WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court, in a 7-2 decision, ruled today that the government cannot use evidence obtained from a search conducted without a warrant.

The decision overturned a lower court ruling that had upheld the government's use of evidence obtained from a search of a man's home. The Supreme Court said that the government had violated the man's constitutional right to privacy by conducting the search without a warrant.

The case, United States v. Harris, involved a search of a man's home during a drug raid. The lower court ruled that the search was constitutional because the police had probable cause to believe that the man was dealing drugs.

The Supreme Court said that the lower court's ruling was incorrect because it had not considered the man's constitutional rights. The court said that the government must always obtain a warrant before conducting a search, unless there is an exception to the warrant requirement, such as probable cause.

The decision is likely to have a significant impact on law enforcement practices. It will likely lead to an increase in the number of lawsuits filed against law enforcement agencies for conducting searches without a warrant.

Gas Tanks Site Okayed in Matawan Township

MATAWAN TOWNSHIP — Three months of contentious talks among representatives of the New Jersey Department of Environmental Protection and Matawan Township officials ended today with the approval of a permit by the Department of Environmental Protection for the construction of a new gas station.

The permit, which was granted by the Department of Environmental Protection, allows the operator of the new gas station to construct a new storage tank and related infrastructure.

The operator of the new gas station, who has been given the go-ahead to construct the new storage tank and related infrastructure, is expected to begin work on the project as soon as possible.

The permit was the result of months of negotiations between the Department of Environmental Protection and Matawan Township officials.

The Department of Environmental Protection had previously rejected the town's application for the permit, citing concerns about the environmental impact of the proposed gas station.

Matawan Township officials had argued that the new gas station would provide much-needed services to the town and that the environmental concerns could be mitigated.

The new gas station will be located on Route 35, just north of the Matawan-Pineville border. The station will be owned and operated by the Matawan Gas Station Company, a local business.

The new gas station is expected to create approximately 10 jobs in the town.

The permit was granted by the Department of Environmental Protection after the town's application was reviewed and found to meet all necessary requirements.

The permit includes conditions that the operator of the new gas station must meet in order to ensure that the new storage tank and related infrastructure are constructed in an environmentally responsible manner.

The operator of the new gas station is expected to begin work on the project as soon as possible, with construction expected to be completed within the next 12 months.

WASHINGTON (AP)–John L. Lewis, 89, founder and leader of the United Mine Workers of America, died yesterday of a heart attack at 83 after a long illness at his home in Maryland. He was one of the most influential leaders of American labor.

He said Lewis was "a labor leader with a broad vision and a dedication to the cause of workers' rights." Reuther also praised Lewis for his "bravado and vision" in opposing the Korean conflict and for his "embracing" of social justice and equality.

Lewis was born in Asbury Park, N.J., in 1880. He attended Englewood High School and the city's technical school.

Democrats Mark End of an Era: Burkhardt Retiring

Chief of police, on the other hand, has been a controversial figure in New Jersey. His leadership was marked by decisive action and a willingness to take on powerful interests. In the recent past, the chief of police has been criticized for his handling of high-profile cases and for his relationship with other state officials.

The chief of police has been a key figure in the state's political landscape, serving as a bridge between the executive branch and the public. He has been involved in a number of high-profile cases, including the investigation of corruption in the state's prison system and the handling of a series of mass shootings.

In recent years, the chief of police has faced criticism for his handling of these cases, with some arguing that he has been too lenient and others that he has been too harsh. Despite these challenges, the chief of police remains a key figure in state politics, with many looking to him for guidance on how to navigate the complex and ever-changing landscape of law enforcement in New Jersey.
Excellent Choice by Republicans

Monmouth County Republican made an excellent choice when they elected President Reagan's friend, Mrs. Fortas, as their chairman. Mrs. Fortas, the daughter of the late Chief Justice, is well known in political circles as a leader in state and national affairs.

A vote in most political battles is won not because the candidates are friends, but because the candidates are leaders. Mrs. Fortas is a leader in every sense of the word. She has been a force in state politics for many years and her influence is felt throughout the county.

The Republicans in the county feel that they have made an excellent choice. They have chosen a leader who is knowledgeable, experienced, and has the ability to bring together the various factions within the party.

Mrs. Fortas attended the meeting but didn't see it that way. Without directly stating it, she expressed her support for the new chairman. She said that she was pleased with the choice and that she looked forward to working with Mrs. Fortas.

It might even mean — eventually — that motorists will share in the appropriation for the little man over the major ones. As for the military, it was received with a black eye, but Morgan wasn't briefed until later.

President, if he would be truly effective, must be ready to take the political risks that would make an excellent choice when they elected President Reagan's friend, Mrs. Fortas, as their chairman. Mrs. Fortas, the daughter of the late Chief Justice, is well known in political circles as a leader in state and national affairs.

The New Jersey Supreme Court denied the request of the law firm. According to the court, the request was denied because the firm had not provided sufficient evidence to support their claim.

The court ruled that the firm had not proven its case and that the denial of the request was in the public interest. The court also stated that the firm had not provided any evidence to support their claim that the denial of the request was discriminatory.

The court's decision was based on the principle that the public interest should always come first. The court stated that the firm had not provided sufficient evidence to support their claim and that the denial of the request was in the public interest.

Q: Just one year ago, I bought Ford Motor Co. stock at 88.875 a share. Should I hold it until its high?

A: For one thing, there is no assurance that Ford's stock will hit new highs anytime soon. Stocks always have changes of direction. Also, if Ford's stock were to rise to this year's high, it is not likely that it could reach $100 a share. There are many factors that could affect Ford's stock price, including the overall economy, competition from other companies, and the company's own performance.

The Chinese Restaurant Syndrome

By EKWIN Z. POLK, M.D.
The Chinese waiter sets down the steaming aromatic cups full to Dad and Mom. I took a second cup and dipped the ladle into the bowl, but quickly put it down. There was something mildly off about the broth... A hallmark of Chinese hospitals, I suppose. The dinner, begun so joyously, was ending with a pleasant feeling over toward a hospital. The illusion, began to per- sist. I felt a dinnertime chill was setting in. I had lunch at 12:12 and slept.

When the Wild Becomes Tame

By WILLIAM F. SANDFORD

When the air of Flat Brook, N.J., was full of water from a big storm, I was on a section of the mountain range there. I was bagging trout, and the second one came into the splash and the noise, and the second rheuma, "Right behind you!"

I turned to look, and saw that the man's nose was no more than a foot from his face, and in the next second, the second man was there, and he was the only man I could see. It was a most unusual experience.

The second one came into the splash, but in the next second, the second man was there, and he was the only man I could see. It was a most unusual experience.

Township Consider to Townshipline Proposal

In a move that could change the political landscape of the township, the Freehold Township Board of Trustees will consider a proposal to convert the township into a townshipline.

The proposal would involve amending the township's charter to create a new governmental unit that would have more authority than the current township government.

Township Administrator Mike Corbo said the proposal is the result of a study conducted by the township's consultant, who determined that the township's current government is not efficient enough to meet the needs of the growing community.

If the proposal is approved, the township would be divided into several townshilines, each with its own elected officials.

The proposal is expected to be discussed at a special meeting scheduled for next month.

ANN LANDERS
Ignorant of Custom

Dearest Ann Landers: As a small business owner for some 20 years, I have always made it a point to treat every customer the same. I believe in customer service, and I will often go out of my way to accommodate special requests. You know, I think in the end that’s what keeps people coming back. I know some places say ‘no’ to everything, but I feel that’s my job to say ‘yes’ to whatever it takes to keep my customers happy.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I own a small retail store, and we’re always looking for ways to improve our customer service. We’ve implemented a new loyalty program and have started offering free samples to customers. I’ve heard you talk about the importance of customer service, and I think we’re doing a good job. But I’m always looking for ways to do better.

Clems Fairy Gold Takes Regret by Storm

by Chuck Threlkeld

A venerable New York institution was the beneficiary of an unusual situation last week when the 117-year-old club, which is located on Manhattan's East Side, was forced to close its doors for the summer. The reason? The club's historic Grandstand and Clubhouse were filled to capacity with customers, who were there to witness the opening of the season at Monmouth Park. The Grandstand, with its distinctive red roofs and white columns, was packed with fans eager to see the action. The Clubhouse, with its elegant blue and white decor, was also bulging at the seams. The scene was a testament to the club's enduring popularity, which has been a hallmark of its history. The club's president, Joe Iselin, expressed his delight at the turnout, saying, "We're thrilled to see our members come out in such numbers. It's a great day for the club." The opening day was a success, with the club's signature drinks and food being enjoyed by all. The atmosphere was lively and festive, with music playing in the background and people chatting and laughing. The club's long tradition of providing a sophisticated and enjoyable experience for its members continued to thrive. The club's grand opening was a significant event for the city, as it marked the beginning of a new chapter in its storied history.

Iselin: Jets Will Help Joe!

The New York Jets, who have been struggling on the field, received a boost last week when they signed Joe Namath, the former quarterback. The move was seen as a huge coup for the team, as Namath was one of the greatest quarterbacks in NFL history. He played for the Jets from 1965 to 1977 and was a four-time Pro Bowler. Namath's signing was a major event, and it was covered extensively in the media. Joe Iselin, the president of the club, said, "We are thrilled to have Joe back with us. He is a real leader and will be a huge asset to the team." The Jets' stock rose significantly after the news of the signing was announced, and fans were excited about the prospects for the team. The move was seen as a huge step forward for the team, and it was hoped that it would help them turn things around. The city was buzzing with excitement, and the atmosphere was electric. Impossible Dream

At the 1972 Olympic Games in Munich, German archer Jurgen Schltter won the individual gold medal. He was the first German archer to win an Olympic medal in the sport. Schltter's victory was a significant achievement, as archery had been a relatively obscure sport in Germany until that point. The German team, led by Schltter, finished second in the team competition, narrowly missing a gold medal. Schltter's individual victory was a source of great pride for the German archery community, and it helped to raise the profile of the sport. Schltter was an accomplished archer, and his victory was seen as a symbol of the growing popularity of archery in Germany. The 1972 Olympic Games were a turning point for archery in Germany, and Schltter's victory helped to spark a surge in interest in the sport. Perry Overcomes Rift, Injury, Mets

Perry, a journeyman reliever who has been with the Mets for several seasons, has struggled with injuries in recent years. He has missed significant time due to various injuries, including a knee injury that kept him out of the lineup for most of last season. Perry has also been hampered by a variety of other injuries, including a shoulder injury that forced him to miss several games this season. Despite his struggles, Perry has shown flashes of brilliance in recent seasons. He has a powerful fastball and a strong slider, and he has been able to get batters out in high-pressure situations. Perry has also shown a willingness to work hard and improve his game. He has been working with the Mets' pitching coach to refine his mechanics and improve his command of his pitches. Perry is looking to bounce back from his injuries and show that he can be a valuable member of the Mets' bullpen. Commercials Given a Twist

At CENTRAL NEW YORK A University, television viewers are in shock and all over campus, a joke is going around. "They say that the hottest new course is "Religious Studies," and that the new faculty member is a saint."

But the joke is not just for the students. The professor, Father Robert O'Brien, has been a faculty member for years, and his courses have always been popular. Now, however, his new course has caught the attention of the entire university.

The course, "Religious Studies," is being taught by Father O'Brien, who is known for his ability to make complex religious concepts understandable and engaging. The students are captivated by his lectures, and the enrollment in the course has skyrocketed.

But it's not just the students who are impressed. The professor himself has been pleasantly surprised by the interest in his course. "I think it's because people are starting to realize how important religion is in our daily lives," he says.

Father O'Brien's dedication to teaching his students about religion continues to inspire them, and the course continues to be a popular choice for students across the university.

TV COMMENT

"It's a hard sell, trying to make religion relevant to young people in today's world," Father O'Brien says. "But I think we're making progress, and I'm happy to see that."
