The latest big scheme of the Standard Oil conspirators against the people is in the direction of more watered stock. As incredible as the figures may seem to be, the capital stock of the Standard Oil Company approximates $100,000,000.

EDITED BY HARRIET E. CLAYTON, W. C. T. U. MARY W. KING, Public Library, Public Schools, Westfield, N. J., May 14, 1897.

MAJOR HILTON'S ADDRESS.

The Changed Line of Battle Taken by the Forces who Fight for Temperance.

"I have not come to talk about temperance," Major Hilton said at W. C. T. U. hall on Monday evening. "I have stopped talking temperance."

What he did talk about was a senatorial, commercial, home and spiritual for, licensed and allowed by the people.

The tax or revenue from liquors was held as a relic of barbarism having first been levied to carry on war with.

The Major considered it an injustice to God to continually pray for the removal of the liquor business, since the placing of it is done directly and intentionally by the people and must be removed by the people.

The old principle of sowing and reaping was applied to tramplon, on the increase in our land because the land holds these conditions favorable to tramplon, covetousness, carelessness and ignorance, places herself in a more perilous condition than war times found her in, back in the sixties, thinks the Major, and he knows something of war times and battle.

The ignorant foreign vote allowed a five year's resident of the United States, as against the twenty one years which our college boys must attain to for qualification, illustrated the short cut to citizenship, by way of the beer keg.

The two bright phases of the outlook dealt with in the second part of the lecture, were the faithfulness of the W. C. T. U. and the knowledge coming to commercial centers that liquor is a foe to their interests.

Which of interference of personal liberty on the part of the government against doing away with saloons or the opportunity of drinking their wares, without opposition, find it quite allowable to prohibit not only the drink but the playing among their employees. They have found that gambling with five cent stakes a progressive game to truth with the corporation's funds and interests.

These are some of the bare facts brought out in a lecture which one must hear to appreciate. All that the press has said of Major Geo. C. Hilton is true, and those who could not or would not take the trouble to hear him missed a treat.

SPECIAL TOWN MEETING.

W. W. CONNOLLY APPOINTED ROAD SUPERINTENDENT.

A Resolution in the Assessor and Collector Case. The Street Lights Not Taken. Stratford & Hawkes do not Show up.

The committee came to order at 8:10, all present, and the minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved. Frank W. Morse of the Garwood Land and Improvement Co. asked the committee to assume the cost of maintaining three street lamps in Garwood that are within the township of Westfield.

E. W. Chamberlin, sewer inspector, was authorized, at his suggestion, to put in a pipe from the end of the under drain on Broad street near the bank building to the street surface, so that the drain may be flushed occasionally to prevent the accumulation of sand and the ultimate stopping of the drain.

L. G. Cohen asked if Green, Coddling & Morrell had sent in a bill yet for services rendered in the assessor and collector case. He was answered that they had not. He then explained that Morrell still had all the papers in the case, and had stated that he would not give them up until his or the firm's bill was paid.

This much accomplished, Cohen suggested further that ex-collector Gale who continues as custodian of the school money until June 11, would probably present a bill for his fee or commission for handling the school moneys from February 1, the date of his last bill, until the close of the schools, and assured the committee that nothing would be due him at that time, he having collected the full amount the law allows him, in advance.

Mr. Embree called attention to the fact that some of the grocers on Broad street were occupying altogether too much of the sidewalk with their display of goods. The committee agreed with him, but deferred a non until they could define a little more clearly the limits of their authority. Cohen suggested they appoint a road superintendent and make it his duty to see that the sidewalks were not obstructed.

Mr. Harden presented for consideration a sewer assessment bill prepared by Mrs. J. J. Hickox for 126 feet of frontage, whereas she only owns 100 feet. It was plainly an error, but the question of who had authority to change the name, was somewhat obscure and the matter was laid over for investigation.

Mr. Embree had asked Engineer Dunham for some sewer maps to hang on the walls of the town rooms, and reported the receipt of a letter from Dunham referring him to Commissioner A. B. Carleton, with whom he says he filed the tracings and black and white maps.

The street lamp question was then taken up, and it was agreed that Edwin

When 10, 20 minutes had passed away and Helen Dauntton failed to return, Mrs. Farrar had become anxious and ill at ease. Leade, too, had been listening eagerly for her step on the porch without, and, unable to control his longing to see and speak with her, despite her palpable efforts to avoid him, he had early taken his leave and gone forth in search. Ellis, slipping from the parlor into the dining room, had then managed to go to her own little chamber for a moment or two to herself. What her doubts remained as to the justice of her suspicions up to dinner time that evening, it was banished now, and her heart was against Ormsby that she should have so bravely and so bravely deceived her. Looking out from her window she could see much of the walk in front of Ormsby's row, but not a sign of Helen Dauntton. The clouds had thickened, the moonlight had grown dimmer all of a sudden. Once more the snow was sifting down. She could not dream where Helen had gone.

There are some kinds of a hold even your grip can't loosen. "No insolence. You go from here to the guardhouse as it is." "It's the guardhouse, and you, too," roared the soldier, hurrying down the carbine. "If I'm to spend Christmas in limbo, I'm cursed if you shall spend it making love to my— And here, with a tigerlike bound, his forehead brandishing a glistering knife, he lunged at the officer's throat. A little form had come leaping like a panther up the path, and even before Helen's cry had died away Crow Knife had hurled himself between the man and the shining blade was buried out of sight. There was a moment of furious struggle, and then the sentry lay, felled like an ox in his tracks, and Leade's foot was at his throat. The knife, blood-stained, had dropped in the snow. The Indian, his hand pressed to his side, was swaying slowly back as the sergeant of the guard, with a brace of men, came running to the spot.

who, over whom the dance began, had hovered near the windows that looked out toward the guardhouse, barely 100 yards away, yet now, even with its brilliant light, only dimly visible through the lashing storm. Twice had Mrs. Farrar essayed to draw her friend into the little circle by which she was surrounded, but Helen had speedily shown she was unable to give her attention to what was being said or to take any part in the conversation. It was at the window Leade found her and gently but firmly drew her to one side and closed the shade. "I have felt in every fiber," said he, "how you were waiting, watching and agonizing here for news from—from him. There is no news, Helen, except—you know the man he stabled—who gave his life for me—is dead!" "I know," was the shuddering answer. "Has he heard? Do she realize?" "Possibly not. He seems to be sleeping. But he will know this—tonight, Helen, do you know this—that tomorrow we must give him up?" "Give him up?" she asked, unable to comprehend his meaning and locking with new dread into his compassionate face. "Yes, to the civil authorities. He has—I cannot choose words now—he has committed murder and must be tried by a civil, not a military, court."

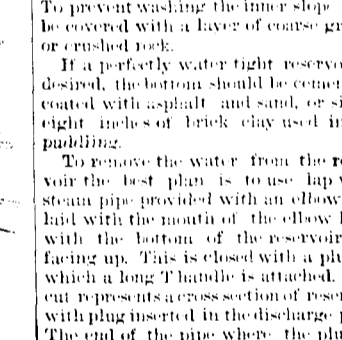

he handed it submissively to his imperious queen, who promptly stowed it away under the wooden settee against the wall and then, courtesying to her partner, indicated to him that at last he was at liberty to lead her to the dance. And now, smiling, joyous and once more thrilling with mischievous delight as she bore her silken prize across the room, Kitty came suddenly upon the major, standing according and preoccupied, gazing apparently at the portrait of Colonel Farrar yet, as was equally apparent to the little knot of laughing lookers-on, seeing it not at all. Kitty was on the point of accosting and bringing him to himself, but, with eager whisper and gesticulations, Amory, Martin and others called her to them. "Don't wake him," they murmured. "Do let Aunt Lou have that comfort. See, she's coming to him now." And, as what Kitty most wanted at that moment was an opportunity to restore her interrupted denunciation over her angered lover, and as he was blind and deaf to anything but the consideration of his own grievances, personal and official, Wayne was left to become the central object of interest, while Kitty drew her depressed officer of the guard to a distant corner.

For the purpose of Irrigation Where Pumps and Windmills Are Used. Professor F. H. King of the Wisconsin experimental station, in his paper on "Irrigation by Humid Climates," published in a farmers' bulletin, has the following to say on the construction of the reservoirs necessary where pumps are employed, and particularly if windmills are used: The location of the reservoir should be such that its level is above that of the land to which it is to supply water. The deeper the reservoir can be made the less will be the loss by evaporation and the less likely to be broken by the wind. It will warm faster in a shallow reservoir. When the soil is of a clayey nature a good reservoir may be made by first plowing and then turning the soil to a distance beyond the center of the proposed work, because if introduced into the wall it will leak. The earth is then plowed and scraped into a broad ridge having the inside slanting in order that the water shall not erode the embankment. While the earth is being deposited in the wall it should be tramped firm and close. When the proper height and form have been given to the walls of the reservoir, it is necessary to plow and thoroughly pulverize the bottom to a depth of five inches preparatory to puddling it. If the reservoir is circular in outline, the loosened soil should be first wet at the center and thoroughly puddled there by trampling with a team. Then by widening the wet area

CONSTRUCTION OF RESERVOIRS. The team may be driven round and round until the sides are reached and the whole thoroughly worked into a mortar. In this condition, if thoroughly puddled, the reservoir is nearly water tight. To prevent washing the inner slope may be covered with a layer of coarse gravel or crushed rock. If a perfectly water tight reservoir is desired, the bottom should be cemented, coated with asphalt and sand, or six or eight inches of brick clay used in the puddling. To remove the water from the reservoir the best plan is to use lap-weld steam pipe provided with an elbow and laid with the bottom of the elbow level with the bottom of the reservoir and facing up. This is closed with a plug to which a long T-handle is attached. The cut represents a cross section of reservoir with plug inserted in the discharge pipe. The end of the pipe where the plug is inserted should be thoroughly imbedded in a large mass of cement heavy enough to prevent it from being shaken when the plug is taken out or inserted. A reservoir with sloping sides should have an outlet at the junction of the sides and bottom, and it will be necessary to build a pier out to it in order to reach the plug. A reservoir 4 feet deep and 40 feet in diameter will hold water enough to irrigate 0.35 acre 4 inches deep and 0.69 acre 2 inches deep and 100 feet in diameter will irrigate 4.62 and 2.16 acres 2 and 4 inches deep respectively. The Use of White Sand. In some of the many trips taken to the seashore do not forget to bring home some clean white sand. It will be found very useful in arranging flowers for the table in low, shallow dishes, as well as for covering pincuses. If the jardiniere is filled with equators full with this sand, cactuses and grasses can be arranged of much more gracefully, the sand being heavy enough to hold them. —Brooklyn Eagle. A SIMPLE TIRE REPAIR. Punctures in the well known Morgan & Wright tire are mended about as easily as a man would close a hole in his shirt with a bit of tube plaster. Inside of the inner tube of the tire lies a long strip of patching rubber, like this: By injecting M. & W. quick-repair cement through the puncture into this inner tube, and then pressing down on the tire with the thumb, like this: the repair strip inside is picked up by the cement, thus closing the puncture, like this: Very simple, but—now every rider should remember these two "butts," or he will fail! Before inflating cement, pump up the tire. If you don't the inner tube will be flattened. and the cement will not get inside of it, where the repair strip lies. After the tire has been repaired, and inflated ready for riding, if it still leaks don't stick the injector into the puncture a rain, because that will puncture the repair strip itself, like this: and you will have to pull out the inner tube and make an old-fashioned repair by putting a patch of rubber on the outside of the inner tube.
