City seeks volunteers to study bridge issues

By Frances Adams
Islander staff reporter

Sanibel is forming a fact-finding committee which will study the issues surrounding the replacement of the Sanibel bridge and causeway and make its recommendations to the City Council.

The idea of a volunteer committee was the result of a discussion of Committee of the Islands' June 23 request that the city hire a consulting engineer to evaluate the various bridge replacement proposals presented by Greiner Engineering to the Lee County Department of Transportation.

City Manager Gary Price told the City Council Aug. 1 that he didn't see any reason to go to such a large expense, especially since Lee County owns the bridge and is the ultimate decision-maker.

But COTI President Jim Hayes said his committee had found that, above all, confusion and doubt surrounded the bridge proposals. He said his group is not associated with any other group in its recommendation to review the proposals.

"An independent assessment of the situation and a concise report of the findings, easily understood by lay people, would go a long way toward alleviating the concerns and feelings of mistrust and hostility that have permeated the atmosphere for the past several months," Hayes said.

Hayes said islanders share a common concern that in the event of a major storm an evacuation must be safe, certain and timely. He suggested a committee of volunteers could be an alternative to the employment of a registered engineer.

The idea was well-received by the city officials and staff, who have been under fire lately on the issue of evacuation itself.

"It's getting to the point I don't want to go to Bailey's anymore — I don't know who's going to come up and start yelling at me," Councilman Mark "Bird" Westall said.

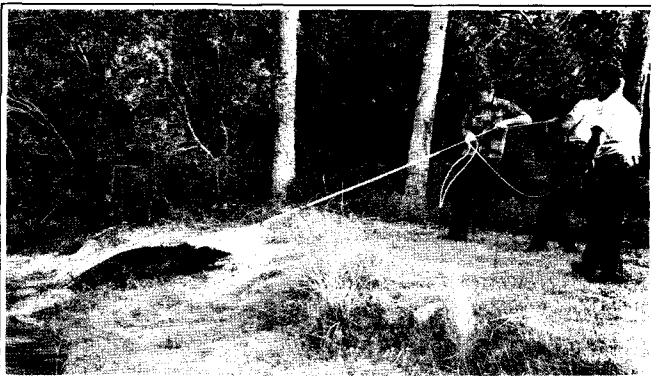

He said when he answers criticism and mentions the consequences of the flooding of the causeway, people say we don't need to build a bridge because we haven't been hit in such a long time, or because everyone's going to leave in plenty of time anyway.

"I'm not sure what source is out there that anyone would listen to," Westall said.

"Every day, for hours on end, largely what we do is protecting the public," Price said, adding that all data from the Regional Planning Council says the causeway islands will flood.

Westall said although he felt a responsibility to make sure people have a reasonable expectation of getting off Sanibel, people tell him he doesn't have that responsibility. He suggested the city attorney

Police disperse arguing crowd as nuisance alligator is captured

By Steve Ruediger
Islander staff writer

A small crowd had to be dispersed late Thursday evening as authorities captured an alligator that had eaten a dog near Buck Key Road. Members of the crowd were arguing over whether or not the alligator should be killed.

The dog was a black, brown and white basset hound belonging to Laurel Burnsed of Brainard Bayou.

The almost seven-foot-long alligator was caught by state trapper Gene McMillan, assistant Sanibel City Manager Bill Mills and Sanibel police officers Mike Murray and Jim Wilson.

Mills said the argument within the crowd of more than a dozen people was primarily between two people. One of them said, "the alligator was only doing what alligators do" and should not be

Committee being formed to back land acquisition proposal

By Steve Ruediger
Islander staff writer

Members of the Sanibel Environmentally Sensitive Lands Acquisition Advisory Committee agreed Friday to form a committee — not associated with the city — to urge approval of the referendum on the November ballot for a $10 million bond issue to buy environmentally sensitive land.

State law forbids the city of a committee formed by the city to distribute anything other than strictly factual information on an issue coming up for referendum.

Members of the advisory committee, which considered Friday's meeting as its last gathering, plan to contact all major island organizations to solicit their support for the land acquisition proposal. They also plan to set up a speaker's bureau and distribute literature.

No name for the new committee was agreed upon, although several times in Friday's meeting it was called "the ramp committee." One person, however, did suggest "Save Our Land (SOL)" as a name for the group.

The city environmentally sensitive lands committee was set up in March to advise the city on whether the rate of purchase of environmentally sensitive land

POLICE BEAT

Police were called twice last Wednesday to a Sanibel-Captiva Road residence where four women live. The first time was at about 8 p.m. as the result of a fight between two of the women over who had taken a shower curtain from the bathroom. The women told police they also argue over who pays the bills and recently one of the women had incinerated all the bills. At about 11 p.m., police were called back by a woman complaining one of the other women had locked her out of the house. The woman who had locked the other woman out did it because her roommate was keeping her awake, she told police. Each of the women who had been arguing told police separately that they would find a new place to stay as soon as they could. The four women range in age from 18 to 45.

A Fuji bicycle was found in bushes beside Wil's Landing late Wednesday night.

Kenneth Crosby Williams was arrested last Wednesday at the Sundial, where he works, on outstanding Lee County warrants for drug possession and resisting arrest.

Musician Richy Wolking reported to police last Wednesday that his guitar amplifier had disappeared the previous Sunday morning while he was loading his van after playing Saturday night at the Jacaranda.

A staple gun was reported missing last Thursday from a construction site at Lindgren Boulevard and East Gulf Drive.

A contractor cleaning Fast Eddies restaurant last Wednesday with a high pressure steam hose was advised for the third time of the Sanibel noise ordinance.

HRS urges early immunization for students

As the new school year approaches, parents are reminded that Florida law requires all children attending school to have up-to-date immunization records. Early planning can help parents avoid a last-minute rush.

To protect the health of school children, immunization is needed against diphtheria, tetanus, pertussis (whooping cough), polio, measles, mumps and rubella. These immunizations are also required for children attending licensed child care facilities throughout the state.

Dr. Charles Mahan, Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services Deputy Secretary for Health and the State Health Officer, said, "These laws protect children from diseases which can have severe effects, such as deafness, mental retardation, and sometimes even death. Some of the diseases, such as whooping cough and measles, are actually on the rise in Florida."

Because these diseases can be so dangerous, Florida law is specific about school and child care immunization requirements. Children of all grades in any Florida school — public and private — must be fully immunized. Those attending a licensed child care facility in the state must also be up-to-date (for age) on their immunizations.

Immunizations must be recorded on a certain form (HRS Form 680). If a child's immunization record is on a different form, the staff at the HRS County Public Health Unit can review the information to make certain the child is properly immunized for age and then copy it onto a Form 680.

The following schedule shows which immunizations children need and when they should receive them:

2 months — D-T-P (diphtheria-tetanus-pertussis) vaccine, oral polio vaccine; 4 months — D-T-P vaccine, oral polio vaccine; 6 months — D-T-P vaccine; 12 months — TB test and measles, mumps, rubella

(MMR) vaccine; 15 months — D-T-P vaccine, oral polio vaccine; 18 months — Haemophilus b Conjugate (Hib) vaccine; 4 through 6 years — D-T-P booster and oral polio booster; 14 through 16 years — D-T-P booster after — Tetanus-diphtheria (Td) booster.

Students with permanent medical exemptions or religious exemptions are required to show proof of exemption upon entering any school or licensed child care facility in the state.

Immunizations are available through private physicians or the local HRS County Public Health Units.

"As the school year approaches," Mahan continued, "lines at the health units get long and doctors' schedules may be booked. We hope parents will check immunization records and, if needed, call today to schedule an appointment so they don't leave their children unprotected."

A man and his son net fishing near the Sanibel fishing pier early Thursday morning attracted a small crowd of shore birds who begged for a hand-out of some of the small fish he was catching. The snowy egrets and the little blue heron seemed to think it was easier being handed a fish than having to wade around in the water looking for them.

The dredging and fill-in of the causeway approach on Sanibel came to a halt almost two weeks ago. Gene Sander, the contractor, sold his dredge to "someone on the northeast coast of Florida" because it was "not able to reach as far back as it had to," Sander said. It is assumed that the fill-in will continue if and when the proper equipment is obtained.

The recent dredging has greatly increased the salt content of nearby wells. Priscilla Murphy, who just spent a sizeable amount of money on landscaping around her office, says that it's so bad she can't water the new plants ... A high price to pay for all those junonias!

When asked about the 20 mph speed limit on the causeway bridges, Sanibel resident Toby Jeannides said, "I think it is stupid. If they build a bridge, they should build it so that cars can go on it."

Islander Tom Traught replied, "I don't see much difference between a speed limit of 35 and 20 mph, but if the new limit will save the bridge, I am for it."

During the Comprehensive Land Use Plan review, the City Council has tentatively agreed to modify official city maps by removing the area east of Donax Street, including Junonia Street, Periwinkle Trailer Park and Beach Road from the Wetlands Conservation District. It was council consensus that changes in the boundaries of the wetlands district are a major issue that deserved public input before a final decision is made. Residents will have an opportunity to comment at a second hearing of the ordinance Aug. 16 before it is transmitted to the state Department of Community Affairs for review, Mayor Mike Klein stressed.

Original Newcomers

Oiga Jackson, Julianne Oatley and Doris Southerland were among the original half-dozen women who decided to do something about the area's newcomers. At a luncheon at Peggy Jackson's in the summer of 1984, they formed the first Newcomers Club and planned the first luncheon.

Five years later, they were at the August meeting, along with about 60 others. By virtue of the mix, the group now called the Newcomers and Old-timers. They meet on the first Wednesday of each month and everybody is welcome, no matter which category is claimed.

The Aug. 2 meeting at Sonesta Sanibel Harbour featured nationally-recognized herbalist and plant expert, Kaye Cude, who talked about plants of colonial times. She shared amusing anecdotes about Early American life and times, privations and excesses that come to light in a study of their use of herbs and plants.

On Sept. 6, the group will have an evening wine and cheese party at Betty Cottell's. Reservations for this event are limited to 50 and that includes husbands or dear friends. So, call Faye Granberry at 472-8940.

Frank Granberry is stumping for bologna and head cheese, but the ladies are not paying him one bit of mind. They make their own party sandwiches and have a reputation of turning out true delicacies.

Artscape '89

The Fine Arts Society of Collier County is gearing up for Artscape '89, and reminds Southwest Florida artists up and down our coast to start thinking about their entries.

Deadline for submitting slides and entries is Sept. 30. The competition and exhibition will be held from Oct. 27 through Nov. 11.

A lot of money and prestige rides on this show, which is the first official event of The Decade of Arts Festival which will last all season and coincides with the 10th anniversary of the Fine Arts Society. All interested artists are asked to call 434-0833 for information.

Heigh-ho to school we go

Sanibel Elementary School will hold an Open House on Aug. 17. Parents and students are invited to come to school at 7 p.m. to meet teachers, tour rooms and, in general, get ready for the big back-to-school day on Aug. 21.

If you need to know more, call 472-16-17.

Letters have gone out from the City of Sanibel inviting volunteers to take part in a volunteer recognition celebration on the afternoon of Saturday, Aug. 26. The get-together starts at noon at BIG Arts, with refreshments and entertainment. Volunteers who served on any city committees or with FISH received the Mayor Lennart Lorenson's invitation.

Call Toni Perry at 472-4135 and let her know if you plan to be there.

Have you seen Anita Pinder's nifty new car? It's a Mazda ragtop that looks like a junior Porsche.

Write your own song

The 13th annual Kentucky Fried Chicken Amateur Songwriting Contest, sponsored locally by WINK-FM 97, is underway. This is a national thing with the two top winners going to Nashville, Tennessee, to record their song. If you've ever wanted to do this sort of thing, now's your chance, call 939-1717 for all details of note.

Zontas plan caroling

The Sanibel-Captiva chapter of Zonta International plans to use the Sanibel Trolley for caroling during the Sanibel Luminary Trail celebration.

Ingeborg Mauksch, ways and means chairman, says that Roz Wegryn and Kappy King Cole are coordinating club participation and that a Progressive Dessert Party is planned for members and guests who take part.

Nora Price, program chairman, reminds all Zontians that image consultant Ava Fluty will be at the August 17 meeting with a lot of how-to tips.

Jean Wigley, who will head the March fund-raising wine-tasting event, is the new delegate to District XI, Zonta International Conference in Naples, September 15-16. Kappy King Cole is alternate.

Zonta meets the first and third Thursday of each month at The Jacaranda at 7:30 a.m. Visiting Zontians and prospective members may call president Carlene Wehner at 454-3466 for more information on all the activities.

Odd Couple at Dinner

Sedately seated at an impeccably set dinner table by the window, Monsieur Le Croc and platinum-blond Mamasan ignore passers-by and concentrate on each other.

M. Le Croc is a handsomely articulated mannequin from Italy who has been a resident of Ile Crocodile since Philip Johnson left his job as visual merchandiser for Macy's and opened the Palm Ridge shop 10 years ago. Looking slim, fit and suntanned, Mr. Le Croc is a private person and not for sale.

Mama-san, probably the most glamorous orangutan in existence, was bought as a prop when the shop opened. Since then, she has been replaced 21 times, as counterparts were sold and went off to live exalted lives elsewhere.

One Mama-san has a player grand piano in her Cedar Rapids, Iowa, home where she entertains guests with serenades and sonatas. Another, living in Colorado, has costumes for every hour of the day and for every occasion. Her wardrobe ranges from cowboy regalia to full evening dress. Three of the beauties live on the islands, where they enchant visitors with their endearing traits.

All this Mama-sanning carries a hefty price tag — $25 for a special order. If you want an undemanding pet in another category, check out the kitties and cows and the distinguished moose.

Phil and Eddie Johnson have a lot of interesting things at Ile Crocodile, but do stop by to pay your respects to the dinner duo.

The Lee County Alliance of the Arts is presenting the Gulf Coast Opera Company, Sunday, Aug. 20 from 2:30-3:30 p.m. The program, in the amphitheater of the Alliance, will feature highlights from the company's eight seasons, including songs from "South Pacific," "Man of La Mancha," "The Mikado," "The Pirates of Penzance" and "The Barber of Seville."

Take blankets and lawn chairs and enjoy the whole thing. The Covenant Presbyterian Church Choir will serve refreshments in the galleries, open from 2-4 p.m., and you get a chance to see the Alliance Student Art Show.

These Third Sunday Performances are a real addition to a lazy Sunday afternoon and well worth the trip to McGregor and Colonial.

A Rose is a Rose is a pet. Betty Weir's German Shepherd puppy is not — repeat not — being groomed for a law enforcement career. Betty says that Rose is pure pet, so we're glad to have this opportunity to reassure Rose that her life will be a bed of roses.

Porter's Potables

U.S. Rep. Porter Goss shows off a special University Club bottle that was sent all the way to Washington. Sandy Brown, a Goss aide, shared the spotlight.

Meanwhile, 120 or so other University Club members and their families shared an old-fashioned whoop-it-up picnic at the Dunes. Tom Driscoll's band played bluegrass. Local pros and ambitious amateurs played golf and tennis. Uninspired critics were urged to put on their Reeboks and race. The day wound down with a home-cracked ice cream feast.

The University Club is to open next May, but already a lot of things are going on. For more information, call 481-6673.

The Island Children's Co-op will have a 6:30 pot-luck dinner at the Community Center on Aug. 11. Everybody is asked to bring a covered dish to share and to make a $2 donation per family. Ice, cups, plates and silverware will be provided. Call Sheila Smith at 454-6421.

Thoughts of a land use planner

Ian McGarg was a partner in the planning team that assisted with Sanibel's Comprehensive Land Use Plan. He presently chairs the department of Regional Planning at the University of Pennsylvania. Twenty years ago, he wrote a book unfolding the concepts of land use planning using natural processes and systems.

Far sighted and revolutionary, "Design with Nature" is a "testament to the power and importance of sun, moon, stars, changing seasons, clouds, rain, oceans, the creatures and the herbs. They are with us now, co-tenants of the phenomenal universe, participating in that timeless yearning that is evolution, vivid expression of time past, essential partners in survival and with us now involved in the creation of the future."

Citizens of Sanibel decide their future with the self-determination rights that come with incorporation as a community. Fifteen years after the original visions of a unique community with unusual natural characteristics living in harmony with the natural process, thoughts of the future seem to be fading.

The city concerns of today depart from the path of its founders. Have the desires of its citizens changed or has something else changed? A recent citizen survey indicates a deep interest in preserving the island's character.

How long do you envision being on Sanibel? Is the work being done here today assuring your enjoyment of the island in the future?

Consider these thoughts from McIarg in excerpts from his book.

"... Nature is the arena of life. A modicum of knowledge of her processes is... indispensable for survival and more for existence, health and delight. Nature is process, interacting, responding to laws, representing values and opportunities for human use."

"... Simple ecological lessons need to be known and incorporated into ordinance so people may continue to enjoy the special delights of life by the sea. Ecology offers the science of the relations of organism and environment, integrative of the sciences, humanities and the arts - a context for studies of man and environment."

"... Our eyes do not divide us from the world, but unite with it. Let us abandon the simplicity of separation and give unity its due. We must look deeply into the values we hold."

"... Man is that uniquely conscious creature who can perceive and express. He must become a steward of the biosphere. To do this he must design with nature."

"... There are two extreme viewpoints of man-nature. In the first, anthropocentric man - ignorant of evolutionary history, innocent of man's dependence, destroys as he goes, while admiring man and his works. The opposing view is less certain of man's place. It reserves the right to justify man not only as a unique species but one with the unequalled gift of consciousness. This man, aware of his past, his unity to all things and all life, proceeds with deference born of understanding, seeking his creative role."

"... Every city has some testimony to perception, intelligence and art. In order to

I want to take this opportunity to thank those people who are so generously and unselfishly supporting the building of our new community playground. A steady stream of individuals and businesses are continuing to step forward to offer their time, talents and financial support to this worthwhile project.

As a member of the Fund-raising Committee, I have the privilege to talk and to work with the variety of people and businesses involved, and I must say that I have been inspired by the response and enthusiasm of our community to this project. Our children are truly fortunate to be growing up in such a warm and caring community.

We thus far have half of the money that we need to build the new playground. With the end of summer and the beginning of school around the corner, our fund-raising efforts are again getting underway. We still need your help to make this dream a reality!

We ask everyone to please consider declaring themselves supporters of our new community playground at this time - time, talents, financial support (or all three)! Please contact or send your donation to:

Sanibel, FL 33957

If you have any ideas or questions that you would like to share with us about the playground, please feel free to call Barbara Dalton, our playground coordinator, at 472-6834.

Yes, a playground/recreational area of this nature is costly, but, I prefer to look at it as a very worthwhile investment. Its returns are endless.

Again, thank you Sanibel!

Reader disapproves of Walton commentary

To the Editor
The Islander

The article "Full-moon fever on the islands" by one Chelle Koster Walton on Tuesday, Aug. 1, 1989 is uncalled for, particularly her comments about what they did at Pine Island.

I like to read and keep up with what's happening. I like to bring my family to this lovely island, but such activity your contributor adds adds in nothing. Please decline further articles from Ms. Walton.

Isn't there something Goss can do to help?

To the Editor
The Islander

(Editor's note: the following letter was addressed to U.S. Rep. Porter Goss and submitted to The Islander for publication.)

Thank you for your letter explaining the reason you OK'd the request for the bridge funds. By doing that, you gave a green light to go ahead with replacing the causeway.

Evidently you weren't aware either that Lee County failed for at least five years to do any maintenance work on the bridge, even though it was required after inspections. There had to have been a plan "to let them go" and then there would be no problem convincing people that a new bridge was absolutely necessary for safety reasons.

Doesn't this sound frightening - perhaps illegal? Certainly a trust has been betrayed.

Lee County has had millions of dollars in tolls to draw on to maintain the bridges and has done nothing. They certainly aren't going to use federal money to repair the bridges. (Evidently the toll increases being discussed and worldwide advertising for tourists will increase this income by millions more - and what will Lee County do with that money?)

We need to be protected from the county! Is there anything, as our representative, that you can do about it?

Columnist's article misses the point

To the Editor
The Islander

Wallace Kain's guest commentary of Aug. 1 regarding the bridge controversy (which some of us are beginning to call "Bridgegate") is thoughtful but misses the point.

His advice is to slow down the resistance to the new bridge, "until tested against (a number of) considerations. I am not ready to vote on the proposals or the SOB (Save Our Bridge) initiative ... our leaders have assured us that the clock is stopped and that they have gotten like assurances from the county officials."

The point is, Mr. Kain will never be permitted to vote on any bridge proposal unless he votes in favor of the SOB initiative, because we are the only ones advocating a referendum on final bridge design.

And if the clock is stopped, the county doesn't know it. In a recent letter to Commissioner (John) Manning, Harry Glaze of the Lee County Department of Transportation said the County Commission's Transportation Committee would be taking up the matter of final design on Aug. 21. Meanwhile, city officials reacted to our expose of negligible maintenance of the causeway going back several years with stony silence.

The SOB initiative is a carefully thought-out response to the city's inaction, the county mendacity and the steamroller momentum of Plan F and its progeny, Son of Plan F, both illegal (both exceed the clear language of the interlocal agreement.)

The initiative would require exactly what Mr. Kain proposes: It would require the city and county to "pause for awhile" while everyone does his homework. It does not pre-empt an orderly process; on the contrary, it provides one. It does not bar all new bridge proposals, rather only those that violate the interlocal agreement. It does not require litigation, unless the interlocal agreement is violated.

In short, the initiative simply protects our rights and submits the final decision on a new bridge to a vote of the people.

Every public meeting and every straw poll conducted on the bridge replacement issue so far has indicated overwhelming opposition to the F plan-type bridge. Yet the county is moving ahead and city officials continue to acquiesce, giving murmurs of support and occasionally pounding the table for the county's current version.

These public officials are totally out of step with the Sanibel citizens. And, if the SOB initiative isn't approved, they'll march right over us.

Resident participation at budget hearings urged

To the Editor
The Islander

On July 18, a proposed annual budget was presented to the City Council. Prior to the City Council's actually approving the budget, there will be two public hearings. The public is encouraged to attend these hearings in order to be informed on the purpose and cost of the services provided.

Sanibel's proposed net budget for fiscal 1990 is $9.3 million. What are the plans for the spending of our tax dollars? COTI (Committee of the Islands) has appointed a sub-committee to review the proposed budget with its main purpose being a better understanding of the planned expenditures. We thought the following selected information would be of interest:

Captiva land use clears county committee hurdle

The Captiva Civic Association's land use plan was approved last Tuesday by the Lee County Growth Management Committee, clearing it for consideration by the County Commission.

The approval was by Commissioner Ray Judah, who was the only commissioner at the hearing and who said he supported any proposal to reduce population density on barrier islands.

The land use plan proposes changing the zoning from commercial to residential on all property on the island not now being used for commercial purposes. Ande Rosse Lane, where both a convention hotel and a retail center have recently been proposed, would be one of the areas most affected.

Before going to the full commission, county staff must reach decisions on some details including whether to send hearing notification to all Captiva property owners or just to ones within 350 feet of affected property. Normally, notification would just be sent to Paramedics assist Jose Salazar, right and below, and prepare him for transport to Lee Memorial Hospital. The Cape Coral man was seriously injured in a Sanibel Causeway accident Friday afternoon. One of those helping the injured man was Darrel Balmer (dressed in shorts and a tank top) of Fort Myers, who was a passenger in Salazar's auto but was unharmed in the accident. Another Cape resident, Mary Sica, was also injured in the three-car wreck.

Man pinned in overturned car in causeway accident

Jose K. Salazar of Cape Coral was pinned in his overturned car for approximately 30 minutes Friday afternoon following a three-vehicle accident on the Sanibel Causeway.

Salazar, 17, who was transported in serious condition to Lee Memorial Hospital via a helicopter, was listed in good condition Monday morning at the hospital. Mary Sica, 62, who was in another car in the accident, was transported to Cape Coral Hospital in stable condition. Sica is also a Cape Coral resident.

The third car in the mishap was driven by Fort

Myers resident Bryan Vaughn, 25, who was not injured.

According to Florida Highway Patrol reports, Salazar was driving off Sanibel in the outside lane when he lost control of his car. After losing control, his car struck Vaughn's auto, which was travelling toward the island in the inside traffic lane.

After striking Vaughn's auto, Salazar's car began to spin and was hit by Sica's car, which caused Vaughn's car to flip over.

Salazar was charged with failure to use due care.

Council requests city respond to two-month-old letter from CHR

Community Housing & Resources Inc. was prompt in submitting its detailed six-page annual report and 11-page financial statement to the City Council at its Aug. 1 meeting.

It also was prompt and responsive June 6 when it sent a three-page letter to Mayor Lenn Lorenson and the members of the City Council containing very specific and complex recommendations for achieving the city's Below Market Rate Housing goals and requesting an open forum at an early date.

A copy of the letter, written by William Dodd, chairman of the Council/CHR workshop held April 18, was tucked in CHR's annual report packet, but the council's response was noticeably subdued.

"We hoped you would respond and work with us again," said CHR Director Dorothy Newman. "We regard that area of time between April and now as a time of some progress in communication and we'd like to know when we might continue that process."

CITY BRIEFS

Councilman Mike Miracle said it seemed as if CHR was due a response, and suggested City Manager Gary Price direct the city staff to prepare some recommendations.

"It's been two months now. We should get on with it," he said.

Vice Mayor Jerry Muench, apparently seeing the letter for the first time, asked what its general contents were.

"We've started over again in trying to figure out a way to make this program work," said Councilman Mark "Bird" Westall, the appointed liaison with CHR. "CHR has come up with some suggestions which puts the ball in our side of the court. It's time we start looking at this and, again, trying to work in a cooperative manner because we are supposed to be all Sanibel citizens working for the same goal."

Muench said a date for a forum would be set after the staff prepares a report.

In other action at the Aug. 1 City Council meeting:

*Councilmen adopted a resolution urging the Florida Marine Fisheries Commission to adopt a rule mandating the installation of turtle excluder devices on all shrimp trawlers operating in state waters. The resolution requests the rule be enacted before the Southwest Florida shrimp season starts on Oct. 1. City Manager Gary Price said Sanibel should make its position known in time for the Aug. 24 Florida Cabinet meeting with the governor.

*The city councilmen heard the first reading of an ordinance which will increase the amount of service fees for bounced checks to the city of Sanibel. The new fee will be $20 or 5 percent of the dishonored check, whichever is greater. The ordinance brings Sanibel up to date with state law.

*First reading was held of an ordinance to the Land Development Code which corrects references pertaining to stop-work orders by clarifying that the code enforcement officer is empowered to issue stop-work orders.

Limousine or taxi: Public has choice at competitive rates

By Frances Adams
Islander staff writer

In its effort to provide adequate livery service for islanders, the City Council has allowed Sanibel Island Limousine Service Inc. to add two luxury town cars to its fleet of limousines, despite passionate pleas from the new owners of Sanibel Island Taxi to keep the two franchise services separate as they've always been.

Richard Toeman's limousine company can now take you to the airport in a town car at rates that are sometimes lower than riding in a van from the taxi company.

In a heated hearing Aug. 1, councilmen heard the vehement arguments of Joseph Coniglione, co-owner of Sanibel Island Taxi, who maintained allowing the limousine company to have town cars violates his taxi company's franchise.

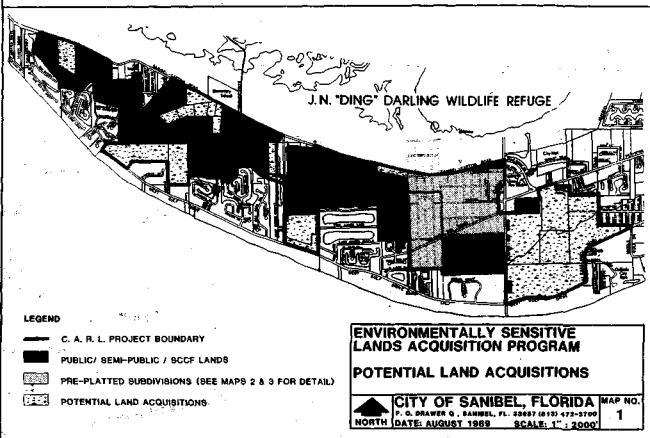

"Everyone's going to want to go to the airport in a town car, not in Sanibel Taxi's van," Coniglione protested. "It's going to drastically hurt our business." He said he has $2,500 a month in losses and 80 percent of his losses is because he has to run a night shift, which the limousine company is not required to do.

"If you're going to take away from my daytime business, then you no longer need a taxi franchise. Just give it to one company and let him have it all," Coniglione said. "You're allowing him to do what I'm doing."

At issue was the limousine company's new town car rates to the airport: $39 each way, for one person up to four people. The airport rates for the taxi company's van is $13 per person, with a minimum of two people, or $26; three people in the van is $39, the same as in the limousine company's town car; and four people, which is the most common fare, is $52, $13 more than the competition's fare.

Please see LIMO, page 14A

Issued Friday by the city of Sanibel, this map shows the large area in the interior of the island that would be included as conservation and recreation lands in the Interior Wetlands Resource Conservation Sanctuary. It also illustrates the land areas the city would most like to purchase under the proposed environmentally sensitive lands acquisition program.

should be increased and how those purchases should be financed.

The committee recommended to the Sanibel City Council on July 18 that land purchases should be sped up and should be financed by a 30-year, $10 million general obligation bond issued in two series of $5 million each. The bond would be paid off through an ad valorem tax levy of about .75 mills per year.

The proposal is on the November ballot because general obligation bonds must be specifically approved by the voters.

The city has for the past two years been buying land using $250,000 per year raised by a special .25 mill tax.

However, city officials felt this program was going too slow in light of increasing land values and because of the city's proposed Interior Wetlands Resource Conservation Sanctuary, which has been under consideration for several years.

That plan will include separating the interior wetlands from the rest of the island, probably by earthen dikes, and raising water levels in the interior wetlands in order to kill off undesirable plants, encourage native plants and provide a better environment for wildlife.

City officials have felt it would be preferable for the city to own land that might be flooded under the conservation proposal.

A map was issued by the city to the committee Friday illustrating both the Conservation and Recreation Lands (CARL) that would be in the Interior Wetlands Resource Conservation Sanctuary and the larger tracts of land considered potential land acquisitions.

Melaleucas to be gone by month's end

There will be no more melaleuca trees on Sanibel by the end of August, according to Noxious Plant Enforcement Officer Charley Pounds.

A homeowner on Albatross has agreed to have his trees removed and other remaining property owners have had their trees removed in recent weeks.

Jimmy Cipriani, who had been the most vocal island resident against being forced by the city to remove the trees at his home on Periwinkle Way, confirmed

Saturday that he had had his trees taken out.

The Sanibel Vegetation Committee had passed a resolution Thursday that the city put pressure on all remaining melaleuca owners by asking the newspapers to publish their names and addresses.

However, Pounds said, when contacted later, there are no names and addresses to publish because all Jerrold Bruce Ford of Micanopy, Fla., was arrested Sunday on outstanding Alachua County warrants for trespassing and disorderly conduct. Ford's van was stopped on Periwinkle Way near the Islander Trading Post after it was seen driving off the roadway several times, according to police.

Two people were stopped Sunday by the Lee County Sheriff's Department from stealing an alligator crossing sign from beside Sanibel-Captiva Road. Sanibel police were called to stand by as William Morgan Kyle of Vero Beach and Wayne Bradford of Lake City put the sign back where it had been.

Timothy Lynn McGee was arrested Sunday on driving under the influence charges. Police said he was going more than 60 miles per hour on Sanibel-Captiva Road, went through the stop sign at Tarpon Bay Road, skidded out into Periwinkle before stopping and crossed onto the wrong side of the road several times. He was stopped finally in front of the Sanibel Community Center and was also charged with having an open container in his car and with going onto the wrong side of the road.

Four men walked out on a $120 restaurant bill Saturday night at the Timbers Restaurant without paying.

write down all the legal reasons we have to have the causeway and put it in handout form.

City Attorney Bob Pritt said he doubted a legal document would help the situation.

Pritt said there were two schools of thought on mandatory evacuation: Do you have an obligation to save someone's life, or do you allow someone to be the master of his or her own existence? He said he would rather defend a false arrest suit from an alive person than a negligence suit from a dead person's family.

Pritt said what is called for and what is prudent are two questions that need to be answered regarding evacuation.

Vice Mayor Jerry Muench suggested the formation of a committee be put off until after the town meeting tentatively scheduled for late September. He said it would give the city's staff and the county's staff a chance to properly explain the purpose of the proposal.

Save Our Bridge group representative Maxene Michl said the committee would be pleased to share the information her group has acquired. She said her group had researched into securing a technical advisor to review the condition of the bridge and had vitae on two consultants who would charge from $1,000 to $1,500 per day to review the proposals impartially.

Michl questioned the specifics of the interlocal agreement, the lack of repairs made to the bridge and causeway, the county's claims in its application for $25 million in federal funding for the project and the interrelationship of the Sanibel bridge project to the financial structuring of the parallel Cape Coral span and the potential mid-point bridge.

"All worthy questions, worthy of being answered," she said.

"Maybe a committee made up of all groups might not be a bad thought," Price said.

"That's the beauty of our government. If the public doesn't trust you, then you let the bureaucracy slow down a little bit and you do what the citizens want to do," Westall commented.

The agreeable dialogue ended when other related issues surfaced.

Muench suggested postponing the September town meeting.

Hayes said it was more urgent to clear up the bridge issues before September, before the return of the winter residents, who may think differently than the year-round populace.

He said he would be concerned if the bridge issue became a matter for a referendum and he'd like to see it settled in another way.

Pritt expressed concern about the legality of some things in the SOB committee's proposed initiative petition.

"Without going into specifics, I want to raise the fact publicly that I have concerns with them. I don't want anybody to go through the process and work of sending out petitions and then later on hear from me or anybody else that there could be some legal problems with it, then say that we or I laid back and sandbagged them on this thing," said Pritt, and invited committee members to discuss it with him.

Muench said he felt there was a sense of unity in the room and hopes the bridge committee "will ease back on the petition."

Michl said she had no objection to that, except for one very critical factor. She said Sanibel signed a resolution supporting Lee County's request for the $25 million federal grant, and if you get a federal grant you have to spend it, whether you need it or not. She said Lee County hopes to have the matter acted upon by Oct. 1.

"I have heard if you accept the grant, you must do the work," Pritt said, "but I've never heard if a grant is made then you have to accept the grant."

"Lee County has asked for the grant and obviously intends to accept it," Michl replied.

Pritt said he would prepare a resolution forming the new city committee and suggested its membership be as diverse as possible.

Anyone interested in serving on the committee should contact the city manager's office at 472-3700.

"The airport business is where you make the money in the transportation business," Coniglione said, "it's not running around at $4 on a local trip."

"I can't tell you how to run your business, but maybe you ought to adjust your rates accordingly," said Vice Mayor Jerry Muench.

"You can't ask me to adjust my rates to be more competitive in the day and still run my losses at night," Coniglione said.

City Manager Gary Price said he was still competitive when he carried three people in a van.

"You're right," Coniglione agreed, "For $39 are you going to go in a van or in a luxury car?"

"Why shouldn't they have a choice?" Tocman asked. He said some people don't want to share a ride with a strange family or spend an extra 1/2-hour on the road picking up additional passengers.

"As far as Mr. Coniglione is concerned, if he bought a taxi company that was losing $2,500 a month when he bought it, then shame on him!" Tocman told Council.

"That's not my problem and it's certainly not your problem."

Councilman Francis Bailey said it was inde. Sanibel's business as far as the franchises are concerned. He said if both companies lose money and go out of business, then the city has no taxi business. He said the problem was that the city did not know what the new owners of the taxi company can do.

George Coserta, the other new co-owner of Sanibel Island Taxi, said he could see Tocman's point, but added, "Shame on him, because he can't justify working on Sanibel with only a limousine. He's trying to justify diversifying into the taxi business."

Coserta said competition between limousines and taxis should be eliminated and the franchises be kept separate from each other.

Tocman said if he were going into the taxi business, he would have requested four or six town cars.

City Attorney Bob Pritt said he was bothered by Tocman's town car rates, which say for fares other than to the airport, his hourly rate is "not to exceed" $30 per hour, with a minimum hourly requirement of two hours. Pritt said Tocman could conceivably charge $2 an hour, or a total of $4.

"It's a flaw, and the rates ought to say what the rates ought to be," Pritt said.

Tocman explained the rates were set that way so he could adjust his rates off-season.

"The one little area he's trying to cover is 80 percent of our business," Coniglione argued. "Do you want to give me the whole dog or give me the bone? Let's go one way or the other."

"Give me a fair decision. You've got two franchises. Keep the two franchises and see what the service is in six months," Coniglione pleaded. "Don't I deserve a chance?"

"You've got an outsider, just came into town, that bought an existing business that was doing very poorly. He's made a lot of promises," Tocman said. "I want to expand my business by two vehicles and the people deserve a choice."

"For two years, the City Council protected the taxi company and it was an absolute horror show!" Tocman said. "Make the decision for the public, for their sake. If they can drive in a brand new Lincoln or a Cadillac for $39, why shouldn't one person have that choice?"

The councilmen unanimously agreed to give the public that choice. Tocman's limousine service now has the use of two town cars, at least until June 15, 1990, when his limousine franchise comes up for renewal before the council.

owners have either had the trees removed or agreed to let the city remove them.

Sanibel began a voluntary melaleuca removal program in 1983. Over 6,500 trees were removed under that program.

Earlier this year, the city passed a mandate, removal ordinance which would have become effective in October.

But the 20 owners of the 265 trees that were remaining when that ordinance passed have, since that time, either removed their trees themselves or agreed to let the city do it.

ISLANDER
PORTRAIT

Rita Groh

On a busy day during the season, Rita Groh will smile at over 1,600 people.

Rita's smile is often the first human contact that many island visitors have with the area. She is manager-secretary-greeter and all-purpose information dispenser at the Chamber of Commerce.

Rest assured, the smile is genuine.

As the chamber newsletter says, "An extrovert like her late father, Rita says she loves meeting people. Even in college, she was always asked to be the master of ceremonies or to make introductions."

Rita and her husband Hank first came to Sanibel in 1959, crossing on the ferry to what they still consider paradise.

"At that time, we vowed to come back to live - someday," Rita recalls.

After several vacations, the couple bought a lot in 1970 from "the original Priscilla Murphy" and built their Gulf Shores home in 1972. For two more years, they continued to operate the Greenwich, Conn., printing business that had belonged to Rita's father, Joseph Bel Canto until his death in 1968. In 1974, Hank, Rita and her mother, Helen, sold the business and moved to Sanibel.

For an entire year, Hank and Rita loafed. Both born and raised in Greenwich, they had known each other since high school.

"But, we didn't get together until Hank got out of the Army in 1950. By that time, I had a secretarial degree and was working," Rita remembers.

Once, Hank made the initial phone call, the courtship went smoothly. They were married, March 25, 1951.

Rita's mother, the former Helen Sniffen, died at 83, on Sanibel, after a long illness.

Through her job and her longtime love of the islands, Rita has become an expert on Sanibel and Captiva, called upon for all types of esoteric information.

"One woman sent her husband's photograph and asked if we had seen him," says Rita. "I gave it to the police and don't know how it turned out."

One visitor known as "The Man with the Teddy Bears" caused quite a stir when the trolley operator wouldn't let him get Roots: Born and raised in Greenwich, Conn.

Last Book Read: "Good Intentions," by Joy Fielding.

Hobbies: Reading (belongs to three book clubs), needlepoint, golf, working in the yard and walking on the beach.

Would like to have dinner with: Mother Teresa.

Mentor: Parents and grandmother.

Words of wisdom: "Live for today. Make the most of each day."

Minor ambition: "To play golf as well as Hank does."

back on after a stop at the chamber. It seems the man had a shopping bag full of stuffed bears, which he arranged in most of the available seats and proceeded to talk to throughout the trolley trip.

Just recently, she opened a letter and out fluttered a check for $5. A family had spent a week photographing island scenery only to find, on their return home, that the camera shutter wasn't operating.

"They wanted me to spend the $5 on post cards of Sanibel and Captiva scenes," Groh explains. "That's a lot of post cards. I went from store to store and wound up with birds, alligators, fish and a lot more than pure scenery."

Many of the people she meets in her job check-in with Rita each year on their annual island visits. Once a couple for whom she found a condo at the height of a full-house season, appeared the next morning with a handsome African Violet plant.

Once in awhile, Rita and her cohorts at the Chamber of Commerce, are called upon for more sobering help. She remembers that a man drowned on the island and although the police could find his northern address, there was no way to discover where he was staying on the island.

"I called every single hotel, motel, cottage and condo on the island. We finally found the man's wife," she explains.

Most of the visitors at the chamber are in a good mood. From time to time, there are complaints, primarily about the $3 toll or the lack of beach parking.

"We turn these over to Ken (Meeker, Executive Director of the chamber). He's good at soothing people. And, so was Walter Klie, the former director," Rita says.

Foreign visitors sometimes pose a problem. Often Hank, who served in Germany and now works at O-B Liquors, comes to the aid of German tourists.

"For others, we just muddle along," Rita claims. "You'd be surprised how far sign language and a smile will go."

The central room at the Chamber of Commerce is a help, too. It is filled with maps, pamphlets and graphic displays of island scenes, activities and accommodations. Shell exhibits and art supplied by Sanibel-Captiva Art League also decorate the building.

But, by far the most illuminating displays are the smiles that greet the visitors.

"I love my job," Rita admits. "There has never been a day when I didn't look forward to coming to work."

Her obvious enjoyment and the limitless good humor that comes through in her voice and eyes are the most convincing welcome a visitor could expect.

Captiva beach palm issue apparently settled

By Steve Ruediger
Islander staff writer

The Captiva home owner who planted coconut palms on his beach beside the public beach at the end of Captiva Drive, has agreed to remove as many of the trees as the state demands, according to a Florida Department of Natural Resources official.

Gil Hill, an enforcement official in Tallahassee with the DNR's Division of Beaches and Shores, said he talked Friday with property owner Jamie Farquharson, who "has offered to voluntarily remove all or part of what is there to satisfy the department's objections."

Farquharson is to make arrangements with area inspector Mike Jolty to meet at his beach property and resolve what needs to be removed. The meeting is expected this week.

The DNR, before contacting Farquharson, had said a fine of up to $10,000 a day could be levied for the resident's allegedly planting the trees on public property.

The 31 coconut palms were planted without permits from either the DNR or the Captiva Erosion Prevention District. Permits are required from both when anything permanent is planted or placed on a Captiva Beach. The law even applies to private property.

In addition, there have been claims that Farquharson went beyond his property line with his plantings.

There were also questions as to whether the palms would conflict with the CEPD beach revegetation project scheduled to begin in September.

Since the beach nourishment project was completed earlier this year, a number of Captiva property owners have placed vegetation on their beaches without the needed permits. The others, however, planted smaller plants and are not beside public beach access points. Therefore, their plantings are not as noticeable as Farquharson's.

The DNR also objected to Farquharson roping off the area containing the palms and putting up "private" signs.

Obituaries

Robert K. Knowles

Former Captiva mail boat captain and teacher Robert E. Knowles died Sunday, July 31, at the age of 93. Knowles, remembered on Sanibel for his love of gardening, was the second school teacher to hold classes in the Captiva Schoolhouse, when he returned to the island after serving in the U.S. Army in World War I.

A lifetime resident of the area, Mr. Knowles was less than two years of age when his father Harvey Edward Knowles, brought him to Captiva to live for a few months in a thatched hut on the beach. Later, his parents moved to Buck Key before returning to a farm on Captiva.

He was one of the first scholarship students at the University of Florida, where he later received a master's degree in education.

He married the former Ruth Ellen Hjord, who died in 1981, at 83. Mr. Knowles retired from teaching in 1973 and the couple moved to Sanibel for several years where they were members of Sanibel Community Church.

He is survived by a son and daughter-in-law, David M. and Elaine Knowles of Fort Myers; a grandson, Richard Knowles of Hawaii and a granddaughter, Elizabeth Cedre of Tampa.

Mr. Knowles was the grandson of Henry Perry and Julia F. Knowles, who came to Captiva in 1897. Julia died on Jan. 2, 1901 and is buried in the Captiva Cemetery.

Mr. Knowles, a lover of poetry, gardening and teaching, died eight years short of his life goal of 101. He was buried in Miami's Memorial Cemetery with his wife and parents.

John Clayton Marsh

John Clayton (Clay) Marsh passed away, Monday, July 31. A resident of Sanibel for 15 years, he formerly resided in Meadowbrook, North Plainfield, N.J.

He had been in public relations and was associated for 17 years, until his retirement, with the Ford Motor Company. His previous association had been with the Newark (N.J.) News, Town Crier magazine and Young and Rubicam advertising agency. For a brief period, he owned a restaurant in Montvale, Long Island.

He served with the U. S. Army in the Philippines and was editor for the Fort Hancock post newspaper during World War II.

An avid golfer for all of his life, he took great pleasure in his membership in the Beachview Golf Club and was almost a daily player. He had played the course the morning of his death and later succumbed to heart failure at his home.

He had served as president of the Beachview Men's Golf Association.

In New Jersey, he had been chairman of United Fund drives for many years. On the island, he inaugurated the Salvation Army kettle campaigns for the holiday seasons.

March was the son of the late John Leicester and Isabel Marsh of Barbados, B.W.I. He is survived by a sister, Maxine Klug, of Napa, Calif.; a daughter, Clayne Marsh Calhoun of Virginia; a son, Dwight David Marsh of Fort Myers and a grandson, Sam Clayton Calhoun.

•The City Council approved a purchase contract of one lot in Tarpon Bay subdivision as part of the wetlands acquisition program, for a cost of $1,000, plus an estimated $150 in closing costs. Councilman Francis Bailey asked why the city would want to own such a small, unbuildable lot. City Manager Gary Price said it is in the interior wetlands area and it may be necessary to flood the lot for the Surface Water Management program. City Attorney Bob Pritt said it would be cheaper than taking it by eminent domain, which would cost more than $15,000 in attorney's fees.

owners within 350 feet. However, there are so few Captiva property owners it would probably be cheaper just to send everybody a notice rather than working to determine which residents are within 350 feet of a property which would have its zoning changed.

Also to be determined is the extent of county financial involvement. For example, will the county waive the fees normally associated with the rezoning process and will a county employee or a representative of the Captiva Civic Association have the job of overseeing the progress of each of the 21 individual zoning changes that would be involved in the plan?

The plan resulted from a study by Wilson, Miller, Barton, Soll and Peek Inc., which the association commissioned in July 1987. The study was published in January of this year.

The plan was adopted by a unanimous vote of Civic Association members attending a meeting in March.

killed. The other person, reportedly Burned, responded that it killed her dog, so it should be killed.

Another witness said there was shouting match back and forth with a woman saying she would like to kill the alligator herself because it had killed her dog and other people yelling not to kill it.

At that point, police dispersed the crowd.

The basset hound had earlier been reported missing from Burned's house on Brainerd Bayou after Rose Van Leeve of Buck Key Road called police to report seeing an alligator with a dog in its mouth.

Sanibel Police Sgt. Mike Murray, left, helps keep a nuisance alligator still while state trapper Gene McMillian secures the reptile's jaws. The gator was captured and removed from the area after it reportedly killed a basset hound in the Buck Key Road area of Sanibel.

Island groups join in shrimp boycott

Several Sanibel and Captiva groups announced support last week for the national Audubon Society-sponsored consumer boycott of shrimp.

The boycott is in response to the refusal of shrimpers to use turtle excluder devices (TEDs) to protect endangered sea turtles and to the failure of the U.S. Commerce Department to enforce the law requiring TEDs. (See related article, page 9B.)

The Sanibel-Captiva Audubon Society, Care and Rehabilitation of Wildlife (CROW), the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation (SCCF) and Caretta Research are among local organizations supporting the boycott.

A number of national organizations are also supporting the boycott. They include the Humane Society of the United States, Fund for Animals, Center for Marine Conservation, Defenders of Wildlife, and other groups.

Sanibel police bicycle patrol makes marijuana arrest

A Kansas State University student was arrested last Thursday for marijuana possession near the Hilton in the first arrest ever by a Sanibel police officer on bicycle patrol in uniform.

Officer Michael R. Cooper said he was patrolling the beach on a police department bicycle when he saw young people drinking alcoholic beverages. They looked underage so he stopped and asked for their IDs.

While the youths were getting their IDs out, Cooper said, he noticed a plastic marijuana pipe on the ground. He asked whose it was and Mark Cristion Hageman said it was his, according to Cooper.

While searching Hageman, Cooper found an Advil bottle containing 2.4 grams of marijuana. The bottle was tucked in the waistband of Hageman's shorts.

Hageman was arrested on possession of marijuana and drug paraphernalia possession charges.

Sanibel police have used bicycle patrols in the past at various events such as The Taste of the Islands. However, police could not recall any arrest being made previously by an officer on bicycle patrol.

Rash of auto break-ins hit island

At least four automobiles were broken into last Saturday on Sanibel. The break-ins were at four different locations but at least two showed a similar technique of someone punching out the door lock and pulling out the back seat to get into the trunk.

The break-ins took place in the parking lots of the Tennis Place Condominium, the lighthouse, the fishing pier and Bowman's Beach.

Stolen items included about $2,000 at Bowman's, a radar detector at Tennis Place and a wallet containing German money at the fishing pier.

A bag of clothes, including suits and ties, was found Sunday at the lighthouse and was believed to have been taken in one of the break-ins.

Sanibel police officers are continuing their investigations into the incidents.

King's Crown manager Scheid relishes the island lifestyle

By Ann Travelstead
Islander staff writer

Arno Scheid has seen his share of worldly glamour, but finds the serene life of the islands every bit as fascinating as life on a luxury liner. Now manager of King's Crown Restaurant at South Seas Plantation Resort, he was chief steward on the incomparable France for her maiden voyage.

"Never have so many diamonds gone to sea on so many celebrities," recalled Scheid, as he surveyed his island domain.

The jewels and gentry must have been grand indeed to have impressed Scheid. Prior to his France experience on the high seas, he held the high post of chief steward for the West German government. In that capacity, he catered to the royal whims of the King of Thailand, Aly Khan, and assorted rulers and princes of Africa and eastern countries.

Born in Limburg, a medieval duchy now divided between the Netherlands and Belgium, Scheid apprentice-ed in his profession in Dusseldorf, West Germany, and later enrolled in hotel school in Switzerland.

"Things are different in Europe," he explained. "You work up through the ranks, doing and learning every aspect of the business."

Coming to the United States in 1963 as the outcome of a shipboard romance, Scheid found himself launched on the country club circuit.

For seven years, he was manager of the Gastonia Country Club, Gastonia, N.C. He spent another seven years as manager of the Plantation Club, Sea Pines Plantation at Hilton Head, S.C.

His culinary career also encompassed the opening of two fine restaurants for Sheraton Hotels in Ft. Lauderdale. The inestimable Dome still maintains its aura of elegance. The Venetian Room, which enjoyed a long-run success, is now closed.

In January 1983, Scheid came to Captiva to assume his present role as manager of King's Crown. There he

FISH FOR THOUGHT!

THE FISH DAYS OF SUMMER?

Actually they are the dog days of summer, and it has nothing to do with the family pooch. Dog days comes from the Romans (caniculares dies "days of the dog") who believed that in the hottest part of summer, Sirius the "dog star" lent its heat to the heat of the sun (sirius means scorching in Greek). These dog days lasted from the first week in July through the second week in August, a period when Sirius was ascending in the sky. Over time, the expression "dog days" has come to mean any expected long streak of heat.

At The Timbers we like to think of this time of years as the fish days, the time of year when fish prices are at their lowest (and the wait for a table is at its shortest). Any way you look at this time of year, you won't be barking up the wrong tree when you have any of the wonderful fresh fish dinners at oversees room service and banquet service as well as the restaurant. He also runs Uncle Bob's Ice Cream Parlor, a favorite stopping place for the young South Seas contingent.

King's Crown, while low on actual kings, has its share of celebrities. Most recently Scheid met Florida Gov. Bob Martinez.

"That was nice," Scheid admitted, "but everybody is nice here. It's the island atmosphere."

And, with that he took an expansive breath of island atmosphere — a happy man, in what he terms "paradise."

"Nunsense" arrives on March 14 for three doses of wacky hilarity before the provocative "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" on March 16.

Popular British star Robert Whittaker will hold center stage for two nights, opening March 19, while Judy Collins and Tom Chapin wind up the regular season on March 29.

A planned Pete Seegar-Arlo Guthrie concert will be rescheduled for another date in 1990.

Excellent Medical Service County emergency units continue to provide quick, quality care to islanders

By Steve Haggston
Islander staff writer

The Lee County Emergency Medical Service continues providing excellent service to Sanibel and Captiva a year after the county-run ambulance service was designated the best in the nation.

The islanders provide a vast backdrop for the crews assigned to the post. In 1988, there were 981 calls on Sanibel and Captiva compared to over 2,000 in downtown Fort Myers. For Lee County as a whole there were just over 100,000 calls.

Ambulance crews are shifted every two months from a busy station to a slower station like Sanibel's.

"Sanibel is mostly peaceful and pleasant," said acting EMS director Mickey Wilkinson, who was one of the first two EMS personnel assigned on Sanibel in the early 1980s.

"It lets you get your brain back in order," said Steve Backlund, one of the six EMS crewmen currently assigned to Sanibel and Captiva.

In downtown Fort Myers, the crews join the ambulance crew might be working straight through its shift without eating or resting. In contrast, on Sanibel there are two or three shifts every 24 hours in the summer and six in other times of the year.

That leaves the summer months for part of their usual time reading, watching television, doing housework, work and so on.

Wilkinson said shifting people back and forth works because "if you leave them in an outfit area for long, their skills deteriorate. If you leave them there, however, they are lost."

Paramedic Ted Haggston has spent more time assigned to Sanibel than any of the other EMS personnel. He is also in charge of the county's EMS training center. He has been with EMS for 15 years and has been in three other areas, but there are other differences on Sanibel.

One of them is that "the number of violent accidents at the rate of the county is not as high as other areas. We are generally more laid back. The problem is that the people who run them have to take that to their hearts."

The injuries are usually not because of horses and horses, Haggston said.

However, the potential is there for more serious injuries. He cited, unfortunatly Backlund, who is a volunteer Haggston's partner on a Sanibel shift.

Mild Fun is another difference, said Haggston, who has worked as several lifeguards there.

"It is probably the single most dangerous area for paramedics in the county," according to Haggston, who said many people don't realize how narrow the current moves through the water.

Another difference on the island is that most of the patients are tourists. Wilkinson said that he has been called to the hospital several times in the hospital and that the ambulance crew getting that up on the long way to Fort Myers and back.

When the one ambulance assigned to Sanibel does have to take someone to a Fort Myers hospital, the EMS ambulance assigned to Sanibel is shifted closer to Sanibel so that it could get to the island quicker if it were needed.

"For safety reasons the helicopter is not used at night."

things during a hurricane.

"When a hurricane hits, it will be a very bad situation. I can't imagine it being otherwise," said Haggston. "When there is a warning, people will just have to start getting off the island."

The wildlife on Sanibel has not had an effect on the ambulance service, Haggston said. There are crocodiles, snakes, alligators, and some places where Emergency Technicians carried the county across the best in the nation in 1987. Indeed how it had done in 1988, Wilkinson said that after winning first place the year before, the local group didn't apply for consideration in 1988.

"It was the gentlemanly thing to do," he said.

The ambulance service for Sanibel and Captiva has improved over the years. In 1988, the Sanibel Hospital would transport the injured person to the hospital and an ambulance would come from Fort Myers, even the speed of the emergency and transfer the patient to the ambulance, which they would take the person to the hospital.

In 1987, when an ambulance was assigned to Sanibel, there was only one person stationed with it. When a call came in, a volunteer fireman would have to be contacted to drive the ambulance to the hospital with the paramedic was to back looking in the island or in person.

The helicopter program began in 1988.

Continuation. Accreditation of Sanibel Inc. (CME) is currently working with EMS on a joint project to get the two long-standing agencies put in the hands of all Sanibel volunteers to make the helicopter in the current place to land.

There are six EMS personnel assigned to Sanibel. They work three, two-person, eight-hour shifts each day. At least one person or two two-person teams in a paramedic who has attended a two-year paramedic school. The other person is an emergency medical technician.

Haggston said the ambulance is so well equipped it could be considered a mobile emergency room.

For the county EMS has to be able to handle the helicopter, if an accident occurs and an emergency.

Haggston said a lot of the work for the county EMS is to work about 100 hours a year. The county EMS is a volunteer organization. He knows the other people who work for the county EMS and they are all very hard workers and dedicated.

Examples of reduced care techniques are the use of external resuscitation and the ability to do chest decompression by sticking a needle into the chest to relieve air pressure.

The average EMS employee has worked for the service for 1.5 years, which is comparatively high, Wilkinson said.

The fire department in Lee County also deserve praise, Wilkinson said. "We rely on their help and assistance," he stressed. "Sometimes they get to the scene first. They are a major group of men."

The important thing of EMS is that you care about people," Haggston said. "To get into this you have to have feeling about people. It's not going to make you rich, but it can make you proud."

Called into action, the area's EMS crews always offer quick medical assistance for the injured or ill. The county's emergency units were voted one of the nation's best last year and continue to provide their excellent service across Southwest Florida.

The Sanibel EMS station is located at the end of the main reconstruction, where place on Sanibel, there are fewer and fewer places for the helicopter to land.

"Sanibel is getting so built up there are almost no other areas left. There is a problem with the helicopter," said Haggston.

Sanibel being far away from hospital facilities could cause pro-longer animals, like deer, are often involved in accidents.

"If you hit an alligator just past red over it," Haggston said, "inside the beach fire station on Palm Ridge Road."

Haggston said the reason the Lee EMS is so good is the quality of people who work here.

Officer Jim Wilson is dedicated to community service

By Ann Travelstead
Islander staff writer

Officer James Richard Wilson joined the Sanibel Police Department in October 1984, after a long part-time stint with the Metro-Dade Police force in Miami. Moving to Dade County in 1986, Wilson worked full-time for Southern Bell, while going to Dade County Police Academy and working as an officer.

For a man who had "never even thought about being a policeman," this was a double-duty commitment. During the day, he trained PBX installers. On his own time, he worked on his law enforcement credentials.

When AT&T was forced to divest some of the Baby Bells, Wilson took early retirement and came to look things over on Sanibel.

"I'd been coming here since before the causeway," said Wilson, who remembers the ferry well. "This was my favorite spot."

He and the former Jean Brown, who were married in 1961, talked it over and Wilson came to Sanibel to do some electrical work and to house-sit for a house on the bay.

"And one thing lead to another. I still had my Dade County Police standards, so when an opening came along, I joined SPD," he said.

Although he thinks he made a great decision, it hasn't always been easy to handle the travel involved in his marriage. Jean has another year before she retires from Southern Bell.

"Sometimes, I go over to Miami," Wilson explained, "but most of the time, she comes over here, because this is the nicer spot."

One of the nicer things about it is the house that Wilson built on Palm Lake Drive. He finished it last year, but still finds landscaping work to do.

"It's a complete change from Dade County," Wilson pointed out, even though living on the island results in off-shift calls.

His least favorite calls have to do with alligator removal. Wilson is one of SPD's certified alligator handlers. He remembers taking old "311," a 10 1/2-foot gator, out of the gulf with the help of one state trapper.

"That's a lot of alligator for two people to handle," he admitted.

He thinks that he has moved and marked about seven alligators and relocated about 15 or 18 small ones. They are not his favorite wildlife denizens.

The Wilsons both grew up in Zanesville, Ohio, where they were married a year after he went to work for the telephone company. Before that, Jim had been in the U.S. Navy seeing the world, from 1945-1949.

"We really did see a good bit of it," he claimed. "I was in Cuba, BC - before Castro, and was all up and down the Caribbean and Central and South America... even one tour to the Mediterranean."

The Wilsons have two sons and a daughter. Son Biff, who works at the Sundial, has one son, Jason. Unmarried son Steve works at Burdine's in Fort Myers and, daughter Kim, who has two sons, Seth and Justin. Schner, works at Jacaranda. (Justin was the Grand Prize winner in the Islander Mother's Day contest, winning for his mother a weekend at West Wind Inn.)

As the family grew, Wilson became involved in all sorts of sports. He coached football and basketball and, last year, played on an Over 50 softball team.

It was coaching that led him to know Sgt. Irv Heller, Miami Dade Police, who steered him toward the Dade County Police Academy. Heller, now a major, is still a good friend and his advice earned the life-long appreciation of Wilson.

"Coming here was a great change from Dade County," he admitted. "I'll never forget being handed an 18-month old baby who had drowned. Nobody had tried CPR. Everybody should learn CPR. It's a true lifesaver."

Wilson, who left trees intact when he built his house, likes the easy-going atmosphere of the islands.

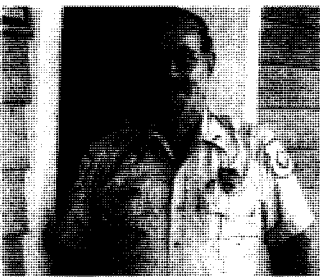

"Everybody is always saying, 'Don't change anything. Don't tear down the trees and concrete everything over,'" Wilson added.

A fisherman who fishes from the pier, Wilson admit, he's "not too hard-up serious about it." He's also not too hard-up serious about his guitar. "I pick at it a bit, but I'm sure not able to entertain anybody."

As for law enforcement: "I enjoy people. You see all of the had and some of the good. Here it's mostly good. And it makes you feel good to help people find their strayed kids, get their cars started and things like that."

Then comes the clincher.

"Metro Dade was a crime suppression force. SPD is a community service group. The change is amazing," Wilson is dedicated to community service.

Man charged with molesting boy on Sanibel

Jon Neil Schuster, 52, pled innocent last week to charges he molested a 16-year-old boy during a family vacation on Sanibel last December. The boy was a friend of Schuster's son.

Schuster, a suspended Michigan school superintendent, voluntarily surrendered to Sanibel police and is to be tried on Sept. 19.

In previous years in Michigan, Schuster had been arrested on a charge of sex crimes against a juvenile boy and had been removed from his school position as a result of other similar allegations.

Roadside stands are the places to shop

This is the time of the year when most of our roadside fruit and vegetable markets are overflowing with such "goodies" as raspberries, strawberries, peaches, plums, blueberries, little cucumbers, baby string beans, etc.

And when it comes to such things as melons or squash, name it and the type is usually there. All to be picked out by you and not shrouded in plastic. To have beautiful fresh produce encased in that abominable material is wrong and very wasteful.

The other day while in a supermarket and in a great hurry, I made the dreadful mistake of buying a shrouded eggplant. Guess what? The rotten side was down. I was infuriated. If we didn't live so far out, I would have taken it back.

During most of the year, I buy my produce from my friend Mitch. His stand is at the corner of McGregor and John Morris Road. Unfortunately, he is closed for about three months every summer.

Mitch and I have a lot in common. It turns out he used to be at the same race tracks where our daughters used to ride. We know the same owners and trainers. Because he keeps up with racing and I don't, I have yet to take his money. I keep right on trying as I am not the type that becomes discouraged easily.

While Mitch is away, I assume winning. I go to the Iona Farm Market on Gladiolus. It too has excellent produce and for me it's really cheaper as they don't gamble.

When I finally bought a decent eggplant, this is the way I cooked it.

Eggplant with Creole Sauce

- 1 medium eggplant, peeled and cubed
- 1 green pepper, cored and chopped
- 1 teaspoon minced garlic

WHAT'S COOKING?

By Bobbie Sharp

- 1 medium onion, diced
 - 1/4 cup safflower oil
 - 2 stalks celery diced
 - Salt and pepper
 - 1 large beef steak tomato cored and chopped
 - 1 bay leaf
 - 1/4 teaspoon coriander
- In a large heavy pan that has a tight lid, heat the oil, add eggplant, onion, garlic and celery. Cook on high heat for 5 minutes and stir. Add the green pepper, tomato, coriander, salt, pepper and bay leaf. Turn heat on high, stir, turn to simmer and cover. Let cook about 20 minutes. When ready to serve, remove the bay leaf and place on a bed of rice. I have served this with smoked pork chops and it is excellent with them.

The following is one of the simplest and best of all fresh plum desserts. This year the large purple plums have been unusually good.

Plum Duff

- 3 cups of purple plums, pitted and cut in quarters
 - 3 tablespoons brown sugar
 - 3 tablespoons granulated sugar
 - Butter to grease pie plate.
- Mix the sugars and plums together and set aside.
- Topping for plums
- 1 egg beaten

- 1 cup flour
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 cup melted butter

In a bowl, mix the egg, flour, sugar, baking powder and salt, combine this thoroughly. Put the plums in the pie plate and place the flour, etc., mix on top of the plums and spread. Pour the melted butter over the topping. Bake for 45 minutes in a 375 degree pre-heated oven.

Peaches in Cassis

- 8 peaches
- 1 cup sugar
- 5 cups water

Bring the water and sugar to a boil and cook until sugar is dissolved. Put the peaches in with a slotted spoon and let cook long enough so the skin will slip off easily. Remove the peaches with a slotted spoon and place in cold water. Slip the skins off. Set aside.

- 1 1/2 sticks of butter
- 3/4 cup sugar
- 1/2 cup creme de cassis
- Vanilla ice cream

In a heavy pan melt the butter, add the sugar and cassis. Place the peaches in this and coat them well. Serve them over the ice cream. This makes about 8 servings.

Bobbie Sharp has been cooking for family and friends for nearly 50 years. She has studied under Chef Tel and under Julie Dannenbaum at the Creative Cooking School in Philadelphia. She and her husband, Thomas, moved to Sanibel several years ago from Berwyn, Pa.

Postal notes

Customers can help post office with 'readability' problems

(Editor's note: The following article was submitted by the staff at the Sanibel post office. The Islander periodically publishes information provided by local postal service employees as helpful hints for island customers and the mail carriers.)

By Mary Leigh

There is a lot of thought and discussion in the United States Postal Service about "readability."

In the postal context, readability has to do with the ability of an optical scanner to read an address on an envelope. The OCRs (Optical Character Readers) now on line in Fort Myers are currently capable of reading and sorting between 35,000 and 40,000 letters per hour.

Unfortunately, thousands of letters per hour are rejected by the OCRs and must be sorted manually. In fact, the rejection rate is approximately 40 percent. The USPS goal for readability is 95 percent accuracy by 1995. Just a 1 percent increase in readability would save literally millions of dollars each year.

What can you do, personally, to aid in this process? Here are some suggestions:

1. Type the address on the envelope using all capital letters and no punctuation. OCRs have no capacity for reading handwriting, except for numbers.
2. The zip code goes on the last line of the address. Anything else written on the envelope (like: Attention Mr. Adams or Please Forward) on a horizontal plane with the area read by the optical scanner can confuse it and result in rejection and manual sorting.

Businesses in particular can benefit from a high degree of readability. Reply cards and envelopes can

A real kick ...

Soccer camp officially begins island season

By Rick Fowler
Islander staff writer

Last week the Sanibel Recreation Center sponsored a six-day soccer camp for youngsters seven to 14 years of age.

The camp was led by Greg Willin a professional soccer player with the Tampa Bay Rowdies. Willin was assisted by Jim Patton a former professional player with the Westham United team of England, a member of the 1976 U.S. Olympic Team and one of Willin's former coaches at Jacksonville University.

The camp sessions included skill work, exercises, game situations and tactical play. There was an emphasis placed upon the fundamental skills of the game such as passing, trapping and controlling the ball. Each camper also received his own camp T-shirt and soccer ball.

Patton remarked that he was pleased to be able to play a part in the enhancement of the island's soccer program.

Barry Shanley, a coach last year for the local program, came out last week to help out and expand his knowledge of the game. Shanley indicated that he was extremely pleased that the Recreation Center and local program had been able to bring in such quality instructors.

The island's youth soccer program only began last year, and was actually considered organizationally to be a component of the Ft. Myers Beach Soccer Club. Doug Archibald, volunteer coordinator of the island's program, and other supporters worked during this past year to bring about the establishment of an independent Sanibel Soccer Club.

Archibald explained that the newly-formed club will be a member of both the county and state Youth Soccer Associations.

He said, "This will hopefully mean that our teams will be able to play home games on the island."

Other teams in this region of the county league include San Carlos Park, Bonita Springs and former partner, Ft. Myers Beach. Sanibel's travelling teams will compete at the elementary schools in each of those communities.

Archibald added that despite being new the club, the island has a good base to build on, with last year's 11 and 12-year-old team having won the county championship.

The local program had consisted of eight teams, four of which travelled. Archibald is hoping that interest in the sport will have sufficiently expanded to allow for the formation of three additional teams including a new 13 and 14-year-old bracket.

There has also been interest expressed in the forming of a girl's team to compete within the county league.

The Sanibel Soccer Club will begin its regular season in September. Youngsters may register for the program at the Recreation Center during regular hours from Aug. 14-25. There will also be a special registration session on Aug. 26.

This Thursday evening, Aug. 10, there will be an organizational meeting for the club at 6:30 p.m. in the Recreation Center. Coaches, managers and individuals willing to assist with administrative functions are needed — no prior experience is necessary.

The island youth participating in last week's camp included Ryan and Parker Archibald, Lucas Beggs, Wallace Carnawh, Joey Carrigan, Mike Krepin, Sergio Lara, John Lottes, Ian Ruppel, Andrew Schultz, Ben Shanley, J.T. Spring and Scott Trinler.

Islander Joyce captures another national water skiing title

By Rick Fowler
Islander staff writer

On July 28 and 29, the first-ever National Water Ski Championships for the Physically Challenged were held in Dearborn, Mich. and islander Bill Joyce was there to capture yet another title.

The event marked the opening of the American Water Ski Association's summer series of national championships which also included traditional skiing, barefooting, kneesboard, show skiing and collegiate skiing. This event was made possible by HomeCare, Inc. a company specializing in durable medical equipment and supplies.

Prior to his moving to the islands, in 1985, Joyce lived in Chicago where he had developed a successful cable television business serving the states of Illinois and Wisconsin. His life was suddenly and dramatically changed when an accidental garage explosion at his Wisconsin summer home resulted in the permanent loss of his sight.

Joyce began water skiing just two years ago at the encouragement of a business associate who was himself a national water ski champion. Since that time, he has twice captured the U.S. National Trick Water Ski Championship and this past March he won the World Disabled Water Ski Trick

Ski Championships in Perth, Australia.

When in Australia, Joyce ruptured a hamstring and severely pulled a groin muscle while practicing. He was confined to the Sports Medicine Center where he received treatment and physical therapy, but was able to still successfully compete in the finals.

After his return to Sanibel and recuperation, Joyce was again on the "back bay" three to four mornings a week for training. His rigorous training program again paid dividends as he was able to take top honors in last week's competition at Dearborn.

Aerobic & Fitness Center opens island

By Ann Travlestad
Islander staff writer

Sanibel Aerobic & Fitness Center has opened at Fantasy Island Plaza on Periwinkle Way, offering a complete range of exercise and fitness programs.

"Island residents and visitors can let our fitness advisors establish a plan to meet and maintain maximum fitness levels," promises Ron D'Amico, general manager of the new facility.

Tracy Gerety is assistant manager in charge of aerobic coordination. Don Grey, divisional manager, overlooks the weight room.

Both serve as trainers.

The center offers high intensity and low impact aerobic classes through the day and evening. Equipment includes Stairmaster, Lifecycles, Schwinn Airdyne bikes and an array of Nautilus-type machines. All this and use of the weight room is included in the monthly membership. In addition, massage by licensed therapist, Susan Santavico, and tanning beds are available.

D'Amico, who used to sing and play his guitar at island night spots, and owner Rick Hall, who divides his time between Pittsburgh and Sanibel, offer corporate and group memberships as well as individual rates and special short-term plans for visitors. Demographic studies led Hall to the Sanibel location over other nearby areas.

Current classes are small, but the mirrored work-out room can accommodate as many as 30. All activities are co-ed, except shower and locker rooms.

Trelease edges two in contest tie-breaker

In what turned out to be one of the tightest competitions of the season, the final decision in the weekly Batter Up! contest once again came down to the Game of the Week total runs tie-breaker.

Sanibel resident Don Trelease sneaked past fellow islanders Edna Cimini and Donna Satermus by guessing that the New York Mets and Montreal Expos would score a total of seven runs in Sunday's GOTW showdown. Cimini and Satermus both guessed the teams would score eight runs.

When the Mets edged the Expos, 2-1, on a 14th inning home run by Kevin McReynolds, the three total runs made Trelease the winner of the contest.

To gain the tie heading into the tie-breaker, Trelease, Cimini and Satermus all correctly guessed 10 winners in the 12 select major league games.

Finishing just out of the running was Dick Wedley, a weekly front-runner, who correctly picked nine winners. Three others — Ted Satermus, Peggy Wedley and Michelle Grouner — were also narrow misses with eight right picks each.

BATTER UP!

For the record, team winners for the week included Cincinnati, the Cubs, Los Angeles and San Francisco on Friday; Seattle, Baltimore, New York and Boston on Saturday; St. Louis, California, Kansas City and the Mets on Sunday.

For his efforts, Trelease wins free dinner for two at The Dunes, a co-sponsor of the contest.

With the baseball campaign heading into its final months and the National Football League season soon to begin, The Islander's weekly contest will eventually be changing. Keep those entries coming, more entrants always makes for a better contest.

Circle the team you think will win each game. For the game of the week, also include your guess of the total runs that will be scored in the contest.

If last week's column about tournament bridge has encouraged you to try that form of the game, you'd do well to read Edith McMullin's "Adventures in Duplicate Bridge," published by the American Contract Bridge League.

McMullin uses 50 oversized pages to tell you what to expect and how to do well in your first few tournaments. The style is simple and down-to-earth; the price, only $2.50, per copy. Available at ACBL, P.O. Box 161192, Memphis, Tenn., 38186.

Some of McMullin's comments on defensive bidding may explain the nature of West's bid in today's hand: "The overall promises a good five-card or longer suit (most novices forget the word 'good') with a range of 8 to about 15 points. Do not be afraid to overcall with full opening count. Get your shape in fast.

"Partner should respond just as if you have the opening count. If you are weak, his bid will continue the theft of their contract. If you are strong, you will make your bid. If you are very strong, you can bid on to game.

"A cousin of the overall is the Weak Jump Overcall. This bid shows a good six-card suit in a weak hand, about the 5 to 9 high-card points. It takes away their bidding space. If you are reserving this bid to show 19 points, you will rarely have a chance to use it."

Houston expert Ira Chorus, today's East, easily read the nature of the opening lead. West couldn't be leading from a suit headed by the king when East's bid of four diamonds had made it clear that a diamond opening lead would be safe. Chorus played his lowest spade.

East's play allowed South to win with the jack but gave South only three spade tricks. If East put up the queen of spades, South would win with the king and could later lead to the ace of spades and return the nine for a finesse through East's 10. South would thus win four spade tricks.

At the second trick, South led a low trump to finesse with dummy's nine. East won with the king and resisted the temptation to return his partner's lead.

The social bridge player knows only two excuses for failing to return partner's opening lead; not having any more cards of the suit, and sudden death. Tournament players are more flexible.

If East leads a spade at the third trick, West gains nothing since he ruffs the spade that South was going to lose. No matter how the defense continues, South can take two top clubs and ruff a club with dummy's low trump. He then leads dummy's queen of hearts to drive out the ace, after which he can draw East's last trump and take the rest with winners in the black suits.

Instead of blindly following an outmoded old "rule," Chorus took the trouble to work out South's hand. Most social bridge players don't take the trouble to think before they act.

West's bid promised six diamonds, and East could see the rest of the suit in dummy and his own hand. The opening lead made it clear that South had started with four spades. South needed five hearts for his opening bid and couldn't have six hearts since West would have bid differently with two singletons. South therefore had four clubs to fill out his hand.

After working out South's hand, Chorus saw a way to defeat the contract if West had as little as the 10 of clubs. Chorus therefore took his second high heart and led a third heart to remove all the dummy's trumps. Now South had to lose a club as well as a spade.

Sanibel congressman introduces fair elections bill

Porter Goss, a Sanibel resident who currently serves in the U.S. House of Representatives, last week introduced a bill calling for official and unofficial observer groups to witness the Nicaraguan elections in February 1990.

Goss, a Republican who represents the 13th Congressional District, travelled to Central America several weeks ago to assess the political climate of Nicaragua, Honduras and El Salvador. In Nicaragua, he heard first-hand about the authoritarian nature of the Sandinistas.

"The people in Nicaragua — campesinos, church leaders and opposition leaders — told me that there is no real freedom under the Sandinista regime," Goss said in a press release from his Washington office. He explained that Sandinistas maintain control over the media and determine which political parties can exist legally.

"The Sandinistas have complete control over the media," he continued. "They strictly limit radio and television time for all opposition parties to voice their opinions. The Sandinista government has also hindered the efforts of La Prensa, a newspaper critical of the regime, to obtain newspaper paper."

The congressman went on to say that the government is also "apparently withholding legal status from some opposition leaders" and has announced that it will deny visas to any observers it believes might "interfere" with the country's elections.

The Goss Amendment to the Foreign Assistance Act, which passed overwhelmingly in June, highlighted Congress' growing concern over the Nicaraguan elections.

Goss' bill urges the Department of State and the Agency for International Development (AID) to sponsor observer groups to witness, first-hand, the February national elections in Nicaragua. AID would provide funds for qualified independent observers and the state department would send official and congressional observers.

Grape growing is possible on sunny Sanibel

The old grape arbor was at least seven feet high, five feet wide and two hundred or more feet long. The grape vines were six inches in diameter and gnarled with age.

By early spring, the vines so completely covered the arbor that even rain couldn't penetrate the grape leaves.

GARDENING TIPS

By Faye Granberry

By late spring, when the muscadines, their thick skins turned bronze, ripened, my days under the arbor began. The bunch grapes ripened in the late spring and lasted well into the summer. Baskets and baskets would be filled with grapes for the making of wine, juice and jelly, or just simply for eating.

The muscadine grapes, as well as our bunch grapes, hung down in clusters on the underside of the arbor. They were there on display all summer long, just waiting to be picked.

My father had built benches under the arbor, but the best place to relax and dream was on the ground, which was covered with years of pine straw.

That was Louisiana in the '30s. It was only fitting when I arrived on Sanibel that I thought of grapes and a wish to recapture the past. I purchased grape vines from a plant market in Fort Myers, planted them and gave them plenty of TLC. After several months, they were alive but had not grown. As a result, I researched growing grapes in Florida, especially on Sanibel.

The muscadine grape is native to Florida and has been grown in the state for many years. It is a popular grape in that it is rarely seriously affected by insects, pests or disease. The muscadine, bronze or black in color when ripe in June or July, can be used for all purposes.

Bunch grapes, also grown for many years in Florida, were nearly wiped out by Pierce's Disease in the '40s.

The University of Florida Agricultural Research Center at Leesburg, still the center of grape research, started an active breeding program for bunch grapes.

To grow bunch grapes, the center suggests you do so on the cultivar of "Blue Lake," "Lake Emerald," "Dog Ridge" or the latest and now considered best, "Tampa."

Some bunch grapes do thrive, survive and produce without grafting or budding. But to insure best results on Sanibel, I would select a Pierce Disease (PD) resistant rootstock. "Tampa" also is noted for being resistant to downy and powdery mildew, drought and anthracnose. It may suffer from a leaf blight or grape leave folders, which can be controlled by proper spraying.

Strict attention must be given to soil requirements. I tested my own soil with a pH meter and found it to be very alkaline. A neutral soil is best. The Lee County Extension Service will test a half cup of your soil free of charge. The service can help you to adjust the soil pH, or you can follow the directions below for planting.

My best recommendation for planting is to dig a hole 2½ feet across, two or more feet deep. Create a paper container by taping several sections of newspaper together for the sides of the hole, then place several striped layers of paper on the bottom. Fill the hole with a mixture of cow manure, peat humus and good

Ecology of lighthouse beach examined by ECC summer campers

By Steve Ruediger
Islander staff writer

"We get to use the same equipment the college kids use and that makes us feel good," said 9½-year-old Becky Oleniczak as she and about 25 other children examined fish netted Thursday morning at Lighthouse Point as part of Edison Community College's ecology summer camp.

The program is funded by the Florida Department of Education and is concentrating on water pollution this year. Children must be recommended by their teachers to get into the 15-day program. The current group ranges from third grade students to high school seniors.

This is the second year of the program, which has two sessions each summer.

At Lighthouse Point, the students used a seine net to capture a cross section of marine life. They will compare their findings with a cross section of the marine life caught previously on the bay side of the Sanibel Causeway.

Most of the fish were thrown back, but a few smaller fish were kept for a demonstration tank at ECC.

Another project at the point consisted of digging a hole every three feet from the top of the beach to the water and examining the different organisms found living at different levels of the sand.

The primary part of the study summer camp was not held on Sanibel. It consists of a chemical and biological comparison of the water and animals in two Collier County bodies of water: the relatively unpolluted Rookery Bay and Naples Bay.

Biology teacher Linda Weinland said the students spent two days at each bay and will learn to test the water samples they took and do a computer analysis of the results.

She said the visit to Rookery Bay was done in cooperation with the National Estuarine Research Reserve and that Naples Bay was selected for comparison because of the mangroves having been removed and the heavier boat traffic.

Oleniczak said Rookery Bay had more animals and was more peaceful while "the water in Naples Bay had garbage, cups, old wrappers and all kinds of things boat people throw overboard."

She said she had learned how to test the water for oxygen and for sulfites.

Her brother, Joey, who is eight and also in the program, said he had learned to test for plankton.

Joey said he did not know yet what he wants to be when he grew up. Becky said she would like to be an astrophysicist.

Dr. Joe Hart, a biologist involved in the program, said ECC hopes in future years to also use the summer camp as a teacher training institute to help improve teaching techniques.

Other teachers helping the students at Lighthouse Point Thursday included Dr. Jamie Scott, a chemist, and Dr. Richard Felden, a computer expert.

The program for this year ends Wednesday, Aug. 9.

Second annual cleanup planned

The second annual Lend A Hand In The Sand beach cleanup is scheduled for Saturday, Sept. 23.

Those wishing to volunteer for the cleanup effort should call the Care and Rehabilitation of Wildlife facility at 472-3644, and should be on hand at Sanibel Elementary School at 8 a.m. on Sept. 23 for the program.

The cleanup stretches from the Sanibel lighthouse all the way to the northern end of Cayo Costa. It is part of a national project to determine types and sources of beach litter. Last year's information was used in testimony supporting tighter regulations on disposal of items at sea.

Among local organizations who are sponsoring and supporting the cleanup are: Care and Rehabilitation of Wildlife, Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation, the city of Sanibel, J.N. "Ding" Darling National Wildlife Refuge, Caretta Research, Captiva Civic Association, Safety Harbor (Upper Captiva Volunteer Fire Department) and the Cayo Costa state park.

Commercial contributors will include American Metal Recycling (Jerry Collins), BFI Waste Disposal and Expert Services.

Last year, over 150 people participated and picked up over two tons of trash.

People who participate should bring hats, gloves, sunscreen, a cool drink and a chip board. The project should be finished by 11 a.m.

Florida cabinet meets today on TEDs issue

An emergency rule which would require Florida shrimpers to immediately begin using turtle excluder devices (TED) is to be considered today by Gov. Bob Martinez and the Florida Cabinet.

The emergency rule was approved unanimously Friday by the Florida Marine Fisheries Commission. A permanent rule had been approved Thursday by the commission but it was doubtful when the permanent rule could go into effect because of legal challenges by shrimpers.

A court ruling is also expected this week requiring the federal government to enforce its regulations requiring TED usage.

TEDs are designed to eject sea turtles from shrimp nets. Various sea turtles in the Gulf of Mexico are endangered, particularly the small Kemp's Ridley.

Earlier this year, while fleets of shrimp boats trawled offshore, large numbers of dead sea turtles washed

August is a prime beach fishing month

We are in a prime beach snook period and this week I want to cover a couple of ways to approach this type of fishing.

The hotter it gets in August the better the snook fishing. This is strictly catch-and-release fishing because snook are out of season until Sept. 1.

In the meantime, the fish are along most of our island beaches. This is the first year that the waters along North Captiva have been clear enough to allow me to see the snook cruising the shore. I managed to recently hook three in an hour on a fly rod, which is quite a thrill.

Most fishermen, though, will be using spinning tackle or plug casting outfits. Because the waters along the beaches are cloudy, you will be doing a lot of blind casting.

I like to walk a couple of miles on the beach each morning at dawn, casting every few steps. If you are lucky enough to catch an incoming tide and there are shiners popping the surface, then you can just about expect some action because snook, sea trout,

ON THE WATER

By Capt. Mike Fuery

jack or ladyfish are likely to be working the school.

While my favorite casting lure in the cooler months is the Rat-L-Trap 25, it doesn't seem to produce as well in the hot times.

What seems to be as good as any in the surf is the half ounce white bucktail jig. My beach fishing partner is John Forester and he has had the same white jig since 1976. The snook he caught one day last week just about all the hair off it, but he still got a nice sea trout on the stubble.

I fished next to John with a yellow hair jig and managed only a trout. The snook seem to prefer the white jigs, probably because it imitates the silvery shiners in the surf.

Incidentally, beach snook often cruise only a few feet offshore and it's not uncommon to get strikes six to 10 feet from the beach. So, casting parallel to the beach can be very productive.

You can use live shiners along the beach too. You'll have to bring along a cast net and hope you find the bait fish close to shore. If you have youngsters along, this might be the best way to go. Sea trout are also plentiful and will gobble up freshly caught shiners.

One of the better places for casting or live baiting snook is on the western end of Bowman's Beach, on Sanibel. You can park at the public beach for a couple of dollars, then walk west, casting.

Snook seem to read the papers and know when the season is open and, as we near September, they tend to start leaving the beach areas. These next few weeks may be our best chance to get a strike or two. Good luck!

potting soil. To this add three pounds of dolomitic limestone, plus ¼ pound of steamed bonemeal. Then follow the grape guides FC-16A, FC-17A, Circular (S) 295, 300, 301 and 302. These can be obtained, free, from the County Extension Service in Fort Myers.

While at the center, visit the display gardens and grape arbor. Free grape pruning classes are conducted during January and February. Ask for a list of nurseries that carry the recommended grape stock.

I have discussed the topic with local grape growers, IFAS, various experts in the field and the Extension Service and will be conducting a grape series on the Master Gardener TV Show, Friday, 6:50 a.m., on WINK-TV, through Aug. 18.

If you love grapes but want to take the easy way out, call Joe Harris in Buckingham at 694-8040 and make arrangements to pick your own from his "U-pick" arbor.

A Few Faye Tips: Create your own spray for houseplants: To one cup of water, add one cup of liquid dishwashing soap and 1/16 teaspoon fertilizer like 20-20-20. Spray it on the plants to kill insects, as food and not pollute the air. For added protection, spray a mixture of ½ alcohol and ½ water around the plants, but not on them. Also, keep all pieces of broken concrete. Place them in the garden area near alkaline-loving plants.

Sponges do grow around Sanibel and Captiva

Sanibel and Captiva islands were never known for the sponges that wash up on the beach, but we have three kinds that summer storms do deposit with regularity.

A couple look anything like what we normally think of as a true, "Tarpon Springs" sponge. The third looks like someone spray painted a tree branch red.

The real sponges, brought up by divers, nearly became extinct, even in the highly productive Tarpon Springs area just north of St. Petersburg. A combination of things, including over-harvesting, brought an end to that industry.

As a boy living in St. Pete, I would take Sunday rides to Tarpon Springs, but by then, the collection of sponges by divers was purely an act to amuse, or perhaps fool, tourists.

I've never seen the special sponges off our shores, but maybe they died out before I got to know the area. These are the puffy, water absorbing sponges

SHELLING TIPS

By Capt. Mike Fuery

we seek out for car washing. They are special for washing delicate items.

Here in Southwest Florida, we have three other kinds of sponges. The sulphur sponge looks like a yellow blob with no discernible head or body. You'll find fishermen often snagging these while fishing in the grass beds of Pine Island Sound.

The white sponge is another which looks very odd and is of no value to shell collectors. Sponges are animals, and what we see washed on the beaches are the remains after they have been dislodged by something.

Probably the sponge most commonly found around here is the dead man's fingers. It's bright red with a base stalk and tree-like branches coming out. In under sea life, all divers know to avoid anything colored red, but I've never had any problems with the "fingers."

Many collectors like to pick up a fresh one and let it dry, then add it to a shell arrangement. It will take a good week for it to dry and I don't believe you need to treat it with anything. Some of the intense red color will fade, but the odd-looking animal is worth the effort.

Good shelling this week. Look on the high shell line for the sponges.

Capt. Mike Fuery has been showing residents and visitors alike the ins and outs of shelling around the islands since 1976. For charter information, call 472-3459.

From alligators to island attractions, here's everything the visitor needs to know

Alligators

Feeding alligators anywhere is not only ILLEGAL, it also is extremely DANGEROUS. An alligator that is accustomed to being fed will become a dangerous animal if left unattended for a period of time. Animals that are artificially fed are less likely to become problems. A "name" alligator becomes bold, he loses his fear of man. Then he has difficulty distinguishing between a fish and the hand that feeds it.

Because of the alligator population here, dogs should never be allowed to run on the islands. Fence your dog or walk him on a leash. NEVER tie your dog in an unfenced back yard.

For help with a nuisance alligator, call the Sanibel Police Department, 472-3111. The dispatcher will contact the state.

up on Sanibel and Captiva beaches.

A group called Concerned Shrimpers of America has fought all efforts to have TEDs required in shrimp nets and is expected to bring challenges in court on any federal or state decisions.

Those shrimpers have called TEDs expensive and have said up to 50 percent of the catch is lost.

Conservation groups have responded by pointing out that TEDs cost from $25 to $450 and that shrimpers instructed in the use of TEDs have lost less than 2 percent of their catch. The shrimpers who lost 50 percent of their catch never took advantage of the free instruction available on how to use the TEDs, according to the conservation groups.

Federal enforcement of regulations requiring TEDs was supposed to go into effect on May 1. However, U.S. Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher has come up with a new delay in enforcement after each previous delay expired. The Coast Guard comes under the Commerce Department and it is the Coast Guard which would enforce the federal law.

Conservation groups have blamed the influence of Senator Howell Heflin of Alabama for Mosbacher's failure to enforce the law.

Mosbacher has also been accused of giving in to shrimper's threats of violence.

The National Audubon Society has said that about 12,000 sea turtles a year drown in shrimper's nets.

The TEDs might also help reduce the finfish bycatch of shrimpers. About 1.35 billion pounds of dead or dying fish are discarded in the Gulf of Mexico each year after being caught in shrimp nets.

The combined negative effects of shrimping on both sea turtles and fish has resulted in some conservationists calling for a complete ban on shrimping. They point out that shrimp can be raised on aquaculture farms without harming fish or sea turtles. Shrimp are currently being raised in that manner in Central America.

Federal laws were passed in December 1987 and September 1988. The 1988 law was the one which was to go into effect on May 1.

Goss to investigate Alaskan oil spill cleanup

U.S. Rep. Porter Goss (R-Sanibel) will travel to Alaska next week with other members of the merchant marine and fisheries committees to investigate the cleanup activities of the Exxon Valdez oil spill, view some Alaskan Coast Guard bases and consider the reauthorization of the Magnuson Fishery Conservation and Management Act.

Goss will depart on Monday and attend the first hearing for the reauthorization of the Magnuson Act in Seattle on Tuesday. The Magnuson Act establishes a 200 mile exclusive economic zone (EEZ) around the coastline of the U.S. The U.S. government has exclusive jurisdiction over the area and all the natural resources within it.

On Wednesday, Goss will tour the Prince William Sound area to view the site of the Exxon Valdez accident and the cleanup activities. Wednesday evening, he will attend a town meeting in the community of Cordova.

On Thursday, the subcommittee on Coast Guard and Navigation will hold hearings on the oversight of the oil spill cleanup procedures in Prince William Sound. Goss will continue the Magnuson Act hearings in Anchorage on Friday and attend a dinner with the mayor of Anchorage.

On Saturday and Sunday, Goss will tour Coast Guard bases in Kodiak and Ketchikan. The representative will also tour the Kodiak Wildlife Refuge on Saturday.

Goss will return to Washington on Sunday.
