est in detecting men about to be married. After a mun has for years dropped in several times a month to exchange his money for handkerchiefs, neckties, hats and the like, he appears one day and buys a pair of white gloves, remarking apologetically that he is going to attend a wedding. Then he remembers that he wants a stove-pipe hat, and repeats his apology. Before leaving he blushingly saks for a white necktie, and recrain other articles. By this time it is evident whose wedding he is going to attend, and when he is gone the dealer remarks with a sigh that the man's trade is lost, for he won't have money to squander for fancy articles for a long time to come.—

observant toad has evidently noticed this, and every day along towards evening he makes his appearance in the yard, hops to a saucer, climbs in, and rolls over and over until he is covered with meal, having done which he awaits developments. The flies, enticed by the smell, soon swarm around the scheming batrachian, and whenever one passes within two inches or so of his nose this tongue darts out and the fly disappears; and this plan works so well that the toad has taken it up as a regular business. The chickens do not manifest the least alarm at their clumsy and big-mouthed playmate, but seem to consider it quite a lark to gather around him and peck off his stolen coat of meal, even when they have plenty more of the same sort in the saucers.
