Suspicious Blazes Keep Firemen Busy

The Summit Fire Department was kept) busy last week with a musaber of incidents including a possible fire bombing on Halloween and cases of suspected aron at the High School on October 30 and at the law offices of Frank A. Pizzi Jr., a New Providence Pizzi Jr., a New Providence Municipal Judge, at 55 Woodland avenue, Summit, last Saturday evening.

The fire at Summit High School was reported on October 30 via the school's fire alarm system. When the Fire Department responded, they found that a fire on the auditorium stage, set in a buriap table covering, had already been extinguished by a teacher using two water extinguishers. The fire started as students were setting up the stage for a play and someone set fire to the bullap. Firemen were unable to Firemen were unable to find the person who had started the fire. Further investigation was then turned over to school authorities and the police. The table under the burlap covering was charred by the blaze but the stage itself was not damaged and smoke in the auditorium was the auditorium was eliminated through the school's ventilation system. On Halloween afternoon at 4:39 p.m., Julio Her-nandez reported a possible fire bombing of his home at 91 Ashwood avenue. Firemen found a bottle containing an oil-like liquid and paper wick thrown against the side of the house.

The Police Department was called and an investigation is still taking place.

Two separate incidents of suspected arron took place Saturday night at the Pizzi law offices on Woodland avenue. The building also contains the offices of Dentist Peter A. Pizzi.

At 9 p.m., Summit Police

At 9 p.m., Summit Police called the Fire Department to investigate a small fire burning beside the house. On arrival, firemen found a coffee can containing gasoline and paper which had already done a small amount of damage to the building trim. After ex-tinguishing the blaze, detectives were called to investigate the suspicious circumstances.

Within a few hours, just after midnight, the Fire Department was again called to the same address at Woodland avenue where they found another small fire near the cellar door which they put out and still another fire on the opposite side of the building which had extinguished itself after burning more building trim and blackening some siding.

Further investigation by the firefighters found that the irreignters found that gasoline had been poured on the left front of the building. It had not ignited but the strong odor of gasoline permeated the entire area.

After again calling the Summit Police Department, firemen also notified the firemen also notified the Union County Arson Squad which is now investigating the fires in conjunction with

New Blue Cross-Blue Shield Plan

Group of Local Doctors Backing Pilot Program

by Lucy Meyer
To contain medical costs, Blue CrossBiue Shieid has come up with a new program which, for the first time, offers hereofits in the distance of the contained to t benefits in the doctors' office.

Summit physicians who have agreed to take part in a trial run of this program are: Benjamin Josephson, M.D., Donald Kent, M.D., Richard Podell, M.D., and Lewis Sank, M.D.

The pilot project, to start in a few months, will save money for the patient because the doctors agree to accept what "Pioneer", the name of the new program, pays for office visits and other services. It pays for preventive medicine, which many other programs don't.

Not covered in the traditional Blue Shield policies, the new one will include: the patient's initial physical examination and evaluation, periodic physicals, checkups, most injections, immunizations, well-child care and

"The essence of the program is pre-paid medical care for routine doctor-vising," mate Dr. Saute when collected." "Tin interested in participating in the

Dr. Sank noted the new proposal was reasonable on both ends, for patients and There are built-in safeguards so neither can take advantage of the plan.

Physicians can't bilk the program, and patients can't demand unnecessary tests."

He pointed out the physicians par-ticipating in the trial program would be paid a flat fee, which would guarantee patients reasonable care for a year. (The fees to the physicians are not going to make them wealthy but are reasonable, according to Blue Cross

Dr. Sank said he was interested in the plan because: "I've had patients moaning and groaning that they had to leave pediatricians and primary-care doctors they've had for years, as the company program they were in designated only certain physicians."

Another thing that bothered him was the fragmentation of treatment.

"Often, we won't see a patient for several years and then they come in and we find they've been treated in many different facilities for problems we weren't aware of. We assumed they had good care but discover the patient, the parent or the facility has been negligent in following up on the medical

Eliminating Physicals
Dr. Sank said another reason he was taking part in the trial of the new plan was he found patients were not having yearly physicals because of the expense. "Many of my patients who used to get good yearly care, find the cost of preventive medicine too expensive. The philosophy of the new program is to have pre-paid coverage which may prevent more costly illnesses later on."

"Designed to reduce the use of hospital in-patient days, Pioneer emphasizes early detection and treatment of illness as a means of cost con-tainment," Blue Cross representatives stated. The new project not only includes routine office visits but basic Blue Cross hospitalization and Blue Shield medicalsurgical coverage, as well as lab tests and X-rays.

"Pioneer" also provides each member with 60 days of nursing home benefits and 60 home visits, paid in full, without requiring a prior hospital stay.

The First Aid Squad Needs Your Help Now

The Summit First Aid Squad broke ground last week to build an addition to its building on Summit avenue. The new facility will house the Squad's third ambulance, and construction was scheduled to

Over the years that the First Aid Squad has been in existence, it has played an integral role in the health and welfare of our community.

However, like many other volunteer organizations, the First Aid Squad is a victim of higher costs. Many persons, struggling to keep afloat in the seas of inflation, begin to drop their volunteer donations. Unfortunately, the First Aid Squad has been hard hit by this situation.

Residents should know that no tax money is used to support the Squad and all funds received are through volunteer con-tributions, Every person on the Squad is a volunteer; no one is paid. The squad is open 24 hours a day, seven days a week, 365 days a year. It never closes.

Training of volunteers involves over 100 hours for each member with continuing training every month; plus seminars throughout the year on the latest first, aid techniques.

Since the beginning of this year, the Squad has answered nearly 2,000 calls beloing accident, stroke and heart victims neiging accident, stroke and neart victims as well as providing out-of-town and out-of-state transportation at no cost.

The First Aid Squad not only pays its own way all the way, but provides a service that can only be described as Lifesaving. We wonder how many Summit residents have had some contact with the First Aid Squad either personally or via their family or friends. At some point in our life, we are sure all of us will be touched in some way by the First Aid Squad. It is a sorely needed service.

But now the Squad is in need of more volunteers, and money in order to make ends meet. Your donation to the First Aid Squad will enable it to continue its lifesaving service. Your donation could insure that you or a loved one will be aided by the First Aid Squad in time of emergency. That is a comforting feeling. Your donation is needed now. Send whatever you can to Post Office Box 234, Summit, N.J. 07901. By doing so, you'll be helping yourself, your loved ones and your friends in time of need. "American humor has lost its comic sense." The film and TV landscapes littered as they are with failed comedies seem to bear this out.

But, though they dominate the American-humor scene, movies and television shows are not the only sources of laughter. Humorous books were entertaining people long before films and TV existed. They're still at it. Some of them even make it to the Part Salles lists.

Best Seller lists.
But it is difficult to write material that is funny when read. it isn't the most dif-ficult writing of all, it has to be close to it. Yet since the very nature of humor precludes its being taken seriously, we reserve our awe and eateem for serious writers. Relatively few comic authors have gained the stature of a Mark Twain, for instance.

Nevertheless, though often unappreciated and frequently overlooked on library shelves, these merry men and women are not unknown. Beschley. Bomback, Bucherald Ker, Levinson, Bereiman are sely, fee of the famous and the selection of the selectio

And, anyone thoughing for food thouse outwardly on each trip to the supermarket. In the face of these realities, we can only real tour are at the revelation that the feel outrage at the revelation that the President's wife, Rosslyn Carter, feels it is necessary to spend $550,000 of the tax-payers' money for her jaunts around the country extolling her husband's virtues.

Without going into what these virtues might be in the light of the present situations related to inflation, energy and Iran, it goes without saying that spending that type of money to maintain a staff to keep track of these jaunts is an obscenity. The $650,000 figure is estimated, because Mrs. Carter's deputy press secretary, Edith Collins, maintains that the White House is exempt from the Freedom of Information Act.

In addition to the outrageous expenditure of money, we find that residents of the White House are enempt from regulations to which the rest of us must adhere.

It's incredible that the White House residents would think that the American public will stand for the public expenditure of public funds for political purposes and for avoiding the law.

Actually, This Could be The Best Time to Buy a House

With the media constantly focusing on the problems of the economy, many potential home buyers are under the belief that this is a difficult time to purchase.

"Not so," say many financial experts including Reisha Martin, mortgage manager for Weichert Realtors. As part of her position as mortgage manager, Martin continuially calls upon lending institutions to keep abreast of the market and secure the most favorable terms for Weichert customers. "Real estate is a proven incustomers. "Real estate is a proven investment, and there are many alternatives available for financing." Martin contends.

One alternative, Weichert suggests, is a lesser known Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation program referred to as the "Freddie Mac" program. The benefits of "Freddie Mac" include low down payments (as little as 5 percent down) and a long term payment plan of 30 years. The maximum mortgage is $75,000. A similar program, nicknamed "Fannie May", through the Federal National Mortgage Association, has the same stipulations as Freddie Mac and is easily obtainable.

"The more traditional government loans are playing a prominent role in financing today," suggested Martin. "Government backed V.A. mortgages are currently available to qualified veterans at favorable rates. The FHA has initiated a graduate of a superior of the su payment schedule commonly referred to as the "245 Program." This program is especially attractive to young couples purchasing their first homes because initial purchasing their first homes because initial mortgage payments are lower. Generally, incomes are expected to increase, and the loan allows for this by gradually increasing payments," Martin explained.

Finally, the unique "Equity Advance" program, a method of interim financing pioneered by Weichert, has been in full effect during the recent "tight money" situation in New Jersey. This means that "customers who purchase a home through Weichert are able to borrow money applied to the courty of the home they're selling." to the equity of the home they're selling, "said Martin. "This money, in turn, can then be applied toward the home they are gives buyers more time to market their home for a better price, in addition to providing sellers with the assurance that an "Equity Advance" approved buyer will be able to close on the property without having to first sell a bouse."

Summing up, Martin noted, "The New Jersey area has been a strong real estate market for many years and all predictions are for a very good market in the 80's. A are for a very good market in the 80's. A high demand is created by the large number of major corporations transferring employees in and out of this area on a regular basis and is further increased by the continued need for housing by the "baby boom" of the 59's and 60's. With real "baby boom" of the 59's and 60's. With real estate prices going up as much as 30 percent per year, most people cannot save enough to keep up with inflation and don't even consider getting ahead in it. Home ownership has been the best investment most people have made. Many New Jersey homeowners have realized a 100 percent return on their investment in sust five years. When you look at it this way, there's never been a better time to buy a house."

Pulpit Perspective

by Jan Vickory Knost

How often, in the midst of an increasingly secularized society, we lose sight of the religious dimension in life? Cardinal Jean Danielou in his book "Prayer as a Political Problem" quotes Jeanne Hirsch's observation that: "Politics is not in itself creative, but it does provide the conditions in which something can be done." The author, goes on to say that "... for a city which would make prayer impossible would fail to fulfill its role as a city."

This column is directed at the feet that

This column is directed at the fact that all of us have a certain number of shared religious values. On occasion, our commonality becomes clouded by the provincial, the personal, the selfish. In community, however, we are constantly called to make reference to our shared similarities, in order that a caring city might emerge. Thus will this writing be directed at those qualities of life from which all of us draw sustenance rather than filling the page with the differences that tend to divide.

Not long ago, our country hosted the visit of a unique human being — Pope John Paul II. Beyond the differences that emerged in his religious statements (made, might we add, to Roman Catholics), was a tremendous outpouring of sentiment. People by the hundreds of thousands were there to see him, greet him, wave with him, worship with him. I was not surprised to find many other faiths joining the throngs. And why not?

Pope John Paul II represents something beyond the narrowness of one particular religious tradition. He symbolizes the latent hope in every human heart — Catholic or Protestant, Buddhist or Jew - the hope that one day the religious perspective will be more than idle talk. Those thousands rep-resented human beings — not from any particular congregational 'club' with dues and requirements for membership — but human beings of One Great Family of Humanity. The tradition shared was secondary — the meeting of minds and hearts with the warmth of a singular religious leader was of primary importance.

As we begin to move fully into the church year, celebrating our various festivals of harvest and of winter, let us keep in mind the compelling reasons for celebrating the religious dimension of life in our particular traditions. Ours is a shared community — one of many facets, many ways — but one possessing the potential to fulfill its role as a true city; a city that shares its visions rather than dividing its kinfolk.

Lawrence said the film wasn't like a dramatic movie with actors. It contains shots of houses with Harry Devlin, the famous artist and champion of Victorian architecture, as

THE FUTURE CONTRACT

How would one élassify insurance in general product terms? A question like that is very likely to get an answer using the word "intanglibe". It's described that way by many people because it's so different from items such as appliances. and cars - products that can be seen and felt.

But that's not the real difference, Insurance differs from tangible goods in that the contract (policy) is something that involves the future. Unlike a car which is usually driving that away, insurance is not ordinarily used immediately. It is something to be used, if necessary as a large state of the contract o something to be used, if necessary, at a later time. Another difference is that the benefits from having insurance are, in a sense, mental ... the policyholder is relieved from worry and anxieties concerning losses.

Cen an insurance policy be summed up in just one phrise? We like the term "service contract"! That's what it really is — a group of services regarding future risks. And we'll add an essential word in front: "personal". As agents, that's all we

Besides serving as the feeding spot for hungry students, the Summit High School cafeteria has a very important function during the winter months. After school hours it becomes the site of our wrestling team practice sessions. Tables and chairs are cleared out, mats are put down, and the sound of forks and plates is replaced by the grunts and groans of the wrestling squad.

Although practice won't start for several weeks, Coach Ray Ostroski is extremely optimistic about this year's team. And he has every right to be looking forward to the sea

Returning from last year's team are such quality wrestlers as Jacques Fischer, Jeff Balish, Jon O'Leary, Greg Tyler, Matt Felix, Maurice Gaynor and David Blitt.

Technology and Capitalism Historically, this technological development has been very closely connected with the rise of capitalist institutions and the powerful incentives that these institutions have provided through the profit motive, for new technologies. The point was forcefully highlighted well over a century ago by even the severest critics of centialist eacher. Mary and capitalist society, Marx and Engels, in the "Communist Manifesto," published in "The bourgeoisie, during its rule of scarce 100 years, has created more massive and more colossal productive forces than have all preceding generations together. Subjection of Nature's forces to man, machinery, application of chemistry to industry and agriculture, stream-naviagriculture, stream-navi-gation, railways, electric telegraphs, clearing of whole continents for cultivation, canalisation of cultivation, canalisation of rivers, whole populations conjured out of the ground — what earlier century had even a presentiment that such productive forces slumbered in the lap of social labour?" social labour?"

Note that Marx and Engels do not attribute this explosion in productivity to the emergence of science, or to a religious ethic, or to some new impulse to human insensity. They attribute it appellicable in the this statement of the control of the

In a resitalist market place, the possibilities for profitmaking through the introduction of new technologies are vast. Indeed, Marx and Engels take an even stronger position: not only does a resitalist economy offer position: not only coss a capitalist economy offer powerful incentives to in-novation; it is also essential novation; it is also essential for the very survival of the entrepreneur that he innovate as rapidly as possible. As they had pointed out earlier: "The bourgeoiste cannot exist without constantial." without constantly revolutionising the in-struments of production lent support to this aspect of Marx's analysis of capitalism. The market onomy, in which private entrepreneurs actively seek to increase their private profits, has proven to be immensely effective in mobilizing inventive and innovative talent.

At the same time, the market economy has strongly shaped the direction of technological innovation as well as its rapid rate.

Unfortunately, the profit motive has not always worked to advance society's interests. Consequently, the government has sup-plemented the operation of the market place with public institutions or financial support for specific kinds of activities. These include agricultural experiment stations and a wide range of public subsidies to basic scientific research, from which private profits are not readily available and for which market incentives alone are therefore in-

New Policies

We urgently need new public policies that will offer incentives for innovation and at the same time protect us against some of the un-desirable side effects of technology. Developing to a far greater extent than such policies will call for is generally recognized. But reconciling conflicting group interests and priorities without, at the same time, dulling or even destroying the incentive mechanisms underlying technological inconting technological innovation will be an extremely delicate undertaking.

Large issues are at stake. History makes it clear that private business is strongly influenced by market forces concerning the direction as well as the pace of inventive activity.

Thus, for example, the abundance of forest lands and the cheapness of forest products in colonial America (and later) led to the invention of a vast array of ingenious technologies for exploiting wood. The abundance of good farmland in the American mid-west in the 19th century generated an incredible profusion of machines enabling a single farmer to cultivate a far larger acreage than his European counterpart. And the exhaustion of high quality mineral deposits in the 20th century has already prompted the development of techniques for exploiting low quality ores that were previously neglected.

Shaping Technology Our history also shows us that technology is extremely versatile and that it is highly responsive to changes in incentives and rewards. It should not be beyond our ingenuity to use the incentives of the market place to develop new technologies that will deal nvironment and energy. It is hardly surprising, for courses as open sewers for having previous tielr effluents when no cost the faculties far less polluting technologies are giready

It is a mistake to regard technology as simply constituting part of the problem, although that has undoubtedly sometimes been the case in the past, Technology is an extremely presented force whose share powerful force whose shape political courage and we cannot shape technology leadership as well as social if we reject or straitjacket it, as has been increasingly the case with some of the regulatory activities of the government in recent years.

There are few seconds who will militer a decision to trade a sidelified, accuracy career for a completely new lifestyle. Warne Peer is an among these are individuals. Born in Summal, Wayne has penalized a resident for most of his life. After graduating from Summit High, he emersed the Academy of Advanced Trails in New York City, where he studied industrial traffic management. Upon completion of this training. Vayne worked as a traffic cleric with what today is known as the Getty Oil Company. While working days, he attituded evening college at Fairleigh Dickinson University for three years where he studied business administration. Wayne displayed his ability with the company and advanced to plant forement at the Flowark reliner. As a motivated individualist, he gave up the job he worked so hard to attain. There was comething else he had always wanted to do, and so he set out to become a Summit Police Officer. A dream perhaps, but now a reality for the past seven years.

Wayne had exhibited the same initiative during his military career as he had while he was with Getty. He solisted in the Army in June, 1961 and was sent to eight weeks basic training at Fort Dis. Thereafter, he was sent to "Advanced Armor School at Fort Knos, Ky. Upon completion of active duty, Wayne was assigned to the soth Armor Division Elizabeth Reserve Unit. He attended Officers Candidate School at Sea Girt and was completioned a Second Listenant Wayne remained commissioned a Second Lieutenant. The Police Department was a big change in Wayne's life, but it brought about an even bigger change. It was on the job that he met Anita, whom he married in 1973. She could verify that Wayne has not lost his determination in completing a dream. When he's not playing with their two sons, Jeffrey, age four, and Eric, age one, you can probably find Wayne out back tinkering with his other baby, a 1963 Thunderbird that he has restored to mint condition.

Wayne has also been an active member of PBA Local No. 55. He has served on various committees and has held the office of secretary. He is presently serving as

Looking for a Restaurant with good food, fantastic prices and a relaxed atmosphere. The Qualis

A fresh one pound New England Lobster at $4.95 with the salad is certainly a rare find in this day of inflation. I've paid that much for an uncooked fellow in the fish store.

The "Lighter Side" of the menu offers items from $2.75. A tasty sliced New York Strip Steak is only Nightly specials included com-plete dinners at $5.95.

For the seafood lover there is certainly a bountiful choice, with shrimp scampl, fresh lemon sole, obstertails, or scallops,

The availability of half portions caught my eye. That was a relief, because often i don't feel like a heavy meal; however, I would like something other than the perver-bial fast food hamburger. The half porties la both pleasing to the pocket book and to my pallet.

Chemical Waste Disposal is Costly, Complex Job, Rinaldo Survey Shows

The sale disposal of 762 million tons of chemical waste generated over the last 30 years is a more technically complex and expensive problem than the treatment of nuclear waste, seconding to Res. Matthew according to Rep. Matthew J. Rinaldo:

Rinaldo is a member of the House Oversight and Investigations Sub-committee which has completed the first comprehensive inquiry into chemical wast disposal undertaken in the United States.

The committee report cautioned that not all of the chemical waste is hazar-dous, and that one of the PUBLIC NOTICE

J. is a Convalence of the Convalence of the Convalence of the Summit of major problems is determining how much of the residue is a threat to the environment and public health

The committee survey covered 1,605 chemical plants owned and operated by the $3 largest domestic chemical companies, which disposed of 66 million tons of represented 17 percent of the 379 million tons of in-dustrial waste which the Environmental Protection Agency estimates is generated in the United States in one year.

During Congressional bearings, Rinaldo called the Chemical Control Cor-poration chemical waste

site at the Elizabeth waterfront "one of the worst in the nation... a chemical time bomb," Federal and state environmental experts began a massive, $12 million cleanup at the Elizabeth waterfront this summer. Rinaldo said the chemical waste disposal problem throughout the nation is so complex and costly that dealing with it may take at least two decades and cost several billion dollars. The committee report 'did not indicate how much of the chemical waste is hazardous and poses a health problem. "A systematic national effort must be carried out to identify the number, nature and com-ponents of all waste disposal sites," Rinaldo declared. The House Subcommittee report recommended that the Environmental Protection Agency un-dertake a comprehensive determine the size and scope of a cleanup fund.

The committee said that for financial reasons, the chemical industry will probably find it necessary to reduce substantially the amount of on-site disposal since many of these facilities would not meet proposed environmental standards. Ninety-four percent of the 762 million tons of chemical waste generated since 1950 by the 53 largest chemical companies were disposed of on company property.

But Rineldo said finding new locations would be extremely difficult because of state and local opposition. Meanwhile, he added, Americans demand and use thousands of products that come from chemicals. "We could not operate a modern industrial society without chemicals, and it is essential that we reach a common understanding in every state on the safe disposal of these wastes," and to reprocess and recycle

He cautioned against embarking on a crash emorating on a crash program for chemical waste cleanup because of the huge expense and the lack of information on which materials are hazardous. He said a long range program would have to be based on better technology to safely dispose of chemical waste
