Islanders mourn loss of Elnora Gavin

By Louise Henigman
Islander staff writer

Elnora Matilda Walker Gavin, beloved matriarch of one of the island's oldest and biggest families, died of cancer Jan. 6 at Lee Memorial Hospital. She was 69.

Her deep devotion to family and the Lord, her unlimited supply of love and patience and the smile she always wore made her a role model for friends and family alike.

"She loved kids. She loved people in general. Her whole life centered around family," said son Charles Gavin, one of 20 children Elnora Gavin bore, 18 of whom are still living. "I'll always remember the smile she constantly wore on her face. I'm happy for her that she doesn't have to suffer anymore."

For as long as Charles and his siblings can remember, their mother was always there to patiently listen and offer advice. Friends say the same.

"She had a good way of giving advice and showing concern. She never spoke that she had all the answers, but whatever she could do, she was able and willing to listen," said Mozella Jordan, who is a niece by marriage. "She always let you know she loved you, no matter what. She was a model to me. I can only say I hope my light shines before men like hers did."

Campbell predicts DNR will rule in favor of Captiva in Sanibel erosion dispute

By Steve Ruediger
Islander staff writer

"I feel they will find the groin extension is not impacting the beaches of northern Sanibel," said Captiva Erosion Prevention District consulting engineer Tom Campbell Wednesday, Jan. 9 on his expectations of how the Florida Department of Natural Resources officials will rule regarding northern Sanibel erosion.

Campbell met with those officials on Jan. 2 in Tallahassee to discuss the report sent to them by Coastal Engineering Consultants, the city of Sanibel's erosion consultant.

That report alleged the groin extension built by the CEPD at the south end of Captiva in 1988 was the cause of erosion on northern Sanibel. It recommended the CEPD be required to remove that groin and also urged sand maintenance by the CEPD on northern Sanibel.

The CEPD hopes to use an inlet management study to determine the causes of erosion on northern Sanibel. (Please see related article.)

The original permit for construction of the groin stated that if the groin caused erosion on northern Sanibel, the CEPD might have to remove the groin extension or mitigate the erosion. The permit made the DNR the judge of whether any erosion was caused by the groin or by some other source.

The DNR told Campbell an opinion would be reached sometime in February regarding the information submitted by the Sanibel and CEPD consultants.

Campbell reported Wednesday to the CEPD that he met with Al Devereaux, chief engineer, Bureau of Coastal Engineering and Regulation; Kirby Green, director,

Islanders pessimistic about Middle East peace,

By Louise Henigman
Islander Staff Writer

Many islanders were pessimistic about peace in the Persian Gulf as the United Nations' Jan. 15 deadline approached.

"Any chance for peace lies in Saddam Hussein's hands, and that is not a safe place for it to be," U.S. Rep. Porter Goss of Sanibel said Monday morning (Jan. 14). "I'm hopeful (for peace), but not optimistic."

Having spoken with President George Bush personally, Goss said he is "absolutely convinced" that the president is very serious about Hussein's total withdrawal of troops from Kuwait, and very serious about using force "if all other means are exhausted."

If force is needed, Goss said, he is also convinced that the American troops are ready.

Elnora Gavin enjoyed all the action in the pick-up softball game held during the Gavin family's reunion at the Rec Center in 1985.

All the following information was taken directly from Sanibel Police Department reports.

Wendolyn William Botham of Tallahassee was charged Sunday, Jan. 13 with going 62 mph on the Sanibel Causeway.

Michael Vincent Gagliardi of Fort Myers was charged Sunday with going 65 mph on Sanibel-Captiva Road.

A brown basset hound was found Saturday, Jan. 12 on Starling Way. Its owner picked it up later after paying the impound fee.

Rogelio P. Fajardo of Fort Myers was charged Sunday with driving on a suspended license after he was stopped on Periwinkle Way.

The Dunes Country Club turned off the speakers at an outdoor event Sunday just before 10 p.m. when they were informed by police of a noise complaint.

POLICE BEAT

Terri R. Stoecker of Northport, N.Y., was charged Saturday with going 58 mph on the Sanibel Causeway.

Michael Scott Gaffney of Sanibel was charged Sunday with driving under the influence, possession of marijuana, possession of drug paraphernalia, driving left of center and driving at 56 mph in a 35 mph zone. Gaffney had been followed by police from Periwinkle Way and Causeway Road onto the first causeway island. A plastic bag containing marijuana was found under the driver's seat of his car and a pipe was found in the seat.

A resident reported Saturday that people fishing at the Tarpon Bay beach access were digging a hole to bury shark parts. Police told them not to do that and they said they would take the shark parts with them.

David D. Haddad of Fort Myers was charged Saturday on Periwinkle Way with driving on a suspended license and having an expired tag.

Thomas Joe Williams of Fort Myers was charged Saturday with speeding (59 mph) on the Sanibel Causeway.

Craig Kenneth Skinner, who works on Sanibel, was arrested Saturday on warrants for violation of probation and for issuing a worthless check. He also was charged with driving on an expired license. Officer Dennis Benjamin said he stopped him because he knew he was wanted on the warrants.

A pocket knife was lost Saturday on Sanibel-Captiva Road.

Constance Marye Novack, from St. Louis but staying on Sanibel, was charged with driving under the influence and with careless driving Friday, Jan. 11. Officer

Traucht takes temporary postal post on Pine Island

By Louise Henigman
Islander staff writer

Sanibel's assistant postmaster has gone island hopping for a few months to help St. James City out of a postal predicament.

Thom Traucht has temporarily taken over the position of postmaster for St. James City on Pine Island. In turn, that city's postmaster is helping fill a vacant position at the Fort Myers post office. Once the Fort Myers position is permanently filled, everything will get back to normal. But that will take at least two months, maybe longer, Traucht was told.

In the meantime, Postal Clerk Jennifer Dance will be filling in for Traucht, just as she does when he's on vacation, Traucht said.

The St. James City Post Office is smaller than Sanibel's, he said, with 11 employees as compared to the 30 here.

"It'll be like a vacation," said Traucht, who has been working for the Sanibel Post Office since 1975. Monday, Jan. 14, was his first day on the job in St. James City.

The temporary post will also be good training, Traucht admitted.

"If you want to be a postmaster, you have to be officer-in-charge a few times, to get your feet wet," he said.

The St. James City post office is a 47-mile drive from the Sanibel Post Office, and 36 miles from Traucht's home in Iona.

"I'm thinking about buying a small fishing boat to get over there," Traucht said. "It'll be a lot quicker."

Chamber begins work on annual auction

Exquisite jewelry, art, fashion wardrobes, automobiles, boats, fishing and boating trips, dinner parties and golf and tennis weekends are among the many items already lined up to be auctioned off during the Sanibel-Captiva Chamber of Commerce's third annual reception, dinner and auction to be held on Saturday, March 23 at South Seas Plantation.

The gala evening will begin at 5:30 p.m. with cocktails, hors d'oeuvres and a silent auction. A four-course dinner will be served at 7:30 p.m. with door prize drawings. The live auction, with world renowned auctioneer-entertainer

Marty Higgenbotham, will begin at 9 p.m. An open bar will be featured throughout the evening.

Seating for this special chamber affair is limited to 300 and a contribution of $50 per person is requested. In addition, company tables for 10 are available.

Proceeds from the auction will be used to reduce the Chamber Building Fund.

According to Ken Meeker, executive director for the chamber, donations for the auction are still being accepted. For additional information or to make a donation, call the chamber at 472-1080 or 472-3232.

"I said to her one time years ago that if anybody was going to heaven, she'd make it there. She was a good, wholesome, clean, caring person."

Education, both in school and church, were her primary concerns for her children.

"She was very determined to see that her children got an education," recalled island historian and friend Elinore Dornier.

Youngest daughter Donna Gavin agrees.

"She was pretty strict with discipline. She made sure I went to school and went to church," Donna said. "She was a loving person."

Born to Harry and Pearl Alice Walker on Nov. 21, 1921 in McIntosh, Ga., Mrs. Gavin moved to Sanibel with her family in 1926. That was five years after the arrival of her future husband, Edmond Gavin, and his parents, Hannah and Isaiah, who established the first black family on Sanibel.

Elnora and Edmond Gavin were married in 1935, and except for a short time when they lived in Fort Myers, the pair made the island their home.

"Their goal was to have 20 children. That's the way I remember it," Charles said, adding with a laugh, "My dad might tell you different."

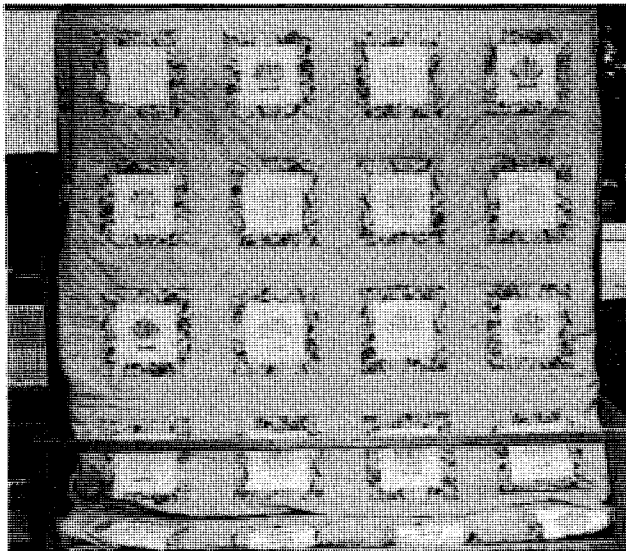

Six of the children were born on Sanibel, and many of the Gavin children still call the island home.

The couple celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary in April 1985. They renewed their wedding vows that year during their third annual family reunion.

"The Lord really blessed this family and gave it a lot of grace and strength," Charles said. "We weren't rich, but we were rich in spirit. That's all we needed."

Mrs. Gavin's funeral was held last Saturday, Jan. 12, at the McGregor Boulevard Church of Christ. It was followed by interment at Lee Memorial Park.

She is survived by her husband, Edmond Sr., and their 18 children, ages ranging from 24 to 54: Pearl Altamese Woods, Elvera Mae Robinson, Edmund Gavin Jr., Kenneth Morris Gavin, Eugene Emmanuel Gavin, Charlotta Valine Ashworth, Idella Elaine Gavin, Isaiah Sherwin Gavin, Lynn Leroy Gavin, Oscar Lee Gavin, Larry Edward Gavin, Charles Vincent Gavin, Ronald Keith Gavin, Stanley Darryl Gavin, Isabelle Delores Davis, Donna Felecia Gavin, Kevin Antoine Gavin and Eric Dwayne Gavin; three sisters; two brothers; 50 grandchildren; 21 great-grandchildren; and one great-great-grandchild.

The fifth graders' quilt.

Students finish quilt

The king-size quilt now being raffled by the fifth graders of Sanibel Elementary will warm the nights of one lucky islander while allowing the students who sewed it the opportunity to spend a few nights away on educational camping trips.

Fifth grade students, teachers and parents hand-stenciled and sewed the quilt, which is being raffled to raise money for a special overnight program at the Museum of Science and Industry in Tampa and for the annual fifth grade camping trip to Cayo Costa.

In Tampa, the students will experience hurricane simulation, study the stars and chemical reactions, and participate in a scavenger hunt involving the museum exhibits.

The Cayo Costa camping trip culminates the student's year-long work as Junior Naturalists and their study of shells.

Raffle tickets, which are being sold for $1 each, can be purchased at Three Crafty Ladies and the Community Bank of the Islands, or by contacting your favorite fifth grader. Tickets will also be sold in front of Bailey's General Store and at the C&S Bank on Captiva.

The drawing will be March 11.

The quilt will be on display at the Sanibel Library till Feb. 15, and from Feb. 15 till the drawing at the Community Bank of the Islands.

SCUBA SCOOP

By Trina • Pieces of Eight Dive Center

Diving conditions this week have been excellent earlier in the week, and then deteriorated over the weekend with the high winds. The water temperatures are still holding nicely and we've had a lot of sightings of big fish. We've had reports of amberjack up to 5 feet long and probably 80-100 pounds.

Amberjack are a pelagic fish that are found in schools, usually around wrecks and blue holes in this area. They prefer structure, but will also be found around the ledges, especially in the wintertime. They are very interesting to dive with because they are easily approached. A school of small, 3-12 pounders, seems to frequent the jewfish point dive site and will often circle the divers. When there are a lot of fish in the circling school it can feel like being in the middle of a whirlpool and can cause you to become dizzy. Sometimes you can just reach out and poke them out of your way. They seem to be curious about what divers are doing, and may mistake a diver's bubbles for the schools of baitfish that would be their main source of food.

For hunters, amberjack are an exciting game fish. You have to be careful because they will circle you and can wind a diver up in the line very quickly. Be sure to have a good knife and a good buddy close by.

Surface temperature: 69 degrees
Bottom temperature: 69 degrees in 55 feet of water.

Visibility: 30-50 feet at 55-foot depths.

The wind should have stirred things up as far as snorkeling, but there'll be a lot of new shells turned up once it calms down again.

Traffic flow on the island has been helped considerably by the installation of four-way stop signs at the intersection of Periwinkle Way and Lindgren Boulevard. Councilman Francis Bailey suggested the signs as an emergency proposal at the Dec. 29 council meeting.

Mel Kern, owner of F&B Oyster House restaurant, proposed to the City Council last week that Sanibel should host a marathon. The 26-mile race would draw thousands to the islands, Kern said, and would generate national publicity that would give prestige to the island.

Six sites have been recommended for examination by city staff as possible locations for a new Sanibel City Hall.

Five Years Ago This Week Jan. 14, 1986

Aaron Ritvo, president of BIG Arts, asked the City Council about using the open space adjacent to City Hall for a permanent multipurpose auditorium to showcase live theater and musical and dance productions. Ritvo said negotiations had fallen through with Sanibel Community Association to modify the SCA facility. Mayor Louise Johnson suggested that Councilman Fred Valtin head an informal committee to first iron out problems with SCA.

Four of the old-style wood cottages from Hurricane House will be moved and converted for use in the island's first Below Market Rate Housing project being developed on Beach Road by Warren Stringer. Hurricane House, now owned by Mariner Properties, was operated since 1898 as a family-style motel. Two eight-unit condominiums will replace the cottage complex.

1 Year Ago This Week Jan. 16, 1990

Executive Director Dr. Mark Elie, the veterinarian at Care and Rehabilitation of Wildlife, and Anita Pinder, board member and office manager, have separately announced their resignations from the organization.

Sanibel's ad hoc bridge committee voted to recommend to the City Council that it work to see that Lee County immediately implements a repair and maintenance schedule of the present bridge and causeway structures, and begins the design phase for replacement of the entire causeway. The majority's resolution also urged that maximum federal funding be obtained so that tolls would be increased at little as possible.

City planners welcomed the proposed commercial development on Tarpon Bay Road, which will be anchored by The Timbers Restaurant, partially because it will provide the city with near-perfect emergency refuge space - above the flood level, and with plenty of water and food.

'Cat got your tongue?'

My 11-year-old cat decided to speak to me after all these years. I was astonished, of course, as you would be, too, if real words came out of your own cat's mouth instead of "meow."

My wife had taken her car to Periwinkle Way to go shopping and I was alone in the house. It was around 3 p.m. on a Saturday afternoon. I had just settled into my favorite chaise lounge facing the gulf, and was about to plunge into a Tom Clancy techno-thriller when Tiger (our cat) entered the living room.

He did a long, low stretch, as cats do right after a fitful nap, gave a deep yawn and slowly walked toward me. He paused right in front of me, and as was his longtime custom, appeared to set himself for some solid stroking and petting. Absentmindedly, my left arm started downward while my right held the paperback.

"Hold it right there, Art," came this voice from somewhere nearby. I looked down and saw Tiger grinning at me.

"Yes, it's me." Then noticing my jaw dropping to the floor, Tiger said, "What's the matter, cat got your tongue?" Whereupon he started to giggle and turned several somersaults.

"Is that you, Tiger?" I blurted out.

"Who did you think it was, Chris Strine, your Islander editor?" More giggles and somersaults. Suddenly he sat up straight and became all serious.

"Listen, Art. I decided to talk to you today because we've got to change our relationship. It's not working."

"What do you mean it's not working," I stammered.

"First of all, I don't like the name Tiger. Why did you ever give it to me?"

"Well, you're an orange tabby cat with a white chest and a white nose. We thought it would be cute for a cat with your color to be named Tiger," I said.

SHELL SHOCKED

By Art Stevens

Tiger was practically hissing, but he still stayed put at my feet, staring up at me.

"Cute, cute. That's all you ever thought of me. Cute. Don't you think I have feelings too?"

"Well, yes, but ..."

"Yes, but nothing," Tiger said. "There have to be some changes around here if you want me to be a card carrying pet. First of all, my new name from now on is Bob."

"Bob?"

"Yes, Bob," he repeated. "We cats feel that since we live with humans, we want to be treated like humans. Would you name your own child Tiger?"

I thought about it a moment. "No, I guess not."

"And another thing," Tiger -- or Bob -- continued. "Why do you put me in that God awful carrying case when we go somewhere in the car?"

I had him here. "Because you're always throwing up. You and cars don't seem to get along."

He was stumped on that one.

"Well, why do you always put me in another room at night? Why can't I stay with you?"

I was ready for that one too. "Because you always nibble on our arms at 2 a.m. when you decide you're hungry. We don't like clockwork every night."

Tiger started pacing. His voice was heating up. "Well if you fed me more at dinner, I wouldn't have to wake you up at night."

"My dear Tiger ..."

"Bob."

"Yes, Bob. If we fed you as much as you always like to eat, you'd be an overweight, obese cat. In fact, you'd look like a bob-cat. Get it? Bob-cat." Whereupon I started to giggle myself, tried a somersault or two, strained my back and got back in my chair.

"That's not very funny," Tiger said.

"You mean you decided to talk after 11 years just to bicker with me?" I asked exasperatedly.

"No, that's not the real reason," Tiger said.

"Then what is?"

There was a long pause. Tiger looked up at me with those great big cat eyes.

"To tell you that I love you."

Tears welled up in my eyes. "I love you, too."

Tiger jumped up into my lap and started to lick my face. And there we were unashamedly hugging each other when my wife walked in with her groceries.

I looked up at her. "Bob and I were just having a little conversation."

"Bob?" she asked with raised eyebrows.

I looked at Tiger. "Tell her, Bob."

Nothing. Silence. Tiger was purring in my lap and closed his eyes.

"Bob?" my wife asked again, breaking the silence.

"Who's Bob?"

Tiger was fast asleep. I sighed deeply.

"Never mind, dear. Could you make me a double vodka martini on the rocks when you've put the groceries away?"

Letters

A monument to human insensitivity

To the Editor
The Islander

(Editor's note: The following was addressed as an "Open letter to the person who dumped a couch on Caloosa Drive.")

You had an old couch you no longer wanted -- an old, black, vinyl couch. It is ripped and the stuffing is falling out. It is ugly, I agree. I have had to look at it all week as I drive to and from my home. I have spent a lot of time thinking about you. I wonder if you explored any other options. I have, because I have now assumed your responsibility. I am working on getting your couch hauled away.

I spoke with the Sanibel police. I was told there was nothing they could do about it. Even if I had seen you, it would be my word against yours. So you got away with it.

Next I called BFI Waste Systems. You will be happy to know that your couch will be picked up Tuesday (today, Jan. 15), free of charge. The BFI Service Department was very helpful.

It is particularly painful to me that you dumped your trash on the edge of the "Ding" Darling Wildlife Refuge, a place dedicated to preserving our environment for you. Your eyesore of a couch, with your old sock strewn across one arm, is a monument to human insensitivity. It's suitable company for the empty soda and beer cans that others have thrown along the sides of the road in the refuge. It overwhelms and amazes me that this has happened at all. I wonder who you are that you could do such a thing. Is it out of sight and out of mind? How many of you are there? How many of you throw your trash from your car? How many of you throw your cigarette butts on the ground? How many of you hide your shame in anonymity?

When will you stop relying on others to assume your responsibility? It is going to take all of us, every last man, woman and child, if this planet is going to survive human occupation. We need your help.

New Year's wishes for special places

To the Editor
The Islander

Given the rapid population increase in Lee County, and the private property rights guaranteed by our constitution, development and the destruction of things we love are inevitable, although there are perhaps some economic gains for us. Yet all over Lee County, residents in general, and local residents in particular, are currently trying to preserve a few of the places that they consider to be important for their, and our, quality of life. It is not an easy task. Local government finds it difficult to say "no" to the continual requests for destruction of "just one more little piece," even though we all know that each small act of destruction makes it easier to destroy the rest.

Six Mile Cypress Slough.

Much of this was put in public ownership years ago by the efforts of children and the generosity of their parents and other adults. It functions not only as a water purifier and aquifer recharge area, but also as a place where one can go to enjoy the solitude of a swamp, or marvel at its intricate ecology. In December 1989, our County Commissioners promised that Penzance Road would be the last road crossing to fractionate and destroy this slough. In December 1990, the Lee County DOT&E considered another major crossing of the slough.

Buckingham

The residents of Buckingham are asking Lee County to let them remain a truly rural enclave -- a place where future generations may see cows and horses in green meadows, smell manure and sweet hay, hear mockingbirds and meadowlarks. But at the same time, non-resident land owners are asking to change Buckingham into yet another suburbia.

Estero Bay

Years ago the people of Lee County fought to preserve the beauty of Estero Bay, which depends primarily on its aquatic life. The result of their labors was the creation of Florida's system of aquatic preserves, with Estero Bay becoming the first such preserve. Since then, growing Lee County, residential, commercial and industrial, has dumped much of its waters and runoff into the bay's tributaries, or directly into the bay itself. Now the people with the most to gain from a healthy bay, the residents of Fort Myers Beach, through part of their "beach plan," are asking Lee County to stop the slow death of the bay and give it a chance to rejuvenate, while there is still hope for it.

Pineland

Tiny Pineland (only about one square mile in area) is the last coastal enclave of "old Florida" in Lee County. It is rich in recent, Caucasian history, as well as in thousands of years of Caloosa and other Indian history. It enjoys a spectacular view across Pine Island Sound, and still hosts abundant bird life, although nothing compared to its past. Like Buckingham, it is a place of beauty, peace and quiet. But Lee County wants to destroy acres of its mangrove fringe (healthy mangroves replanted as mitigation for past sins, at that) and send hundreds of boats per day down its narrow winding roads and out into the shallow grass beds (the life blood of the sound), which are already cut to ribbons by prop-dredging.

Our wish for the New Year is that each one of these special places may somehow hold onto its ambience through the coming year, and perhaps, man and nature willing, even gain a little better chance of continuing, in the years ahead, to contribute to that indefinable thing we call quality of life.

Keep those great issues coming

To the Editor
The Islander

When I packed my briefcase for a trip to Sanibel two weeks ago, I included my renewal notice with the intention of stopping by your office, paying up and telling you all how much I enjoy your newspaper.

Of course, I was planning to do it on a chilly, cloudy or rainy day.

The good news is our weather was great. The bad news is that the first cloudy, chilly day I've experienced in two weeks is back in Chicago where the temperature in the shade is about 12 degrees.

I've enclosed my renewal check. Keep those great issues coming. They keep my in touch with my favorite place to be.

CEPD inlet management funding perspective changes

By Steve Ruediger
Islander staff writer

The Captiva Erosion Prevention District learned last week that it cannot get the amount of money it thought it could from the West Coast Inland Navigation District (WCIND) for an inlet management study of Blind Pass. In addition, the CEPD also cannot get the available funds until later than it planned.

It was also learned last week that Lee County staff will propose to the Lee County Commission a plan for inlet management studies of Blind Pass, Redfish Pass, Big Hickory Pass and New Pass.

The CEPD board views an inlet management study of Blind Pass, with participation from the city of Sanibel and Lee County, as a way to determine the cause of erosion on northern Sanibel. It is hoped the study might also suggest solutions that all three government bodies would approve. It is estimated that such a study would cost $150,000.

At first the CEPD sought funding for the study from the Department of Natural Resources, which would provide 75 percent of the funds needed. The study has been approved by the DNR and by the governor and cabinet. An inlet management study proposal for Redfish Pass has also been approved by the state. However, funding approval would have to come from the legislature and the CEPD board members don't expect consideration of it by the legislature until this June.

Last fall, CEPD consulting engineer Tom Campbell told the board that WCIND provided 100 percent funding for inlet management studies. The funds would need to be requested through the county government. So, the CEPD asked the county to pass a resolution asking WCIND for the money.

The CEPD was figuring it could get the money quicker from WCIND than from the state and when the state finally came through with the 75 percent, that would reimburse WCIND with money that could then be used by the county on other inlet studies.

Lee County Director of Marine Sciences Chuck Listowski told the CEPD he would need a letter from the DNR saying the state would reimburse 75 percent before the county would request WCIND funding.

By last Wednesday's CEPD meeting things had become rather confusing. It had turned out the resolution the board thought the county had passed had not been passed ("The county misplaced the resolution and never acted on it," according to CEPD Chairman Stephen Cutler); Listowski was saying WCIND only provides 25 percent of the money and not 100 percent (the CEPD didn't believe him); and board members and the CEPD staff read a newspaper article listing $427,000 in county navigation projects (including $25,000 for Sanibel's marine enforcement program) and thought the county had left their inlet management proposal out because it was not listed.

The CEPD board, assuming it was being undermined at the staff level at the county, decided Wednesday to intensively lobby the Lee County Commissioners to make sure Listowski would include Blind Pass in his proposed projects. The board members understood Listowski was making a presentation to the commission this Wednesday, Jan. 16, and they plan to be there.

Phone calls Thursday determined that Listowski is preparing a package that will propose inlet management studies of Blind Pass, Redfish Pass, Big Hickory Pass and New Pass. He has not disclosed details of the package and was not sure whether he would have the proposal ready for presentation to the county commission by this Wednesday. He said if he does not present it this week, he would definitely present it to the commission on Jan. 23.

Listowski's information that WCIND only funds 25 percent is correct. WCIND Executive Director Jim Armstrong told The Islander that not only does it limit its funding to 25 percent, but also it only reimburses after a project is completed. He said WCIND also will not provide funds in advance or as the project proceeds.

Zwick appointed to CEPD board

By Steve Ruediger
Islander staff writer

Jack Zwick, 53, was appointed to the board of the Captiva Erosion Prevention District last week to replace Dennis Parravano, who had resigned because he planned to move off of Captiva.

Zwick, who has been a permanent Captiva resident for 2

1/2 years, is an international financial consultant.

He was appointed to the CEPD post by outgoing Gov. Bob Martinez. The paperwork on the appointment had not been completed by last Wednesday's (Jan. 9) CEPD meeting. Zwick attended that meeting and took an active part in discussions by the board. However, he could not vote.

Zwick's wife is Anita Meinberg. The couple has two grown daughters and a son, Eric, who is in kindergarten at Sanibel Elementary School.

Zwick was born in southern Illinois. He received a doctorate from Harvard Business School and taught as a professor first at Harvard and then at Columbia business school.

A director of the Port Authority of New York from 1969 to 1973, one of Zwick's projects there was getting the World Trade Center construction started.

Zwick is still active as a financial consultant and travels extensively. He has offices on Captiva and in New York City.

Informed of Armstrong's comments Friday, Cutler said the WCIND had changed its policies and the CEPD had not learned of those changes.

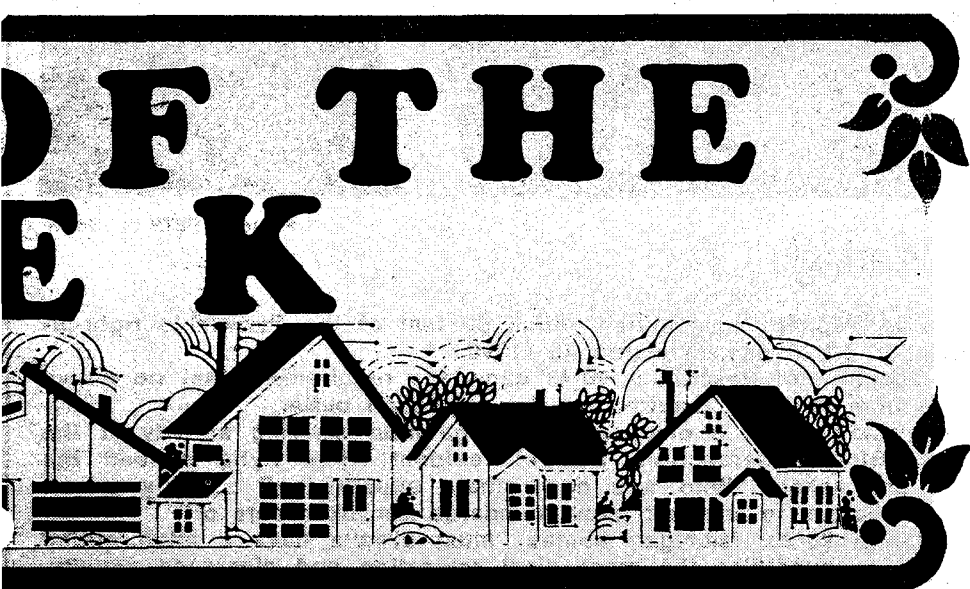

The WCIND director said the way the system is now set up, money is received elsewhere for a project and then the state reimburses 75 percent and WCIND reimburses 25 percent. So, although local funding is needed up front, in the end all funds are reimbursed.

The result of all this is that, in Cutler's words, "Our fallback is to our original plan." This will probably mean waiting for the state appropriation.

However, it is hoped the added 25 percent from WCIND will continue to be available so that, "If it goes well, the study can be done at no cost to the CEPD or to Sanibel," according to Cutler.

Re: Beachview clearing

"No clearing, except Brazilian Pepper, is permitted within 50 feet of the Periwinkle right-of-way," states Sanibel Resolution 90-20 passed March 13, 1990.

With the June 12, 1990 adoption of Resolution 90-43 came the requirement that no native vegetation shall be removed from the area required for the vegetation buffer.

After the Planning Commission's Jan. 8 discussion of vegetation clearing activity at the Periwinkle Way and Donax Street intersection, Sanibel resident Alice Kylo echoed the sentiments of many when she asked, "Who was down there supervising? ... Why wasn't somebody down there with a shotgun to see that those standards are taken care of?"

One answer is in Resolution 90-20: Michigan homes "must always have a city-certified vegetation contractor on site to supervise the mechanical relocation and clearance activity. A city vegetation inspector will monitor the activity."

The supervisor is Tree Tec Landscaping & Crane Service, and the monitor is a member of either the city's Vegetation Committee or staff.

Reed Homestead gives way to progress

By Frances Adams
Islander staff writer

Major structural changes are planned for the old Reed Homestead on Bay Drive -- a new house will be built, the existing third Reed house, built in 1910, will be demolished along with a storage shed, and the post office built in 1926 will be preserved.

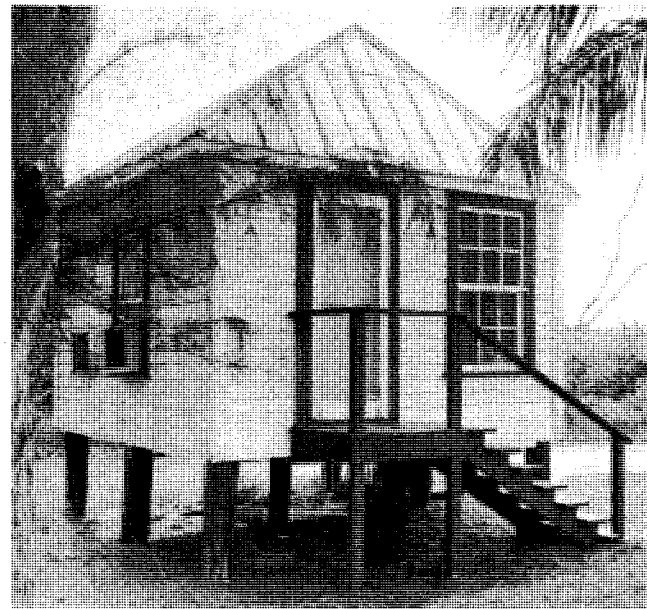

The Planning Commission bowed to the ravages of time visited upon the existing house -- dry rot, termites and "bastardized" architectural alterations -- and agreed with the recommendations of the building inspector and the Historical Preservation Committee that the old house can be demolished once the current owners' four-bedroom single-family home is built and legally habitable.

According to a memorandum from the Historical Preservation Committee, the house presently the home of Theodore and Amanda Cross actually is the third home of Sanibel pioneer William Sumner Reed, who came to Sanibel from Maine in 1888 with his father, Capt. William H. Reed, and sisters.

The first homestead of the Reed family was a small house at the back of the property. The second home was washed away in a hurricane and was replaced on the same site in 1910 by the existing home.

The neighboring two-story home of the captain, built in the 1890s, contained the post office and a small store. (William S. Reed was Sanibel's second postmaster, and served from 1895 to 1943.) The mail was delivered to the long dock in front of the two houses and the place was called Reed's Landing. The captain's two-story house was carried away by the 1926 hurricane, and later that year, lumber from it was pulled from the swamp to build the little post office now on the Cross property.

The Reed Post Office, built in 1926, is designated for preservation.

The third William S. Reed house, originally built in 1910 but altered and added to over the years, will probably fall to the bulldozer this year.

The Historical Preservation Committee recommended that, after a subsequently added bathroom is removed (which made it a guest house), the Reed Post Office and its location be declared a historic site and be preserved in its present condition in perpetuity.

While the new house is being built, the Historical Preservation Committee could seek to nominate the Reed Homestead, in addition to the post office, for placement on the local register. That process would take approximately six months. The building department and Historical Preservation Committee generally agreed that it was highly unlikely anyone would find any merit or value in restoring and preserving the Reed house. However, the Planning Commission concluded that there would be time enough to deal with any possible situation that might arise and cause two houses to exist on the 20-acre parcel where only one is allowed.

The commission recommended approval of a development permit to make the changes. The hearing will continue Jan. 22.

CITY BRIEFS

In other business at the Jan. 8 Planning Commission meeting:

- The commission unanimously passed a resolution denying Harriet "Hap" Connelly's request for a variance to code flood and storm-proofing standards at an illegal unit attached to her duplex on PERIWINKLE WAY. The variance would allow the lowest habitable floor of the unlawful dwelling unit to be established below the required base flood elevation. Connelly wished to convert the unlawful apartment she purchased into temporary living quarters (by removing an electric range) for use during short-term visits by relatives. The unit could be used legally as passive, non-commercial storage or for parking cars.

- The commissioners unanimously passed a resolution granting variances to Land Development Code parking setback and commercial landscaping requirement standards at James and Mary Thomas' PERIWINKLE WAY property, the site of Island Garage. They also passed a resolution granting the Thomas' request for a conditional use permit to allow for additions to two existing dwelling units, the gift shop and the auto repair shop.

- The Planning Commission recommended approval of Container Products Corp.'s vegetation plan for the Butterknife subdivision on CASA YBEL ROAD AND WEST GULF DRIVE, with the amendment that a certain area of Brazilian pepper may be poisoned in place and left to decompose.

- The commission granted Larry C. Thompson's request for an extension of eight months for him to submit the required items to the city in order to be issued a development permit on his PERIWINKLE WAY property. Thompson had "overlooked" getting his permit from the Department of Environmental Regulations.

Curbside recycling begins

By Frances Adams
Islander staff writer

The city of Sanibel is hoping that today, Jan. 15, will bring a new attitude about recycling to islanders. It's the official kickoff date for curbside recycling on the island.

It isn't mandatory that residents and visitors participate in the program, but the city is bending over backward to make it easy for islanders to get in the recycling habit.

This week, Browning Ferris Industries, the city's refuse collector, began collecting recyclables at the curb of single-family and duplex residences.

The city is footing the bill ($1.80 per month for each of about 2,900 units) for the entire program during fiscal year 1990-91 by using its share of the recycling surcharge tipping fee that's collected at Lee County's landfill.

The city of Sanibel is providing the special 14-gallon green recycling containers to those involved in the program. The city is also picking up the tab for the first containers (about $16,000 worth) with the recycling surcharges collected thus far.

All the residents and visitors have to do is put their recyclables in the container and place it at the curb prior to 6 a.m. on their designated day, which coincides with one of their regular garbage collection days. The only recyclable that has to be separated is paper, which is to be bundled and placed on top of the container.

BFI will collect the recyclables at the curb in a specially designed recycling vehicle, and will hand-sort the recyclables into different compartments in the vehicle. Any non-recyclable items will be left in the resident's recycling container with a note as to why the item wasn't collected.

Recyclables include glass (brown, green and clear), aluminum, light plastics (soda bottles, milk and water jugs, six-pack rings, etc.) and newspapers and other recyclable paper.

Be careful not to break the glass recyclables. You can leave the labels on glass containers, but remove the metal lids and put them in the regular trash. Not recyclable are mirrors, crystal, light bulbs, ceramics, window glass and drinking glasses. Dispose of them in the regular trash.

Beer and soft drink cans are the most commonly recycled aluminum containers, but don't forget the scraps, like foil and old lawn chairs. Use a magnet to help you sort -- it won't stick to aluminum.

The plastics that BFI is recycling are PET and HDPE types of plastics. On the bottom of most recyclable plastic containers is the familiar three-arrows recycling logo, along with a numerical code. Look for the number "1" and the letters "PETE," and the number "2" and the letters HDPE.

Please see RECYCLING, page 13A

Precycling: Basic to recycling

As important as recycling is to reducing landfill, "precycling" plays just as important a role.

Precycling is described as a way of thinking about waste -- drawing a direct link between what we buy and what we throw away -- that stresses source reduction through purchase decisions made at the store. This includes choosing products carefully, being selective on type of packaging, avoiding disposables, buying in bulk and reusing and repairing items.

The type of precycling most beneficial for the city's recycling program is for islanders to buy products in containers that can be recycled. If the same product is sold in a glass container and a similar container of a non-recyclable material, select the one that is most recyclable. Avoid buying goods that are excessively packaged.

When you purchase items from the store, evaluate each one based on cost, convenience and environmental impact. Think first: How many pieces of material will have to be disposed of that cannot be reused or recycled?

Division of Beaches and Shores; Mark Leadon, a coastal engineer; and Emmett Foster of the Division of Beaches and Shores.

Campbell said he demonstrated to them that the Sanibel consultant failed to take into consideration sand lost as a result of Tropical Storm Keith. He said there was a permanent shoreline retreat of 13.7 feet on northern Sanibel from that storm and that 13.3 feet of that loss came as a result of sand washed onto Sanibel itself.

According to Campbell, Devereaux responded that overwash did seem to be a significant factor.

Campbell said that Devereaux suggested a long-range beach management plan was needed on northern Sanibel and that he (Campbell) responded that one solution would be for the next Captiva nourishment project to include northern Sanibel.

That project would not take place until 1995.

Under Campbell's proposal, the jog in the shoreline at Clam Bayou would be filled in, a dune would be built to limit overwash and Captiva's southern beaches would be overfilled with sand to provide more of a sand source for northern Sanibel.

He suggested the state pay 75 percent of the costs, Sanibel or Lee County pay for the fill and the CEPD pay for mobilization and demobilization.

In discussing the meeting in Tallahassee, Campbell said he had day-by-day information on the direction from which waves had been coming during construction of the beach nourishment project and that there was only one day with waves of any size from the north, the direction from which waves would have had to come for the groin to cause erosion on northern Sanibel. Campbell said that information had not been given to the DNR.

CEPD Chairman Stephen Cutler suggested it be sent to them.

In a related development, CEPD board members and staff were upset that Orrin Pilkey was scheduled to speak on Sanibel. He was described by staff as a person who travels around speaking against renourishment of beaches and in favor of letting nature take its course.

CEPD Administrator Alison Hagerup was directed to go to the talk and tape record it.

Sanibel officials visited DNR officials in Tallahassee last Thursday, Jan. 10, to counter the CEPD visit. City Manager Gary Price, Mayor Mike Miracle and consulting engineer Ken Humiston presented their information to the DNR officials in an 1 1/2 hour meeting. Price said the DNR officials did not indicate how they would eventually rule but said they did seem to feel Tropical Storm Keith had been a major influencing factor on the Sanibel erosion.

Polyethylene terephthalate (PET) is used to package boil-in-bag foods, meat, certain cosmetics and carbonated soft drinks.

High-density polyethylene (HDPE) is the most common type of plastic used for consumer products, including milk bottles, liquid dish detergents, shampoos, pharmaceutical products, juices, bottled water and antifreeze.

Heavy plastic containers such as laundry detergent or bleach bottles are not recyclable, nor are the hard plastic tops on milk and water jugs or plastic foam. Throw them in with your regular trash.

If you can crush the aluminum and plastic recyclables -- do so -- it saves valuable space.

Bundle and tie or put newspapers in paper (not plastic!) bags, and place on top of your bin at curbside. Also separate corrugated cardboard and high-grade paper. Magazines and phone books aren't acceptable and neither are junk mail and slick, glossy papers like the inserts found in newspapers.

To avoid problems with marauding animals, residents should rinse their recyclables before placing them in the bins. Generally, what's clean enough to be left in your house is clean enough for the recycling bin.

After collection, BFI will store the collected recyclables until enough is accumulated to sell on the open market. After storage and transportation costs are paid, BFI will be splitting 50-50 with the city of Sanibel any proceeds from the sale of the commodities.

It's up to BFI to monitor the amount of recyclables generated monthly on Sanibel, and the company will be supplying the city with monthly reports summarizing the program on forms provided by the city.

BFI has agreed that it will cover any operation cost overruns until Sept. 30, 1991. At that time the program will be reviewed, as it will be each September of the five-year contract.

The recycling containers, printed with the city of Sanibel logo, were distributed to single-family and duplex residences by BFI during early January. BFI keeps a supply available in storage for new customers. Additional containers are available for purchase from the city at a cost of $3.92 each.

The city and BFI currently are working together to set up a commercial and multifamily recyclable program, which they will implement as soon as possible.

If you have questions or want more information about the recycling program, contact Sanibel Assistant City Manager Bill Mills at 472-3700, or BFI District Recycling Manager Rudy Busch at 466-8600. For information on disposal of toxic and hazardous wastes, contact Lee County Division of Solid Waste Management at 335-2432.

"They don't want war, but they're ready to go to war," Goss said of his recent visit to Saudi Arabian-based troops. "They asked that we uphold the deadline."

Sanibel City Manager Gary Price doesn't like to give opinions about the possibility of war, although he did go so far as to admit that he's pessimistic.

"It's one of those things where you think that if you say it enough times, it might come true," Price said. "It's such the 11th hour. But it's often in the 11th hour that something happens. I hope they'll be able to work things out."

For part-time Sanibel residents Richard and Donna Jarlowe, a war may mean that they can't return to work. The Jarlowes work in Saudi Arabia for the world's largest oil company, Saudi Aramco. They arrived at their Sanibel home Dec. 22 for Christmas vacation, and are planning to return to Saudi Arabia Jan. 28.

"If the airlines are flying in then."

Back when Operation Desert Shield was first enacted, Donna returned to the safety of her Sanibel home for more than a month at Richard's request. He stayed behind. In the event of war, Richard may have to return to work anyway, but as a dependent, Donna will probably once again stay behind.

"I would want to go back with Richard, but I don't think he'd let me," Donna said. "We're keeping our fingers crossed and saying our prayers that somehow it will be settled peacefully."

"Maybe Saddam will have another dream, this one telling him that he should pull his troops out of Kuwait."

The boat-tailed grackle:

The Don Juan of the bird world

Generally far less colorful than their male counterparts, female avifauna often look downright dreary. But no matter how lousy they look, they rarely remain spinsters. For in the bird world, males must appeal to females in order to mate.

Since rape is not a viable option, male birds do their best to attract finicky females during the breeding season. Some fly around flaunting flashy colors, others parade around with a dazzling display of nuptial plumes and many species serenade every eligible senorita in sight.

But the boat-tailed grackle does none of the above. He simply struts around and shows off his glossy plumage by spreading his wings and long, keel-like tail. He also bobs and bows at females in the vicinity.

Although the grackle's "song" sounds like a croak, his courtship ceremonies obviously please the females. For Quiscalus major (the greater quail), is certainly one of the most successful Don Juans in the avian world.

But once he's had his way with a drab-looking female, the romance is over and reality sets in. For while there's now a great deal of work to do, Don Juan is never around to do any of it.

During the boat-tailed grackle's breeding season, the male is very busy courting and mating. Although Quiscalus major is by no means the only polygamous species, some scientists have a sneaky suspicion that the male is promiscuous.

Fortunately, the female boat-tail has neither the time nor the inclination to contemplate the distinction between polygamy and promiscuity. Indeed, she's far too busy ensuring the survival of the species to fret over Don Juan's abrupt abandonment -- or the precise nature of his philandering.

Her first order of business is to build a nest in a bush or tree near the water. Since she's not at all fussy about the quality of local construction materials, the grassy foundation often includes such things as string, feathers, rags, paper and Spanish moss.

Bulky and loosely constructed, the nest is held together by mud or, when it's available, cattle dung. Although such "cement" doesn't last very long, it lasts long enough for the female boat-tail to perform her Darwinian duties.

She incubates a clutch of eggs for two weeks, feeds her hatchlings for about three weeks and subsequently shoos the fledglings out of the nest. For in the bird world, progeny are not a lifetime proposition.

The fledglings soon join flocks of their own kind, and spend a great deal of time foraging for food. In addition to enjoying grains and a wide variety of bugs, boat-tails love gifts from the sea.

Indeed, it's not uncommon to see the grackle wading in shallow water, where it catches small fishes, frogs, crustaceans and snails. Thus, the boat-tail is sometimes called the "saltwater blackbird." Unfortunately, however, it's also called "crow blackbird."

Like fish crows, boat-tails often eat the eggs and hatchlings of herons and ibises. And although grackles frequently fly around with red-winged blackbirds, they never hesitate to kill and consume the nestlings of their flying companions.

In the eyes of Homo sapiens, the grackle's mating and feeding habits are certainly not very nice. But when survival is at stake, Nature is not known to be nice.

'Awakenings' is a memorable story, film

"AWAKENINGS"
Directed by Penny Marshall
Starring Robin Williams and Robert De Niro

AT THE MOVIES

By Mary Spencer

Those expecting to see the Robin Williams of "Good Morning, Vietnam" or even "Dead Poets Society" when buying a ticket to his new film may be surprised, but they won't be disappointed. "Awakenings" is a sensitive, fact-based story that gives Williams a chance to show what a versatile talent he really is.

"Awakenings" is based on a book written by Dr. Oliver Sacks about his breakthrough work with catatonic patients in 1969. In the screenplay written by Seven Zaillian, Williams plays a doctor named Malcolm Sayer, a character based on Sacks.

As the film begins, Sayer accepts a job working with a group of chronically ill patients who, in some cases, have not moved or spoken for decades. His initial attempts to reach them are met with little response, until he discovers a common thread.

After pouring through their records, Sayer notices that each one had encephalitis at some time in the past. His discovery coincides with the introduction of L-dopa as a treatment for Parkinson's Disease. The symptoms of his patients in some ways mirror those of that illness and Sayer persuades the chief of staff (John Heard) to try the controversial drug on one of the catatonics.

His choice for the experiment is Leonard Rowe (Robert De Niro), who had encephalitis as a child and has been virtually unreachable for almost 30 years. Sayer has no guidelines as to the proper dosage, and his first attempts are unsuccessful. After gradually increasing the doses, the eventual results are miraculous.

Lowe regains his speech and motor functions and, in a moving scene, is reunited with the mother who has lovingly cared for him over the last three decades. The treatment is then given to the other patients with the same dramatic response. Patients, staff and families are all astounded by the miracle that Sayer has performed.

Side effects are soon experienced by Lowe, and ultimately the film takes a saddening turn. However, the "awakenings" that take place are a joy to behold and nothing less than remarkable. As director, Penny Williams ("Big") does an excellent job guiding the entire cast through this emotional material.

Both De Niro and Williams are amazing in their roles and should garner several best acting nominations between them. De Niro's role as Leonard is physically demanding, from catatonia to rebirth to drug-related tremors, and he delivers a poignant performance. Williams could not be cast more against type as the shyly sensitive and reclusive Dr. Sayer, and he excels. Julie Kavner is also fine as a caring nurse.

"Awakenings" is a memorable story and film because it touches not only the emotions, but the intellect, too.

Mary Spencer is film critic for The Islander.

Sub-Tropic

A Sub-Tropic heat wave has swept into the lounge at Chadwick's causing some hot sounds and a sizzling dance floor. Renee Hutson (keyboard), John Urich (drums), Chuck Tomlinson (saxophone) and Dave Juliano (guitar), have a singular style that is pure 90's.

Their music is a balanced mixture of Top 40 tunes, Rock-and-Roll, Rhythm and Blues, with a little "Rap" thrown in for fun.

Holiday treats: three favorite restaurants

During the Christmas holidays, our daughter, Tyrrell, was with us. Naturally we wanted to "live it up." We did. Not only here but at friends' homes and at local restaurants.

By now you know that "The Mad Hatter" is my favorite Sanibel restaurant. The food, service, ambiance ... name it, we think it is excellent and we had a memorable meal there.

Then we dined at Chadwick's on Captiva. What a menu! Large but not overwhelming or flamboyant. The menu is a melange of all types of appetizers and entrees, all beautifully cooked and presented.

Tyrrell started with an alligator appetizer (now that's alliteration for you!). My husband, Tom, opted for oysters on the half shell. So often they can be a disappointment, but not at Chadwick's. They were icy cold, juicy and perfect. Those two dishes plus my entree of salmon were "out of this world."

If you have not been to Chadwick's lately, do so. You owe it to yourself (that's what I always tell me when I want something ... try it, it works!) The menu is not only extensive but beautifully balanced. Another plus is that it is not "pricey." Give yourself a treat and go. You deserve it!

The third treat of the local restaurant scene was The Greenhouse. It is "pricey" but the food is delicious. Again

WHAT'S COOKING?

By Bobbie Sharp

It combines the things that appeal to me: ambiance, exquisite food and excellent service. The evening we were there, one of us had the most unusual appetizer I have ever tasted. It was Chilled Lobster Taco with a tomato-cilantro salsa and spicy chipotle mayonnaise.

It was one of the best appetizers I have ever had -- anywhere. It takes real imagination and skill to create this type of dish. So many chefs become stuck in a rut and repeat themselves because it is the easiest thing to do. This does not happen in any one of the three restaurants I have just mentioned. Those kitchens are ruled by "artist-chefs."

I could go on and on about the menus, but go and see for yourself. None are inexpensive, but then, excellent food and service seldom is.

Now we go from the sublime to the not so sublime; more to the ordinary, but still excellent. A different type of soup: Brie Soup. If you are a cheese lover, and we are (Santa brought me a superb Stilton, my favorite), try the following soup.

Brie Soup

- 1 cup Brie, diced
- 2 cups chicken stock
- 1/2 cup onion, minced
- 1 cup celery, diced
- 3 tablespoons butter
- White pepper
- 1 tablespoon fresh chives, snipped for garnish

In a large saute pan, melt the butter; add the onion and celery and cook until wilted. Add the stock, bring to a boil, turn to simmer, cover and cook 20 minutes. Add the Brie, stir; add the pepper, bring back to a simmer, cover and cook another 20 minutes, or until the cheese is melted. Put in batches in a blender and blend thoroughly. Taste for seasoning (I do not think you will need salt as the Brie and the stock usually are salty). Pour back in the pan, bring to a simmer, then pour in warm soup cups and garnish with the chives.

This can be made the day before ... just reheat.

If you fell you need to "brush up your Shakespeare" now is the time, and the opportunity is available. Tonight, Tuesday, Jan. 15 in the Phillips Gallery at the Barrier Island Group for the Arts, Dr. Robert Miller will be conducting the first of 10 sessions devoted to getting to know more about "The Bard of Avon" and his works.

The sessions will consist of the reading and discussion of "Midsummer Night's Dream," "Romeo and Juliet" and "The Winter's Tale."

The cost for 10 sessions is $40 or a single session is $5.

In past seasons, Miller's classes have always been most avidly attended and appreciated by BIG Arts patrons who were or have become devoted fans of Shakespeare.

Cook's classes in great demand

The wry and witty Dr. Annie Cook returns to the BIG Arts Center for two popular courses beginning Jan. 16.

In her program, "20th Century Poetry," Cook will head a session dealing with a survey of poetry from the 20th century. This is a 10-lecture/discussion series and features the works of Yeats, Bishop, Eliot, Frost, Stevens, Thomas, Jarrell, Plath, Rich and others.

Poems will be analyzed for rhythm, meter, rhyme, form, imagery and meaning.

Participants will be encouraged to nominate poems for study.

Classes will begin Wed., Jan. 16 and continue until March 20. The time: 1 p.m. to 2 p.m.

Text to be determined.

"The Short Story in the 20th Century" will begin after Cook has a half-hour break from her poetry class. The course will examine 20 short stories by such authors as Fitzgerald, Faulkner, Hemingway, Flannery O'Connor, Updike, Atwood and Cheever.

Each session will offer biographical sketches, style comments and a detailed analysis of two stories.

Sessions begin Wednesday, Jan. 16 and end March 20. Time: 2:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Text will be determined.

Greek Tragedies

Dr. Edward Brooks of McCallister College at St. Paul, Minn., will present a series of eight lectures on the Greek Tragedies beginning Monday, Jan. 14 from 10 a.m. until noon at BIG Arts.

Brooks will include plays by Aeschylus, Sophocles and Euripides in this interesting new series.

Cost for the series is $32, or $5 for a single session.

An unusual request

Carrie Lund Presents is asking islanders to search every nook and cranny in their homes, garages and storage bins for any usual or unusual weapons. The Pirate Playhouse would like to use them in the forthcoming production of "Deathtrap." The production opens Jan. 22 and plays through Feb. 23.

What are usual or unusual weapons? A short list includes: antique guns, swords, daggers, knives, crossbows, handcuffs or any other devices that you may have stashed away.

Most of the items, if not all, will NOT be handled during the performance, but used as decorations.

Call Mark Agnew or Robert Cacioppo at 472-0006 to lighten your weapon load.

Sanibel Library exhibits porcelain paintings

On display through January at the Sanibel Library is an exhibit of works by six members of the Edison Porcelain Artists Guild.

The exhibit includes three-dimensional sculptures, plates, cups and saucers, miniatures, vases and plaques. Subjects include florals, birds, animals and humans.

Murray family donates valuable collection to University of North Carolina, Asheville

By Frank Wagner
Islander staff writer

Myles Murray, formerly of Chagrin Falls, Ohio, and now of Sanibel, is owner of the Sagebrush Galleries which feature Native American art. To the D. Hiden Ramsey Library At UNC-Asheville he recently donated a major collection of rare books and other documents related to the westward expansion of Colonial America and the politics of the Mississippi Valley.

This valuable collection was given in the name of his granddaughter, Kelly Lynn Harrison. The 2-year-old Kelly and her parents, Tim and Carol M. Harrison, were living in Asheville at the time Kelly was fatally injured at Lake Lure on July 4, 1987.

The donation was placed in North Carolina University as both of Kelly's parents were graduated from UNC-Chapel Hill, N.C., and their current residence is Asheville. The collection will be known in perpetuity as the Kelly Lynn Harrison Memorial Collection in Colonial and Revolutionary War History.

Murray is a retired manufacturing executive whose intellectual curiosity was the impetus for him to start collecting books and documents of the early Colonial period. He began to amass this historical treasury in the early 1960s.

The collection consists of approximately 4,000 items and includes original maps, diaries and newspapers from the period. Ramsey library officials estimate the collection's value at well over $250,000.

The Kelly Lynn Harrison Memorial Collection includes a rare 1770 text entitled "The Present State of the European Settlements on the Mississippi." Another rare text from 1793 entitled "A Topographical Description of the Western Territories of North America" includes one of the earliest descriptions of Daniel Boone and his exploits.

Also included are original 18th century newspapers such as Freeman's Journal and the Independent Gazetteer, both published in Philadelphia. About 25 percent of the collection focuses on the Scotch-Irish migration and original 18th century texts from Scotland.

University librarian Mel Blowers has stated that he feels the quality of the collection will act as a "magnet" to attract other collections from the same period to UNCA.

BIG Arts' cultural cup runneth over

By Frank Wagner
Islander staff writer

When one looks back a very few years, it seems almost impossible that such a schedule of cultural events could have occurred on Sanibel Island in only one week.

But these events did take place -- Jan. 5 to Jan. 12 -- in the The Phillips and The Founders' galleries at the BIG Arts Center on Dunlop Road. Each one was well attended. The atmosphere of fulfillment and pride that exuded from those who attended these multiple happenings was quite evident.

It is certainly a giant step forward from our so-called "cultural wasteland" of the not-too-recent past.

The Amici String Quartet

On Jan. 5 at 8 p.m., the Amici String Quartet played the inaugural concert in the Phillips Gallery. The group performed to a completely sold out house.

The Amici Quartet members are Takako Masame and Stephanie Sant'Ambrogio, who alternate between first and second violin; Lynne Ramsel, viola; and Ralph Curry, cello. They are members of the Cleveland Orchestra.

Two friends of Amici, Richard King, horn, and Jeffrey Irvine, viola, joined them for the evening's performance.

Everyone seemed to have a favorite number. The Quartet for Horn and Strings, K407, by Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart closed the first part of the program and garnered sound applause.

A standing ovation at the end of the Quartet in A Minor, Op. 51, No. 2 by Johannes Brahms behooved them to do an encore piece by Debussy.

Accolades notwithstanding, the one negative of the evening was registered by many patrons who could not see the musicians. The platform on which the quartet was seated should have been higher, and certainly in the future it will be.

This inaugural performance in the Phillips Gallery must be considered in many ways a "shake down" of this marvelous facility. With further use, many adjustments can and will be made.

Myles Murray

Blowers said, "This collection will be used by UNCA faculty and students in the Undergraduate Research Program and by graduate students in the master of Liberal Arts program."

Librarian Bill Buchanan, who will oversee the production of a special catalog for the Kelly Lynn Harrison Memorial Collection says, "This is the kind of collection you would find at a major research university. We're very fortunate to have a valuable resource like this in Asheville."

Maestro Robert Kaminskas Presents

What an entertaining and enlightening evening Jan. 7 turned out to be. It was a one-man preview of the Chicago Light Opera Company's March presentation of "Cosi fan Tutte." This production will be one of the highlights of the Sanibel Music Festival, presented by Marilyn Lauriente.

Kaminskas possesses one of the most dramatic and resonant speaking voices it may be our good fortune to hear. He spoke distinctly, charmingly and wittily and the attentive audience responded in kind.

He began with the overture to "Cosi fan Tutte" (literal translation, "All women are like that"), explained the beauty of the music and played certain themes we should be aware of and remember. His jolly look at the way Mozart poked fun at the opera medium was most refreshing.

It was not easy trying to clarify certain situations that occur during the progress of the opera's complicated plot involving multiple mistaken identities. This, Kaminskas feels in part, justifies the melodramatic singing and acting (overacting) required to perform the piece.

Kaminskas admitted readily that his soprano renditions were not spectacular -- but in his range, the sonorous beauty of his singing voice was most compelling.

The program was presented as a part of the BIG Arts "Music, Music, Music" series.

Sanibel-Captiva Art League Juried Show

On Jan. 11, the first art exhibition to open in the Phillips Gallery took place with a reception and viewing. The judge was Phil Rasmussen, a watercolor specialist. He had the difficult chore of selecting the 89 paintings exhibited out of 150 that were submitted.

Rasmussen says that his main factors in judging the value of a painting are composition and color.

He admitted that judges, no matter how impartial, have likes and dislikes. He quoted the ever-amazing W.C.

Captiva Productions presents 'Captiva Cabaret'

By Frank Wagner
 Islander staff writer

Robert Cacioppo, artistic director of the newly formed Captiva Productions, has announced that a new mecca of musical cabaret entertainment, with liquid spirits available at your table, will open on Feb. 1. The elegant Wakefield Room at Tween Waters Inn is the scene of this innovative cabaret showcase. Two "all new" revues, featuring four talented performers, are now in rehearsals.

These revues will be directed, arranged and staged by islander J. T. Smith. Smith's past island musical triumphs include "Red, White and Berlin," "Encore," "Ho! Ho! Ho! The Christmas Show" and "Too Marvelous for Words," (currently playing at the Pirate Playhouse on Periwinkle Way through Jan. 19)

The first revue, from Feb. 1 to Feb. 10, will be a new and different "Encore," featuring Broadway, Hollywood and Tin Pan Alley favorites. The show will offer an array of "goodies" from which to choose.

The second revue, Feb. 12-19, will bear the familiar title, "Everything's Coming Up Roses." This revue will feature the music of Jules Styne. He has composed tunes for "Gypsy," "Bells Are Ringing," "Funny Girl," "Peter Pan," "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" and "Hazel Flagg."

After Feb. 19, the productions will perform in repertoire: Monday, Wednesday and Friday -- "Encore;" and Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday -- "Everything's Coming Up Roses"). The shows will continue through the season.

Robin O'Leary and Jeffrey Phillips, two of the talented performers in the current "Too Marvelous For Words" will be members of the cast. The other duo arrived Jan. 13 from New York where they had been previously auditioned by Smith and Cacioppo.

Performances will begin at 7:30 p.m. For further information about dinner-theater packages call 472-0006 or 472-5161.

Fields, "I am completely without prejudice, I hate everybody equally."

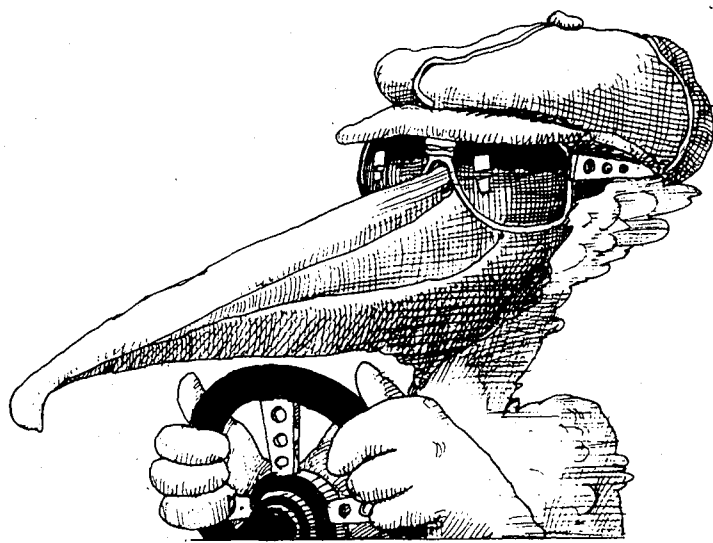

Further judging was made by the huge audience attending the opening of this exhibition. Paintings that seemed to get special attention from the viewers were: "Pirate Playhouse" by Harriet Ringel, "Yellow Scherzo" by Nancy Huff, "Ariel" a sculpture by Engelina Dickerson, "Evening at Millers Pond" by Roger Haas, "Colorful Croton" by Pat Cleveland and "Self Portrait" by Mary Keogh.

The door prize was a lovely watercolor donated by the English artist, Ron Ranson.

The evening's discussion was mainly about the quality of the art work, but much conversation was concerned with the magnificence of the Phillips Gallery.

No matter how you look at it, BIG Arts is big art.

(Editor's note: A fourth program during the opening weeks of the BIG Arts season was a presentation by Theodore "Tad" Park. A review of Park's "What's Art and What's Not" discussion on Jan. 10 will be featured in next week's Islander.)

'One and Only' Classic a truly 'screwy scramble'

By Rick Fowler
Islander staff writer

The Dunes Golf and Tennis Resort again played host to the Don Mayeron "One and Only" Golf Classic. Sunday's, Jan. 13, event raised funds to benefit the American Cancer Society and was held in tribute to Don Mayeron, the former owner of the Mucky Duck Restaurant on Captiva.

Dunes Director of Golf Pat Flinn stated that 134 golfers participated in the tourney's four-person "screwy scramble" format, which included several unusual on-course obstacles, a three-flag green, a bar-stool drive and several club restrictions all designed to provide golfers with a rather "goofy" outing.

Victor Mayeron, who organized the tourney to honor his father, described the event as an "unusual and fun tourney." He continued, "and we expect it to become an annual event".

The tourney included 18 holes of golf with cart, on-course beverages, lunch, awards and cocktail party, raffles and prizes.

Taking the tournament title was "Team Shearson."

The foursome was made up by Peter Redpath, Joe Holsinger, Bill Morrison and Charley Casey.

Although the final figures are not yet in, according to tourney officials, the tournament raised at least $6,500 for the American Cancer Society.

Population impact on wildlife examined

"The Impact of Human Population Growth on Wildlife Sanctuaries" is the topic to be covered by Ed Carlson, the manager of the Corkscrew Swamp Sanctuary, in a talk at 8 p.m. this Thursday, Jan. 17, at the Sanibel Community Center.

The lecture, which includes a slides presentation, is open to the public, costs a $2 donation and is sponsored by the Sanibel-Captiva Audubon Society.

Corkscrew was matched with Lake Nakuru in Kenya in a National Audubon program to match Audubon sanctuaries with sanctuaries in developing countries to explore similarities, contrasts and possible solutions to the detrimental effect of human activity on the environment.

Carlson exchanged visits with a wildlife expert from Lake Nakuru. His lecture provides a comparison of the situation at the two sanctuaries.

Aqua Trek takes you from gulf to bay

By Steve Ruediger
Islander staff writer

Sponges, sea whips, West Indian worm snails, anchovies, a skate, shrimp, various types of crabs, sea horses, puff fish and many other types of marine life were among the things found by the people who went on a recent Marine Biology Project trip by Aqua Trek.

Former science teacher Carl Melamet founded Aqua Trek a year ago as a business providing marine biology oriented trips on Sanibel.

A lot of information is provided not only about marine biology but also about local ecosystems. Those who sign up for the trips are taken first to a gulf beach, then to a sea grass area in Pine Island Sound and finally to the salt water aquariums at Melamet's home.

The trips last half a day, cost $25 for adults and $15 for children age five to 11, and are held at low tide on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays from October to May.

Trekkers are advised to bring a towel and Sunblock, and asked to be prepared to get wet up to their waist.

Melamet picks the people up at their homes or motels or meets them at a prearranged place.

The first stop is at Beach Access Two on West Gulf Drive. Melamet paused at the ridge before the beach to describe the ridge system on Sanibel and how it shows the history of the island. He also pointed out plants in the area, including the Brazilian pepper. He told the group why Brazilian pepper is a problem for Sanibel.

As Melamet got his 100-foot-long net ready, he had the people taking the tour search the beach for items they might want him to identify. The 11 people on the recent trip came back with: a horseshoe crab shell, sponges, sea whips, a piece of wood filled with tiny clams burrowed into it, parchment tube worms and a wide variety of other things.

Next, Melamet took his net out into the gulf, formed an arc with it, then brought it into shore. It contained a large number of small fish, primarily anchovies and herring, a skate and a variety of other sea life.

At first glance, some thought the skate was a sting ray. But it was smaller than a ray and had no barb. Melamet said it was the first time he had caught one.

The group next went in Melamet's van to a beach on the bay side of Sanibel. Here everyone was given a small net and told to run their nets through the sea grasses a short distance off shore.

A surprising variety of sea life was found in a small area. Numerous shrimp from tiny ones to shrimp cocktail size turned up in the nets. Also several sea horses were found.

A variety of small crabs and one full size blue crab were also found. Also numerous live shells and a variety of fish turned up in the nets. Tongue fish (flat, eyes on one side), pipe fish (tubular in shape), a puff fish (who blew himself up) and numerous anchovies were found.

Melamet is strongly opposed to people removing live shells and interrupted his presentation to ask some passing people who had a large number of live shells if they were obeying the laws regarding live shells. It turned out they were: they had no more than two shells per person per species and they had a Florida fishing license (which is required for non-residents to take live shells).

Melamet said he still wished they would not remove them because eventually such removals would eliminate shells in the area. But the people insisted on taking them.

Melamet said he puts the live shells in his aquariums back each year and gets new ones.

A 130-gallon tank in Melamet's oceanarium has a variety of fish, live shells, a clawless blue crab and a horseshoe crab. That is the touch tank.

In addition to his Marine Biology Project trip, Melamet works for South Seas Plantation taking one or two trips per week to the J.N. "Ding" Darling National Wildlife Refuge for South Seas guests. He also conducts a trip to a lagoon on South Seas property.

Melamet had been a science teacher at a local school but decided he wanted to be his own boss and wanted to spend more time outside.

He has a M.Ed. in marine education from the University of Maine.

Melamet and two helpers use a net to catch a few sea creatures.

Burr evening raises funds for shell museum

By Steve Ruediger
Islander staff writer

About 180 people attended "An Evening with Raymond Burr" Friday, Jan. 11 to meet the famous actor, hear shell expert Dr. R. Tucker Abbott and raise funds for the proposed Bailey-Matthews Shell Museum.

The $150-a-plate dinner was held at the Sonesta Sanibel Harbor Resort. An additional $100 a person entitled attendance at a lecture at the St. Charles Yacht Club on Captiva last Wednesday, Jan. 9 by Abbott. About 50 people attended that talk and, according to Abbott, "that resort treated us royally."

Burr, 73, who is most famous for his portrayal of Perry Mason, told The Islander he would be back again in April, that he hoped at some time in the future to produce a documentary involving the shell museum and that he would "stay with this project as long as the people of Sanibel and Captiva and Fort Myers continue their interest."

Burr said that the original idea was for him to associate himself with the shell museum during the fund raising phase. He said the project has become even more interesting to him than when he first became involved.

The actor in recent years has starred in up to four Perry Mason specials a year on television. He said Friday he plans to make three more between now and the end of May, which will make a total of 24 specials he will have done. He indicated there was a possibility of another three later that. But he did not seem enthusiastic, saying he had other projects, including several movies, that he would like to work on.

Also a guest of honor at the dinner was producer Robert Benevides, who is Burr's business partner.

Since the Perry Mason TV series, Burr has starred in the Ironsides and the Kingston: Confidential TV series. Prior to Perry Mason, he was on nearly 5,000 radio shows, in about 200 plays, hundreds of television shows and more than 90 movies.

Prior to Friday's gala dinner gathering, the shell museum building fund contained over $440,000. The goal is $1.2 million.

The Bailey-Matthews Shell Museum is to be the only accredited museum of its kind in the United States. Its planners hope to provide a full education program, including a permanent collection, changing exhibits and audio-visual and other interpretive materials and presentations.

Designed by Captiva architect George Tuttle, the museum will feature approximately 15,000 square feet of space, including an exhibit hall, a 150-seat auditorium and a reference library.

The project was originally inspired by a $10,000 bequest by Charlene McMurphy and a contribution of both money and an extensive shell collection by Ambassador and Mrs. William Stevenson.

A major boost was given by the donation of an eight-acre site for the museum on Sanibel-Captiva Road, adjacent to the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation. This site was donated by the heirs to island pioneers Frank P. Bailey and Annie Mead Matthews Bailey.

Hammond opens FACTs series at SCCF

By Steve Ruediger
Islander staff writer

Most science fields, educational theories, history, social studies and political science were all touched upon Friday, Jan. 11 when Lee County School System Director of Environmental Education Bill Hammond gave the first lecture of the season in the Friday At the Center Talk series at the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation.

The lectures are at 2 p.m. and are free of charge. Bobbi Heinrich of the Lee County Coalition for Peace is speaking this Friday, Jan. 18.

Hammond with ease, charm and brilliance tied together the facts and comments in his lecture and slide presentation. A few of the points he made during his discussion included:

- Lee County educators sometimes wear a coat and tie when they take the children on a field trip into a swamp. They tell the kids that they dress up when they go to special places. "The kids think it's awesome," Hammond said.

- He sometimes puts the globe in a classroom upside down. "Most kids don't notice."

Bill Hammond

- If you are in an airliner six miles up, 90 percent of the Earth's atmosphere is below you.

- Hammond said humans are mostly water even though they don't think of themselves as "a kind of Jello bag."

- The educator showed the audience a large plastic globe and pointed out that the atmosphere of the Earth is only as thick proportionately as the ink on the globe. He said that although most of the surface of the Earth is water, it would not fill a coffee cup proportionately and potable water would not fill a teaspoon. Hammond called this, "the beach ball concept of the world."

- Hammond pointed out it took about five billion years for the population of Earth to reach one billion people in about 1850. It took 80 years for the next billion in 1930. Another billion was added in 30 years. The next billion took only 15 years in 1975. The fifth billion was reached in 1988 and we are now at 5.3 billion. Meanwhile, the Earth has essentially the same amount of matter it had five billion years ago.

- Each human contains at least four carbon molecules that were in a dinosaur.

- No culture has ever remained dominant for more than 250 years. We are in the 220s now.

- America became powerful during the industrial era, which ended in the U.S. in 1972, the year more people became employed in service and information jobs than in industrial jobs.

- Over 80 percent of children in the United States do not live with their original two parents.

- "You are here about 70 years and then you are recycled."

- The nearest toxic waste site to us that handles batteries is in New Jersey.

- Only one in five people under 25 eligible to register are registered to vote.

- The eagle protection and the manatee protection ordinances in Lee County were originated and lobbied for by Lee County school children.

- Hammond estimated that Lee County has lost 3/4 of its wildlife in the last 30 years. He blamed development, the long drought cycle we have been in and other factors. One of those other factors is the construction of the Sanibel Causeway, which Hammond said killed off a thriving shellfish industry.

As Hammond indicated he was finishing up the lecture, a shout of "when can you come back?" came from a man in the audience.

In good hands

This peregrine falcon is recovering at Care and Rehabilitation of Wildlife where Dr. Renee Simoneaux set its broken wing. The bird, which is rare in this area, was found on Pine Island by people who thought it was an osprey.

This fishin' trip was for males only

Anyone who sells bait can tell you some of the funniest stories about their customer's questions. We even had a guy at Tween Waters Marina the other day who asked that he only be sold male shrimp!

Getting just the right baits becomes a very personal thing when hard-core anglers come in. You would think they are examining gold when they peer down into the bait bucket to see what is being put in there. After all, those tiny, little, green shrimp are the only things between catching a few fish or getting your ego squashed.

So, it's not at all unusual for our marina staffers to look up from counting out shrimp to see an anxious customer who is just about to give each of his dozen shrimp a complete physical before accepting them.

Let's talk about shrimp for a moment. The bait shrimp the marinas and shops get are called "baby shrimp" because they are trawled from the protected bay waters at night. Shrimp dig into the sand during the day and become active feeders at night.

Small, shallow draft boats pull nets over the grass beds

ON THE WATER

By Capt. Mike Fuery

an the nervous shrimp propel themselves backwards out of cover and are caught in the net.

The eating kind of shrimp we all enjoy come from the deeper waters of the gulf. They are more white in color, while the inside water variety are clear-green.

At certain times of the year, the bait shrimp are very small. This usually occurs in the summer, but by fall and now in the winter, the bay shrimp can nearly reach the size of their off-shore cousins. Shrimp is the universal bait in out salt waters. I've caught the largest fish (tarpon) and the smallest (two-inch pinfish) on shrimp.

All marinas and bait shops go to great expense to boy shrimp and keep them alive. Expensive saltwater pumps and tanks are needed. Let there be a power surge or a black-out and all the shrimp (and profits) are gone in a few minutes. That is one reason why you can expect to pay around $2 a dozen for regular sizes and more for select, larger shrimp baits.

Anyway, we mention all this because this is one of the best times to use shrimp for bait to catch sea trout, redfish, sheepshead, snapper and even an occasional snook, although the fish is out of season and will have to be released.

If you are casting out whole shrimp (some anglers break off the fan tail), insert the hook there and out the back for better fish attracting scent in the water.

Incidentally, no one I know can tell the difference between male and female shrimp, but our customer was dutifully presented with his all-male dozen shrimp. Why did he want all male shrimp? "They don't complain as much." And that's a true story!

Check shells for hidden creatures

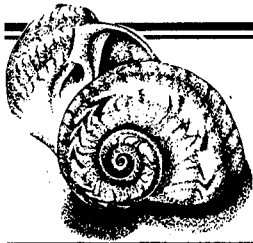

If you find a big, old encrusted shell washed up on the beach during one of our winter storms, don't be surprised to see a pair of blue eyes staring back at you from inside. Or, there could be a very nervous set of legs starting to spill out over the side as you examine the shell.

Those old, broken shells are the favorite haunts of the hermit crab and the octopus. And before you take that shell home, you should carefully examine way back into such shells to see if it holds one or the other of the two creatures.

Octopi are very shy things which can squeeze themselves into just about any tiny opening. They are not dangerous, much to the contrary of the sea monster stories you will hear. And an octopus that is six inches long from the top of its head to the end of any of its eight legs, isn't going to wrestle you down on the beach.

You might even find a squid on the beach after a storm and they look somewhat like an octopus, but the squid has 10 legs and is more streamlined than the octopus.

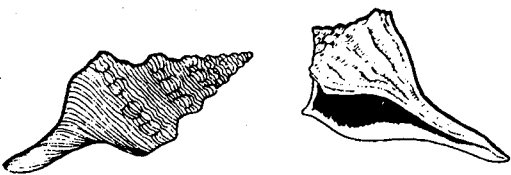

The colorful hermit crabs are always looking for a new house, because they outgrow their old shell homes. So, between the octopus and the hermit crab, the two are trading up every so often. After a storm churns up the bottom, uncovering new shells, the two creatures go house hunting.

SHELLING TIPS

By Capt. Mike Fuery

Hermit crabs and octopi like those big, barnacle-covered whelks and horse conch shells. As the hermit grows, its wasp-like body is tucked back into the whorl of the shell so only its large, protective claws and blue eyes are visible.

Hermit crabs are also very shy and not aggressive, unlike the blue crab. The hermit retreats quickly when it notices movement from you.

The big problem is knowing if the shell you keep has a critter in it or not. The best way to determine if a hermit has already laid claims to your new shell find is to set it down and stand back. The curious hermit will slowly emerge from the shell and either try and pull the shell towards the water to make an escape or to right the shell.

The octopus is another story. You need to poke around in the back of the shell to feel if it's inside. People who notice a horrible smell coming from the shell a few days later most likely have overlooked one or the other of the two shell inhabitants.

Unless it's a particularly outstanding shell, I put it and its inhabitant back in the water. Even with the best intentions of finding the octopus or hermit crab a new home, chances are you will end up harming or killing the creature while you try to possess its shell.

Good beach walking this week.

For a bit of bridge-related fun, you might enjoy reading "I Shot My Bridge Partner," by Matthew Granovetter. "It's a classical murder mystery," I state in the foreword. "The victim is shot at the bridge table just as he beings to play a fascinating hand.

"Three other players and an assortment of kibitzers are unable to see who fired the shot because the lights are out. Why would four sane people be playing bridge in the dark? Moreover, maybe the problem isn't who fired the shot but how he should play the hand.

"... You learn a lot, as the author did, about getting the most out of a partner, bidding to the best contract, when to stay out of the bidding, how to defend, how to play the dummy, how to pay your bridge debts with counterfeit money.

"It's crazy, it's logical, it's instructive -- but most of all it's screamingly drop-dead funny."

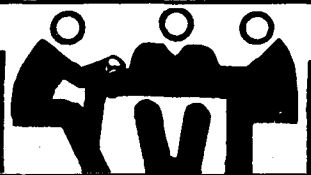

Test yourself with today's hand. Since you're playing rubber bridge (for stakes that you can't afford!), you see only the South hand and the dummy. Still, you should be able to work out the East-West hands and make the badly overbid slam. Plan the play before you read on.

Granovetter admits that his overall of two clubs was horrible. Still, that's not the problem. West leads the king of diamonds, and your problem is to make six clubs.

"My mind was clear," Granovetter writes, "so that before I made even the obvious ruff in dummy, I made the fastest deduction of my bridge career: the clubs were three-zero! East's 1NT response denied a four-card major. Thus West had to hold four spades and at least three hearts. Add to that his rebiddable six-card diamond suit, and it left West

SHEINWOLD ON BRIDGE

By Alfred Sheinwold

with 4-3-6-0 shape.

"Therefore it cost me nothing to ruff the opening lead with dummy's ace of clubs -- it might even help me. At truck two I led a club to the nine (!), and West discarded.

"I ruffed a second diamond and led a club to my jack. I ruffed my last diamond (with dummy's last trump) and finally led a heart to the queen. West ducked, so I drew the last trump and played hearts, claiming the slam!"

Granovetter, only 17 years old at that time, could have ruffed two diamonds low and saved the ace to ruff the third diamond. But he did need the deep finesse with the nine and the later finesse with the jack since sooner or later he had to ruff a diamond with the ace.

Some of the hands are a bit tough, but practically all will help your game. Meanwhile, the wildly funny gyrations of the plot will make you laugh so much that your improved digestion will easily cope with all of th turkey and plum pudding you eat during the next few weeks.

"I Shot My Bridge Partner" can be ordered from the author at Bridge Today, 18 Village View Bluff, Ballston Lake, N.Y., 12019.

Alfred Sheinwold is bridge columnist for the Los Angeles Times Syndicate.

Portfolio diversification may limit financial risk

In 20 years of personal investing, I have not seen a time when more people have been as indecisive as they are today. One can readily understand an investor's uneasiness when you consider a national recession, problem financial institutions and the Persian Gulf crisis. In difficult times, proper diversification of one's portfolio is essential.

The establishment of a financial plan with realistic goals is essential. Asset allocation models can be found in many publications. You may not realize that you already own an allocated portfolio based on the investments you now hold. Your portfolio may be allocated 100 percent to fixed income investments -- CDs, bonds or treasury bills. Do you understand the risk as well as the real rate of return on your investments in a 100 percent allocation model? Adherence to a prudent diversification plan will make the decision-making easy at all times.

MONEY SENSE

By Mark Webb

Opportunities may be found in difficult environments. A number of quality stock issues are selling at sale prices. If you take a long-term perspective, you will see real value in today's prices. Be selective, do your homework and find investments appropriate for your financial plan.

It is important to remember that one investment (stocks, bonds, real estate, insurance, money market accounts, etc.) cannot solely protect your wealth from the various financial risks that exist. To adequately protect your wealth, a diversified portfolio of a wide variety of investments is necessary.

Prepare your plan today. A financial consultant can assist you in the development of an investment plan suited to your personal situation. Take advantage of some excellent planning services now available and navigate the financial world with a current map.

Mark C. Webb, a Sanibel resident, is second vice president with Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc. in Fort Myers. For a free financial planning guide, write Webb in care of the Shearson office at University Park in Fort Myers.

Wehner has sold and marketed residential properties in all 50 states and 10 other counties. His responsibilities have included planned communities, country club and yacht club communities, resort properties, pre-cut homes and on-your-lot homes, as well as custom and production homes, condos and apartments.

Locally, Wehner has served in a number of organizations, including chairing the Lee County Sales and Marketing Council and as president of the Sanibel-Captiva Rotary Club.

Sanibel AWBA chapter receives 'Star Award'

Nora Price, the president of the Sanibel chapter of the American Business Women's Association, recently received the coveted "Star Award" at the ABWA National Convention in Dallas.

The "Star Award," which Price accepted on behalf of the Sanibel ABWA group, is the highest award presented by the national ABWA organization. It notes the receiving chapter's efforts in a wide range of categories, including fund-raising projects, community service, speakers programs, etc.

Price presented the award to the Sanibel chapter at its last monthly meeting.

The 1990 "Star Award" is the Sanibel chapter's first such award; obtaining it was one of the goals of the chapter's past president, Ginny Bissell.

Smith, Lang named to Port Authority committee

During its first meeting of 1991, the Lee County Port Authority Airports Special Management Committee elected Bill Smith Sr. as chairman, and Howard Lang as vice chairman.

The other members of the board include Heard Edwards, Michael Geml and Mike Strayhorn.

The Airports Special Management Committee serves as an advisory board regarding the operation of Southwest Florida Regional Airport and Page Field. The committee makes recommendations to the Lee County Commission which acts as the Board of Port Commissioners. The airports are operated by the Lee County Port Authority.
