A fantasy castle on Fantasy Island

Using only a bucket, a spade, some concrete tools and a putty knife, Richard Rife, of Chattanooga, Tenn., put the finishing touches to his fantasy castle early Monday morning.

The professor of Japanese studies at the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga started his vacation project Saturday by mounding up piles of sand in front of the Reef. By Monday, light catching details and shadow casting angles were being added to the turrets, archways, steps and walls.

Rife has constructed a Sandiel castle each year he's visited the island, because "it's a great way to pass the time on the beach. After construction, the creator's main concern is keeping the crows off the turrets."

Who took the sign?

The large green and white sign pointing to Captiva's library, chapel, cemetery and community center has spent most of its short history uprooted — lying on the beach...in the bushes...and now, no one knows where.

For the nice big readable sign on the corner of Wiles Street and Captiva Drive, which the community center and library begged the county for last year, has an enemy. Someone sneaks along at the crack of dawn or the dead of night and takes the sign down.

"The first time we found it on the beach. The second time in the bushes," related Captivan Gene Peck.

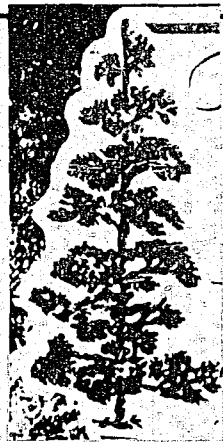

Each time it was replanted, only to be uprooted again. Now it's been taken again, disappearing some time over the Christmas season.

And this time it seems it's gone for good. The sign, the twin of the one at the corner of Chapin and Captiva Drive which remains undisturbed, is nowhere to be found.

"If we get it back again, we'll get the county to root it in concrete," commented Peck.

The fine for removal of county signs is up to $500.

FOCUS ON:

Doreen DeSerres

A Rhode Island girl who wanted to get out of the cold, Doreen DeSerres followed a childhood dream to own a clothing store to Sanibel where she could get warm.

"When I was a little girl I always liked getting dressed up and playing," the winsome Miss DeSerres said. Most little girls like to parade in Mother's clothes, Doreen, however, also dreamed of selling women's clothes — in her own store.

She's made that dream come true on Sanibel. Vacationing last January, Doreen said, "I wanted to come somewhere that was warm." In five days she rented a shop, then flew to New York, did the buying and returned to Newport, R.I. — where she managed a boutique and did buy for three others — and gave notice.

She opened Sensations in the Palm Ridge Plaza March 6 last year and has been going full speed since.

"Essentially, I didn't have a vacation. It was amazing how fast it all happened," DeSerres says now.

The quick move was typical of her, she says.

"Everything in my life, if it's going to happen, it will happen like that."

Of course, the natural fibers clothing store she created and overhauled wasn't like it is now on opening day. "Everything was sold out of boxes," the 29-year-old fashion entrepreneur said.

"Sanibel was different than the rest of Florida, especially the east coast, she found out that short visit a year ago.

"I didn't like Florida," she says, having traveled the state as a buyer.

Doreen also procured fashion shops to local resorts and restaurants, with friends and her sales staff modeling signals that they checked out working together to approximate the final presentation.

"The thing that speaks the most to me is the people that do it for me — the models," she says.

"We work together to put on a show every day."

Herant once, however, at South Sea, Captiva, the Doreen and Sanibel Beach.

And a show every Monday afternoon is set for Saturday's through April. The Thriller Lodge and W's Landing are now making Doreen's shoes.

A sideline for this talented lady with a dream has been face painting children at such places as Lee County Children's Home and at Shirley's Spirit of Foolishness on Captiva.

"They like it," she said.

Her next dream is to open a new shop on Sanibel.

"I don't want to be myself by telling the name," she says of her designer clothes and jewelry, which she plans to open this year.

She has experience with representing designers and models, starting with her brother-in-law, who was an artist in Cleveland and the owner of Rhode Island.

Beginning at 19, Doreen traveled the state representing models for a number of years, then as a buyer for a Greek woman with shops in Newport, Boston and the Bahamas. She owned a leather boutique for a while, and her move to Sanibel was a way to own again.

After working as a shop manager, "I just decided I wanted to be back in my own business again."

The enterprising young owner has made a generation on Sanibel. Her customers, "the young at heart," are all ages, she said. But the ones who can appreciate something a little different than most.

New Year's resolutions: Most resolve not to resolve

By Earl Hartman

New Year's resolutions are like the father who sits up after the second knockdown but then often and each time he's been knocked down again.

So say many of Sanibel residents who just don't make resolutions for New Year's anymore.

Then there are those who not just make them but keep them they're the only of us all.

In a quick poll of islanders taken before Christmas indulgent had set in five out of 11 said their only resolution was not to make resolutions.

Charles Frederick, Sanibel's assistant fire chief, was to the point when he said, "I never make New Year's resolutions, it's a promise and I don't break promises. Not even to myself." Charlie agreed.

Yet some of us do succumb to the tradition, which stems from ancient rites of renewal and the advent of the calendar, and which seems almost a way of purification — until January 2 that is.

Steve Phillips has had more success at resolutions than a good many of us, but his hitting average doesn't appear to be 100 percent even then.

Steve, director of ecology for Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation, said he'd begun seven years ago with a list of 20 things to work on to improve himself. I whittle one away at a time.

Among those he's resolved and kept are cutting out liquor (I did^{not} drink much anyway) and red meat.

This year he said, "I'm cutting, my coffee intake. One soft drink is never enough. I have to drink five in a day, he noted.

Steve Phillips

Also Steve hopes to run more exercise more and cut down on my lack of vocabulary. He admits he gets loose with swear-words (swears) at times and has been told his inability to express himself properly causes that.

Try to make myself a better person and a better person to be with, he concluded. It's not all easy when it comes to his resolutions. "I'm sure I'll break them like I do every year."

Owner and manager of the Chase Sea & Brew Pub, Steve Phillips said, "I have never made a New Year's resolution before. Will be? No."

If sure if there's ever anything to solve through the year, I'll do it at the time.

Realtor John Smith, a new member of the Code Enforcement Board on Sanibel, said he'd made resolutions in past years but "I'm still fat. It's a permanent resolution. To lose weight."

Six days before Christmas, in my office right now I've got a box of candy and a plate of cookies. He said, "Good luck. John, we know the feeling and the temptation."

Holly Davis, director of admissions and administration at CROW (Care and Rehabilitation of Wildlife) said, "I'm not much of a resolution person — not at New Year's. Yet she decided she could think about others more instead of myself. Couldn't see all subscribers to that one."

Cathy Lund, the leading lady of the Pirate Playhouse's current production, "The Fourposter," said

New computer to aid police

By Paul Luthringer

In order to make it more efficient and cost-effective, the Sanibel Police Department is following the lead of bigger and larger police departments by acquiring a $119,500 Motorola KDT System computer designed to allow the police dispatch desk to communicate with police vehicles by computer.

If city council approves a resolution authorizing the city manager to execute agreements with the Bank of the Islands to borrow $15,000 for the system — which police officers anticipate they will approve — a purchase order will be drawn up by early January and the system could be on line by February, according to Lt. Ray Rhodes, who has been charged with researching and ordering the system for the department.

Rhodes said the Motorola's KDT system bypasses the normal voice communication now used in the police department. But it can work in conjunction with the present radio system to use existing radio equipment and allow for voice communication if needed.

The first part of the overall system will be to establish the department's data base on IBM PC/AT micro computers.

That will handle our recurring functions and crime files, name files, fingerprint files and all of our records systems, Rhodes said.

It will give us better access and will also save time inputting, Rhodes said, adding that this was the first step in computerizing the entire record system of the department.

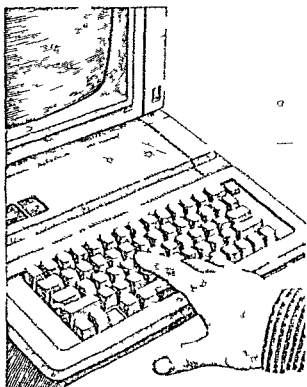

One of the benefits he pointed out is that officers will be able to do reports with the computer. The computer also automatically files records — a job now done by two officers.

The second phase, which will come at the end of February, will be a computer-aided dispatch that speeds information from the dispatcher to the patrol car.

It also adds dispatch material such as arrest records into the computer, Rhodes added, and gives our personnel the opportunity to put graphics into the system.

With this package, streets, intersections, floor plans and other information can be called in immediately by police officers on site.

The most expensive part of the system forecasted to be operational in April is the mobile data terminals which give officers computer capabilities right in their vehicles.

Officers in the car will be able to do exactly what the dispatcher can do on the computer, Rhodes said. They will be able to access our data base at the station and get information instantly on a call that came in. Get graphics and communicate between themselves and the station.

And no one will be able to hear the conversation, he added.

So citizens with police scanners will no longer be able to pick up conversations between law enforcement officials, Rhodes said.

One of the biggest advantages of the system — but one that probably won't be operational until January a year from now — is that officers will be able to look into criminal histories and check driver's licenses and tags right from the car instead of going through dispatch, Rhodes indicated.

Coming in April, officers will also be able to do reports right from the terminal in the car instead of coming back to the station to write the report out.

This enables an officer to do a little more crime prevention while sitting in the car, he said. For example, an officer could sit on San Cap Road while entering a report and it would still show traffic down by his presence. Motorists won't know whether he's working radar or writing a report.

The Motorola system is comprised of a main computer and a switching computer installed at the police station. The switching computer allows vehicles with the mobile data terminals to access into all kinds of information files including the Sanibel police data base, the Florida Crime Information Center computer, the National Crime Information Center computer and up to six other computers that the department could tie in on at a later time.

There would also be three permanent mobile terminals installed in police vehicles and two portable, battery-powered mobile terminals for use in investigations, emergency management or repair situations.

According to Rhodes, the $119,500 system that is a mainstay of big city departments can be better utilized by his smaller department.

Big city departments don't use the system up to its potential, Rhodes pointed out, that with their smaller staff Sanibel police will save many manhours.

At present, the system is slow and cumbersome with small departments doing reports which are then given to a records section to be transcribed into records.

It's such a waste of time, Rhodes said. With this system, all that is done automatically. We are streamlining the department so that we can do more with less people, he added.

Cost-wise, Rhodes indicated Sanibel police can save money because of advances in micro computer systems.

Larger departments have to go to mini-computers or small mainframes for their systems, he explained. We can do the same job with the micro and still get better records access.

One of the most important aspects of the system is that if the department grows to handle more than 20,000 complaints, the system is compatible with IBM's main computer for upgrading.

Also, when the department adopts the nationally accepted 911 emergency number system, Rhodes said, the computer could automatically call up the caller's telephone number and address to the screen — so even if the caller could not give his address or telephone number, he could still be reached for help.

In future, with one push of a button that information is accessed directly to squad cars and to the Sanibel data bank. So we have killed two birds with one stone, we have dispatched the car quickly and have stored the information in our data banks, Rhodes said.

It's the best system there is, it's state of the art, and I know it's a system we can grow with, Rhodes added.

County seeks permit for Captiva Drive revetment

By Paul Luthringer

Approximately 8,000 cubic yards of boulders will be placed along the west side of 2,621 feet of Captiva Drive to reinforce existing rip rap which protects the road if the Army Corps of Engineers approves Lee County's application to place it.

The project is located in the Gulf of Mexico and construction will be done by county forces using loads for placement of the material from the road.

According to assistant county administrator Jim Larue, the county has requested the permit because the numerous storms this summer have washed away almost 3,000 feet of underlying support of Captiva Drive.

Dick Stevens of Stevens and Associates of Fort Myers said that the rock revetment is not just rocks piled against the shoreline.

To place additional rock to reinforce it though is better than nothing, he added.

According to Stevens, the county had a study done several years ago by a consultant who recommended removing that revetment and building a proper one.

The county has not seen fit to do that, but what they do is when it looks like it has washed away, they go in and dump more rocks, he said, adding that 8,000 cubic yards is a substantial amount and that the county intends to beach it up.

The revetment that exists now does not have a filter cloth, says Stevens, the rocks haven't been sized and it doesn't have a toe. There are a lot of good revetments on Captiva, but that one is just rock dumped over the side of the road. But it's better than nothing, he reiterated.

What should be done, Stevens concedes is that the county should go in and rebuild the revetment as a long-term solution for protecting the road which will cost about $5 million or they should consider the beach nourishment project that the previous Captiva Erosion Prevention District had proposed for $5.6 million for the whole island.

To protect the one-mile length of county road with beach nourishment will cost less than a properly constructed revetment, he noted.

Christmas bird count nets more birds, fewer species

By Earl Hartman

There were fewer species but more birds were sighted by volunteers with Sanibel-Captiva Audubon Society during the Annual Christmas Bird Count Dec. 21.

A total of 18,292 birds representing 115 species were counted that day on Sanibel, Captiva and adjacent waters. This compares to 17,199 birds and 127 species in 1984.

The recent cold spell undoubtedly affected the count, driving birds further south than last year, organizer K.C. Emerson said Monday. Robins, which wintered in south Georgia and north Florida last year, were abundant, with 3,157 spotted this year compared to five last.

Another weather factor was a cold wind which made birds stay back in brush, unseen by counters.

Spotters huddled — 79 strong — on cold beaches, in J.N. "Ding" Darling Wildlife Refuge and elsewhere on the islands to make the count in the early hours that Saturday.

"For the weather conditions, it was a good turnout," Emerson said.

He attributes the cold to other differences in numbers in species between 1984 and 1985.

Some major differences are:

In 1984, there were 105 American white pelicans, this time 21; 264 snow egrets, this 70; 925 white ibis, this 463; 82 northern pintails, this seven; 603 red breasted mergansers, this 145; 62 black vultures, this, 25; 98 piping plovers, this time zero.

Also, 37 black skimmers, this time zero; 232 mourning doves, this 98; 121 blue gray knatcatchers, this zero; 100 northern cardinals, this 27; 3 indigo buntings; this 1; 153 common grackles, this 29; 1 broad-winged hawk, this zero.

Other than robins, differences on the plus side for 1985 were noted among double-crested cormorant with 391 to 436; mottled duck, 54 to 66; bald eagle, 0 to 6; killdeer, 7 to 35; yellow-rumped warbler, 144 to 131; American goldfinch, 6 to 693. Emerson comments, "the cool, strong breezes caused most of the smaller songbirds to seek shelter in woods where they could not be counted; only the American goldfinches were seen in large numbers."

Permit to fill sought

Application to permit 102 cubic yards of fill for a housepad and driveway at 6045 Bayou View Lane has been filed by David Lovelock with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

Lovelock has obtained a development permit to build a home in the area of two existing homes, but has to get Corps permission to fill at that location since it is in an area of Dinkin's Bayou where the city's general permits have been restricted. Ken Pfutzer, Sanibel's assistant planning director, said Monday.

Application has also been made to the State Department of Environmental Regulation.

Those who wish to comment have until Jan. 14 to do so. Write Jacksonville District, Corps of Engineers, P.O. Box 4970, Jacksonville, Fla. 32232.

Short of holding a seance, we can't actually get endorsements from people like Ernest Hemingway, King Henry VIII, or Napoleon Bonaparte.

But we're certain Chadwick's would please them in spirit.

After a long day of battling marlin or battling a typewriter, Papa Hemingway would have loved to avoid battling a necktie.

So he would have loved Chadwick's, and our fresh seafood, choice meats, decadent desserts, and divine drinks.

Because while the atmosphere's rather more sophisticated than an African safari, the dress is almost as casual.

King Henry VIII went through six wives trying to find one who'd give him good food in king-sized portions.

With the consequences of displeasing someone like him in mind, we created Chadwick's all-you-can-eat buffets.

Polynesian Paradise on Tuesday. Seafood Delight on Friday. Champagne Brunch on Sunday. And bountiful lunches every day.

Henry probably would have proposed to the cook.

Gently persuading reluctant principalities to join the empire doesn't leave a general much time to catch a quick bite.

Which is why Napoleon is traditionally portrayed with a hand inside his coat, massaging his growling stomach.

If only he were around for Chadwick's dinner specials: Prime Rib and King Crab Duo on Monday. Stuffed Florida Grouper on Wednesday. Jamaican Chicken on Thursday. And New York Strip Steak on Saturday.

Plus a special menu for other hard-to-please little people. Your kids. All at prices so reasonable you can afford to feed an army.

We heartily endorse a visit to Chadwick's in the near future.

As would a couple of history's biggest eaters.

'Everglades ecology: fact, fantasy and politics' at SCCF next Tuesday

The Everglades delicate ecological system is so essential to maintaining our Florida environment is a political issue, according to director of the Everglades Institute, Jan Michael Jacobson. Jacobson will kick off the Sanibel Captiva Conservation Foundation lecture series Jan. 7 with his talk entitled, "Everglades Ecology: Fact, Fantasy and Politics."

The talk and slide presentation will explain some of the political and social pressures on the Everglades, and the need for empirical research and scientific data in order to resist these pressures.

"Decisions about the Everglades are often made based less on sound biology than on political considerations," commented Jacobson last week.

The Everglades Institute is a privately-endowed organization. Dr. Earl Rich, Everglades board member and professor in zoology at the University of Miami, will also be present at the SCCF lecture, which begins at 2 p.m. on Tuesday.

■ WESTALL SPEAKS AT SCA: Mark "Bird" Westall will speak on ospreys at the next meeting of the Sanibel Community Association on Wednesday, Jan. 8.

Westall is a local Sanibel naturalist with an interest in birds of prey and a specialty in the behavior and biology of ospreys.

As founder and president of the International Osprey Association, he recently presided at their annual meeting in San Francisco, where the latest research on ospreys was discussed. Westall has monitored Sanibel's osprey population since 1979.

At the SCA meeting, he will show slides of some of his recent work and display a live female osprey. The program will begin at 7:30 p.m. and is open to the public. □

■ BOATING UNDER THE INFLUENCE: An intense public awareness campaign designed by the Florida Marine Patrol to chase drunken drivers from the state's waterways has been launched. Department of Natural Resources Executive Director Elton Gissendanner has announced.

"Don't Make Us Your Last Chaser" is the theme of the two-phase, multi-media campaign. The public awareness effort, which includes radio and television public-service announcements as well as colorful posters, will continue throughout 1986, said Col. D.N. Ellingsen, FMP director.

More than 585,000 boats are registered in Florida to use the more than 2,200 miles of marine waterways, according to the FMP. The legislature enacted, and the state began implementing in October 1984, some of the most stringent, comprehensive driving-under-the-influence laws in the nation affecting boating operating. □

Guest speaker at Congregational Church

The Rev. Dr. Arthur A. Powner Jr., senior pastor of the Colonial Church, United Church of Christ in Edina, Minn., will be guest speaker at the 11:15 a.m. worship service of the Sanibel Congregational United Church of Christ on Sunday, Jan. 6.

Dr. Powner is author of eight books and numerous articles and papers in such domains as a speaker, he served as Pastor in Residence at Fuller Theological Seminary and has preached at seminaries, universities, churches and conferences throughout the United States. He will be featured preacher at Consultation on the Parish Ministry XI, a national meeting to be held in Orlando Jan. 6-10.

The Colonial Church of Edina has been featured in Time magazine and US News and World Report, and has won awards for their architectural accomplishment. The church has 1,100 members and supports missionaries in Africa and around the world. Dr. Powner has twice come to Africa as part of a team from Edina representing local churches of different denominational traditions concerned with world hunger, who raised over $300,000 to help in Kenya and Ethiopia.

The Sanibel Congregational United Church of Christ meets temporarily in St. Michael and All Angels Episcopal Church, Periwinkle Way, until its new building is completed in February. The community is invited to attend.

UNITARIAN UNIVERSALIST CHURCH
The Unitarian Universalists of the Islands approved the island group becoming an affiliate congregation of the Unitarian Universalist Church of Fort Myers at a recent steering committee meeting.

Under the new arrangement, the Sanibel congregation will continue to meet at the Sanibel Library on the first and third Sundays evenings of the month at 7:30 p.m. The Reverend William Burnside Miller, minister of the Fort Myers Unitarian Universalist Church, will conduct most of the Sanibel services. Sunday evening, Jan. 5, Rev. Miller will also deliver the sermon.

Steve Pieri was chosen as chairman of the steering committee and Doris Pieri as collector for the Sanibel group.

The Unitarian Universalists of the Islands began on Sanibel some five years ago with informal coffee hours held in private homes, which then grew into a somewhat more formal discussion group meetings at the Sanibel library. Programs have included speaker-led discussions, panel discussions, slide presentations and conventional services.

Everyone is welcome at all meetings.

Constandse resigns as SCA president

William Constandse resigned as president of the Sanibel Community Association effective Jan. 1, 1986.

Constandse said the reason for his resignation is that he has been requested by the International Executive Service Corps to accept the largest chain of department stores and supermarkets in Indonesia with the computerization of their operations.

This will be the first computerized retail operation in the fifth largest country in the world, Constandse said.

William Constandse was selected for this three to four month assignment starting Feb. 1 because he served with IBM as manager of the project which resulted in the development of the current department store and supermarket systems.

Constandse is no newcomer to Indonesia. He was born in that country when it was still the Dutch East Indies. He also served after his retirement from IBM in 1974 as a full partner with SOV, the largest accounting and management consulting firm in Asia during 1979-1981 in Jakarta, the capital of Indonesia.

Schaeffer a 'fine choice' for CEPD board

To the Island Reporter: I would like to congratulate Orville Schaeffer on his recent appointment to the Captiva Erosion Prevention District Board and Gov Bob Graham on making the choice.

I feel that this is both a fine choice and a timely appointment for several reasons.

1. Orville Schaeffer has attended virtually every meeting of the CEPD board. He therefore has full information on the erosion problems on the island and the decisions facing the board and does not have the need expressed by other newly elected commissioners to delay the referendum. He will want to know the feelings of all Captivans on the project and go ahead immediately with the referendum.

2. Schaeffer is also a good choice in that now that the new board is going ahead with the perpendicular stabilization project he can fully monitor it from his own back yard.

Mike Cohen
Captiva

Let me suggest that there is indeed a way for the CEPD to act that has had a long history of success in these United States. It is called voting and in cases of extremely controversial issues the democratic process allows the issues to be put before constituents and have the majority rule.

Therefore, since beach renourishment is certainly the most controversial issue to have faced the islanders since the Sanibel Causeway I further suggest that the CEPD now has but one clear priority that is to devote all of its collected funds and energy to the writing of a fair and equitable referendum to renourish or not renourish and to put this referendum before the voters at the earliest possible time. Not a new idea but then neither is democracy.

I would further suggest that any other action for no action would be irresponsible in the extreme because it will build more dissidence and add to the chaos you are experiencing, inside and out of your meetings.

Let the people vote and the storm will abate whichever way it goes.

A way to help Sanibel stay green and beautiful

To the Island Reporter:
The greatest compliment our City government can ever expect to get was recently published in both Island newspapers. It occurred in a letter from Ed and Hazel Schuller of Sanibel and urged more and better control over development. The basis of their judgment was an article in a travel section of a Newark N.J. newspaper which disparaged development in Sanibel.

If the Schullers had only read the Sanibel weeklies this summer and fall they would have known this was exactly what the council planning commission and city staff did hour after hour week after week. The public was invited to all the meetings and our exciting town meetings started at 7 p.m. and ended after midnight only because everyone was all worn out.

This year it seems to me the city has earned a rest — for a while. We do have the strictest and most admired comprehensive land use plan east of the Mississippi and Canada which will be followed as long as we voters take an interest in what is going on in the city. We might even read the CLUP! And learn when the city denies a building permit because the land is too fragile to build on the city must buy that land with our taxation money.

However, for concerned citizens like the Schullers there is always a way open to help Sanibel stay green and beautiful — Join and support the Sanibel Captiva Conservator Foundation whose policy is to buy wetlands and keep this land in perpetual wilderness.

So far SCCF owns some 850 acres. Good possibilities invite the purchase of more land to keep Sanibel forever free of more development.

Early in 1985, SCCF has planned several meetings to tell Sanibel about its work and to appeal for new members. Old members are asked to invite concerned citizens to come listen, join and become active in the organization.

This letter is an invitation to the Schullers to come with us to these interesting meetings.

Helen Webb

until she can be reassured that the citizens of Sanibel will flock to join and support her list of approved fashionable left wing activist organizations. Not understanding that a local weekly newspaper is not supposed to give its main coverage to world events, she is dissatisfied with what she sees in the Reporter.

She pettily scolds us (Shame on you Sanibel!) for our lack of social conscience — a quality which could be shown only by joining and supporting the groups she selects for us. She has organized her own show — Citizens for Central American Refugee Assistance in which she will obviously be the prima donna but before she brings it to Sanibel she wants to be assured of a large quantity of enthusiastic and biddable back-up singers. Since the population of Sanibel does not take kindly to hussies and condescension I doubt if she would find them here but of course I don't know.

Some years ago a taxi strike in New York City forced some of the eminent socialites to mingle with hoi polloi on subways and buses. One day a befuddled and bejeweled matron got on a bus and inquired at great length about its mercurial safety route and destination. Then she cross examined the driver about his competence and tried to make him change a fifty dollar bill for her. When she finally turned to look for a seat she loftily remarked to the general public: You know this is the first time I've been on one of these things — and a passenger replied: We ain't missed you none lady.

Calvin S Brown

Hofschneider saddened by Calvin's withdrawal

To the Island Reporter: Because of ethics, I am unable to publicly support any of my neighbors for an appointment to the board of CEPD.

However, it saddened me to hear that Mrs. Helen Kalvin has withdrawn her name for consideration and from the selection for appointment by Gov Bob Graham.

She would have brought in intelligence and dedication to the CEPD board.

Mike Cohen: CEPD's chief rabble-rouser?

To the Island Reporter:
The CEPD meeting held Dec 20 to finalize plans for the Sandbag Project was attended by a handful of pro-nourishment people and 2 anti-nourishment people.

Bids were examined and one chosen. The meeting moved along smartly and business completed. The meeting was thrown open to discussion from the audience.

Mike Cohen sounded off.

He asked why the particular stretch from the old Post Office for 650 south had been chosen for the sandbag placement. Then without waiting for a reply, he said it was to pay off someone for getting you elected to the board?

This insulting question directed at the CEPD board was carried on TV Channel 20 news that evening.

Myron Cohen can answer your first question and you can verify my statements in the Alternate Methods Committee Reports filed in the CEPD office over 3 years ago.

At that time, after lengthy discussion by the committee of various locations for the sandbag placement, George Kalvin proposed the placement south of the old Post Office since it is the most vulnerable stretch of road on Captiva.

Chuck Bruning a CEPD Commissioner and a member of the Alternate Methods Committee disqualified himself from voting because his home is located along that stretch.

It is ironic that Myron Cohen continues to heckle the board that he is currently seeking to be appointed to

We will support city over Cardium issue

To the Island Reporter: It appears that I am a member of the silent majority who owns property and live on Cardium Street.

Bonafide health and safety issues exist. After heavy rains and maintained by additional rain, and at least annually the road develops a new macbre character. No wake signs go up yet compete with cautious motorists justifiably wary of manipulating through oozing muck. Less hardy folk avoid the area totally, waiting for the road to firm up. Deliveries are suspended.

After a week or so the water becomes a sagnant and laced with sewage. The odor is sickeningly sweet. Amazingly, I see children playing in it.

We pray that it doesn't rain and wonder why this exists. God bless councilman Mike Klein, city manager Gary Price and public works director Don Schofield. We support you!

Let the people vote on issue of renourishment

This letter was submitted to the Island Reporter for publication.

An Open Letter to the New CEPD Board

Dear Commissioners:

In my fifteen years as a Captiva resident, never have I seen or heard such a storm of controversy as that being caused by the issue of beach renourishment. Since the CEPD board is, by necessity, in the middle of the storm, it is understandable that priorities can become clouded and the paths of action murky. Nevertheless, it is clearly the responsibility of the CEPD to resolve this difficult issue and to this end, let me suggest the following:

'We ain't missed you, none, lady'

To the Island Reporter:
You recently printed a letter from a Judith Oxenhandler of Hanover, N.H. who has bought property on Sanibel but hesitates to move here

RESORTING TO MURDER Some people will resort to murder to fill a resort in the quiet season following New Year.

And a company which makes a business of aiding, and abetting such dastardly deeds is that mysterious firm Options in Murder in Naples. For those who need a little murder and mayhem to chase away the post-holiday blues the Eagle's Nest Resort in Marco Island, owned by the Mariner Group is offering such sinister entertainment the weekend of Jan. 17.

Terry Massey, director of sales at the resort said the weekend of crime will get underway Friday evening and wind up with a solution brunch on Sunday morning Jan. 19.

Eagle's Nest will be venturing into the world of mystery for the first time, she said, adding that plans have been afoot for some time to stage such an event at the luxurious island complex.

The three days of sinister and mysterious happenings at Eagle's Nest will be the first such event conducted by Options in Murder on Marco Island. More weekends are planned in the Island Mystery Series, she added.

WHO DECIDES THE NEWS? Who decides what shall be in the newspaper today? Ron Thornburg, executive editor of the Fort Myers News Press, will attempt to answer that question in a presentation at Edison Community College auditorium at 2 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 15.

The title of this public service lecture, presented by the office of Continuing Education at Edison will be "Who/What Decides the News?"

All programs are free to the general public.

taking stock

How to buy a basket of prime stocks

By Ben Fuller

My friend said to me, "What's your advice again for my essential savings?" My answer, as explained in previous columns, was to put a big chunk of money you can't afford to lose in money market funds — that didn't go up or down in price, pay a nice 7.8 percent return and are about as safe as you can get.

Another portion should go into very conservative mutual funds like Mutual Shares or Strong, who switch from good stocks to money market funds as conditions change. These funds have had records of going up by 20 percent or 30 percent in good times and up about 7 percent in bad times. They haven't dropped in value for many years.

Yes, but I'd like to buy into the cream of American industry and switch the stocks occasionally. I like to deal with a broker over the phone and not have to write letters to mutual funds.

In our fantastically well-organized financial structure, there are funds that do just those things. A typical one is called Tri Continental Corp., traded on the New York Stock Exchange listed in the paper every day. It can be bought and sold like any other stock by phoning your broker.

Tri Continental is in the business of receiving your money and investing it for you, paying you dividend income and capital gains. They are gigantic, with over a billion dollars invested in such prime stocks as IBM, Coca-Cola, Exxon, Bristol Myers, Ford, Boeing. At present they have 7 percent of their money invested in government bonds. For years they have outperformed the Dow, both in dividends and capital gains. Buying Tri Continental is like having a highly skilled financial advisor investing your savings in top flight companies at very low fees.

The price of shares in Tri Continental fluctuates with the prices of the stocks they buy for you. So you do have to decide for yourself when to get in and when (or whether) to get out. You can tell the trends pretty well by watching the graphs in the New York Times or the Wall Street Journal. In any case, I'll try to keep you advised in this column. The stock market has experienced an explosive rise and could be due for a pause. It is still going up a total of 1224.80 when this is being written.

If you do want to do something a little more risky than money market funds or very conservative mutual funds and with higher returns possible, this would be a next step. When you buy shares in Tri Continental you can be sure that you're buying a wide selection of stocks in fine companies and that your investments will be supervised by competent people who have had a good record. If you're interested, I'd urge you to look the company up at the library or consult your broker.

Mr. Fuller will answer your inquiries if you will mail them to him in care of the Island Reporter, Periwinkle Place, Sanibel, FL 33957 or phone him at home 472-2387.

Monthly financial maintenance saves you money

Are you planning your financial future? Would you like to turn over a new financial leaf for 1986? Do you feel as though you squandered much of your money on unimportant items in 1985?

To manage your money wisely in 1986, organize your financial life with a monthly program. According to the Florida Institute of CPAs, by performing a financial maintenance check monthly, you'll gain better control over your money. Here are some ideas to help you in 1986.

JANUARY The sooner you make a contribution to a 1986 IRA, the more tax-free earnings you'll accumulate. If self-employed, open a Keogh. An IRA or Keogh will lower your current tax liability and build a retirement nest egg. If you have not already contributed to a 1985 IRA, you have until April 15 to do so. April 15 is also the deadline for a 1985 income tax return. The sooner you file the quicker you'll get back a refund if any is due. Reminder: If resting in a 1986 tax shelter should be considered now to ensure getting the safest and fullest tax benefits.

FEBRUARY Draw up a budget. Figure out your fixed expenses for each month of the year. Include rent or mortgage payments, utilities and any other expense which you do not control.

Then calculate the month's sum of all expenses over which you have some control: transportation, taxes, medical care, entertainment, clothing, insurance and food. Then add up your income from wages and investments for each month of the year. Subtract the difference to determine your discretionary income — if any. Set aside a reasonable cash fund each week for out-of-pocket expenses. Set aside a portion for savings or investments.

MARCH Plan to reduce taxes this year. Estimate your 1986 taxable income. Make sure you're not having too much withheld from your weekly paycheck. If in need of shelter from taxes, review investments now. Check your capital gains position. Consider establishing a trust or making a gift to shift income to a lower bracket family member.

APRIL Deal with debt. If you are in debt because of credit cards, consider consolidating credit card loans. Credit-card debts frequently carry annual interest rates that are higher than other loan rates. By taking a personal loan to pay back credit card companies, you can cut the interest dollars you pay back. Where possible, use a savings account as collateral for a personal loan. Reminder: You must file your 1985 tax return by April 15 or apply for an extension, but you have only until the 15th to establish a 1985 IRA.

MAY Tune up your savings. If you are maintaining a savings account, be sure to leave no more than a three to six month emergency fund.

JANUARY ordinary savings or money market accounts. Put any extra cushion in other instruments that yield more than money market accounts. Do a survey of the investment arena for a stock bond mutual fund or other investments that will suit your ability to take risk.

JUNE ANNUL Review insurance policies. If you were to become disabled or suddenly die, what cushion has been provided for your family? Find out how long you must be unable to work before a disability policy will begin paying. Many policies do not pay benefits until you are disabled 90 days. Determine if you have ample life insurance to keep your family secure in the event of death. Have you met deductible amounts on your health insurance?

JULY Devise an investment strategy. Write down your investment objectives. Do you want to finance your child's education? Are you planning for retirement? Or is saving up for a downpayment on a vacation home your main objective? Writing down a three-man investment goals gives you a notion of whether your goals are realistic and it shows how much income you need to achieve goals. Match goals with investments. Reminder: If children are away at summer camp because you could not care for them due to your work schedule, you may be eligible for a child care tax credit. AUGUST Retirement planning is advisable for almost everyone over 30. In your 30s, consider contributing the maximum amount to an IRA. You may want to consider opening or transferring all or part of a current IRA into a more aggressive self-directed IRA — which may be riskier but offer higher potential for gains. People in their 40s should think about when they would like to retire and the location. Estimate how large an income and nest egg is needed. Figure out the savings you need to set aside in order to retire at age 70.

People in their 50s may want to begin looking for ways to raise equity. You may want to sell a home after your children are grown and no longer live there. As retirement nears, it's wise to coordinate insurance, estate, investment and tax planning to match retirement goals.

SEPTEMBER Figure out your net worth. Add up your assets — your house, car, personal possessions, current investment values, cash, surrender value of life insurance, and your savings. Then subtract your liabilities — mortgage debt and other outstanding personal debts. Properly subtract liabilities from assets to find your net worth. An annual examination of your net worth will make you aware of major trends in your finances, will help (it will also be helpful if you need to apply for a personal loan).

OCTOBER Determine how your estate will be divided in the event of your death. If your taxable estate is greater than $600,000 and you die in 1986, the executor will be taxed at progressive rates of 37 to 50 percent. An estate passes to a spouse tax free. However, no matter how large it is, if you do not have a will, your assets will go to an attorney to draw up one. Existing wills should be updated.

NOVEMBER Review deductible expenses you've paid since Jan. 1. If income is expected to be about the same next year, accelerate deductible expenses and defer income when possible. Non-itemizers should try to bunch deductions lump sum, several deductions into a single year, and this may push itemized deductions beyond the zero bracket amount. Beware of year-end tax law changes and consider hiring a CPA for year-end advice.

DECEMBER Catch up on recordkeeping. Make sure all receipts will be available for filing 1986 income taxes. Organize all receipts, old bills, and budgeting aids. Assemble a list that can be utilized by family members if something happens to you. Write down location of your will, insurance policies, stocks, bonds, and other financial documents. List the names of your insurance broker, attorney, and CPA.

Come to the library for tax guides and forms

By Pat Robertson

It's that time again — time to think about taxes that is. The Internal Revenue Service has again supplied the library with selected forms and publications to help you prepare your 1985 tax returns. The guide booklets Publication 17 Your Federal Income Tax and Publication 334 Tax Guide for Small Business may be checked out for two week loan periods. Single sheet forms are available for the most used forms 1040EZ, 1040 Schedules A and B and 1040W. We also have the looseleaf book of master sheets for making photocopies of the forms. Ask the volunteer at the desk for any of these materials.

New Books in the Library IN THE REFERENCE ROOM

Within a Rainbow Sea — Christopher Newhart
A superb collection of color prints of under water plant and animal life with a lyrical prose exposition written by the photographer. This is one of the most aesthetically pleasing books I have ever seen. Its purchase was made possible by a gift from the Sanibel Captiva Shell Club.

Family and Friends — Ants Brookner

With an artist's eye the author (an authority on 18th and 19th century paintings) presents this witty analysis of family relationships and human behavior. The Dorns transplanted from France to England before World War II are ruled by matriarch Sofka. Acting from what she is sure are the most benevolent of intentions, Sofka manipulates her offspring in a most cynical fashion. This gives us an acerbic view of human nature that's entertaining, refreshing and all too true.

Be Burned in the Rain — Barbara Michaels
A contemporary Gothic by the author who also writes under the name of Elizabeth Peters. The heroine, Julie Newcomb, is spending the summer acting as a companion for her stroke-ridden grandmother at her Tidewater plantation. Mr. Alan Petrnek, an archaeologist, is trying to solve the mystery of two skeletons found on the property. It makes for an eerie blend of romance and suspense.

Mara Simb L. the African Lion — Roger Caras
This remarkably dramatic story written by a respected naturalist features the king of the beasts. The lion's life is followed from cubhood in the pride through exile as a lone hunter to the pampered status as leader and protector of his own pride. The lives of the other savannah animals and the plants upon which they all ultimately depend and the cycles of drought and plenty are skillfully woven into the picture.

Biography

Tell Them It Was Wonderful — Ludwig Bemelmans

The essence of this noted humorist, novelist and illustrator is captured in this anthology edited by his wife. It contains selections from both his fiction and non-fiction work. This collection is a joy to read and introduces Bemelmans' vibrant, humorous adult writing to those who know him for the famous Madeline books for children.

PARSON REQUESTS

In response to patron requests the library has acquired several books related to government jobs with information about job listings, application for positions and testing. Included are ARCO's Complete Guide to US Civil Service Jobs, Homestudy Course for Civil Service Jobs, Mail Handler, Post Office Clerk, Carrier and Firefighter. We also have the ARCO Practice for the Armed Forces Test.

'You Call This Paradise?' on stage Jan. 17

Playwright Mike Fuery has done it again with another original play about island life. This effort consists of six one act plays with the title 'You Call This Paradise?' The Fuery wit pokes fun at some island targets like getting a building permit or buying beach property that a little erodes.

Nineteen actors and actresses fill the 27 parts. Producer Carol Fuery says that Brock Johnson and Bob Swinker, both directors for this new series, have kept rehearsals running smoothly.

The plays will be presented Friday and Saturday Jan. 17 and 18 at 8 p.m. at the Captiva Community Center. They will be presented the following weekend Jan. 24 and 25 at the center.

The following Pelican Players are returning for this production: Jim Walsh, Barb Johnson, Scott McPhee, Marilee Eckartz, Mary String, Marilyn and Lenn Lorenson, Robin Humphrey, Wendy McMullen, Jim Lamborn and Jerry Liza. New Pelican Players include Lusia Stockhall, Norann Brenner, Betty and Bob Bulecock, Dave Bear, Ruth Ellen Murray and June Dudek. Technical staff includes John Walsh, Carlene Baum and Mike Backus. This summer's production on Captiva sold out of tickets so don't miss the chance to get your tickets early.

They will be $7 per person and available by early January at the following locations: The Islander, next to the B.H. Arvd at Bailey's General Store on Sanibel; at the Captiva Memorial Library and Tree House Gifts on Captiva Island.

Barbara B. Mann: Over 50 years dedicated to the arts

By Barbara John

Q. What does a person have to do to get a prestigious new building named in his or her honor?

A. In the case of Barbara B. Mann for whom the new Performing Arts Hall at Edison Community College and University of South Florida campus is named, the answer is to spend over 50 years of your life dedicated to the arts.

In 1981 — four years before the Florida Legislature issued a decree signed by Governor Graham that the Performing Arts Hall be named in recognition of Barbara Mann — she was honored by the state with "The Governor's Award For The Arts." In a letter from Secretary of State George Firestone, he explained that this annual award is presented in recognition of outstanding achievement and contribution to the arts or Florida's cultural development.

Although nominated for this award by the Lee County Alliance of the Arts, it was a letter of recommendation from Dr. David Robinson, president of Edison Community College that best expressed the feelings of her peers. Because Fort Myers is located in a geographically isolated part of the state, it has not been able to borrow arts activity from surrounding areas. Therefore, it was necessary to create arts activity at the local level. Mrs. Mann is to be commended and recognized for her leadership for so many years for bringing a better quality of life to this community.

Mrs. Mann is a community servant. Mrs. Mann receives no compensation for her work in the arts community. More than anyone I know, I feel she should receive recognition from the state for the work she has done for the arts in the state of Florida.

Barbara's interest in the arts is as diversified as it is long. It ranges from her Fort Myers High School days when she and sister Helen Balch had a duet act singing "Baby Sister Blues" to her 35-year history as founding officer of the Community Concert Association the group she has led as president and membership chairman for the past 26 years.

The walls of the office Barbara and husband George T. share at home is covered with photos of the musical greats who have graced the stages of Fort Myers and who have become visitors to the Manns home. The most renowned names from the "Mel" and other opera houses around the world, leading instrumental soloists like Isaac Stern and Yehudi Menuhin, the most accomplished ballets and symphonies — all have recognized the role Barbara Mann has played in the cultural development of our community.

Don Bortorff, manager of Exhibition Hall for the 20 years that the Community Concerts have been presented there, said, "She is wonderful to work with and I think she is the one person primarily responsible for the entire cultural development of Fort Myers. But it's more than that, he continued. She's always done what had to be done to make any show a success."

Her about the time she showed me on stage wearing a short dress that lit up something that FPI sent away for to embellish the Edison Birthday Party. She's a paid sport!

It was Barbara who gave the name birthday party to the Edison celebration. Until that time, it had been called a memorial service.

So remember her by its presentations and always using outside talent," she says.

By this time I had put together the Edison Chorale, a group of 80 wonderful voices from our community. We performed for the Memorial Services for four years and then — once it became the Birthday Party — for eight more years. I remember the day I went to the Edison Pageant of Light committee and suggested the change to a celebration rather than memorial service and the huge beautiful cake that Win Ellis made for that first Birthday Party in 1939.

Barbara was blessed with the remarkable talent for organization. During the development and encouragement of the arts, she worked full time for many years as office and financial manager of her husband's contracting business. She was a professional organist and choir director for 36 years at First Presbyterian, First Baptist and First Christian Churches.

She was an active mother, never missing a PTA meeting, becoming involved in sons Frank and Paul's hobby activities, placing family first — ahead of her many volunteer projects.

And she studied — nothing was handed to her. She studied from the time she took piano lessons as a pre-teen till the time she finally earned a Bachelor of Arts degree in Humanities from Thomas A. Edison College in New Jersey. She studied at Edison Junior College. She studied by correspondence courses. She studied at a music workshop at Ridgcrest. She studied for seven years with Fred Waring at his workshop at Shawnee on the Delaware — where she got guidance, not just in music, but in a little staging, lighting, technical aspects," she said.

I've never stopped studying or earning credits until I finally got my degree just 1 1/2 years ago.

Her interest in the arts has not been confined to the elitist segment as evidenced by the title of the Little Theatre play where she and George met — Tom Piper and the Pig. Long before meeting and marrying George Mann, Barbara Balch starred in her first theatrical role in 1927 at Edgewood Auditorium. She also learned to dance and became a member of Beth Treese's chorus line, including one called "Rainbow Beauties," which was part of the celebration of 1,000 consecutive days of sunshine in Fort Myers.

As she turned the pages of four volumes of scrapbooks that hold pictures, programs, newspaper clippings and souvenirs of her life, she said, "Along the way lots of people have helped me. I didn't do it alone. I'm grateful to them all — whether it is the Business and Professional Women's Club who paid for my dancing lessons in 1928 or First Baptist Church who paid my way to Ridgcrest or my son Franklin

Barbara B. Mann who fought to get the appropriation for the building of the Performing Arts Center. "And to the Observer for giving me this chance to explain that although Franklin was instrumental in getting the money for the new facility, he was not responsible for the name. He wasn't even at the session in which the decision was made. Because he was in another committee meeting when I lasted way past my bedtime, he didn't even know about the selection of the name until after the Tallahassee newspaper had the information."

Asked about how long she'd been working on the funding for a performing arts center, Mann said, "Probably from the time we moved from the high school to Exhibition Hall and realized this was a successful venture and would be around for a long time. And isn't it coincidental that exactly 20 years later to the month that we did our first concert at Exhibition Hall, we are presenting the first Community Concert of the 1986 Series at the new building?"

It's not just members of the Community Concert Association and Lee County Alliance of the Arts that are grateful for Barbara's determination, but other organizations with whom she has worked over the years. The Levert Myers Symphony Orchestra, Southwest Florida Opera Association, The Women's Community Club for whom she founded the book review, home and garden and music departments and for whom she has devoted many years to giving book reviews throughout the community and even the "Kowbelles," the women's auxiliary of the Florida Co'tlemen's Association.

On Saturday night, Jan. 11, when the first of this season's Community Concerts debuts at the new Barbara B. Mann Performing Arts Hall, Barbara will be on stage to welcome the audience. Her speech will be brief, she said, something like, "It's We made it. We're here!"

Typical of the audience and caliber of the shows, this one being the North Carolina Dance Theatre — we're sure the troupe will receive a standing ovation. But it will probably be the second one of the evening — as the audience will undoubtedly unite in a standing ovation and thanks to the one woman who fought harder and longer than anyone else to make this dream come true. □

Performing Arts Hall opens Jan. 5

“On Your Toes, the Tony award-winning Broadway musical, will open the new Barbara B. Mann Performing Arts Hall Sunday, Jan. 5.

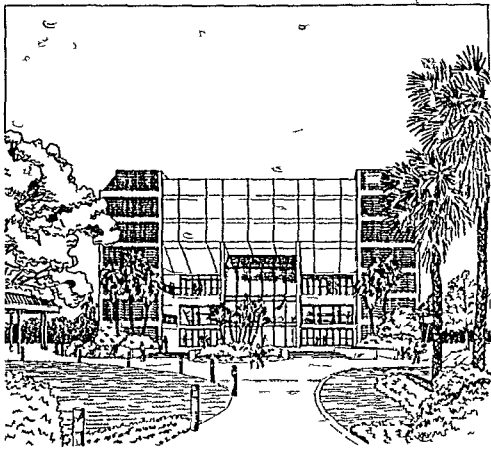

This gala premiere complimentary performance is being sponsored by NCB National Bank of Florida in recognition of donors to the hall endowment fund.

Located on the campus of Edison Community College and the University of South Florida at Fort Myers, the million-cubic-foot facility will serve students and community residents. With a seating capacity of 1,777, the $6 million structure is equipped to house programs of drama, music, dance, theater and lectures. For the first time, major touring companies requiring sophisticated stage housing, rigging, lighting and sound systems will be able to bring their magic to southwest Florida.

A one-night performance in Fort Myers to open the hall is included in the impressive list of stops for the 1985 international tour of "On Your Toes." This 1936 musical was written by Rodgers and Hart, directed by George Abbott and choreographed by George Balanchine. It was the first musical to combine the drama of classical ballet with tap and jazz and includes such show stoppers as "There's a Small Hotel" and "Slaughter on Tenth Avenue." With a cast of 25 performers and a 14-piece orchestra, the large, lush sets and magnificent period costumes make "On Your Toes" a singing, dancing and musical joy.

Led by a performing arts hall development committee with representatives from the college, university and community, the campaign has generated more than $350,000 in supplementary construction funds and future operating income for the hall. Individual corporate and foundation gifts of $250 to $25,000 have been given in support of the campaign, which is nearing the $1 million mark, according to Dr. David G. Robinson, resident of ECC.

Sanibel Triathlon runs out of support

By Paul Luthringer

It would have meant great exposure for the island but the nationally touted Sanibel triathlon that would have drawn television cameras and participants from all over the nation failed because of lack of support from the police recreation club and from residents who would have been inconvenienced according to its organizer.

We were going to do the event in conjunction with the Sanibel Police Recreation Club with a portion of the proceeds going to them, organizer of Sanibel's ill-fated triathlon Vanessa Dudek said last week.

But what basically happened was that residents of West Gulf Drive decided they didn't want a national event and TV cameras here, Dudek continued.

Dudek added that she was particularly disappointed because she felt that those residents probably don't even know what a triathlon is.

They didn't even give it a chance, she said. The police called me to say that they were going to have to cancel the event because the police didn't want to create any bad feelings with Sanibel residents.

Dudek, president of VhRoom Events and Communications had already contacted a lot of participants and sponsors for the event. Evian Natural Spring Water for example had agreed to act as sponsor.

I'm still getting calls and letters from people who wanted to enter the triathlon, she said. But I just think I'm going to have to give up the idea of one here on Sanibel.

This is the second such abortive attempt. Dudek has made to organize a triathlon in which participants must cycle, swim and run a certain distance in the area.

Last February, Dudek tried to stage a triathlon at Sanibel Harbour Resort, just over the causeway but Lee County stepped in at the eleventh hour because the county said the newly built resort had not met the needs agreed upon.

This latest attempt to put the multi-activity event on in Sanibel — which has all the facilities needed — failed because residents opposed it.

According to the organizer, the residents of West Gulf Drive were upset because the site chosen for the event was the West Wind Inn.

We needed a hotel for the participants who are traveling, Dudek explained.

The swimming portion of the triathlon was to have been from the hotel with the biking and running along West Gulf, she explained.

We would only have had to close the road from 8 a.m. to 11 a.m. and it would have remained open to emergency traffic, she continued.

I still don't understand the objections, Dudek conceded. It's a healthy athletic event.

Committee of Neighborhood Associations president Fimer Stilbert said that the organization's main objection to the triathlon was the way it was put together.

Our first objection was that the organization sponsoring the event already messed up the whole idea last year at Punta Rassa, Stilbert said. Therefore a number of people in CONA didn't feel it was a responsible organization.

The second reason was that The Rocks Neighborhood Association did not approve using the

The last attempt at a local triathlon was finished before it started. County officials stopped the event at the eleventh hour citing the organizer didn't follow stipulations the county demanded for such an event.

West Wind Inn as the center of the event because it would bring this public event right into their neighborhood, he said.

We felt it should have been done completely differently, he continued.

Police Lt. Ray Rhodes said the police department was first approached by the organizer for a special events permit.

That entailed getting a place to hold the event, which was West Wind Inn because of the location, Rhodes said. We had a problem finding an area for the biking and running portions of the event because we didn't want to cut off any of the communities near the site.

People in the vicinity were concerned that they didn't want to have their roads cut off for more than a few hours, Rhodes stated.

I can't blame them, he added, but we just couldn't find a suitable place for it. Whenever Sanibel residents are concerned about their safety, we're certainly not going to do anything to go against them, so we just withdrew our support of the triathlon, according to Rhodes.

What to look for when birding on the islands

By George Weymouth

In last week's article I discussed where our island birding hot spots are. This week I'd like to discuss what to look for. Often finding a group of birds isn't too hard, for instance when you're walking along the beach. Separating those beach birds into distinct species though can be a real challenge.

Knowing what to look for can help. Many birders have several different guides they refer to, but only one they especially like to take to the field. That guide should have arrows pointing to the most obvious field marks of each species — its yellow rump, forked tail crest, etc.

If your favorite guide is without these indicators, use any edition of Poger Tery Peterson's Field Guide to Eastern Birds as a reference and with a ballpoint pen mark them into your guide.

Out in the field these field marks are one of your best tools, but there are many habits that should be looked for, too.

As an example, when flying, does the bird fly alone in loose or tight flocks, in a wavy loose V or a perfect V (as geese usually do)? Was it flying low to the ground or way up? Did it seem to undulate by flapping upward and then while not flapping drop like most woodpeckers and finches) or not drop when pausing between flaps (like a robin)?

Was the bird flapping slow and weak or was each stroke seemingly with power? Did it fly in a direct line or zigzag? Did it hover or dive at anything? Did it flap and glide or constantly flap or mostly glide? Were the wing tips held up while gliding (like a vulture) or down like sea birds?

Did the bird constantly fly back and forth like a swallow chasing insects or seem to be only passing through?

Add these observations to the field marks, such as a forked or rounded tail, folded or trailing legs like a heron and you can see there is a lot to see, often on just a brief glance!

When feeding, does the bird walk over the ground or hop or both? If it scratches at the surface does it scratch by jumping backwards like a cardinal or with one leg at a time like a quail? Does it feed out in the open or under cover? On the ground or up in the weeds? In bushes or trees and if in trees, where, on the outer twigs, inner limbs or on the trunk? Is the tree it's feeding on dead or alive? Does it hold its meal against the tree and peck at it, or is it pecking at the tree? Does it seem to be feeding on insects, flowers or fruit?

If a water bird, does it seem to stalk slowly or run about after its intended prey? Is it even feeding on flesh or is it feeding on plant life instead? Does it work along a weedy, brushy bank or only on exposed mud flats? On the mud flats, does it sometimes wade and how deep? Or does it stay only out of the water? Does it prope in the mud or sand, or instead peck? Does it occasionally submerge its head trying to reach its prey? Does it seem aggressive or even follow other birds?

Out on the water, does it tip up like some ducks to feed in a shallow area or does it dive? Does it seem to be chasing anything? Can you tell how deep it is diving? When taking off, does it launch directly from the water or run on the surface to become airborne?

You can identify different species on your own, but obviously the best tool you can have along to help you learn ornithology is an experienced birder that can instantly point out these field marks and habits. Remember though, it's not how many birds you see, but how often you get out into the great outdoors to see them. Keep your binoculars clear and good birding. George Weymouth is an island birding guide and wildlife artist.

This year, resolve to protect the resource

By Fritz and Norma Stoppelbein

Not everyone believes in making New Year's resolutions but here are a few resolutions anglers could make to help ensure that the fun and relaxation fishing affords may continue in the coming years.

1 Kill only the fish you need for your personal use. In the past if you got into a school of fish that just wouldn't quit biting you probably figured it would be right neighborly to catch as many as you could and share them with your friends and neighbors.

But with so many people moving to Florida every day more people are going fishing than in the past — but there certainly aren't more fish moving into Florida waters. As a matter of fact the fish that are out there have been hard pressed to supply the demand. The fish aren't able to produce enough to continue such neighborliness so leave the job of supplying fish for the neighborhood to bona fide commercial fishermen who are finding it difficult enough as it is to make a living.

And for the same reason don't be a moonlighter selling your excess catch to pay for your fishing trip.

2 Handle and release fish carefully. Don't throw back fish. Throwing a fish through the air or dropping it a great distance almost guarantees its injury or death.

If possible leave the fish in the water while you remove the hook. If the hook is deep set cut the line as close as possible. The hook will disintegrate in a few days — provided you don't use stainless steel hooks.

If you must remove the fish from the water handle it as little as possible. If it is a toothless fish grasp it by the lower jaw to immobilize it. If it is a heavy fish rest its tail section on the ground or boat deck while removing the hook. For a toothy fish use pliers to remove the hook. Small fish may be grasped across the back behind the gills but do not put any pressure on the gill plates or squeeze the mid section of the fish. Even fish with potential weapons such as catfish can be released without harm to the angler if a few simple precautions are taken.

Many fishermen who don't know better think catfish are trash fish and try to dispose of them as quickly and crudely as possible — often leaving them to die on shore or pier.

There is no such thing as a trash fish. Every fish is potential food for humans, birds, mammals or larger fish. Snook and tarpon are particularly fond of catfish and will appreciate all that you return to the water.

As a matter of fact if you prepare a good size gafftop sail for cooking you will understand why snook and tarpon know a good thing when they see it. Catfish flesh is some of the finest textured fish you will find and is becoming more and more popular as its reputation spreads.

One important point in handling the fish you catch: Be humane. Kill the fish before you begin to fillet it. How would you like to be skinned alive? And don't stick your fingers in its eyes or kills.

3 Set a good example for other fishermen — especially youngsters. Obey all fishing rules and regulations. The rules are made to protect the fishing you enjoy. It is not practical or even possible to have a law enforcement officer watching over every person who goes fishing.

There are many new laws going on the books lately as the stocks of fish decline. With so many newcomers and visitors to Florida you may see someone fishing who is not obeying the law. You can help our future fishing by diplomatically informing visitors of the laws and explain why we all must limit our catches. The most successful enforcement of laws comes from peer pressure.

4 Don't put anything into the water except what can be eaten by a bird, fish or other mammal. Compared with 20 years ago we are doing a good job of keeping our waterways clean but we must not let up.

5 Become involved actively in conservation of the fisheries. Your financial support for organizations actively working to protect the fisheries and ensure the future of Florida fishing is much needed. You can also help by making your friends and neighbors aware of the problems of fresh and salt water fisheries and explaining the steps needed to ensure future fun and relaxation from the sport of fishing.

Your letters and telephone calls providing input to those responsible for managing the fisheries helps shape future management policies.

6 Finally, conduct yourself in a sportsmanship manner at all times. Be willing to assist others in need of help and share the knowledge you have gained on how to enjoy the sport of fishing without harming the fishery for future generations.

The premieres are a new string trio by American composer Paul

Featured on the first concert will be the world premiere of Chihara's String Trio, featuring James Buswell, violin; Robert Vernon, viola; and Timothy Eddy, violoncello. The four movements are: "Maestoso-Allegro molto"; "Molto moderato"; "Con fantasia"; "Allegro molto" (played without pause).

The opening number will be Mozart's Divertimento No. 1 in D Major, K. 251, played by James Buswell and Anita Brooker, violin; Robert Vernon, viola; Timothy Eddy, violoncello; Julius Levine, double bass; Harry Sargous, oboe; Froydis Roe Wekre, French horn; and Paul Ingraham; French horn. A second Mozart work will be the Quintet in A Major, K. 581, featuring clarinetist David Shifrin and the New College String Quartet: Paul Wolfe and Anita Brooker, violin; Yuri Vasilaki, viola; and Benjamin Karp, violoncello. The final work on the program will be Anton Dvorak's Quartet in E-flat Major, Opus 87 played by John Perry, piano; James Buswell, violin; Robert Vernon, viola; and Timothy Eddy, violoncello.

Joining Pavarotti for the concert, which will originate from Lincoln Center's Avery Fisher Hall, will be a cast of major American singers whom he invited as his guests:

sopranos Kathleen Battle, Susan Dunn, Mary Jane Johnson and Carol Vaness; mezzo-soprano Dolores Ziegler; tenor Jerry Hadley; baritones Simon Estes and Alan Titus; and bass James Morris. The program of operatic arias and ensembles will be conducted by Emerson Buckley with the New York City Opera Orchestra.

Truth or consequences

By Cliff Potter

Two weeks ago George P. Shultz, President Reagan's secretary of state, came on in a rage against being strapped to a lie detector apparatus. Only it can't be that he has something to hide. We know for sure that he couldn't possibly be the Dutch Schultz of the Roaring Twenties — for one thing our president was being called Dutch along about that time. The plan leading to the provocation was simple. Because of the rash of spy activity in military and government services it was suggested that all government employees take the polygraph test. When George exploded to the press with threats of resigning, the president patted him on the head and excused him from the humiliation — and then excused himself as well. Then there were two, not only those suspected of being spies will be tapped by the gadget. Another George had a major problem with the side-effects of untruth in the 1941 film The Great Lie. The only complication that George Brent was aware of concerned his relationship with his wife Bette Davis as opposed to a sexual romp with his lovely girlfriend played by Mary Astor. As luck dictates sometimes in these situations the wrong member of the triad became pregnant and the faithful wrinkled browed wife was incapable of having children. The two girls with no polygraph equipment to interfere with their plans managed to send George on a trip until the child could be born. Then the ownership could quietly be transferred to the barren bosom of the wife. At the conclusion of a few messy reels the other woman got the man and kept her baby. To add insult to injury the mother (Mary Astor) also coped an Academy Award for her performance as best supporting actress of the year. The market for marijuana soared sky high in 1940 when Robert Mitchum was arrested for possession at a wild party in Hollywood. True and convicted the sleepy eyed hero spent two months in jail and emerged triumphantly as the bobby soxer's delight. Awarded a new movie contract he sauntered unabashed to star town. A short time later a nose reporter uncovered the whole fiasco as a hoax. The movie star was actually innocent. Had he been subjected to a lie detector test when arrested his whole career would have changed — proving the test would have been hazardous to his career no matter what the results had shown. The 1940 Walt Disney movie Pinocchio not only entertained but proved that only the good fairy could have engineered — and then reversed — the growth of his nose brought about by a few lies. The alleged half truths of some of our national leaders of the past could have been detected by the same good fairy. How the demon polygraph would have reacted to the conflicting stories of F. D. R. and the whispered pre Pearl Harbor warnings will never be known. No mechanical proof was required for President Nixon and the Watergate guilt but that Teddy Roosevelt actually charged up San Juan Hill and on what will always remain a mystery.
