WHAT IS IT?

We don't want to know what it looks like or what it reminds you of. We want to know EXACTLY WHAT IT IS.

The photos in this weekly stumper can be extra close-ups or odd angles of things we all see every day around the Islands. They might be upside-down, reversed or a portion of the whole.

Kathy Favato called bright and early last Tuesday morning with the identification of last week's stumper. She knew the photograph was taken on Calusa Drive, a dirt road just after the Wildlife Drive in the J.N. "Ding" Darling National Wildlife Refuge.

Last week's stumper

Jeff Wiedenfeld also knew the answer, but his call came in after Favato's.

If you think you know what this week's stumper is, call The Islander, 472-5185. The first person to call with the correct answer receives his choice of an Islander t-shirt or a one-year subscription to the newspaper.

Islander brings home six awards in state contest

The Islander newspaper received recognition in six categories in the 1985 Florida Press Association Better Weekly Newspaper Contest.

The awards were announced last Friday at the FPA annual convention luncheon in Sarasota.

SEE RELATED COLUMN, PAGE 5A

Competing against weekly, bi-weekly and tri-weekly newspapers with circulations of 5,000 and more, The Islander earned first place for outdoor writing (reporter Scott Martell), second place for editorial cartoon (reporter/graphic artist Julie Niedenfuer), second place for serious column (editor Cindy Chalmers) second place for environmental/conservation series (anti-litter campaign), second place for overall graphic design, and honorable mention for community service (anti-litter campaign). All of the entries were published between Jan. 1 and Dec. 31, 1985.

There were more than 2,000 entries in 34 divisions in the contest, which is the largest state newspaper contest in the country. The contest was judged by members of the Tennessee Press Association.

In separate competition, Islander columnist Chelle Koster Walton has won a first place award in the 1986 Florida State Writers Competition sponsored by the Florida Freelance Writers Association. Her piece "Dressed To Kill," won in the "Tween Ageds Non-Fiction" category. It dealt with pirate costumes and their history.

Walton has contributed regular columns to the editorial page of The Islander for the past year.

In its third year of competition, the FFWA received 636 entries in 10 divisions.

Alison Wilson is newest member of The Islander staff

Alison Wilson

Alison Wilson has joined the staff at The Islander as office manager/circulation manager. The Mansfield, Ohio, native moved to Southwest Florida five years ago from Columbus, Ohio, where she worked for a publishing company that produced bulletins and journals for ceramic engineers.

For the past three years Wilson has worked at Priscilla Murphy Realty, Inc., in the rental office as a receptionist and as an inspector.

Now hers is the voice callers will hear when they dial The Islander, 472-5185. Wilson takes the place of office manager Belinda York, who is leaving the paper after four years to spend more time with her family.

25 years ago, in The Islander's first year of publication, the newspaper was published only from November through May.

WEATHER WATCH

Hot days and rainy afternoons and evenings remain in the forecast for Southwest Florida this week. The weatherman calls for highs in the mid-90s and lows in the mid-70s with a 40 percent chance of rain through Friday.

Last week's weather according to records kept by the Sanibel-Captiva Chamber of Commerce was as follows:

	HIGH	LOW	RAIN
Monday, June, 16	89	74	.39
Tuesday, June, 17	91	76	0
Wednesday, June, 18	91	75	.74

Friday, June, 20	90	75	.74
Saturday, June, 21	88	76	.27
Sunday, June 22	87	78	.43

A check back to last year's temperatures shows this year's weather so far is par for the course as far as temperature is concerned but is way ahead in rainfall.

Crowded Islands are no place for dolphin display

 To The Editor
The Islander

I read with great interest of the application to capture and confine eight bottlenose dolphins. This would be done by a man who makes his living as a marine veterinarian as a "benefit for the species in the long run."

The (dolphins') sea pens would be located within a resort operated by a group which in the past has set the developer standards for plant and animal conservation.

One of the outstanding thrills for visitors to these Islands is to witness the playful antics of the dolphins along the Causeway and gulf shore. Now, for just a small fee, visitors will be able to view these same dolphins in captivity, the same as can be seen in a number of other areas of Florida and in most large zoos across this country.

One major question concerns why information on this project was not circulated during the 30-day period for public comment. Could it be that the outcry would have been so great as to end the project at that point?

Why would a "mammal expert and consultant" and the most successful developer in the area want to pen up harmless animals? The answer is simple — at $1 per head, 100,000 heads amounts to $100,000 — with little or no consideration of the effect of this "attractive nuisance" upon the Islands. If this type of thing is necessary, it should be located on the mainland, not on this overcrowded Island.

Dr. Jay Sweeney thinks it would be "neat" to "educate the public" in this manner. It might be even more "neat" to construct a cage for Sweeney and his type of promoter and developer. This would not only cut down on the ever increasing number of bodies in the area, but it might also give nature a chance to replenish the plants and animals that have been destroyed so wantonly in the quest for profit.

South Seas should clean up its act instead of cleaning up on dolphin dollars

 To the Editor
The Islander

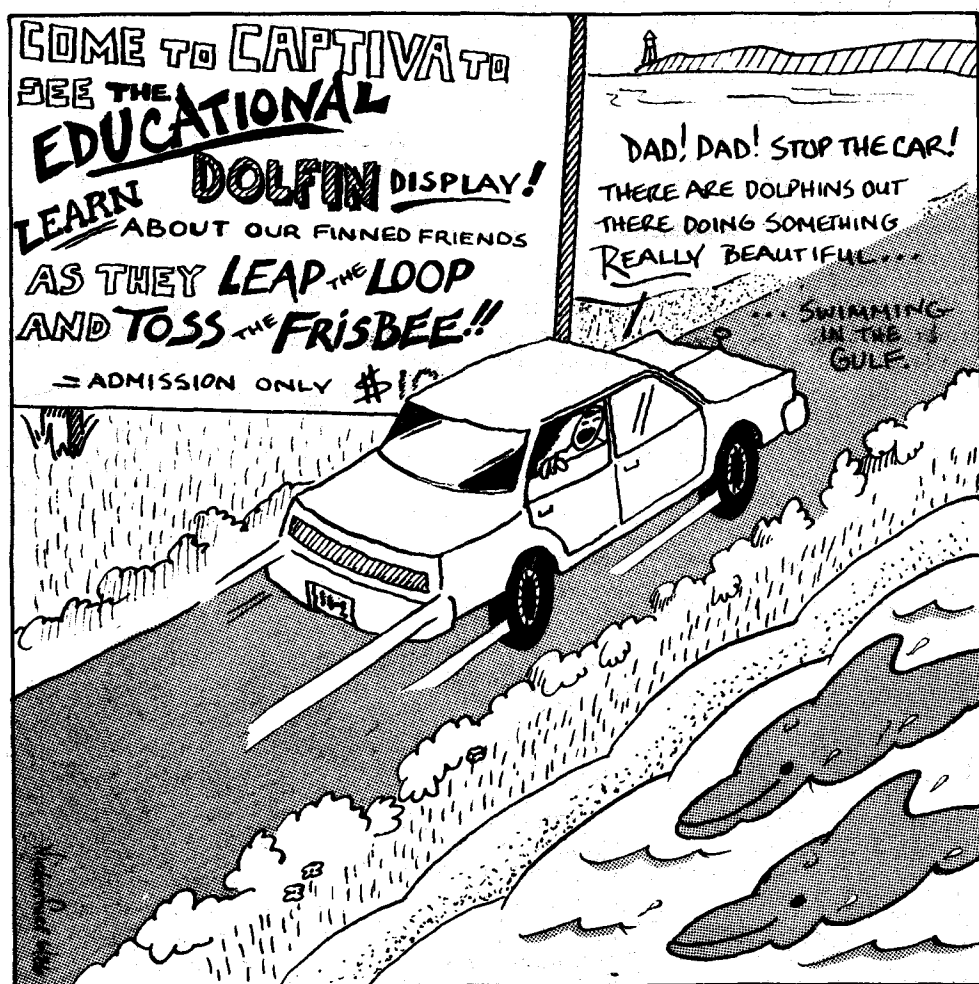

Enough is enough! South Seas Plantation has once again deceived the residents of Sanibel and Captiva into believing they are "with us" in preserving our wildlife and our precious environment. Soon they will be opening a new convention center. No, not just "additional meeting facilities" as they have said to try to cover up the fact that the once lush resort is aiming at drawing more convention business.

Once lush? Well, for obvious reasons the management has not made it public knowledge, but hold on to your hats folks. South Seas Plantation has lost its fourth star (from the Mobil ratings) and is now only a three-star resort. Why? Because the rooms are dirty and the maintenance of the facilities leaves much to be desired when one thinks of the dollars that are spent there. So now they attempt to slide through a dolphin display and figure that us residents, unassertive as we sometimes are, will let yet another outrage pass by. Stop them now!

South Seas Plantation should be more interested in cleaning up its act to regain its precious star instead of cleaning up on dollars dropped by tourists who will gawk in amazement at what we can see each day if only we would look.

 Marie Fusco

Dolphins should be enjoyed from the shore, not from sea pens

 To the Editor
The Islander

I am very much opposed to South Seas Plantation's plan to capture eight dolphins as a commercial gimmick for display for its clientele.

I feel very strongly that they should be permitted to remain in their natural environment for the enjoyment of the public as we walk the shores.

Porpoise shows are available to be seen at Sea World and other places. Leave those eight individuals to remain free.

 Alice Kylo
Sanibel

Next time around it will be Disney World

 To The Editor
The Islander

I should like to commend George Campbell, Arthur Hunter and Mark Westall for their opposition to the proposed "dolphin exhibit" at South Seas Plantation as expressed on your Commentary page June 17.

The exhibit smells of commercialism and has nothing whatsoever to do with public education, habitat or the environment. It is another example of the public greed that thrives on our ever expanding recreational economy.

Neither Sanibel nor Captiva want need a "dolphin exhibit." Next time around we will be confronted with another Disney World.

 Sincerely,
George Tenney

Canadians agree about the need for Middle and East Gulf Drive bike paths

 To the Editor
The Islander

We are among those very fortunate people who are privileged to spend the winter months in Sanibel. It truly is, in our view, a unique and wonderful place, and we admire the efforts of the council and various citizen groups to retain the essence of its uniqueness in the face of all the pressures for unrestricted development.

However, as Lynn Bogue points out (Commentary, April 29, 1986), the volume of traffic on East and Middle Gulf Drives has increased dramatically in the past several years to the point that cycling and walking on the streets has become increasingly dangerous.

The bike paths, and the emphasis on cycling and walking, are important elements of Sanibel's special charm. We agree with Ms. Bogue that additional bike paths along these routes are very much needed.

 Sincerely,
Doris and Jim Sutherland

Will the majority rule in renourishment saga?

 To the Editor
The Islander

Captiva is a barrier island. It protects the interior lands from the ravages of the sea.

Beaches protect barrier islands. By saving Captiva's beach we also protect all of Lee County.

Beach renourishment has proven itself to be the most successful method.

The majority of Captivians want to save the beach. They have voted so. Will the majority win out?

We're proud of our efforts — and ready to do more

By CINDY CHALMERS

There's something about recognition by your professional peers that inspires you to try even harder the next time around. At least that's how we all felt last Friday afternoon at the Florida Press Association 1985 Better Weekly Newspaper Contest awards presentation.

By no means did The Islander dominate the afternoon as far as the several hundred other journalists at the Hyatt Sarasota were concerned. But for the five of us who are the editorial staff here — myself, reporters Barbara Brundage, Scott Martell and Julie Niedenfuer, and photographer Ricki Kosakow Cooper — it was our day to shine among ourselves. And it felt good.

We left the luncheon proudly clutching six awards — one first place plaque (outdoor writing), four second place certificates (overall graphic design, local editorial cartoon, serious column and environment/conservation writing) and one honorable mention certificate (community service).

Oh sure, we would much rather have had to make room in the trunk for six first place plaques, but considering the competition (93 weekly newspapers from throughout Florida — one of which had a contingent of 25 people who collected no fewer than 20 awards at the luncheon), we think we did pretty well.

Scott didn't take part in our informal poll on the way home Friday afternoon, but the rest of us were unanimous that if we could only have one first place plaque, then it went to the right person. Scott submitted four stories in the category of outdoor writing. About his entries one judge wrote: "Beautifully written and illustrated. Captured my imagination ... A tough job to decide which of Martell's pieces was the best, because all four entries could have been winners ... Too bad the rules permit only one winner per paper." The winning story, titled "Rookery Inventory," appeared June 25, 1985, and was about the wide variety of nesting birds in Pine Island Sound and Matlacha Pass. Bravo, Scott!

Julie's winning editorial cartoon appeared last Aug. 6, in the midst of all the brouhaha about four-laning the Causeway. She depicted an unending line of Island-bound cars jammed all the way across the span as they waited to empty onto only two lanes of Periwinkle Way.

"Point well made," one judge wrote. What more could an editorial cartoonist want to hear?

My own serious column accompanied Julie's two-part series about spouse abuse that ran last July. In "Not in our Neighborhood" I related the story about Betty Lou Johnson, my family's Raleigh, N.C., neighbor who shot and killed her husband one night after suffering years of physical abuse at his hand. About the account a judge wrote: "Excellent lead, beautiful ending. Well written and organized ... No one who began reading this column could stop."

The entire staff, editorial and advertising alike, deserves the credit for The Islander's two other second place awards. The judges in the overall graphic design category thought the whole paper was "well thought-out ... consistent ... clean ... well-defined."

Our first anti-litter campaign was entered in the 1985 awards competition and won second place in the conservation/environmental series category. The idea for that campaign was Scott's, but virtually everyone in the office played a part in it from week to week for the duration of winter season. We did the same thing this past winter season, and will do it again next January through April.

The same anti-litter series earned the honorable mention in the community service category. The first place plaque in this category went to The Town Crier in Wellington, Fla., for its months-long effort to force the closing of a deplorable, drug-ridden motel operating under the guise of a labor camp.

We're glad we didn't have such a cause to champion ourselves.

About our trash campaign one judge said: "No expose, no crime figures brought down; just a simple recognition of a community blight and a nice effort to bring it under control ... You put your money where your mouth is, offering prizes for litter rather than doing what many newspapers do, which is simply to decry the litter in editorials ... No bad points."

There you have it, or most of it. Of course several of the judges had valuable, viable criticism for some of our entries. We'll keep those remarks to ourselves, thank you, knowing all along that even though it's the plaque and the certificates that will find a prominent place on our office wall, the criticisms are perhaps the most important product of the Better Weekly Newspaper contest.

Look out, Florida weeklies. We're already planning next year's entries.

Best wishes extended to former CEPD chairman

To the Editor
The Islander

As you know, the Concerned Citizens for Captiva has had its differences with the Captiva Erosion Prevention District board and various commissioners. We do, however, wish to commend Peg Hofschneider for her diligent efforts on the CEPD board.

We have disagreed with her on her positions, but unlike some commissioners she was willing to commit herself to being a board member. She did her homework. She attended conferences.

She joins a long list of commissioners since 1980 who did not seek re-election or resigned because of frustration at the lack of progress by the CEPD: Dan Burner, John Oster, Dick Butze, Dwight Wilson, Dewitt Jones, John Burr and Lloyd Wright.

We wish her the best in her return to civilian life.

Sincerely,
Sheila Hoen, president

Forbiddance and guilt only make the mango sweeter

I do not normally write on risqué subjects, sinful pleasures. No purveyor of pornographic literature am I. That's why I am a little embarrassed about undertaking this particular column. I feel it should be wrapped in brown paper and sold under the counter to drooling abusers — like myself.

But, for all my shame and disgrace, I cannot help myself. It's that time of year when temptation blushes on the tree like Eve's own remorseful cheeks.

In fact, here in Southwest Florida a theory circulates about which fruit actually did turn poor Eve scarlet. Was it really an innocent apple with its pure white meat and its tendency to grow in non-paradise climates like Washington and New York states?

Or was it possibly another fruit? One with a skin found poisonous by some, encasing a flesh so luscious, so sinful, a person would gladly face damnation for one refreshing slurp. A fruit, thusly, symbolizing the knowledge of good and evil. A fruit that certainly got its name — according to former Fort Myers News-Press columnist Bob Morris — from God's order to Adam and Eve, upon discovering their indulgence: "Man! Go!"

There. I said it. Mango. Just seeing the word quickens my breath as I wait impatiently for the first fruit to ripen to juicy, sweet perfection. It can't be legal. The Catholic Church must have a Commandment, a church law, a canon or at least a tenet against it. "Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's Haden." "Never eat Kents on the Sabbath." Its enjoyment definitely dwells among the seven most deadly sins — perhaps a transgression between gluttony and lust, especially if you're talking Kent variety.

ISLAND EYES

By Chelle Koster Walton

I was an easy mark. Despite my close to 15 years of Catholic schooling, I slipped with disgustingly little resistance into unbridled enjoyment of the ... the ... the m-fruit. Whew!

I was snared by a mere Caribbean turpentine mango. The kind that makes you feel as if you've flossed your teeth with yarn. It didn't matter. Anything for the refreshment of its naughty nectar. I indulged shamelessly, peeling back a strip of rind and drinking in the sweetness, juice dripping down my chin — a Baptism into indecency.

It was not a pretty sight.

Imagine my ecstasy upon discovering, several years later, that one can actually find mangoes with edible flesh. Try to picture — if your soul can weather it — the revelry of an already obsessed mango lover upon her premier tasting of a Kent!

In New Delhi, I have read, they hold an annual festival that has been described as a "mango orgy." There, in the mango's native land, Indians pretend the mango is holy. (But then you must remember, they find sacredness in other unlikely things, too.)

They name their different mango varieties after kings and such. One they call "the Fruit of Heaven," translated. They talk about it in public and around small children, as if they were discussing something as harmless (and relatively tasteless) as MacIntosh Reds. They make jokes about the Wild Mango of Bornea. They camouflage it in cocktails, chutney, mutton and chicken dishes, jams and souffles, and then sneak off behind festival booths to lop off one end, squeeze the fruit and suck up the juices. Then they try to dignify their deceit by saying that's how Mahatma Gandhi ate his. Sure!

You'll never get me believing there's anything holy about the mango. "Last Mango In Paris," right? Do you think Jimmy Buffett was associating high moral standards with the m-fruit when he came up with the title for that album?

I will do no admitting to the godliness of the mango. No absolution of my sins. No relief from the guilt. Because every good Catholic has learned the lesson of the Garden of Eden: Forbiddance and guilt make the fruit sweeter.

Freelance writer Chelle Koster Walton moved to Sanibel five years ago from Minnesota. She has written for dozens of businesses and publications, including Islands, Oceans, Discovery, the Fort Lauderdale News and Sun-Sentinel, Gulfshore Life, Florida Keys Magazine and South Florida Home and Garden. Florida and Caribbean travel, food and lore, and humor are her specialties. She also helps her husband, Rob, with his yard maintenance business and works part-time at the Big Red Q print shop.

Despite intervenors' objections, talks are on again between city and county about $100 million bond issue

By BARBARA BRUNDAGE
Islander staff writer

A July 1 meeting between the Sanibel City Council, Lee County Commissioner Porter Goss and the county's bond consultants is on again. The parties will discuss details of the county's $100 million bond issue to finance improvements to the Sanibel Causeway and build a parallel bridge to Cape Coral.

A week ago attorney Steve Carta filed a motion for a rehearing of the bond validation before Circuit Court Judge James Thompson. Carta is representing four opponents to the financial plan, three of whom are Sanibel residents.

After the motion was filed, Goss said the July 1 meeting would be "pointless and premature."

But Friday, with the possibility that the County Commission will find a way to sell the bonds before the legal questions are cleared up, Goss said he plans to go ahead with the discussion with Sanibel councilmen.

Included will be several options for Causeway tolls required to pay off the bonds.

Judge Thompson has set the rehearing requested by Carta for July 28, but County Administrator Jerry Maxwell has asked for an earlier date so as not to delay the projects any longer than necessary.

Goss called the bid for a rehearing a legal ploy and a delaying tactic. He called the intervenors' action willful and deliberate. "Their objections are not based on the merits of the project but on procedural grounds," he added.

Goss maintained the only purpose of the rehearing is to drag out the legal fight and delay sale of the bonds until after a tax reform bill before Congress is passed. That bill, which probably will pass in early September, will change many of the rules of municipal bond financing.

"It's hard to see this as in the community's interest," Goss said. He added the intervenors are using the "big lie" technique, and he categorically denied that the proposed financing plan gives the commission a blank check.

posed would have to be approved by a judge before more bonds were issued, and county residents will still have the right of challenge, he explained.

Should Thompson not change his decision on the validation, Carta can still appeal to the Florida Supreme Court.

"I can see as much as nine months or a year's delay before the issue is settled," Goss said.

Between $25 million and $30 million of the proposed bond issue is earmarked to fund Causeway improvements that include constructing a high rise bridge to replace the bascule span and raising the level of the road on the two spoil islands.

Goss said if the bonds can be sold before the changes in federal law are passed, then the monies will have to be placed in escrow and cannot be used to begin any of the proposed projects until the legal slate is clean.

Goss said the intervenors' action is causing an unnecessary delay of "a very necessary project with a strong public purpose."

Sanibel and Captiva residents will be on the losing end by the postponement of the county's plan to mitigate the Islands' evacuation problems, he said.

County Commissioner Porter Goss says the intervenors' action is causing an unnecessary delay of "a very necessary project with a strong public purpose."

POLICE BEAT

All information in the following reports was taken directly from Sanibel Police Department records.

Two bicycles were reported missing from Sanibel Cottages late Friday morning, June 13. The bikes, which had been leased from a West Palm Beach firm, were valued at $150 each. Each was a silver, three-speed men's Leisure Time model.

Police investigated a car break-in at Sundial around 11:30 a.m. Sunday, June 15. Someone had ripped the convertible top of a 1982 Porsche and stolen an Escort radar detector from the car. Several other valuable items in the car were not disturbed. Damage to the convertible top was estimated at $2,000. The radar detector was valued at $275.

A local man was arrested for sunbathing in the nude after an off-duty officer observed him on the West Gulf Drive beach early Sunday afternoon, June 15. James O. Evans Jr., 34, was charged.

A group of beachgoers extinguished their bonfire after police advised them of the city's law prohibiting such fires around 11:50 p.m. Sunday, June 15. The fire was extinguished and the group dispersed without incident.

A construction worker reported someone had vandalized a site on Shell Basket Lane early Monday morning, June 16. Three panes of glass were broken, possibly by a BB gun, several stacks of lumber were disturbed, and paint was dumped on the building. Damage was estimated around $100.

A Cumberland, Md., man reported his brother had lost a wallet containing $800 in cash somewhere around Jerry's shopping center early Monday afternoon, June 16.

A Sanibel woman reported a windsurfer was stolen from her home on Buttonwood Lane sometime between 8 p.m. June 15 and 4 p.m. June 16. The 12-foot board had a yellow, red, orange and white sail was valued at $1,000. Both sides of the sail were imprinted with the number 825.

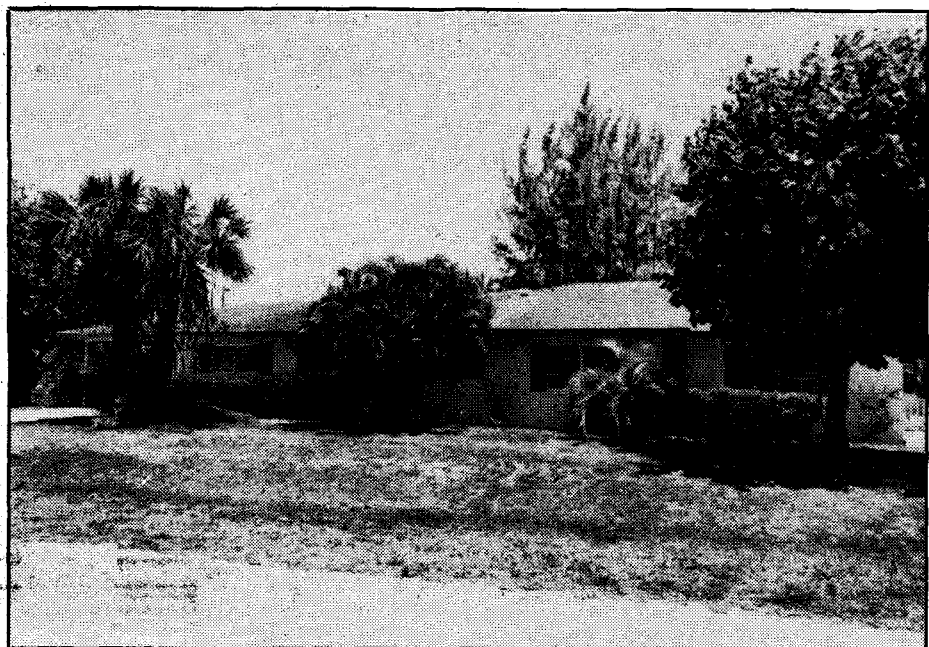

Police received a call about gunshots being fired off Casa Ybel Road near Sandpebble Lane around 10:30 p.m. Monday, June 16. Several neighbors reported hearing the same sounds that probably were from a large caliber gun. Police made a thorough check of the area for spent shells but found nothing. They also checked surrounding canals for any signs of a dead or injured alligator but found nothing unusual.

Police looked for but did not find a man who was reportedly soliciting religious material along Ibis Lane early Tuesday afternoon, June 17. The complainant said the man had been to his home several times in recent weeks.

Mariner says no to dolphin display at South Seas

By SCOTT MARTELL
Islander staff writer

South Seas Plantation has decided not to go forward with the dolphin research station proposed by San Diego veterinarian Dr. Jay Sweeney.

After listening to two weeks of public outrage since the plan became public, Allen Ten Broek, president of The Mariner Group, announced Monday afternoon his company had decided to drop any further study of the proposal.

Dolphin researcher Susan Shane brought the plan to the public's attention in a letter that appeared in Island newspapers two weeks ago. Her letter in turn generated numerous letters expressing great dismay over the plan. The Sanibel City Council even adopted a resolution in opposition to the idea.

"South Seas Plantation does not want to be part of something which has become so controversial on the islands," Ten Broek said Monday. "As far as I'm concerned, the plan had some merit, but it never was particularly understood. But so many opinions have already been made that any further explanation would be futile."

Sweeney had applied for a permit to capture eight bottlenose dolphins and create a series of "sea pens" — in a five to 10 acre natural habitat — for them on the bay side of the resort.

Ten Broek stressed that Sweeney's motivation was a desire to share his experience with these unique animals, and that the proposal's real basis was in education and acquisition of information regarding the local dolphin population — not for public display.

He said the proposal detailed studies that would have included investigation of social structure, reproduction and natural diseases in the dolphins.

Ten Broek added that since he has lived in Southwest Florida, there have been several "beachings" of whales, and that such a facility as Sweeney proposed might have led to research in this area.

He also stressed that the facility in no way would have increased visitation to Captiva — that the resort would have remained a private operation. The figures mentioned in previous reports simply stated the number of annual visitors to South Seas.

"Dr. Sweeney is disappointed at our decision, but he understands our position here," Ten Broek said.

Because of South Seas' decision, Sweeney's anticipated visit to Captiva this week has been cancelled.

"We still have a lot of questions for Dr. Sweeney that we never got a chance to raise," Ten Broek said. "It's unfortunate that we never even got to that point."

"While an appropriately planned and managed dolphin station might have proved to be of real value to our area, current public sentiment must be taken into account," Ten Broek said. "It might have proved a good study for the dolphins. But it would have been difficult to communicate that information to a group of people who already had their minds made up."

On an island... In the $60,000s.

Imagine an unhurried, unspoiled Florida seaside village, nestled amid the natural beauty of a Gulf Coast island untouched by explosive growth. Waves lap against the bow of your boat, moored at a private dock in your own backyard, ready to take you out to chase the tarpon off Boca Grande, to explore the sandy beaches of a nearby out-island . . . or just lazily cruise the backwaters of Pine Island Sound and Charlotte Harbor.

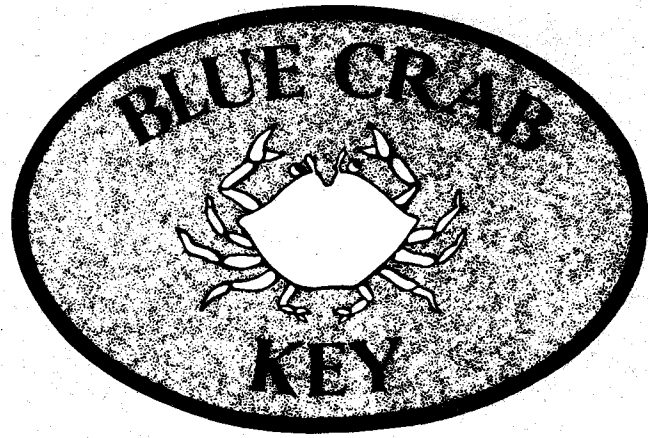

Overlooking the water, your 2-bedroom, 2½-bath townhouse has plenty of room to relax in after a day on the water, with a floorplan made for easy living. There's a private clubhouse just steps away from your door, and a pool, spa, tennis courts — with golfing, restaurants and shopping just minutes away — or, you can just take it easy on your back porch and watch the water drift by.

Sounds good? It is. Sounds expensive? It's not . . . condominium prices start at $69,500. Where can you find all this? Blue Crab Key . . . a chance at the island life you shouldn't miss. Call, write or come visit us soon . . . for waterfront living at a liveable price.

THOSE WERE THE DAYS

By ELINORE DORMER

On Sanibel in January 1930, a knobby-kneed, tow-headed girl sat writing in her diary: "I think J.B. likes Sidney. I don't want to be in the way, but HOW?" Later she would confide: "I have at least one boyfriend that I know of."

At age 11, Elinore Mayer also had girlfriends, the closest of whom were Ammo and Sidney Burhans, daughters of the school teacher. If J.B. Stewart preferred someone else, well, there were other boys at Sanibel School and greater social problems. "Took dancing. Didn't know I knew so little of it. I am sort of worried."

For the Mayer family, 1930 began as a wonderful year. They were not yet affected by the Great Depression, and their own personal tragedy was as yet undreamed of.

Ross and Daisy, with Ellie and Sherwin, the youngest of their five children, left Erie, Penn., Jan. 15 and drove their large touring car all the way to New Market, Va., in one day. There they learned that young Ross, called Junior, had taken French leave from his school, Hargrave Military Academy, to visit his sister, Grace, at Fairfax Hall. He was gone three days, but by the time his parents reached Chatham he had returned. Undoubtedly he was punished, but all little sister noticed was that when he came to the hotel for dinner, Mother gave him food and promised to send candy. They drove on to Richmond to visit their eldest child, Betty, who was then in college.

Theirs was a leisurely trip partly because U.S. Rt. 1 was unpaved part of the way and the big car sometimes got stuck in the red, southern mud. On one occasion Ross had to coax it up a slippery hill as Daisy and the children walked behind. They visited and did sightseeing along the way and eventually reached Punta Rassa on Jan. 22. There they boarded the ferry, Best, for the last lap of their journey.

They found everything as they had left it at their big Sears and Roebuck house, Shore Haven.

The children were enrolled in Sanibel School the very next day. It was a typical one-room school house. There were about 28 students there in 1930. Grade by grade, they would file up to the platform at the front of the room to recite their lessons to Mrs. Burhans. Besides reading, writing and arithmetic there were special projects — a school vegetable garden, an exhibit to be prepared for the Lee County Fair and rehearsals for the school play which opened to rave reviews at the Community House. Clarence Rutland still grew tomatoes in a field across the road and the children were welcome to take the ripe ones.

Island historian's 1930s diary spins stories of a simpler life on Sanibel and Captiva

"Mosquito control" was a smoking smudgepot outside of every door, and the children associated mosquitos with moonflowers. Every evening at dusk their mother would call, "Come see the moonflowers open!" and they would stand on the back porch hopping and slapping as the fragrant blooms wondrously unfolded before their eyes.

Most of the day biting insects were no problem. Splashing in the bay with their friends, shelling after a Nor'Wester, fishing off the dock, Sher's discovery of an Indian dugout canoe and Junior's pet blacksnake, Quickly Bill, which he kept buttoned up inside his shirt — these were the things they would remember. There were also happy memories of their father's hummock citrus grove and the black family that lived there.

Sher's almost constant companions were Peter and Herbert Burns, whose uncle and aunt, Peter and Mary, worked for the Mayer family. In later years it seemed ironic that the boys would go off to separate schools and churches, then eagerly seek each other out afterward.

Sanibel was a sociable place in 1930. There were card games at night, fish fries and oyster roasts on the beach. The Bailey boys' Uncle Ernest loved the "the-ah-ta" and arranged presentations at the Community House.

Almost every Saturday night there was a dance there, too, and just about everyone went, even the hotel guests who were easily recognizable in white flannels and gay dresses. They were much too elegant to be called "tourists."

Although Ellie despaired of ever learning ballroom dancing, eventually she graduated from winding the Victrola to stepping out on the dance floor. She circled the room with hardly a misstep with her friend Lessie's father, tall silent George Underhill. He was a fishing guide who strongly resembled his Indian mother.

Despite appalling spelling, our diarist caught the mood of Sanibel. She noted that when Francis Bailey had a birthday party his brothers, John and Sam, got presents also. Mrs. Cockrill, who taught dancing, was cross as two sticks. The broody hen hatched her chicks and Tiger Lilly hid her kittens under the house. Two boys had a fight in the school yard. Mrs. McGill died and everyone went to the funeral and she and her friends had "quite an adventure." When they went into Miss Charlotta Matthews' tea room next to Bailey's store, a customer bought them all cold drinks and with unusual largess gave each girl a shiny dime. Then they ate all the sample fudge and Miss Charlotta gave them a ride in her car. Quite an adventure, indeed!

Winter sped by. One night there was a very high tide and schools of mullet were so thick they could catch them by hand. Fish too numb to swim were washed up on the beach during a cold spell and were gathered to eat. Great sheets of fiddler crabs scuttled across the washboard roads, giant manta rays leaped in the channel, and there were scallops for the gathering in seaweed of Tarpon Bay.

When they boarded the ferry in May they left more behind than an empty house — they left an idyll of childhood. The bottom had dropped out of the family business, Mayer Brother Construction Co., and other firms — and the state of New York — did not pay what was owed them.

Ross Mayer already was a very sick man for worrying. He died in December 1931. Medical costs had been astronomical and his widow was left with bills totaling more than $100,000. She was advised to declare bankruptcy, but with her deep-seated honesty Daisy Mayer refused to do this. She divested herself of most real estate, including, finally, the family home in Erie, but everyone they owned got his money. With the help of the older ones, each of the children went to college and two graduated.

For all the hardships of those years there was finally a happy ending. Although Shore Haven fell into disrepair, the family kept it and Daisy Mayer returned to Sanibel to live there during World War II. She died at the age of 89.

Island historian Elinore Dormer came to Sanibel for the first time 66 years ago. She serves on the city's Historical Preservation Committee and volunteers at the Island Historical Museum. She is the author of Sanibel and Captiva: The Sea Shell Islands.

MILESTONES

Wedding

Shields-Graham

Carol Reed Shields of Yorkshire, England, and James Jay Graham of San Francisco, Calif., were married Saturday afternoon, June 14, 1986, at Sanibel Congregational United Church of Christ. The Rev. Richard Stein officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Johanne and Bill Shields of Dallas, Texas. Her grandmother is Lillian Paschall of Captiva. The groom is the son of Mrs. Tony Graham of San Francisco.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and was attended by her sister, Lisa Paschall Shields of Dallas, Texas. Jay Graham was his brother's best man. Ushers were Paul Storm and Larry Johnson.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the Wakefield Room at Tween Waters Inn on Captiva.

After a Caribbean honeymoon the couple will be at home in Los Gatos, Calif.

Anniversary

Hulda and William Walters

Long-time Sanibel residents Hulda and William Walters will celebrate their 40th wedding anniversary this Wednesday, June 25.

They were married in 1946 in Jefferson County, Mo., and have lived on Sanibel for 15 years. Since they have been on the Island they have started Island Condo Maintenance, which is now run by their son, Steve, and Weeds 'n' Things florist, which is run by daughter-in-law Connie Walters. Hulda Walters is still involved in real estate sales on the Islands.

The Walters' five sons are traveling from Europe, Missouri, Georgia and Florida for the anniversary celebration at the family home on Sanibel. Son Tracy and his wife, Connie, will also celebrate a wedding anniversary, their fourth, on June 25.

Hulda and William Walters - Missouri, 1955.

Ad hoc committee recommends referendum on election changes

But City Council takes no action on recommendation

By BARBARA BRUNDAGE
Islander staff writer

If the City Council has its way, Sanibel will continue its current election procedure with council candidates running for specific seats. Two Island organizations have proposed that council candidates should run at large, with the top vote getters being seated on the five-member board.

Last Tuesday a special ad hoc Charter Revision Committee recommended that the present election process should be abandoned in favor of the at large system. The committee also recommended that the council put the question on the ballot for a vote of the people in next November's election.

But the council took no action on the recommendations.

Mayor Louise Johnson was the only council member who favored giving Sanibel citizens the opportunity of voting on the proposal. The measure was endorsed by three Island groups: Committee of the Islands, Condominium Associations of Sanibel, Inc., and the Committee of Neighborhoods Association.

Councilman Fred Valtin said a COTI survey of its membership that brought a 70 percent response with 90 percent favoring a change to at large balloting was "somewhat suspect."

"They were not given the option of voting for no change," Valtin said.

Councilman Francis Bailey interpreted the apparent lack of public interest in the subject when the ad hoc committee reviewed the COTI-CASI proposal as an indication of "satisfaction with things as they are."

Gordon Kiddoo, chairman of the ad hoc committee, said the lack of public interest could mean there was "no overwhelming dissatisfaction with the current system."

Kiddoo presented the committee's recommendation for a change to the council last Tuesday with the caveat that it was "not a strong case." He added, "It was a close question for all the committee members."

He stressed that the 5-1 vote in favor of the change represented the committee's position that the council should put the issue to a referendum of the voters.

But Valtin said he could not support either the change in the election system or the referendum. The proponents of the change should collect signatures on an initiative petition calling for a referendum, he maintained.

Mike Miracle, a COTI director and a member of the special committee, said Friday the COTI board was seriously considering pursuing the citizen initiative route.

More than 800 signatures from Sanibel registered voters would be required to trigger council action to adopt an ordinance calling for the change to at large elections and to put the question to a vote of the people.

Miracle said a decision will be reached probably by mid-week.

Miracle, who represented the COTI view on the committee, said the basic reason for wanting the change is that running at large would attract more qualified candidates to run for council office.

"Many good people are deterred from offering their services because they do not want head-to-head confrontation with incumbents," Miracle explained. "They would be quite willing to run against a field and on a platform dealing with issues. It would get more people in the election process," he added.

But councilmen Mike Klein and Bill Hagerup agreed that "more candidates is not necessarily better."

Too many candidates make the choice harder for voters, Klein said. "Candidates should have the commitment required of a councilman to face the opposition," he added.

Hagerup concurred that candidates should have the courage of their convictions to stand up to the opposition head-to-head.

Both councilmen opposed a change and said they would not support council initiation of a referendum.

Klein's motion to take no action on a referendum as proposed by COTI and CASI passed by a 4-1 vote, with Johnson dissenting.

Council adopts new commercial regulations

By BARBARA BRUNDAGE
Islander staff writer

The moratorium on commercial development on Sanibel in effect since March 1985 has expired and a new set of commercial regulations is in place.

Last Tuesday the City Council by a 4-1 vote approved an amendment to the Land Development Code that establishes three commercial districts in the city. Councilman Francis Bailey cast the dissenting vote.

The new scenario calls for a General Commercial District that includes the three commercial nodes along Periwinkle Way, and the Town Center General Commercial District that includes commercial property on the outer perimeter of the Palm Ridge-Tarpon Bay-Periwinkle Way triangle.

In both these districts all the Permitted Uses listed in the LDC are allowed.

The third district — Town Center Limited Commercial District — encompasses a "grand piano" shaped area in the inner core of the triangle. Four uses identified as tourist-oriented are prohibited in this district.

City fathers hope that restricting this district, which now consists mostly of vacant land, will encourage businesses that will fill needs of Island residents.

Three members of the council supported the creation of the district. Councilmen Francis Bailey and Councilman Fred Valtin opposed making any distinction in commercial uses. But they were the losers in a 3-2 vote on the Permitted Uses section of the ordinance.

Bailey said the limitation would accomplish the opposite of what was intended. "It creates an artificial stimulus that will make the rest of the commercial land on Sanibel more valuable," he said.

Both Bailey and Valtin pointed out that the restriction will tend to force new so-called tourist-related businesses such as specialty apparel, gift, shell and t-shirt shops into the other two commercial zones, making space at a premium.

Mayor Louise Johnson said the limitation is consistent with the city's goal to slow down commercial development. "75 percent (of the Island's new businesses over recent years) have been geared to tourist support," she said. "To prohibit more of them in the Town Center Limited District will encourage more residential-oriented shops," she added.

The limitation will create only two non-conforming uses, Johnson stressed.

Councilmen Mike Klein and Bill Hagerup agreed that it was worthwhile to try to keep the approximately 18 acres of vacant commercial land in the Town Center Limited district resident-oriented.

Both agreed with Johnson that the compromise will

City takes strong stand against dolphin display

By BARBARA BRUNDAGE
Islander staff writer

• Sanibel City Council has taken a STRONG STAND AGAINST A CAPTURED BOTTLENOSE DOLPHIN DISPLAY at Captiva's South Seas Plantation resort.

A resolution passed unanimously by the council last Tuesday requests that the National Marine Fisheries Service in Washington, D.C., deny a permit for Dr. Jay Sweeney, a California veterinarian, to capture eight dolphins from the off the Southwest Florida coast for display in sea pens in Pine Island Sound at South Seas.

The resolution points out that, "... The capture, confinement and display of dolphins from the gulf of Mexico is abhorrent to the environmental principles which the city of Sanibel and its citizens support."

The resolution continues: "One of the fundamental tenets of the city's Comprehensive Land Use Plan is the preservation and protection of the natural environment, which requires that human activity be as compatible as possible with the natural environment and other living creatures."

The resolution also asks South Seas Plantation management not to permit such a public display which has the potential of exacerbating traffic problems on Sanibel.

• The City Council doubled the asked-for donation and authorized a $500 CONTRIBUTION TO HELP DEFRAY THE COST OF THE 1986 FOURTH OF JULY FIREWORKS DISPLAY sponsored by the Bank of the Islands and the Dunes Country Club.

The organizers of the annual event have asked the city, Sanibel service clubs and businesses for $250 donations.

The fireworks will be set off on the Sanibel Causeway beginning at dusk Friday, July 4.

• To MITIGATE TRAFFIC TIE-UPS DURING THE BUSY WINTER SEASON, the right turn lane on Palm Ridge Road at the Periwinkle Way intersection will be extended 200 feet to the Eckerd Drug entrance drive, City Manager Gary Price told the City Council last week.

In conjunction with this project the existing bicycle path on the east side of Palm Ridge Road will be extended along Periwinkle Way in front of the new Village of Sanibel shopping center with a new crossing just west of the center's entrance drive, Price said.

The existing bike path on the south side of Periwinkle Way just west of Palm Ridge Road will be moved farther from the road in front of the Islander Center.

Price said water retention areas will be constructed in this area on the north side of Periwinkle Way to alleviate flooding on the bike path in front of the Burger Emporium.

The council authorized Price to execute the contract for the project with APAC-Florida, Inc., which submitted the low bid of $18,373 for the work.

achieve the goal of slowing down commercial building.

Klein pointed out that the LDC now provides an incentive to residential development as an alternative to commercial by an increase in density in the Palm Ridge triangle from four to six dwelling units per acre.

The new regulations also provide that commercial properties with road frontage of 100 feet or more will be eligible for the higher 10 percent floor area coverage in both Town Center districts and 12 percent in the General Commercial District. Properties with 99 feet or less of road frontage are restricted to a 5 percent FAR.

The council voted unanimously to permit 1½-story structures in commercial districts if five conditions are met. Included in those conditions is a stipulation that access to the second floor can only be by interior means from the first floor.

John VanDeusen

Age: 38

Roots: Upstate New York

Pleasures: "Doing what all the newcomers (to Sanibel) do. And we just bought a camper. I used to golf — I'll probably pick that back up."

Last book read: "Feng Shui" by Sarah Rossbach.

Wish: "For folks across social and economic lines to be able to sit down and do problem solving about things that really affect our lives and the lives of those who follow us."

Words of Wisdom: "None. I'm not old enough yet."

"Spend time with your kids." If John VanDeusen could give one piece of advice to every parent who wanted to keep his child straight, that would be it.

And with his own 13- and 16-year-old daughters at home, the newly-appointed executive director of a local adolescent alcohol and drug abuse intervention program aims to practice what he preaches.

"The Islands are very conducive to family time," says VanDeusen. That's why he moved his wife Joanne and three daughters, Trilby, Brady and Franmi, to Sanibel in May. (His third daughter celebrated her first birthday last week.)

The 38-year-old came here from Philadelphia to take over Outreach, Inc., a non-profit organization established to provide drug treatment services to local youths and their families. The facility will be in Cape Coral.

VanDeusen's appointment is considered a major step toward the start-up of operations, which is expected within three months.

"We're starting on a shoestring," he says about the infant program whose nurturing requires that VanDeusen be a "jack-of-all-trades."

His duties will include administrative and clinical work, training staff, fundraising and working with kids. Right now he is taking intensive training at Outreach's model program in Sarasota, which requires his traveling back and forth several times a week.

VanDeusen completed coursework for his doctoral degree at the Wharton School, University of Pennsylvania, and clinical training in individual and family therapy at the Philadelphia Child Guidance Clinic and Family Therapy Institute of Washington, D.C.

Over the past 12 years he has held several management positions in the field of human services. Most recently he was an associate director at Resources for Human Development in Ardmore, Pa.

His experience in drug and alcohol services dates from 1974, when he served as research coordinator for a pioneer study of family therapy with veterans addicted to heroin.

VanDeusen authored several publications on the treatment approach developed in this research and for the past several years has directed a private group practice providing clinical services and training.

VanDeusen opted to take the position as Outreach's executive director after examining the program in Sarasota.

"It's state-of-the-art. It's a peer intervention approach," he says about the program.

Whereas some programs are too disciplinary, and others are too lax, Outreach "is a nice balance of structure and caring — plus it involves the whole family," he says.

The program, which is a condensed version of Alcoholics Anonymous, works in seven steps. At the first level the child is put in a foster situation with a family whose own child is higher up in the program. For the first 14 days the child is not allowed to communicate with his own family other than on a group basis. Eventually, as the child adapts his behavior he earns privileges (such as being reintroduced to the school environment, or being allowed to see his parents) and gradually climbs the steps.

But even then, he's not out of the woods. "I used to work with heroin addicts and it took five years to know whether someone had really gone straight," VanDeusen says. Outreach graduates are considered successful if they stay clean for three years.

The latest drug craze, a form of cocaine known as "rock," is particularly dangerous because "it's very cheap, it's easy to get a hold of and it's very powerful," VanDeusen says.

"We're just beginning to learn the kinds of effects and physical complications from this drug," he adds. "It's one of the worst drugs to treat if someone is dependent on it."

And Island youngsters certainly are not exempt from being exposed to drugs, VanDeusen believes. "There is a need (for Outreach) on Sanibel. I can't betray any confidences, but I can say I'm sure there are families here with needs," he says.

Outreach treats youths between the ages of 13 and 22. "But (drug abuse) goes younger than that — even to kids in elementary school," he says.

The youngest drug addict VanDeusen ever treated was 13. And he remembers one 14-year-old addict in Pennsylvania whose impetus to kick her habit was the fact that she got pregnant.

VanDeusen is not immune to the horrors of seeing alcoholics and drug addicts who are still relative toddlers. "But part of my job is learning to deal with personal feelings internally and talking with colleagues. There is a professional ethic and code of behavior — you have to put your personal feelings aside."

"But sure, it hurts every time I see one of those kids."

Collucci opens walk-in medical center off-Island

By SCOTT MARTELL
Islander staff writer

When Dr. John Collucci's dream of expanding his Island Medical Clinic and creating a comprehensive health care complex on Sanibel fell apart before less-than-enthusiastic city fathers, Collucci didn't get mad or get even. He moved his plans off-Island.

Last week Collucci and Sanibel developer William Letendre opened a south Fort Myers branch of Island Medical Clinic, Inc., in Summerlin Square on San Carlos Boulevard. The family practice clinic operates in cooperation with Fort Myers Community Hospital.

Letendre, a former pharmacist, has developed six medical care facilities in New Hampshire and hopes to open four to five more in South Florida over the next three years. He is also the developer of the Periwinkle Pines residential area on Periwinkle Way on Sanibel.

The 2,000-square-foot south Fort Myers medical center will be a "satellite" clinic to Collucci's primary practice in the 1,000-square-foot Island Medical Clinic on Sanibel's Palm Ridge Road.

"I'll divide my time between the two clinics until I can find a permanent, full-time physician for the south Fort Myers clinic," Collucci says. "My practice has developed so it has become more than one person can handle. But with the size facility we have on Sanibel, I couldn't really bring anyone in, nor could I bring in specialists or have many ancillary services."

The new off-Island clinic is not quite as ambitious as the comprehensive health center Collucci had planned for the Michican Homes building at the corner of Lindgren Boulevard and Periwinkle Way on Sanibel. That plan called for 9,700 square feet of space which would have hosted everything from dental and eye care to x-rays, laboratory tests, physical therapy, EKGs and cardiac stress testing.

Collucci abandoned those plans in September 1985, after spending two

"This kind of clinic is the future of medical care. Medicine has to go to the people."

years attempting to obtain Sanibel Planning Department approval of the facility.

The Summerlin Square branch has a large laboratory to handle many medical tests in-house. X-ray services and five examining rooms are in the clinic. A staff of eight to 10 employees, including a physician, a lab technician, an x-ray technician and nurses, will operate this facility 54 hours a week (Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., and Saturday from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.).

"By operating in cooperation with the Fort Myers Community Hospital we can offer emergency backup facilities and have a referral service for specialists," Letendre says. "A patient can come into the system here — it's convenient for the patient, who doesn't have to bounce from one place to another."

Collucci has been on the staff of the Fort Myers Community Hospital for six years.

"This kind of clinic is the future of medical care," he says. "Medicine has to go to the people. As cities expand, you can't expect patients to head to a downtown hospital. Instead, they're looking for satellite clinics such as this one."

"It is the wave of the future," Letendre reiterates. "Customers have become more sophisticated. They recognize a good value, and they demand convenience and accessibility."

In 1982 there were about 300 of these "ambulatory care centers" in the United States. In 1986 nearly 4,000 such walk-in facilities provide medical care in America.

Peter Harman

Sanibel chef makes World Culinary Olympic team bid

Peter Harman, executive chef at Thistle Lodge restaurant, earned two silver medals recently at the American Culinary Federation competition in Boston during the tryouts for the U.S. Olympic Culinary team. Twelve team members were later selected from across the nation during the National Restaurant Association's annual conference in Chicago. The team will compete in the 1988 World Culinary Olympics in Frankfurt, Germany.

To qualify for the Olympic team tryouts, a chef must accumulate points by competing in ACF food shows. Harman has earned points, medals and best of show honors at various food competitions throughout the eastern United States.

The 27-year-old chef grew up in Vermont and began his culinary career at 16 in classes at a vocational-technical school where students catered 100 banquets a year. A baseball scholarship brought him to Florida and, after working in several area restaurants, he arrived in the kitchen at Thistle Lodge in 1981.

Vacation Shoppe opens Sanibel branch under Carolyn Page

The Vacation Shoppe, with main offices on Fort Myers Beach, has opened a branch office at 1711 Periwinkle Way on Sanibel to better handle the rentals of resort properties on the Island.

President Barbara Cage has named Carolyn Page to head the new office. The former Nashville, Tenn., realtor has been active in area property management. She is now working on a novel that concerns the real estate world.

With current listings of 20 properties, last year The Vacation Shoppe placed 3,800 families in rental units. This firm advertises in the Wall Street Journal, Orlando Sentinel, Cleveland Plain Dealer, Southern Living and Travel South.

The Vacation Shoppe resorts, homes and condominiums are on Sanibel, Fort Myers Beach, Orlando, Daytona, Upper Captiva, Marco Island, Bonita Beach, Naples, Treasure Island, Fort Lauderdale, Siesta Key, Marathon Key and Panama City Beach.

Electricians track down fallen Captivan's cries for help

By SCOTT MARTELL
Islander staff writer

Captivan Betty Henderson believes in heroes. She met two of them first hand. They saved her life.

One day earlier this month, Henderson walked from her bayside home to Captiva Road to gather her mail. On the way back she fell and broke her hip. She was about 400 feet from the road and 300 feet from her home. She could not move.

She cried out for help several times. No one responded. The jungly area surrounding her property absorbed the sound. Besides, most of her neighbors had already left to go up north, or else they were working.

Henderson kept gathering her strength and then screaming again for help. She lay on the ground for over an hour. Every once in a while she yelled. Still, no one heard her cries. Then, far in the distance, she heard the tattooing of a hammer. When it stopped, she yelled again.

Garry Gibson and George Rivera of Semmer Electric had arrived early at a construction site. They thought they heard screams. They started searching the woods near the construction site. They couldn't find anyone, but they were sure they had heard feeble cries for help. They kept searching.

Finally, they broke out into Henderson's driveway and discovered her on the ground. While Rivera stayed with Henderson, Gibson ran to Henderson's house and called the rescue squad. Then he returned with a blanket to comfort Henderson.

"I owe my life to those young men," Henderson said last week. "They deserve a medal."

Henderson said she did not expect anyone to come by her house that day. The next people she expected were the garbage men the following morning.

"I knew they would come at 4 a.m., in the dark, and that they wouldn't think of looking along the road as they backed down my driveway — that's all I could think of as I lay there," Henderson remembers. While she lay on the ground, she suffered heart failure.

Gibson and Rivera just happened to be at the site early, Semmer dispatcher Sandra Bianchi said last week.

"If all the tradesmen had arrived at the same time and gotten to work, the scene would have been very busy and there would have been so much noise that no one could have heard her," Bianchi said.

But the Semmer men did hear her, and they didn't give up in their search. Captiva Fire Chief John Bates gathered Henderson and took her to Blind Pass, where a medical emergency helicopter picked her up for transport to Lee Memorial Hospital.

Henderson said she is now doing very well at Lee Memorial Hospital. She has to undergo physical therapy for the broken hip, but plans to "grin and bear it."

"Those two men (Rivera and Gibson) did a live-saving thing, let me tell you," Henderson said.

as well as local needs, such as drug abuse and diabetes programs.

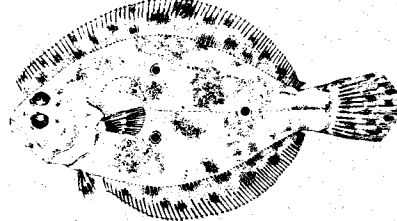

When the donation total was announced, the club gave Bailey a standing ovation for his leadership in the past year's fund-raising activities. In addition, $5,000 was set aside to match a gift of the same amount to set up a scholarship award for a blind student. The details for this will be finalized during the next few months and a further announcement made.

Bailey announced that the annual Cram-A-Cart drawing will be held on Labor Day with ticket sales to start July 4th if possible.

The next regular meeting will begin at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday, July 2, at the community association. Pre-meeting fellowship will begin at 6:15 p.m.

• Beaches

On Sanibel UNRESTRICTED PARKING WITH NO STICKER is permitted for everyone along the Causeway, at the Sanibel Lighthouse and Fishing Pier at the eastern tip of the island, at Gulfside City Park off Casa Ybel Road, on the east side of the Sanibel end of the Causeway, at the gulf end of Tarpon Bay Road and at the Trost property on Tarpon Bay Road.

Off-Islanders with RESTRICTED PARKING STICKERS can find beach access at Bailey Road, Beach Road, Dixie Beach Boulevard, Nerita Street, Donax Street, Fulger Street and on the Sanibel side of Turner Beach.

Island residents with RESIDENTIAL PARKING STICKERS can park on West Gulf Drive west of Rabbit Road, the bay and gulf sides of Buttonwood Lane, the bay and gulf sides of Seagrape Lane, Colony Walkway, Bay Drive and on Henderson Road at Castaways Lane.

The user fee for the COUNTY PARK AT BOWMAN'S BEACH on the western end of Sanibel is $2 per car.

The fine for parking in a restricted or residential area without the proper permit is $35.

ON CAPTIVA public beach access for no charge can be found at Turner Beach or further north just past the entrance to South Seas Plantation.

State law prohibits nude sunbathing on all Florida beaches. Violators will be prosecuted.

• Biking

The extensive network of bike paths on Sanibel is clearly marked along the edge of the road. Observe caution when driving near the bike path.

A state law and city ordinance combine to prohibit parking or driving on the bike paths. Mopeds are not permitted on the bike paths.

If you plan to spend some time on a bike make sure your vehicle is equipped with a horn, good brakes and a light for night riding.

Under Florida law bicycle riders have the same rights and responsibilities as motor vehicle drivers.

• Camping

Camping on the beach is prohibited, as are open beach fires. Fires are permitted, however, in approved cooking containers (not to exceed 48x24x12 inches deep) with an extruded metal grill for non-commercial food preparation.

After you have your beach party please assume responsibility for cleaning up any litter or debris from the area.

•Dog laws

Sanibel law requires that although your dog does not have to be on a leash in public he must be under your control at all times. You are responsible for the behavior of your pet. The Chamber of Commerce can tell you which accommodations accept families with pets. Remember: wherever you are, clean up after your pet. "Leave nothing on the beach but footprints" applies to dogs, too.

•Gators

Feeding alligators anywhere is not only ILLEGAL, it is extremely DANGEROUS. An alligator that is accustomed to being fed will become a potentially dangerous animal if left unfed for a period of time. Animals that are not artificially fed are less likely to become problems. A "tame" alligator becomes bold - he loses his fear of man.

An alligator has difficulty distinguishing between a piece of fish and the hand that holds it.

Because of the gator population here dogs should never be allowed to run free on the islands. Fence your dog, walk him on a leash or, if you must free him for a walk, keep him under voice control. NEVER tie your dog in an unfenced backyard.

For help with a nuisance alligator call Mark Westall, the islands' representative of the Southwest Florida Alligator Association, at 472-5218.

More about Cuyabeno

Ecuador's great faunistic reserve is home for a wide variety of interesting animals

By GEORGE CAMPBELL
Illustrated by ANN WINTERBOTHAM

Last week I introduced you to Ecuador's great faunistic reserve, Cuyabeno. This week I shall tell you more about the great variety of mammals and other animals that live there.

They say that malaria still kills more people than any other disease in the world. Cuyabeno has malaria mosquitoes of the genus Anopheles. However, there is no malaria reservoir among the 67 Indian residents there. I suppose it is possible for someone to bring in the malaria organism and pass it to the local mosquitoes, which in turn pass it on to the local residents, the Siona. But until that happens you can go about Cuyabeno and be chewed by the local "malaria" mosquito without fear of contracting malaria.

Other parasites, however, are a problem. Among the 67 Siona are quite a number of children. These kids have swollen bellies, not from starvation, but from a distressing parasite that I presume might be associated with the pigs.

Each of the Indian settlements we visited was loaded with too many pigs, far more pigs than there were kids. How can these intelligent people be so skilled in botany, zoology and astronomy and then tolerate pigs? I don't know.

Fortunately our camp was situated far from any settlements, and consequently there were no swine to disturb our peace of mind.

On this trip I learned that primitive dugout canoes come in many varieties. Heretofore I had acquaintance with those huge, monstrous craft up to 50 feet long with four- or five-inch-thick gunwales and with the stability of a tractor. In such a craft you can pile six cows, 50 bags of cement and 35 passengers. You can walk down the gunwale and not even rock the ship.

But on this trip I learned that dugouts for small streams can be quite as tippy as our little canoes. They have to be much shorter to negotiate the sharp twists and turns of the smaller streams, and they also must be narrow for the same reason.

Although I didn't, I thought it would be quite easy for me to flip such a canoe. Can you imagine Alice Kylo, Ann Winterbotham and Dr. James Wilson flipped out of a canoe into the piranha- and crocodilian-infested waters of Laguna Grande? I was told by Chief Victoriano that this never happens, that these canoes can never be tipped. I don't know about you, but I am always suspicious of such definite statements.

We came upon a broad bend in the Cuyabeno River where the water seemed to swirl in a circular fashion. Dr. Eduardo Asanza called it the whirlpool of the river mammals. It seems that both the manatee and the freshwater dolphin, a true whale of the region, like to hang in this circular moving water. Asanza said there are more than 100 of these little whales and more than 400 manatees in the reserve.

Asanza works with the IUCN Serenian Group. Dr. Tom O'Shea of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service at Gainesville leads the group. He intends to join Asanza at Cuyabeno next month to radio tag some manatees. We have acted as sort of go-between interpreters between these two in setting up their scientific experiment. Critical to the success of radio tagging the manatees is, of course, capturing manatees. Here lies the problem.

Asanza asked Chief Victoriano to secure five manatees, corral them in a large area of waterway and feed them. Things were moving along nicely in this department until progress was interrupted by Dr. Ana Christina Asanza's being invited to Washington to lecture on her specialty, parrots. Asanza's wife is probably the leading parrot expert of the whole Amazon region. Dutifully, her husband tagged along on the canoe, road and plane journey to Quito to see that his wife got on the plane to Washington.

Chief Victoriano was directed to carry on with the acquisition of manatees in the absence of both doctors Asanza. Well, life is full of disappointments.

Victoriano captured a manatee while Eduardo was away, but unfortunately Victoriano's aboriginal traditions overcame his desire to further the study of manatees. So instead of corralling the beast, he ate it. Well, he didn't eat all 800 pounds of good manatee meat himself, but he and his 66 other tribal members polished the beast off. So when Asanza got back there was no specimen.

When informed of this, O'Shea in Gainesville was of course disappointed. I assured him that even if he didn't have any manatees to radio tag next month in Cuyabeno, he would find the trip wonderfully rewarding in any case. He agreed, but mumbled something incoherent about federal budgets or Gramm Rudman or something.

Of course, to my mind the only real tragedy in the situation is the death of the manatee. The world has too few serenians, and to allow one to be killed by the very person employed to help preserve the species seems ironic and tragic to me.

This opens that old wound that has bothered me for so long in so many parts of the world. That is the argument that traditional people, aborigines, should be permitted to undertake their age-old hunting activities ad libitum. Whatever merit there is to that argument is destroyed by the fact that "traditional" people today employ the most modern arms and equipment to practice their gory traditions.

When Victoriano captures a manatee for study, only a minimum amount of blood is let. Paddling a small canoe, he stealthily approaches a feeding manatee. When within reach, he plunges a small harpoon tip through the tail of the animal. Attached to the harpoon tip is a relatively short line and a float, usually of balsa log but nowadays all too frequently a plastic jug. The frantic animal swims about dragging the float

The cougar also lives in South America, where there are 15 different races. Here the Ecuadorean form peers at us as we pass silently in our canoe on the Tarapuga River.

Gentle capybaras are not uncommon in the Cuyabeno Reserve. These are the world's largest rodents. A big one weighs more than 100 pounds and can be a yard long and two feet high.

CROW manager Holly Davies resigns 'under protest'

By SCOTT MARTELL
Islander staff writer

Over the past nine years Care and Rehabilitation of Wildlife has changed a great deal. The wildlife hospital has changed location, added buildings and cages, learned how to better care for injured wildlife and taken care of more and more wildlife as CROW's expertise became known.

The one constant throughout this growth has been manager Holly Davies. On June 13, CROW's board of directors asked Davies to resign from her position as chief of administration for the animal care facility. She resigned "under protest."

Both the board and Davies stress they realize there are two sides to the story. And both agree that the decision is more than likely irrevocable and that Davies will not return to CROW.

Board members further add that the reasons for their decision are a private matter between a private organization and its employee.

In their official release the CROW directors simply stated that they accepted Davies' resignation at the end of a six-month probationary period. They added they appreciated the contributions made to CROW by Davies over the years and said they wished her well in her future career choice.

Since both the board and Davies admit to two sides of the story, since the decision is deemed irrevocable, and since it is a relatively private matter, it would seem prudent here to focus on Davies' contributions to CROW over the years — and they would certainly appear considerable.

Nine years ago, in 1977, the Care and Rehabilitation of Wildlife consisted of a guest cottage, porch and yard behind Adelaide Cherbonnier's Capiva home. In the cottage, amongst the injured animals that often needed 24-hour care, seven days a week, lived an idealistic young woman learning how to rehabilitate injured animals so they could return to the wild.

Dr. Phyllis Douglas, DVM., owner of the Coral Veterinary Clinic, has been the veterinarian for CROW since those days when Davies assumed responsibility for running the fledgling ing organization.

"She's been the biggest help imaginable," Douglas said. "We (CROW and the veterinary clinic) never could have done what we did without her. You could always rely on her if a decision needed to be made — and over the years she's been correct. As far as her dealings with me, the (veterinary) staff and the animals, she's been excellent."

Over the years, Davies learned to care for nearly 100 species, from ospreys to eagles, turtles to raccoons, bobcats and cormorants.

Sometimes, in addressing the mainland and Island media, she would speak her mind about certain issues related to wildlife — for instance raccoons, bobcats and cormorants.

She told one mainland newspaper that cormorants can be vicious and snap at people. The fact, taken out of context in a story about a man who beat a cormorant to death because it allegedly was attacking his son, apparently made some on the CROW board cringe. But Davies told it like it was.

She also told a newspaper that, yes, CROW did treat bobcats and that they were returned to the wild when they were rehabilitated. And when asked, she agreed that bobcats are wild animals and could possibly, like any other wild animal, be dangerous to domestic animals or people.

And where raccoons are concerned, Davies showed that diplomacy was not her strong point, but that knowledge of animals was. The CROW board decided last winter not to accept raccoons because of the potential of a deadly nematode which had killed two young children in northern states.

The board apparently made the decision out of consideration for the staff. But Davies felt the board overreacted. She did a lot of research and argued against the decision. As it turned out, she was right.

Douglas said that through the years, Davies also pioneered the release of rehabilitated wildlife on the Islands.

Davies' first release was not so successful, she remembers. That pelican, Snapper, had become so used to handouts at CROW that it continually bothered fishermen on the docks at Tween Water's Marina.

But by teaching future patients how to fend for themselves, other releases proved more successful. One time, the staff kept one rehabilitated pelican — which was more than ready to leave — at the facility for a few extra days with hopes it would motivate two other now-healthy, but then-lackluster pelicans to leave. It worked. All three returned to the wild together.

And Davies contacted organizations throughout the state that could potentially help CROW, Dr. Douglas said.

One organization raised abandoned baby raccoons — and because they rehabilitated up to 2,000 per year, individual raccoons would not be spoiled and become pests. Davies found another organization, the Suncoast Seabird Sanctuary, that raises baby pelicans and can handle an overflow from CROW.

"She was invaluable in helping teach workshops with me for the volunteers," Douglas said. "The (CROW) board may not want her now, but next year they'll probably wish they still had her."

But be that as it may, the CROW directors obviously felt they had some valid reasons for asking for Davies' resignation.

As it turned out, Davies had to bring out to the press some reasons why she thought the board made the action. And the board was forced to respond to those reasons. Since those reasons have already been somewhat publicized, they are quickly run through here: job burnout, slow paperwork, not growing with the organization, the unfortunate "deadly nematode" situation and a potential personal conflict between Davies and certain members of the board.

The decision was made by a majority of the board, with 11 out of 14 members in attendance, according to Jan Egeland, chairman of CROW's staff committee.

While a majority on the board did vote to ask for Davies' resignation, many CROW supporters strongly back Davies.

"Over the past several years there have been numerous factional disputes on the CROW board," said William Riley, a long-time supporter of CROW and a former director of the organization. "Despite this, the organization has continued to do a superb job in its central mission, caring for and rehabilitating wildlife. That this is so is due mainly to the dedication and competence of Holly Davies and her associates — most recently Jill Routh."

Riley added that he was particularly upset that such a decision should be made while many active and emeritus winter residents were absent and therefore unable to vote.

"I am devastated by the timing. I really do love my work," Davies said last week. "Prior to three years ago, the board was happy to let me do my job — and I did, often seven days a week. I think in the past we had boards that knew a lot about wildlife. But now, most board members know very little."

"I'm sure there are things that she loves, but it's been obvious to us there's been an equal number of things she's been unhappy with," Egeland said. "Generally, it's been a matter of disagreements that could not be resolved. Holly has been here a long time and performed very well. Now CROW has to go on. To us, the future of CROW is the most important thing."

Cuyabeno

with him, but is soon fatigued and is easily captured in a net, loaded into a canoe, or dragged through the water to the corral area. The hole in the tail soon seals, and the animal becomes accustomed to captivity.

Given Chief Victoriano's desire to please, and his keen interest in working with Asanza, it is probable that when O'Shea reaches Cuyabeno next month he will find two or three experimental subjects waiting for him in a watery corral.

The little long-nosed freshwater dolphin, a true whale, lives upstream in the Amazon, some 2,000 miles from the sea. It is interesting that this true whale can be so far away from its origins in the oceans.

This animal is rather smaller than our bottle-nosed dolphin, and to my mind at least, not half as smart. Our dolphin will communicate with you by eye contact and by what I perceive to be a smile, but the freshwater dolphins of the world are not nearly so bright-eyed. In fact, I think they are quite dull.

Another aquatic mammal of Cuyabeno is the giant Amazonian otter. Four times the size of our river otter, this severely stressed animal is on the verge of extinction in many parts of its range. Fortunately, the two dozen or so of Cuyabeno seem safe. This faunistic reserve might even be the salvage site of that rare creature.

Another semi-aquatic mammal of Cuyabeno is that greatest of all rodents, the pig-sized capybara. These gentle cousins of the squirrel or guinea pig can grow to be more than 100 pounds and can have yellow incisors up to three inches long.

These animals are sought after by the Indians for their tasty meat, but there are so many caracaras and so few Indians that they seem not to be in danger at Cuyabeno.

In some Indian villages pet capybaras are adopted as members of the village. If you want to see a tame capybara yourself, just take a look at Lion Country Safari in Palm Beach County, where one runs around the gift shop area as friendly as a St. Bernard puppy.

Every so often as we traveled up and down the Cuyabeno or the Tarapuya rivers we would encounter serious obstacles in the form of fallen forest giants. On one occasion there was an ominous crash nearby as one of the great trees, after perhaps 20 decades or even more, finally succumbed to the laws of gravity. Of course these immense plants must fall, so it is not a bit surprising to see fallen trees throughout the jungle in varying degrees of decomposition.

When a giant dies, there is almost immediate severe competition for the space and sunlight made available by the vacating of canopy by the dead tree.

Probably the hugest of these great forest trees is the Ceiba, or kapok tree. They rise to neck-craning heights, sometimes 200 feet. The bole at the height of a man might be 20 feet across; the space between two of the immense buttress roots could be big enough to stable a brace of percheron horses. When this huge plant fruits, a couple of tons of the familiar floating fluff known as kapok is scattered about.

In addition to supporting its own weight, such a tree must support literally thousands of pounds of epiphytic plants such as bromeliads, ferns, lianas, young fig trees, orchids, mosses, lichens and even a few true parasites. A great ceiba tree is really a world of its own. It provides home and habitat for many, many plants and creatures of the rain forest.

A sharp eye and the ability to sort camouflage images will often reveal, for example, the sloth, that upside-down mammal with the green fur, so slowly maneuvering himself about the tree. Or in these same branches might be found that most beautiful of all serpents, the emerald boa. Or in the kapok tree you

Library exhibitor tries to express beauty in her paintings

 By JULIE NIEDENFUER
Islander staff writer

Even though she was only 3 years old at the time, Pat Cleveland clearly remembers the day she first picked up a paintbrush. That first effort, which she still owns, is particularly memorable because it was the spark that lit a lifelong interest in art.

Years later, she is about to fly solo in her first one-woman show. Next week a collection of her oil paintings goes on exhibit at the Sanibel Public Library.

Cleveland faces the prospect bravely, but as she looks dubiously at one of her works, she confesses to having a few butterflies.

"I sometimes think maybe my paintings aren't good enough to show. But then I figure anytime you show, some people are going to like your work and some aren't.

"I'm more excited than nervous," she decides, breaking into a smile.

The artist calls her style of painting impressionistic. She says her subjects vary — depending on what "phase" she happens to be in.

"For a while it was portraits, then water lilies, then gumbo limbos. I had to paint every gumbo limbo I saw," she says with a laugh.

She can't explain why certain things appeal to her at certain times, but she says, "I've always felt if you're not excited about the subject, then you shouldn't try to paint it." Lately her works have been floral studies.

Cleveland's favorite painting of all is a portrait she did of her husband. "Why? It's probably the hat he had on that excited me," she says. She and her husband were fishing near Pine Island when she looked up and noticed the patterns on his face that the sunlight created filtering through his straw brim. After capturing the scene with her camera, she went home and preserved it for all time in oil.

"I think through my painting I'm trying to express the beauty I see — whether it's a face or a tree," she says.

Although she has always worked in an artistic field, Cleveland has not always been able to devote as much time as she would like to art.

After high school she attended the Traphagh School of Fashion and Design where she gained the know-how to become an interior designer for Bloomingdale's in New York.

Working and raising three children left little time for her favorite avocation. Even though she managed to squeeze a little painting in on the side, she says she always longed to do more.

Occasionally she enrolled in painting classes, and at one point she even studied under Phil Stein, a student of the famous Mexican artist Diego Rivera.

But it wasn't until she moved to Florida in 1975 that Cleveland was able to devote her time to art. "Now I don't have to work — I can do painting and it's a lot more fun."

The thing she loves best is working with color and design — her favorite aspect of her 10-year Bloomingdale's career. She hated the paperwork. "For the first three weeks I came home every night and cried."

Now she can paint every day if she wants to — and usually she wants to. She says it rarely gets boring.

"There's always something you're striving for in a painting that's fascinating — whether it's the likeness of a face in a portrait or getting the feathers right on a bird. Each painting is a challenge."

Not long after moving here she began exhibiting in local shows. Often she enters with her mother (and mentor both in and out of the art field), Marie Rippe, an able and enthusiastic painter in her own right. It was Rippe's painting, in fact, that was the model for Cleveland's very first painting those many years ago. (Remembering, Cleveland now remarks with a laugh that her copy was an abstract version of the realistic original — unintentionally.)

At the risk of sounding too philosophical, Cleveland says she believes the whole of society benefits from art. "It's one of the cultures, like music or literature. It's important for people to enjoy art — and a lot of people don't learn to enjoy it. But there's enough variety in art that it should please everybody of different tastes."

Cleveland will continue to do her part for society by contributing to the art world indefinitely. Her goal, she says, "is not to become a professional. But it would be nice to sell a few more — to break even."

About 30 of Cleveland's oils will be on exhibit through July 31 during business hours at the library. The works will include portraits and local scenes "and some gumbo limbos, of course!" she says."

Life-size dragon sculpture takes up residence in Sanibel gift shop

 By JULIE NIEDENFUER
Islander staff writer

"Doesn't everyone travel with one of those?" Nora Dietlein asked of no one in particular, as the bespectacled, bearded man hoisted a six-foot-long reptile from the back of his van.

Sculptor Ben Greishaw was in town last week from Richmond, Va., delivering the life-size wooden Komodo dragon to the Jade Butterfly, a Sanibel shop owned by Nora and Don Dietlein that specializes in art and artifacts from around the world.

The dragon joins several others Greishaw pieces on display there, including hatching loggerhead turtles, green turtles, chameleons and tree frogs.

Obviously Greishaw has a thing about reptiles and amphibians. But he insists, "I'm an artist first. I've only studied herpetology."

That might be so, but each of his pine, mahogany and cottonwood sculptures is anatomically correct. It speaks well for Greishaw's knowledge of herps that his list of patrons includes curators, zoo-keepers, authors and academic professionals from around the world.

Real Komodo dragons, the world's largest lizards, grow to 10 feet long and are named for both their size and their darting red and black tongue that looks like a flame.

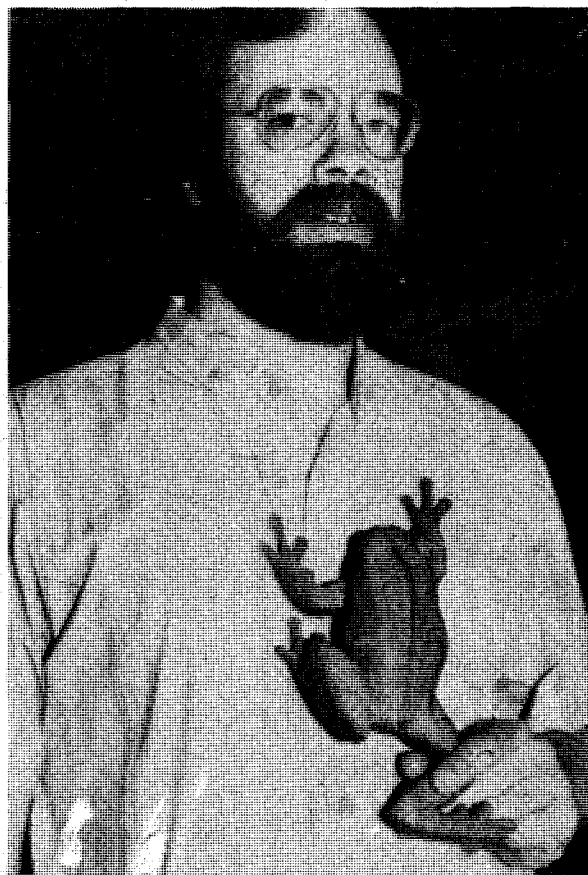

Greishaw's beast weighs 95 pounds and took 80 hours to carve from 60 board feet of white pine. It's no wonder he didn't trust its delivery to UPS.

Four years ago Greishaw carved the only other dragon he has ever made. "It ages me a great deal every time I do one of these," says Greishaw, who sports a turtle belt buckle.

Though the dragon is realistic size-wise, many of Greishaw's pieces are larger than life. The huge hatchling loggerheads on the shop counter at the Jade Butterfly are emerging from eggs the size of cantaloupes.

The largest baby turtle Greishaw ever carved crawls from an 30-inch shell. "That, of course, is in Texas," he says.

The Komodo dragon will reside at the shop along with his smaller frog and turtle cousins until someone decides to give him a permanent home.

BIG Arts hopes to start inter-organization communication between the Islands' many groups

In an effort to unite all the service organizations in the Island community, Barrier Island Group for the Arts is initiating a dinner/business meeting/social gathering on Tuesday, Aug. 26 at the Sanibel Community Association.

The purpose of the meeting is to list all activities planned by the Islands' many organizations for the coming year; to determine equipment, services and facilities that will be needed, that can be exchanged between organizations; to discuss how the organizations can be of help to one another; to prepare a calendar of events; and to plan a Memorial Day weekend, season-ending gala primarily for Island residents to be held at City Hall. BIG Arts hopes the affair will become an annual celebration.

Two representatives of each organization are invited to speak for their respective clubs.

The SCA has donated its facility on Periwinkle Way for this meeting.

BIG Arts will take care of set-up and clean-up and will provide a catered dinner for a modest charge. The organization also hopes to provide entertainment during dinner.

All interested organizations should call David La Croix, 472-2554 or 472-4359. He also will be interested to know of any additional topics or suggestions for ways of improving inter-organization community coordination and support.

Art league weekly outdoor painting sessions continue throughout the summer

The Sanibel-Captiva Art League holds weekly outdoor painting sessions every Thursday morning throughout the year. Members are encouraged to participate.

Sites for these informal "classes" change every other week. This week and next week, June 26 and July 3, the group will meet at the Island home of Ruth Searing.

Sessions begin at 9 a.m. with a three-hour painting session, followed by a brown bag lunch and a critique of the morning's efforts.

For more information about the painting sessions, or to find out how to join the art league call Searing, 472-4594.

It doesn't take tremendous savvy
to figure this one out

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

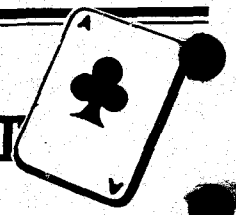

We end our mini-series on 4-3 trump suits with a hand in which the problem is to look ahead.

Declarer took the top clubs, ruffed a club with the jack of spades, returned with a trump to the 10 and then ruffed his last club.

But now South was stuck in a dummy that held only red cards. He led three top hearts, and West ruffed with the three of spades, a card he had not expected to win a trick.

West led a diamond, and South lost the finesse. East forced South to ruff a heart, and South was down two.

Bridge Continued

It doesn't take tremendous bridge savvy to see what will happen if South ruffs two clubs in the dummy. South would ruff just one club and develop a fourth heart to take the place of a club ruff.

South takes the first club and plays a low heart from both hands. When East returns a club, South wins and ruffs a club with the ace of trumps. He then draws four rounds of trumps and takes the rest in dummy with four good hearts and the ace of diamonds.

WEEKLY QUESTION

You hold: ♠ K Q 10 6 ♥ 6 2 ♦ 7 4 3 ♣ A K. Partner bids one diamond, you respond one spade, and he then raises to two spades. The opponents pass. What do you say?

ANSWER

Bid three clubs. With 12 high-card points opposite an opening bid, you must insist on game. If partner bids 3NT, you'll be happy to pass. If he can't bid notrump, you'll bid the game in spades.

might find a colony of pigmy marmosets, the tiniest of all the primates. These little monkeys might be no more than the size of a large mouse, and they might travel no farther than a few hundred yards during a whole lifetime.

Often at the base of such a great tree there is a hole made by the nine-banded armadillo as he snorts, woofs and roots for insects, worms, small snakes and lizards in the ground. This is the same armadillo we have here on the Islands.

One day staring at us from a high ceiba tree was a trio of saki monkeys. They looked to be burly fellows, with broad shoulders and heavy arms — but that was only an illusion. The burliness is a lot of hair on skinny little bodies.

Early one morning we heard a distant sound, a clamorous din really. It sounded like heavy-linked anchor chain rushing through a hawsehole en route to its resting place in the bottom of the harbor. This truly industrial sounding roar seemed alien to the jungle. But it belongs there. It is the howler monkey emitting his morning call. A big troupe of them makes a most impressive sound indeed.

On our way back to grungy Taragoa we traveled in two canoes. One carried all the gear and was captained by Victoriano's number one son and left an hour ahead of the people canoe. Half way through our 60-mile trip we were not surprised to encounter our colleagues at the side of the stream cooking a hot meal. We were not surprised because we were becoming accustomed to excellent treatment on the part of the Indians. We soon joined them and sat about a little forest glade near a great Ceiba tree. The Indians carpeted the dining area with fresh cut palm leaves. Over a small fire they made an excellent chicken and potato soup. Then came the piece de resistance — chicken, corn on the cob, fresh green beans and, for desert, passion fruit. What was the beverage? Coca Cola, of course.

Then we proceeded with the serious part of the journey, the last 40-odd miles of the ever narrowing Tarapuya, to our old bridge at Taragoa. Water had gotten into our gasoline and the outboard kept stalling and dying, making for discouraging thoughts. I began to wonder whether we might be spending many more days at Cuyabeno than we had planned. But old Chief Victoriano adjusted the inclination of the gas tank at Wilson's clever suggestion, and after that we had no further trouble in that department.

However, a couple of toppled forest giants crossed the stream, and there were new navigational hazards to negotiate. Victoriano rose to the challenge. When a log barely covered with vines showed at the water's surface, he would aim the canoe at high speed for it, and skitter across it, adroitly raising the outboard at the proper instant so as not to shear the thing off. At one point we balanced on a sharp, pointed log in midstream and dangled there for 20 minutes in the fast-moving current before Victoriano managed to get us off.

Finally, the bridge at Taragoa appeared. There was the grungy pool hall, the litter of puppies, the hot Coca Cola, and the nursing mother who served it. After a flat tire, we took off once more for Lago Agrio, which we reached late the night before the day national elections were to be held.

Cleverly enough, the government called a halt to the sale of alcoholic beverages for several days prior to the election. And because the army had to administer the election, they cancelled all flights on election day. So we had to struggle the last 200 miles from Lago Agrio to Quito in a car the engine of which broke down at least five times.

But we managed to get back in one piece as we crawled slowly up 14,000 feet into the Andes, passing sheer cliffs that dropped 1,000 feet or more. You get used to such hazards in the Ecuadorian Andes, so without more than a passing thought about the potential hazards all around us, we whizzed into Quito in time for supper. We all agreed that Cuyabeno provided the most thrilling experience of our lives.

Naturalist-conservationist George Campbell participated in a New York Zoological Society study on Sanibel nearly 50 years ago. Subsequently, he visited the Island many times and lived here from 1974 until early 1986. Before moving to the Island he spent 25 years establishing and working with pharmaceutical manufacturing laboratories in two dozen countries all over the world. SPORTS QUIZ

How much do you know about soccer?

Baseball fans knew all about Fred Lynn, but they forgot all about Johnny Bench last week.

Toby Cudahy, "Jimmy the Greek" and "the Associate" all remembered Lynn, who caught the attention of baseball fans with a great rookie season. He had 21 homeruns, 47 doubles, 103 runs scored, 105 RBIs and a .331 batting average. He was also noted for his outstanding fielding.

But the man who had the most RBIs in the 1970s was Johnny Bench. He knocked home 1,031 runs in that decade. In 1968, his first year as a rookie, he batted .275 with 40 doubles, 15 homeruns and 82 runs batted in. And he kept up that pace through the 1970s.

This week, we turn to soccer. First: What country did Gerd Muller play for and what World Cup record does he hold?

And second: Which one of these countries is the only one to win three Olympic gold medals in the soccer competition — East Germany, Hungary, England or Brazil.

Think you know? Call 472-5185 before 5 p.m. Friday. If you guess correctly you'll have your choice of an Islander t-shirt or a subscription to the newspaper. Only one gift per month, please.

SWAT swimmers make big splash in first league meet

By SCOTT MARTELL
Islander staff writer

The Sanibel Water Attack Team has only been practicing a short while, but the youngsters fared well in their first league meet June 11.

In the six-and-under division, Ryan Archibald finished third in the red level 50-yard backstroke, and fifth in the blue level 25-yard freestyle. He also finished fourth in the red level 25-yard backstroke in the eight-and-under division.

Danny Rogers, competing in the eight-and-under division, finished in second place in the red level 25-yard backstroke, and in fifth place in the blue level 25-yard freestyle.

Greg Mullin, competing in the nine-to-10 division, swam to third place in the blue level 25-yard freestyle and second place in the red level 25-yard backstroke.

Rio Gralnick, swimming in the 11-12 division, swam to fifth place in the blue level 25-yard freestyle and fifth in the 25-yard breaststroke.

Valerie Cope, swimming in the 11-12 division, picked up a fifth place in the blue level 25-yard backstroke.

Paige Horak, also in the 11-12 division, grabbed a third place in the blue level 25-yard freestyle and another third in the blue level 25-yard backstroke.

"All our swimmers improved their times or had an excellent first performance," said coach Toni Canino.

Three weeks into the softball season, Island Condo women remain undefeated

By SCOTT MARTELL
Islander staff writer

After three weeks, Island Condo Maintenance stands alone, undefeated, at the top of the Island Women's Softball League.

Island Condo stayed on top by beating B&B last week, 18-9. B&B is as yet winless, but keeps improving. The B&B Ritzy's Player of the Game was Merri Murphy.

Last week Twigs handed the Cablevision women their first loss of the season in a tightly controlled 4-3 ball game. And Faces Restaurant defeated Chance's Chiropractic Clinic, 15-6.

In games this Wednesday, June 18, at 6:15 p.m. B&B meets Cablevision; at 7:30 p.m. Faces meets Island Condo; and at 8:45 p.m. Twigs meets Chance's.

Standings as of June 9 are as follows:

Island Condo, 3-0
Cablevision, 2-1
Faces Restaurant, 2-1
Twigs, 2-1

B&B, 0-3
Chances, 0-3

We want to know the score

Coaches — The Islander would like to know the scoop. Who was your Ritzy Player of the Game? Who knocked in your winning runs? Did you have any homeruns? Who made the great plays? Who was your winning pitcher?

If we can get this kind of information, we'll use it. But we need help. When you give league commissioner John Kamosa your game scores, also give him any pertinent information on the game. Or call sport's editor Scott Martell, at 472-5185.

Kids learn boating safety and sailing basics in classes taught on San Carlos Bay

By SCOTT MARTELL
Islander staff writer

The "Mean Green Sailing Machine" might have looked a little meaner if a touch more wind had filled its sails.

But the nine youngsters taking part in the first of a series of weekly sailing lessons in San Carlos Bay didn't seem to mind the temporary doldrums that caused slow sailing one day last week.

In fact, it was hard to keep the kids out of the "Mean Green Sailing Machine" and several other small Clearwater pram sailboats.

"It's been kind of hard to get it going, but it's been fun," said Tony Collucci.

"I'm looking forward to doing it by myself," added Patrick Bailey. "This was the funnest thing I could think of to do this summer."

The group is composed of youngsters 8-15 who are learning to sail one-person operated Clearwater prams. Instructors are Earl Kregler and Barry Bun-nell are teaching the youngsters Monday through Friday, from 9 a.m. to noon. Some sailors have signed up for one week, some for several weeks. Newcomers can begin at the first of any week. Cost is $35 a week for the first week and $30 for each additional week.

"Kids are naturals," said Kregler. "You can put them in a boat and turn them loose. Adults insist on diagrams and explanations. Kids are also so receptive to new things — they have no fear."

The first thing Kregler and Bunnell stress is boating safety. Then the basics of sailing come slowly as the youngsters put more time in on the water.

"I think something like this has been long needed," said Jaye Boswell, who organized the lessons that will run through July. For more information call Boswell, 472-6869.

REC CENTER ROUNDUP

The following list is an update of classes and programs scheduled this summer at the Sanibel Recreation Complex. For more information on any individual activity call the rec center, 472-0345.

- The staff at the Sanibel Recreation Complex would like to offer a variety of swimming lessons this summer and fall. Under consideration are classes in arthritis water exercises and swimming for infants and tots (aged 2-4, with the parents accompanying their children in the class).

- The staff is also considering offering a handicapped water program. But the staff needs input before putting this program into action. Anyone interested should call Helene or Shirley at the rec complex.

- Summer hours at the rec complex are as follows: 10 a.m. to noon, and 1 p.m. to 6 p.m. — Monday through Friday; 1 to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

- The weight room is closed for the remainder of the summer. It is being reburbished in a larger building.

- The Summer Recreation Program began June 17. This program for youngsters runs from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. every Tuesday through Friday. Every Friday Bank of the Islands provides a free picnic lunch for participants. Daily activities include everything from arts and crafts to tennis lessons and basic water safety.

- SWAT is now back in action. The Sanibel Water Attack swim team began practice June 10 under the direction of coaches Toni Canino and June Muench. Practices are from 2 to 3 p.m. Tuesday through Friday.

Junior Tennis Academy starts next week at Sundial

Sundial Beach and Tennis Resort announces its first annual Summer Junior Tennis Academy to be held June 30 through July 31. The five-week session will be held from 10 a.m. to noon Mondays through Thursdays.

The academy is sponsored by Citizen and Southern National Bank of Lee County and Arnie's Deli of Sanibel. Each academy participant receives a commemorative t-shirt and complimentary refreshments daily. A full video analysis will be provided to each participant along with individual and group instruction.

Instruction is being provided by United States Professional Tennis Association member Toni Halski, director of tennis at Sundial, and tennis pro Brian Greenman. The registration fee is $35 per person per week. Participants can register for one, several or all five weeks of the academy.

For more information call Sundial, 472-4151, extension 3812.

Fourth Annual Sneak Peek Tournament coming to Dunes

The fourth annual Sneak Peak Golf Classic will be held Friday, July 4, at the Dunes Golf and Tennis Club.

The 18-hole open tournament will be a team equalizer scramble, with tee times from 9-10:30 a.m. on the front and back nine.

Players can make their own four-person team, or the Dunes staff will make the pairings. Teams will be flighted according to a total team handicap.

The cost of $25 per player includes golf, carts, prizes and a cookout and beverages.

For more information call the Dunes, 472-2535.

Tarpon tip number one: Duck if you see one coming

We are right in the middle of tarpon season, and so far the year has been good to those who work hard at catching these huge gamefish. This week I'll talk about the truths and the myths surrounding this great fish.

For those of you who are unfamiliar with tarpon, the fish come into our bay and coastal waters from about late April until early October. Right in the middle of that time (we're in it now) is when most of the fish are around, looking for mates.

The average tarpon weighs from 60 to 110 pounds. They are not eaten but are caught as sport fish and released if not mounted. They are regularly listed on the most knowledgeable anglers' lists as one of the top three or five gamefish in the world.

They make spectacular leaps out of the water when hooked. Their long silver body is all muscle. A strong angler with the right equipment can get one to the boat in 20 minutes. For others it can take an hour or more.

The jumping part of the tarpon's hook-freeing antics is the object of much tarpon lore. It is quite true that a hooked fish will jump into a boat. Folks in Boca Grande Pass, a world-renowned tarpon hole, have had hooked tarpon jump into their boats and even into their neighbor's boat.

Last year a hooked tarpon on a rampage to get to the surface of this deep water pass came up from the depths like a rocket and actually put a hole in an old wooden "tarpon boat" that was out on a charter. The boat made it back to shore just before it started to sink.

ON THE WATER

By Capt. Mike Fuery

Probably the most incredible tarpon-in-boats stories come from little boat operators fishing very innocently in Pine Island Sound for trout. This happened several years ago to an old friend of mine. He was casting out a popping cork rig for sea trout when a tarpon hit the shrimp bait. It made a couple of jumps — the final one right into the 16-foot skiff with my friend.

There was a terrible mess as the fish flailed about, knocking over fishing tackle and even the top cover of the outboard engine. It was battering the angler, too, until the fish got its head stuck under a seat. My friend used an oar to kill the fish before it could kill him or sink the boat. The best part was when my friend returned to the marina with this giant fish in his boat. Covered with blood and fish slime, he told everyone the story about the one that didn't get away.

One of the local guides told me about the time he and a party were fishing in the sound and hooked a fish that started jumping right at the boat. There was a moment of silence, but then the fish leaped from the water again, this time completely over the boat, knocking the guide's hat off on the way.

Capt. Doug Fischer of South Seas Plantation tells this story about a tarpon that charged his boat a few years ago. It took a couple of leaps and then landed in the boat like a torpedo. It hit Fischer right in the belt buckle, knocking him aside. Good thing the fish's aim was high.

Tarpon don't seem to know where they are jumping when they are hooked. Their only thought is to throw that hook. When jumping they will often come down on the leader, and their weight alone will pull the hook from their mouths.

These fish are wonderful fighters worthy of your respect and admiration. And they are the only fish for which I always recommend novices have a guide.

If you don't fish for tarpon several times a week, then you'll never know how to go about it or where the fish are striking.

I'm not doing a lot of tarpon fishing these days, but most of the guides at our local marinas are doing nothing but tarpon angling.

If you have ever wanted to try to catch a world class fish, now is the prime time. Good fishing this week. And duck if you see one of those big silver eyes coming!

The stingray shuffle: Sometimes it works, sometimes it doesn't

I've never taken pleasure in writing about stingrays because invariably there are two undesirable reactions to these unusual cartilaginous marine inhabitants.

The first is fear. As soon as word gets out that there are stingrays in the water, everyone stops shelling.

The second is panic. Everyone goes nuts trying to stab, club or spear every ray on the beach.

During the warmer parts of the year, particularly in June and July, the rays come to our beaches to mate and to forage for tiny crabs and other shellfish. They like to hunt right along the slight drop at the edge of the surf. This is the first sluce you might enter as you wade out to swim. Or if you are a sheller you might walk along in this depression.

That little drop is where many of the best shells are found. Because of their size and weight, the slight summer waves do not wash the shells higher ashore.

The sand-colored stingrays hunt along this little drop because it's where their food is buried in the shallow sandy bottom. You can see the basic conflict.

A few mornings ago Carol and I rode down to Blind Pass at dawn for a swim. We had taken only a couple of steps into the flat, clear water before we noticed one, then two, and then half a dozen rays working the beach right in front of us. We started a slow retreat back to the beach, but one ray ran right into Carol's ankle. Its stinger missed, however, and both ray and Carol parted company in haste.

SHELLING TIPS

By Capt. Mike Fuery

The ray has a very sharp, serrated edge on its knife-like stinger about a third of the way down its tail. Incidentally, the animals are close family to sharks, but they don't have any teeth.

Big rays we catch when tarpon fishing can weigh 50 to 70 pounds. The little beach rays you'll see are about the size of a dinner plate.

They can bury into the sand and leave just their eyes and whip-like tail showing. Usually the presence of anyone walking nearby will scare the rays into deeper waters. In clear waters, if you know what to look for you can avoid them. But in riled waters, they can't see you, nor you them.

You've probably heard a lot about the "stingray shuffle." This is how you shuffle your feet in the water to let the rays know you are there. Sometimes it works; often it doesn't. I've tried the shuffle with many rays and have had to practically step right on some of them to make them move. One person walking alone in the water isn't usually in danger. But several walking side-by-side can cause problems because one will scare a ray right into the path of another person.

The penetrating wound of a stingray is most painful. See a doctor if you can't stop the bleeding. You can usually stop the bleeding and ease the pain by soaking the wound in very hot water for about an hour.

Trying to kill every ray you see is futile and wasteful at the same time. These odd-looking creatures do have their place in the shoreline ecology. So it's best that you simply understand and try to avoid them.

Good shelling this week. The rays will be gone in a few more weeks. Remember to observe the live shelling restriction of two per species per person per day. Most of us would rather you not take any live shells at all.

Capt. Mike Fuery has been showing Island residents and visitors the ins and outs of fishing and shelling since 1976. For information about charters to North Captiva and Cayo Costa islands call 472-3459.

MEET ESI'S SALES DIVISION!

MARIE RENN RETURNS HOME!

Broker-Associate Marie Renn worked in real estate with ESI in 1976 and has recently rejoined ESI stating "And I feel like I've come home". Originally from Washington, D.C., Marie moved to Florida in 1973. Formerly an interior designer by profession, 14 years in real estate on Sanibel and a passion for computers, art and music have made Marie very well rounded. A gracious lady who always has time for you, don't hesitate to call Marie or ESI's other REALTOR-Associates. Ask them about the fine properties described below.

WHITE SANDS 33—Begin with the premier penthouse location atop an exclusive community of only 14 residences. Include three bedrooms, three full baths, a large den and a 38 foot wide screened lanai with panoramic overview of the Gulf of Mexico. Furnish elegantly in soft earth tones, quality fabrics, and top of the line appliances. Add a ground floor cabana with half bath, wet bar, and walk-out on the pool. Provide a private garage with electric door opener. Arrange all of the above in an eminently livable floor plan of over 3,000 square feet. Call it something lyrical—White Sands 33 for instance. Walk through it, luxuriate in it—then ask the price. You'll be pleasantly surprised.

WHITE SANDS 22—Located in small complex of 14 units with natural barrier vegetation and wonderful view of the Gulf of Mexico. Features include cabana and garage with electric door opener. Call for details. $275,000 furnished.

1225 Kittiwake (DUNES Subdivision)—Spacious, four bedroom, two and one-half bath home, with living room and a family room, on a large, landscaped, corner lot. 600 sq. ft. of screened porch expands the living area and brings the outside in. 52" Hunter fans throughout add to efficient and comfortable Florida living. Garage and enclosed storage area, with inside staircase, add an additional 2,000 plus sq. ft. $235,000.

PRRACTICALLY MAINTENANCE FREE—Inside and outside. This three bedroom two bath ground level home affords minimum yard care; terrazzo floors throughout (some carpeted). Ideal as investment property for future retirement. Furniture negotiable. $135,000 furnished.

SUNDIAL F103/4 GREAT BUY!—Delightful two bedroom two bath condominium in Sundial. Ground level convenience to beach and pool. Close to all Amenities. In off-site rental program. $155,000 furnished.

NEW LISTING—PENTHOUSE living at a reasonable price! This lovely POINTE SANTO unit has just been recarpeted and refurbished. The view from the private sundeck is sensational! The price is hard to beat for such a prestigious complex with excellent rental history. For $265,000 it can be yours.

A beautiful view of the Gulf of Mexico or of the 20 by 40 foot heated swimming pool is available from the formal dining room or screened lanai in this spacious apartment. Walk-in closets and large vanity-dressing areas accent the master and guest suites. The fully applianced kitchen includes an automatic ice maker and trash compactor. In one of Sanibel's most popular rental complexes and for the smallest investment available, we offer King's Crown 113 for $214,900.
