THE BRUTALITY OF WAR.

War is a terrible thing, however great its horrors may be ameliorated by the spirit of Christian philanthropy, to which our soldiers owe so much in the war for the Union. By its resort to brute force as the arbiter in disputes and its selection of slaughter at its chosen means for success, a state of war unknown the world over affords a license to brutality which the most stringent anti-slavery laws do not. This problem must be solved in a high civilization, country and where the conduct of a nation's first men was as yet as yet of humanity unknown to the politicians. This is fearfully ill-solved by the intelligence sent to the press from the devastated city of Alexandria, the last accounts from which represent a scene of carnage accompanied by scenes and pictures such as disgraces humanity. Two miles of blinding bombards, fired by the torch of the incendiary, streets strewn with empty clock and jewel cases and similar debris, the fruits of plunder, and two thousand maimed persons of both sexes and of all ages, lying stiff and stark in death, furnish the outlines of picture to death.

There are many who will ask what it is all about—who is responsible for this fatal outbreak of elemental violence? That there is a local responsibility resting on the shoulders of man, and in due time it will probably be determined which is immediately responsible for the destruction which has fallen on Alexandria. That a populous and prosperous city should be swept by fire and sword and reduced to destruction with the sanguine reported, cannot in this age of the world pass unchallenged by the conscience of the Christian world.

Primarily, I think, the blame belongs to England, without whose instigation this calamity would not have been possible. Even before the bombardment of the city, the presence of the French and English ironclads and the hostile attitude of the two powers had provoked an outbreak of Arab population against the Christian residents of Alexandria. That, however, had been suppressed, and the native authorities were still in control of the city at the time this pledge they kept up to the English, without whose instigation this calamity would not have been possible.

Before the bombardment of the city, the English ships opened fire on the city.

In this attack the French did not participate and the entire responsibility for it, and to a great extent for its results, must lie at the door of the Government of Great Britain.

Mr. Gladstone, when questioned, informed the House of Commons that the British Government could not have anticipated the terrible events which followed the bombardment of the city. It is undoubtedly true that it remained for him to show that an act of war, which has resulted so disastrously, was in any event justifiable. And while he did not do this, it is evident that such citizens deserve a hearing.

Respectfully,
Ward, July 14, 1882.

RAHAWAY PREPARING TO FIGHT.

TURNING UP CAUTIOUSLY AND RECKLESSLY.

Despatches from Alexandria, yesterday, state that the night was quiet. The English troops had been ordered to withdraw from the fortifications on the 18th, and remain until the 26th, during which time there will be bells in their honor, exercises, and all the features incident to camp life. On the 29th and 30th the Grand Musical Festival will take place, and it is promised by those in charge that it will be the greatest event of the year.
