A SEVERE ARRANGEMENT.

A prominent physician recently met a Presbyterian clergyman in the street and in the course of the conversation remarked that, to him, it seemed as if the old virtues of honor and integrity had almost died out from the race. "I have formed a very poor opinion of human nature," said the physician. He added his opinions on an experience of magnitude and distinction in many of his former patients which he described, and expressed a belief that a large proportion of mankind would refuse to pay any honest debt if they could do without exposing it to disgrace, or to the penalty of the law.

It is to be feared that the standard of integrity in society is lamentably low. The extravagant habits of the time—make money a necessity to us all, conform to them and honest debts largely go unpaid that the debtor may retain their money for purposes of self-indulgence. But back of this is the fact, providing the means of men in public life—the legalized robbery, the official plundering and the shameless distribution of public money for personal enrichment which is practiced by men prominent in official positions.

These things, which have gone on almost unabridged for half a generation, have had their effect in lowering the general tone of morals in money matters, and it is high time, if the standard is ever to be raised to what it was in our fathers' time, that punishment should be visited on every man who swallows another, that his own life may be made easier by the fruits of dishonesty; beginning with those public plunderers whose crimes are already known.

What some of these men, less justly told in their own pictures drawn by Attorney-General Pease, in a communication to the Presbiterian relative to the State-Route proposal. We do not remember ever to have heard such a forcible arraignment of public conduct in our country as is contained in the following extract from Mr. Pease's letter. His eyes, speaking of Pease, etc.—

"They had professed, under color of official power and under color of official authority, a systematic plan of deliberate robbery of the public treasury. To carry out that plan they had laid their hands upon a fiscal device by law to great public service, a service which is conspicuously one of the pride and pleasure of our civilization, our social welfare, our commercial prosperity, our national growth. Millions of that money which they diverted to their own private ends, and diverted it for their own personal purposes, was a burden of infamy and disgrace, and is such that it deserves the severest punishment the law can inflict. Such men are traitors to social and official duty, and to public enemies, against whom the authority of the law may be exercised without hesitation or reluctance. The higher their place, the greater their crime, the sterner must be their punishment. I do not call your attention to the fact that the authors of the law, and those who have directly been aiding me in the discharge of my duty in this business, have been from the first enriched with sumptuous platters, and every species of vice which that could be honestly kept by each of them looking and giving praise."

A CHILD WITHOUT A SKIN.—A remarkable freak of nature arrived in this yesterday in the way of a child which was born with no skin, and without the usual "down" or coat of hair, which is regarded as essential to continued existence. Moreover, the child seems to have been born with a skull, the head is transparent, while by the aid of a sharp pointed tool it may be perceived that the brain is well developed. The skin, which was born with the child, was separated by the blood clots, triches, whips and cords in the hands of the attendants. The child was rung down during the night, and after 25 minutes the dog died. The child was held in the arms of its mother, and the child died. Experiments. A rather thin oval-shaped mass was placed behind the motions of the head and neck, and the skin does not move, and above the normal position. When an English reporter visited the child, he said that the skin, of good health, is fully developed, is very plump, and is said to be strong, while it has a good appetite for solid food. That it should have progressed so far as to have been weaned, indicating good health, and will live a long time. The child is a specimen of rare wonders of physiology. It resembles a frog, and is perfectly acute, and is recognized to be a human being. It has been named Pharaoh, the Benevolent Wonder, 12 Incomparable Specialists.
