Bridge construction to close Turner Beach for 1½ years

By Frances Adams
Islander staff writer

At its Jan. 10 meeting, the Sanibel Planning Commission unanimously recommended approval of an application for a development permit to construct a temporary bridge across Blind Pass for use during construction of the new Blind Pass Bridge.

The present Blind Pass Bridge, the only land access to Captiva Island, must be replaced to meet safety standards and to better accommodate current traffic demands.

Paul Carroll, of Jenkins & Charland Inc., the consulting engineers for Lee County, explained that construction work will begin in May on the 30-foot wide temporary bridge, which will be built on the gulf side of the present bridge. The temporary bridge will be constructed with pre-engineered timber and the 134 timber support pilings will be waterborn-salt treated for marine use. The road surface will be made of pre-engineered laminated wood deck with asphaltic concrete topping. All adjacent slopes will be graded and stabilized with saltshore grass.

When Commissioner Penny Rogers asked about Turner Beach, Carroll explained that Turner Beach is the only logical staging area for construction. He said that the Australian pines would be removed and when all construction is completed and the temporary bridge is removed, the beach site will be restored and revegetated with native plants.

He added that public use of the beach area would be eliminated for the duration of the project, currently expected to be 1½ years. He said that the county hoped that the expanded parking at Bowman's Beach on Sanibel would help the situation.

Later in the meeting, Sanibel resident Alice Kylo quipped, "I'm Please see BEACH, page 4A

Decision on Captiva jet ski operation referred to Service Delivery Committee

The question of what to do regarding jet skis off the coast of Captiva was referred last Wednesday by the Lee County Commission to its service delivery committee.

As of Friday no date had been set for the committee's hearings on the subject. The committee consists of commissioners Bill Fussell and Ray Judah. However, commission chairman Charles Bigelow has indicated he might attend the hearings and commissioner John E. Manning is expected to attend because he brought the issue to the attention of the commission.

Many Captiva residents have complained to Manning that the jet skis are noisy and a danger to swimmers.

Current county regulations require that the jet skis and other boats travel at idle speed within 100 yards of the beach.

The City of Sanibel also requires operation at idle speed within 100 yards. But, in addition, Sanibel has not allowed rental of the craft from the beach.

Jet ski rentals are conducted from the beach on Captiva.

Sanibel seeks to rule more waves

By Steve Ruediger
Islander staff writer

Sanibel City Council will consider at its regular session today whether to ask the Florida Legislature to extend Sanibel city boundaries from the current 300 feet offshore to 2,340 feet (a half mile).

The city staff is recommending the half mile limit because that distance would extend the boundaries as far as possible without having them reach either the first causeway island or the intracoastal waterway.

City officials have been discussing extending the city boundaries for some time. This will be the first concrete proposal presented for a vote by the council.

The extension would give the city jurisdiction further offshore in a number of areas which have been the subject of past and present controversies including Jet Ski operations like that currently operating on Captiva, waste disposal from boats anchored off the coast, and enforcement of the prohibition against taking more than two live shells per species per day.

City Attorney Bob Pritt said Thursday the city did not want any jurisdictional battles and did not want to infringe on county enforcement of regulations. However, Pritt added, "We think we can do it better."

Where something nearby, such as the south end of Captiva, is less than a half mile away no boundary extension or a modified boundary extension will be requested, Pritt said.

In most cases the boundary extension would not automatically extend specific laws to the half mile limit. For example, if the extension of jurisdiction were granted, the city council would then have to consider whether it wanted to extend out the area in which Jet Skis cannot operate.

Council changes density hearing date

By Frances Adams
Islander staff writer

In order to submit accurate data in the revised Comprehensive Land Use Plan, the Sanibel City Council agreed to hold the Beachview, Jenks and Container Products Corp. ordinances' rehearings at a special city council session at 9 a.m. Monday, Jan. 23.

The originally scheduled date for rehearing the ordinances was Tuesday, Feb. 7.

At the end of the first revised CLUP adoption public hearing held Jan. 11, it was pointed out by Sanibel City Attorney Bob Pritt that, in order to meet the state-mandated submission date of Feb. 10 for the revised CLUP, the city should schedule both the first and second (if necessary) public readings of the previously-passed ordinances prior to the second hearing on the revised CLUP, scheduled for 9 a.m. Wednesday, Feb. 8.

The three ordinances were duly heard and adopted by city council on Dec. 20, 1988. At that time, the city amended the CLUP to reflect the changes in the Density, Ecological Zone and Interior Wetlands Conservation District maps contained in the CLUP.

At its Jan. 3 meeting, the city council approved the rehearing of the three ordinances and set a rehearing date of Feb. 7, not realizing that the final decisions on these ordinances had to be made before Feb. 8 so that the revised version of the now-existing CLUP would accurately incorporate any change in data that might result from the rehearings.

At the Jan. 11 CLUP reading, during the convoluted discussion of the state's requirements for the revised CLUP and the legal requirements for the ordinance rehearing dates, Councilman Mike Miracle asked, "Does the world come to an end if we don't get this (CLUP) done on time?"

Without skipping a beat, Pritt answered, "Yes!"

WEATHER WATCH

Hail her majesty, the sun! It may be beautiful and balmy, but we sure could use some rain, rain, rain (no offense, sun worshipers). Last week's temperatures on our islands were recorded at the Sanibel-Captiva Islands Chamber of Commerce as follows:

	HIGH	LOW	RAIN
Monday, Jan. 9	81	56	.00
Tuesday, Jan. 10	80	57	.00
Wednesday, Jan. 11	80	64	.00
Thursday, Jan. 12	80	62	.00
Friday, Jan. 13	81	58	.00
Saturday, Jan. 14	86	62	.00
Sunday, Jan. 15	80	65	.00

After a check of the island's temperatures of last year, you may notice that it was more seasonably cool and that we were fortunate enough to have some precipitation.

Rainfall last week: None.

January rainfall to date: None.

Normal rainfall for January: 1.89 inches.

1989 rainfall to date: None.

Normal rainfall for the year: 53.64 inches.

We may have these luscious warm days and cool nights to enjoy, but these high and low temperatures from other cities around the United States surely reflect their cold days and even colder nights!

Bird watching for beginners begins Friday

Was that a heron or a cormorant? If you like birds but can't tell the difference, the bird identification classes, sponsored by the Sanibel-Captiva Audubon Society, are for you.

The classes begin at 7:30 p.m. Friday, Jan. 20, at the Sanibel Community Association building and will continue for two Fridays and end with a field trip; cost is $10.

The intermediate course begins on Friday, Feb. 3. It will last for three weeks and also ends with a field trip; cost is $15.

If you know very little or nothing about birds or birding, and want to learn, the beginners course is for you.

If you know some birds and how to bird, or if you have taken the beginners course, try the intermediate class; it's made for you.

The instructors who have taught these classes on the island for many years are Jane and Russ Francis. For more information, call 472-0512.

Arbor Day celebrated at school Thursday

Arbor Day will be celebrated this Thursday in a ceremony at the Sanibel Elementary School at 1 p.m.

Festivities are scheduled to include songs and poems by the children and the planting of a tree donated by the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation. Vice-Mayor Jerry Muench will attend representing the city.

Friday is officially Arbor Day. The ceremony is being held on Thursday because Friday had already been scheduled as a parent-teacher day at the school.

"Coasting Florida's Coast" set for Thursday

Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation education director Kristie Seaman will present a program entitled "Coasting Florida's Coast" this Thursday at 8 p.m. at the Sanibel Community Center.

Seaman, formerly outdoor recreation planner at the J.N. "Ding" Darling National Wildlife Refuge, will show slides and talk about the different demands and conflicting interests that affect the coastal zone and its uses.

Prior to coming to Sanibel, Seaman worked at two National Historical Parks: Salem Maritime and Independence Hall. She has taught classes in coastal zone management.

This is the second program in the Sanibel-Captiva Audubon Society's winter entertainment series. The public is invited. A donation is requested at the door.

The winner of the afghan contest held recently at the Barrier Island Group for the Arts Center was Theodora Kyros for this cross stitched afghan. The contest was organized by Barbara Boulton, owner of Idle Hours on Sanibel and Needlepoints correspondent for The Islander.

Klein talks on Antarctica

Almost 600 people crowded into the Sanibel Community Center last Thursday night to hear former Sanibel Mayor Myron "Mike" Klein discuss his trip about a year ago to Antarctica.

Both slides and videotapes were shown by Klein in the first program in the Winter Entertainment Series of the Sanibel-Captiva Audubon Society.

The audience rippled with laughter at the videotapes of young penguins waddling around in their comic manner.

Wounds of hooked raccoon still infected

By Steve Ruediger
Islander staff writer

The raccoon caught on fishhooks in a yard on Captiva two weeks ago was continuing to have difficulty with infection in the wounds at the end of last week.

Care and Rehabilitation of Wildlife veterinarian Dr. Marc Elie operated for two hours Thursday closing wounds for a second time. But Friday the chest wounds were already pulling open again, Elie said. Also one of the raccoon's toes had to be amputated.

The papers for filing charges against Bernard M. "Bud" and Lois Fredericks had been filled out Friday. But charges had not yet been formally filed. Elie, who is executive director of CROW, filled out the forms to bring charges on behalf of CROW.

The Fredericks have said they put 49 fishhooks up to discourage raccoons from climbing the trees to get into their house. They have had thousands of dollars worth of damage to their house since they purchased it two years ago. They have admitted since the raccoon got caught that they made a mistake in putting up the fishhooks.

It seems the fishhooks had been there for some time, however. Bill Davis of Critter Control of Fort Myers, said Friday that he went to trap raccoons at the Fredericks home about six months ago and a 12 year old boy who went with him almost got caught on the fishhooks.

Davis said the boy was a neighbor of his named Jason who liked to go with him when he trapped animals. At the Fredericks' house Jason had climbed to the roof on one side of the house and was about to climb down a tree on the other side when Davis noticed that "he was about a foot away from getting caught in all those fishhooks." Davis said he yelled to warn the boy, who then came down another way.

Thinking back over it, Davis said, "I probably should have mentioned the hooks to somebody then."

"Table Manners" opens Monday at Pirate Playhouse

By Ann Travelstead
Islander staff writer

"Table Manners" by Alan Ayckbourn is the second in the Pirate Playhouse winter season. Opening night is set for Monday, January 23, with an 8 o'clock curtain. The Playhouse has produced an Ayckbourn play each year. "Round and Round the Garden," "Relatively Speaking" and "How the Other Half Loves" were popular choices in other years.

The current production adds three new members to this year's company. Christa Spieth, a New York actress, comes through the New York auditions that were held in November. Greg Kable, also a New Yorker, comes to the Playhouse with his wife Donna Shannon, who played in last year's "Vanities" and "How the Other Half Loves." Brad Fullager, from Rochester, New York, will play the riotously funny character of Reg. Kelly Duncan is also returning for a second season after outstanding performances in 1988 productions. Bob Toperzer will recreate his role as Norman in this play. Audiences saw Norman in the garden four years ago, now he is with the same relatives in the dining room.

"Table Manners" is another witty Ayckbourn effort that takes recognizable situations and characters and molds them into an evening of hilarity.

The Pirate Playhouse will be home to "Table Manners" through March 11. The box office is open Monday through Saturday, from 10-noon and 4-8 p.m. Phone 472-0006 for information and reservations.

"Ding" Darling Society looking for logo

The "Ding" Darling Wildlife Society has announced a contest for all real or imagined artists and designers to help them find a new logo.

A press release from the society, said that the society has played an increasing role in providing materials to help visitors to the refuge increase their appreciation of the importance of protecting habitat for the preservation of wildlife and would like their logo to more graphically reflect this role.

The contest is open to everyone and guidelines are as follows:

1. Two elements are required to appear as part of the logo: the name "Ding" Darling Wildlife Society and the location, Sanibel, Florida.

2. Two other elements which may be considered but are not required are some visual representation of the habitat and the blue goose, symbol of the National Refuge System.

3. The logo can take any graphic form but should reproduce clearly in a small size and should reflect the purpose of the society: "to promote a better understanding and appreciation of the J.N. "Ding" Darling National Wildlife Refuge and surrounding lands."

Entries can be made in either original or copy form and should be sent to:

Logo Contest, "Ding" Darling Wildlife Society, 1 Wildlife Drive, Sanibel, FL 33957, before Friday Feb. 17 when they will be reviewed by a panel of judges.

Winner of the contest will receive, in addition to the applause of the society, a lifetime membership, a certificate of award from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and a copy of the book, "Ding."

State to buy Josslyn Island

Josslyn Island, noted for its Calusa Indian mounds, is to be purchased for $144,000 by the State of Florida. The 9.5 acre island is located off the coast of Pine Island east of the southern tip of Cayo Costa.

Negotiations on the purchase had been going on since the mid-1970's. The island has been appraised for as much as $1 million, but owner Donald Randell said the preservation of the island was more important than the sale price.

Archaeologists, who have studied Indian artifacts on the island, plan further studies in the future.

Sanibel resident ordered to repay money taken in securities scam

Sanibel resident Ryan Patrick Curry was ordered last week in circuit court to pay back at the rate of $160 a month the $1.2 million he had been convicted of taking in a securities scam.

Curry, who is now a construction worker earning about $900 a month, had dealt in securities in the Naples area.

He moved to Sanibel after serving eight months of a three and a half year sentence. He was released under an early release program. The money taken in the securities operation was allegedly used up in extravagant living.

Rogers moved that letters be directed to the Sanibel-Captiva Islands Chamber of Commerce and to the Lee County Tourist Development Council, directing them to cease any promotion of Turner Beach.

Lois Kessler, a bridge-area resident, wanted to know about the limited area parking lot on the Sanibel side. Carroll indicated that that area will be encroached upon by the temporary bridge during the construction period, but an unpaved area for seven vehicles has been designed into, and shown on, the plan.

Co-op worker escapes burning truck on Dixie Beach

Steve Ruediger
Islander staff writer

A Lee County Electric Cooperative tree trimming truck caught fire last Tuesday on Dixie Beach Boulevard stranding a man trimming trees from the fully extended bucket arm of the truck.

The man, whose name was not released, shimmied down a rope to escape from the burning truck. But the rope was still about 15 feet from the ground so another boom truck was brought over and the man jumped to that truck's bucket, according to Sanibel Police Sgt. Betty Weir, who watched the escape while directing traffic at the intersection of Dixie Beach Boulevard and Periwinkle Way.

The Sanibel Fire Department put out the fire but the truck was a total loss. "The whole front end of the truck dissolved," said Weir, describing the burning and melting of the fiberglass truck body.

Weir said she was off duty on her way home when she saw the tall, dense column of black smoke from the fire and stopped to direct traffic around the area.

Rehearings: What the city councilmen must consider

Last December 20, the city council made decisions that drew a drumbeat of protests against density increases and invasion of our wetlands. Citizens assembled and spoke of action: rehearing, appeals, referendum and initiative to change city laws, even recall of councilmen from office.

Amid all this, something remarkable happened. Container Products Corporation, dissatisfied with the increase in density granted for its land along Casa Ybel Road, petitioned the council for rehearing. Also, citizens asked for rehearing of applications concerning the Beachview property and Bert Jenk's wetlands behind the C & S Bank. In an electric atmosphere, the council voted to rehear all three applications on February 7 (since rescheduled to January 23).

What goes on in the mind of the councilman on each of these cases as that high voltage rehearing approaches?

Container Products Application

The Container Products Corporation application involves an increase in density in exchange for a gift of wetlands for conservation by the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation or the city, and a donation of land for the city's Below Market Rate Housing.

Our councilman knows that preservation of wetlands enjoys overwhelming public support and that density increases are enormously unpopular. BMRH has passionate supporters and tough-minded critics who question how and whether it should be paid for by the public.

Should wetlands and BMRH be bargaining chips for density?

considerations. The land in question carries very low permissible density. How large a concession to conservation is Container Products really making?

But Sanibel just saw the council move with frightening speed to pull our wetlands out of protection! The councilman might recognize some new prudence in putting a big parcel into the hands of SCCF where the council cannot get at it.

Is increasing density the right way to support BMRH? Our Comprehensive Land Use Plan, permits the council to do this, but is this course wise? Remember, Mr. Councilman, the double-barrelled effect: density for BMRH and additional density as an incentive to the developer to give land for BMRH use.

Our councilman must assess Container Product's threat to litigate if it does not succeed in negotiating the density it requires. What are the odds in such litigation? Might it jeopardize Sanibel's laws for protecting our wetlands?

Container Products has retained the former city attorney, David La Croix, who helped fashion those laws. He was almost apologetic to the council for representing Container Products before his recent client, quite possibly in prelude to litigation. People in the hall asked each other if it was right for him to do this.

In any case, our councilman must weigh the

The Beachview Project

This application presents a Chinese puzzle of issues. Michigan Homes seeks a density increase and projects complete development of a large parcel along the Sanibel River, including an extension of Beachview golf course.

Again, the density increase, by itself, must be seen as undesirable.

Any conservation-minded person must be unhappy with two precedents that were set on December 20. One involved taking a very large parcel out of the Wetlands Conservation District to permit the golf course development.

Arguably, some of the curse was taken off by imposing a set of conditions on this land similar to those for lands in the wetlands district.

The second precedent involved changing the Ecological Zone of 67 acres from Wetlands to the relatively unprotected Altered Lands zone: basis for granting applicant increased density.

In doing this the council disregarded findings of the planning department staff and two state departments, the Departments of Community Affairs and Environmental Regulation, that the change would be contrary to Sanibel's Comprehensive Land Use Plan.

If the findings of the planning department and these governmental agencies is correct, the action is a violation of state law challengeable by determined citizens.

Particularly disturbing to some was the council's apparent acceptance of the applicant's assurance that the Sanibel River would be improved and restored in ways not revealed and

Council need reminding of stewardship role

To the Editor
The Islander

We should thank Alan Wortzel for the rehearing on February 7 of three requests for building in the wetlands. His discontent gives us another chance to persuade our councilmen to just say no. They need, also, to be reminded that no matter how good the causes of Below Market Rate Housing and the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation, or how personally attractive nine more holes of golf might be, that their own primary function is stewardship of the natural environment of this island as defined and required by our Comprehensive Land Use Plan.

I am dismayed at the frequency with which some of them override the recommendations of the Planning Commission and reject, if indeed, they read them at all, the thorough and professional staff reports from our Planning Department. Although no one expects or wants a rubber stamp council, neither do we want endless compromise. In "Environmental Notebook", (The Islander, Jan. 10)

Wallace Kain says it best. The council should be "incredibly tight, mean, stingy, miserly, all but unapproachable on the subject of density increases and invasion of the wetlands."

Deadline for petition this Saturday

To the Editor
The Islander

The response has been tremendous! We now have over 100 copies of the petition circulating on Sanibel. Since our city council has agreed to reconsider three of its recent ordinances on Monday, Jan. 23, please return your petition as soon as possible to The Island Book Nook on Palm Ridge Road.

The deadline for the return is this Saturday, Jan. 21.

Residents and/or property owners may sign a petition at The Island Book Nook.

Varying opinions part of American heritage

To the Editor
The Islander

I hope this letter is not a lone voice in the wilderness, but I find the recent announcement, the one that says a petition threatening three city council members is circulating, a little abhorrent.

Differences of opinion, strongly held and aggressively defended, are part of our heritage and culture. It's the basis upon which change is managed and made palatable - for change is always inevitable. But it accomplishes nothing if the town gets shot up because one point of view doesn't prevail.

It would be a sad thing for Sanibel if either the group that wants nature untainted or the group that wants nature forgotten ever stopped their passionate expressions of "the right thing to do"; or their wraithlike descriptions of a world gone awry. For out of these confrontations come a reasonable balance, and that's what we should have.

But for either of those groups to take the position that a public official should be impeached or threatened because a vote didn't go their way seems a bit like the vigilante.

Joseph E. Kelley
Sanibel

Editor's note: Subject of many rumors, the circulating petition, printed in its entirety in the interests of clarity, reads as follows:

"As Sanibel approaches buildout, the pressures on the City Government to increase density and to remove land from the Wetlands Conservation District for development also increase.

"Therefore, in order to help preserve the integrity of the Island, we the undersigned residents and/or property owners respectfully request that the City Council not grant any further increases in density or remove any more land from the Wetlands Conservation District."

The Islander is not aware of any other petition actually circulating, although another one, similar to the one Mr. Kelley alludes to, was at one time rumored.

Impact on others and on future must be considered

To the Editor
The Islander

There are no words to express my deep feelings of sadness and helplessness after having read of the loss of more of our Sanibel wetlands to what too many misinformed people call "progress."

Nothing I say or do will change the minds of the spoiled brats who want their selfish way, regardless of the cost to the future of our planet or children, for they are too old to change, and self-centered spoiled brats they are without a doubt!

Years ago, when I was one of 12 children, I cursed my parents for constantly reminding me that all decisions should be made thinking of how it would affect everyone else in the family, then and for years to come. I now realize how wise my parents were.

My last prayer will be that there will be concerned parents on Sanibel and everywhere in the world who have instilled better values in their children than those demonstrated by too many of our generation. They must, or there will be no future on this planet.

Frances McDonald
New Haven, Mo.

Last week's Environmental Notebook column concerning remedies which might be available in connection with the city council's actions on Dec. 20 appeared with significant omissions relating to 1. citizen appeals to the courts and 2. the availability of referendum.

Concerning appeals, the omitted material warned the reader of important technicalities in the law, and the time, cost and need for a lawyer experienced in municipal law, a legal speciality.

Concerning referendum, the omitted material explained the right of voters to require the council to reconsider the ordinance, and if the council fails to repeal the offending ordinance, to have it approved or rejected in an election. Referendum involves a petition committee and the signature of 25 percent of the city's qualified voters, well over 1,000 signatures at present. The petition must be filed within 60 days after the adoption of the offending ordinance and other procedural steps observed.

Alligators

Feeding alligators anywhere is not only ILLEGAL, it also is extremely DANGEROUS. An alligator that is accustomed to being fed will become a dangerous animal if left unfed for a period of time. Animals that are not artificially fed are less likely to become problems. A "tame" alligator becomes bold; he loses his fear of man. Then he has difficulty distinguishing between a fish and the hand that holds it.

Because of the alligator population here, dogs should never be allowed to run on the islands. Fence your dog or walk him on a leash. NEVER tie your dog in an unfenced back yard.

For help with a nuisance alligator, call the Sanibel Police Department, 472-3111. The dispatcher will contact the state.

Dog laws

Sanibel law requires that dogs be leashed whenever they are on property not belonging to their owner. You are responsible for the behavior of your pet.

The Chamber of Commerce can tell you which island accommodations accept families with pets.

Remember: Wherever you are, clean up after your dog. "Leave nothing on the beach except footprints" applies to dogs, too.

Fishing

No permit is required for the saltwater sport, but fishing in freshwater ponds or on the Sanibel River requires a Florida fishing license.

Licenses are available at Bailey's on Sanibel.

that the golf course could come within 25 feet of the river, somehow without adverse environmental impacts. Golf courses are heavy users of chemicals, fertilizers, herbicides, fungicides, and insecticides. How the river would be improved and the golf course built were not demonstrated.

The council was asked to accept the feasibility of all this, without unacceptable environment harm, pig in a poke - with no showing of proof whatever! It was not even shown that all three, improved river, environmentally sound golf course, and increased density, could fit on the property.

Surely a prudent councilman would insist upon this showing before approving the applicant's entire proposal, density, bad precedents, wall-to-wall development and all. Surely he would not wait until the development permit stage to learn fundamentals of the case. What is to keep new density from going forward without any acceptable Sanibel River improvement? Better see their openers before giving up the pot.

Of course, our councilman must remember the great popularity and recreational value of golf, and the odds, hazards and costs of possible litigation.

The Jenks Property

Of the three cases, I will bet the Jenks property is the one that rests most poorly with Sanibel's public.

There is a long, long history here of efforts to exploit a piece of wetlands, using one technique or the other, in proceeding after proceeding before the planning commission and council. This process met with little success until a carved out parcel was sold for BMRH with a contract contingency: council must remove this land from the Wetlands Conservation Map; the basis for increasing density.

Understandably, BMRH partisans defended this new approach and along the way made it clear that a large density increase intensity, from 1 to 16 to 18 dwelling units, would be

St. Charles Harbour & Yacht Club

There is an ancient cove on the Caloosahatchee River that has been a quiet haven for seafarers over the centuries. It still is today. St. Charles Harbour and Yacht Club is a private residential community designed for families who will enjoy this historic and magnificent environment.

Windjammer model by Frey & Sons.

The private harbor provides a superb home port, lying just south of Fort Myers on the west coast of Florida, only a few miles from the Gulf Islands of Sanibel and Captiva.

It nestles near the mouth of the river, a secluded natural harbor set off by unspoiled virgin pine and oak forest. The water and woodlands support abundant wildlife. Its 140 acres embrace over 60 acres of protected wildlife refuge — including a Bald Eagle preserve — and more than 20 acres of lakes, lagoons and waterways.

St. Charles Harbour inherits a rich historic legacy from the explorers and pioneers who sailed and fished its waters. Many adventurers, from the Calusa Indians to Spanish explorers, have known the magic of this special place. At the turn of the century, Thomas Edison, Henry Ford, Harvey Firestone and Dr. Franklin Miles enjoyed the beautiful waters of this secluded cove.

Today, there is a delightful opportunity for a new generation of seafarers and nature lovers to reside in one of the finest private yacht club communities and nature preserves in this part of old Florida.

Brouhaha over density worries CHR director

The rehearing of recent city council decisions, circulating petitions and accompanying outcry over density increases and actions involving the Interior Wetlands Conservation District have Dorothy Newman, Director of Community Housing and Resources, worried.

The issues, she fears, are being simplified, and the emotional public reaction is threatening the city's Below Market Rate Housing program.

COMMUNITY HOUSING RESOURCE REPORTS

The Container Products Corporation density assignment includes 10 BMRH units. And the Jenks property, approved for removal from the wetlands district, is under contract for sale to CHR.

Newman feels that the council decisions about both projects are being judged without knowledge of some important conditions.

"I live here too and want to preserve the unique quality of life here," she said, "but an all or nothing attitude misunderstands the wisdom of our city's regulations."

"First of all," Newman said, "people who are not versed in the Comprehensive Land Use Plan and Land Development Code seem to think that all land in the wetlands district is to remain untouched."

"That's simply not true. It's being developed every day," she continued.

Newman cited Sanibel Highlands subdivision, which is completely within the wetlands district, as an example. In addition, she points out that interior wetlands land has a variety of additional permitted uses including duplex and multi-family residences, public utility structures and educational facilities.

The Jenks parcel was already subdivided and a portion will be the site of a Lee County Electric sub-station.

Removing land from the wetlands district changes the standards affecting its development. "The IWCD designation carries with it a more stringent code," Newman explained. "The issue is not if it will be developed, but how it will be developed."

The accuracy of designating the 3.07 acres as wetlands has been debated frequently during efforts by Jenks to develop the land.

"Mr. Jenks has made very cogent arguments that to include that land in the IWCD was in error from the time the wetlands map was drawn up," Newman said. "The Planning Director has agreed with him in public hearings on at least one occasion."

To remove the parcel from the wetlands district would allow Community Housing Resources to apply for a density increase because Below Market Rate Housing is specifically permitted increased density under both the land use plan and the land development code.

"But the land can be developed regardless of district lines," Newman emphasized.

Container Products Corporation is appealing the approval of 30 developer and 10 BMRH units on the basis that the council voted on the Planning Commission recommendation rather than on the owner's submitted request.

Container Products requested 45 units and 10 Below Market Rate Housing units. The 150-plus acres had an original density of 20

Planners approve reclassification of Periwinkle Park

By Frances Adams
Islander staff writer

Planners approved the reclassification of Periwinkle Trailer Park from Uplands Wetlands to Altered Land and three other related amendments to the Land Development Code at the Planning Commission meeting on Tuesday, Jan. 10.

In order for tenants at Periwinkle Park to install screened room attachments to their recreational vehicles and mobile homes, Periwinkle Park applied for four separate amendments to the Land Development Code and has requested an interpretation of its zone boundaries by city planners.

The planning commission discussed the related applications as a single agenda item.

The first two applications are in the category of what Deputy Planning Director Ken Pfalzer called "housekeeping." One is to amend the definitions for "mobile home" and "recreational vehicle" in the Sanibel Land Development Code to be consistent with the definitions contained in the Florida Statutes.

The other issue concerns clarifying the language regarding "new use" of a recreational vehicle or mobile home, and whether a development permit would be needed when one is moved and is replaced by another. The replacement of an existing recreational vehicle with a different recreational vehicle does not constitute new use, therefore it does not require a development permit. To replace an existing mobile home with a different mobile home requires a development permit.

A third application is to add the 246 recreational vehicle sites to the list of dwelling units located outside the Resort Housing District. Approval of this ordinance would enable the sites to continue to be used for nonconforming uses.

It was considered to be an oversight that the sites were not included on the original 1987 list. The 80 mobile home sites would not be included on this list.

Periwinkle Park requested an interpretation of zoning boundaries within the park in order to reclassify all of what are now designated as Upland Wetlands to Altered Land.

It was pointed out that the current Ecological Zone map's boundaries do not coincide with the topographic information in the 1986 topographical maps for the city.

It was determined that the land which now is designated as Uplands Wetlands meets the specifications for Altered Land, particularly since it long ago had been dredged, cleared and filled.

The planners voted to approve the reclassification with a vote of 6-1, with Commissioner Penny Rogers against.

In the final ordinance consideration, Periwinkle Park seeks to amend the Land Development Code to add a statement that the minimum distance between mobile homes or recreational vehicles shall be 10 feet.

The current requirements in the code specifies that the distance between buildings be a minimum of 20 feet. In the trailer park, a typical recreational vehicle site is 30-35 feet wide. A recreational vehicle is typically 12 feet wide. Therefore, on some of the sites it is not possible to retain a 20-foot separation between the structures. Also, screened rooms cannot be installed on the existing recreational vehicle sites and still maintain the 20-foot separation.

The requested 10-foot separation complies with the National Life Safety Code and Building Code and is consistent with typical zoning district regulations.

Approval of this amendment would allow the Periwinkle Park tenants to install screened room attachments, which by definition are considered part of the recreational vehicle. Hence, the installation of the screened rooms would not require a development permit.

Commission Chairman Bob Davison, who has vacationed in recreational vehicles, said he appreciates screened rooms, and added that it's very difficult to live in the confines of a trailer.

The planners generally approved of the requested ordinances. Commissioner Ernest Klaudt called Periwinkle Park "a hatchery for full-time residents," adding that many residents first came to Sanibel by vacationing at the park. He also said he doesn't want to "shut the door" on any potential visitors or residents.

The Periwinkle Park ordinances will have second reading at the next planning commission meeting on Tuesday, Jan. 24.

CITY BRIEFS

Davidson again elected chairman of Sanibel Planning Commission

Bob Davison was again elected chairman and Penny Rogers elected vice chairman by acclamation of the Sanibel Planning Commission. This will be Davison's second and last term, since a chairman can serve only for two consecutive terms.

Planner Ernest Klaudt was nominated first for the vice chairmanship but declined the offer.

In other action at the Jan. 10 planning commission meeting:

- The planners unanimously recommended dual approval for both a Conditional Use Permit and a variance to the Land Development Code to permit construction in the Bay Beach Zone of a boat dock and boat lift which does not meet the required 10-foot setback from side property lines as extended.

The proposed dock will be an accessory to the single-family residence of Burton and Jean Binder at 1528 San Carlos Bay Drive. The structure would begin at the shoreline abutting the rear of the property and extend 150 feet seaward (from mean high water), perpendicular to the shoreline, so that the outermost edge of the dock is situated behind the residence.

- Also on second reading, Charles Garcia, the marine contractor for Tennisplace Condominium

Association, received the planners' unanimous recommendation for approval of a variance which would permit the construction of a larger dock at Tennisplace condominium. The proposed dock would be 2,188 square feet, 1,188 square feet in excess of the maximum 1,000 square feet permitted by the Land Development Code.

- Myton Ireland's hearing for a development permit to construct a new boat showroom at his Sanibel Marina was continued to an uncertain date, since the revised site plans submitted to the commission in early January are inaccurate and incomplete. He was advised to bring his architect to the planning department for consultation, so that the once-again revised site plans will have all the detailing necessary for the commission to make a fair ruling.

Over Hearings

These off-the-cuff comments, referring to the upcoming controversial Jan. 23 city council hearing, were overheard as city planners chatted before their Jan. 10 meeting:

"They ought to sell tickets to the meetings. We could build a new courthouse with the proceeds."

"It's like having a lynching party where you're the guest of honor."

units, although the number has been challenged. Planning Department staff recommended 43 units for CPC plus 10 BMRH units. Newman said the planning commission's rationale behind its recommendation should be analyzed.

"The commission discussed giving Container Products an additional 10 units as a one-for-one match of 10 for BMRH. When it was pointed out that meant there was no benefit for the 50 acres donated for permanent conservation, the commission recommended five units in consideration of the land grant and five for the BMRH provision. Nowhere does the CLUP provide a formula to use in considering the permitted options, such as BMRH provision and sensitive land donation, that carry with them the promise of density increases."

Newman points out that council's December 20 decision tells developers they must donate double-digit acres of land to get on additional unit.

"How many developers will do that?" she asked. "They would be better off keeping the land and using it themselves. There are not that many large tracts left, and I fear the council will curtail, if not eliminate, developer cooperation.

"The city may find it is left with only one way to get land in the future - either for BMRH or for conservation - and that is to buy it."

Likewise the implied ration of two BMRH units to one developer's bonus could hurt the city's housing program, Newman feels. "Not everyone will be as generous as Container," Newman said. "Rejecting the proffered proposal could mean the end of developer provisions for BMRH."

Accuracy of weapons in Libyan shootings impressive

To the Editor
The Islander

Whether or not the United States was right in shooting down the Libyan fighter planes is an argument that I am not raising here.

However, the accuracy of the weapons used was indeed impressive. Four missiles fired, with two hits. One report stated that three were sparrows, the other, a sidewinder which accounted for one hostile plane.

The sparrow missile has been in our arsenal for 40 years. Just imagine the performance of recently-designed guided missiles not maintained at ready.

The sparrow system was developed at the Ford Industrial Division of the Sperry Corp. soon after World War II. The engineering genius in charge of the project was Elmer Garrett, who obviously knew what he was doing.

It was surprising to me that both Libyan pilots survived those direct hits. The Russians must make excellent automatic ejection seats, for otherwise those men would not have had a chance.

Newman and members of the CHR Board of Directors, several of whom are active with island conservation and environmental groups, worry about the one-sided perspective indicated by current efforts to challenge the council's right to make decisions.

"Our board joins forces with everyone who wants to keep Sanibel a 'sanctuary island.' And we are against willy-nilly density increases. But we fear unbending attitudes prompt desperate reactions," a statement from the board said recently.

necessary to justify BMRH development.

Again, disregarding staff, DCA and DER findings, the council approved this application, with its history, fast on the heels of the Beachview approval, even citing Beachview as precedent.

The councilman is faced with a precedent which would, if sustained on Feb. 7, gag many of us. He must recognize the intrinsic density issue. Also, he must weigh the benefits to BMRH, which was used, certainly through no fault of its supporters, to pull the applicant's speculative chestnuts out of the fire.

Our councilman facing these cases must put first things first. I hope he hears the public drumbeat...density...wetlands....

'Unmitigated gall' for Cothren to set Captiva's standards

To the Editor
The Islander

Gary Cothren is 100 percent right when he lectures to the people of Captiva that we "have to come to the realization that this is a resort, regardless of what people may believe" - a resort dedicated to the peace and quiet of nature - a reason to come here shared by resident and visitor alike. Grand Canyon is a resort. Natural Bridge is a resort. So is Miami Beach and Coney Island.

The public is entitled to enjoy our surf and beautiful beaches without the encroachment of any commercial enterprise. No company or individual has the right to impose its concept of "resort" on us.

It is unmitigated gall to have the Gary Cothrens, whose concept of resort obviously is a public area where anything goes, the faster and noisier the better, attempt to set our standards.

Yield now and we are wide open for commercial exploitation, beach trash and noise pollution.

Fast (junk) food and fast bikes have thier place, but not on Captiva, one of Florida's few remaining natural resorts.

POLICE BEAT

A Fort Myers man last Wednesday reported to police that American Telephone and Telegraph operator number 32 and her supervisor had both refused to place a call he was trying to make from a Sanibel pay phone. The man told police he had a telephone credit card and operators were supposed to accept it. Because they hadn't accepted it he wanted a complaint on file. He also intended to complain to the Federal Communications Commission.

Michael Monrow Bills of Sanibel was charged last Tuesday night with driving under the influence after police observed his vehicle cross the center line on Periwinkle Way. He refused to take breathalyzer tests.

An injured raccoon found by police early Friday morning at the intersection of Periwinkle Way and Dixie Beach Boulevard was taken to Care and Rehabilitation of Wildlife on Sanibel.

A Parview Drive woman reported noises outside her home last Thursday night. Police found raccoon tracks.

The parents of a 14 year old Sanibel boy reported to police last Thursday that their son had left his bicycle at a Dixie Beach Boulevard bus stop the previous Friday and had noticed Sunday that it was missing.

Police received a complaint thursday of a dog on Jewel Box Lane barking constantly from 5:30 to 10 in the morning. Police contacted the dog's owner, who promised to keep the animal quiet.

Tracy's Car Wash on Periwinkle complained to police last wednesday that an elderly customer who had been reading their copy of "Tales of Old Captiva" while his car was being washed had left with the book. Police on patrol that night found the book sitting on a picnic table outside of Tracy's. The police returned the book Thursday.

A 30 by 36 inch bird picture in a cork frame was found last Wednesday on Sanibel-Captiva Road. It had been run over. Markings on the picture indicated it had been obtained in the Channel 2 Auction in Boston, Ma.

Causeway bridge passes inspection

By Steve Ruediger
Islander staff writer

The Sanibel Causeway bridge passed its special inspection last Wednesday night with only minor problems uncovered, according to Lee County signal department technician Richard Epps, who worked with the inspectors.

The bridge was out of balance and there was one small motor problem,

Epps said. The balance problem was corrected as soon as special computer equipment brought in by the inspectors uncovered it.

Intermittent traffic delays caused by the night bridge work lasted for three days rather than the originally scheduled two days. Areas under the bridge were cleaned Monday and Tuesday nights. The inspection was then done on Wednesday night.

Special Report

The Sanibel River

Stream, lake, brook, swamp, rivulet, ditch or slough; the Sanibel River is essential to the environment of our islands. This two-part series will examine the history, current controversies and future plans for the river. This week, we look at its history.

By Steve Ruediger
Islander staff writer

"The Sanibel River is central to the island's ecosystem and this water system makes Sanibel unique among Gulf Coast barrier islands," wrote John Clark in The Sanibel Report, published in 1976 by The Conservation Foundation.

But as central and unique as this river is, very few visitors and even some residents don't know it exists. And even experts disagree about what it is.

Clark said that the "partially channelized interior drainage system" which is called the Sanibel River "is really a slough."

Dictionaries define slough as a swampy or swamplike region. Some people don't think this definition fits the body of water on Sanibel. "Sloughs don't flow" said former planning commissioner Bill Webb, who favors calling it a river.

"It's more like a very long lake," said Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation Executive Director Erick Lindblad. Some of the best preserved parts of the river are on SCCF land.

Also words such as canal and drainage ditch have been used to refer to the narrow, shallow body of water. The words stream, rivulet, or brook, all of which might be more suitable to its size, don't seem to be used.

In line with the debate on what it should be called is the discussion of whether it flows.

The June 16, 1987 Johnson Engineering Surface Water Management study for the City of Sanibel described it as flowing in three different directions. But Webb, who has studied Sanibel's surface water system for years, says it flows away from the most recent heaviest concentration of rain. So it might flow in one direction one day and in another direction the next.

In order to throw some light on all these questions, let's go back and describe briefly the history of the creation of the Sanibel River.

The fresh water basin of Sanibel was formed between 1,000 and 1,500 years ago on the 5,000 year old island, according to Clark. Usually Sanibel is described as a bowl containing fresh water. Actually it is a divided bowl. Southeast of Tarpon Bay former beach ridges divide the eastern from the western parts of the island.

Prior to the dredging of the Sanibel River, the interior of Sanibel consisted primarily of extensive Spartina grass marshes. From 1883 to 1928 there was extensive farming. Indeed, Sanibel tomatoes were famous in northern markets.

The primary farming areas were on both sides of Periwinkle extending west to a line south of the western end of Tarpon Bay and at Wulfert. Ditching was done in connection with this farming, affecting primarily the eastern part of the Sanibel River.

This is one reason that the water in the eastern marsh was more channelized. It tended to flow east and, when it became high enough, it would break through the beach ridge and flow into the Gulf of Mexico just west of Point Ybel, which is the location of the Sanibel Lighthouse.

The western portion meandered a great deal and, at high water, discharged into the Gulf 2.5 miles east of Blind Pass.

Now the water has two exits both blocked by weirs (dams) with heights of two and a half feet above sea level. One is beside Beach Road and releases the water into a series of salt water canals. The other is just south of Tarpon Bay and releases the water into that bay.

But we've jumped ahead. Back in the times we were describing, Sanibel had an overpopulation problem - an overpopulation of mosquitoes. In 1950, a world record was set when 365,696 mosquitoes were caught in one backyard trap in a single night on Sanibel.

When the water rose in the summer and broke through the Gulf ridges, the surface water would drain off. In the dry season the land would become parched and any fish living in the interior would die. Mosquito larvae would develop in the ponds formed by the first rains and there were no fish to eat them.

To solve the problem J.N. "Ding" Darling and others discussed the idea of connecting all the fresh water sloughs with canals and placing dams at the ends to maintain water levels through the winter, keep the fish alive, and eliminate isolated marshes free of fish.

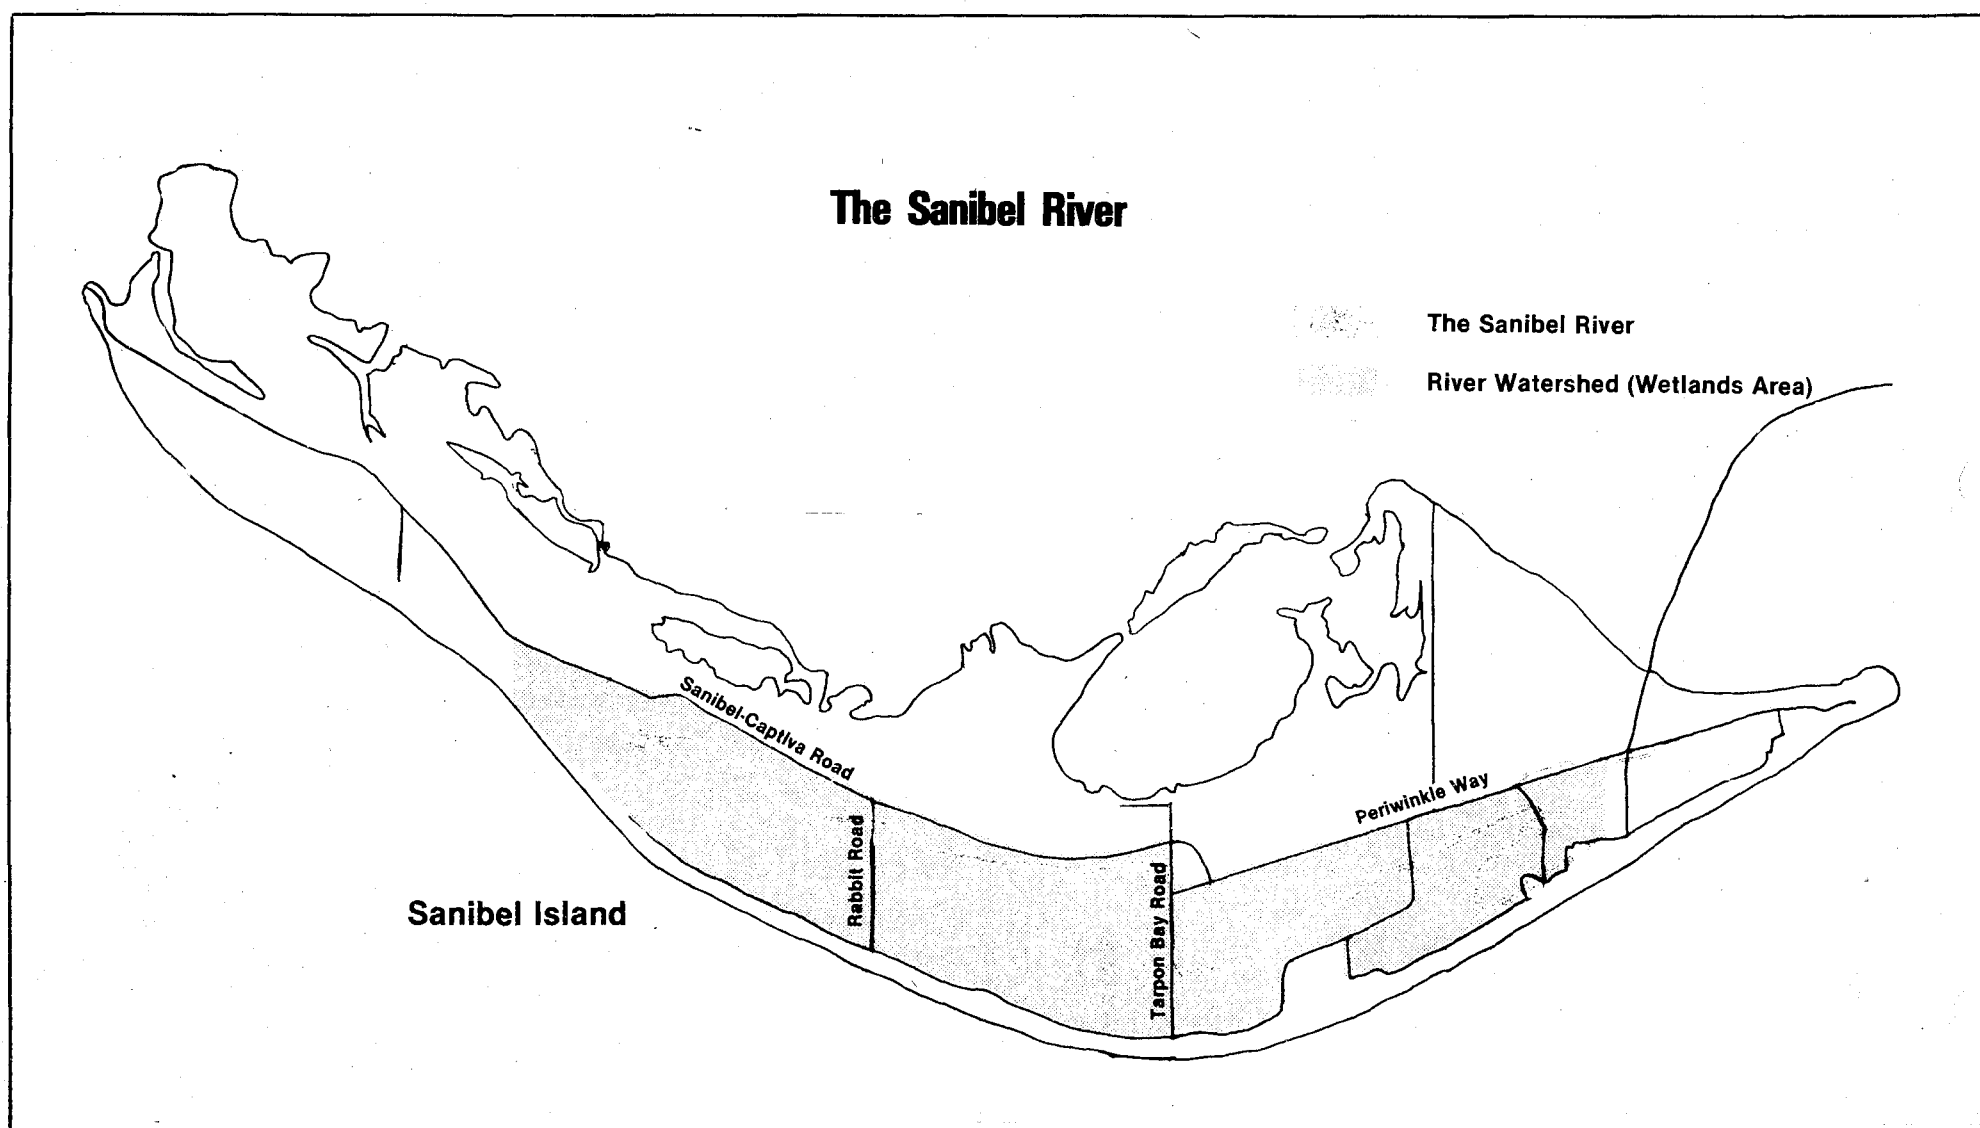

These ideas were discussed as far back as the late 1940's and Darling even drew cartoons for an article to propose the ideas.

But, in the end, nothing was done until 1957 when T. Wayne Miller and Lee County Mosquito Control began work with one drag line near what is now Beach Road. It took them about three years working their way west until finally they reached Stuart's Pond near the western end of the island.

Airplane landing canal.

The Sanibel River

So the Sanibel River is essentially a body of water created by Lee County Mosquito Control.

There have been alterations, such as the developers of the Beachview golf course moving the river about 500 feet so that it would be at the edge rather than in the middle of their property.

There were also sometimes considerations other than mosquitoes that determined the shape of the river. For example, the airplane canal in the Bailey Tract of the J.N. "Ding" Darling National Wildlife Refuge is wider than other parts of the river because, Miller says, "Tom Woods, who was running the refuge then, asked us to dig it a little wider there so he could land his seaplane."

The digging of the Sanibel River worked. There are fish in it and they do eat the mosquito larvae. This means that mosquito control does not have to spray chemicals in that area to control mosquitoes. They still do spray on Sanibel but in areas outside of the Sanibel River system such as Wulfert and the main area of the wildlife refuge.

This is one reason conservationists get upset with those who would dismiss the interior wetlands as unimportant.

"But let no one be deluded as to the importance of that standing water over so much of the island's interior," Maurice W. Provost wrote in the April, 1969 issue of The Florida Naturalist. "Getting rid of it would only bring back Sanibel's former world notoriety for mosquitoes while greatly diminishing its wildlife and particularly its bird population. But more important still, man would most definitely not prosper."

The watershed boundaries of the Sanibel River are Periwinkle Way, Sanibel-Captiva Road, Jamaica Drive, West Gulf Drive, Middle Gulf Drive, and Beach Road, according to Johnson Engineering, which said, "The existing water management system can be viewed in terms of a large tree with a main trunk and lateral branches. The trunk of the tree is the Sanibel River."

Of course, it should not be forgotten that a great deal of the water is underground. According to Provost, for every foot of water above sea level "the salt water underlying it is depressed 40 feet." This forms a subterranean bowl of fresh water under the boundaries described in the last paragraph. So the fresh water helps prevent salt water intrusion in addition to providing nourishment for plants. "Without the underground fresh water such islands become deserts," Provost wrote.

It was said earlier that the Sanibel River flows in three different directions. Describing those flows will also describe the course of the river.

The western section begins in the Jamaica Drive area, goes through Tahiti Shores, across land owned by The Nature Conservancy, across land owned by the State of Florida south of the Sanibel Elementary School, under Rabbit Road, through portions of land owned by SCCF and by The Nature Conservancy, under Thrasher, Park, Williford, and Locke avenues, and finally reaches the only north-south portion of the river, which takes it under Sanibel-Captiva Road to the Tarpon Bay weir.

The middle portion of the river flows from a watershed boundary located north of Casa Ybel Road and east of Tarpon Bay Road. This boundary separates flows and is not shown on maps, which show the river as continuous.

However, that flow goes across Tarpon Bay to the airplane canal which takes it to the north-south section, where it joins with the western section in flowing toward the Tarpon Bay weir.

The eastern section goes through Sanibel Lake Estates, has a branch around Beachview golf course, then goes through Sanibel Shores to the weir, which is on the western side of Beach Road. This part of the river immediately behind the Periwinkle Way Trailer Park contains roosting areas for several types of birds.

Wildlife in the areas of the river depends for its existence on vegetation. "As recent as 1950, prior to heavy development on the island, the habitat in the interior wetlands was primarily vast stretches of spartina grassland marshes, with scattered clumps of cabbage palms," according to the Feb. 24, 1988 status report of the city's Interior Wetlands Study Committee.

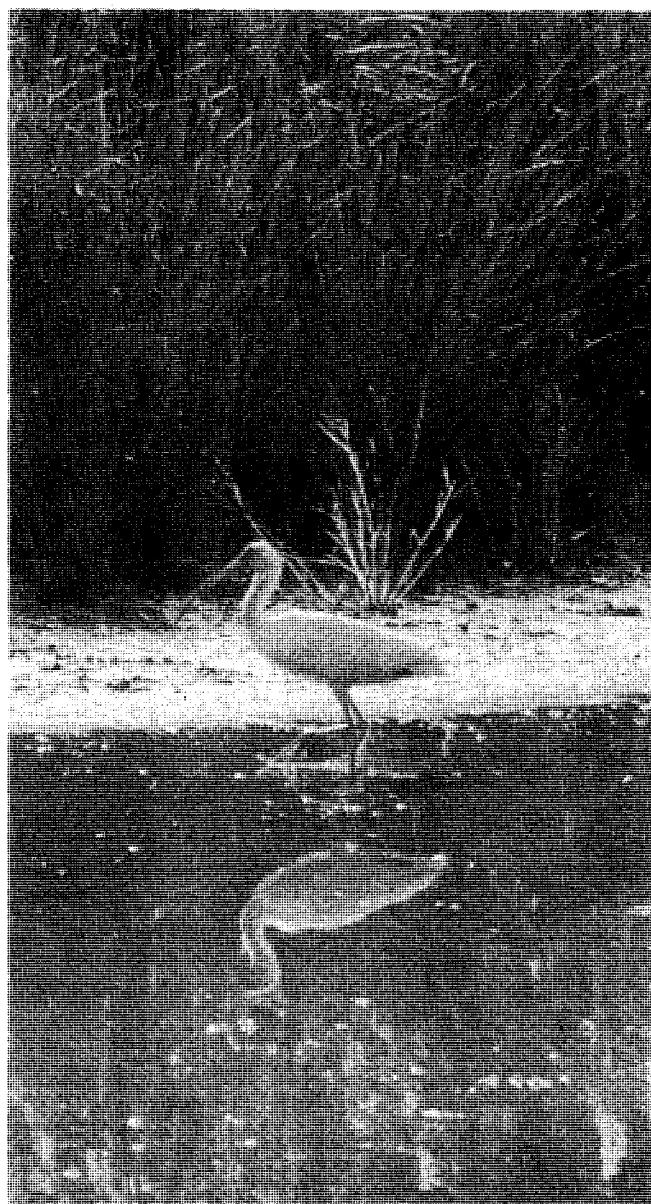

Changes in the environment have changed the nature of the plant life. "The savannah and marsh habitat that dominated the island in the 1950's has all but disappeared, being replaced by both exotic and native woody hammocks," said the study committee.

The two trees most frequently blamed for crowding out other vegetation are Australian Pines, planted as shade trees along roads in 1912-1914, and the ubiquitous Brazilian peppers, introduced as a landscaping plant in the 1950's.

The Sanibel Report in 1976 warned of the consequences as the changes were occurring. It said, "The vegetation of the Sanibel wetlands is continuing to undergo rapid change. Major losses have occurred to cordgrass and sawgrass. Together these two species provided both food and refuge for ducks, song birds, and mammals.

Now areas where land was previously cleared have been replaced by Australian pine and other hardwoods.

People who have recently examined these areas describe them as an ecological desert. Sanibel Vice Mayor Jerry Muench, after looking over the area along the Sanibel River where Beachview wants to expand its golf course, said there was nothing there but pine needles.

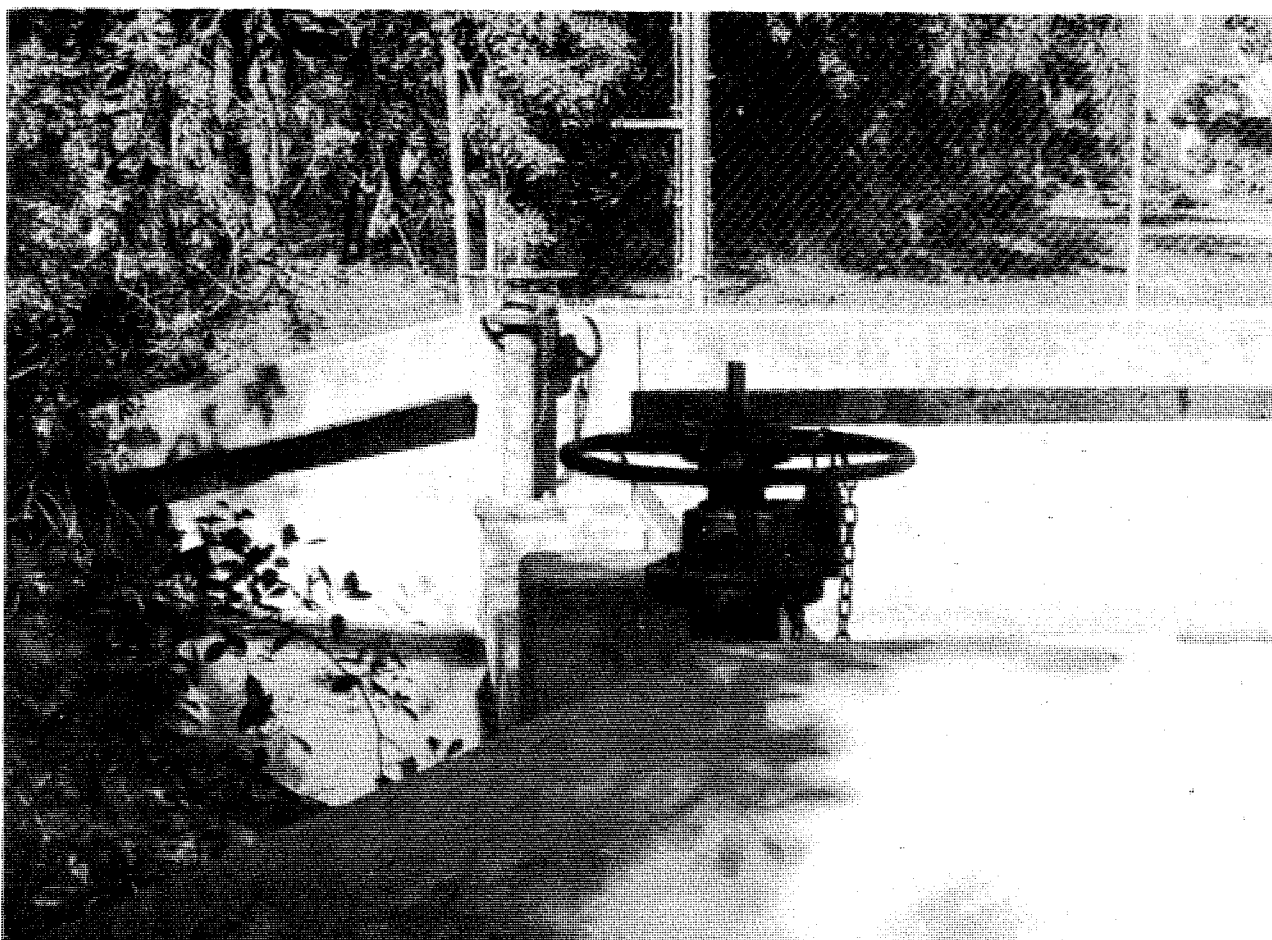

White ibis

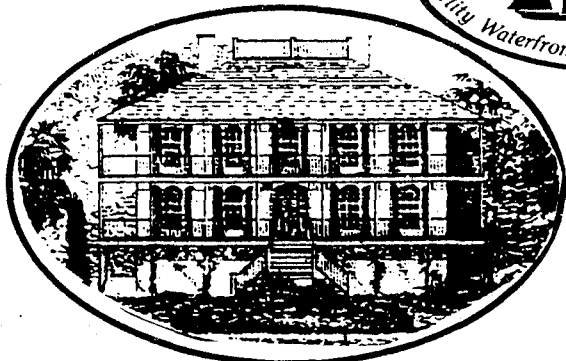

What is being done to protect and to try to reclaim in a protected state this body of water central to Sanibel's ecological system? That is part of the subject of next week's article in this two part series.

Sailors Valentine :

Steady of hand and bright of eye,
Bert Porreca is the master craftsman of Sailors' Valentines

By Ann Travelstead
Islander staff writer

The beachcomber known as Mr. Patches and the distinguished photographer and editor, Hubert C. Porreca are one and the same. He is better known as Bert Porreca, 90-year-old creator of magical Sailors' Valentines.

Mr. Patches wears out the knees of his trousers, crawling along the sand in search of the tiny, prized shells that go into the art form for which he is known.

A Sailor's Valentine is a hinged octagonal box with each side filled in with intricate designs rendered in tiny, micro-miniature shells. The boxes are believed to have originated in France or Belgium in the 18th century. When they began to show up in New England seaports, it was thought that sailors created the boxes to pass long hours at sea.

"No way," says Bert Porreca. "Nobody could do this work on a rolling ship at sea. It takes a steady hand and concentration." A more logical, less romantic explanation is that the sailors bought the boxes from the natives of Barbados.

Bert Porreca made his first Sailor's Valentine in 1965, after three years of gathering shells. He used tiny horse conch shells, wee orange jingles, tellins, coquinas, wentletraps and white ram's horns. 20 varieties in all, including over 1000 little green emerald nerites. It took first prize at the 1967 Sanibel Shell Fair.

Porreca, who was 90 years old on Saturday, January 14, continues to make Sailors'

Valentines, mainly working on commissions, or for Nancy and Gary Shaffer at The Shellsmith. His work has brought him national attention, via a television segment with Charles Kurault and national magazine articles.

His book, "Olive Shells of the World," is a scholarly volume, co-produced with Rowland F. Zeigler. The glowing, full-color, full-page plates were photographed by Bert, wearing his Hubert C. Porreca hat.

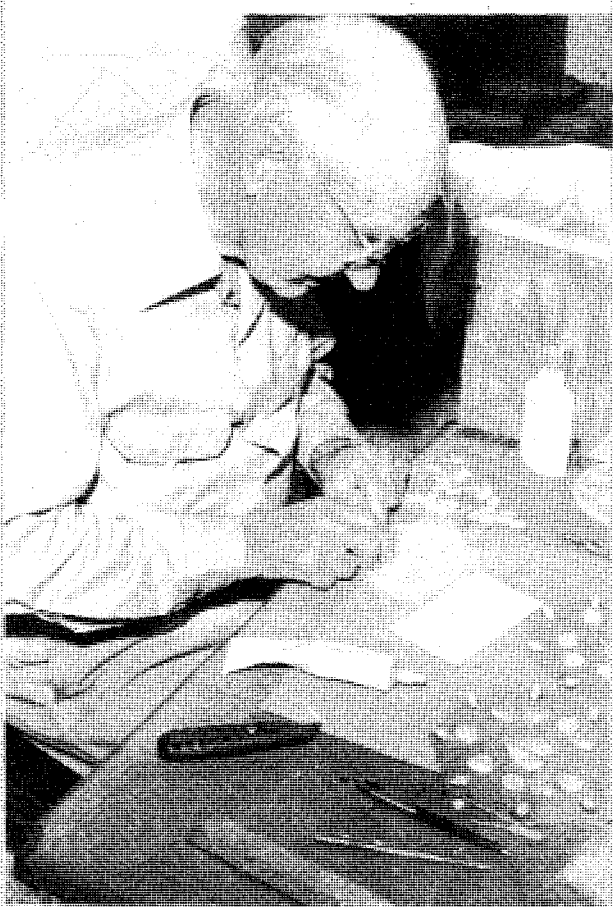

His success with the camera is also evident in the slides and albums of his prize natural and hybrid irises, grown in West Henrietta, New York, where Mabel and Bert Porreca spend part of the year.

Born in Philadelphia, educated at Girard College, Bert Porreca was production manager of a custom car business before his retirement.

He is a member of the American Iris Society, Town and Country Garden Club (Rochester, New York), Shell and Shore Club, South Carolina Shell Club, New York Shell Club, Ft. Myers Shell Club, Southwest Florida Conchologist Society and Hawaiian Malacological Society.

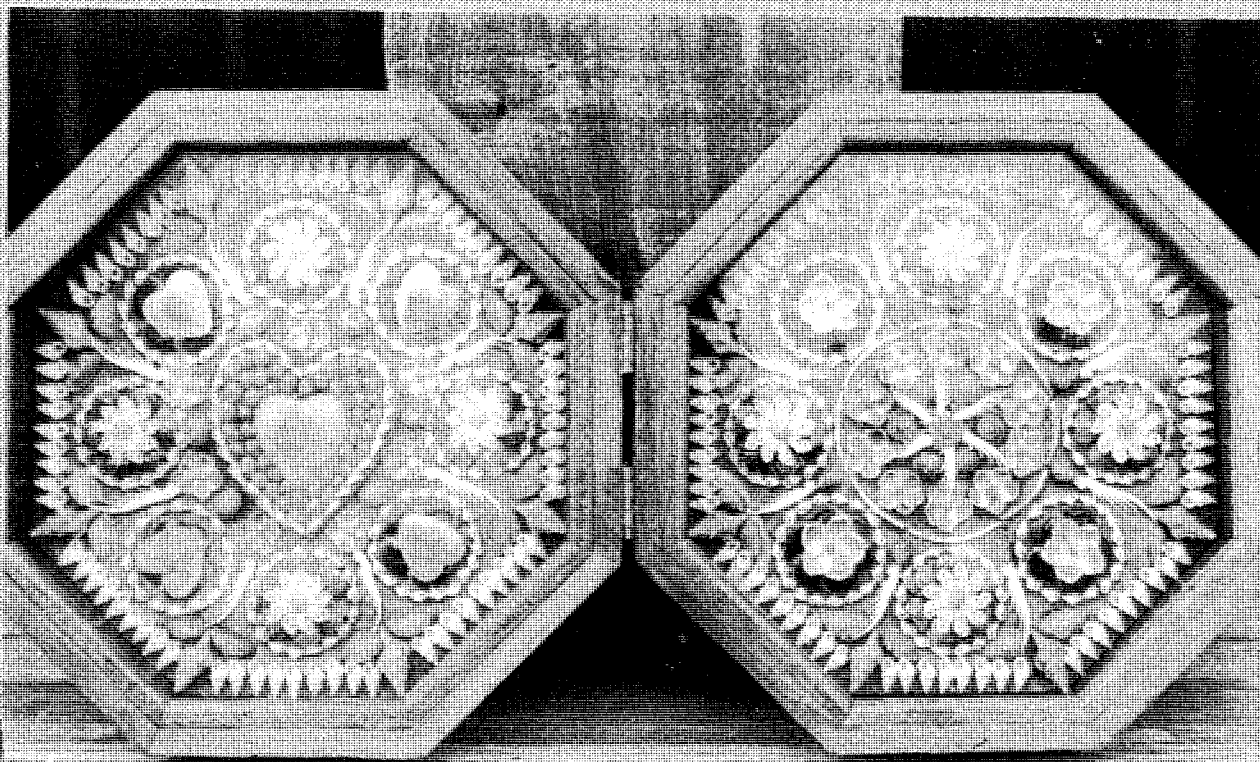

Bert Porreca, according to Gary Shaff, is a national treasure.

Marsha Clifford, daughter of Captain Tom and Ruth Clifford, is also an accomplished creator of Sailors' Valentines. Her award-winning art is on display at Poseidon Adventure, where the delicate shellwork of Ruth Clifford and the shell harvests of Capt. Tom attract shell-lovers from all over.

Zonta Club honors Amelia Earhart

The Zonta Club of Sanibel highlighted the career of internationally famous flyer, Amelia Earhart, at their monthly breakfast meeting at the Jacaranda on Jan. 5.

Earhart's life became intertwined with Zonta's life when the organization became international. With her disappearance in 1937, The Zonta Amelia Earhart Fellowship Awards came into being in keeping with the Zonta philosophy of advancing the status of women.

Annually, hundreds of women from all over the world have had enriched educational and career opportunities as recipients of the Zonta Amelia Earhart Fellowship Awards.

Special guest speaker was Margot Reck who delighted the members with her interesting presentation explaining her background as a member of the Women's Air Force Service Pilots (WASP) organization during World War II. (See portrait on page 10B.)

Reck said she was inspired by both Amelia Earhart and Jacqueline Cochran and provided an interesting story of those famous women. She also detailed her own personal experiences while serving our country in aviation.

Zonta's next meeting will be held at 7:30 a.m. on February 2 at the Jacaranda on Sanibel.

Richard and Suzanne Dimmler: From Soho to Sanibel

By Ann Travelstead
Islander staff writer

Suzanne and Richard Dimmler are island refugees from fast-lane art circles of New York City. They have found a new life since moving here in September. "I'm a city boy. You could call me Mr. Subway," says Richard Dimmler. "Living here is the fulfillment of a fantasy I didn't even know I had."

Their Sanibel house reflects both fantasy and art expertise interpreted in the specialty of each. Richard, a painter, designer and fabricator of sets and props for television productions, has carved and painted a lagoon-green alligator headboard for their bed. The Sanibel sunlight filters through Suzanne Dimmler's painted silk screens at the entry.

One-time long-time dog, Peter, is immortalized in a larger-than-life shaped canvas that Richard painted and mounted. Posters from Modern Museum of Art exhibitions for which Suzanne produced catalogues and other ancillaries are hung in the study.

A decrepit but presistently jaunty BMW, now transformed into a pick-up truck stands in the driveway.

"I drove it down from New York," Suzanne said. "It caused consternation among BMW owners."

Donna, pointer-shepherd-etcetera successor to Peter, sleeps on couches made by Richard. Suzanne's water colors mingle with Richard's canvasses throughout.

The Dimmlers met when both were attending Brooklyn's Pratt Institute. Richard Dimmler went on to the School of Visual Arts and was Roy Lichtenstein's apprentice and fabricator for eight years. He also worked with Tom Wesselman and Larry Rivers, on the cutting edge of art of the sixties.

Suzanne Dimmler found herself responsible for an increasing number of museum catalogues.

"I never intended to be in publishing for 15 years. I wanted to create, but there were so many demands!"

As Richard Dimmler progressed into his own enterprise of constructing sets and props, the Dimmler's fell victim to the demands of success.

"It was exciting," they admit. "We did things that were demanding and fun. We created an entire sleeper train to be used in a bra commercial. A perfect train inside and out for a sixty-second ad!"

But life was hectic. "We were led further and further from art, lured by success and pressure. To be self-employed in New York is a hassle. Life is too intense. Everything is too intense."

Three years ago, they visited friends on Captiva and said to one another, "We want to live here."

It took a while to make the break. Back in their Soho loft in New York, they packed their portfolios and possessions, their bona fide credentials, bid goodbye to their wide circle of friends and moved lock, stock and BMW truck.

"Of course, we'll work. We always have. We're artists and that's what artists do," said Suzanne. "But," adds Richard, "we are going to focus on fun."

Fun includes the alligator headboard and Richard's full-scale "Aphrodite Rising from the Sea." Fun also includes Suzanne's silken translucent screens and water colors. It includes, too, cooking for friends who are following them, from Soho to Sanibel.

This is the way we hang our show..... hang our show

By Ann Travelstead

The 25th Anniversary Show of the Sanibel Captiva Art League opened at BIG Arts Gallery on Friday, January 13. On Thursday, Carol Hagerman, President, Billie Elder and Beverly Conrad hung 27 pieces selected from 75 entries. The judging was done by Dot Eder, from the Marco Island Art League. The comments were made by the hanging committee.

"Up-and-down would be good here."

"I'll bring something to clean the glass."

"Oh! Isn't that lovely!"

"How about a biggie here?"

"Too harsh for that spot."

"Bring it up a little. No, down. To the right."

"That isn't straight."

"Those colors are lovely. They simply vibrate."

"Can we put up a new nail?"

"Whose is that? What do you think, Carol?"

"How do you like this one for this spot, Billie?"

"Isn't this nice, Beverly!"

Hanging an exhibition is not easy, especially on a warm afternoon with no air conditioning, but the Sanibel Captiva Art League has conquered more than some crooked nails in its 25-year history. Happy Birthday!

Homage to Carl Nelson at Schoolhouse

By Ann Travelstead
Islander staff writer

The current exhibition at the Schoolhouse Gallery is a memorial to Carl Nelson, patriarch of New England painters, who died this past August. Nelson was 90 years old. He had visited Sanibel only once, for a Schoolhouse Gallery exhibit in 1975, but his art has become well-known here.

His varied periods of work spanned the decades from the 1920's to the 1980's and, according to gallery owner Joe Pulitano, mirror much of the artistic evolution of the 20th century.

He lived simply in Chicago and New York through 1940, then in Boston and Cranberry Island, Maine. Beside painting, other interests were classical music and gardening.

Carl Nelson's paintings, mostly in oil or casein, and his pen and ink drawings are in museums, government and private collections.

The exhibition will continue through January 28, giving Sanibel collectors a chance to review a number of Nelson's choice works. Call 472-1193 for hours.

ISLANDER PORTRAIT

Margot Reck

Margot Reck is not one to back off from a challenge. A gutsy lady with reconstructed plastic thumbs and hip replacement number four, she was last year's Women's Golf Champion at Beachview.

"Golf has been my love for over 30 years," she says. "Now, I just turn a club over and use it as a cane."

Margot Reck had an earlier love. One that was exciting, challenging and dramatic. She was a member of the Women's Air Force Service Pilots. The WASP was organized and shepherded through wartime bureaucracy by speed ace Jacqueline Cochran to free men for overseas duty. It was made up of women pilots who lived under military discipline, went through intensive training and flew anything with wings. When announced in early 1942, 25,500 women applied, each with the required 250 hours. 1,800 were accepted and only 900 completed the seven-month training and received their wings. Margot Reck was one of those.

She trained at Avenger Field in Sweetwater, Texas. The training course included 200 hours of flight and 20 hours of instruments as well as acrobatics. Reck held multi-engine, commercial and instrument ratings. All are now dropped. "Everything is too dependent upon electronics," she says.

Assigned to Spence Field in Moultrie, Georgia, an advanced single engine air base that was the last stop before Atlantic jump-off, Reck and other WASPs flew A-6 basic advanced trainers, P-38's, 40's and 51's. "In fact, we flew anything that the Air Corps threw at us. Our mission was to free men to fight," she says, "We did the dirty mundane chores. We ferried planes around the country, flew tracking, towed targets for gunnery practice, did smoke laying, searchlight strafing and simulated bombing missions. We did radio control plotting and gave instrument instruction," Margot Reck remembers.

In a recent talk before Zonta Club of Sanibel and Captiva, Reck paid tribute to Zontan Amelia Earhart, in whose name the Zonta Amelia Earhart Fellowship Award is given. She also gave special recognition to Jacqueline Cochran, who died in 1980, leaving a legacy of speed, altitude and distance records that stand unbroken.

"Without her leadership, charm and determination there would have been no WASP," she commented.

WASP personnel, under civil service, was not recognized as a military unit until 1979, when the women pilots were granted retroactive military status, honorable discharges and benefits.

"It was a moving moment," according to Reck who attended the ceremony at Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, Colorado. "The young women cadets couldn't believe their eyes when these old ladies showed up," Reck laughs. "I guess we were in the vanguard of the women's movement. We never thought in terms of being liberated. We just did what we loved doing and we did it as well as any man ever did!"

The WASPs hold a reunion every two years. Last year at Charleston, South Carolina, their ranks were slowly thinning. After all, several decades and several wars have intervened.

Margot Reck began flying with the Civil Air Patrol in St. Joseph, Missouri. After graduating from Smith College, Northampton, Massachusetts, with a degree in architecture design, she worked as a cartographer for the Office of Strategic Services. She drew European invasion maps for the fore-runner of the Central Intelligence Agency.

"But when the WASP came along, that was infinitely more exciting." So, she took a demotion, gave up cloak and dagger and donned a one-size, one-piece baggy flight suit. In a short time, Cochran had convinced Coco Chanel to design snappy Santiago dress blues for her pilots.

Margot and Thomas Reck have been seasonal residents of Sanibel for nine years. "Well, I'm a resident," she stressed. "My husband is an avid horseman, so he's not as much of an islander as I."

Thomas Reck is Master of the Mission Valley Valley Hunt in Kansas City. The Recks northern home is a farm outside St. Joseph, Missouri, where Margot spent her childhood.

The Recks have two daughters. Christine Reck Everett is an attorney in Missoula, Montana. Margot Reck (Junior) is an administrative professional with the Florida Department of Health and Rehabilitation, in Miami.

Ex-pilot Reck is active in the National Arthritis Foundation and serves on the Governor's Allocation Committee. She is also a guiding light in the Girl's Golf Program in Missouri.

"I'm a slow starter and a late bloomer," she says. And still blooming, Margot Reck is off to a golf game, on the ground and enjoying it.

Non textbook lead

By Alfred Sheinwold

The top card of a doubleton is the textbook lead; but in last week's column, a defender effectively led his low trump from A-x. Today we feature another non-textbook lead.

East won the first diamond and saw little chance of beating 3NT. Dummy had the A-K of spades, South had the king of diamonds, and dummy's clubs would surely produce six more tricks — if declarer needed a club finesse, it would work.

The only hope for the defense was to grab four heart tricks immediately, but just as East was about to lead the normal queen of hearts, he noticed that dummy's spots could then control the fourth round of hearts even if West had the ace.

East therefore put the queen back in his hand and led the three of hearts instead.

South saw that playing low would gain only if East had led low from Q-J-10-3. Playing the king would gain whenever East had the ace. South therefore put up his king of hearts, and the defense ran the hearts to defeat the game.

DAILY QUESTION

You hold ♠Q 9 8 3 ♥K 6 ♦K 9 5 3 ♣K Q 4. You open one diamond, partner responds one heart. You bid one spade, partner next bids 2NT. The opponents pass. What do you say?

ANSWER: Pass. Partner could have jumped to 3NT over one spade or could have bid two clubs to force you. His actual sequence is invitational. Since your hand has little meat on the bones, you must reject.

QUARTER-OWNERSHIP

PALM ISLAND RESORT announces the introduction of a new and exciting way to purchase and own your dream home at the beach.

Introduced and proven at the Plantations of Hilton Head, Quarter-Ownership is a method of owning real estate where owners receive a deed for their quarter of a vacation home property, then use the property for a quarter of the year spread over the entire 52 weeks and only pay a fourth of the cost of the whole residence.

AFFORDABLE, PRACTICAL, AND EXTREMELY FLEXIBLE, Quarter-Ownership is the most sensible and intelligent way for families to own and enjoy expensive vacation home property since the coming of tax reform. Quarter-Owners receive the same benefits as individual owners while their financial commitment more closely matches their personal use value.

A RECORD OF EXCELLENCE — Palm Island Resort is dedicated to creating unique and innovative products. Quarter-Ownership has been developed as the smartest way possible to own a second home without the responsibilities and liabilities of a partnership — or the high cost of individual ownership.

If you are in the market for a second home at the beach, we invite you to call us for a more detailed review of Quarter-Ownership.

Dunes host Lions Sanibel Classic

By Rick Fowler
Islander staff writer

On January 13-15, the Dunes Golf and Tennis Club played host to the Fifth Annual Lion's Sanibel Classic.

The proceeds of the event help to support the Florida Lion's Camp for the Multi Handicapped and the Florida Eye Bank. Sponsors of this year's event were Bailey's General Store and Citizens and Southern National Bank of Florida.

The format for this team-only tournament was a Pro Am 2 best balls net - 80 percent of handicap, maximum handicap 30. Each day of the tournament, amateur teams were paired with a different pro golfer.

Pat Flinn, Head Pro at the Dunes, stated that "this was one of the strongest field of golfers that this area has seen." One of the attractions for many of the golfers was to try out the new course of the Dunes. Jerry Heard, head pro at South Seas Plantation and six-time Professional Golfer's Association tournament winner, remarked that "the new course plays well."

Among the group of professionals was Nolan Henke a native of Southwest Florida who recently qualified for the PGA tour. Nolan hopes to be playing this week with the tour in Phoenix and the following week in Pebble Beach.

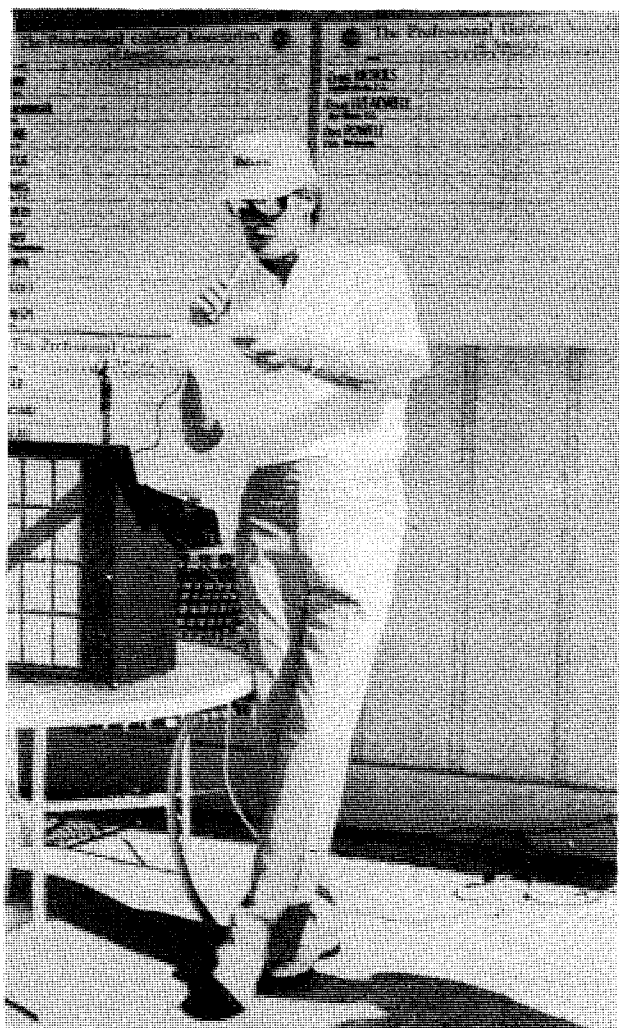

Other notables participating in the charitable event were Councilmen Francis Bailey and Jerry Muench, Recreation Center Director Dick Noon, Richard Gilstad, Bob Dolan, Greg Hickman formerly of South Seas, Marion Heck of Fiddlesticks, Tom Kochensparger of the Dunes, David Combs of Kelly Greens, Bill Kennedy of Kingsway Country Club, Mike Dopslaff of Boynton Beach, Rich Loy of Bonita, Craig Nichols of Fiddlesticks, Don Powell a PGA player from Michigan, and Jeff Traugott of Myerlee Country Club.

Final standings of the tournament for the professional division were Nolan Henke in first place winning $1,000, Rich Loy in second place winning $900 and Mike Dopslaff and Marion Heck tying for third place and each winning $750.

In amateur team play, the team of Zook, Baldwin and Partridge won in a one hole playoff, with each member winning $250. Second place went to the team of Dalton, Harrison and Gravina, who won $225 each. Two teams tied for third place: Low, McCordle and Peterson and Staub, Daus and Parker. Each participant in the teams was awarded $187.50.

Winner of the tournament in the professional division, Nolan Henke.

The quest for the Sanibel Captiva Super Bowl

By Rick Fowler
Islander staff writer

When I recently learned that Miami had some "Super Bowl" that people from all over the country were coming to see, I thought, "How super could it be?"

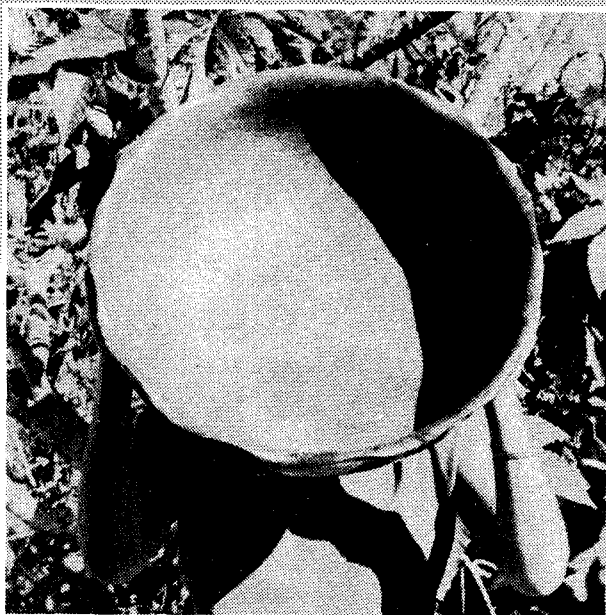

I mean this is Sanibel-Captiva: we must have some pretty super bowls of our own - hence the quest.

My search led me to several dealers of antiques, curio shops, art galleries, and private homes. However, my search finally ended right here in the Islander offices when I found staff writer Fran Adams' monkeypod bowl.

This five-foot circumferenced bowl was designed in 1938 by Fran's grandmother, Mary Capron, while she was living in Hawaii. The bowl was handcrafted in nonporous monkeypod by a Hawaiian native.

This bowl, which survived the bombing of Pearl Harbor, has most recently served as an enormous salad bowl adorning tables at several Sanibel parties.

A simple comparison says it all: Miami Super Bowl is silver, a common enough material lacking the warmth of wood, and is a mere 23 years old. Moreover, it can only be seen on January 22.

The Super Bowl of Sanibel

Sanibel Super Bowl, on the other hand, has warmth and tradition and is likely to be seen at many a social event.

Clearly Sanibel-Captiva is home to The Super Bowl.

SPORTS SHORTS

On Jan. 10, the Beachview Men's Golf Association winners, tied at plus 6, were the foursome of Bob Aycock, Frank Callahan, Lee Gibson, George Lowden and the threesome of Dick Hawthorne, Gene McDermott, Dale Ruedig. Golfer of the Week was Wally Rahn with a plus 7.

On Jan. 11, the Dunes Men's Results Individual Low Net - Full Handicap winners for 18-holes were Bob Ochs, 58, and Wally Allaire, 61, for A flight; Wendell Lapp, 58, and George Long, 59, for B flight; Jim Manecke, 62, and Bill Ford, 63, for C flight. Winners for 9 holes were John Green, 29, and Joe Walker, 31.

On Jan. 11, the Beachview Women's Golf Association high team honors went to Molly Johnson, Whiz Lowden, Ruth Manecke, and Mayan Wilcox with a score of plus 6. Ginny Reeves was high individual with plus 4. Maureen Hawthorne and Mayan Wilcox shared second prize with plus 3's. Barbara McGuffin won a prize for the longest drive on hole number six.

On Jan. 13, the Dunes Ladies 9-hole winners for flight A were Betty Bulcock, low gross, 43, Jane Devaney, low

Sanibel Community Church adds early Sunday service for golfers and fishermen

Sanibel Community Church has announced an expanded Sunday worship schedule to serve island residents and visitors.

The Community Church now offers three services of worship: at 8 a.m., 9 a.m., and 11:15 a.m.

The new 8 a.m. service is aimed at golfers, tennis players, fishermen, any who wish to worship early and have the full day before them.

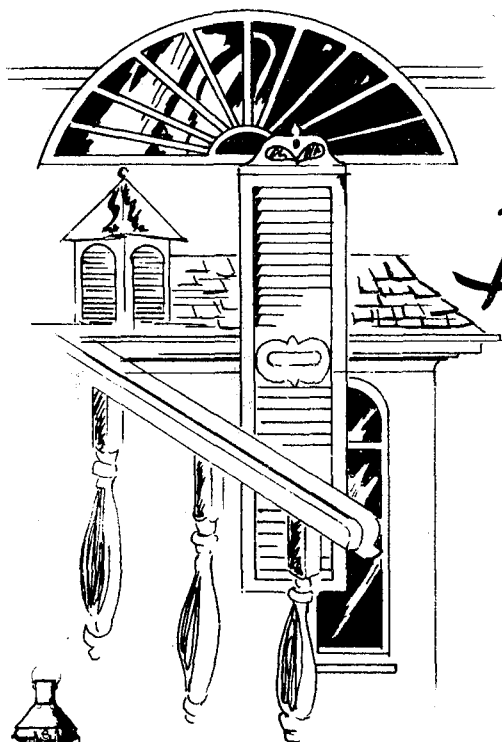

The 9 a.m. service features youth and children's choirs and a special children's ministry.

The 11:15 a.m. service features music by the chancel choir.

All three services are the same except for the music. Childcare is provided for all services.

Pastors are Dr. Denny Dennison and Dr. John Wilcox. Community Church is a multi-denominational congregation located at 1740 Periwinkle Way next door to Jerry's Shopping Center. For further information residents and visitors may call the church at 472-2684.

Spade fish and Mojarra are unpopular, good-eating fish

Two fish you'll see caught this time of year are the spadefish and the mojarra. Many anglers after more popular species ignore these fish, but others keep both, enjoying the angling pleasure and the good-eating fillets.

Spadefish look like a sheepshead that a 300-pound man has stepped on. They have alternating dark and light stripes, as the sheepshead, but muted. The spadefish has much more graceful lines, with feathered fins, where the other fish has sharp spines.

If you know tropical fish, you recognize the spadefish as being in the angelfish family. The smaller members of the family are very valued for aquariums. The spadefish is probably the least colorful of the family.

They are often seen nibbling away around barnacles under boats or pilings in marinas. Their flat, rounded body is sometimes held parallel at surface, allowing it to check over barnacle lines for food.

ON THE WATER

By Capt. Mike Fuery

I've seen them in schools of three or four, but usually it's one fish poking around for food. At times when the water is very clear you can easily see these fish.

They will take shrimp, but use smaller hooks.

There are no laws on how many you can take. You can get a couple of nice fillets off each side and I'm told they are good eating fish.

The other fish, the mojarra, is usually found around passes, bridges and piers. They are very silvery fish with small mouths. A real whopper would run 8 inches long.

We see many of these being caught by sheepshead anglers in Redfish Pass. The mojarra likes hard, rocky bottom and will take shrimp and cut bait.

You hardly ever see a fisherman go specifically for one of these fish, but they are caught on occasion. I'm asked about their value and there's nothing wrong with eating these fish.

Good luck on the water and remember, redfish season opened the first of this month. Reds must measure between 18 and 27 inches and a limit of one fish per angler is in effect.

Lion's Paw and special scallops are real 'finds' any time of year

This is the time of the year when we have a chance of finding the valued lion's paw shell. But, there are other special scallops to look for in this winter storm season.

The lion's paw is what I feel second or third hardest-to-find collector shell, behind the junonia and Scotch bonnet. In a good year, my shelling charter groups might come up with six.

However, winter cold fronts often kick up the beach sands and can deposit any of the top three shells on any beach.

The famous paw shell is usually dark brown, in a fan shape with distinctive bumps on each one of the "fingers" in the paw. A large shell would be 4 inches tall.

It takes a well-educated eye to pick them out on a pile of shells, especially when there's many broken pen shells mixed in. The pen is about the same color, but in whole condition, much larger.

SHELLING TIPS

By Capt. Mike Fuery

While keeping an eye out for that famous scallop, don't forget the lemon pecten. These are bright yellow, fan shaped shells with a distinctive "wing" on one side at the bottom. While not common, these specimens are much easier to find than the big cousin.

It's really rare to find both sides of any scallop, outside of the comon bay variety. I've seen collectors of lion's paws and lemon pecten together, but have never personally found them. Just getting half a shell is reward enough for me.

You will certainly see lots of calico scallops on the beaches. These sport a variety of colors, mostly with bands of colors. The colors run from greys to reds and browns. They are collected for shell decoration.

Good shelling this week.

Capt. Mike Fuery has been showing residents and visitors alike the ins and outs of shell collecting since 1976. For information on his charters call 472-3459.

Carrie Lund gives percentage of Fascinat' Gershwin proceeds to ACT

Carrie Lund donated $300 from the first night of her recent production "Fascinatin' Gershwin" at the Barrier Islands Group for the Arts Center in December to Zonta Women's Club for Abuse Counseling and Treatment group in Fort Myers. "Fascinatin' Gershwin" attracted full houses both at BIG Arts Center and at 'Tween Waters Inn where it was presented in an extended run for three additional nights. Above, Zonta president Kappy King Cole, Treasurer Sheila Hoen and Producer Carrie Lund presenting the check to Zonta.

The Old Captiva House VERY CAPTIVA ISLAND Local Seafood

The Old Captiva House has graced the shores of the Gulf of Mexico for as long as most islanders can remember. While we are sixty years behind the times, that's the way we like it. We think you will too! Drive to Captiva Island — enjoy our gorgeous sunset and look us over. We are open daily for dinner at 5:30. Sunday Brunch 9-2. Piano Stylings Nightly.

SENTIMENTAL JOURNEY

...DISCOVER BOCA GRANDE... FLORIDA THE WAY IT ONCE WAS.

There was a time when the Astors and du Ponts, Morgans and Cabots discovered Boca Grande... returning to this remote, serene island time and time again.

Little has changed. Boca Grande is still a refuge for those who recognize the importance of uncrowded beaches, a quiet town and the blue tranquility of the Gulf of Mexico.

Now there's Boca Bay... the finest and last residential community of private homes to be built on the sheltered hideaway known as Boca Grande.

Residences patterned to meet the exacting standards of those who expect matchless quality and unexcelled craftsmanship.

Presented by CSX Realty, dedicated to creating communities of distinction.

Priced from $325,000.

Inquiries welcome, call

Hoopla! New contest for basket ball fans

For all you basketball fans, we are happy to announce the creation of a new weekly contest, Hoop La!

The idea is similar to our popular feature, Pigskin Picks. Readers guess the winners of each game selected and also guess the total points scored for the game of the week.

Once again, The Dunes Country Club has generously agreed to provide dinner for two to the winner each week. Hoop La! will begin in next week's issue.

Also next week we will announce the winner of the final Pigskin Picks contest. Let's put away footballs and get out basketballs for the beginning of the season.

Five Great Reasons to Visit Mahogany Run's Model Row Today

Only by touring these models will you be able to truly appreciate the craftsmanship and attention to detail which will be evident in every Mahogany Run home. The builders of Mahogany Run were chosen to meet the most exacting standards. Which means, in the long run, the real winners will be the residents of Mahogany Run — because each home will have been built by one of only ten builders whose standards met or exceeded the tough tests for excellence administered by Westinghouse.

This thorough commitment to excellence translates into a home your family will love. And that's the best reason for coming to visit Mahogany Run's Model Row today.

WE'RE HURTING.

Saving lives can be very expensive. The costs of our disaster relief and other humanitarian programs keep mounting. And we can't afford to come up short.

Please help.
