A fair and equitable distribution of Christmas baskets means a happier holiday for a greater number of Rahway's needy families.

The campaign instituted by the Welfare comheaded by the Rev. Finley Keech is seeking such ar equitable distribution by having all organizations. who are planning to give out baskets this year-use relief headquarters as a clearing station. Such organizations are asked to submit contidential lists of the names on their Christmas rolls se that the names may be checked against the lists of other organizations and any duplications note l and omissions rectified. Such a move deserves the whole-fiearted sub-port of every charitable group in this city. We feel sure that such organizations would not consciously allow a situation which has been evident in other years continue if there is a way in which it might be remedied.

We feel sure, too, that no such organization: would willingly give a basket to a family which hat already received one or is scheduled to get one from of The Record Friday morning-stories obtained

The last breath of football ... maybe ... White championship sweaters with 150-pound in signia were given to members of the Rutgers light-weight eleven at the sports dinner held in the Hotel Woodrow Wilson, New Brunswick, this week and therein lies a tale. The Scarlet midgets constitute one of the smoothest working grid machines any football lover would care to cast a jaded eye upon. Boasting a wealth of fleetsters in the backfield, men in the line who know what this blocking business is all about, and a well-drilled team in fundamentals, this squad, with several changes in personnel, has gone through two sea-sons without tasting defeat. Last year they were crowned mythical cham-pions after downing Yale and this year there was more concrete evidence of honors when Joe Fiedler, captain of the team, was presented at the banquet with the George Foster Sanford Trophy, emblematic of victory in the newly formed Eastern Intercollegi-ate 150-pound Football league.
