FREAKS OF MEMORY.

QUEER PRANKS FOR WHICH THERE IS NO ACCOUNTING.

some instances of the Singular Effeets Produced Upon the Mind by Gasing Steadily at a Crystal-Forgotten Incidents Recalled.

The queer freaks of memory are a constant puzzle to those who psychical phenomena. Who has not been-driven to the verge of distraction by the total inability to recall a name when an effort was made to do so and when the occasion for such remembrance was past had the missing name flash into the mind apparently of its own volition?

Great minds have wreetled to find an explanation for the pranks that memory plays and have had to give up the effort. In the course of a systematic attempt to arrive at some understanding with regard to the wonders of meniory a very valuable and unique body of testimony has been obtained. The following questions have been put to 200 American university students and professional persons, 151 being men and 49 being women. The answers are here given with the questions:

Question 1.—When you cannot recall a name you want, does it seem to come back spontaneously without being suggested by any perceived association of ideas? To this 11 per cent answered "No" and 81 per cent "Yes."

Question 2.—Does such recovery ever come during sleep? To this 17 per cent answered "No" and 28 per cent "Yes." Some examples given:

1. This morning I tried to recall the name of a character I had read of the night before in one of Scott's novels and failed. I taught a class, and walking home in the afternoon all the names recurred to me without effort. 2. I tried to recall the name of

Gave it up. Half an hour later. while talking of something else, blurted it out without conscious volition.

Question 3.—On seeing a sight or hearing a sound for the first time, have you ever felt that you had seen (or heard) the same before? Fifty-nine per cent answered "Yes."

The action of unconscious memory during sleep is illustrated by further queries:

Question 4. —Do you dream? . Ninety: four per cent answered "Yes."

Question 5.—Can you wake at a given hour determined before going to sleep without waking up many times before Fifty-nine per cent answered "Yes. Thirty-one per cent answered "No."

Question 6.—If you can, how about failure? Sixty-nine per cent seldom failed: 25 per cent often.

Question 7.—Do you come direct from oblivion into consciousness? Sixty-four per cent answered "Yes" and 16 per cent "Gradually.

Examples:
1. I had to give medicine every two hours exactly to my wife. I am a very sound sleeper, but for six weeks I woke up every two hours and never missed giving the medicine.

2. I am always awake five minutes before the hour I set the alarm.

8. I had had little sleep for ten days and went to hed at 9, asking to be called at midnight. I fell asleep at once. I rose and dressed as the clock stuck 12, and could not believe I had not been called.

A strange phenomenon has come to light in the course of the inquiry into the mystery of memory. It has been discovered that by gazing stendily at a crystal consciousness is partly lost. Into the void thus produced those who have practiced crystal gazing find that there enter unbidden forgotten incidents and lost memories. To give a few instances: A lady in crystal gazing saw a oit of dark w ll covered flowers. She was conscious she must have seen it somewhere, but had no recollection where. She walked over the ground sho had just traversed and found the wall, which she had passed

She took out her bankbook another day. Shortly afterward sho was gazing at the crystal and saw nothing but the number one. She thought it was some hack number, but, taking up the bank-book, found to her surprise it was the number of the account.

At another time she destroyed a letter without noting the address. She could only remember the town. After gazing at the crystal some time she saw "321 Jefferson avenue." She ad-dressed the letter there, adding the town, and found it was right.

A lady sat in a room to write where she had sat eight years before. She felt her feet moving restlessly under the table and then remembered that eight years before she always had a footstol It was this her feet were seeking. Psychical research brings to light many cases of similar strange tricks of memory. It is easy to find instances that serve to deepen the mystery. It is not so easy to give an explanation. The cleverest men who have attempted to do so have had to admit defeat. - Wash ington Post.

HARDY CLEMATISES.

Pretty Color Effects on the Lawn and Around the Veranda. Sonw clematises begin to expand their charming starry flowers in May, and some bloom as late as October. The clematis is very rich in color as well as in variety, there being red, white, blue, pink, lavender and almost any desirable color. There are large and small growing species, single and double flowered varieties, with low and tall growth. Very fine effects can be made by planting them in lines of separate colors, or around the verandas of dwelling houses Good results can be produced by planting them on the lawn in a triangular form, and putting a five or six foot stake to each plant. These stakes should the time of planting, as afterward the driving in of stakes would injure the roots. After the stakes are in the tops of them should be bound together and secured by winding a wire all round from top to bottom. The wire will furnish some support for the young vines to climb on, and in this way they will form a nice pyramid in a two to delight the owner with their variously colored flowers. Heavy rich soil is the favorite place of the clematis, and as it makes very long stringlike roots it needs deep soil. The hole for planting them should be dug about three feet wide and of equal denth, this to be filled with good rich soil and a fair portion of well decom-throughout the summer they should be given plenty of water during hot weath A good mulching with some leaf mold or rotted cow manure is also very beneficial. Some cultivators prefer to cut back the vines every spring close to the ground, and this should be done, with the herbaceous kinds especially. A writer on the culture of the clematis, who gives the foregoing notes and illustration in American Gardening, finds the best way to treat the climbing varieties to be as follows: Clean out the dry vines in early spring and cut back to the solid woody part so that three or four pairs of eyes of the year's growth be left. If they are treated in this way, they will not become spindly and will give an abundance of flowers every season.

Fungas on Cedar Trees

For years the cedar trees of the Kansas Agricultural college grounds have been attacked by the well known brown fungus, the so called cedar apple (Gymosporanginus macropus). Some four years ago the department of horticulture began hand picking the fungous growth tacks could be reduced and injury prevented. From that time till the present these trees have been carefully gone over several times each year and the fungus removed from them. It has not with very few exceptions been allowed to reach the spore bearing stage. There has, however, been no diminution of the attack. The disease appears as vigorous at the present time as at any time in the past. The trees are more thrifty than they would have been had the than they would have been had the fungus been allowed to grow undis- his wrist. Cedars cannot be freed from this disease by hand picking, at least if there are other trees of the same species in the neighborhood that are untreated.

Judging a Mule's Speed. "When I was a young man," quoth Officer Fayette Jones, "from a standpoint of years, I used to trade mules oc-casionally. One day I had a dispute with a man to whom I had sold an animal about its speed. We were unable to agree between ourselves, so we called in an old codger who talked with a drawl and used almost as much tobacco as he raised. We stated the question to him, 'Which is the faster of the mules?' He asked to be taken to the stable and stood there watching the mules eat. He chawed and looked, and looked and chawed. We wondered what he could tell about their speed simply by looking at them, but finally he pointed out the mule I had sold and said, 'That air the fastest of them mules.'

The Overture to "Tank Ready."

A man who writes theatrical gosslp for a London paper gravely declares that he knows a manager who was greatly concerned lest the music for a tank play he was putting on should be inappropriate. The director of the orchestra suggested several suitable num-bers from "Lurline" and "The Llly of Killarney," and so on. But the manager could not be satisfied. He wanted something that should have direct relevance to the great water illusion. At last his conductor, in despair, suggested in a grimly humorous moment the overture to "Tancredi."

"The very thing," said the manager. "Why didn't you think of that before? Put it down on the bill, my boy, in big letters - the overture to Tank

A LOST SILVER MINE.

The Man That Owned It Died With the Steret of Its Location.

About hulf a century ago a rich silver vein was found on the copper range south of Houghton, and the silver excitement throughout Houghton county was at fever heat. Everybody had the craze, but there was only one man who knew the whereabouts of the vein. At the time above mentioned a trapper and hunter named Draper brought into Houghton a number of very rich silver specimens, but where they came from he never told, and the secret always re-mained a secret with him. He was known to be making his home in the vicinity of Penn mine, on the south range, with the Indians, who were very numerous in this part of the country.

It was not a great while after Draper made this trip to Houghton that he got into trouble with the Indians, shot one of them and escaped from the country. He returned some years later, and, tak-He returned some years later, and, taking a partner, went into the woods again. The two remained there, coming to town for provisions from time to time and bringing as much silver in nuggets as they could carry. When the war broke out, Draper's partner enlisted in the first company that left Hough. ed in the first company that left Houghton and was killed in the battle of Bull Run. Draper remained in the woods and died there, carrying the secret of the big silver find with him to the other world.

A few years after Draper's death Ignatius Zeeber, who was conducting a tailoring establishment in L'Anse, having removed there from Houghton, got the silver craze and gave up his busi-ness to search for Draper's mine. During removed there from Houghton, got the silver craze and gave up his business to search for Draper's mine. During the 20 years that have passed since that time Zeeher, or as he is more familiarly known to those who frequent the woods, "Silver Fritz," has remained at the Penn mine, in the vicinity of which Draper was supposed to have be. which Draper was supposed to have lo-cated the silver, but whether he has succeeded in locating the coveted silver mine is not known. Some think he has, but the majority who know him sav they are positive he has not. The old man, for he is now about 80 years of age, is often seen by landlookers, who say that he resembles a wild man very much, his hair and full beard being long and shaggy, his clothes old and torn and his person very poorly kept. A stranger would not have the nerve to pass him in the road, but to those who know him he is as meek as a lamb, and all say he would injure no one.

Besides Zeeber several parties have spent menths at a time scouring the woods, but no one has obtained even a glimpse of anything that looks like silver, and all gave up the hunt in disgust.

With the opening up of the old mines as well as many new ones on the range between Houghton and Ontonagon the question is asked, "Is it not probable that Draper's find will be discovered?" that Draper's find will be discovered?" dozen dribblings. It is rare that a sweet

That is to say, 23 per cent are doing work of a superior sort, 40 per cent are doing well, living civilized lives and exerting a good in-fluence; 21 per cent are incapacitated in one way and another and have at influence that is nominally negative, while 8 per cent are doing poorly and throwing their influence on the wrong

Last year the Indian office undertook to make a similar record to include all returned students from all schools, and the result shows 3 per cent excellent and 24 per cent poor and bad.—Hamp-ton School Record.

A Plucky Cleric.

About 50 years ago a boat carrying over 800 passengers was making its way down the lazy Ohio river. Among those on board were a lot of senators going to Washington for congress. A young to Washington for congress. A young Methodist minister, 22 years of age, was also on board. This young man was totally blind, but quite alive to the card playing and whisky drinking that went on on board. One moonlight night he preached a sermon, soundly rebuking the congressmen for the share in the disgraceful habits on board. They were greatly surprised at his attack, but admired his plack all the same. They gave him a sum of money and offered him tho poet of chaplain of congress. In due time he was elected and still holds that office. This is the famous Dr. Milburn, whose scringing are known all over burn, whose sermons are known all over the world. - Keystone.

At least one-half (md better, two-thirds) of the past year's growth should be taken off. Don't be afraid to cut these back as above. I have practiced it for years and get far better results in both tree and fruit than do my neighbors who prune but little. Sweet Pean The ground may be easily made too rich for sweet peas. An authority on their culture speaks of complaints made by some persons that their sweet peas grew luxuriantly, but did not bloom, and says, in explanation, that they had and says, in explanation, that they had used stable manures too freely, and the plants ran to vine. The sweet pea is one of that class of plants (the leguminous) which appropriate nitrogen, and heavy applications of nitrogen are therefore not needed. Another type of complaints was to the effect that young plants died after having made a good growth of several inches. Inquiry revealed the fact that in every case the plants had been frequently watered from a watering pot. Just enough water had been applied to keep the surface of the ground soggy, and the plants had damped off. Plant lovers should re-member that one good watering which wets the ground clear down is worth a once a week in good soil, and if the seeds are got in early a frequent stirring of the surface soil with hoe or rake is better than watering at all.

Black Fly on Chrysanthemums. During the season of 1898 our chrysanthemums have been kept practically free from black fly by the use of kerosene and water, says a writer in Gardening.

On the whole this treatment seems to me the most satisfactory of anything I have ever employed against the insect. Kerosche and water do not, as a rule, mix readily, but the mixing can be mix readily, but the mixing can be done under pressure. Our spraying was done with a bucket pump. The kerosene attuchment is provided with an index which allows the kerosene to mix with the water in any proportions from 5 to 50 per cent. While porhaps not strictly security the ladicates in approximate. acourate, the indicator is approximately so and near enough for practical purposes. Fifteen per cent of oil is sufficient for most soft bodied insects, and gave excellent results against the black chrysanthenum aphis. A larger propor-tion of oil caunot always be used with safety on the more tender plants in foli-age. Five per cent failed to destroy the insects, while 18 per cent killed nearly every one, and not a plant was injured.

STRAWBERRY PLANTS.

Perfectly and Imperfectly Flowered Varieties Used Together.

The flowers of many varieties of strawherries possess no stamens, and if these kinds are planted by themselves the fruit will be small, irregular and of no value. These varieties are commonly speken of as pistillate or imperfect flowered (Fig. 1). There are also a largo number of varieties that in addition to the pistils have more or fewer small stamens, but as the amount of pollen they produce is small it will be best to depend upon the perfectly flowered kinds (Fig. 2) to fertilizo. In some seasons they may develop all that will be required, but in others some varieties may produce an amount so small that it will not suffice to fertilize the pistils. Aside from the fact that varying amounts of pollen are produced by dif-ferent varieties and that in the same variety it changes from year to year it also happens that the amount required for the proper fertilization of the ovules varies in different years, as, when the varies in different years, as, when the weather is waru and pleasant, a much smaller quantity will suffice than when it is cold and wet. Still other varieties have a considerable number of strong stamens that produce large amounts of pollen, and if pistillate or nearly pistillate varieties are grown it will be advisable to have at least every fifth row flower at the same time. Some growers living in sections near the lakes, where the air is moist, find that, in order to secure perfect fertilization of pistillato varieties, it is well to have every third row of some variety that produces a large amount of pollen. While it does not hold true in all cases. examination of the list of productive varieties of strawberries will show that imperfectly flowered kinds are, as a rule, rather more productive than those with perfect flowers, which has been ascribed to the fact that staminate kinds have exhausted themselves, in part at least, in the production of pollen, and are consequently able to de-velop but a comparatively small amount of fruit.

This illustrated explanation of a point of great importance to the strawberry grower is gleaned from the re-cently published bulletin on strawberry culture by Professors Taft and Gladden of the Michigan station. Fig. 1 shows an imperfect strawberry blossom; Fig. 3, a perfect one: P. pistils; S, stamens; P and S, the same magnified.

Succession of Bloom in the Garden. In planning the average garden such plants as will give a succession of bloom and will afterward present attractive foliago during the remainder of the season should be chosen. For example, the old fashioned roses which bloom but once during the senson should be discarded for the hybrid perpotuals and Rosa rugosa. Among annuals all short lived species should be rejected and inpetunia, Phlox drummondii, lendula, asters, pansies, etc., should be used.

Rats and Mice In Hotherls.

Here is the remedy of The Florists' Weekly Review: "Get some of the old fushioned black sulphur matches, now generally called eight day matches. Cut off the black ends and put six or seven of these black tips in some bread that has been moistoned in milk and roll the bread into marbles about the size of common playing marbles. Have six or seven tips in each marble. Rats seem orazy for this poison, and after eating one marble they will not live to see another day."

Fruit and Flower Notes. One of the stations reports that sub-watered curvations in greenhouses produced better flowers, with longer; stiffer stems than elld the surface watered ones. Evergreen trees are best planted just as the buds are pushing in the spring.

Other trees may be planted spring or fall, while they are destitute of leaves. Vick says that "ringing" grapes im-proves the quality of the fruit as much as it does their size and appearance. But it can be conducted safely only under well defined limitations. It is claimed for the new Paul Rose tion to distant markets botter than any other of the salmon fleshed varieties, for which kinds there seems to be an increasing preference. The Barbank rose which is to be sent out this season is described as a Bour-bon tea (a cross of Hermosa with a Bon Silene socilling), a free, constant bloomor with large, well shaped but scentless Howers.

"Hello," 23-b.

The Next European War.

Mark my words, the next European var will not be Franco-English, but Franco-Spanish. I dare say the excuse will be reduction or nonpayment of the exterior coupon. The French governmont has been constantly looking out since MacMahon resigned for places where they could go to war with good chances of success. They have done so to keep officers quiet by giving them chances of promotion and not exposing them to too great danger. Tunis, Ton-quin, Anam, Siam. Madagascar, Senegal, the Niger, have in turn and some-times simultaneously served this pur-pose. Colonel Achinard, when the government did not at once enter into his bellicose views in Senegal, made war there against its orders.

If French officers have not been led into pronunciamentos, it is because there have been so many expeditions. The venturesome spirits volunteer to take their chances of death or promotion in a wildcat expedition. Spain will be attacked hecause weak, proximate and heavily in debt to French capitalists. Other powers, I dare say, would consent to a campaign there if it led to all around payment of coupons by a French financial control. Casimir-Perier, as foreign minister, threatened Portugal with such control when the Portuguese government attempted to do French creditors out of their lien on the tobacco monopoly. — Paris Cor. London Truth.

Battleships and Croisers.

At present Italy still possesses the largest battleship, the Lepanto, while Germany owns the smallest, the Olden-burg. As regards cruisers it will surprise not a few to learn that China at present possesses the two fastest cruisers, the Hai-Tin and Hai-Tchin, which, with engines indicating 17,000 horse power, have attained an average speed of 24 knots. Argentina, Chile and Ja-pan follow with cruisers having an average speed of 22 knots. The four cruisers now building for the British navy, which will be fitted with engines indicating 30,000 horse power, are intended to have an average speed of 28 knots. A similar speed is to be attained by two cruisers in course of construction for the Russian navy, by means of engines having an indicated horse power of 16,500 and 20,000 respectively.

If we look at the relative strength of the five navies, we find that Great Britain heads the list with 949 vessels of all classes, the other powers ranging as follows: France, 412; Russia, 349; Italy, 347; Germany, 803.—Industries and Iron.

A Marvelous Illusion.

One of the attractions of the Paris exhibition is to be the Marcorana, devised and painted by M. Hugo d'Alesi, tho well known poster artist. After duly paying his fee, the visitor will pass a gangway and find himself on the deck of a first class passenger steamer, with captain, crew, rigging, smoking funnels, and every other detail com-plete. Around stietches a blue and eparkling sea, while behind may be seen the port of Marseilles fading away on the horizon. Machinery imparts a pleasant recking metion to the fictitious vessel, and a concealed fan makes a breeze as the traveler skims past Le Frioul and the Chateau d'If. The sun sets and rises to reveal Naples and Vesuvius, and having safely passed between Scylla and Charybdis, the good ship reaches in a few minutes the harbor of Sfas in Tunis. Venice will be the next halting place, and finally the passengers glide up the Bosporus to Constantino-ple, but a storm must first be faced. The illusion, throughout, is said to be

An Innovation In Washington Society The present ministerial representative of the sultan, All Ferrough Bey, is a recent comer to Washington official circles. Minister Ferrough is a young man of handsome and commanding presence and is quite a good judge of pictures. He is not accompanied by Mme. Ferrough, who expects to come on to Washington this year, but it is presumed she will preserve in a measure the customs of her own country and only receive the visits of ladies, always appearing velled, after the manner of Turkish women. Much interest and expectancy await her coming, as she will be the first Turkish lady who has ever been here and will also be the first woman from the orient to maintain the social enstoms peculiar to her native land.—Mary Nimmo Balentine in Woman's Home Companion.

A Wonderful Girl.

There was a strange scene in the Boston Art museum the other day when Helen Kellar, the deaf, dumb and blind girl, whose education has developed such wonderful possibilities, "saw" the statues in the room devoted to Greek She was mounted on a stepladder and with the fingers which seem to see and hear took in the beautiesof ancient sculpture, while the students in the institution stood about and wondered. She knew of nearly all the statues before her visit to the museum and dis-cussed them intelligently. When she needed explanation, she reached for the hand of a friend, who spolled into her fingers what she wanted to know.-Worcester Gazette.

The Fisher Grand is the outgrowth of nearly sixtyyears of progressive and experienced skill in Piano making. There is an individuality in these Grands that is gave a dinner party, to a number of friends | missing in others. . There is a perfect ion, and a sympathetic and sustaining quality, which are appreciated by the singer and planist alike. These desire able qualities have built a reputation for the Fisher Grand of world wide reknown. The fact that every detail of these and all other styles of the Fisher Piano, are manufactured by that house ac counts in a great measure for its repu tation. The durability, the perfection of tone, and the wonderful staying-intune power, also hinge upon the above fact. The Fisher Grand is now an essential factor of the concert, entertainment and drawing room, and deserved Shaping a Tree. We all know how we dislike to cut off large branches from fruit trees. It is plain to any thinking person that if the undesirable branches could be discovered when they were very small and would be no necessity for cutting off large ones. Now, this is just what may do in many cases. By watching the young trees enrefully from time to time as the little shoots are starting that will make the branches we may rub off with the thumb those that we see are destined. Any shoots starting toward the center of the tree or in any undesirable direction may thus be prevented from going any farther.—Minnesota Horticulturist.

A regular meeting of the club, postnoned from the 18th on account of the blizzard, was held in the Social club assembly room on Monday last. The members present responded to the roll call with quotations, and as no author had been named for this part of the program, they were varied and of unusual

After preliminary business, the program of the day was presented. A talk on "Territorial Acquisitions," was given by Miss Cowperthwaite, giving interesting information regarding the Louisiana Purchase, the acquisition of California, the "Whitman" incident in history by which Oregon and the northwest was saved to the United States, the purchase of Alaska, the amexation of Hawai and the results of the re cent war with Spain.

Miss Alper's paper upon the "Discovery of Gold in California" was well prepared and most interesting. The paper upon "The Mormons," by Mrs. Edwards was exhaustive and instructive, showing the origin and rise of this "Latter Day church of Jesus Christ," as it is named, its false and blasphemous docrines, its immense political power and the determination of its leaders to extend that power through the whole country. It was a paper worthy of a parger audience than was present and a wider circulation among thinking people. This paper was supplemented by the reading of a story by Miss Mazie Jones, telling the story of a young English girl coming to the new land of peace and plenty only to be, in reality, seized upon by an elder in the church and to die a victim of a "plural marriage." The program committee presented an outline of the course of study for the coming year; this was approved and returned to the committee for further conthe annual meeting.

The next regular meeting will be held on Monday, when the feature of the program will be an address on "Philanthropy," by Mrs. Bird, of New York. Mrs. Bird is a woman of rare dignity CHAS. CLARK, Hatter, and culture who has given herself to work for the unfortunate class in lower New York. A most interesting address may be expected.

But for some unknown reason, when the end came at the famous battle at Trafalgar (1805), Nelson was buried at St. Paul's, and the abbey authorities, finding crowds going there to gaze on his last resting blace, had an efficy made of him and set it up near Kompenfolt's monument, in order to attract people back to Westminster, with the desired

It is perhaps a safe prophecy that we are just entering upon an eracof prosperity, a time when the building of homes will be general. In this era we can build better than before, can embellish, enlarge and equip with generous hands, for when money is plentiful is the time to spend it; when it is scarce, we must forbear. But let us profit by the past. Let us not rejoice in valuglories, but make the future bright with the greatest degree of common sense. with the greatest degree of common sense.

Art and Decoration.

A new use for rugs in the house is to form a walneeding around the room with them. In Turkey and Persia, where the exquisite oriental rugs are used exclusively for floor covering, they run the ends of a rug too large for a room up the sides of the walls and tack them there. The effect is strikingly actistic and far less injurious to the rugs than to turn the ends under. In several of the large importing houses in this country examples of this method of decorating the sides as well as the floor of the rooms with rugs me given. Then take the kolmans, and that time had no real style or ideas of their own, but who, when they saw what the Greeks were doing, invented ways and means with a view to improving Greek methods; hence originated the Roman style. The Greeks made overything square. The Romans put the arch over the opening; thus embellishing their work. They, not only improved the form, but elaborated it. Still they never changed the three principal orders of architecture usual by the Greeks—the Doric, the Ionic and the Corinthian. These were developed to their best and highest state. They simply could not be improved and still stand as examples of dignified strength and beauty, copied and followed by our worthlest architects.

The Greeks were undoubtedly the fore-fathers of all that is good in architectural style. They builded better than they knew. Their elimate, their materials, their love of truth and honesty, shoneforth in all they did.

ROOT PRUNING.

A Bright Presentation of the String-

From the Georgia station comes a characteristic bulletin by Hugh U. Starnes, the horticulturist. Like Mr. Starnes' former work, it is bright, readable and practical. It is also eminently fair, and, as the subject dealt with is the much discussed "Stringfellow theory of root pruning," the latter quality finds unusually happy display. Mr. Starnes then presents the Stringfellow theory in brief:

"It overthrows the old, accepted methods of tree planting, holding that instead of endeavoring to retain and maintain intact the original root system of a transplanted tree, it should be severely pruned—cut back, in fact, to

"Mr. Stringfellow claims that the new root system resulting from this treatment would be a strong, vigorous, perpendicular growth of lusty, large diametered roots, heading straight down for the moist depths of the subsoil, instead of a network of fine, capillary, surface rootlets, matted horizontally within a few inches of the ground. These roots, penetrating deeply, would safely anchor the tree, and in a year's time produce a growth above the ground to which trees started by the old method of planting would not be comparable.

"Mr. Stringfellow claims also that whenever and wherever his system is adopted it will no longerbe found neces-sary to excavate holes three feet in diameter for orchard planting, but that a mere dibble hole or the crack made by sinking a spade in the soil will prove sufficient for tree setting, and that in this way one of the costliest features of orchard planting would be at once and forever removed, since a plat

The cut shows peach trees, root and top pruned, ready for planting, which were used at the Georgia station: No. 1 roots, one inch club; No. 2, two inch club; No. 3, four inch tap; No. 4, four inch club; all tops pruned to 18 inches.

The bulletin presents testimony and opinions from eminent horticulturists both for and against the Stringfellow method, including highest commendation and equally vigorous adverse criticism. It also closely details the Georgia experiments, leaving the reader to draw his own conclusions. It is, however, stated that in these last root pruned apple and cherry trees made fewer, deeper and larger and more robust roots; the unpruned, a mat of small laterals like a great dish mop. The depth of penetration for the roots formed a pruned apple tree was, for instance, 17½ inches against 9½ inches for an unpruned tree.
In conclusion Mr. Starnes says he is

When to Plant Fruit Trees,

It is froquently asked whether it is better to plant fruit trees in autumn than in spring. Joseph Meehan says in his monthly: Many prefer autumn, doing the planting early in October, stripping the foliage from the trees, if it has not already fallen. One year old peaches are excepted, as they do better set in spring, at least in the north, but these could be precured in the autumn if de-kired and heeled in, that tops and all are underground for the winter.

When impracticable to plant in early autumn, it matters but little whether the work be done later or in the spring. As a rule, when pruning at planting is attended to, fruit trees are not difficult to get to live planted at either season, Japanese Versus French Pear Stocks. Twenty Bartlett pear trees were planted in Fobruary, 1896, at the Alabama station on poor, gravelly soil. All were from the same nursery and have received the same treatment. Ten of the trees were on Japanese seedling roots and ten on the usual French seed-lings. From the first the trees on Japaness roots have been the most vigorous and now they average fully twice the size of these on French roots.

The Easter or Harris lily throws out a secondary group of roots a little above the bulb, soon after stem growth is preperly begun. For this reason, more soil should be heaped above the bulb from time to time till the pot is full. The first planting should be deep in the pot to allow room for the additional soil added later.

Six months will be required for the complete development of the plant from the time of planting. When first brought from the cellar, a group of tips will be seen protruding from the earth. Water moderately and gradually expose to the light. When tips turn green, increase the light, but not the temperature. Slow growth in an atmosphere moist and having a temperature ranging from 55 to 65 degrees F. is advised. A dry, hot atmosphere is fatal to success.

To hasten the time of bloom bring into a warmer room, increase the sun-light and keep the air moist by allowing water to evaporate more or less con-stantly from a dish on the stove or register. To retard growth, when development appears too rapid and bloom probable before the desired time, set pot in cool dark room and water moderately.

If the soil is rich, a profuse watering every third day will help the roots to abstract the nourishment they need. If lacking nourishment, as may appear by weak growth, a half pint of liquid manure should be given the plant each week or half pint of water having in it ten drops of liquid ammonia. So large a bulb as the Easter lily is a gross feeder and appreciates any extra care.

After the plant has bloomed it should be moderately watered till the foliage turns yellow. This indicates that the bulb is ripe and ready for a period of rest. Withhold water altogether and set pot away in some cool cellar till the following October. It is then planted out of doors and treated as other lilies. Having bloomed once in the house it is not fit for a second forcing, but out of doors it will renew itself so as to bloom in a year or two. In the open ground it is desirable that this lily should have some protection for winter, such as afforded by two or three inches of coarse stable litter or a thick covering of leaves. The foregoing information and advice about this beautiful lily is given by a writer in Vick's Monthly Maga-zine.

A Home in the South.

The Great Southern Railway, covering the South like a net work, and pene trating with its 6,000 miles every important section, offers unequalled facilities, with its magnificent trains and quick transit, to tourists, and especially to those seeking a home during the seere northern winter months. There are thousands in New England and the Middle West who ought to own such a home in the South on account of the climate if for ngother reason. Commence now! Establish that home! Buy a small tract of land and gradually improve it. A section especially attractive is the fertile mountainous region of Western North Carolina. Here is located the famous health resort, Asheville, visited annually by thousands from all parts of the continent. An opportunity ont of the usual course is just now given through the enterprise of nearly 200 educators, business men, ministers and social economists, who have purchased nearly seven square miles of land in the heart of these mountains, on the Southern Railway, and are opening this famous section for home life under ideal conditions. All property is held for the common good. and while lots of generous size are set uside to subscribers, the price and terms are such as to make it in fact nominal and there is no money making or personal profit. Among the managers and lot-holders in the town of considerable importance already established are: Mr. John S. Huyler, head of "Huyler's Candies;" Mr. Wm. H. Wanamaker, of Philadelphia, brother of ex Postmaster-General Wanamaker; Rev. David Gregg D. D., pastor of Lafayette Ave. Presby terian church, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Presi dent E. D. Then came companies C and E, of the 3rd New Jersey Volunteers, and a delegation from company F, of Rahway, with soldiers and sailors from Elizabeth who had served in the Spanish-American War. Among these were men from the Naval Reserve who served on the auxiliary cruisers.

The third division was made up of the Elizabeth Fire Department and the South Elizabeth Cadets.

All the church bells were rung as the procession passed through the streets, functory whiteles were blown and extreets.

Curionities of Our Calendar

There are some curious facts about our calendar. No century can begin on Wednesday, Friday or Sunday. The same calendars can be used every 20 years. October always begins on the same day of the week as January. April as July, September as December. runry, March and November begin on the same days, May, June and August always begin on different days from each other and every other month in the year. The first and last days of the year are always the same. These rules do not apply to leap year, when comparison is made between days before and after Feb. 29.
