STORY OF "PALM SPRINGS" AT RAHWAY THEATRE Frances Langford portrays a pretty heiress whose heart is won by Smith Ballew, a guitar-plucking, torch-singing cowboy, in Wal-Wanger's "Palm Springs," produced for Paramount and playing at the Rahway Theatre today and tomorrow. In the comedy Frances discovers that her once wealthy father is penniless and she is forced to give up the man she loves to marry mother wealthy enough to provide both for her and her parent noblewoman and almost succeeds in marrying a wealthy playboy when her devoted father discovers she is sacrificing herself to save him from poverty. He denounces her as an imposter, and frustrates the marriage, leaving Frances high and dry and husbandless.

We believe Mayor Barger feels the same way. Then why have the police committee waste its time and consider something which is already under way and which will proceed in the correct manner regardless of what the police committee does? Why use the time of public officials in an apparent attempt to gain glory for a political candidate when there are important matters to be considered?
