ABOUT CLOD CRUSHERS.

When Properly Constructed They Are Great Labor Savers and a Source of Rich Harvests.

A well-known agriculturist at our state college said recently: "The shortest cut for a farmer to become successful is to use both intellectual and physical strength. A somewhat common practice with farmers is to use only their physical strength. The time is here when without a change they cannot be successful." These are true words, and even in the construction and use of the most simple implements of the farm we find them applicable. Let us take the ordinary plank drag or float, for example. The man who is farming by physical strength alone can see no science in dragging, and when he goes to construct a clod crusher will make the kind he imagines will do the most work by reason of its weight, clumsiness and rudeness of detail. Taking the wooden frame of an old pin harrow, he pins or spikes on a rough slab an unshapely plank and crooked scantling, and has a drag which looks like Fig. 1. With this he goes in to "do up" the clods and firm the seed bed, and after going over the ground at least once more than would be necessary with a good implement, and after corresponding tax on his own and horses' physical endurance, succeeds—in a way "that will do."

On the other hand, the intellectual farmer who looks for natural philosophy in even such a simple affair as a land drag, will take three or four good planks or boards of the required size, lap them neatly over each other at the edges, bolt or spike a couple of pieces of notched scantling on top, put on an old mower seat for convenience, and a sectional view of his scientific drag looks like Fig. 2. By reason of the rational shape of this drag and its facility of use, he will be enabled to do twice as much and more satisfactory work with about one-third the call on himself and team for physical strength. In making a drag it must be remembered that if four two-inch planks, say eight inches wide, are used the drag needs to be made shorter, as regards length of the planks, than if three one-inch boards each six inches wide are used, and also that on many lands a short and heavy drag is preferable to a longer and correspondingly lighter one. There are also different ways of lapping the planks or boards so as to get best results on the land to be smoothed or to suit the preference of the maker. In Fig. 3 are given sectional views of four different methods. Section A has three four-inch slanted boards on front and rear and as many four-inch, or two six-inch, boards in middle laid on flat on the cross-scantlings. As will be seen, if the drag

Figs 4 & 5

is drawn from point A the slanted boards will run against the clods and if from B will run over them, the middle boards serving to smooth the surface. If made as in B, the drag drawn from either direction will run against the clods at the front, on top at the middle and over them at the rear. If like C it will exactly reverse this operation, the front third of drag slipping on top of clods and the rear third against them. If like D and drawn from slanted end, the first set of boards slip over the clods, the middle set run against them, and the rear set slip on top and smooth the disturbed surface.

To lap the boards in any of the four ways above is really as easy as to have them as in Fig. 2, and other combinations may be adopted in like manner. If six four-inch slanted, and three four-inch or two six-inch middle boards are used the total width of drag will not exceed three feet, and the farmer may use those of proper length, to make the drag of the required weight, say six to eight feet. Again, if all six-inch boards are used the drag will be about 4½ feet wide, etc. It is easy to bolt a mower seat on the drag, and it may be revolved so as to suit convenience in drawing drag from either edge.

Any form of the drag, except B, may be improved upon by beveling front edge of first slanted board, as should be done anyway, and nailing on 1x2 inch cleats, broad side down, having them about six to eight inches apart and slanted from front center toward each end. On the rear plank, an arrangement of utility is an old cross-cut saw blade bent and bolted on as illustrated in Fig. 4, B, which also shows manner of applying the cleats on front planks, A.

For the farmer, however, who prefers a drag not so scientifically constructed, Fig. 5 shows a folding slab float that in its class can't be beat. To make it two good nine-foot slabs, as nearly uniform in width and thickness the whole length as possible, are required. Cut into six equal pieces and spike two pieces of inch hardwood boards, six inches wide, on flat sides of each two slabs at ends, making three sections of the drag which hinge together crosswise by iron hooks. Attach an old wagon or sleigh pole for tongue, and put on a mower seat. The drag will be a little over nine feet wide; if desired, 12-foot slabs may be used, cutting into four-foot sections. This drag adapts itself to uneven ground, and may be folded up to go through narrow places.

I trust the illustrations will so elucidate the construction of these useful implements that readers will readily understand.—J. G. Allshouse, in Ohio Farmer.

PRODUCTS FROM CORN.

Some Things That Are Being Made Without the Use of Any Other Component Material.

Mixing glucose, of three kinds, used by refiners of table sirups, brewers, leather manufacturers, jelly makers, fruit preservers and apothecaries.

Crystal glucose, of four kinds, used by manufacturing confectioners.

Grape sugar, of two kinds, used by brewers principally, and also by tanners.

Anhydrous sugar, used by ale and beer brewers and apothecaries.

Pearl starch, used by cotton and paper mills.

Powdered starch, used principally by baking powder manufacturers, and also by cotton and paper mills.

Refined grits, used in the place of brewers' grits; they are giving better results.

Flourine, used by mixers of flour without detriment, except as to the feeling that a corn product is taking the place of a wheat product.

Four kinds of dextrine, used by fine fabric makers, paper box makers, mucilage and glue makers, apothecaries and many industries requiring a strong adhesive agent.

Corn oil, used by table oil mixers, lubricating oil mixers, manufacturers of filter, shade cloth manufacturers, paint manufacturers and in many similar industries where vegetable oils are employed.

Corn oil cake, gluten meal, all cattle feeding stuffs of a very high grade and capable of being scientifically fed with superior advantages.

Rubber substitute, a substitute for crude rubber, and very extensively used.

Corn germ, the material from which the oil and cake are obtained.

British gum, a starch which makes a very adhesive medium, and is used by textile mills for running their colors, as well as by manufacturers who require a very strong adhesive medium that contains no trace of acid.

Granulated gum, which competes with gum arabic, is used successfully in its place, and finds a ready preference by reason of the absence of any offensive odor.—Farmers' Voice.

Making Use of Skim Milk.

Investigations show that many of our farmers that produce milk fail to realize the value they should from the skim milk. The writer has been in creameries where the farmers had so little use for the skim milk that the creamery manager was glad to get rid of it to the citizens of the neighboring village at one cent per gallon. This was a good thing for the citizens, but it showed a great lack on the part of the men that had produced the milk. We have no doubt that many of the farmers that produced that milk and didn't want the skim milk were feeding their poultry on a grain ration the year round.—Farmers' Review.

Honesty in Selling Fruit.

It is doubtful if the law will ever succeed in giving the people full protection in their fruit purchases. Only our fruit producers can bring to bear on the situation enough force to compel honesty. In our foreign trade in fruit it has been found that it pays to ship only the best and the same principle should be applied to our domestic markets. We hope to see the day when all fruit sold in our large markets will be graded according to quality, honesty of packing and the like. As soon as that is done the marketing of poor fruit will be made unprofitable. It is profitable now only as it sells for what it is not.—Farmers' Review.

Mrs. Ryder's Ruse

"IT ISN'T as if she were not pretty," Mrs. Ryder protested, with a mournful shake of her curly red head. "She is pretty—distractingly so. And yet that foolish boy refuses to fall in with any of my plans concerning her."

Joe Ryder, striking a match on the post of the veranda, looked down on his wife with eyes full of quiet musement.

"You forget Nigel has never seen Miss Leland, Winifred."

"What difference? I have told him Lyndith is pretty, and rich, and delightfully sweet-tempered, and—"

"Lyndith!" Joe Ryder paused with the lit match suspended an inch from his cigar. "I thought it was the other one—Marie—yon had in your eye for that brother of yours."

Mrs. Ryder clasped her hands with a little gesture of exasperation.

"No! You stupid boy! Isn't Marie engaged to Tom Shuttler?"

"Is she? I didn't know."

"It's too bad," declared Mrs. Ryder, industriously stitching a ruffle in the neck of Dollie's school dress, "that Nigel won't listen to me. Here he is for rushing off to Colorado again, and the chances are he will go before the girls arrive to pay me that visit. Of all the contrary men that ever lived, Nigel is the worst! If it were not the most desirable thing in the world that he should cease his roving life, marry Lyndith and settle down near us he would do it in an instant."

"He must," laughed Ryder, "be a cousin to 'Miss Mary, who was quite contrary.'"

A queer flash came into Mrs. Ryder's expressive little face. She looked up. "Joe," she said, quickly, "I believe you've struck it! Nigel is, as you say, 'contrary,' and is generally prompt to do the exact reverse of that which one wishes. So I've thought—just this minute—of a plan—a splendid plan."

She quite forgot the ruffle. Her hands lay idle in her lap. He looked down on her, leniently.

"You have, dear? What is it?"

But she only responded oracularly: "Wait and see."

One week later her plan was plain to him.

At breakfast that morning Mrs. Ryder said to her brother, a stal-

"HALLO!" HE GASPED, AND STOOD STILL.

wart, blond-haired young Apollo: "The Leland girls are to be here for their long-promised visit a fortnight from to-day."

Joe gasped, almost contradicted her, but at a glance subsided into attentive silence. He had read the letter from Marie Leland, in which she said they would arrive on Friday. And this was Thursday!

"Two weeks' reprieve," Nigel thought, but aloud he said: "Too bad! I'll be in Colorado then. I must leave Monday next at the latest."

Mrs. Ryder only smiled.

When her husband caught her alone he said to her: "Why did you tell the dear boy that yarn, Winifred?"

"Because I—in reprehensible parlance—mean to spring the girls on him. If I had said they were to arrive to-morrow he would have left for Colorado to-night."

"Is that the extent of your deceit?"

"By no means," she answered, laughing. "Listen!"

She lifted a mischievous face, and he stooped his head and listened to a long, quickly-spoken whisper.

"You disgraceful little schemer," he said.

The evening after the Misses Leland arrived. They were orphans, both wealthy and cultured. One was of medium height, with a pliant, beautiful form, a mass of rippling, reddish-gold hair, the delicate complexion that accompanies such hair, and a pair of velvety violet eyes, under the darkest of lashes and brows. The other was small, brown-skinned and brown-haired, with a kind, plain, serious little face. Mrs. Ryder welcomed her guests warmly and hurried them off to their room to change their traveling attire. And there the three ladies had quite a confidential talk.

When they came down to dinner Ryder and his brother-in-law were on the veranda. As they rose Nigel knew that he had fallen into a trap set for him by his determined little sister.

"Joe needs no introduction, girls," averred Mrs. Ryder, ably. "But let me make known my brother, Nigel Leland. Miss Marie Leland," indicating the taller of the two, and then, turning to the other: "Miss Lyndith Leland."

If Marie was the more beautiful, Lyndith was more fascinating. If Marie was a vision of loveliness in her sea-green silk and emeralds, the smaller creature in dusky lace and yellow roses possessed a peculiar personal charm. Nigel looked from one to the other often during the evening and congratulated himself that he had not taken the train west, as he assuredly would have done, had he known of their intended early arrival.

"Well," questioned his sister, quizzically, when she met him in the hall next morning, "which does your royal highness most profoundly approve?"

"The little one," he answered, positively. "Yes, I've been thinking them over. They are both delightful girls—far too lovely to look leniently on your devoted brother. But the little one has a certain distinction—attraction—"

Mrs. Ryder beamed exaggerated approval upon him.

"I'm so glad you think that way, dear! For Marie—the taller, you know—is engaged to Tom Shuttler."

Young Field bit his fair mustache savagely.

"Is she? Confound Shuttler!"

Mrs. Ryder suppressed a smile with difficulty.

"Oh, you need not care, as it is Lyndith you admire. So fortunate! Come to breakfast."

But it was not Lyndith his eager glance sought most admiringly during the weeks that followed.

"Hang that presumptuous Shuttler!" he said to himself daily. "Why couldn't he have proposed to the other one?"

He came to have quite an enmity for Shuttler. He had never seen him, but the more he thought of him in connection with Marie Leland the less he liked him. He imagined him a sullen, hangdog fellow, of arrogant manners and inferior mentality. And he—

Field—to the satisfaction of Mrs. Ryder, said nothing at all about going to Colorado. To both girls he was a gallant cavalier, but it was plain to the most unobservant that it was the violet-eyed beauty on whom his heart was set. And he dared not speak—that was the worst of it. He became downright despondent as the day set for the departure of the girls approached. And his irritation was increased one day on the arrival of the mail. Lyndith, who had just opened a letter, glanced archly towards her elder sister.

"This is from Ada Shuttler, Marie. She says Tom is to pass through Atlanta to-morrow, and will stop off for a few hours, so we may expect a call."

Marie, coloring bewitchingly, murmured a few words of surprise and pleasure. Nigel, controlling as best he could the jealous wrath that consumed him, stood up, muttered an apology for leaving so abruptly, assuring them that the fishing trip on which he was going could not well be postponed, and formally bade the ladies adieu.

And when the door had closed behind the square shoulders and high bald head of Mrs. Ryder's brother, those same demure ladies exchanged comical glances and broke into soft laughter.

Bright and early the next morning Nigel started off on the mythical fishing trip. His companion found him singularly morose. Field was telling himself he had been a fool to run off at mention of the lover of his adored. He would go straight back. And that errand young man immediately did, to the blank disgust of David Letner.

It was four o'clock when he plunged into the woods leading to the beautiful summer home of his sister.

"Hallo!" he gasped suddenly, and stood still.

For directly ahead of him, walking slowly, his arm around her waist and her head on his shoulder, were Lyndith Leland and a stranger. They were speaking in low tones. Marveling at a good deal what Marie would think if aware of the evident affection between the two, he hastened his steps and joined them. Lyndith, looking decidedly guilty, introduced Mr. Tom Shuttler, a handsome, well bred, well groomed man, as Nigel was forced in his heart to acknowledge. The three went on to the house together. Mrs. Ryder and Miss Leland came down the path to meet them. The latter gave Mr. Shuttler her hand with a smile of calm friendliness.

"I suppose Marie is enchanted at the prospect of a three-hours' visit," she said.

"So she is good enough to let me hope," he replied, modestly.

Field stared stupidly from one to the other. Marie! She had called the little brown one Marie! Mrs. Ryder burst into a hearty peal of laughter.

"O, you poor, duped boy!" she cried.

"You have known Marie as Lyndith and Lyndith as Marie. We plotted at the day the girls came."

"But," began the real Lyndith, growing rose pink under Nigel's earnest gaze, "you would not tell us the reason, Winnie, that—"

"O, I'll tell you sometime," laughed the arch conspirator merrily. "Now go and walk in the roseary till you hear the dinner bell—all of you!" And feeling herself an unwelcome fifth, she vanished.

"Well," ventured Joe late that night, "your ruse seems to have been successful, little woman."

"Successful!" ecstatically. "I should say so! And all because of your remark as to Nigel's contrivance. He began by wanting Lyndith because he thought she was engaged to Shuttler. He has ended by waiting for her herself. He put his head into the noose most beautifully. They are to buy the old Strathguy manor, a mile from here, and—O, I'm so happy, Joe!"

"Well, if they are satisfied, and you are satisfied," declared Joe, seriously, "I am."—Chicago Tribune.

All roads will lead to Cranford to-morrow. The ball contest between the Westfield Rough Riders and the Cranford team has aroused more interest than any other sporting event that has taken place in this section for several years. Boiled down to facts it is recognized that to-morrow's game brings the advantage to Cranford in that the game is played on their grounds, and again the clause in the agreement limiting players to those who have played a full game previous to the challenge being the only ones eligible to play in the series places Cranford with the advantage of having twice the number of men from which to select the team. With the favorable advantages to Cranford there are favorable aspects to Westfield's nine and that we will win is based on the inside conditions: While Cranford can field possibly better than Westfield they cannot, according to the season's record of the respective teams, but as well, and hitting wins games that clean fielding cannot overcome. Cranford will play a game braced by a tension of nerve that should be broken. Westfield goes into the game with a thorough knowledge of individual and team play and there will be no point in either direction overlooked. The players of both teams have been coached to the defects and shortcomings of their opponents, they have been well groomed for the play and the contest will be one of clear headed judgment, and may Westfield have the best of it.

MIRACULOUS ESCAPE
FOR O'DONNELL FAMILY.Speeding Trolley Hits Wagon and Occupants are Scattered Along Roadside.

Con O'Donnell, his wife and Mrs. John O'Donnell and her two infants narrowly escaped death last night while driving through Brightwood avenue.

O'Donnell and his wife, who live on Prospect street, were driving their sister-in-law and her two babies to their home beyond Embree Crescent at about 9 o'clock. Just as the carriage passed the home of Louis Thies, on Brightwood avenue, trolley car No. 10 came along at full speed and crashed into the rear of O'Donnell's wagon, hurling it and its occupants in the air and landing them in a heap in the gutter many feet away. The car was stopped and the motorman and passengers went to the assistance of O'Donnell and his family.

It was found that the five-months' old baby was unhurt while the two-year old girl was slightly cut and bruised. Mrs. John O'Donnell was badly shocked and slightly bruised but her sister, Mrs. Con O'Donnell did not get off so luckily. She had a bad wound over one eye and on the side of her head and received several other cuts and bruises. Con O'Donnell had a severe cut over his left eye, was cut on the lower lip and his left leg was badly cut and bruised.

The wagon was wrecked and the horse badly injured. A trolley car from Plainfield brought the party to the Westfield trolley office, where Dr. Cooper was called to attend to their injuries. It is nothing short of a miracle that their lives were saved as the place of the accident was a down grade and the cars go full speed after making the Prospect street turn.

It is thought that had the motorman been looking ahead at the time he could have seen the wagon on the track and avoided the collision.

MISS EMMA REED NOW
MRS. GEORGE BURT CLARK.Two Popular Young Westfielders Married
by Rev. N. W. Cadwell.

A very pretty wedding took place Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. S. Reed on Park street, when her daughter, Miss Emma Reed, was united in marriage to George Burt Clark. The ceremony was performed by Rev. N. W. Cadwell, amid pulch and smiles.

The bride looked very pretty in white imported muslin, and carried a shower bouquet of roses. She was given away by her brother, W. C. Reed.

The bridesmaids were the Misses Anna and Margaret Scudder, of Fairwood. They were attired in white organdie and carried pink carnations. Roland Randolph was best man, Alvah M. Reed, brother of the bride, and Wm. L. Mason, of Somerville, acted as ushers.

The wedding march and music during the ceremony, was beautifully rendered by Mrs. Letitia Hart. About forty guests were in attendance from Somerville, Brooklyn, Rahway and Westfield.

The bride was the recipient of many handsome and useful presents. After congratulations, best wishes and refreshments, Mr. and Mrs. Clark were driven to Plainfield, and from there took the midnight train to Washington, D. C. Upon their return, they will reside with Mr. Clark's parents on South Broad street.

The groom is a popular clerk in M. B. Walker's grocery store. The bride is a member of the choir of the Presbyterian church, and both have many friends who wish them "success."

Miss Katherine Smith entertained a number of friends at a most enjoyable euchre at her home on Westfield avenue, Saturday evening.

The first ladies' prize, a handsome lace handkerchief, was won by Miss Hill, of Detroit, and the second, a card envelope, to Mrs. Bellman of Madison. Mr. Diloway, of Jersey City Heights, won first gentlemen's prize, a silver loving cup and Mr. James, of New York, the second, a match receiver.

After the awarding of prizes refreshments were served and a social time spent.

WESTFIELD VS. CRANFORD.

THE GAME OF THE SEASON TAKES PLACE AT CRANFORD TO-MORROW.Col. Condit And His Rough Rider Rooters
And The Biggest Part of Westfield's
Population Will Attend The Game.

For the first time since the afternoon of July 4th, 1898, when the base ball team representing Westfield defeated the Cranford team by a score of 4 to 1, these teams composed of celebrated grass eaters, will meet on the stripped diamond and it is safe to say that there will not be a player on either team who will not do his best to put up the game of his base ball life.

Those who attend the game are promised some rare sport. It will not be a pitcher's battle by any means for at least ten of the eighteen players are sluggers and noted for their stick work.

Kern, the left hand twirler will, probably, occupy the box for the Westfield team for the first half of the game, which will leave "Mike" Collins in fine form to retire the Cranfordites in those trying innings which make up the latter part.

We understand that that both Hennessey and that crack a jack, Burchell will shoot their ins, outs and drops at the Rough Riders, while smiling Tabor will be at third base ready to relieve either of them should the Westfielders "do things" with their delivery.

The teams will, probably, bat in the following order:

WESTFIELD GOLF CLUB
HAS ELECTED OFFICERS.Links Will be Laid Out at Once and a Club House Erected.

A meeting of the Westfield Golf Club was held Tuesday night at the Westfield club. A large number were present. The committee reported that they had secured the land from the trolley company for $250 a year and that the trolley company agrees to advance $2,500 for improvements on the grounds and on the club house, which is to be paid back in 10 annual installments. A twelve hole course will be laid out and it is expected that a few holes will be ready by winter.

The farm house will make an ideal club house. A large veranda will be built, shower baths, a cafe and large reception room will be put in.

Mr. Hunter, of the Baltasrol Golf club, will supervise the building of the links and he declares that when finished they will be equal to, if not better, than any in the county, as the rolling land there makes it possible for all kinds of play.

The membership has nearly reached the one hundred mark which is necessary and it is very probable that the limit will be placed at one hundred and twenty-five, so it behooves those who wish to join to be quick. The dues for active members will be $20, family membership $5 extra for each member of the family, summer and non-resident members $10, the initiation fee, $5, to all members. A large number of non-resident applications have been received.

The officers are: President, C. D. Orth; vice president, E. D. Floyd; secretary, P. D. Worcester; treasurer, H. W. Gladwin. The governors are J. Allen Worth, J. B. Wilson, E. R. Perkins, E. H. Faulkner and P. Q. Oliver.

"Hill's" Crab Supper.

The many friends of Mine Host William H. Grogan, of North Avenue Hotel fame, sat down Wednesday evening to his annual crab supper which has become a feature of this popular hostelry. At 9.15 o'clock all the guests had assembled and were prepared to "let good digestion wait on appetite and health on both." Mr. Grogan with his ever smiling countenance welcomed each guest cordially and assured them that this would be the best of his kind.

About 100 guests sat down and soon the handsome waiters circulated heaping platters of the appetizing viands. A good time was enjoyed by many of Westfield's notables and all united in pronouncing this crab supper the most enjoyable and successful of all that have taken place.

The party broke up in good season and nothing occurred to mar the proprieties of the event.

THE MENU.

Cham Chowder
Steamed Clams
Hard Shell Crabs
Green Corn
Sweet Potatoes
Cham Broth

At 11 o'clock the guests wended their way homeward much pleased to have assisted in disposing of the crab and looking forward to the crab supper of 1901.

BAYONNE LAWYER
TO OPPOSE FOWLER.Westfield Delegation Favored Park, of Cranford, For Congressman.

The Democratic convention of the Eighth Congressional District, held Wednesday at Arlington Park, Bayonne, nominated Edward A. S. Man, of Bayonne, for Congress, as opponent of Congressman Charles N. Fowler, who was renominated recently by the Republicans. This is the first Democratic Congressional candidate Bayonne has had since the city became part of the Eighth District.

Essex County was in favor of Counselor Frederick W. Park, of Cranford. Elizabeth's solid delegation was for Man all the way through, and had not been in Bayonne ten minutes before everybody knew that. The small townships of the county were divided, some for Man and some for Park.

The convention was called to order by John J. Lane, chairman of the Congressional Committee. Mayor Seymour welcomed the delegates to Bayonne. Nominations were then in order. Elizabeth, being called, waived in favor of Bayonne, and Mayor Seymour took the platform to name Mr. Man as Bayonne's candidate. The mention of Mr. Man's name provoked prolonged cheers. The nomination was seconded by Hon. John T. Dunn, of Elizabeth. Counselor Frederick W. Park was placed in nomination by Westfield and seconded by Essex.

Elizabeth cast a unit vote for Man. Rahway was divided, the majority being for Man. Plainfield declared for Man, Cranford, Fairwood, Linden, New Providence and Westfield for Park; Essex was for Park and Bayonne for Man. Counselor Park thereupon stood up and announced that he desired to withdraw, as it was evident the choice of the convention was Mr. Man, of Bayonne.

Edward A. S. Man, the nominee, is 55 years of age, and a native of Pennsylvania. New Jersey, however, has practically been his home for the greater portion of his life.

He has lived in Bayonne since 1872. In 1876 he was made City Attorney, a position he held for two years. He is a member of the Knickerbocker A. C. and one of the governing board of the Bayonne Hospital.

SINCLAIR SCHOOL PLANS
MAY HAVE TO BE REJECTED.Board of Education Lay a Motion to That Effect Upon the Table.

At a special meeting of the Board of Education held last evening Commissioner Forster offered a motion that the plans for the new Sinclair school, drawn by Ingle & Almirall and Clinton McKenzie, architects, be rejected. After a lengthy discussion the motion was laid upon the table.

President Green called the meeting to order at 8.15 o'clock. Clerk Cogger and Commissioners Clark and Forster were present.

Mr. Clark moved that a note be drawn for $2,500 to cover general school purposes. Carried.

Mr. Clark moved that John Knapp, Cyrus P. Wilcox, Elmer Woodruff, Thomas O'Neil and James Harrison be appointed transient officers in accordance with the suggestion of the township committee. Carried.

Mr. Forster moved that another building be rented on the south side of the track and another teacher be appointed. Carried.

The following bills were ordered paid:

W. H. Baker $ 10 00
James Moffett 300 40
J. B. Miller 2 50
Karr, Pool & Lum 22 50

Mr. Clark moved that President Green and Clerk Cogger be appointed a committee to go to Boston and consult an expert on heating and ventilating, Mr. Wade, or others deemed competent.

A resolution was adopted renting the Mosher house on Broad street for the sum of $25 a month.

Mr. Clark moved that the certified checks which accompanied bids for building the Sinclair school be returned. Carried.

The meeting then adjourned.

PIGSKIN CHASERS
AT HARD PRACTICE.Lincoln High School Foot Ball Players
Will Have Strong Team.

The L. H. S. foot ball team are having hard practice in order to fit them for good work this fall and an excellent team is expected. Several of last year's champion team are out with lots of new blood. Among those who are trying for positions are Howe, Knight, Brown, Alpers, Taylor, Pierson, Tice, Boyett Green, Foster, Osborne, Lambert and Collins. The first game will be played with Pingry at Elizabeth on September 20.

A good schedule is being arranged by Manager Brown with well known teams in this district.

Thanksgiving Day and Election Day are already filled with valuable teams.

The boys will probably play at Recreation Park, though it is not certain.

Millions will be spent in politics this year. We can't keep the campaign going without money any more than we can keep the body vigorous without food. Dyspepsia used to starve themselves. SIXTEENTH ANNUAL CONVENTION OF THE W. C. T. U. HELD YESTERDAY

Old Officers Re-elected and Resolutions, Relating to Pehling of Bottled Beer, Adopted.

The sixteenth annual convention of the Union County Woman's Christian Temperance Union was held yesterday in the Presbyterian church of Cranford, and was called to order at 9.30 a. m., by the president Mrs. M. D. Tomlinson, of Plainfield. The opening devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. W. B. Daland, of Elizabeth.

Mrs. Crayton, on behalf of the Cranford Union, cordially welcomed the convention, and Mrs. Doolittle, of Danellen, responded for the delegates. Mrs. Underhill, president of Railway Union, was called to the chair while Mrs. Tomlinson read her annual address, full of cheer for the workers, and helpful with its many suggestions for advancement along all lines of effort. The address will be printed for distribution.

The reports of secretary and treasurer were read, the dry figures even showing the activity of the local unions. Plainfield stands first in the list with 172 active members and Westfield second with 80 active and 20 honorary members.

The visiting delegates were, on motion, made members of the convention. The credential committee reported 76 delegates, which number was increased at the afternoon session by the arrival of others.

The general officers were all re-elected, Mrs. M. D. Tomlinson, president; Mrs. M. Rarick, corresponding secretary; Mrs. G. S. Mosher, recording secretary; Mrs. Mary Cox, treasurer.

After the election of officers Mrs. Hammer, of Bayonne, conducted a prayer and praise service and the noon-tide prayer was offered by Mrs. Scriven Stoddard, of Elizabeth. The executive committee, composed of the county officers and presidents of the local unions, met at 1 o'clock and appointed superintendents for the ensuing year.

At the afternoon session sixteen department reports were read. The memorial service for the members who had passed from this life during the year, was led by Mrs. Bodine, of Danellen, and Miss Jessie Robertson, of Cranford, sang "The Home Land."

Mrs. Bourne, State President, gave an account of the World's W. C. T. U. convention, held in Edinburgh in June. The resolutions reported by the committee were adopted, and the following one selected and ordered sent to the state convention to be held in New Brunswick in October.

Whereas, The peddling of bottled beer and ale from wagons throughout the country districts, is largely on the increase, and presents a powerful source of temptation to individuals otherwise far removed from the saloons, and as the employment of boys in beer bottling establishments fosters habits of drinking among them.

Resolved, That we protest against both evils, and will use our influence to arouse our citizens to the importance of legislation to prohibit the same.

Miss Alice Guernsey, State Superintendent, of Loyal Temperance Legion work, gave an earnest talk, urging each Union to leave no stone unturned until work among the children in each locality shall be established. Rev. Mr. Thompson, pastor of the M. E. church, was introduced and said he had been unable to be present during the day on account of plans for building the new church, in which to welcome a future W. C. T. U. Convention, and that he stands shoulder to shoulder with the organization for the complete annihilation of the liquor traffic.

The address at the evening session was given by Mrs. Anna Hammer on the subject, "Who is Responsible." Rev. Geo. A. Green, pastor of the church, led the devotional exercises. This closed another enjoyable and profitable reunion of the workers in Union County.

CROWDED PUBLIC SCHOOLS SHOW NEED OF NEW BUILDING.

More Registered Pupils Than at any Time in Former Years.

The schools have now been open a week and a comparison of this year's figures with those of last will show the great need of more room.

In the high school department 100 pupils are registered, filling every seat. This is the first time this has ever happened.

There are now 700 pupils registered in the schools, not counting the kindergartens. There were 715 registered in 1899, counting both kindergartens, which was an excess of 122 over 1898.

In the Lincoln school 201 are registered against 214 in 1899. In the Prospect street school 306 are registered against 281 in 1899.

The kindergartens and primaries will open Monday the 24th of September.

In the Dutch house on First street a primary class will be placed and the kindergarten in the new building on the South Side. In the Baptist parsonage Miss Josephine Oliver will have the kindergarten and Miss Pugh the primary.

In the Mosher house Miss Bobelle and Miss Nowell will have the primary. The total number of pupils enrolled when these are opened will probably be over 800.

HORSES GET INSANE.

Torrid Weather Causes Them to Perform Strange Antics.

Chicago Physician Tells How the Animals Act When Overcome by the Intense Heat of Summer.

One of the effects of hot weather which has been especially noticeable of late, according to veterinarians, has been the increase of insanity among horses. "Insanity among horses" is a term used by the Chicago Tribune, and the veterinarians declare that one of the many things about "horse doctoring" that the general public does not know is that horses, like men, often go insane, and do unaccountably strange things, says the Chicago Tribune.

One day a horse belonging to an ice cream company in South Chicago went violently insane while attached to a wagon. It was a frightful hot day, and the horse had been driven hard. It was standing still, when suddenly, without warning, it went charging down the street full tilt, swinging the wagon from side to side, and finally wrecking it and running until exhausted.

"That is not an unusual case," said Dr. Matthew H. McKillip. "Horses frequently go mad from heat. The really strange cases are those in which a horse goes crazy from some organic trouble. In that they are like men. I had a horse brought to me not a week ago for examination which was typical of a certain form of the trouble. The poor beast belonged to a prominent South side family which had recently bought him. The owner complained to me that it took the horse an hour to go a block. I watched it travel, and recognized the trouble at once. It was simply demented. Instead of trotting straight ahead it rocked up and down like a rocking horse at a sort of cumbrous gallop, hardly making any progress, and seeming not to understand anything that was said to it. I was assured that not long before the horse had been a willing worker, and had had considerable speed. Yet when I saw it it would not trot nor walk, but just rocked along. I told the owner at once that the horse was crazy and could not be cured, but that did not convince him. He had an idea that if the horse were worked hard enough it would get well, so he sent it out several miles one day and worked it hard the next, and within an hour after it got back to its stable the horse died."

"A horse is not just like a man in the way it goes crazy. The animal lacks the reasoning faculty, and, as a result, when its brain becomes deranged it lacks the strange manifestations that are due to a crooked operation of reason in man. The actions of the horse are largely habitual, and when the insanity comes on it is manifested through a derangement of habit. I had a case not long ago in which a horse which had been a good driver and worker for many years suddenly desired to walk sideways. It was liable to stop anywhere and sidestep, or even to refuse to go ahead altogether and just step out to one side. I studied it closely and found that the poor brute was undoubtedly out of its head. Another case I knew was one in which the horse would turn to the left unless the right rein was held hard. It could only be driven by holding that rein by main strength all the time. It gradually got worse, and at last the horse had to be killed."

"Sometimes insanity in horses takes the violent form, somewhat like that of the horse in South Chicago. A horse has become harder and harder to drive, will take the bit in its teeth and charge straight ahead through everything, and have to be seriously injured or entirely exhausted before it can be brought to a standstill."

"When a horse has gone crazy through organic change, it is, I believe, incurable. Still, the animal is not then necessarily useless. Mares have been used for breeding purposes when it was well known that they were insane. Their colts were all right, though the dams were not. In insanity which develops from heat and which is due to inflammation of the horse often gets well. Cases of each sort are not uncommon. I have perhaps one a month brought to my attention, and there must be many more in the city."

Not only horses but other animals as well are at times victims of insanity, and even when in a wild state. Mad wild animals have many times been known to terrorize communities and to escape hunters for a long time owing to their absolute departure from the customs of their kind.

That Low Animal, Man.

Instead of the highest, man is in some respects the lowest of the animal kingdom. Man is the most unchaste, the most drunken, the most egotistic, the most miserly, the most hypocritical and the most atrocious of living creatures. No animal, except man, kills for the mere sake of killing. For one being to take the life of another for purposes of selfish utility is bad enough, conscience knows, but the indiscriminate massacre of defenseless victims by armed and organized packs, just for pastime, is beyond characterization. The human species is the only species of animals that plunges to such depths of atrocity. Even vipers and hyenas do not kill for recreation.

No animal, except man, habitually seeks wealth purely out of an insatiable impulse to accumulate, and no animal, except man, gloats over accumulations that are of no possible use to him, that are an injury and an abomination and in whose acquisition he has committed irreparable crimes upon others. There are no millionaires—no professional, legalized, lifelong kleptomaniacs—among the birds and quadrupeds. No animal except man spends as large a part of his energies striving for superiority—not superiority in usefulness, but that superiority which consists in simply getting on the heads of one's fellows to crow—and no animal practices common, ordinary morality to the beings of the world in which he lives so little, compared with the amount he preaches it, as man.—Humane Review.

The Production of Caviare.

Two distinct varieties of caviare are manufactured in Russia—the granulated and the pressed forms. The granulated form is obtained by passing the fish roes under pressure through a fine meshed sieve. The small eggs pass intact, but the envelopes are retained in the sieve. To these pure salt is added in the proportion of one-twentieth or one-fortieth. It is intimately mixed with the eggs by means of a kind of wooden spoon. The caviare is then ready for consumption. It is packed in round metallic boxes of one and a half to five pounds and enveloped in parchment for transportation. The pressed caviare keeps better than the granulated form.

To obtain the fresh caviare is treated with a solution of salt at 25 degrees Baume until the eggs acquire a certain degree of hardness. This operation requires considerable skill and experience. If allowed to stay in the solution too long, the caviare will be too salty, and if not long enough the eggs cannot be preserved. The caviare is then put into small sacks, which are pressed under a screw press to drive out the excess of salt. It is packed in barrels containing up to 1,000 pounds or left in the original sacks, which measure 8 by 20 inches. The average export of pressed caviare for the three years 1896 to 1898 has been more than 8,000 tons, representing a value of $1,400,000.—Scientific American.

Turkish Police Justice.

A thrilling dispute between a Kurd and an Armenian on a street in Constantinople the other day led to an amusing instance of justice as it is dispensed by the Turkish police.

A tobacco box was found on the pavement, as alleged, by a Kurd. An Armenian claimed the box as his own. Neither would give in, and the dispute waxed warm. From words they were near coming to blows when a policeman came up, but he could not decide the question of ownership.

At last the Armenian suggested that the policeman ask what was in the box. "Tobacco and cigarette paper," said the Kurd promptly.

"The box contains nothing but 10 plasters," said the Armenian, smiling. The officer opened the box and, finding the Armenian was right, settled the dispute by giving him the box. "The Armenian is the owner of the box," he said. "The Kurd is a liar." Here he smote the Kurd over the head. "Allah be praised! For my trouble in deciding this complicated affair I will keep the 10 plasters."

Fatal Brevity.

There is a little settlement of New Hampshire people in Klovra county, Colo. Among other things they brought with them the New Hampshire aversion to using any more words in conversation than are absolutely necessary. Two of them met on the road recently and indulged in the following dialogue:

"Mornin', Si."

"Mornin', Josh."

"What'd you give your horse for boots?"

"Turpentine."

"Mornin'."

"Mornin'."

A few days later the men met again, and here's the way a hard luck story was told in mighty few words:

"Mornin', Si!"

"Mornin', Josh!"

"What'd you say you gave your horse for boots?"

"Turpentine."

"Killed mine."

"Mine too."

"Mornin'!"

"Mornin'!"

SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

Paris has a population of 3,000,000 persons and only 40,000 are Protestants.

Chicago presbytery reports a total decrease from last year of $34 in the membership of its churches.

Felix Hogenmiller, who is now 75 years old, has taught school in the same room at St. Genevieve, Mo., for more than 50 years.

Bishop Montgomery, of Los Angeles, Cal., who has been appointed an assistant to Archbishop Riordan, of San Francisco, by the pope, is a native of Kentucky, and is popular with Protestants as well as Catholics.

Oxford has among its undergraduates a married Lancashire millhand, 23 years of age, who working his way into the university by studying after factory hours, with the help of free libraries and university extension lectures. He has won a scholarship worth £80 a year.

Rev. E. P. Lawrence, secretary of the Church Society for the Promotion of Kindness to Animals, intends to visit Washington for the purpose of presenting his ideas to President McKinley. He hopes later to secure audiences with the czar, Emperor William and the heads of other nations, being convinced of their cooperation. The Swiss government will be asked to summon the signatories to the Geneva convention.

Rev. Dr. Samuel L. Gracey, United States consul at Foo Choo, China, in his lifetime has combined the functions of politician and clergyman. Dr. Gracey was born in Philadelphia in 1835. After obtaining an education he was for 30 years pastor of Methodist churches of considerable prominence in and about Philadelphia, Wilmington and Boston. He was twice elected to the Massachusetts legislature from Salem.

Prof. Du Bois, one of the leading negroes of Atlanta, who is a doctor of philosophy of Harvard and who has been collecting statistics of the education of the negro, says he found that there are 2,414 negroes in the country who have received degrees from an educational institution of some kind, including 235 women. Reports from these show that they have, on the whole, been successful and have an average assessed valuation of property of $2,500.

THE SCIENCE OF TRAVELING.

Opportunities Offered by the Trunk Lines to a Man Who is Wide Awake.

"There are ways and ways of traveling," remarked a Philadelphia man whose business keeps him on the road a good deal, particularly between his own town and New York, relates the Washington Star. "It used to be that when I wanted to go over to New York, or rather was compelled to go, for I never wanted to, I took the first train going that way and went. But I don't do that way any more, simply because I have learned a better way. You know every trunk line has other roads connecting with it—that is, not as part of it, but using its tracks for their own trains. For instance, the Pennsylvania has a Chesapeake & Ohio train over it to New York and an Atlantic Coast line train from the south by way of Washington; then, there's Pittsburgh & Fort Wayne from Chicago, and a Pan-Handle from Cincinnati, each and every one coming out of a different territory, in all of which I have business interests. There is, in addition to these trains, the usual and regular Philadelphia trains, local and otherwise, all going to New York and all good enough, but not all suited to me at all times. Sometimes I want to see somebody from Kentucky or Virginia, or from Georgia, or the Carolinas, and instead of getting on any old train out of the Broad street station, I wait for a Chesapeake & Ohio or an Atlantic Coast line, and going through the sleepers I am always sure of finding some southerner or other who can tell me what I want to know. If I want to post myself on Cincinnati and Ohio, or Chicago and the west, I take one of the through trains from those sections, and I always find what I want. It used to be dull riding when I didn't know any better than to take a local train loaded with my own kind of people, but under the present system my trips are not only pleasant little excursions into the south or west, but they are frequently valuable to me in the pointers I pick up. The same opportunities are afforded in other cities for travelers to get trains that mean something more than merely getting them to their destination, and I'll venture not one traveler in 50 thinks of it, and he goes breakneck for the first train that leaves the station."

The Parrot as a Gymnast.

Boys and girls who have watched parrots have even then perform some curious gymnastic feats in their cages. The birds were long thought to have invented these performances in order to vary the monotony of cage life. Mrs. Mandley, wife of a Central American explorer, says that parrots and macaws perform still more wonderfully on the trees when in a state of freedom than they do in captivity. They vault and swing and hang by the beak or toes and balance at dangerous angles. They seem at times to be "showing off" before admiring audiences, and they vie with each other in acrobatic tricks which are truly clever and require close calculations of distance.—Little Chronicle.

He Concentrated. Professor Countenfast is a small man with a large mentality. His wife is a tall woman, who believes in the power of matter over mind. The professor had been absorbed the whole evening in a profound paper on the mental characteristics of people who were unhappily married. Suddenly looking up, he remarked:

"My dear, are you aware of the fact that a man's brain weighs about 3½ pounds?"

"Humph! You've just read that, haven't you?"

"Er—er—why—er—oh, yes; certainly, of course."

"Well, that article says a woman's brain is not so heavy, eh?"

"Er—er—yes, it certainly does, but—"

"And it also states that a woman's brain is of much finer quality, doesn't it?"

"Er—er—well, yes; you are quite right, my dear."

"Now, listen to me. Just concentrate your 3½ pound brain on that settle and figure out how much it will weigh after you bring it full of coal from the cellar." The professor meekly bowed his great head, and, as he departed for the lower regions in search of abstract information, he murmured:

"The man who thinks that mind is superior to matter is an illustrious idiot!"—London Tit-Bits.

The Trunk Paid.

Some years ago a man ran up a bill of $200 in the Tremont House, Chicago, and then ran away without settling it. The trunk which remained in his room was unusually heavy and when opened after his departure was found to contain specimens of ore, brought from the gold and silver mines of Colorado, where presumably he had lost all his money. After waiting out the legal time Mr. Gage sent the contents of the trunk to an assayer, who returned two bits of metal valued at more than $100 in excess of the bill after deducting his own fees.

"Mr. Maximum."

The result of an examination was put up on the notice board of a well known examining establishment, and one of the attendants was scanning the list with as much interest as any of the breathless students. At the head of the list was written, "Maximum 700," and when the attendant's eyes rested thereon he exclaimed, "Why, that Mr. Maximum, he's always top, he is!"—London Globe.

CHEMISTRY OF THE EARTH.

Reactions That Have Taken Place in This Globe of Ours During the Passing Centuries.

Under the heading, "Phases of the Earth's Development," Prof. Edward Renouf, of the Johns Hopkins university, draws in Popular Science Monthly a picture of the various chemical "reactions" which we have reason to believe must have taken place on an enormous scale upon the earth at a certain period of its history. He says:

"At that period, when the temperature was as high as that easily obtained in the electric furnace, this molten surface must have consisted of binary compounds, such as the hydrides, borides, silicides and carbides, and probably contained also some refractory elements, metals and nonmetals, in the free state. The atmosphere contained free hydrogen, oxygen and nitrogen, gaseous binary compounds, like the oxides of carbon, metals in the gaseous form, and many nonmetallic elements like sulphur and chlorine. In the atmospheric region farthest removed from the molten surface violent chemical reactions occurred between the heated elements, forming compounds which were again dissipated into the elements by the heat given off in the act of formation or radiated from the glowing surface below. The magnitude and violence of some of these reactions almost baffle the imagination. Let the reader drop a piece of calcium carbide as large as a small marble into a little water in a cup;
there is a rapid action; a gas—acetylene—is given off, which burns with a smoky flame if a lighted match is held over the cup. So much heat is generated in the reaction that the cup becomes hot. Nearly four per cent. of the earth's outer crust is calcium; all this was at this period of the earth's history in the form of carbide. Imagine all the vast limestone mountain ranges of the present day as carbide, and try to realize the effect when water fell upon any considerable area. The heat generated would be so enormous that in a moment the acetylene would ignite and burn, forming oxides of carbon and water vapor, which would in turn decompose, throwing jets of glowing hydrogen and oxygen vast distances into the atmosphere, there to cool and reunite to water. Similar phenomena would attend the decomposition of the hydride and silicide, since the substances formed are combustible gases, or liquids or solids easily vol-atilized. This is no wild fantasy, but a conservative statement of what must have occurred at a certain period of the earth's history."

HIS WHISTLE CHARMED BEES.

Insects Settled Down on a Farmer and His Oxen, and He Took Them Home.

Henry Fitch, a young farmer living at Mountain End, invited death for himself and his two oxen the other day
by whistling, says the St. Louis Republic. Young Fitch is a whistler of much ability. He has whistled at every farmhouse and every gathering in the neighborhood, and when he is whistling nobody cares to listen to a piano, violin,
flute, guitar or banjo.

The other day Fitch was plowing in the field—plowing and whistling. Two sleek, sleepy oxen were drawing the plow, and neither they nor Fitch paid any attention to anything but the plowing and whistling. Presently a swarm of thousands of honey bees hove-vered over them. There was no use to run—still less to fight them, and Fitch kept on whistling and plowing while the bees settled softly upon him and the oxen. They seemed friendly enough as long as Fitch whistled, and Fitch admits that he was willing to whistle as long as they remained friendly and seemed inclined to listen.

Fitch continued to plow along. His patch led toward his home, where he could see his mother in the yard. He caught the tails of the oxen and held them so the beasts might not anger the bees by switching them. For the distance of half a mile he held those two ox tails and whistled. His mother looked up and saw him. He and his oxen looked like they might be clev-ered with a soft brown fur. Fitch stopped whistling just long enough to say "bees" and then continued his team without the bees realizing that he had dropped a note.

Mrs. Fitch acted at once. She knew something of bees and realized that unless she got them lived in short order they would probably sting her son to death. For she argued that he could not keep on whistling forever. So she got a huge tin pan and began beating it vigorously. The bees stirred unusually at this interruption of their concert,
but they did not sting, and after a few moments every one of them rose in the air and started toward the tin pan.
Mrs. Fitch led the way to an empty hive which had luckily been prepared for another swarm, and by dint of much beating and coaxing got all the bees into it.

Fitch stopped whistling, sat down
flat on the ground and napped his face.
The sleek, lazy oxen switched their tails vigorously to make up for lost time.

A UNIQUE SHOE INDUSTRY.

Rise of the Jewish Scrap and "Seconds" Buyer in New York City.

The "ghetto," the home of a mixed mass of humanity, presents a remarkable and unique phase of New York
shoe selling, says the New York Tribune. Petty shoemakers visit the numerous city shoe factories daily and buy up scraps and "seconds" of all kinds of leather, which they take to their homes, and after being inspected and assorted by the entire family,
it is finally made into pieced backs
and wedge heels in black, tan patent leather and numerous odd combinations, every inch of leather being utilized. A steady worker turns out at least 24 pairs of these shoes, working from seven a. m. until late into the night. In the meantime the thrifty wife puts the finished product into a clothes basket and, taking a stool, corners herself at the prominent corner of Hester and Essex streets, right in the heart of the "ghetto." Here activity reigns, thousands upon thousands of wage earners swarm through the streets; the vendors loudly cry their wares to attract the attention of bargain seekers.

After a day of bantering and talking the woman has disposed of her shoes and goes home with an empty basket and a pocketful of small change. After many weeks of this routine the economical shoemaker has saved enough to realize an ambition and he buys a push cart—a two-wheeled affair much like the familiar fruitman's cart—and with shoes bought at fire sales he pushes boldly into some crowded thoroughfare and lines up against the curb. A tempting price loudly proclaimed serves to dispose of the stock as often as he can replenish the same. Under these circumstances the meager capital has increased sufficiently to enable him to open a small shoe store in Hester street and to employ an assistant.
He searches wholesale shoe houses
for odds and ends, damaged and mis-mated shoes, and picks up numerous lots for a fraction of their value.

He has now assumed the dignity of a merchant and has gained the confidence of his countrymen. Encouraged by his success and confident of his ability, he buys in larger lots and begins to supply other pushcart dealers. The demand eventually assumes greater proportions; he attends auction sales, which are very frequent in New York, and realizes profit from every venture. In the course of a few years his environments become too small, he disposes of his push cart and rents a basement in Bayard street, among the East side shoe jobbers.

An Imperial Appeal.

This may not be a verbatim copy of the letter that the unfortunate young Chinese emperor sent to the representatives of the powers, asking their protection against the empress dowager, but it is undoubtedly a good deal like it—if it is like it at all:

JESTS IN WOE AND WARFARE.

Bitter Jokes and Facetious Sayings
in the Very Face of Destruction.

Jests have been uttered in the most apparently unlikely situations. "Yes, pasian died in a jest," writes Lord Bo-con, and on sick beds, in prisons and on scaffolds the inveterate humorist has given vent to witticisms. "Don't send me to Gravesend by water," pleaded Hood, when his doctor recommended
hydropathic treatment; Sir Thomas Moore's last utterance in life was a jest
"Don Quixote," with all Sancho Panza's wit and humor, was composed in a prison. It is not, therefore, surprising that there should be instances of jests made amid the horrors of war. Sieges appear to have frequently furnished material for witticisms, generally uttered by the besieged, who may have resorted to jesting as a means of keeping up their falling spirits; as the late beleaguered garrison at Mafeking organized loan exhibitions and needle work competitions. It must be confessed that the jests uttered by the holders of a beleaguered fortress were often more sarcastic than courteous,
sometimes even taking the form of actual insult to their foes; as in the case
when, in the eleventh century, the citizens of Alencon, besieged by William the Conqueror, hung out raw hides over their walls with the inscription: "More work for the tanner's son"—in contemptuous allusion to the parentage of William's mother, Arlotta, whose father was a tanner, says the London Globe.

In 1643, when Waller, the parliamentary general, besieged Arundel castle, the cavalier garrison not only responded to his summons of surrender by a flat defiance, but, in denial of their alleged (and actual) want of provisions, hung out a white flag at Christmas, and "under cover of this parody called some of our men and gave them letters directed to our general, in which they desired sack, tobacco, cards and dice to be sent to them, to make them merry at this idle time, promising to return us for them beef and mutton;"
a request Waller characterized as "very bold and insolent." The insinuation that the pious parliamentary army was so much better supplied with "cards and dice" than were the traditionally "debauched" cavaliers was doubtless a sore offense to the staid parliamentary general, more especially as he added:
"We know them (the garrison) to be in truth hunger-bitten and lacking water."

A yet more contemptuous jest was made upon besiegers by the famous Black Agnes, countess of March, when defending the Castle of Dunbar against its English assailants in 1335. During the siege the countess and her maids frequently appeared upon the town walls armed with cloths, with which they ostentatiously wiped the spots
where the huge stones cast by the enemy's machine fell, as though the only injury these could do was to raise a little dust. Irritated by this contemptuous treatment, the earl of Salisbury,
then commanding the English forces,
brought to the assault a machine then known as a "sow," from the resemblance of its shape to a hog's back—
a strongly constructed timber erection,
which, being thrust close to the walls
of a town or fortress, protected a party of soldiers beneath it, who could then attack the wall with mining tools.

Beware, Montague,
For narrow shall they sow.
Cried out the derisive countess as the machine approached, and at the same moment a huge fragment of rock was dropped from the walls upon the machine, which was almost crushed by its weight. "Behold the litter of English pigs!" cried the countess as the surviving soldiers fled from the ruins of the machine. The earl of Salisbury could jest in turn. Riding one day within sight of the walls of Dunbar in company with another knight, the latter was fatally struck by an arrow from the battlements. "That is one of the countess' love tokens," remarked Salisbury as his companion fell; "we see that Black Agnes' love shafts pierce to the heart."

A somewhat ill-natured jest upon the timidity of her male companion was uttered by Countess Von Voss to Gen.
Von Kockritz as they followed the king and queen of Prussia in their flight before Napoleon in 1807. The countess and the general were delayed upon their journey by the bad weather, and the latter several times expressed his fears lest they should be overtaken by the French and be "possibly massacred, or at the least made prisoners."

"Well, at least, they will only take two old women prisoners," exclaimed the countess, impatiently. Eloquent and impassioned addresses have been made to their men by leaders of battle on sea and land, but no old admiral or Nelson's time is said to have uttered a brief but pithy "hortation," as Lord Racon calls it, to his sailors before the battle of the Nile. "My lads," he remarked, pointing to the shore, "you see yonder the land of Egypt. Well, if you don't fight like devils you'll soon find yourselves in the house of bondage."

Africa Is Rich in Volcanoes.
Eastern Africa is said to have six active volcanoes and western Africa
four; those in the Cameroons are said to have been in eruption as late as 1898.
The islands westward are all of volcanic origin. The Canary Islands are famous for the great peak of Tenerife which became quiet long prior to discovery; other vents in the islands have been in eruption at intervals during the eighteenth century, and hot vapors and smoke also from them at the present time.—N. Y. Herald.
