear organdie en masse, consuming yards and yards in the prettiest, quaintest, most picturesque costumes as have graced the fashion scene for many a year.

It seems that each organdie gown is a more entrancing color study than the one before. The dainty gown to the left in the picture is carried out in rose, pink and pale heliotrope organdie with trailing sprays of flowers and ribbons. It is worn with a heliotrope crinoline hat which is itself very transparent. A shaded chiffon scarf blends into the picture.

Speaking of organdie frocks, have you seen the hand-painted ones which are being shown in the most exclusive shops? Hedges of garden flowers accent hemlines and painting also adorns the capelets or fichus all of organdie.

The dress in the foreground of this picture happens to be made of indestructible chiffon voile, a material which shares honor with organdie this season. It would be very effective copied in organdie. The puritan collar is of lace and moire ribbon, matching the insets of the skirt.

MILADY'S CHOICEST LINGERIE IS HANDSOMELY LACE-LADEN

THAT simplicity is the best policy may apply to milady's daytime apparel, but it does not, this season, extend to her wear for slumberland and her dainty undergarments. While the practicality of tailored lingerie is recognized, and the well appointed wardrobe should always include a dependable supply, still when it comes to present prevailing sentiment, fancy is turning to underthings whose enchanting colors and enrichment of lace bespeak a super-loveliness.

As to the colors most in favor at the moment it seems as if certain shades of blue are in the lead, such as turquoise and the very new and popular lido blue. Nile green and peach are also well liked. Brides are mostly choosing either white, cream or some one or the other of the new pinks for their trousseau lingerie.

Not only is lace lending its beautifying presence to a generous degree, but it is most ingeniously employed. It refuses to confine itself to conventional yokes and hems, but inveigles itself into the scheme of things in most unexpected and whimsical ways.

In some instances the garment is so lacy that it almost if not quite becomes a half-and-half proposition of lace and material. There is a tendency to applique motifs of lace in an elaborate way, cutting out the material from underneath.

A new note is sounded in that deep ecru laces often take the place of the usual white or cream. These darker toned laces are employed not only for the pastel-colored garments, but they trim white as well. Especially effective are the ecru laces on white satin and this combination is proving popular for bridal sets.

The garments in this picture express the trend of the new lace trims. The nightrobe to the left is silk, while indestructible voile is the chosen material for the chemise combination. Each of these models accent the waistline.

The County Park System

In Friday's issue of the Record there appeared partially printed the annual report of the Union County Park Commission. The report itself is comprehensive and highly readable, and enough of it appeared in this newspaper to give the citizens and taxpayers justifiable cause to consider favorably the Park Commission, when, according to their treatise, they will come before the people of the county at the November election for another appropriation that is needed to further extend and develop the county park system.

A perusal of the report reveals some of the returns already obtained from the establishment of the park system. According to the Commission's report it is expected that the parks will pay for themselves, as parks in other counties have paid for themselves, because of increased valuations encouraged by their development. The report shows that this expectation is actually coming true; for the increase in valuations near the parks as compared with other sections is greatest.

Quoting from the report we have the following on the Commission's general policy: "The development of a park system in Union County is based on the fact that the greater part of this county is now destined to be the future residential area. This is due to the attractive topography of the county and its proximity to the metropolis of New York. As the county develops and the number of homes increases, the existing open spaces and wood areas will disappear so that it is most essential to acquire new lands necessary for park and recreational purposes commensurate with the ultimate requirements. This is one of the main objects of the Union County Park Commission."

The completion of the plans for park development will affect the entire county. Though the people at the last general election failed to approve the appropriation asked for by the Park Commission, in our opinion did not reflect their attitude toward the creation of a park system benefiting every section of Union County, but rather was influenced by extenuating circumstances existing prior to Election Day. The impression was abroad that did the request of the Park Commission for an appropriation of an additional $1,500,000 pass favorably it would greatly handicap the Board of Freeholders in carrying to completion certain road and other necessities as planned and anticipated.

It is our view that the people of Union County are for parks and mean that they shall be acquired and developed under a reasonable and sane program that will not jeopardize the other interests that our county is pledged to maintain. The Record has always favored a park program for city and county, but at the same time we must recognize that it must not unduly restrict or paralyze other equally necessary, and in many particulars more indispensable things than parks.

Aside from increased land valuations by creation and maintenance of such parks there are other inestimable benefits derived by the various communities adjoining the park system. It makes more than we often think for the health of the people, by providing places for recreation. It makes for law and order by providing places where people, especially the young, can find innocent pleasure in sports and games, and thus be saved from the temptations which would beset them elsewhere.

We should not overlook, either, the value of the parks in their abolition of swamps and their preservation of forest growth. Considerable areas of swamp land, the prolific breeding places of mosquitoes, will be drained or filled up, transformed into lawns or groves, or perhaps scooped out and made into lakes. And hundreds of acres of woodland will be preserved or created, which otherwise would be destroyed or left unplanted, forming an inestimably precious asset of Union County.

Last, but by far not the least, Rahway folks are intensely interested, and Rahway vitally affected by the present status of the park situation. Though the voters registered in the negative at the time of turning down the Park Commissioners' request for an additional appropriation, yet the verdict was brought about by local circumstances calling for excessive expenditures in conjunction with the sum asked by the county system. We all want to see the local section of this great network completed. What has already been accomplished has keenly edged our appetites for more.

Along the Lincoln Highway extensive development of the Rahway River Parkway has been in progress on the area formerly known as the Poor Farm. A large section of this land, formerly swampy and used for a rubbish dump, is now covered by a lake which, during its first winter season, attracted thousands of skaters.

Although this section of the parkway is far from completed, a temporary field house, baseball and soccer field have been in use by the public for the past year. Other recreational facilities planned for this unit include a regulation athletic field with a quarter-mile track, several playfields, boating and bathing and the necessary buildings.

A pretty picture to visualize and one of inestimable importance to the future of our city. But one thing the voters must realize, these transformations cannot be brought about without the expenditure of large sums of money; neither can the Park Commissioners move in further development of the park system unless the taxpayers, by the use of the ballot vote in the affirmative at the time additional appropriation is asked for by the Commissioners.

Fighting Blindness

The National Society for the Prevention of Blindness, of which Chief Justice Taft is Honorary President, is able to report "remarkable progress" in its twenty years of struggle and triumph. Of triumphs the greatest is that ophthalmia neonatorum, "babies' sore eyes," as a cause of blindness among those admitted to schools for the blind is now 64 percent less than in 1908. By universal adoption of prophylactic treatment it might be completely eliminated. Most States now require such treatment.

Sight-saving classes for threatened children have in consequence of the society's urgings been established in eighty cities of eighteen States. But more than ten times as many such classes are needed for pupils of little vision. Trachoma is much more intractable, but the researches of Noguchi and others are enabling physicians to get a strangle-hold upon it. And while it remains true that 15 percent of the 100,000 blind men and women in the country lost their sight by industrial hazards, there remains in that direction a fertile field for reform.

The Mirror of Vice Conditions

Since the major political parties held their conventions much talk has been heard relative to the probable return of the old-time saloon. Many conscientious souls are deeply sympathetic and some souls not so conscientious but fearful of the blighting influence of these old-time hell holes, [illegible] and human debauchery, lest they again curse the community. Rahwayans are not unacquainted with saloon conditions, this city had its full share in the "good old days," to the tune of three of them at a four-cornered street intersection. It doesn't require a very vivid imagination to picture existing conditions under such circumstances.

Few persons desire the return of the saloon as the saloon was operated before the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment, when a license could be obtained by practically any man who had a few hundred dollars and was willing to agree to purchase his supply of beer from a particular brewery. But bad as many of the saloons were, they did less harm than do the unlicensed and unsupervised road-houses which are to be found in every section of New Jersey.

Operated as restaurants, and dispensaries of soda water, ginger ale and lemonade, practically all of these road-houses either deal in intoxicating beverages, or permit their patrons to bring intoxicants with them, and most of the places transact their principal business after dark.

In the report of the Committee of Fourteen on vice conditions in New York City, night clubs and speakeasies are blamed for a condition worse than that under the Raines law, twenty years ago, which the committee was organized to reform. This perennial evil is as rampant as ever and more of a menace because it has been "cloaked with respectability." The report tears off this cloak.

No one, not even the least sophisticated, has thought the night clubs were Sunday schools, but it is a good thing to have their real character, and that of their hostesses, publicly revealed. The "hostess" is portrayed as the same character as the old-time "rustler who worked in bars on a commission basis"; the night club and dance hall as the equivalent of the back-room of the old saloon.

Police Commissioner Warren, although commended by the committee for "the courageous manner in which he is dealing with the many difficult conditions" that confront him, denies that the situation is as black as the report paints it. Such denials are usual. George E. Worthington, general secretary of the committee, stands by the report, insisting that commercialized vice is on the gain. The reason, he says, is that speak-easies, facing the rapid multiplication of such places, has been forced by competition to add girls to the drinks.

But while we are commenting upon vice conditions in the metropolis and along our State highways, we must not loose sight of the fact that our own city has similar problems to solve. Alleged conditions here are none too creditable, and probably if the searchlight of publicity was thrown pitilessly upon these "under cover scummers" revelations would jar our sensitiveness beyond expectation.

While several sporadic attempts have been made to "weed out" in certain sections of the city, with a measure of success, yet the arm of the law seems to fall upon the smaller places. Any effort put forth is most commendable, but the pity of attempt to dislodge the "friendless," and give the other fellows the pass-over, acts more as encouragement than a deterrent. There cannot be any let-up in the fight against this evil. Let us hope and demand that those who are responsible for the government of our own city see the necessity of keeping vice from getting out of hand.

The Spirit of "Take-a-chance"

To anyone reading the disastrous news of the Fourth of July holiday without observing its black record of neglected foresight and the deadly spirit of "take-a-chance," would seem really strange. While the long list of fireworks injuries which July 5 brought in previous years is happily abated, yet its place was taken this year by disasters of the weather—capsized boats, crowds injuring their human units by jamming thousands into space suitable for hundreds when rain made the streets uncomfortable, all the scores of other misfortunes that happen when too many people get caught in storms. The point is that very few of these difficulties were necessary.

The "New York Tribune" in commenting on that city's toll of death and injuries, resultant from causes cited above, says: "Twenty-four hours ahead the Weather Bureau forecast thunder storms. The weather of Wednesday afternoon was as typically 'thunder-storm weather' as we have ever seen in this neighborhood. The storm that broke over Manhattan in the late afternoon approached slowly. Ample warning was visible at least a half hour before it arrived. Anyone who was caught in Wednesday's storms, as literally millions were caught, some of them so disastrously, was guilty of inexcusable failure to perceive what the weather was about to do."

Treating the above tendency locally, we have on several occasions observed the baseball crowds at Riverside Park under prospective downpours, giving ample warning of approach, yet affecting to no noticeable degree those witnessing the game. Not until the heavens open do they run for shelter, "every fellow for himself and the devil take the hindermost." It has its humorous side but most certainly illustrates the utter lack of caution which should predominate.

One of the inexplicable habits of these days is to take the weather as inexorable. Mark Twain reminded us that nobody does anything about it, and everybody seems to have taken this to mean that nobody can do anything. Our hardier ancestors were less pessimistic. Not a farmer or merchant or sailor of a hundred years ago but had his weather eye well trained and used it. Would one of those homely weather observers of less well housed decades have been caught unawares in boat or on beach by Wednesday's storms? Not a bit of it. Life was then too dangerous in other ways for anybody to take chances with perils so easily foreseen.

Together with the abandonment by us moderns of arts like the curing of meat or the spinning of homespun there seem to have been abandoned other arts less easily replaced. One of them is that of guessing the weather. When General Greely introduced the instrumental methods of weather observation which grew into the present Weather Bureau he added a useful chapter to science, but he seems to have killed something else perhaps equally valuable. Those old-fashioned individuals who knew the lore of cloud and wind and were not as skillful forecasters for the country as are the present scientists, but they may have been equally good forecasters for themselves. It might be worth while for all of us to practice watching the sky.

Campaign Manager Work says the tariff will be the chief campaign issue. Heavens! Haven't they settled that question yet?

At this distance, Japan's status in China appears to be that of a holding company.

Minister Turns Taxi Driver; Says Humanity Far From Sinless Goal

(From New York World)

The Rev. Thomas H. Whelpley, pastor of the Chelsea Presbyterian Church drove a taxi for two weeks in order to get material for his sermons. And the first sermon he preached on his experiences went, in part, as follows:

"I didn't know it was possible to learn so much in so short a time as I have in the two weeks in which I stepped down from the pulpit and climbed into the cabby's seat. I have witnessed the tragedy of the unobserved in this great city. Men and women in all walks of life who, looking this way and that, seeing no one they know and believing themselves unobserved, commit murder, theft and adultery.

They live, move and have their being by one commandment: 'Don't get caught; take what you want, buddy; it's coming to you, but don't get caught. Go as far as you like, girlie, the sky's the limit, but don't get caught.' Millions of faces stream past the cab, but not one face they know. The sound of many voices, but not one voice they know. God is a long way from Gotham town.

Behind the steering-wheel of my taxicab I have gone with the crowds to their night-clubs, their gambling dens, their houses of ill-fame, their hall bedrooms, their duplex Park Avenue apartments and their wretched holes on the lower East Side. Tired to death, tormented by nameless fears, keyed to the breaking-point, they look this way and that, and, seeing no man they yield to temptation. After dark they walk the sidewalks of New York. They hail a taxi. 'Drive us up to the Speedway, buddy; and, say, turn the lights out back here.'"

Well, we have observed taxicabs in this city for a great many years, and ridden in them, and talked with their drivers. And most of their business, we had concluded, came from people who wanted one thing and one thing only—to get from one place to another place. The haul we have noticed, housewives who have been shopping and who have heavy bundles to take home, business men who have appointments to meet, vacation seekers who are bound for trains in the Pennsylvania and Grand Central, runners on their way to Olympic tryouts, couples on their way to be married at the City Hall—in short, all sorts of people. And of course they haul some people who do not look so very innocent.

But when a man turns taxi driver it is highly probable that he will see what he is looking for. That the Rev. Mr. Whelpley from his cabby's seat saw Sin speaks volumes for what the Rev. Mr. Whelpley has his eyes on.

Reported Increase Liable In Auto Insurance Rates

(From Interboro Review)

It is reported that automobile insurance rates are to be boosted again because juries have been so liberal in their awards in damage suits. And an insurance expert has been quoted to the effect that drivers are less careful when insured.

It is difficult to believe that an insured motorist is more willing to risk life and limb because of being protected against pecuniary loss than one who is not insured. But if he is, laws can be so drafted as to make it difficult or impossible for reckless drivers to secure insurance at all, thus automatically ruling them off the highways.

The purpose of compulsory insurance now contemplated in some States is to assure that persons who cause automobile accidents shall be financially responsible for the damage they cause. In hundreds of cases the injured persons bring suit only to find the defendants have neither insurance nor property. And it is usually the man of no property who carries neither property damage nor public liability insurance on his car.

If compulsory insurance is not the best plan, it is up to motorists to show why and present a better plan. Meanwhile experimentation is shedding light on the problem.

The Wife Big and Muscular With an UnControllable Temper

(From Elizabeth Times)

Here's a man who is afraid of his wife, and he is frank enough to say so. That, in itself, sets him apart from ordinary men. He lives in a town called Owosso (which may or may not add to his distinction).

Anyway, in seeking a divorce, he told a judge that his wife "is big and muscular and has an uncontrollable temper." To prove this he cited an incident wherein she flew into a rage and bit a chunk out of his arm as big as a half-dollar." On another occasion, he says, she stripped him of his clothes and burned them.

One of the main standbys of the jokesmiths is the little guy who marries an amazon. But this man can't see anything funny about it.

Another favorite topic of the fun manufacturers is the big fellow who is afraid of a small wife, such as Jiggs in the comic papers. There isn't anything funny in that, either.

We sympathize with both men, as we did with the lion tamer, who was sued by his wife, mixed into a cage of beasts fresh from the jungle. "Come out of there, you coward!" she demanded.

The trouble is there are not enough lion cages about.

STAFF INCREASED

The State Council Knights of Columbus Boys Camp at Culvers Lake has just added to the staff of experts in camp-craft two experienced directors in horsemanship and aviation. These new activities will be supervised by William A. Markey of Bloomfield and Harold Lofstedt of Jersey City respectively. Camp Director Eugene F. McVeigh has found it necessary to increase the staff in order to take care of the increased number of campers at Camp Columbus. There are now [illegible] boys at the Culver Lake camp site, most of whom are registered for the rest of the season.

Father Joseph Lenihan who is in charge of the spiritual welfare of the camp reports that there is a one hundred percent attendance at daily Mass and [illegible] reception of the Holy Eucharist is [illegible].

Camp Columbus is open to any Catholic boy in New Jersey between the ages of 11 and 16. Reservations may be made at the Newark Headquarters, [illegible] street, Newark, N. J.

Telephone Agent Aids In Three Emergencies

Her third outstanding service in the course of everyday telephone work was rendered [illegible] by Mrs. Adelia Rogers, agent of the New Jersey Bell Telephone Company at Farmingdale, when through use of her facilities and wits she was able to discover the address of a former resident, a Major Landley, in time to get him to the bedside of his dying sister.

About a year before, Mrs. Rogers hurried a doctor to a home in time to alleviate the suffering of a woman seriously burned by paraffin while canning fruit. Months earlier than that, she heard a man's gasp over the telephone, promptly sent a physician, and the man was revived from a heart attack.

TELEPHONE LINEMAN SAVES TRIO FROM BURNING AUTO

The quick thinking and presence of mind of Construction Lineman J. Mead, of the New Jersey Bell Telephone Company, probably averted a fatality in an automobile accident between Toms River and Lakewood recently.

Mead, returning home to Toms River, was passed by a speeding automobile. A few minutes later an acquaintance stopped him on the road with word that a car had overturned about a mile and a half down the road and was burning.

When Mead reached the wreck a small boy had just crawled through a window. A man, a woman and a small girl were still inside of the burning machine. Reaching in, Mead pulled the woman and girl to safety through a window, then freed the man by first pushing him back into the car, then clearing the seats away and pulling him, feet first, through the window.

Being a Telephone man, Mead noticed that the burning car was directly under the Lakewood-Toms River cable, so with the aid of others who had come up, pushed it away. The fire had already caught dry grass and was fast approaching a woods, so as a good citizen, Mead at once summoned the Toms River Fire Department.

PALESTINE'S TELEPHONES

The use of the telephone for both private and commercial purposes is growing rapidly in Palestine in the rural as well as in the urban districts. On January 1, 1926, there were 2,226 telephones in the country, as compared with only [illegible] in July, 1921.

There were 31 central exchanges in Palestine and most of the important towns and villages were linked together by over 6,925 miles of telephone wire. During the year 1925 there were more than [illegible] telephone calls.

Puzzles Parliamentarians

When a parliamentary standing committee in London, England, was considering the national health insurance bill they were considerably perturbed by the introduction of the word "eleemosynary" in Clause 4, referring to "donations or subscriptions of an eleemosynary character" and a dictionary definitely had to be called for.

BUSINESS TALKS

[illegible]

Almost with no exception it may be found that a town has just about as good a newspaper as it deserves, sometimes [illegible] than it deserves.

In this connection a quotation from a recent address by James O'Shaughnessy, executive secretary of the American Association of Advertising Agencies is to the point. In the light of his many years of experience in dealing with newspapers he says:

"I have been widely quoted as saying that the village weekly newspaper is the cornerstone of American journalism. No one has disputed that assertion. Modern communities, large or small, grow and prosper in the wake of their newspaper. If it's prosperous, retail, business prospers and real estate appreciates in value."

Taking the Blue Out of Monday

By RING LARDNER

To the Editor:

I don't know how it is around different parts of the country but out our way [illegible] is all worried about [illegible] on the sleeping beauty's down at Washington and slips another dose of [illegible] poison to the boys that [illegible] to their ft. when the band plays the land of the free.

A few of the boys takes the proposition like a joke and say they won't nothing come of it, that the Master Minds that makes our laws will knock this one for a row of rhubarb. Well they said the same thing in regards to prohibition but you can drive your flivver up and down Main St. all day [illegible] days without getting side swiped by no beer truck.

The boys might as well get it in their bean that the new law will go through like it was playing Yale and in a few more weeks old Mr. Monday [illegible] because it meant to go to work will be a [illegible] with people waking up full of pep and slapping 1 another on the back and hollering merry Monday and many of them.

Personally I haven't saw no draft of the statue but they tell me it provides for everybody to go to church and as far as that is concerned why they might just as well because it [illegible] no Sunday paper [illegible] dance or go ride [illegible] or shoot craps [illegible] with penalty [illegible] 30 days to a couple of [illegible] in the electric easy chair.

Well friends when this comes they's just 2 ways [illegible]. You can pack your [illegible] and night gown and move to Paris [illegible] stay here and obey the law or break it. Now [illegible] many books and songs has been wrote about the [illegible] of gay Paree I [illegible] so as I would advise [illegible] even after the Master Minds passes the next amendment [illegible] after [illegible] provide that [illegible] have [illegible].

As for [illegible] they's no [illegible] unless you also [illegible] spirit of the law is to see that everybody has a [illegible] yourself including [illegible] easy as it sounds [illegible] of my readers [illegible] ideal program [illegible] follows:

Surf Bathing—Fill the bath tub with water and pour ½ bbl. of salt in it. Then you and the wife and [illegible] suit and get in. You duck them and they squeal.

Baseball—Set on the ironing board and keep hollering, "That a boy."

Funny Papers—Your wife gets in bed and you pretend like it's 2 A. M. and you are just getting home. She says where have you been. You say you been to a lodge meeting. She breaks off a bed post and hits you over the head with it. You say "Bam."

So-Called Trial Marriage Really Poor Imitation of the Real Thing

By DR. NATHAN KRASS, New York Rabbi.

MARRIAGE is one of the oldest of human institutions. It dates back to prehistoric times. It was not in its earliest stages, as many people erroneously believe, merely a convention, but rather rooted in universal and eternal value. Matrimony was not a mere bargain or an experiment in sociology or a frivolous, ephemeral union. It was a tie that bound not only physically but spiritually. Throughout the ages, marriage has undergone all sorts of changes. Varieties of matrimonial experiments are recorded in the pages of man's progress through the centuries.

Some of the suggested modern substitutes were tried long ago. The idea of companionate marriage, with particular stress on mutual consent to dissolve the union, was also known in ancient Roman days. Trial marriage and free love were tried in days gone by. Yet, these substitutes for traditional marriage have taken on the color of the present age and have added to the social problem features derivative of the modern environment.

The highest conception of marriage is reached in the realm of religion, which not only dignifies wedlock but invests it with divine sanction. Religion divests marriage of purely selfish considerations and lifts it to the high plane of co-operative responsibility.

While happiness is a great desideratum, it was never made the cornerstone of the matrimonial structure. To make personal pleasure the foundation of marriage, to discard the doctrine of responsibility, to evade grave duty, is not to clothe marriage with high significance.

Like all human institutions, marriage is imperfect. Its flaws and defects, its shortcomings and disillusionments, do not, by and large, outweigh its positive values for good. Marriage is the plinth of human society, and no unit has as yet been discovered that surpasses the family

IRATE FATHER HALTS ROMANCE OF GYPSIES

Chief Is Nabbed on Charge of Kidnaping.

Albany, N. Y.—A modern day gypsy trail, followed none the less skillfully or relentlessly because it led over paved roads through cities and towns instead of over woodland paths, ended near here in East Greenbush recently when John Demitro, gypsy chief, was arraigned before Justice of the Peace Horton, charged with kidnaping thirteen-year-old Rose Thompson, vivacious dark-eyed daughter of Wanda Thompson, gypsy tribal leader of Bridgeport, Conn.

Demitro was arrested at his camp by four state troopers from G troop barracks in Troy and taken to the Rensselaer county jail while a hundred tribesmen, their eyes blazing with wrath, looked on, hesitating to make any openly hostile gesture toward the four troopers.

Rose, who was found in Demitro's roadside camp, was turned over to her father, who had been following the trail of Demitro's band ever since March 1 in the search for his daughter. He took her back with him to the house in which he is temporarily staying here and a few moments later two truckloads of gypsies from Demitro's camp disembarked menacingly in front of the house.

Detectives Avert Violence.

Before anything could happen, however, four Albany detectives appeared and ordered the Demitro faction to move on. Their order was reluctantly obeyed and the Thompson followers breathed an evident sigh of relief. Two private detectives guarded them the rest of the night.

The story of the events that preceded the arrest, being concerned entirely with gypsy jealousies and customs, is characteristically confused. From statements made here by Thompson and advices received from Bridgeport, however, it appears that Thompson is the leader of a gypsy band that was quartered in a house in South Main street in Bridgeport last winter while Demitro's band lived in a house on State street.

According to the story received from Bridgeport, Demitro's wife became ill in February and Thompson consented to let his daughter go to Demitro's house to nurse her. Thompson then went to New York to arrange for opening some concession booths in Starlight Amusement park, the Bronx. When he returned March 1 Demitro's band was gone and so was Rose. Thompson traced them to North Adams, Mass., over the Taconic mountains into New York and finally came to Albany and enlisted the aid of Assistant District Attorney David A. Wanger.

Asserts He Bought Girl.

Demitro asserted here, however, that in accordance with gypsy custom he had paid Thompson $1,500 for Rose to make her the bride of his fourteen year-old son, John, Jr., and it was noticed that as she left the Demitro camp Rose cast a lingering look back at a young boy who remained behind in the camp.

"What would you do?" Thompson exclaimed, when asked about the transaction. "I good American citizen. No want gypsy marriage for my girl. Want good American marriage. Take out third papers for citizen. I fight John Demitro but it was not because $1,500 was too little for my Rose. I want the Rose to have good American law marriage."

Demitro is held without bail pending extradition proceedings which are being started in Bridgeport.

Norway's Idle Ships May Get an Indemnity

Copenhagen.—One of the greatest problems in the Scandinavian countries is the ever increasing number of idle ships.

Admittedly, says the Scandinavian Shipping Gazette, is Norway worse off in this respect. Proportionately she has more ships laid up than any other nation in the world. Denmark and Sweden also are hard hit and every week brings sorry tidings of further laying up of tonnage.

The latest relief theory is an organized laying up scheme in connection with a mutual insurance system paying indemnity on a fixed scale to owners of idle ships. It is of Norwegian origin and has won recognition among Norwegian owners, but must have international co-operation. From a Scandinavian point of view all such theoretical projects, even if carried through, are mere makeshifts, providing no sound basis for existence or growth of a national merchant marine.

Shipping men say world tonnage is much bigger than the demand, and that it is idle to dream of better conditions for a long time.

Phosphate Taken From Caves to Enrich Farms

Vienna.—Phosphate deposits in mountain caves, the product of long centuries of habitation by swallows, bats and other animals, have been opened to exploitation for use in Europe's grain fields. Three notable caves have lately been explored, according to Franz Kirnbauer, an engineer resident in Rumania. These are the Dragon's cave and the Czoklovina cave in Austria and Minerva cave in France.

The first two have already yielded 25,000 tons of phosphate earth. The latter, estimated to contain 120,000 tons, has not yet been exploited.

Battery Fluid Composed Mostly of Cornstarch

Giving special emphasis to the ineffectiveness of battery "dopes" and patented mixtures which are alleged to "charge batteries, reduce internal resistance, remove sulphation, prevent freezing," the National Better Business bureau has issued its annual report concerning its activities in the battery field.

After stating that the outstanding battery "dope" coming to the bureau's attention during the past year was composed essentially of cornstarch, the report points out that the advertisers of battery compounds generally are not making the blanket claims for their product which was the custom several years ago. Many no longer claim that their compound will "charge batteries."

The report details at some length the co-operation which legitimate battery manufacturers have given the national bureau. In connection with the advertising of so-called "eliminators" the work of the bureau is of particular interest. Early in 1927, advertisers were offering products of varying construction without differentiating their merchandise from competitive units in any manner. It was the practice to describe these units as A and B "battery eliminators" and to point to the many disadvantages of batteries and battery-operated radio sets.

In a recent survey 50 advertisers described their units in accordance with the bureau's recommendations and only seven used the negative term "eliminator."

Educating New Owners of Radio-Receiving Sets

In the selection of a radio set many features must be considered. There are many trick contrivances on the market, but, basically, the modern receiver is constructed in two general classes—that is, it uses two fundamental circuits—the tuned radio-frequency, with detector and audio amplification, and the superheterodyne. The former is designed for employing an outside aerial, the latter for an inside or loop aerial. Before choosing either type, take into consideration the conditions pertaining to location. Apartment dwellers, as a rule, are not permitted the advantages of an outdoor antenna. Many of them resort to an indoor aerial, running along the picture molding of a room. The wiser ones choose a straight loop. In connection with a superheterodyne circuit. Most of the standard sets are now built for sensitivity and selectivity. These words are not mysterious. Sensitivity relates to the ability of the set to pick up weak signals. Selectivity relates to their separation to avoid receiving more than one station at a time, and also to avoid the clashing of signals from stations whose wave lengths are closely allocated. Both these attributes make for quality, but, of course, the general tone of a radio set depends much on the type of loud speaker.

Things to Know About Life of "C" Battery

The question of the necessity for replacing the "C" battery in a receiver when the others are no longer useful often arises. In this connection there is one important thing to keep in mind, that the "C" battery is used to prevent the flow of grid current, which means that there is no current drawn from the battery. The useful life of the battery is, therefore, equal to its "shelf life," or the life it would have if it were not used at all. The life of the battery is independent of the number of tubes used in the receiver. The shelf life depends primarily on the size of the cells. For this reason the high-voltage batteries used to bias the power tube have to be replaced more frequently than those used to bias the radio-frequency amplifier.

Electrical Apparatus Leaks Cause of Static

A leak in electrical apparatus in the home, such as furnace or ice box control, irons, electric heaters, warming pads, violet ray machines, vacuum cleaners, fans, washing machines, etc., whether resulting from broken insulation or a bad contact, may result in spark production with a consequent broadcasting of high frequency waves. In many instances this condition can be remedied if a by-pass condenser is connected across the contacters. These condensers are fairly small in the case of devices requiring minute currents, but they are silencers that function instantly and unfailingly.

Blind to Get Radio Sets

Blind people of the entire United States are to receive, through the American Foundation for the Blind, 500 radio sets which have been contributed by the Crosley Radio corporation.

Railroads Using Sets

Experiments were recently carried out with an eight-tube receiver aboard a Southern railway train in England. With the use of two electric phonograph amplifiers, the results were said to be fairly successful.

Insulin From Fish

Insulin, the specific in that dread disease, diabetes, is obtained from the angler fish. The angler, or "fishing frog," tempts its prey by means of a long spine proceeding from the top of its head, and baited, like a fishing rod, with a blob of meaty matter dangling at its top.

An average of about 2,650,000 telephone calls a day are handled over the Bell System lines in the state of New Jersey.

Three Rahwayans on Staff At County Camp Endeavor

On Tuesday, July 10, ninety youngsters and three mothers, composing the first group to be entertained for a fortnight at Camp Endeavor were taken to camp via special buses. They were mainly from Elizabeth and vicinity. A happy lot of youngsters they were, some at Camp for the first time looking forward to the fine times predicted by those who had been up in former years. Those familiar with the good things in store for them were eager to enjoy the playground and wondering how soon they could swim in the pool. With the fine outdoor air and healthy exercise, it wasn't long before appetites began to grow to such proportions that only a hearty meal could appease them. This was provided in due time by the camp caretaker and chef, Mr. Van Fleet.

The running of the camp is in the able experienced hands of Jesse Lounsbury, of Plainfield. Miss Mildred Stevens, of Roselle, is the superintendent. She is ably assisted by the Misses Helen Squier, Marian George and Elsie Ulbrich, all of Rahway.

The regular daily program of the camp, which begins at 6:30 a. m., and ends at 8:30 p. m. with a vesper service of song, is one well suited to the youngsters needs with it's good meals, organized play, swimming, hiking and, etc. There are frequent special events to enliven the stay at camp. Thursday night it was a marshmallow roast. Saturday afternoon, the Christian Endeavor Society of the Central Baptist Church, of Elizabeth, went up to stage a party for the campers. Many games were run off and stories told in the early part of the program, which was happily completed with lollypops, punch and refreshments. The party seemed all too brief to the youngsters so keen was their pleasure.

Sundays a special order is observed for the day. In the morning a church service is held, Miss Stevens leading. Walter O. Anderson, of Elizabeth, was the special speaker for last Sunday. He spoke about Paul's conversion, which was the Sunday School topic for the day.

In the afternoon, the C. E. society from the Roselle Presbyterian church conducted the meeting. Dr. Herbert K. England gave an instructive talk about spiders. Miss Grace Klein spoke about ghosts, and led up to the story of David and Goliath. Miss Jean McDowell acted as the leader of the meeting which included singing as well as the talks.

This gives in brief a fair idea of the plans that are being worked out by the management of the camp, for the care of the County's most needy children.

Governors of Jersey, Pennsylvania Converse Over 600,000th Telephone

The 600,000th telephone in New Jersey, representative at once of the growth of a great state and one of its most important industries, was installed in the office of Governor A. Harry Moore at Trenton on the last day of May, and the occasion was marked by a call from the Governor to Governor Fisher of Pennsylvania.

Governor Moore called Governor Fisher to tell him that the New Jersey Bell Telephone Company had installed its 600,000th telephone, and that the growth of the telephone system "means a great deal to our industrial and commercial world."

Part of what Governor Moore meant by the importance of the telephone in New Jersey is disclosed in the statement that, although only three states in the country are as small in area as ours, only ten of the forty-eight has as many or more telephones. There are more telephones in New Jersey now than on the entire continents of South America and Africa, with half of Italy included. Almost 3,000,000 calls a day are being made on the telephone here, using enough wire to reach to the moon and back more than five times.

Governor Moore converses with Governor Fisher of Pennsylvania over 600,000th telephone in New Jersey, installed in the executive offices.

DEATH FROM HEART DISEASE ON GAIN

Emotional Strain of Modern Life Blamed

London.—The mental and emotional strain of modern life is mainly responsible for the 400 per cent increase in deaths from heart disease in Great Britain and other countries, in the opinion of Dr. J. Strickland Goodall, London cardiologist and physician.

"While the death rate from cancer has increased rather less than 25 per cent, that from heart disease has increased nearly 400 per cent," Doctor Goodall informed members of the Institute of Hygiene.

"The form in which we take our pleasure," he asserted, "is a direct inversion of nature's demands for adequate rest."

The habits of visiting night clubs, drinking cocktails and smoking excessively were listed by Doctor Goodall among the destructive pleasures. He further maintained that "the emotional character of modern plays, novels and films, with their appeals to the baser passions inevitably tends to overstrain, with results which are reflected in the enormously increased number of deaths from heart disease."

These deaths are occurring at an earlier age than formerly, Doctor Goodall reported. Whereas a few years ago the common age of sudden death was between fifty and sixty years, an analysis of recent deaths had disclosed that "the age is becoming much less."

The physician recalled that 12 persons died suddenly in the United States while listening to the running account of the Tunney-Dempsey fight in Chicago, and that seven of these succumbed when Tunney was floored in the seventh round. He attributed all to emotional strain.

A critical investigation of thousands of cases of sudden death shows, said Doctor Goodall, that most of them are due to arterio-sclerosis, or hardening of the arteries, a disease often caused by hard physical work, mental strain and emotion.

Origin Lost

There are various explanations of the origin of the phrase "to learn by heart." Centuries ago the heart was regarded as the seat of emotions. That which one learned by heart was usually something which made an especial appeal. In other words, one greatly wished to retain the memory of it. The heart was thought to be involved in the process.

MAY EMPLOY WARDEN TO ABATE NUISANCE

Dog Catcher Exclusively for Rahway Thought Necessary

A local dog warden will probably be hired by the City of Rahway as the result of a conference Wednesday night of Councilman A. C. Feakes and Samuel D. Love and a committee of the Rahway Branch of the S. P. C. A. The new warden will be paid by the city and will work under the direction of the local branch of the S. P. C. A. which will buy a gas tank in which unwanted animals will be killed.

The tank will be located on city property near the new incinerator with a dog pound. With all things pointing toward cooperation between the city and the S. P. C. A. as a result of the conference, it is expected the streets will be cleared, in due time, of the large number of canines that no body will take care of.

Wednesday's was the outcome of the S. P. C. A.'s request that the tank which they were determined to purchase be located on city property. At the next meeting of the Common Council Councilman Feakes will introduce the necessary resolutions or ordinances to carry out the plans agreed upon.

President Miss May H. Macann and Miss Marie T. Bristor, chairman of the gas tank committee headed the group representing the S. P. C. A.

Board of Health Seeks To Curb River Swimming

Much time at the meeting of the Board of Health Tuesday night was spent discussing the situation created by swimming in Jackson's Pond, Clark Township, less than a mile above the intake of the Rahway Municipal Water Plant. Although many ways were suggested to keep people out of the water, none of them seemed practicable, and no solution to the question was found.

Edward D. Savage, owner of the pond, could put a stop to the swimming if he would, but he won't, according to President Robert K. Miller, of the water board, and Health Inspector Fred Williams. Savage has been approached by Mayor Herman Graves, of Clark Township, also, who gives an account of the interview in a letter published in the Record today. Savage has offered to sell the pond to the water board as a storage basin but the board rejected his offer.

That the lake in County park property adjacent to Lincoln Highway might be thrown open to bathers, thus giving them another place to go, was suggested. It was pointed out that New Jersey has no law prohibiting swimming in potable waters. Clark Township, it is understood, may adopt an ordinance prohibiting bathing where there are not bath houses, a measure which might relieve the condition.

Inspector Williams reported Tuesday night that he visited the pond before the meeting and found close to 500 bathing there. This figure is frequently exceeded.

Nurse Service Discussed

Coordination of the work of the four municipal nurses will be sought and it was tentatively agreed that changes would be made at the end of the year so that all people, especially those most in need of the service, will be reached.

Miss Anna Dugan was appointed part-time child hygiene nurse to succeed Mrs. Katherine Mankman, resigned. She will work three days a week in Rahway and the balance of the week in another municipality.

The other three nurses are Mrs. Anna S. Kilsby, full-time child hygiene nurse, Miss Margaret Whitcraft, of the Rahway Visiting Nurse Association, a part of whose salary is paid by the city and Miss Clara Chapin, school nurse, paid by the Board of Education.

The vital statistics report of Health Officer Fred M. Williams showed during the past month twenty-four marriages, twenty births, twelve deaths and one stillbirth. The causes of death were: Pneumonia, two; tuberculosis, chronic nephritis, Caesarean section, encephalitis lethargia, influenza, chronic myocarditis, [illegible] cardiac dilatation, senility, one each.

The report showed there is not now a single case of contagious disease in the city. Diseases reported during June were: Measles, nineteen, scarlatina, two, chickenpox, three.

The report of Child Hygine Nurse Mrs. Kilsby showed 314 home visits, with 601 now on visiting list, including thirty-seven expectant mothers, 130 babies under one year and 437 pre-school children. Mrs. Monkman reported ninety home visits, with eighty-nine now on visiting list. Bills amounting to $4127 were ordered paid.

President Dr. George L. Orton was in charge of the meeting. Other officers present were: Commissioner Francis J. Hatley, William A. Ransom, Health Officer Williams.

IDENTIFY DROWNED MAN AS RAILROAD EMPLOYEE

Body Shipped to Brockton, Mass., Where He Had Bank Account

What is regarded as positive identification of the body found floating in the Rahway River near the Lawrence street bridge Sunday afternoon was made Tuesday night as a result of the alertness of Lieutenant James Crahan. The body is believed to be that of Adam Satkowsky, a laborer from the Pennsylvania Railroad camp who had not been seen since Friday night, July 13.

Crahan was approached by William Flagner, camp clerk, who was in search of a truck and its driver missing since [illegible] Tuesday afternoon. Crahan mentioned the drowned man and Flagner replied with the statement that Satkowsky had been missing for some time. Crahan urged him to view the body at Pettit's funeral home. He did so, identified it and then sent six other men from the camp to support the identification.

Police are now seeking relatives of Satkowsky at Mantello, Mass. A letter arrived at the camp Tuesday for Satkowsky, from T. Satkowsky, 50 Emerson avenue, Mantello, Mass., who is believed to be a brother of the deceased. The letter was postmarked Brockton, Mass. It was written in Polish and the police will secure its translation.

The body remains at the funeral home pending the outcome of efforts to get in touch with relatives.

Word was received Wednesday night by Captain James Thompson to have the remains of Alexander Satkowsky taken by the National Casket Association to Undertaker Simpson, of Brockton, Mass. The deceased had $4,000 in a Brockton bank.

HERE 'N' THERE WITH RAHWAY BOY SCOUTS

On Monday, Troop 40 held an outdoor meeting and council fire in Pratt's woods near Madison avenue. Scouts were assembled at Milton Chapel and it was found that not a scout was missing, with the exception of T. O'Connor who is out of town. There were also several recruits which helped boost the attendance. The troop was than marched to the woods with troop flags and the program was begun. A hare and hound race was started with A. P. L. Searles and P. L. Hunter as the hares. This lasted for about twenty minutes and got the boys pretty well steamed up. After several more games, including capture the flag, flag raiding, the scouts began searching the woods for Joe Kappal who was hidden with a treasure. There was ten minutes of frantic running around and no one was lucky enough to find Joe. Assemble was then blown and the fellows assembled around the council fire. Then followed a very impressive ceremony with Big Chief Rain-In-The Face (Troop Committeeman Stanger) lighting the council fire and showing the fellows how to sound the Indian war cry. Scout James Loughlin was then initiated into the troop, and took the oath of allegiance to Troop 40. The Cowboy's Trail Song and Troop Forty's Rallying Cry were then rendered by Mr. Hardenburg and S. P. L. Monahan. Scout Norman Pellfleer then rendered "My BlueHeaven." The hot dogs and cocoa were then served and troop songs and cheers were peppily put over. The troop was marched back to Milton Chapel and dismissed, and in everyone's opinion the affair was a huge success both in the way of attendance and the carrying out of the program.

Recently the troop was timed for speed in knots which records are to be placed on the bulletin board at the Edgar road headquarters. The scouts holding the records are as follows:

Square, Moran, 2½ seconds; Sheepshank, Hunter, 5 seconds; Clove Hitch, R. Hook, 1½ seconds; Bowline, H. English, 3 seconds; Two-Half Hitches, Lenox, 6 seconds; Timber Hitch, Harman, 8 seconds; Fisherman's, Moran, 7 seconds; Weaver's, English, 4 seconds, Slip, A. Hook, ½ second.

A week ago Monday the scouting period was devoted to soap carving under the direction of Mr. Hardenburg. The model was an Indian tepee and several of the scouts produced very fine pieces of work. The remainder of the meeting was devoted to games, songs and cheers, and announcements by Mr. Hardenburg. The July issue of the troop paper was distributed and the troop dismissed.

A number of soap models have been brought down to the headquarters recently including an American flag, Indian tepee and tomahawk by F. Monahan, Indian tepee by C. Searles, dory by A. and R. Hook. Scout Clifford Lenox has donated five more chairs. It is hoped that Scout Tom O'Connor of the Crow Patrol who is vacationing at Schenectady, N. Y., will arrive home in time for camp.

Monday evening, Troop 41 held its regular meeting in the Junior Club Rooms at 7:30 P. M. The meeting was opened with the flag salute and drill led by Acting Senior Patrol Leader Willard Jennings. Short patrol meetings followed the drill. Following the patrol meeting a business meeting was held with Scoutmaster John D'Ambrosa in charge. Plans were made for an overnight hike up to Twin Falls on Thursday, July 19. First aid and knot tying were reviewed at the meeting. Several of the parents of the scouts were present at the meeting to see some of the work done. Mr. A. H. Shaefer of the troop committee was also present. There were twelve scouts present with eight in uniform. There were three cubs present. Scoutmaster John D'Ambrosa, Assistant Scoutmasters Alfred Wyllie, Jr., and Richard Corson were the officers present. The meeting was adjourned after games were played by repeating the scout oath and laws and the scout benediction.

Troop 45 held its meeting Monday night, July 16, in the basement of the Methodist church on Central avenue under Scoutmaster Frank Linton. Scout Ernest Jenkins passed his compass test while Scout Le Roy Edwards
