The good news for Westfield students is the first holiday of the new school year will come after only three days of class in the new school year beginning Wednesday, Sept. 2.

three-day weekend.

For the first time in the town's history, school officials said, June 23 Graduation Day seems far off, it may be because the school calendar includes one extra day, in case of snow. Or maybe it is because it really is a long way off. Twenty-four new teachers will be approaching the year with a fresh point of view to make those 182 days go quicker. Many veteran members of the teaching staff have been working during the sum-into the schools.

Westfield's nine public schools this year can look forward to a new math program. Improving the teaching of math this year is a priority for school superintendent Mark Smith and the school board.

Bush, mayor and Justin, 8, meet on '92 campaign trail

By ELIZABETH GROMEK

With a handshake, an autograph and a picture, President Bush made his mark on a number of Westfield residents Monday. Before all the speeches and handshaking during his visit to Union County, the President was greeted by 8-year-old Justin Bellotti. Before President Bush got into his helicopter and left, he also posed for a picture with Mayor Garland "Bud" Boothe.

Justin wrote the President last winter and invited him to visit his class. Although school does not start until next week, Mr. Bush still wanted to meet his young supporter.

Mr. Bush shook the 8-year-old's hand and his "good luck" became the first entry in Justin's autograph book. The thirdgrader said his dad was going to frame it. He never thought that the President would take him up on his offer to address the class.

"I didn't think I'd get to meet him," Justin said. "And there were a whole lot of people with him."

Despite the chance to talk to the President, Justin is not really interested in politics. Though he was only 5 at the time,

Police Capt. Stutzman dies of heart attack

By ELIZABETH GROMEK

THE RECORD

Westfield Police are mourning the death of Captain Earl L. Stutzman, 53, a 23-year veteran of the force who died Monday after a heart attack at the Toms River Community Hospital.

Captain Stutzman started his career with the Anaheim, California Police Department after graduating first in his class at the New Jersey State Municipal Police Academy. He was promoted to sergeant in 1974 and to lieutenant in 1984. He had been a captain on the force for three years. He had been in charge of the computer system and the records bureau. Westfield Police officials said he provided the train- Roman Catholic Church at 11.

ing necessary during the transition to computers.

Captain Stutzman was born in Elizabeth and lived in Fanwood, but formerly lived in Westfield. He served in the Navy from 1957 to 1961. He was a member of the Police Benevolent Association, Local 90.

He is survived by his wife, Rita, two sons, Christopher and Robert and two step children James and Elizabeth Lambert. He is also survived by two sisters, Charlotte Kreie and Joan Berzanski, and two brothers, Arthur and Paul Stutzman.

The funeral will be tomorrow at Dooley Funeral Home on Westfield Avenue at 10 a.m., followed by services at St. Helen's

Smith, Pepper outline four-point plan for schools

By ELIZABETH GROMEK

THE RECORD

The School Superintendent and the Board of Education president head toward the Sept. 2 opening of the school year with their eyes toward Trenton, and Westfield's children on their minds. Dr. Mark Smith and Susan Pepper are setting goals for the year and looking to see how legislation from Trenton may change the quality of education in the town's schools.

Dr. Smith has set four goals for the school district. While the results of these objectives translate into better scores on standardized tests, Mrs. Pepper does not focus so much how on how to improve numbers. "We want to improve education in the classroom,"

Mrs. Pepper said. The first goal is to implement a new math program for all grades, changes which were recommended by the school board last year. The new curriculum in- small as we'd like and not redistrict," Dr. Smith said. cluded the hiring of a math resource teacher for the elementary schools. The program now is up to the standards set by the National Committee of Teachers

The state has mandated instruction in the use of calculators in the schools. Classrooms will now have sets of grade-level appropriate calculators appropriate. Even so, to Dr. Smith, basic math skills are still vital.

'We'll focus on the issue of making sure kids know math facts," Dr. Smith said. The staff and community are featured in the second goal. Continuing training for teachers and communication with the townspeople are vital to the schools. Dialogue with the community stemmed from the Citizen's Advisory Board, which last year advised redistricting of the elementary schools.

"The challenge is to keep the size of classes as

Dr. Smith and Mrs. Pepper have also slated a study of the use of technology as a target. Dr. Smith said he feels Westfield schools have not taken advantage of the latest in educational equipment. "We've been slow to adopt changes in technology in the classroom," Dr. Smith said. Interactive television, which allows students and teachers from different schools to communicate through satellites, is one of the options to be explored. Dr. Smith said he will recommend community input.

The last objective for the schools this year will be beginning a joint program with Plainfield, including a Saturday Latin class for fifth-graders. There will be 10 classes held in each town. While half the students will be from each town, the classes are expected to total 40 students. Both Dr. Smith and Mrs. Pepper feel it is an important step in urban and suburban schools working together to improve the quality of education across the state.

Westfield school officials are also active in the Garden State Coalition of Schools. Dr. Smith is president of the group, which includes 71 school districts. The organization aims to be involved in the decisionmaking process in Trenton, particularly the Quality Education Act.

"We're continuing with pro-activity on a state level to stay on top of legislation in the interest of our kids," Mrs. Pepper said. Due to state budget caps, local budgeting will have to be done delicately. The "dwindling resources" will require sound judgments, Mrs. Pepper said. Funding is always a subject that influences every decision.

In addition, four out of five of the employee groups teachers, custodians and maintenance workers, administrators and teacher aides -- will be negotiating

Nuclear weapons opponents register voters

Dy ELIZABETH GROMEK

Union County SANE/FREEZE: Campaign for Global Security spent last Saturday at the Foodtown registering voters. The organization, which works for the elimination of all nuclear weapons, is also asking voters to sign a pledge endorsing candidates who will support three objectives.

. The goals set an agenda on how tax dollars are spant. The goals are: to increase funding for job retraining and development, housing, health care, education, environmental protection, rebuilding infrastructure, and drug abuse prevention and treatment, to pay for these programs with at least a 10 percent reduction in military spending each year for the next five years, and to convert unnecessary military facilities to civilian uses.

Gretchen Cole, an active volunteer in SANE pointed out the total reduction in spending would be 50 percent in five years' time, not 10 percent as in President Bush's plan.

The pledge was written by the Citizens' Federal Budget Campaign of New Jersey, which hopes to get 50,000 voters to sign the pledge.

The organization also has a pledge for candidates to sign, promising to further these objectives in the governing bodies. So far, according to Ms. Cole, no candidates have signed the pledge.

Another attraction at the voter registration was the "penny poll." Voters were given 10 pennies and faced five banks to put them in, determining where they want their tax dollars spent. Out of the choices, environment, health care, military, housing, and education, Ms. Cole said usually the military ends up with the fewest pennies.

On Saturday, $20 worth of pennies were given out to 200 people. Education was the most popular expenditure, getting 38 percent of the pennies. Health care was a close second, with 36 percent, 14 percent went to the environment, 8 percent to housing, and only 4 percent to the military.

The entire day was a success, according to volunteer Connie Dickerson. All the volunteers thought the day was productive and worthwhile, she said.

"It was a good experience," Ms. Dickerson said. "It raised people's awareness of the issues that are involved in the election."

The National Priorities and Citizens Budget Campaign, supported by SANE/FREEZE and other New Jersey non-profit organizations, sponsored a study on how tax dollars spent on the military take away from other areas, like health care or education.

SANE will be registering voters again at Foodtown this Saturday.

Resolved:

A few New (school) Year's Resolutions from three top county education officials

To one believes it, but most schools will have reopened in less than 10 days. The 1992-93 school year dawns, presenting a welcome occasion for parents, students and teachers, the Big Three of forces in education, to make some "New Year's Resolutions."

Forbes Newspapers asked superintendents of schools in Somerset, Union and Middlesex to suggest New Year's resolutions to the Big Three.

Here, with our explicit endorsement and highest hopes for implementation, are their suggestions for resolutions: For parents...

Continue to support public school education by attending meetings, volunteering in any way in the schools, and helping your own

students with their homework. (Somerset County Superintendent Dr. James H. Mundy)

Give maximum support to youngsters so that they become the best they can be and perform at their maximum level. (Union Superintendent Dr. Leonard D. Fitts)

Be accountable for your part of the task of learning. Go to class with the right work ethics. (Somerset's Dr. Mundy)

Dedicate yourself to producing the very top quality work of which you are capable. (Union's Dr. Fitts)

Teachers...

Continue to deliver an education program of quality. And continue to serve as pseudocounselors. (Dr. Mundy)

Dedicate yourself to being the finest teacher and models for the kids. (Dr. Fitts)

Serious help

County-wide rape crisis center calls for special, mature volunteers to help victims

The pressure on the staff at the County's Rape Crisis Center in Westfield is building, because the number of women calling for support in the wake of recent rapes, or even crimes committed years ago, is growing. There also are growing requests for the staff to make educational presentations and talks in schools, club groups and at health fairs.

The Center needs volunteer help to free the staff to meet such demands. But not just any volunteers. These people compassion, a nonjudgmental approach to victims and their families and friends, and enough commitment to the work to stick with it, no matter the intensity of any one case or call. Most are women, and women are better in many of the volunteer roles, but men also are welcome to apply.

Apply is a key word. Volunteers first face an orientation and screening interview, then face 13, 3.5-hour evening training classes spread through October and November. Volunteers then are matched according to their skills, strengths and availability, to specific work areas and to hours anywhere around the clock.

The Center carries about 50-60 volunteers each year and about a third of them, all women, are assigned to the Hotline. Day time help is of particular value right now, any age (at least 21, though) is acceptable, and fluency in language other than English is welcome.

The Center, now in its ninth year under county control, provides individual and group counseling, a 24-hour hotline, speakers bureau, inservice training to hospital, law enforcement and mental health professionals, consultation to professionals working with survivors, and information and referral services.

The Rape Crisis Center's volunteers play a critical role in its operation, but just as importantly, in the jarred lives of the rape victims and their friends and families. Providing medical and legal information, and the solace of an understanding person willing to listen and then help generates the satisfaction for the Center's staff and volunteers.

That gratification makes the detailed training and the often unsettling stories and suffering of the victims worthwhile for the special volunteers.

Center Director Jennifer Pruden (233-7273) is the first call for those volunteers who have the stuff to truly make a difference in this important, trying area of human need.

Candidate LaPorta didn't discover curbside mailbox issue

To The Record: A few more (final, we can only hope) words about the curbside mailboxes, made necessary by Mr. LaPorta's somewhat tardy letter in this forum last week. In that epistle Mr. LaPorta "discovers" issue...a full month after the postal officials in Westfield capitulated on the matter. Mr. LaPorta also comes to the perceptive conclusion that curbside mailboxes are "silly."

Mr. LaPorta admonishes the Town Council for not informing the public so that action could have been taken earlier to reverse this ill-conceived plan. We, who fought this skirmish, are bemused. To be sure, the initial letter from the postmaster was dated July 1, and received on July 6, a victim of the long holiday weekend. Once its contents became known to me, I contacted the local postal officials immediately, first by letter and then in a fact-to-face meeting. My letter to the editor of The Westfield

Some five days later; as the intensity of the protest increased, the postal officials advised that the Mailbox Caper had been rescinded permanently.

Thus the issue arose, was dealt with and was defeated, all within the last three weeks of July.

Now come a letter from Mr. LaPorta, appearing Aug. 20, alleging some kind of secrecy and footdragging and that the mayor and Town Council should "leave no stone unturned" to have the Post Office drop this "foolish" idea.

It was incorrectly reported that Alwine Hamilton was charged with contempt of court in relation to a complaint filed against her under the "pooper scooper" ordinance. Although she failed to appear at the first hearing, she was never charged.

A name was incorrectly spelled in the Aug. 6 edition. It was Mary Korfmacher who collected 26 bags of food for the Food Pantry.

By JOAN LOWELL SMITH

THE RECORD

It may not sound extraordinary to find an historian living in an historical house, but Diana Edkins and her historic Westfield home are both quite extraordinary. She possesses the stratified title of curator of photographs and manager of rights and permissions for Conde Nast Publications, where she has made her impact over 18 years, recently culminating in two major photographic exhibits in New York City she has coordinated.

Nestled at the end of a long drive, her 1746 farmhouse is hidden from busy Willow Grove Road, not by willows but by a gigantic copper beech tree predating the Revolution. An incredible array of wildflowers sprawl in all directions on the acre-plus property. Ms. Edkins and husband Phil Richardson created this horticultural heaven in just seven years of planting and pruning, coming to Westfield from Jamaica Estates where she was Despite being in the upper echelons of Conde Nast, publishers of Vanity Fair, House & Garden and Voque magazines, Ms. Edkins does not try to impress. Greeting her interviewer in a denim dress, she quickly offers iced tea and homeorange ginger muffins served in the lovely yard, interrupted only by the sound of birds and an occasional brief visit from her bubbly daughter Joanna, who enters fourth-grade at Tamaques School in the fall.

When not making muffins or tending to her own house and gardens, Ms. Edkins commutes to her New York office where in an astonishing nine-month period she gave birth to a coffee-table tome, On the Edge: Images from 100 Years of Vogue, just published by Random House.

The modest Ms. Edkins is quick to spread credit around for the chronological retrospective of Vogue photographs she assembled. Her collaborators were Vogue's former contributing editor Polly Allen Mellon, creative director Alex Lieberman and editor-in-chief. Anna Wintour, who combined with the historian to create a tableau of fashion never seen before. Both book and exhibit focus on the haughty haute couture models of the '20s and '30s, the unflawed exhibit simultaneously at glamour girls of the '40s and the carefree spirited models-in-motion popular today.

As if capturing all this in one book wasn't enough, Ms. Edkins also coordinated a monumental display of 250 photographs (many in the book) which were recently on display in the Gottesman Exhibition Hall of the New York Public Library at 42nd and Fifth Avenue. Not surprisingly, the exhibit bears the same title as the book. Hordes of spectators have made this the most well attended exhibit in Gottesman history.

Ms. Edkins describes her montage in book and exhibit form as a collection that reflects not only the major movements in modern photography, but also the social and historical forces that have helped shape the past century, covering such diverse themes as the changing depiction of women, cultural heroes, the history of fashion plus political and social issues from war to the AIDS crisis, quite a challenge to accomplish for one woman who also bakes a muffin or two and knows how to weed.

Weeding out 250 photos to illustrate fashion as social commentary presented a formidable challenge. A twist on the overexposed cliche about one picture being worth a thousand words comes to mind. The efficient curator has created a veritable volume of words with her selections.

Ms. Edkins did admit, "I guess I am well organized," a classic understatement considering she also orchestrated another photographic American Museum of the Moving Image in Astoria, Queens, which she says is "just over the 59th Street Bridge," displaying celebrities in natural and often intimate poses. Like the Vogue display, The Silhouette Selection of Recent Celebrity Photography from 1979-1992, parallels societal influences on stars like Liza Minelli, who Steven Meisel caught in a pose mirroring her mother. Through Herb Ritts' lens, Jack Nicholson shows his silly side holding a magnifying glass against his most outrageous smile. David Bailey's 1964 shot of Mick Jagger is worth the trip alone. The exhibit continue through Sept. 6. Film fans can also view candid glimpses of mega-stars Madonna, Elizabeth Taylor, Whoopi Goldberg Jodie Foster and Roseanne Arnold interpreted through the lenses of world-famed photographers.

Ms. Edkins was not cowed by celebrating Vogue's centennial iff exhibit and book form, although she does appreciate resuming no mal breathing until the next project. After graduating from NYU with a bachelor's degree in art his tory, followed by her master's in fine art from SUNY in photographic history, Ms. Edkins has had little time for relaxed breat ing in a career that has included stints at Eastman House as research assistant, lecturer at Pratt Institute, Cooper Union and the New School in her specialty, 10 years consulting to Time-Life Books and several years at the Museum of Modern Art, curating its department of photography.

The Plainfield campus will offer seven associate degree programs in liberal arts, business, accounting/ data processing, business management, occupational therapy assistant, physical therapy assistant, and respiratory therapy. It also will house the Institute for Intensive English, a program of English for speakers of other languages, and the Employment Skills Center, a program of basic skills and jobs training for the unemployed and underemployed.

The Plainfield campus is part of the college's Urban Initiatives designed to bring higher educational services to residents of western Union County. It is coupled with other efforts to bring such services to the county's eastern sector with the January opening of a new Elizabeth campus.

Meanwhile, the college will close its Scotch Plains campus later this month and transfer programs of study from there to the Elizabeth, Plainfield, or Cranford campuses as follows: Elizabeth - business gineering technology, computer science/data processing, electromechanical technology, electronics engineering technology, manufacturing engineering technology, mechanical engineering technology, office systems technology, and practical nursing; Plainfield - accounting/ data processing, business management, occupational therapy assistant, physical therapy assistant, respiratory therapy, and practical nursing; Cranford - architecture option to engineering.

Criminal justice students at Union County College this fall can opt for a new certificate program as an alternative to the associate degree program. This course of study is designed for persons seeking to receive a condensed, more programmatic version of the regular curriculum.

New courses for the fall semester are: "Introduction to Computing," a three-credit survey course designed to introduce the student to prepackaged applications software and the microcomputer; "Introduction of Psychology/Sociology," which will provide students with basic concepts, research methods, and principles of psychology and sociology, along with a consideration of practical applications in everyday life; "Basic Skills Review in Elementary Algebra," which is a brief review of the basic skills necessary to pass the Elementary Algebra portion of the New Jersey Basic Skills Placement Test, and "Beginning Algebra I," which is designed for students with little or stock up on back-to-school sup- cepted). Teachers, staff getting schools ready for the big day

Joe Binder, a third-grade teacher at Harding School in Kenilworth for almost three decades, spent part of last week getting his classroom ready for the upcoming school year. Teachers throughout the area will soon be welcoming back students as summer vacation comes to an end.

veryone expects students to have butterflies in their stomachs before the first day of school. But for teachers and custodians, those very same butterflies start in August.

A few weeks before students put on their back-to-school shoes and walk through the door with their new lunch boxes in hand, there is much cleaning and setting up to do. Teachers are winding up their vacations and spending time putting up bulletin boards, figuring out ways to implement new materials into the curriculum, and trying to incorporate what they learned over the summer in workshops and seminars.

Maryann Molnar, a kindergarten teacher at Franklin Elementary School in Westfield, said it takes at least five full days to get the classroom ready. But, because she is switching from teaching first-grade to kindergarten, she started last week. Her classroom walls are covered with colorful cutouts with the alphabet or numbers on them.

One of her distinctive challenges this year will be having several Japanese students in her class. They will be participating in the English as a second language program, but still spend the majority of their time in her class.

"We use a lot of pictures, anyway," Ms. Molnar said. "The written word is a foreign language to all the kids at this point."

The planning for the year is also important, according to secondgrade teacher Eileen Cambria. She rolls of crepe paper, and a bevy of dergarten, has just started her said.

is reviewing new materials and other decorating helpers, teachers classroom decorating. There is still planning how to use them best in began to enhance classroom surthe classroom. Because teachers need to give the children their full attention when they are in the classroom, being prepared is crucial, she said.

"You can't do this job by the seat of your pants and last!" Mrs. Molnar said.

Over in Cranford at Walnut Avenue School, Principal Joan Melvin was hard at work designing a colorful 5-foot high house on one hallway wall. Contrary to popular belief, principals like Ms. Melvin have not lost their flair or love of getting ready for the first day of school.

"I love doing this," she said with a laugh, 'after all I was a teacher for a long time." The decoration announces that literature-based reading will be a priority in the to dispel rumors some little ones school this year.

Normally teachers would be drifting in and out throughout the last days of August, preparing their classrooms for the coming school year. But this year the union contract remains unsigned, which means teachers will not come to school until the children do.

At Harding School in Kenilworth the silent reprieve of summer has been over for a few weeks. Classrooms are now freshly painted, the floors glearning, and the windows washed. Custodians prepared the way for teachers, who began drifting back the beginning of August.

Armed with boxes of supplies, roundings for the little ones who will return to school.

Joe Binder, a teacher at Harding for 28 years, was busy putting the finishing touches on his thirdgrade classroom. Wagon trains colorfully edge the walls, each depicting a part of the alphabet, while a colorful wall board announces "Welcome back." Neat rows of desks are topped by a stack of books, attesting to the fact there is much to learn in 1992-93.

Gazing around the colorful surroundings, one can see much time has gone into preparing the room. Was it always this way?

"You're posed to want to come here," says Mr. Binder, "so we make it inviting." Part of his job during the first few weeks of school will be hear "through the grapevine," about third-grade.

As for normal third-grade "tattle tales." Mr. Binder has hit on a cure.

"I have them confront each other instead of coming to me," Mr. Binder explains, "they tell each other they are sorry and it is over. Most of all it works." He will spend the next week or so working on a special math program. But the night before, well, that will find the popular third-grade teacher tossing and turning.

" I always get excited the night before school opens," he admits. Marti Tisch, who teaches kin-plenty of time, though, to prepare the way for the children who will race through the door in just a few weeks. What does she hope for the coming year?

"That they don't cry," says the teacher who gives an abundance of hugs to the newest addition to the Harding roster. Yet Mrs. Tisch is looking forward to her new pharges, and the new year.

"They learn so much in one year, and they always come back to visit after they move up," she says smiling.

Teachers are not the only ones getting a jump on the school year. Custodians at the Evergreen School in Scotch Plains started sprucing up the building for September the day after school ended. They have polished floors, claused desks, and touched up paint from one end to the other.

The major project this summer was staining classroom baseboards in the 30-year-old building. While it seems a lonely life, just a custodian and his paintbrush, it is not so bad, according to Ed Wittel, one of the custodians on staff at the elementary school.

"I've got my music cranked up and nobody bothers me," Mr. Wittel said. "During the summer, you want to spend time alone, but it's always great when the kids getback."

A commissioner of the New Jersey Bioethics Commission, Rabbi Kroloff also has served as president of the Association of Reform Zionists of America, vice chairman of the UAHC Social Action Commission, chairman of the National Task Force on Leadership Development, and as a member of the UAHC's national board of trustees and its executive committee.

A magna cum laude graduate of Yale University, Rabbi Kroloff was ordained by the Hebrew Union College and is a clinical member of the American Association of Marital and Family Therapists. He currently teaches senior rabbinic students at the Hebrew Union College and is president of the college's Rabbinic Alumni Association. He also has served Hebrew Union College as distinguished alumnus in residence and as a member of the board of governors.

The entire community is invited to join the congregation Sept. 11. Chairing the Shabbat celebration are Chet and Marge Fienberg and Zelda Kahn.

A gala celebration will mark the anniversary on Saturday night. Chaired by Rita J. Kessler and Enid Rosenblum, the evening will feature dining and dancing, as well as an original musical presentation. The planning committee for the celebration includes Barbara Karp, Stanley Schwartz, Barbara Crown, Sylvia Cohen, Lynn Henry, Deena Ochs and Nancy Katz. The celebration weekend has been coordinated by Nancy and David Breg-

St. Paul's names interim rector

The vestry of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Westfield, has engaged the Rev. Alexander Seabrook to serve as interim rector of the church. His service began Monday. Rev. Seabrook will provide pastoral care while the vestry searches for a new rector.

The Rev. Alexander Seabrook is retiring as rector of Christ Church, Joliet, Ill., having served there for the past 10 years. Prior to that he had been rector for 18 years at St. Mark's Church, Pittsburgh. Earlier assignments included vicar at St. Paul's Church, Farrell, Pa., deputy director of refugee relief for the World Council of Churches, and curate at St. Paul's Church, Dayton, Ohio.

Born in Austria in 1926, his family left that country in 1938 and settled in Ohio where Rev. Seabrook earned bachelor's and master's degrees at Ohio State University, and a master's degree in sacred theology from Episcopal Theological School in Cambridge, Mass. in 1954.

*Serving

Anytime is a good time to improve your serves, but September really is the best month. Your regular summer competition is over and the indoor season hasn't started, So plan to get out a half dozen times in September with a bag or hopper full of balls (old ones are O.K. for practicing serves or vol-leys) and go to work on improving

Hist, a Word of caution: to avoid the positibility of coming down with a sore elbow, shoulder, or wrist, don'to evier: practice serving for moresthan 20 to 25 minutes at a time. Also be sure to start serving very slowly to thoroughly warmup before you start to serve hard.

No malter what your level of skill is, you should review the basics. Your feet should be about a shoulder Widtig apart. Your back foot should be parallel to the baseline. Your front foot should be at a 45degrisis angle to the baseline. Your tous should be lined up so that an imaginary line through the tips of your can should point to where you want the serve to land.

Beginners and low intermediates should use the eastern forehand grip. Better intermediates and advariced players should use the service (continental) grip. Expert players may opt to serve using the eastern backhand grip or a grip about halfway between the eastern backhand and the service grip.

Now we come to the ball toss. A better name for it would be the ball placement. You first have to be consistent with your ball placement before you can even think about having a consistent serve. The key to self-full placement is the elimination of the placement of your entire straight straight about 45 degrees to the right of straight ahead (for a righthander). The part of your left hand should be pain of your left hand should be parallel to the ground and the ball shippid not leave this hand until the vely top of the upward arm moverit. It is all too common for playto release the ball when the arth is halfway to three-quarters of the way up. This premature release of the ball just invites the unavanted participation of the ellidw, wrist, and or fingertips in the upward movement of the ball, allight which lead to an inconsistent Get out your big scissors and cut a place of cardboard or cloth in a round shape, about 12 to 15 in ries in clameter. Place it on the gripund so that the center of it is altiput 12 to 14 inches away from your left toe, forward and about 45 degrees to the right (for a righthander). To practice ball placemight you don't have to be on a coult. You can do just as well in your yard or driveway. It is not adiviseable to do it in the house untess you have very high ceilings and your spouse or parent is not at home.

The ball should be placed up to a height of a couple of inches higher than the tip of your racket when your hitting arm is fully exteinded upward. Practice this ball placement until between eight and nine out of every 10 times the ball will drop down and land on your circle of bardboard or cloth. You will then have a good start at consigtent balt placement. If you visit any local tennis court you will-observe that over 90 percent of players do not drop their rapitets into the proper backscratch position. Also over 90 percent do not have a continuous swing on their serves. You simply hatvis to get your racket into the : (Please turn to page B-2)

Scott heads to Spain for Para Olympics

By SCOTT ZUCKER THE RECORD

The Summer Olympics are long over with,

Former Westfield star running back Leroy Gallman should split time as a starter in the Duke University backfield this fall.

Gallman follows Brown's shadow

THE RECORD

No matter how hard you try these days, it's becoming more and more difficult not to mention Dave Brown's name when the conversation turns to local sports.

The story of the still-blossoming football career of Lercy Gallman will definitely not provide any relief for those who've already grown weary of the subject. But, there's a one of Duke University's featured tailbacks this season. school with a good name." That's because the two were ex-teammates - twice

Both players became mainstays of Westfield High School's offense. Brown, the quarterback, graduated in 1988 and rang up huge amounts of passing yardage

Still a year behind Brown, Gallman emerged from his teammate's shadow by rushing for over 1,000 yards on only 180 carries in his senior year, the same year Brown was being redshirted at Duke.

So, when it came time to decide between attending Rutgers, U.C.L.A., West Virginia or Duke, Gallman chose to become a Blue Devil all over again, largely because of Brown's influence.

"If he didn't come here I probably wouldn't have come here," said Gallman, who was an All-Metro, All-Central Jersey, All-Watchung Conference and Lemming All-American selection at Westfield in 1989. "When the coaches looked at Dave on film they noticed me too. So, we both benefited. The coaches were seriously interested in me and they wanted to keep in contact with me.

This season, Gallman is in his third year of playing eligibility. When Duke opens its season he'll be splitting (Please turn to page B-2)

Turitzes' Art Lab for Kids opens

THERECORD

Remember sitting in class wearing one of your dad's old shirts backwards and holding a lump of wet clay between your fingers? What about the pride you felt when you pulled an ashtray you created out of your book bag and displayed it on the coffee table?

These days, though, there is all kinds of competition for time in a school day. Between gym class, library time, music and computer classes, there is more happening than reading, writing, and 'rithmetic.

Westfield residents Danny and Hillary Turitz felt the arts were being sacrificed in all the commotion. Rather than sit back and complain, though, they found a way to enhance in school art classes. They founded the Art Lab for Kids.

The North Avenue workshop will be running classes for children to develop their art skills, which, the Turitzes say, enhance all their visual and verbal skills.

"It's another cognitive learning situation," Mr. Turitz said. "There are visual literacy skills just like there are verbal literacy skills."

They hope the energy of the Art Lab will help the students tune into the power of the arts. Mr. Turitz recently attended a workshop at the Metropolitan Museum of Art for teachers of other disciplines who want to incorporate the arts ritz said. into their curriculum. He was interested, he said, in teachers who than cut and paste."

want to use art in Spanish classes, for example. This method of teaching allows kids to make connections between art and their lives, Mr. Turitz explained.

The classes will be arranged in age groups and are for an hour once a week, for 10 weeks. Mr. Turitz, who is a painter and illustrator, will be teaching the chilsomething at each session, but not necessarily the "arts and crafts" type, he said.

Up until 3 p.m., all the classes will be for children under 5 years. "There's a fine arts bent, rather should be comfortable with the After that, school-aged children

Sharpe promoted at Muhlenberg

A local member of the faculty of the School of Nursing of Muhlenberg Regional Medical Center, Plainfield, has been promoted to the "rank of clinical instructor by the board of trustees of Union County College. effective Sept. 1.

Professor Mary Ann Sharpe of Westfield, joined the School of Nursing faculty in 1990 after six years of professional nursing experience in areas of medical/surgical, complicated obstetrics, and obstetrics. She holds both bachelor's and master's degrees from and is working toward a doctorate at Columbia University. Ms. Sharpe is a member of the American Nurses Association and New Jersey State Nurses Association.

Mrs. Kowalczyk completes course

Cynthia Kowalczyk, executive director of the Westfield Area Chamber of Commerce, has completed a week-long program at the Institute for Organization Management at the University of Delaware. The program is produced by the Center for Leadership Development, an educational foundation of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce in Washington, D.C.

The institute is a one-week annual six-year-long work/study program. Participants use the time between annual sessions to implement on-thejob what they have learned and to prepare for the next session.

Mrs. Kowelczyk has enrolled in the program for three consecutive:years, two of which she received tuition scholarship from the New Jertilly Asacciation of Chamber of Commerce Executives.

Mrs. Kowaiczyk's class schedule included courses in management skills, public relations, managerial planning, volunteer-staff relationships, applied decision making, and transformational communications. Her chosen electives were a course on downtown redevelopment, which she found applicable to Westfield, and a course on keeping memberahip satisfaction and retention high.

Center foyer is highlight of house

MOUNTAINSIDE - A breathtaking center foyer highlights the entrance of this six-year old house at 220 Kings Court.

That house is listed at 679,000

HOUSE TOURS

through ReMax Realty Pros in Westfield.

The center foyer, accented by four-inch custom molding and a marble floor, will lead you to any part of the house, including the formal dining room at the right and the formal living room at the left.

That living room includes an imported spain marble fireplace.

Straight ahead through the foyer is a large kitchen with custom oak cabinets and a large center island.

Off that kitchen to the left is a door leading to a 14X28 deck and a family room that includes an American marble fireplace.

At the right of the kitchen is a studio room that can be converted into two additional bedrooms, and a laundry room with stairs leading to the backyard or the basement.

Upstairs is balcony area looking out over the foyer, that leads to a full bathroom with a double sink.

A second full bathroom, with a jacuzzi-sized tub, is in the master bedroom, that also includes a walkin closet and two other closets.

The three other bedrooms also have ample closet space.

Amenities in the house include a three-zone heating system, with a backup, a two-car garage, ten-foot ceiling in the basement, a central vacuum system and a burglar alarm.

The house, which is equipped with central air conditioning, is completely maintenance free, with its brick exterior.

The breathtaking center foyer is the highlight of this home at 220 Kings Court, listed at $679,000 through ReMax Realty Pros.

That house is located in what is considered a beautiful suburban community within fast and efficient commuting distance of New York and Philadelphia.

That community is known for its single-family homes on tree-lined

The borough offers numerous playgrounds, along with a municipal swimming pool, tennis courts, basketball courts, golf courses and horseback riding trails.

The largest recreational facilities include Echo Lake Park, the Watchung Reservation, Trailside Museum.

AUTOMOTIVE Q&A

By BOB HAGIN

FORBES NEWSPAPERS

Q. We recently bought a 1967 Plymouth Voyager with a 30 day/1000 mile warranty. After a week the van began to overheat and cut out. We took it back to the dealer to have it fixed since it was still under warranty. It had at blown head gasket and was repaired. Two days later the van began to cut out for no reason. It has been in a repair shop three times - replacing the regulator for the fan, an automatic idle sensor and camshaft seels. The van has been in the shop a total of 21 days and we haven't even had it two months yet. The day I picked it up after the third repair I was going through a yield sign and slowing down when the van stopped again. Are all '87 Voyagers like mine? Do I have a lemon?

San Bernardino, CA

A. If your van didn't have the stalling problem before the head gasket was replaced, it's pretty obvious that the problem was a result of the repair. It's impossible to diagnose it from this distance and if you haven't had one of the dealer's mechanics drive it until it quits, do so as soon as possible. An engine needs compression, fuel and spark to work. A mechanic can quickly pinpoint which of these are missing when your Voyager stops. If the shop you're taking it to can't fix it, try another then get your money back from the selling dealer even if it means going to court. There's no automotive problem that can't be fixed.

Q. I purchased an '84 Cadillac Seville last year. It had 87,000 miles on it and is in showroom condition inside and out. The odometer now shows 95,000 miles. It runs great but I've noticed that after about a half-hour run the hydraulic lifters get noisy when I accelerate from a stop. When I reach 30 mph, the noise stops. It's more annoying and sounds like hard pinging or knocking. My question is whether I should ignore it or is it worth the price of repairing it. I'm 77 years old, retired and just bought the car because of its style. I bought a '77 Versailles for the same reason - the style.

T.C. Brownsville, Tx A. You've discovered one of the cardinal rules of racing and that is that things are not always as they appear. The rule seems to be that the car's running gear has to come from the parent company. The Sports Car Club of America Trans Am series does the same. The recent win by a Dodge was won by a Daytona with a V8 and rear wheel drive. This is also true of National Hot Rod Association Funny Car professional drag racing. A car described as a Pontiac may have an updated derivative of a Chrysler Hemi. The rationale is that by adopting an anything goes attitude regarding racing, a better, more competitive race is presented to spectators and more importantly, to sponsors. Just don't be fooled into thinking that what you see is any more than remotely

looking into its track record is like picking a spouse based on a photograph. Beauty is only skin deep, even if that skin is metallic. If that 4.1 liter aluminum Cadillac engine is the original unit and has gotten to 95,000 miles without a major catastrophe, it's above average. The engine is more than somewhat fragile and leaks coolant into the oil system through shrunken intake manifold

"gaskets. This destroys the crankshaft and its bearings.

Never ignore any kind of noise in any engine and especially in one of those early 4.1 liter Cadillac engines. It

Q. I don't usually watch auto races on TV but I recently watched an ESPN racing show of a NASCAR race that was won by a Chevrolet Lumina. In a prerace preliminary, It showed the racing Luminas as having V8 engines with the rear wheels being driven by a driveshaft. I own a

The NEW Villager

Automotive Guide

Mercury Villager uses best of U.S./Japanese ingenuity

By BILL RUSS

FORBES NEWSPAPERS

The minivan has been around for not quite 10 years, and in that short time has made a sizable impact on the American car market. For good reasons, as a minivan combines the interior space and capacity of a large station wagon in a smaller, more manageable pack-

The latest entry in this segment is the Mercury Villager. This is a joint project started in 1988 when Ford and Nissan executives decided there was room in the Ameri can market for new minivan m o d el. An agreement was signed with t h e goal of developing a completely new product utilizing the latest in design studies and manufacturing techniques. At its La Jolia studios Nissan developed the overall shape, and designed it from the inside for greater space utilization. Also, it provides engines from overseas as well as the Smyrna, Tennessee facility, along with major structural components. Ford had the production capacity available at its Avon Lake, Ohio plant and was assigned the task of redesigning the facility for the assembly of the new vehicle. Both Mercury and Nissan minivans are b uilt on the same production line using the same people and virtua l ly the same components from both the U.S. and Japan. Regardless of nameplate, there is enough American content in each vehicle for designation as a d omestic minivan.

APPEARANCE: The smooth contours of the villager evolved from the Nissan Design Institute's assignment to make this a people carrier, not a cargo carrier. A coefficient of drag of .36 for a van surely alludes to its aerodynamic, but practical design. Its large amount of near flush glass convey the passenger viewing capability. The hood and windshield slope at near equal angles up to a long roof and back to a large rear hatch, while the sides are subtly curved and sculptured.

COMFORT: To assure true passenger car comfort the Villager can seat up to seven in 14 different seating configurations. Front seating is conventional with two adjustable captains chairs with folding arms, while the back has a combination of bucket and bench seating. The analog gauges are readable, and all controls are easy, to reach. The sound and climate control systems have optional separate controls for the rear area. Both systems match the capacity of the vehicle. Many other conveniences and huxuries abound, depending upon the model GL (base) or LS (deluxe) and which preferred option packages are selected.

ROADABILITY: The Villager was designed to ride like a car, and that it does. In fact it matches the supple handling of some touring sedans, thanks to a strong chassis, a car-like suspension system that allows a low, flat floor, and variable assist power steering. Anti-lock equate, but not overwhelming, and brakes are standard on the Villager if more than 2,000 pounds are to be and provide secure stopping. Safety is further enhanced by meeting the 1993 Federal Passenger Car beams, front and rear impact absorbing zones, and five-mph bumpers, as well as three point seat belts on all outboard seats. The Villager is a truck that thinks towed the optional trailer package raises the capacity to 3,500 pounds.

PERFORMANCE: Power .to the front wheels is from a well-proven Nissan-supplied 3.0 liter SOHC V-6 that can produce 150 horsepower. A new electronically controlled 4speed automatic transmission was particularly developed for these vehicles and designed to provide very smooth shifting. The power is ad plete base GS trim.

ECONOMY: EPA ratings are 17 Safety Standards with side impact city/23 highway. Estimated averages are 20.7 mpg.

> CONCLUSIONS: What's interesting about the Villager/Quest enterprise is it brings into focus the true internationality of todays automotive market. Ford and Nissan each felt a new U.S. built minivan was needed and put their heads together to decide who its for and what its for and then go ahead and use the best of each.

Playing the field at the local sports bar

By JEFF HANEY WeekendPlus Writer efore attacking this story a look at the sports bar scene in the Weekend Phus area — I had never given much thought to the phenomenon of sports bars.

No, when it came to bars, I always aligned myself with the Mike Royko school. I figured Royko, a syndicated columnist, said it all when he defined a good tavern as "a place where they serve the whiskey in oversize glasses so that those with the shakes won't be embarrassed by spilling it all over their clothes."

It seemed a fair standard of judgement to me. Generous shots, a bartender who springs for a round once in a while, and maybe a television — that made for a good bar.

But I had it all wrong.

Because I assumed a bar was simply a place to sit and drink. What a sad, misguided notion.

Never did I dream that a bar could be a place to work on my foul shot. To engage in a cutth toat game of one-on-one basketbair. To play 18 holes of golf (putts only). To play quarterback, throwing real spirals to imaginary receivers. To velcro-jump.

Yet at sports bars, I could do all these things. And more.

Strictly defining a sports bar, however, was not easy. Sure, if an establishment calls itself something like "Bleachers" and has three basketball courts and four batting cages along with fully stocked liquor shelves, it's definitely a sports bar. And if Joe's Pub down on the corner puts the Jets' game on its 13-inch black-and-white TV on Sunday afternoon, it's still not a sports bar.

In between, there's a lot of gray area. You'll find, however, that the following qualities help define a sports bar. To qualify as a sports bar, an establishment doesn't have to have all these aspects, but it should have most of them.

So, a true sports bar will probably have...

•A sports-inspired name. This can range from the cutesy-type monikers such as "The Dugout" to the simple ones such as "Tom's Sports Bar."

Sometimes, it seems as if the proprietors of sports bars take their names more seriously than the owners of more traditional watering holes. Perhaps that's a reflection on the rabid nature of sports fans in general. For instance, during the 1990 Stanley Cup hockey playoffs, the Boston Bruins were battling the Edmonton Oilers in the finals. This prompted one tavern in Edmonton, formerly called the "Bruin Inn," to change its name to the "Bruins Out, Oilers Inn."

And over in the Bay Ridge section of Brooklyn, the name of a sports bar is causing the owners real headaches. The three small businessmen who own the "Brooklyn Dodger Sports Bar and Restaurant" have been sued by the Los Angeles Dodgers baseball team, who claim they still retain the rights to the Brooklyn Dodger name, 35 years after they moved to California. After two years, the lawsuit continues to flounder in the legal system.

•Plenty of sports-related items on the walls, tabletops, ceiling, etc. A single, scratchy 8 x 10 team photo reading "Kelly's Beer Hall, 1978 softball runner-ups" doesn't count. No, we're talking full-color matted lithographs on the walls surrounding the bar and above each table and booth. Local heroes will be the most prominent subjects, so in the New York area expect plenty of pictures of Mickey Mantle, Joe Namath, Don Mattingly, and the like. Similarly, if you're in Philadelphia you'll see Steve Carlton and Tug McGraw and Randall Cunningham.

However, an exceptional sports bar decorator will include large photos of more obscure players from everyone. The ones with restaurants draw a family crowd at dinner time, corporate diners at lunch, and a young, active late-night crowd. With few exceptions, sports bars do not feature a bar-hopping crowd — they're too inconvenient. Rather, sports bars market themselves as the destination of the evening.

After all, in one stop you can watch the game, eat, drink, play games, and socialize. Even if you tried, you'd be hard-pressed to design a Hemingway-esque, The Sun Also Rises-type bar crawl solely around sports bars. At least in New Jersey. All the big, popular sports bars in this area lie far apart — definite driving distance. •A cornucopia of television sets. For many sports bar-goers, this is the single most important factor. Even a small sports bar will have multiple regular-size sets along with one large projection screen. For the larger sports bars, a count of several hundred TVs is not out of the selves.

Cable is a must, especially ESPN. Where else besides your own home can you catch those allimportant Big West Conference college basketball games late at night?

Most sports bars also receive satellite TV, which can really come in handy to us here on the East Coast. After the Knicks-76ers, for instance, you can watch the Lakers-Clippers from 11:30 until last call. Participatory activities, in addition to drinking. These range from velero-jumping to darts, and can be considered the factor that absolutely, positively sets sports bars apart from traditional drinking establishments.

Weekend Plus-area sports bars offer a vast array of these activities. Here's a thumbnail sketch:

Top of the Key

This perpetually-crowded North Brunswick sports bar boasts all the old standby games — bowling, darts, Hoop Shot — plus, on certain nights, robotic boxing. In robotic boxing, two competitors each operate a robot with controls located just outside a 4 x 6foot boxing ring, complete with scoreboard and refkingpin of them all."

Once inside Poor Billy's, you'll find a one-on-one basketball court with regulation net and backboard, which can give new meaning to a shot and a beer. Also, a golf-putting game ($1 for nine holes, $2 for 18 holes), a boxing ring (used as a dance floor or a stage for comedians), and, if it's a Wednesday night, velcro-jumping.

Perhaps the most impressive aspect of Poor Billy's, however, is the grand total of over 200 TV sets in the cafe.

Poor Billy's is located on Route 9 North in Woodbridge. Phone 634-5454.

Legenda

Located in the Readington Roadhouse on Route 22 East in Whitehouse (534-1504), Legends Sports Bar features a unique football-throwing game. Two players — the "quarterbacks" — battle each other headto-head, throwing passes toward two holes in the backboard — a lower hole, which yields gains of 1-9 vards, and a higher opening, which yields gains of 9-24 yards. An electronic scorekeeper tallies each player's yardage, and you can earn first downs by racking 1078.

up 10 yards.

Other diversions at Legends include Pop-A-Shot basketball, the golf-putting game, and video games.

The bar's five TVs, including a wide-screen, show Philadelphia and New York sports from cable, and nationwide events pulled down from satellite. A Monday night darts league is slated to begin with the onset of Monday Night Football.

Another Legends, owned by same company, is located at Willie's Tavern on Route 202 in Bedminster. Phone 234-1596.

First Place

Located in Bridgewater Commons, First Place combines a highly-regarded full-scale restaurant and a sports bar. Although its only games are video baseball and football, First Place does have 22 TVs and a sports motif. Watch for their Great Bicycle Giveaway, scheduled for September 13. Phone 218-9333.

A Clint classic?

'Unforgiven' doesn't quite live up to the hype

By JEFFREY COHEN WeekendPlus Film Critic hat's the first thing you think of when you hear the name Clint Eastwood? Quick! Action guy, cowboy, Dirty Harry, Man-With-No-Name, tough character. Okay. But "auteur" doesn't necessarily leap to mind. There's a reason.

You may have read a lot lately about Unlargiven, the new western Clint produced, directed and stars in. The ads, for example, quote one critic as saying the film is a "sure-fire classic." Others, like The New York Times critic Vincent Canby, have heralded the stark, downbeat movie as a sign that Eastwood is on his way to being one of the most interesting filmmakers we have.

Well, maybe. Then again, maybe not.

Unforgiven is a perfectly serviceable Western, not too far from being traditional, with a dollop more depth given to the characters than usual. It is a thought-provoking movie — maybe Eastwood's best directorial effort to date — and its filmed with an eye for scenery and a point of view. But it is not a sure-fire classic.

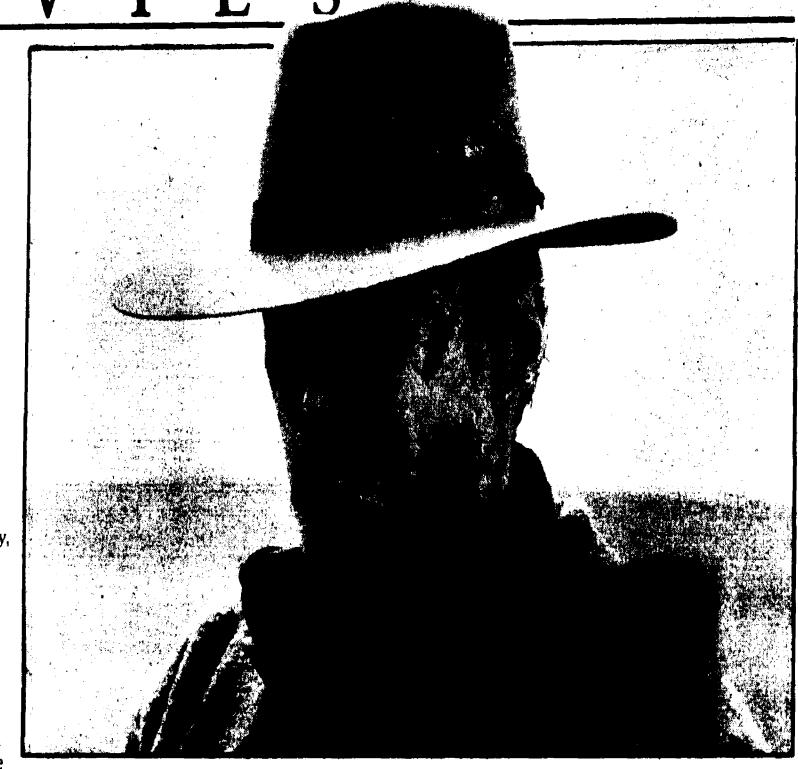

What the movie offers is a standard Western plot line with a few quirks. When a nasty cowboy gets offended at a prostitute and cuts her face brutally, the other sportin' women pool their money and let out the word that anyone who kills the assailant and his partner can have $1,000.

That seems like a lot of money to Will Munny (Eastwood), a former assassin, now a widowed hog farmer with two young children to support and a farm full of feverish hogs. Enough that he's willing to overlook his vow never to strap on his guns again, and head out to Big Whiskey to do the job and collect.

The rest of the film deals with Munny's efforts to complete his assignment and the efforts of his partners — an obnoxious youngster who calls himself the Scofield Kid and Munny's virtuous former partner (Morgan Freeman) and competitors to do the same. The obstacle is personified mostly in the considerable presence of the local sheriff (Gene Hackman, in a rare villainous role), who kicks people a lot.

In the course of the movie, Munny and the others have to deal with more than just the concerns of traditional Western characters: they don't just pull the trigger and run; they're subjected to guilt over killing, and in some cases, are unable to pull the trigger at all.

Munny, himself, is torn over his promise to the deceased wife he considers a saint (his character is downright spooky talking about her; he uses the cadence and the language of a brainwashed cultist), and the difference between simply killing a man when you're numb with alcohol and doing the job cold sober, looking at a living human being in your sights.

Clint Eastwood's latest directorial effort, Unforgiven, has drawn raves from some critics. But not all of them.

But does Unforgiven establish Clint as a moviemaker with his own personal vision? Well, if having your own personal vision means always making a movie that needs at least 20 minutes cut out of it, sure. Eastwood is less interested in a tight story and more in windy moralizing. The weather cooperates with his moods, too: it rains whenever Clint rides into town with his awful burden and the clouds are always hanging over Big Whiskey, threatening to fall down and crush the town. It all screams "Allegory, Allegory" at the audience so loudly it's hard to hear the dialogue sometimes.

In his other films as a director, Eastwood has suffered from much the same problem. His supposedly clear-eyed, warts-and-all portrait of Charlie Parker, Bird, suffers from a good half hour that needs to be cut out, and everything's so dark you can barely tell what's going on half the time. (The answer to that question is: not much.)

And Unforgiven also shows off Eastwood's heavy, heavy hand with light humor. The comic "relief" in the film is sometimes very hard to identify. Even when Clint has trouble getting on his own horse, you can't tell if it's supposed to be funny or pathetic. In movies like Bronco Billy, which is actually kind of charming in spots, you sometimes get the same problem. But here, with the overall doomsday tone set, it's really a chore finding the laughs.

The cast, of course, is a dream. Hackman, as usual, is just about perfect, giving even the loathsome sheriff some charm in scenes with a dime-novel "biographer," (Saul Rubinek) who the sheriff wishes to impress. Richard Harris, as a competing hit man who doesn't do very well, is bombastic and loud, as usual (no, that's not Peter O'Toole; it's Richard Harris). And Morgan Freeman, pretty much reviving his Robin Hood role as the noble sidekick, is understated and fine as he ever is, even if it is weird that in post-Civil War America, nobody notices he's black.

Unforgiven is not a movie to be overlooked; in a summer filled with thoughtless puff pieces, it has a brain. But it's not Satyricon, or even The Searchers. It's just not.

BATMAN RETURNS *For what it's worth, better than Batman. Like some bloated Andrew Lloyd Webber stage spectacle, Batman Returns is a triumph of production design rather than storytelling. There are three villains this time, all nifty: Christopher Walken as a scheming industrialist; Michelle Pfeiffer as the vinyl-suited Catwoman; and Danny DeVito as the hissing, libidinous Penguin. But Michael Keaton is even more of a stiff than usual, and the Caped Crusader gets so lit-

Donald Sutherland is suitably creepy as the vempirekiller recruiting officer, while Paul "Pee-Wee Herman" Reubens stakes out new territory as the later to Rudger Hauer's king of the vempires. Could Pee-Wee Meets Frankenstein be next? The movie also manages to effectively jab at the Southern California mail culture, where looks are everything, even for the living dead. (PG-13)

'30 Walks in New Jersey' is a must for hikers

> By SHARLINE CHIANG WeekendPlus Writer ey, yuz from Jurzee? What

Unfortunately, this familiar salutation is shame of New Jerseyians, whose state usually conjures nothing more than the images of congested highways and billowing clouds of industry.

Like many New Jersey natives, I too wonder sometimes why we call it the "Garden" state, and always thought a walk in New Jersey was something you do when your car breaks down.

So if you want to get away from this bustling metropolis, head out for a rural stroll where you can find windswept beaches, rolling hill country, botanical gardens, quaint villages, broad green valleys and auburn cedar swamps.

But don't bother buying a train ticket, because these pictorial lands of natural paradise are found right in your backyard - in New Jersey.

Thanks to Kevin Dann and Gordon Miller, the authors of 30 Walks In New Jersey ($12.95, Rutgers University Press), you can rediscover the beauty of this state by hiking along the Kittany Ridge, the Highlands, the Piedmont, the Delaware River Valley, the Pinelands, Cape May and along the Atlantic Coast.

The book, an updated version of the authors' original 25 Walks in New Jersey, is a novice hiker's dream, with the trails rated as "easy", "moderate" or "difficult." The routes are also measured according to the amount of time it would take to start and complete.

To top it off, clear maps, detailed directions and informational phone numbers are provided for the truly clueless beginner, whose idea of a hike is getting the mover out of the shed.

Once you get started, the book will guide you along as the authors point out distinctive rock formations, plant communities, and wildlife. You'll also learn about some interesting ways on how humans have shaped the New Jersey landscape.

If you're the type who can't tell the difference between a witch hazel plant and a purple cliffbrake fern, this book will teach you how and give you some historical background behind each plant as well. The same is true for bird watching. Along each walk, the authors give directions on where and how to spot birds like chickadees in the Ramapo Mountains to bufflehead ducks in Cheesequake State Park.

Besides presenting the courses, Mr. Dann and Mr. Miller remembered to take care of both Mother Nature as well as the hiker by including two sections: "Taking Care of the Land" and "Taking Care of Yourself".

This boardwalk is part of the walk through Lord Stirling Park detailed in the updated edition of 30 Walks in New Jersey available from Rutgers University Press.

> Before you go gallivanting off to the woods, they ask you not to disturb the wildlife, not to smoke while hiking and "Leave the trail as if nothing had been there."

As for the traveler, they give tips on how to identify deer tick which transmit Lyme disease, and also what to wear for prevention.

Just to be picky, I found one drawback in the guide. When I opened up the book I was expecting colorful photos to lure the reader into these beautiful trails. Instead I found some (yawn) black-and-white snapshots of a flower and rock here, and a historical house there (not that you find many color shots in any $12.95 book).

But the duo makes up for the lack of pictorial evidence with some great wildlife anecdotes, like how the carpenter frog, found in Wharton State Forest, first got its name.

"The carpenter frog gets its name from its call, which sounds like two carpenters hitting nails one right after the other."

The charming text reveals the two authors as the experienced naturalists that they are. Mr. Dann is a naturalist, geographer and a historian. He's also written a book called Traces on the Appalachians: A Natural History of Serpintine in Easter North America, Mr. Miller is a historian and the author of Lost in the Language of Nature.

After reading 30 Walks in New Jersey I felt the first chills of autumn tugging at my walking shorts. Eagerly, I thought to myself: It's time to

Mr. Dann and Mr. Miller's book is helping to put the "New" back in New Jersey, and maybe someday the state salutation will become, "Hey yuz from Jerzee? What walk?"

The paperback book, small enough to fit inconspicuously in your back pack, will be available September 1.

Something for everyone at Flemington Fair

Monster trucks, pig races, 4-H exhibits and more on tap for 136th annual edition

By CHLOE MILLER WeekendPlus Writer ver 300,000 people attended last year's Flemington Agricultural Fair. Were you one of them?

If not, you'll have another chance to find out what all the fuss is about from Sept. 1-7 between 10 a.m. and midnight, when the annual event takes over the Flemington Fairgrounds for the 136th straight year.

The Flemington Agricultural Fair has been ranked in the top 100 fairs in the United States, positioned 72nd in 1991, for the past six continuous years by the Amusement Business Magazine. No other fair in New Jersey has managed to accomplish this feat.

Each day will host special and ongoing activities for every age and interest, from rose competitions to elephant rides to monster trucks on the 50 acres of fairgrounds at the Flemington Motor Speedway. Thesday, Sept. 1, the festivities beg... with Children's Day, when kids under 12 are admitted free, with a special drawing for a new breycle.

Wednesday, Sept. 2, will be Farmer's Day and Senior Cutzen's Day, and Thursday, Sept. 3, will have free admission up to 5 p.m. Friday, Sept. 4, will be another Children's Day, which segues into Fireman's Night, while Saturday, Sept.

5, will feature the enduro races and stock car races at the Speedway. Sunday, Sept. 6, highlights at the Speedway include stock car races and a monster truck show. Monday, Sept. 7, the Flemington Fair will conclude with the popular Demolition Derby.

Daily admittance is $4.50 Tuesday through Friday, $5.50 on the weekend, and $2 for children 12 and under.

Especially for children, Speed-O the Clown will return to help with the big wheel races on Tuesday and Friday. He will also perform in front of the grandstands throughout the track activities. Cookie the Clown will be seen hosting the "Kids Comedy Magic Show" and roaming throughout the fairground the entire week.

The world's largest traveling amusement park, Amusements of America, will come and stay for the duration of the fair. In its 52nd year, Amusements of America has been coming to the Fair for about 30 years. Along with old favorites and children's rides, an oldfashioned ride day on Wednesday from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. when every ride is only $1.

The theme of the flower displays this year will be "Rediscover America." There will be different classes from the miniature division, designer and horticultural divisions to the many junior divisions. The Garden Club of Hunterdon County is sponsoring the annual flower show, which will be staged Tuesday, September 1st and Friday, September 4th. Lionel Electric Trains will be running on the layout in the metal building. The Millburn Train Center will also have a large selection of "Thomas the Engine and Friends" to select from at the Fair. Tickets for the raffle to win a free Lionel Train set can be obtained at the Fair.

Musically speaking, the Bandito Country Western Band will play Tuesday and Wednesday evening at 7 p.m. on stage near the Main Beer Garden. The Stormy Weather Oldies Revue Band is returning from last year on Friday at 7 p.m. and Saturday at 10 p.m. The Blue Ribbon Cloggers will demonstrate their Appalachian-style dancing to bluegrass country music all weekend. And with the help of impressionist Lee Estrada, "Elvis" will visit the Fairground 4 p.m. Sunday and "Roy Orbison" on Labor Day Monday at 4 p.m.

The 4-H Clubs will be featuring various animal and environmentally-related programs. Tuesday, the seeing-eye puppy demonstration will be followed by shows about sheep, lamb, dairy animals, poultry, and waterfowl. Wednesday will spotlight the dairy shows, and in the evening the square dance festival at 6 p.m. Thursday will begin early for the 4-H with a featured a goat and beef show. At high noon, the 4-H rides will be followed by the shepherd's lead competition. Friday, the dog, sheep, and critter show, the herpetology (the scientific study of reptiles and amphibians) handling contest, the open-polled hereford beef show, the prep creative recycling art contest, the fashion revue, and the queen and escort

•The New Jersey Singles and Doubles Horseshoe Championships will be hosted by the 1992 New Jersey State Horseshoe Pitchers Association again this year. The horseshoe contests will take place Tuesday through Friday at 6:30 p.m., and Saturday through Labor Day Monday starting at 12:30 p.m., Mini-grandstands near the horseshoe pitching are set up for both observers and relaxers.

•The track at the Flemington Agricultural Fair features events for children and adults alike. Tuesday afternoon, at 2 p.m., the "Big Wheel" races for kids will be the first on the track. Later, at 8 p.m., the track will host Kar Parts Night, 4-wheel drive truck pulls and Speedo the Clown. The truck pulls are open to any 4-wheel drive owner who wants to come out and pull against the competition.

Wednesday, "Farmer's Day," farm tractors can be weighed in and registered at 9 a.m. and featured an hour later at 10. Five weight classes from 800 pounds to 1400 pounds will be held to include the machine and driver. A special 800-pound junior class will be held for 10-16-year-olds with parental permission and a 1000-pound class for women. Wednesday evening at 8 p.m. the mighty modified trucks and tractors will compete in the open Grandstands between turns one and two. Many more seats are available than last year, but it is advised to arrive early for a prime seat.

For children, the "pedal tractor" pulls will take place Thursday morning.

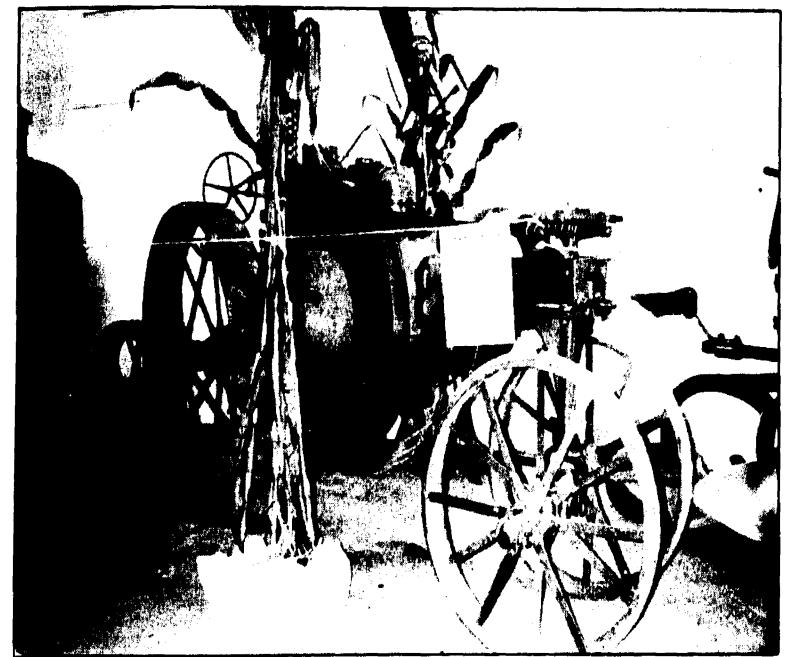

The first auto racing will begin Thursday evening with the pro-4 modified, late moels and Great American street stocks.

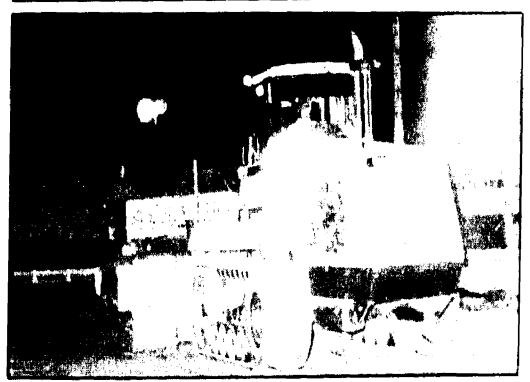

More "Big Wheel" racing Friday, September 4th will be available for the kids to participate in. The evening will speed up with the monster truck show and Todd Seeley's "World Record-Holder" motorcycle jump. Todd Seeley holds the Guiness Book of World Records for the 246-foot distance he accomplished in 1988. Seeley has also jumped the furthest on his ATV (All-Terrain Vehicle) four-wheeler at 137 feet. Depending on conditions, Seeley will attempt to break his own records at the fair. Seeley is 30 years old, and has been jumping since the age of 16. He has performed motorcycle stunts on many TV shows, including Miami Vice and movies such as Parenthood, and Superboy.

The reappearing monster truck show will be on Friday at 9 p.m. and returning Sunday at 8 p.m. In 1990, the "Towasarus Wrex" crashed through the retainer fence and headed for the race track. The driver was uninjured, and the crowd has never since forgotten. This year, the Towasurus Wrex will compete against "Above N' Beyond," "The Keystone

Saturday, September 5th at 2 p.m., the two-hour enduro race will be held. An enduro is a chaotic, immensely-entertaining race of endurance; when the green flag is given, the race will continue unless a driver is injured, a fire develops or the track becomes entirely blocked. The winner is determined by the last vehicle that has the capability to move under its own power, not withstanding the condition of the car. At 8 p.m., the modified and Great American 782-2413.

street stocks will put on a traditionally exciting show.

The afternoon of September 6th. at 2 p.m., the "Daytona" series for the late models, TAR-cars and micro stocks will race prior to the monster truck event, followed by the return of Todd Seeley at 8 p.m.

Labor Day Monday at 2 p.m., the demolition derby and yet another Todd Seeley jump will take place in a bigger and better way than before. The fair will end on a high note after the running of the A.R.D.C. and T.Q. midgets and the National Old Times of Auto Racing Show at 8 p.m.

As you can clearly see, theres something for everyone at the Flemington Fair. For more information, call the fair office at (908)

American Heartwalk

Training Tips By Vicky Wyder

Starting to walk

Editor's Note: This is the first of a sixpart series on walking for exercise being run in conjunction with the American Heart Association's Heartwalk, Ms. Wyder is Assistent Chief of Physical Therapy at Somerset Medical Center.

Walking is for everyone. No special supplies are needed, and it's an exercise that uses every muscle in your body, while not overstreeping the joints.

Before starting any exercise program, check with your physician. If you have a history of heart disease, a strees test is usually recommended to been your exercise level on. Otherwise, a formula can be used to determine your exercise inteneity, or in other words, your target heart rate (THR). This formula is: 220 minus your age equals you maximum heart rate. Shity-five to 85 percent of meximum heart rate equals your target heart rate.

The above formula calculates your maximum heart rate, but you should never exercise at your maximum. Otherwise, you will over-work and over-etress your heart. Sixtyfive to 65 percent of your maximum is a safe level for exercise.

Taking all the above information into consideration, a method must be used to take your heart rate. Your pulse can be taken with your index and middle finger placed right below your thumb at your airways by warming the air before it wrist. Your pulse can be taken for enters your lungs.

10 seconds and multiplied by six to get your resting heart rate per minute. This procees should be repeated throughout your exercise period.

Above all, please be realistic about your walking goals. If you haven't been on a regular exercise program, don't expect to walk for half an hour without having difficulties. Start off slowly! Ten minutes of exercise to start is fine; just gradually build up from there.

You don't need much equipment for welking. In fact, all you really need is a good pair of shoes. The shoes should be lightweight, have good arch support, breathable uppers and cushioning under the ball of the foot. Wear them for a month to break them in.

Your dothing should also be loose-fitting and allow a free range of motion, it's beneficial to dress in layers, as your body temperature will increase with exercise. Cotion is a breathable fabric that is excellent to wear in any type of weather. With the cold weather approaching, dressing in layers is a must! This will keep down perspiration as you can shed layers when hot and put them back on when cooling down. Also, in cold weather, it's important to protect your airways, which are warm. A scarf worn over your mouth and nose will protect your

Technically speaking

D'Cuckoo invents its own instruments for unique sound

By BILL MILLARD WeekendPlus Writer

rt rock never quite died, although it did stink up the room for awhile. It's been about 15 years since it was safe to use the Aphrase around rock 'n' roll crowds: except for those strange little pockets of people who collect back issues of Contemporary Keyboard and view Ian Anderson as a religious figure, "Art rockers" is the label everyone with much sense tries to avoid. But there's obviously a lot of overlap between the art world and the rock world (and not just in Lower East Side bars where they don't let you in unless you wear black, cultivate a junkie tan, and can quote three William Burroughs jokes before you get the cover charge out of your wallet). Once in a while you run into a band that makes the gap between art and pop look pretty absurd.

Art rock used to be what you call something that involves too much undanceable rhythm, too many keyboards and gadgets, too many lyrics that try to win high school poetry prizes and/or save the world, too much complex technique for technique's sake and too little fun. What do you call a band that calls itself a "techno-artist collective," invents and builds its own instruments, writes a lot of lyrics about world peace and interpersonal harmony, sports impeccable instrumental technique and plays incredibly danceable rhythms? Whatever you call D'Cuckoo, don't call them an art-rock band. Their debut CD, simply called D'Cuckoo (on their own D'Kayla label, available at Tower Records), is art, and it rocks, and it won't sit comfortably in anybody's pigeonhole.

D'Cuckoo began when three members of San Francisco's Underground Marimba Ensemble started getting ideas about using marimbas as the interface for a wider range of synthesized sound. In the mid-1980s, Patti Clemens, Tina "Bean" Blaine and Candice Pacheco searched around for instruments that could handle their ideas. Blaine had studied Senegalese and Congolese percussion during travels through the Third World; Pacheco had studied Balinese gamelan music and was helping develop an electronic music department at Sonoma State University; Clemens was a student of Zimbabwean Shona marimba technique; these were people with pretty high standards. For what they wanted there was nothing on the market, nothing close. They decided they'd better build their own.

After consulting with some Silicon Valley engineers Pacheco met at a party, then spending some time in R&D — learning how to hardwire circuit boards from Craig Anderton's MIDI for Musicians and searching through 5,000 different kinds of rubber to find a material with the perfect resilience — the band (adding Tina "Rip" Phelps, veteran of the San Francisco Taiko Dojo, a demanding school for traditional Japanese drummers) had the necessary hardware. Although D'Cuckoo uses a few basses, guitars and keyboards, most of their sound comes from their own inventions: electronic marinibas (using a mailet keyboard to trigger MIDI synthesizers) and "turtle drums," enormous neoprene-and-piezoelectric devices built to take Phelps's overwhelming pounding. Their name reflects a perception that surrounded them in the early days - that they were bonkers to try making their own gear. This perception didn't last long.

Their sound is intricate, vigorous and astoundingly diverse. They've impressed some intuities ive people, making fans of everyone from Grateful Dead percussion scholar Mickey Hart to producer/performer technoguru Brian Fno (whose classic "No One Receiving" they cover with aplomb, an with reversed vocal tape ioons). Eno's work with D'Cuckoo onstage - their name reflects their reputation for being crazy even to try to invent their own instruments. But after a while, people stopped wondering and started listening.

They've impressed some impressive people, making fans of everyone from Grateful Dead percussion scholar Mickey Hart to Brian Eno.

for the band; they've worked with him in an improvisatory context, recording what he called "African Industrial Robot Dance Music" with the Neville Brothers rhythm section (recording projects with both Hart and Eno are due for release). The band's in constant progress, with new member Sarita Escobar in for Clemens and dozen fresh projects in the works; they put their collective philosophy into practice, switching instruments and using all four minds to compose and arrange.

They've also destroyed the connection between synthesizers and sterility — maybe not singlehandedly (can't forget Eno or the Band's Garth Hudson in that department), but decisively.

D'Cuckoo's flamboyant polyrhythms bring the first and third worlds together in astonishing ways. It's no accident that three songs on their album use the word "world" in the title — what these folks are after is a pan-tribal orchestra sound, something common to tribes who hit animal skins and tribes who punch deck. They call it "neoclassical postindustrial cybertribal world funk."

It's easy to go rhetorically overboard about this band, from a purely sonic standpoint. Lyrically, they often do it themselves, cranking up the neohippie verbiage to a degree you'd expect from the "house band of the virtual reality movement" (they've been a huge hit with West Coast hacker and cyberpunk crowds, of course, and with Deadheads). "One World" is right up the same alley as various Byrne/Eno writings, using aquatic imagery to signify common human connections ("Let the water flow/we are the ocean of life/ let the river flow/we are on the same side"); there's a lot of this sort of thing, never exactly naive, but not for verbal tastes formed in the cynical '80s. The politics are humanist and feminist, intelligent if sometimes a bit obvious ("Someone Else's Dreams," for example — a hard-edged, near-rap song — slams anti-choicers, the Pentagon budget, and Ollie North — deserving targets, no doubt, but one might wish for a bigger barrel to shoot fish in).

It's hard to imagine anyone listening to D'Cuckoo for words alone, or stumbling over the words on the way to the hooks. This is a rhythm band and a texture band, using ensemble vocals for melody and atmosphere but getting the real work done with marimba cross-rhythms and software writer Pacheco's electronic palette. Their range of moods is huge, from the guitar wrath of "The Whole World" to the ecrie processed chants of "1,000 Miles" and the visionary cool of "Gems." They're working on the frontiers of techno-interactivity, using a sampler-triggering "MIDI ball" of their own invention to let the crowd help shape the sound at live shows, exploring unusual instruments like the Biomuse (which uses brain waves, not hands) in the studio.

Predicting the future of world beat is a cheap parlor game, but D'Cuckoo seems about as close to it as anybody out there.

If you don't find D'Cuckoo's record in your local shop, write to Bowie, with Talking Helios and on his own is on obvious reservence point | D'Cuckoo, 6114 LaSalle Ave., Suite 414 R. Oakland, Calif. 94611. Listen up

The Waterloo Music festival concludes this weekend with a emorgaebord of classic rock Hfs. Friday, Aug. 28, Ringo Starr returns to the area on the tail end of a nationwide tour that played the Gerden State Arts Center back in Ame. Supported by the second edition of the "All-Starr Band," which includes Dave Edmunds, Todd Renderon, Burton Cummings, Joe Walsh and Nils Loteren, among others, Ringo parformed person song from No poort Time Takes Time helping of Beatle and post-Bootle hits. He also surrentiered the stage to each of the feetured performers, who used the opportunity to play their hits, including a spirited version of Rundgren's "Bang on the Drum" (Including pranekter Welch doing a carneo as the base-drumming Eveready Bunnyl) and Cumming's big hit with the Guess Who, "American Woman,"

The very next day, Joe Cocker and the Neville Brothers team up for a double-shot of classic R&B. Both shows will take place on the Waterloo Village field in Stanhope. For more information, call (201) 347-4700.

Sister sequel

> By WILLIAM WESTHOVEN WeekendPlus Editor usical minds never seem to wander very far from music.

"Do you realize your extension is just like Beethoven's 5th?" asked Dee Snider when he phoned into WeekendPlus for a recent interview. "Da-da-da-da-da-da-Here, let me play it for you (He does. He's right.). That's very happening."

Snider, of course, was the wild, lion-maned lead singer and frontman for Twisted Sister, the Long Island heavy metal band that graduated from playing Jersey Shore nightclubs to headlining arenas back in 1984, when their second album, Stay Hungry, sold over two million copies and spawned the hit teen anthem "We're Not Gonna Take it."

Now, after five years of frustration since breaking the band up, Snider is back — bigger and louder than ever — with his new band, Widowmaker. And you may be glad to know that, unlike the aforementioned phone extension. Widowmaker is not playing Beethoven.

"For the last five years, I've been in the witness protection program," he joked. "I live for being onstage and like many people of my ilk, their personal lives seem nothing without the performing...Five Years. You know the saying 'Be careful what you wish for, it might come true?' Well, I griped a little too loud and a little too long and somebody up there heard me. I was doing that bitching routine and the man upstairs heard me and said 'Try this — five years.' It's been a miserable experience. I had no idea it would take this long.

"I got out of Twisted because I was sick of it. I had expected it to go forever, so I had to do some thinking. I wanted to get it fresh again, to get excited about doing a gig instead of dreading it. I started to put together a project — blues-based, nothing like Twisted Sister, with English and Irish musicians — I spent about two years putting it together, I had a deal with Elektra Records and we recorded an album. The whole thing was ready to come out, but after investing half a million dollars, they shelved the project. I was like stunned. It was essentially a political situation. Wouldn't release the band, wouldn't release the album, wouldn't release me. It was a nightmare situation.

"After a year of that, I finally got released. But at that point, I wasn't into the blues. I was mad."

Thus was birth of the headbanger-correct attitude that conceived Widowmaker, which released its debut CD, Blood and Bullets, this month on Esquire Records. And ironically, after searching far and wide for the best musicians he could find to join the band, he found most of them right in his own back yard.

The lineup includes fellow Long Islanders Joe Franco on drums and Al Pitrelli on lead guitar. Franco, as many of you no doubt remember, was the drummer for local legends the Good Rats. And prior to joining Widowmaker, Pitrelli co-founded Danger Danger and was the musical director of the "Alice Cooper Trashes the World" tour. Completing the lineup and breaking up the New York accents is English bassist Marc Russell.

"Long Island is definitely way underrated," he said. "You get so many of these scenes erupting. Seattle now, L.A. was hot for a while, there was C.B.G.B.'s in New York, but Long Island never really got its due. And if you go back in rock 'n' roll history and make a list, it's pretty astounding. Vanilla Fudge, Billy Joel, Lou Reed, Pat Benatar, Twisted, Stray Cats, Public Enemy, L.L. Cool J, Mariah Carey. If you want to include Debbie Gibson, I guess you have to. These are all Long Island people."

Now, Widowmaker looks to join the list, and they are already off to a fast start. The band did a brief local club tour last month, and is now headed towards Texas and other points west (Snider's not exactly sure when, but promises to return to our area for more shows in the near future). Already, the old juice is back.

"When you see me perform now, people are stunned. We did a show on Long Island and we just leveled the place. I've lost like 25 pounds since the Twisted days — when you're in prison, you only have one thing to do and that's work out and stay in shape — I look like DeNiro in Cape Fear."

Equally chisled is the instrumental muscle from Franco, Pitrelli, and Russell, who prove on the album that Snider is not only back in business, he's got more support than ever. The band is comfortable playing a variety of styles, from the scattershot double-bass assault of "Emaheevul" (that's "Am I Evil" in English) to the more-commercial metal riffs of "The Lonely Ones."

With no disrespect intended to his former Sisters, Snider admits that musically, this band is way beyond Twisted Sister.

"In Twisted, there wasn't great musicianship," he said. "Some of the guys were O.K., some weren't so good. I had a lot of respect for them, but they didn't have a lot of creativity. With this band, I have enough respect for them to let them play their instruments, instead of telling them what to play, which was sort of the way it was with Twisted."

But Snider, while professing a desire to be judged on what he's doing now instead of what he's already done, hopes his new success will help to ease the restless soul of his former band.

"When you have something that goes as long as Twisted, and was as successful as Twisted, and it falls apart the way it did — and it did, it crashed and burned baby — my biggest regret is that it went out with such a wimper. My only hope is that with my new project that we reflect positive light on the old project, that Twisted will be remembered for its best elements."

Comfort and value

McCormick's offers low prices, fine food and atomosphere

> By MICKI PULSINELLI Culinary Correspondent

cCormick's surprised us. We first drove by it, then had to turn around. My husband remarked it must be closed because there were no lights out front.

But when we pulled into the parking lot on the side street, we noticed a good deal of cars were already there (this was a Tuesday night, by the way).

As we viewed the restaurant from the parking lot, we had a totally different impression. Attached to a rather large building is an atrium of equal size. Once inside we were equally impressed.

Most of the dining room consists of comfortable dark green booths with light oak tables. The booths are situated next to the large greenhouse windows or walls, overlooking Morris Avenue or the parking lot. Where there are ceilings, just before the greenhouse, they consist of either mirrors or thin wooden slats.

One area of the dining room is tile, while the other is a dark green carpet. There is lots of brass to separate the booths as well as the dining area from the lounge. Each table has a brass lamp hanging above it.

It is hard to describe McCormick's, because there are so many unique items. But I was impressed. I ate in comfort and privacy, and enjoyed my evening there.

McCormick's menu is a blend of Italian, American and Continental. You can order sandwiches, pasta, fish and chips, Southern fried chicken or even grilled swordfish or salmon. Nothing on the menu is more than $14.95 (bourbon steak), and most of the items are considerably less.

For starters, they offer two soups (95 cents for a cup to $2.25 for baked French onion), homemade chili ($3.50) or a jumbo shrimp cocktail for $5.95. There are also four salads ($2.95 to $4.95), and eight finger fooditems (95 cents for garlic sticks to $4.95 for nachos and chili).

You can order grilled sandwiches (six choices from $2.95 for a hot dog to $4.50 for a grilled ham and cheese or a Lucerne burger). Or you can have what they refer to as sandwiches, such as a Rueben ($6.25), Monte Cristo ($5.25), or a club sandwich ($5.25).

The dinner selection has 11 choices, from fish and chips ($6.50) to a 24 oz. New York shell steak for $10.95. Other selections include fish filet or sea scallops ($7.25), a seafood combination ($7.95), eggplant ravioli ($8.95), Southern fried chicken ($6.95), sliced steak ($7.95) and two choices of pasta and chicken combinations ($6.95 to $7.50).

What I just described was the regular menu. In addition, there's also a typed nightly special menu that includes several appetizers, 10 entrees (like the bourbon steak and the grilled swordfish and salmon mentioned above) and one dessert.

We shared one of the special appetizers, mozzarella and tomato salad

Gary McCormick and Faith Wilde toast to good times in the atrium at McCormick's Restaurant in Springfield.

($3.95). The mozzarella was made on the premises and it was served with slices of beefsteak tomato and red onion, and a light olive oil. There was enough for the two of us.

My husband selected his entree from the nightly special menu. He ordered the blackened orange roughy ($11.95) which was blackened in a cast iron skillet. Orange roughy is a New Zealand fish, low in fat, with firm white flesh and a mild flavor. He was served two large pieces along with sauteed vegetables of broccoli, zucchini, carrots and cauliflower and a red potato.

I ordered the 24 oz. prime New York shell steak ($10.95). This was cooked Pittsburgh style, the way I like it. It was surrounded by thin slices of potatoes, and was also served with vegetables. The beef was thick and juicy, and I ate more than I expected.

McCormick's dessert list includes ice cream or orange sherbert ($1.95), Mississippi mud pie or peanut butter crunch pie for $2.50, and cheesecake, angel food cake or an English sherry trifle for $2.50. There is also chocolate mousse in a hard chocolate coating with chocolate syrup and whipped cream for $2.95. They all sounded so good, but I was too filled for another bite of anything. I opted for a cup of coffee.

My husband, however, ordered another special, the silk pie ($2.50), which was a combination of a light pie crust with a rich creamy choco-19te mousse base topped by a creamy vanilla layer. He couldn't finish it.

McCormick's is what I call a good value restaurant. The prices are so reasonable, particularly for such a lovely setting, and the choices are plentiful. You can order a full course meal or settle for a sandwich. Either way you won't be disappointed. We weren't.

Oh, by the way, the lights were on outside, in the front of the building, when we left. I guess we arrived too early for them.

MARILYN CORMACK Wine with Reason

I just got back from San Fransisco where I attended the Society of Wine Educator's Annual Conference. Besides working on my tan, I also had the opportunity to take some invaluable wine and food pairing classes and taste some really excellent wines. If you can find these bottles in your local wine shop, please try them. I'm certain you'll be as pleased as I was!

Trefethen White Riesling 1990

Fermented cool in stainless steel, no fussing with oak and very dry, this Riesling is a very serious wine. All the lovely floral aromas follow through in a clean, fresh taste. The acidity keeps this wine lively and the flavors of citrus and melon last medium long in the mouth. If you don't like to drink Rieslings because you think they are all sweet, drink this and change your mind. About $8.00

Dry Creek Vineyard 1990 Sonoma County Fume Blanc

David Stare, vineyard owner, has always encouraged his Fume Blanc to go ahead and do what comes naturally. Why be shy about great fruitiness..straight foward sass...and a crisp finish that never lets you down flat? This wine has moderate grassiness and lavers of complex flavors to please. Floral, figs, citrus and lemon keep this wine going and going. "Poor Man's Chardonnay"? I think not! This is the wine of choice in my house. About $10.00.

Quady Winery 1991 Electra

Anyone who has taken my wine class knows how I go on about Quady dessert wines (ake the "Hot Tub Wines"). They've done it again with the introduction of Electra, an Orange Muscat wine of incredibly light viscosity and only 3.9% alcohol. Tons of fruit flavors that will remind you of Mandarin Oranges, and totally refreshing acidity that keeps it from being cloy. If you have sparkling wines for breakfast (and who doesn't?) this may become your new favorite. Try it with a peach tart.

Really! Concennon Vineyard 1987 Petite Sireh

I was looking for something that wasn't Cabernet that was still rich and full of flavor. I found it. This Petite Sirah is extraordinarily deep purple with strawberries filling the nose. In mouth the fruit leans to dark cherries and is lush with a tight core of tannins. You may want to keep this a bit before drinking it, but it promises to age beautifully. Good with game, duck and even dark chocolates. Break out of the Cabernet habit with this wine.

Next week, let's talk about a few morel Approximate prices were given where I knew them.

Presents Tips From Liz

When you own a restaurant for as long as I have, you are constantly learning about people. The one item on our menu, which everyone receives free, is Italian bread. Served warm with butter or margarine, it is devoured by our patrons. Some people like to have it with garlic butter and even smothered with melted mozzerella cheese. Whichever way it is served, Italian bread is a favorite. A very special bonus is that there is no fat or cholesterol in authentic Italian bread. One problem, when you serve it at home, is that it can become state or soggy in just one day. There is a quick solution to this probiem. Place the bread in a hot oven(450 ") for 7 to 10 minutes. Your bread will taste like it was just baked. This trick can be used for stale crackers, cookies, potato chips, etc. Do no over-cook. Also, you can make delicious bread crumbs by grinding your stale bread (make sure it is dry) in a lood processor till it is line. Then add fresh garlic powder, parmesan cheese, oregano, parsley, and if you like, a dash of salt and pepper. You will have flavored bread crumbs without additives

Even raccoons love our bread. Come in and watch them as they dunk it in our outdoor fountain
