WHO IS THIS BISHOP QUAYLE?

The People of Westfield are Becoming Curious And They Want to Know More Advanced Facts Have Been Secured

The records of the Cradle-Book say he is a Missourian. Now that would be a joke, if it were not so serious, for Missouri is famous for rail fences, razor-backs, one-suspended farmers, mules with the proverbial mulish dispositions, ox teams and rope harness. Most men who have been born in Missouri hesitate about revealing that fact even more than those who are born in Philadelphia. It is a fearful handicap to be born in Missouri. Any man who has overcome that handicap is a national curiosity. But there is one peculiar form of Missouri ways still clinging to this man Quayle. He has never been known to comb his hair. An Iowa lady who had not seen him for several years suddenly came upon the Bishop in a railway station and she said, "Why is this Bishop Quayle?" And when he saw her staring at his great tangle of auburn hair he replied, "Yes, madam, and I haven't combed it yet."

There was a man in Bible times by the name of Samson who got into serious trouble by having too much attention paid to his hair. Bishop Quayle doesn't stand in danger of that.

A man once said that Bishop Quayle came so near being born a freak that he was born a genius. He has an almost unparalleled capacity for intellectual activity. He sleeps only three or four hours a night, often arises at three and works until breakfast time on his correspondence. Maybe that is the reason nobody can read his writing. Horace Greeley was quite Spencerian when compared to the pen work of Bishop Quayle. But who could expect exact letters and straight lines from one whose first years were spent trying to guide an obstreperous mule down a crooked Missouri corn row? He has a typewriter too. One of these Bickity Bicks we are informed. But its periods, dashes and commas, and capitals behave like frenzied Indians and it is reported that many a precise school man has been struck with nervous prostration after reading one of his compositions. But pens and typewriters are small matter when we are talking about a Bishop. It is reported that he makes a practice of reading twenty-five books a week besides all other duties. This is his fun as he puts it.

And speaking of fun, he is really one of the funniest men anywhere in public life today. Burdett, and Josh Billings, and Bill Nye and Mr. Dooley could all be shaken up together in one basket but you wouldn't have half as many hearty laughs as this man is likely to provoke in one evening. People who have never been known to even grin comfortably invariably have their sides ache when they hear Quayle. How does he do it? So far as we have investigated nobody knows. If others did know they would do it too.

Did we say he is a genius? Well, that is a mistake, he is several geniuses all in one. He is a philosopher, but not the kind that writes text books and lectures while students sleep. His philosophy is home-made and sparkling as a fountain. He is an impersonator. No, he doesn't use wigs and paint and make-up. He doesn't need to. His characters are so vivid that you hear them walk on the stage; and breathe, and laugh. You have never really seen the great character in the Merchant of Venice until you see his Shylock. He is a historian. At his own will he can fill the room with war chariots, with the cries of the Inquisition, with the blood red terrors of the French revolution. He makes the past move upon us like a besieging army and there is no escape. He is an orator. But if you are looking for the sonorous periods of a Webster or a John Bright you will be most happily disappointed. Quayle makes the rules and speech and rhetoric to serve his purpose and when there is no word to suit his meaning he makes a new one on the spot. His Missourian independence is responsible for his once saying, "I haven't any use for a man who can't judiciously break a rule of grammar once in a while."

But now look here, Mr. Reporter, do you suppose that I can tell you all the interesting things about this man Quayle? Why he has been doing interesting things for the last twenty-five years and I can no more keep up with them than a Dachsund can keep up with a Jack-habbit. You will simply have to tell your readers that Bishop Quayle, the real and inimitable genius, provoker of laughter and tears the world over, is to be in Westfield election night, Nov. 3, and they have to hear him for themselves.

ANNUAL BANQUET BY MEN'S CLUB

Of Presbyterian Church Best Ever
Excellent Dinner Charming

Amiable Mood For Address By

ANTHONY FIALA EXPLORER

Last Friday night the Men's Club of the Presbyterian Church held its eleventh annual banquet in the parish house which was attended by about one hundred and seventy-five members of the club and invited guests. The dinner which had been prepared by Mrs. G. E. Ludlow was all that could be desired and was served in an excellent manner by the ladies of the church who were dressed in white. The dining room of the parish house was tastefully decorated with American and peace flags and on the tables were bouquets of flowers. In front of each cover had been placed a noise making device and during the evening good use was made of these. At times a person could hardly hear himself think so enthusiastic did the banqueters become.

Promptly at 7:30 the men marched to the dining room to the strains of "Sit Down, You Are Rocking the Boat." After being directed to their

THEATRE MEETINGS TO BE RESUMED

First to be Next Sunday Evening.
Dr. Loomis to Take Themes
This Winter From the Life of Christ

The Peoples Sunday Evening Services will begin its third season at the Westfield Theatre next Sunday evening at 8 o'clock.

A careful program is being arranged for the meetings this year. Turning aside from the Life Lessons of the Old Testament which were followed last season, the speaker, Dr. Samuel Lane Loomis, will take his themes from the Life of Christ. These will be treated in a way which, although wholly reverent, is unconventional and will be illustrated by lantern slides and motion pictures.

The music, solos and the singing of favorite hymns and Gospel songs from the lantern slide, will as heretofore be a marked feature of the meetings. The improved, enlarged and redecorated auditorium is much more attractive than formerly. Larger audiences can be accommodated and there is every sign that the meetings will be more successful than ever before.

The theme for next Sunday evening is "Change your Mind." The nature and results of repentance are to be illustrated by a motion picture showing Mr. Richard Harding Davis' striking story—"Van Bibber's Experiment."

Miss Helen Collins will sing a solo. Upon the 8th of November, which is a great Temperance Sunday in Westfield, a reel will be shown entitled, "A Vivid Flame," which illustrates both the awful power of the drink habit and the way in which men are saved from it's grip.

The general public is invited to all these services, excepting those that have engagements at the same hour in their own churches. No collection is made, nor funds solicited. The meetings are supported by voluntary subscription.

MRS. PEDDIE GIVES BIRTHDAY PARTY.

Mrs. Emma L. Peddie entertained about seventy-five of her friends at her home, 629 East Broad street, last night in honor of her birthday. Although Mrs. Peddie would not confess her age to the Standard reporter, she admitted that she was conscious of being one year older. The affair was in the nature of a birthday-musical and during the evening a musical program was given consisting of vocal selections by Miss Forsythe and Mrs. Arthur Rowland, of the Presbyterian church choir; Mrs. Ralph Collins, Mrs. J. B. Douglas and Mrs. Grace Crook, contralto. An instrumental duet was played by Miss Genevieve Peddie and Mrs. Ralph Collins. The "florists" in the dining room were Mrs. E. R. Morry, Miss Ida Hutchinson, Miss Carrie Fowler and Mrs. Pollon, of this place, and Miss Rae Smith, of Newark.

Mrs. Peddie was the recipient of many beautiful bouquets of American Beauty roses, carnations and chrysanthemums. After the musical program refreshments were served.

PHTHISIS EXHIBIT GREAT SUCCESS

Hundreds Visit Hall Viewing Displays and Listen to Lectures by Townsmen and Dr. Knowlton. Appeals Made For District Nursing Association

The tuberculosis exhibit of the State Board of Health which has been in progress all this week in the assembly room of the Washington school, under the auspices of the Board of Health, of this town, came to a close last night. The exhibit has been most interesting and instructive and has been the means of letting the people of this town know of this dread disease and the ways to prevent it.

The exhibit was opened on Monday night when about two hundred people visited the assembly hall. The walls of the assembly room were decorated with pictures and charts showing the different phases of tuberculosis and what to use to prevent it and what not to use. All of these pictures were very interesting and showed the people just what the disease is and how it can be avoided if care is taken when a person is infected with it.

After the charts and pictures and models had been inspected, President of the Board of Health, Dr. J. B. Harrison, called the assemblage together and stated what the exhibit was for. He welcomed the people of Westfield to the exhibit and said that he hoped everyone would visit it.

At the close of his remarks he introduced Mayor H. W. Evans, who made a brief address. Mayor Evans was followed by Congressman W. E. Tuttle, Jr., and Rev. Dr. W. I. Steans. At the close of Dr. Steans' address, Dr. Harrison introduced Dr. Millard Knowlton, director of the tuberculosis work of the State Board of Health, who gave a lecture on tuberculosis illustrated with stereopticon and motion pictures. Dr. Knowlton told of the discovery of the tuberculosis germ by Dr. Koch thirty-two years ago. He stated that in the last five years there had been twenty-three cases of tuberculosis in this town. He told of the nature of the disease; the cause of it, its early symptoms, the cost of tuberculosis, how the disease spreads, and where it thrives. He stated and showed pictures to prove that the fly has a great part in the spread of tuberculosis.

Among the pictures shown on the screen were several of the back yards in this town, the lake on Broad street, which Dr. Knowlton said was a mosquito breeding place, and other pictures of places in the town which he said were unsanitary.

On Tuesday afternoon the exhibit was opened to the school children and there were a large number of them present. They listened very attentively to the lecture given to them by Dr. Knowlton. In the evening, Arthur N. Pierson, George D. Beattys and F. W. Ellsworth made addresses which were followed by a lecture by Dr. Knowlton.

On Wednesday afternoon the exhibit was again open to the children. In the evening E. E. Thompson, of the Board of Education and M. B. Dutcher spoke. Dr. Knowlton followed and lectured on the "Prevention and Cure for Tuberculosis."

Yesterday afternoon the school children were again given a chance to visit the exhibit and listen to a lecture by Dr. Knowlton. The evening was known as "Italian Night" and was attended by a large number of Italians. Dr. F. R. Dimatteo, of Newark, delivered a lecture to them in their own language on "Tuberculosis" which was followed by another lecture on the "Prevention and cure of Tuberculosis," by Dr. Knowlton.

Altogether the exhibit was very successful and the local Board of Health, as well as the State Board, are to be congratulated upon having been able to hold it here as it without doubt has taught the citizens a considerable amount about the dread which they did not know before.

One of the features of the exhibit which must not be forgotten was the chart of the Plainfield clinic which was loaned to the dentists in town and which showed how the care of the teeth lessens the chances of contracting tuberculosis.

All the speakers on the different evenings referred to the District Nursing Association and made urgent appeals for the support of it by the town people.

On Friday, November 20, Anthony Fiala, the AROTC Explorer and Traveller will lecture at the PLAYHOUSE.

GROWTH MARKS UNION COUNTY

Frank H. Smith, Register; Has Been Compelled to Install
Modern System to Take Care of Rapid Increase of Business

The growth of Union County since it was created by a division of Essex County in 1857, is one of the most phenomenal in the history of the country. In no section has the development of property, establishment of industries and increase in population been more steady than here. That there has been nothing spasmodic or of mushroom nature in any of the advances is indicated in the records of the County Register's office.

During recent years the increase has been more rapid than in those preceding, and plainly showed that the system of recording deeds, mortgages, assignments, transfers, contracts, releases, etc., would soon be inadequate. The first person to realize this fact was Frank H. Smith, the present county register. He is at present a candidate on the Republican ticket to succeed himself. In again going before the people he does so strictly on his record with the motive of having it publicly approved and being returned to complete a self assigned task in installing a system with more useful and modern conceptions to meet the demands being made upon the office and to provide and ensure their fulfillment in the years to come.

When Mr. Smith realized the need of a change in the method of indexing and recording the public's papers and documents, and that with the greatest efficiency, facility and economy, he set about devising one which would do. Even with his deep and intimate knowledge of the office and its functions, this was a staggering undertaking for it meant that not only would the daily work have to be handled as it came in, but the records made in the past half century would have to be turned over to conform with the plan and be done in such a way as not to interfere with the work of the throng of searchers who use the books each business day.

The work would have been simple enough if the new system was only to effect the records made from the time it became operative, but then the office would have had two systems and this would have been contrary to Mr. Smith's idea of business methods. These and his office he takes seriously and it is for this reason that his administration has been endorsed by members of the bench and bar and real estate men in all parts of the State who have had business with the office. The two systems would therefore, to his mind, offer chances of confusions and complications, things which to him are dangers with no place in any properly conducted or well ordered establishment, whether private or public.

Several plans were carefully worked out on paper and in his mind by Mr. Smith, only to be rejected wholly or in part, before the one now being installed was hit upon. The work of installing it was started nearly two years ago and will probably require two more years to complete. So efficient has that now completed demonstrated itself, that it has been adopted by a number of other counties in the State, New York, Connecticut and elsewhere. As an economic proposition it is a saving, both money and labor, and as the County continues to increase, the system will not become any more expensive to maintain and will not lose any of its facility or adequateness, for it was designed with a long look into the future by Mr. Smith. After a careful analysis of the growth in the past, he made proportionate and ample allowances for the years to come.

If returned to the office by the voters on November 3, he will be enabled to complete the installation of the system and the county will have what is now recognized as the most concise, economic and efficient indexing and recording method in the country. Then at the expiration of his term, his successor will go in with less responsibility both to himself and the residents of the county on account of his absolute ignorance of the momentous and important constructive work now under way. The opinion of attorneys and real estate men generally is that a change at this time would be highly unwise.

owing to the rotten condition of the present timber work. Your committee would recommend this work to be done at a cost not exceeding the sum of $250.

The Little bridge should be redocked with wooden plank and should also be painted. The Morris County Board of Freeholders has agreed to have this work done, and your committee would therefore recommend that this work be authorized, the total cost thereof not to exceed the sum of $400, of which Union county is to pay half.

Report of Committee on Culverts in Summit. Your committee would therefore recommend the construction of a new culvert on Russell place to take the place of one now composed of pipe, which is too small in size and not sufficiently strong—the new work not to cost more than $200.

FAREWELL PARTY FOR H. B. HOLLOWAY

Yesterday. Mr. Holloway Was Active and Popular in Fourth
Ward

Mr. H. B. Holloway, of 437 First street, who has been confined to his home during the past year on account of poor health left for Phoenix, Arizona, Thursday morning. Hearing of the necessity for a change of climate conditions, his friends of the fourth ward gave him a most pleasant surprise and farewell reception last Monday night. L. H. Phelps invited the members of the Fourth Ward Tax Payers Association and other gentlemen friends of Mr. Holloway, to meet at his house at 8:30 P. M. At 8:45 Mr. Phelps crossed the street to ask Mr. Holloway to his house to answer an out-of-town phone call. When he entered he was greeted with a chorus of "He's a jolly good fellow," instead of the usual "hello."

After listening to the rendition of some very fine music Mr. Phelps invited his guests to the Dining Room to enjoy a repast during which Mr. Phelps, in a few chosen words, presented to Mr. Holloway on behalf of those present a solid gold watch chain pocket knife, as a token to show the respect and high esteem in which he is held by his friends. Mr. E. D. Clark, also expressed on behalf of those present best wishes for his speedy recovery and return to his own fireside.

Among those present were L. B. Denison, T. K. Bray, Thomas Catto, W. H. Bush, C. W. Clotworthy, H. W. Wechler, E. D. Clark, T. O. Young, M. S. Bennett, C. E. Cox, O. W. Jaquish, Jr., B. L. Meyer, W. F. Watts, H. B. Holloway and L. H. Phelps.

Mr. Holloway has always been very much interested in the welfare of his town and especially in this the fourth ward.

As Treasurer of the Fourth Ward Tax Payers Association, he worked hard to obtain the much needed improvements put in that section of the town during the past three years.

Mr. Holloway has been an employee of the Hannover National Bank of N. Y., for the past sixteen years, and through his close attention to business rose to the position of Recording Teller. He over did it, however, and was compelled to ask for a leave of absence in October, 1913, and has not been able since to resume his duties.

WHO IS THIS BISHOP QUAYLE?

The People of Westfield are Becoming Curious And They Want to Know More Advanced
Facts Have Been Secured

The records of the Cradle-Book say he is a Missourian. Now that would be a joke, if it were not so serious, for Missouri is famous for rail fences, razor-backhogs, one-suspended farmers, mules with the proverbial mulish dispositions, ox teams and rope harness. Most men who have been born in Missouri hesitate about revealing that fact even more than those who are born in Philadelphia. It is a fearful handicap to be born in Missouri. Any man who has overcome that handicap is a national curiosity. But there is one peculiar form of Missouri ways still clinging to this man Quayle. He has never been known to comb his hair. An Iowa lady who had not seen him for several years suddenly came upon the Bishop in a railway station and she said, "Why is this Bishop Quayle?" And when he saw her staring at his great tangle of auburn hair he replied, "Yes, madam, and I haven't combed it yet."

There was a man in Bible times by the name of Samson who got into serious trouble by having too much attention paid to his hair. Bishop Quayle doesn't stand in danger of that.

A man once said that Bishop Quayle came so near being born a freak that he was born a genius. He has an almost unparalleled capacity for intellectual activity. He sleeps only three or four hours a night, often arises at three and works until breakfast time on his correspondence. Maybe that is the reason nobody can read his writing. Horace Greeley was quite Spencerian when compared to the pen work of Bishop Quayle. But who could expect exact letters and straight lines from one whose first years were spent trying to guide an obstreperous mule down a crooked Missouri corn row? He has a typewriter too. One of these Bickley Bicks was informed. But its periods, dashes and commas, and capitals behave like frenzied Indians and it is reported that many a precise school man has been struck with nervous prostration after reading one of his compositions. But pens and typewriters are small matter when we are talking about a Bishop. It is reported that he makes a practice of reading twenty-five books a week besides all other duties. This is his fun as he puts it.

And speaking of fun, he is really one of the funniest men anywhere in public life today. Burdett, and Josh Billings, and Bill Nye and Mr. Dooley could all be shaken up together in one basket but you wouldn't have half as many hearty laughs as this man is likely to provoke in one evening. People who have never been known to even grin comfortably invariably have their sides ache when they hear Quayle. How does he do it? So far as we have investigated nobody knows. If others did know they would do it too.

Did we say he is a genius? Well, that is a mistake, he is several geniuses all in one. He is a philosopher, but not the kind that writes text books and lectures while students sleep. His philosophy is home-made and sparkling as a fountain. He is an impersonator. No, he doesn't use wigs and paint and make-up. He doesn't need to. His characters are so vivid that you hear them walk on the stage, and breathe, and laugh. You have never really seen the great character in the Merchant of Venice until you see his Shylock. He is a historian. At his own will he can fill the room with war chariots, with the cries of the Inquisition, with the blood red terrors of the French revolution. He makes the past move upon us like a besieging army and there is no escape. He is an orator. But if you are looking for the sonorous periods of a Webster or a John Bright you will be most happily disappointed. Quayle makes the rules and speech and rhetoric to serve his purpose and when there is no word to suit his meaning he makes a new one on the spot. His Missourian independence is responsible for his once saying, "I haven't any use for a man who can't judiciously break a rule of grammar once in a while."

But now look here, Mr. Reporter, do you suppose that I can tell you all the interesting things about this man Quayle? Why he has been doing interesting things for the last twenty-five years and I can no more keep up with them than a Dasehund can keep up with a jack-habbit. You will simply have to tell your readers that Bishop Quayle, the real and inimitable genius, provoker of laughter and tears the world over, is to be in Westfield election night, Nov. 3, and they have to hear him for themselves.

ANNUAL BANQUET BY MEN'S CLUB

Of Presbyterian Church Best Ever
Excellent Dinner Charming
Served Puts Banqueters in Amiable Mood For Address By

ANTHONY FIALA EXPLORER

Last Friday night the Men's Club of the Presbyterian Church held its eleventh annual banquet in the parish house which was attended by about one hundred and seventy-five members of the club and invited guests. The dinner which had been prepared by Mrs. G. E. Ludlow was all that could be desired and was served in an excellent manner by the ladies of the church who were dressed in white. The dining room of the parish house was tastefully decorated with American and peace flags and on the tables were bouquets of flowers. In front of each cover had been placed a noise making device and during the evening good use was made of these. At times a person could hardly hear himself think so enthusiastic did the banqueters become.

Promptly at 7:30 the men marched to the dining room to the strains of "Sit Down, You Are Rocking the Boat." After being directed to their

THEATRE MEETINGS TO BE RESUMED

First to be Next Sunday Evening.
Dr. Loomis to Take Themes
This Winter From the Life of Christ

The Peoples Sunday Evening Services will begin its third season at the Westfield Theatre next Sunday evening at 8 o'clock.

A careful program is being arranged for the meetings this year. Turning aside from the Life Lessons of the Old Testament which were followed last season, the speaker, Dr. Samuel Lane Loomis, will take his themes from the Life of Christ. These will be treated in a way which, although wholly reverent, is unconventional and will be illustrated by lantern slides and motion pictures.

The music, solos and the singing of favorite hymns and Gospel songs from the lantern slide, will as heretofore be a marked feature of the meetings. The improved, enlarged and redecorated auditorium is much more attractive than formerly. Larger audiences can be accommodated and there is every sign that the meetings will be more successful than ever before.

The theme for next Sunday evening is "Change your Mind." The nature and results of repentance are to be illustrated by a motion picture showing Mr. Richard Harding Davis' striking story—"Van Bibber's Experiment." Miss Helen Collins will sing a solo.

Upon the 8th of November, which is a great Temperance Sunday in Westfield, a reel will be shown entitled, "A Vivid Flame," which illustrates both the awful power of the drink habit and the way in which men are saved from its grip.

The general public is invited to all these services, excepting those that have engagements at the same hour in their own churches. No collection is made, nor funds solicited. The meetings are supported by voluntary subscription.

MRS. PEDDIE GIVES BIRTHDAY PARTY.

Mrs. Emma L. Peddie entertained about seventy-five of her friends at her home, 629 East Broad street, last night in honor of her birthday. Although Mrs. Peddie would not confess her age to the Standard reporter, she admitted that she was conscious of being one year older. The affair was in the nature of a birthday-musical and during the evening a musical program was given consisting of vocal selections by Miss Forsythe and Mrs. Arthur Rowland, of the Presbyterian church choir; Mrs. Ralph Collins, Mrs. J. B. Douglas and Mrs. Grace Crook, contralto. An instrumental duet was played by Miss Genevieve Peddie and Mrs. Ralph Collins. The "Boats" in the dining room were Mrs. B. R. Merry, Miss Ida Hutchinson, Miss Carrie Fowler and Mrs. Pollock, of this place, and Miss Rae Smith, of Newark.

Mrs. Peddie was the recipient of many beautiful bouquets of American Beauty roses, carnations and chrysanthemums. After the musical program refreshments were served.

PHTHISIS EXHIBIT GREAT SUCCESS

Hundreds Visit Hall Viewing Displays and Listen to Lectures by Townsmen and Dr. Knowlton.
Appeals Made For District
Nursing Association

The tuberculosis exhibit of the State Board of Health which has been in progress all this week in the assembly room of the Washington school, under the auspices of the Board of Health, of this town, came to a close last night. The exhibit has been most interesting and instructive and has been the means of letting the people of this town know of this dread disease and the ways to prevent it.

The exhibit was opened on Monday night when about two hundred people visited the assembly hall. The walls of the assembly room were decorated with pictures and charts showing the different phases of tuberculosis and what to use to prevent it and what not to use. All of these pictures were very interesting and showed the people just what the disease is and how it can be avoided if care is taken when a person is infected with it.

After the charts and pictures and models had been inspected, President of the Board of Health, Dr. J. B. Harrison, called the assemblage together and stated what the exhibit was for. He welcomed the people of Westfield to the exhibit and said that he hoped everyone would visit it.

At the close of his remarks he introduced Mayor H. W. Evans, who made a brief address. Mayor Evans was followed by Congressman W. E. Tuttle, Jr., and Rev. Dr. W. I. Stearns. At the close of Dr. Stearns' address, Dr. Harrison introduced Dr. Millard Knowlton, director of the tuberculosis work of the State Board of Health, who gave a lecture on tuberculosis illustrated with stereopticon and motion pictures. Dr. Knowlton told of the discovery of the tuberculosis germ by Dr. Koch thirty-two years ago. He stated that in the last five years there had only been twenty-three cases of tuberculosis in this town. He told of the nature of the disease; the cause of it, its early symptoms, the cost of tuberculosis, how the disease spreads, and where it thrives. He stated and showed pictures to prove that the fly has a great part in the spread of tuberculosis.

Among the pictures shown on the screen were several of the back yards in this town, the lake on Broad street, which Dr. Knowlton said was a mosquito breeding place, and other pictures of places in the town which he said were unsanitary.

On Tuesday afternoon the exhibit was opened to the school children and there were a large number of them present. They listened very attentively to the lecture given to them by Dr. Knowlton. In the evening, Arthur N. Pierson, George D. Beattys and F. W. Ellsworth made addresses which were followed by a lecture by Dr. Knowlton.

On Wednesday afternoon the exhibit was again open to the children. In the evening E. E. Thompson, of the Board of Education and M. B. Dutcher spoke. Dr. Knowlton followed and lectured on the "Prevention and Cure for Tuberculosis."

Yesterday afternoon the school children were again given a chance to visit the exhibit and listen to a lecture by Dr. Knowlton. The evening was known as "Italian Night" and was attended by a large number of Italians. Dr. F. R. Dimatteo, of Newark, delivered a lecture to them in their own language on "Tuberculosis" which was followed by another lecture on the "Prevention and cure of Tuberculosis," by Dr. Knowlton.

Altogether the exhibit was very successful and the local Board of Health, as well as the State Board, are to be congratulated upon having been able to hold it here as it without doubt has taught the citizens a considerable amount about the dread which they did not know before.

One of the features of the exhibit which must not be forgotten was the chart of the Plainfield clinic which was loaned to the dentists in town and which showed how the care of the teeth lessens the chances of contracting tuberculosis.

All the speakers on the different evenings referred to the District Nursing Association and made urgent appeals for the support of it by the town people.

On Friday, November 30, Anthony Fiala, the ARCTIC Explorer and Traveller will lecture at the PLAZA-THOUSE.

FIRST LECTURE OF WOMAN'S CLUB

Calls Out Large Attendance to Hear Professor Low Speak on "The Vikings And Anglo Saxons"

The first lecture of the season at the Woman's Club of Westfield, called out a large attendance. Prof. J. Herbert Low, President of the Department of Political Science of the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences, lectured on "The Viking and the Anglo Saxons."

A short business meeting and music preceded the lecture. Mrs. Tubby, first vice-president, was in the chair, owing to the absence of Mrs. Evans. Mrs. Sanborn and Mrs. Talbot, delegates from the Westfield Woman's Club to the Spring Convention of the State Federation of Women's Clubs, and Mrs. Floyd, delegate to the recent Convention at Hackensack, presented interesting reports of the conventions.

The special work committee of the club are planning a recital by Miss Harmonie David, followed by a tea, to be given Nov. 30, at the home of the chairman, of the committee, Mrs. R. E. Perry, of Highland Avenue. The committee is planning also a "sale of Thanksgiving Goodies" to be contributed from the storerooms of club members to take place at the Presbyterian Parish house before and after the meeting on Nov. 23. These two projects are to raise money to assist the committee in its social center work.

Miss Helen Scholder, a young violinist from New York, accompanied by Miss Winifred Barr, delighted her audience with her finished rendering of Gottmann's Catilena and Bethoven's Minuet in G. Miss Scholder is fortunate in the possession of an especially mellow instrument which she handles with grace. In the Catilena she displayed her technique in the rapidity with which she took it and for so extremely young an artist showed splendid breadth of tone and warmth of feeling. She responded to enthusiastic applause with an encore, a musical treat in itself.

Prof. Low followed the music and held his audience from beginning to end. "The literature of any period," he said, "is the reflection of the life and character of the people." He traced how the Celtic, Roman, Saxon and Danish influences are shown in our language. Prof. Low carried his hearers from the Fall of Rome, which in disrupting the Roman provinces left them an easy prey through the Dark Ages, which he declared were not so dark as generally accepted but rather a transition state of civilization, to the Renaissance.

Prof. Low explained how, after the Fall of Rome, the Anglos and Saxons on being called from their forests in the north of Germany to aid the Celts decided to acquire the land for themselves and marked off their homesteads all over England, driving the Celts into Wales and Ireland. The conquerors then settled down to rule the land in peace and have handed down to us our three most prominent characteristics—Personal Initiative, Cool-headedness and Devotion to Agricultural Pursuits. Of the development of language Prof. Low said at that time the entire English vocabulary comprised 2,000 words. Now, he asserts, the average business man's vocabulary does not comprise over 1500 words.

Our slang, according to Prof. Low, is due to our limited vocabularies and is used "to escape thinking."

The Anglo Saxons were enjoying a period of culture which was abruptly ended by a descent of the north men—Scandinavians and Danes. Largely given to piracy. They lurked about in bays and preyed on the shipping of the day, whence comes the name Viking—inhabiter of bays. The Vikings were gradually absorbed into the civilization of the country and to them, Prof. Low says, we are indebted for our industrial and commercial development, to the Anglo Saxons for our agricultural development.

Prof. Low's lecture is the introductory one in a course on history, books and men for the present year's work in the Woman's Club.

Mrs. Cornelia C. Ketcham.

Mrs. Cornelia C. Ketcham, wife of John C. Ketcham, died at her home in Glen Head, L. I., on Sunday morning. Mrs. Ketcham was a former resident of this town, having resided here from the time she was married until 1912, when she moved to Glen Head. Mrs. Ketcham was born in Plainfield and is the daughter of William H. Sampson, who resides on Prospect street.

While a resident here Mrs. Ketcham was connected with the Presbyterian church and took an active part in its work, being a member of the Dorcas Society.

Besides her husband, she leaves a father, William H. Sampson, and two brothers, Albert R., of Metuchen, and Walter M. Sampson, who lives with his father on Prospect street.

Mrs. Sampson, the mother of Mrs. Ketcham died seven months ago last Sunday.

The funeral was held on Tuesday afternoon and interment was made in the Sampson plot in Hillside cemetery, Plainfield.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S SOCIETY ELECTS OFFICERS.

The Young People's Society of the Baptist church, met at the home of their new president, Charles H. Robinson, on Harrison avenue, Tuesday night, and appointed committees for service during the coming year.

New officers elected at the business meeting are as follows—President, C. H. Robinson; vice-president, Mrs. A. E. Church; treasurer, Miss Marion Kenney; secretary, Miss Ruth Holmes. The meeting was opened with prayer by George H. Dougherty. Chairmen of committees were appointed by the president as follows—Missionary, Mrs. G. H. Dougherty; membership, Arthur Church; devotional, Miss Louise Hann; social, Miss Grace Walker; flower, Miss Marion Kenney.

The plans and suggestions of the new president were unanimously adopted.

After the business meeting refreshments were served by the hostess, Mrs. C. H. Robinson, and the meeting then adjourned.

WESTFIELDERS ATTEND STATE CONFERENCE.

Three hundred and fifty boys, representing all parts of the State of New Jersey, were at Morristown on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, attending the Conference of Older Boys which was held in the Y. M. C. A. building in that city under the direction of Charles R. Scott, Y. M. C. A. State Boys Secretary. All the sessions of the conference were interesting and instructive.

Those who attended the conference from this town were Herbert R. Welch, leader of the Boys League of the First Methodist Church; Rev. G. Franklin Ream; Rev. Percy Pemberton, of the Boys Club, Mountainside; Charles Robinson, Boys Scouts; Donald Pearsall, of the high school; and Wilbur Harkrader, Harold Townley, Vernon Mann and John McGwire.

Semi-Annual Meeting District Nursing Association.

The semi-annual meeting of the District Nursing Association will be held on Wednesday afternoon of next week at 3 o'clock in the parish house of the Presbyterian church. All those interested in the work of this most worthy association are urged to be present to learn what is being done by the ladies who comprise it and to help in any way to further the work.

SERMON ON AMUSEMENTS

Preached by G. Franklin Ream at the Methodist Church Last Sunday Evening

At the Methodist church last Sunday evening, the pastor discussed the problem of recreation and amusements and made it clear that his sympathies and interests are very markedly on the side of the young people. He defended the desire for social life and a good time as one of the divinely implanted instincts which should lead us to good rather than to evil. He opposed the narrow mindedness of those who have nothing but criticism and "dents" for the young folk.

Several principles were discussed which have proven very helpful to young people in determining what the forms of their recreation and amusement shall be. Since Sunday evening many have requested the pastor to continue the subject, and he will do so next Sunday evening, the service beginning at 7:45.

Madison Avenue Mission Chapel Entertains.

A Hallowe'en social was given Wednesday evening at the Madison Ave. Mission Chapel and was much enjoyed by all.

A musical program was the feature of the evening, followed by readings, selections and recitations.

The decorations were yellow, white and black, in true Hallowe'en style.

Those who participated in the program were Mr. Brynildsen, Mrs. Douglas Gatewood, Mr. Hans Brynildsen, Mr. Jack DeLanoy, Miss Marie DeLanoy, Miss Gladys Markert, Miss Elizabeth Arneson, Miss Eba Johnson, Russel Marwert and Douglas Gatewood.

Refreshments were served at the close of the entertainment.

The affair was largely attended, there being about 86 people present. The entertainment was in charge of Mrs. Douglas Gatewood. Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. Brynildsen.

Have Hallowe'en Party.

The Girls Friendly Society of St. Paul's church, gave a very enjoyable Hallowe'en party in the parish house on Monday night. ## POSTAL SAVINGS AIDED BY WAR IN EUROPE

The war in Europe is proving a big boon to postal savings in this country. From the very day hostilities opened across the seas postal-savings receipts began to increase by leaps and bounds and withdrawals fell off, a result quite contrary to the predictions of many well-informed persons who, in their imagination, saw lines of feverish depositors at post-office pay windows anxious to again return their savings to the boot-leg and body-belt depositories whence they came before entrusted to Uncle Sam. But the forecasters failed to reckon on the absolute confidence of the American citizen, regardless of the flag that first met his eyes, in the ability and purpose of the Government to carry out its obligations, not only among the nations of the earth, but with the humblest citizen of our land.

Two important results have followed; thousands of people, largely of foreign birth, accustomed to send their savings abroad, are now patrons of our postal-savings system; and enormous sums of actual cash have been released for commercial uses among our own people at a time when the need for every available dollar is pressing.

The growth of postal savings in the United States has been steady and healthy and the system has filled an important gap between the tin-can depository and the factory paymaster. On July 1, when affairs were running smoothly here and abroad and the transmission of money across the Atlantic was safe and expeditious, there was approximately $43,000,000 of postal savings standing to the credit of about 388,000 depositors. Since then over $10,000,000 of deposits have been added and the number of depositors has increased enormously. This unprecedented gain is the more striking when it is considered that the net gain in the last three months is larger than the gain for the entire fiscal year 1914. Scores of offices have done more postal-savings business since the war has been going on than was done by them during the previous existence of the service. The increases are confined to no special localities, but have been felt in every nook and corner of the country. New York City alone made a gain in September of more than a million, while Brooklyn showed a relatively big increase. Chicago reported a larger gain in the past three months than for the previous twelve months. More than 7,000 new accounts were opened during the period, bringing the number of depositors in that city up to over 21,000. The unexpected increase in postal-savings business has not only added greatly to the general administrative duties of the system, but has brought up many new and interesting problems which have called for the careful personal consideration of Postmaster General Burleson and Governor Dockery, Third Assistant Postmaster General. But their task has been lightened somewhat by the promptness of depository banks in furnishing additional security to meet the abnormal deposits. A number of the very largest banks in the country, which have heretofore declined to qualify as depositories for postal-savings funds, are now among the eager applicants for them.

FARMERS' WEEK AT THE NEW JERSEY STATE AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE.

Farmers' Week at the New Jersey State Agricultural College will be held December 28th to January 2nd inclusive. Besides addresses from the scientists at the New Jersey Experiment Station the program will be augmented by a number of other men prominent in agricultural circles in the State. It is the desire to make Farmers' Week this year the best that has ever been held, and to this end many interesting and instructive addresses and events have been arranged for.

The first session will be held Monday, December 28th. This will be known as Rural Life Day. Mr. Albert E. Roberts, the international secretary of the county Y. M. C. A. movement, will speak at 10:30 in the morning, and those who attend are assured of something new and interesting. Mr. D. R. Ryall, State Secretary of county Y. M. C. A. work will make this a day of conference for all persons interested in the county Y. M. C. A. movement in the State.

In the afternoon there will be addresses and conferences among pastors of country churches at which a number of pastors will be in attendance. Dr. Edwin L. Earp of the Drew Theological Seminary will speak at this session on "The Call of the Open Country for Leadership."

The rural life movement has had remarkable success in other sections of the country where it has been seriously taken up and where the residents of these sections have given it their co-operation and it is hoped that New Jersey will not be behind in this movement.

Further announcement concerning other sessions of Farmers' Week will be made from time to time, and when program has been definitely arranged, it will have publication.

EFFICIENT AIDS FOR COUNTY REGISTER

Frank H. Smith in Campaign Speeches Gives Credit to Assistants for Much of the Efficiency in His Office

The corps of clerks and assistants with which County Register Frank H. Smith has surrounded himself while in office, is coming in for a full share of credit at his hands for the record he has made.

Mr. Smith's candidacy for reelection is based on his record, and he says he realizes, through his knowledge of business, the difficulty of arousing any enthusiasm over the office, which is purely a business institution. He is attempting, however, to interest the people of the county in the elements and factors, the control of which create his record, and what he claims is the efficient and economic manner in which the office is conducted.

The most important element is the increase in business, according to the register. He said in 1905 there were recorded 8,368 papers of all descriptions. Last year the number was 14,775. This meant the making of a lot of new books of record and at present they number 1,193, aside from more than 200 index books.

Regarding this heavy business Mr. Smith recently said, "It has been the constant aim of everybody connected with the office to keep it up-to-date and to install new methods of indexing and recording from time to time, as it was thought necessary. When I first assumed the duties of register, antiquated and obsolete methods were used. The recording was done by pen and ink. This has been changed and now we have ten book typewriting machines. The loyal and enthusiastic support of all my clerks and assistants has made the efficient and economic handling of this increase of business possible. Without their help the same result would not have been accomplished."

AN OUNCE OF PREVENTION.

By Caroline H. Marsh Wike, M. D., of Plainfield, N. J.

The schools have opened and the mothers are looking forward with more or less dread to the epidemics of tonsillitis, eruptive skin diseases and numerous other ailments, which they seem to think school life is to blame for.

It is strange how little we use our reasoning powers and common sense. I am going to put a few questions in type for you to think about:

"How many mothers have investigated the tin can goods or poison candy, of which the stores are full, and of which your child is consuming large quantities every week, as to the causes of these sicknesses?"

"Why is it that the children who are not permitted to eat the meat your children are eating, who are forbidden the cheap candy, and all chemically treated foods are not having the attacks of ill health your children are subject to?"

Do not laugh and tell me such children do not exist, and that pure and wholesome foods do not exist. I know better. They are ready for you just as soon as you demand them.

The ignorance and indifference of the American housewife and her horror of being called "A Cook" has brought an awful condition of the quality of foods served in our stores and markets, and diseases have been accumulating the last fifty years, that at last some wide awake doctors and other folks have realized are due to the denatured, stale food we are consuming.

Please remember, you mothers who have nice summer gardens and you who go into the country where the family have fresh garden truck all summer, that your family shows a decided improvement in health. The reason all feel better is more than fresh air. You are giving them in the fresh fruits and vegetables, minerals which are so essential to make rich red blood, strong nerves and muscles. These fresh foods are full of the life principle.

Suppose you also fed bread made of the entire wheat, which contains the wonderful "Vitamin" Cassimer Funk has discovered, and you made candy of the real natural sugar, which North-erners know little about, but our e-nergies are full of it, and you made cake of our real sugar-cane syrup and the children ate all of the bread and syrup they wanted.

Cost aside the chemically treated, cold storage meats our tables are loaded with and the cost of living will decrease fast and you will not spend days and nights attending to stomachaches and other ills.

Holy Grail Elects Merline.

A meeting of the Prince's Degree of the Holy Grail Society of the Presbyterian church was held in the parish house on Saturday night and was presided over by Grand Merline Orlot C. A. Springstead. Plans for the coming winter were discussed.

Charles Warfield was elected Merline of the Knights Degree; Robert S. Glass, Merline of the Squire's Degree and W. L. Bunnell, Merline of the Page's Degree. The Grand Conclave will be held in the parish house on November 14.

MASS MEETINGS BY REPUBLICANS

Candidates for Election Set Forth Issues of Campaign Before Two Audiences

The Republicans held two big mass meetings in town last Saturday night. Both of them were addressed by the Congressional and county candidates. One of the meetings was held in the assembly hall of the Westfield Theatre and was presided over by Assessor C. H. Denman. The other was held in the town hall. It was for colored Republicans and was presided over by Rev. P. W. Ross.

Mr. Denman after calling the meeting to order stated its objects and then introduced John H. Capstick, candidate for Congress from this district. Mr. Capstick spoke on the tariff and declared that it must be revised in order to correct the present evils and bring back good times. He said that if he were selected to go to Washington, he would be one of the first to tell President Wilson the real reason for the hard times.

The next speaker was George C. Otto, who is a candidate for sheriff. Mr. Otto told the voters that if he is elected he would fill the office to the best of his ability and give everyone a square deal. Mr. Otto was followed by Charles Morgan, of Elizabeth, who is a candidate for the assembly. Mr. Morgan urged the voters to support the Republican ticket and said that if he was elected a member of the house, he would try to do his duty by everyone.

The next speaker was our own townsman, Arthur N. Pierson, who is a candidate for the assembly. In introducing Mr. Pierson, Mr. Denman said, "He is a man who has done something for Westfield. We know no wrong of him, we know the good he has already accomplished and we ask his support for what he has done and what he is doing to keep Westfield the proudest town in the county."

Mr. Pierson was given quite a reception by those present. He referred to the leading issues of the campaign, which he said were economy and efficiency, and that if he is sent to Trenton to represent the county in the assembly he will at all times look out for the preservation of the school funds.

Following Mr. Pierson, Senator Pierce, who is a candidate for reelection, spoke on the taxing of the railroads and banks and said that he would like to be returned to the senate to perfect these bills which he had been instrumental in getting on the statute books.

William N. Runyon, a candidate for the assembly, was the last speaker. Mr. Runyon made a strong appeal to the voters to support the Republican ticket from top to bottom.

Although the meeting was not as well attended as was expected those present showed considerable enthusiasm and frequently applauded the speakers.

The meeting at the town hall was attended by a large number of the colored voters of the town. The same speakers who spoke in the Westfield Theatre hall spoke here also and all dwelt on the issues of the campaign and urged their hearers to support the Republican ticket at the election next Tuesday.

Chinese Serial Drama.

Serial drama has been popular in China for centuries. Their most famous play, "Pi-Pa-Ki—The Story of the Lute," written in the fourteenth century, is divided into twenty-four sections and innumerable acts and scenes, and takes several days to perform. And Chinese plays of forty long acts, lasting a week or two, are quite common. In England the longest play ever written, but not performed, was an unnamed drama, in twenty-five acts, by "Mad Nat Lee."

MOTHERS OF DELICATE CHILDREN

Should Read the Following Letter—Mrs. Slack's Story About Her Child's Recovery Is Entirely Reliable.

Palmyra, Pa.—"Three years ago my little girl had black measles which left her with a chronic cough and so awfully thin you could count all her ribs, and she coughed so much she had no appetite."

"Nothing we gave her seemed to help her at all until one day Mrs. Neilbert told me how much good Vinol had done her little girl, so I decided to try it for my little one, and it has done her so much good she is hungry all the time, her cough is gone, she is stouter and more healthy in color and this is the first winter she has been able to play out in the snow, coasting and snow-balling without any ill effects."—Mrs. ALFRED SLACK, Palmyra, Pa.

We know Vinol will build up your little ones and make them healthy, strong and robust, therefore we ask parents of every frail and sickly child in this vicinity to try a bottle of Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic without oil.

If we can induce you to try a bottle of Vinol as a body-builder and strength-creator for your child, and you do not find it is all we claim, we will return your money on demand.

HARVEST HOME SOCIAL AT BAPTIST CHURCH

A Harvest Home Social was held in the First Baptist church last Friday evening under the auspices of the Ladies' Missionary and Young Peoples Societies. Games, antics, vocal and piano selections were the features of the evening.

The surprise of the evening was the comic orchestra which took the place of the Sunday School orchestra. The orchestra comprised Mrs. G. H. Dougherty, soprano solo; Miss Mary Coles, bass solo; and Mrs. G. W. Baker, accordion. The performance of this orchestra caused much merriment and applause.

Others who added to the entertainment were Miss Esther Lightfoot, piano selections; Miss Wichern, vocal solo; J. Derrick, piano selection; Miss L. F. Hartshorn, vocal solo; the Misses Grace and Gladys Walker, piano duet; Miss Beatrice Hoffman, recitation; the Misses Sallo and Margaret Kissam, piano duet; Miss Dodd, recitation; Mrs. Martin, vocal selections; L. G. Yenn, an address; David MacDougall, vocal solo; Rev. Charles T. Snow, vocal and piano selections. A number of silhouettes which adorned the wall of the church caused great merriment as they were of well known members of the church created by the church artist, Mr. Powers. Another unique feature was a huge pumpkin which was sitting on a table in the centre of the room, prettily surrounded by chrysanthemums. At the end of the evening's entertainment it was heavy with a good will offering which was divided among the two societies. Refreshments, consisting of home-made crullers, coffee, sponge cake and apples were served.

The committees in charge were as follows:—To represent the Young Peoples Society—Mrs. G. H. Dougherty, Miss Grace Walker, Mrs. A. Church, Mrs. G. W. Baker; the Missionary Society—Mrs. David MacDougall, Mrs. N. W. Crickenberger, Mrs. Perkins, Mrs. William Bogert, Mrs. A. Hunt and Mrs. G. W. Baker.

Has Small Fire.

The fire department was called out to a small fire in the cellar of the home of Theodore Knight on Elizabeth avenue Sunday afternoon. The fire was caused by a cold air box of a furnace in which there had been a fire started. As a result the cold air box set fire to some straw and rags which were near by.

When the firemen arrived the blaze had been put out by the use of a garden hose. The damage amounted to about $20. In taking the hook and ladder truck out of the fire house the driver of the truck turned too short and broke out the glass in the doors of the fire house.

EPWORTH LEAGUE HOLDS CONVENTION

Four Hundred Delegates Met in Local Church. Officers Elected for Ensuing Year. Stirring Address by Dr. Caldwell of Foochow, China

A convention of Epworth Leaguers from the Methodist Episcopal churches in the Elizabeth District was held last Friday in the First M. E. Church, of this town. It was the twenty-fourth annual meeting of the Elizabeth District Epworth League and was one of the most successful ever held by that body.

Over four hundred delegates were present from Staten Island, Perth Amboy, Elizabeth, Roselle Park, Flanders, Flemington, Dunellen, Germantown, Plainfield, Somerville, Bound Brook, and other towns of the district and these returned to their homes filled with renewed zeal and enthusiasm for the coming year's work.

At 9 A. M., the convention was opened with a devotional service by the Rev. Frederick J. Hubach, D. D., District Superintendent of the Methodist church, after which the Rev. G. Franklin Ream, Pastor of the local church in a few well chosen words welcomed the delegates to Westfield in behalf of the church and local chapter. The District President, Mr. Harry P. Porter, of Bound Brook, responded after which Mr. Carl F. Price, of New York City, held an Open Parliament or exchange on the Fourth Dept.

Mrs. Wm. H. Orr sang a solo and was followed by the Rev. Harry Y. Murkland, of Newark, who gave some intensely interesting suggestions for the operation of the Department of Social Service.

After the singing of a solo by Mrs. L. M. Pearson the delegates held a brief business session and elected the officers for the coming year. They are as follows:—President, Harry P. Porter, Bound Brook; Vice-President, Albert F. Hoffman, Somerville; Corresponding Secretary, Warren W. Rogers, Elizabeth; Recording Secretary, Harry M. Gilmore, Plainfield; Treasurer, Edmund N. Howell, Roselle Park; Supt. of World Evangelism, Miss M. Elizabeth Bagg, Somerville. These officers all served the district during the last year. It was left to these officers to fill the office of Junior League Superintendent, for which there was no nomination.

After luncheon three departmental conferences were held. The Rev. F. J. Hubach, D. D., spoke on Junior League Work; the Rev. Geo. F. Sutherland on the Dept. of Missionary Education and the Rev. Arthur Bruce Moss, of New York, on the Spiritual Work.

A trio by Mrs. S. D. French and Misses Dorothy E. and Helen M. French was also greatly enjoyed by the delegates. Mr. A. C. Monagle, President of the Second General Conference District, Epworth League was present and made a glowing report on the Institute held at Madison, last July.

The work of the day was appropriately crowned in the evening by the service of prayer and praise, led by the District Vice-President, Mr. Warren W. Rogers. This meeting was remarkable for its spontaneous outbursts of praise and personal testimony. It was followed by a most stirring address by the Rev. Ernest B. Caldwell, D. D., of Foochow, China, who held the delegates spellbound for one hour and a half with his eloquent descriptions of his experiences in China. Train schedules were forgotten as he weaved his audience from laughter to tears by his wonderful recitations of his call to China by the Master, his struggle with the language, his narrow escapes from death during the Boxer Uprising, and the conversion of seven hundred at one meeting. The delegates broke into applause when he described the overthrow of the opium traffic in China and urged the Christian men of America to likewise arise and stamp out the liquor traffic.

His appeal for young people to consecrate their lives to the Master, was responded to by a young woman of this town.

Seemed Like a Reflection.

A certain vicar had for his curate a tall, cadaverous-looking individual. One Sunday, according to custom, the vicar made an appeal for the Curate's Stipend fund, but, unfortunately, glanced at his co-worker as he concluded with these words: "The collection will now be taken for that object"—

FAMOUS SONGS OF MANY LANDS

Will Be The Subject of Free Lecture Course at Washington School Tomorrow Night

A musical-lecture-recital will be the attraction at the assembly room of the Washington school tomorrow night. It is given under the direction of the Board of Education by Lewis William Armstrong, barytone and lecturer, of New York, who will sing the famous songs of many lands and in addition to singing them will make a few pertinent remarks of an explanatory and critical nature which will bring out their educational value, from an historical and musical standpoint. This will add to the general interest of the entertainment. The lecture promises to be an exceptionally interesting one and without doubt there will be a large audience present.

The song program follows:

Edward Avis on Birds.

The lecture given in the Washington school assembly hall last Saturday night by Edward Avis was attended by an audience which filled the hall. The lecture was on "Birds" and consisted of a recital, including imitations of the songs of the various birds.

Mr. Avis, who is noted for his wonderful ability to imitate the calls and notes of the birds, lived up to his reputation and gave a most interesting lecture. His imitation of the birds was excellent and was highly appreciated by those present. The lecture was illustrated with many beautiful stereopticon views.

Ideals of Youth.

It is the ideals of youth that determine the course of mankind. Given the ideals which the young men of a country cherish, and the history of that country for the next thirty years, until a new generation of young men with new ideals arises, can be fairly correctly foreseen.

Provide a Telephone for Their Protection

WHEN you leave home on a business trip, wouldn't it be a comfort to know there's a telephone at home for the protection of your family?

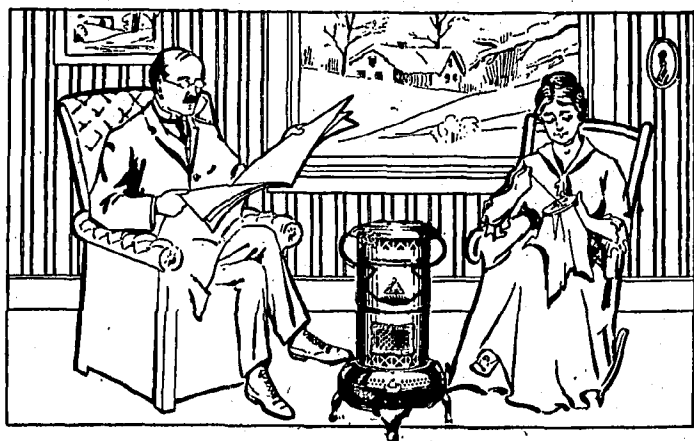

A telephone means security for the home during your absence. It helps dispel dull moments by making possible pleasant little chats with friends or neighbors.

It allows you, too, to keep in touch with your home, from almost any place.

Why not have the ALL-THE-TIME PROTECTION of a telephone in your home?

Woman Suffrage

Pro and Con

Largest State Convention
of Women.
The largest and most widely representative body of women which has ever met in this State will gather in Camden for the Twenty-fourth Annual Convention of the New Jersey Woman Suffrage Association on November 6th and 7th. Every County, every City and most of the large towns in the State will be represented. It has never before been feasible to hold a suffrage convention south of Trenton, because of the small number of organized suffragists in South Jersey; but today the State Association has branches from "the rolling hills of Sussex to the sands of fair Cape
May," to quote Senator Martine.
Through the courtesy of the Mayor of Camden the business session of the Convention will be held in the City Hall, and Mayor Ellis will speak at the evening mass meeting, together with Miss Fola LaFollette, several prominent Camden County politicians and the State President, Mrs. Edward

F. Feickert, of Plainfield. Other prominent speakers at the convention will be Miss Maud Gorman Basset of Swarthmore College, Vice-President of the Pennsylvania Suffrage Association, Miss Alice Paul, Chairman of the National Congressional Union of Washington, and Mrs. Philip McKim
Garrison, of Orange, Chairman of the Joint Legislative Committee of New Jersey.
There will be a number of special exhibits at the Convention showing suffrage editions of Jersey papers, favorable cartoons and editorials which have appeared throughout the

Local Candidates.

In the excitement of the national, state and county campaign, the candidates for Mayor and Councilmen have almost been lost sight of. We believe, however, the people of Westfield will not neglect the very important duty to choose wisely and well those who shall conduct the affairs of our town in the future. Westfield enjoys the reputation of being the best governed town in New Jersey, and we want to continue in this most enviable position before the people of our State. Progressive policies, economic administration and honest service are slogans of the Republican candidates for Mayor and Councilmen.

Mr. Evans, for Mayor, Mr. Davis for Councilman from the Third Ward and Mr. Perry from the First Ward, are true and tried servants. Their record of efficiency and service cannot fail to recommend them for re-election.

Mr. Ganzel in the Second and Mr. Brown in the Fourth Ward, are both new men in the race, but each possesses ability and courage, and would serve their ward and the people of Westfield in a credible manner.

We bespeak for them the favorable consideration of the voters of their respective wards.

National and State Candidates.

In the closing hours of the campaign, we feel that there is little that can be added to the volumes that already have been written and spoken regarding the national and state candidates and their platforms and policies.

The vote for Congressman will be divided on the tariff issue, Mr. Tuttle standing for the present tariff and administration—Mr. Capstick, his opponent, on a protective tariff platform.

Mr. Pierce, the Republican Candidate for State Senator, stands boldly upon his record on railroad and bank tax legislation as the taxpayers' friend. His opponent, Mr. Stewart, stands as a Fielder candidate, promising to uphold the policies of our Governor if elected.

The three Republican Assembly Candidates stand together as championing the cause of preserving the integrity of our school moneys, and are pledged to the policies of efficiency and economy in state affairs, which the Democratic Party so singularly failed in carrying out since they have been in control of affairs at Trenton.

Mr. James C. Calvert, for County Clerk, Mr. Frank H. Smith, for Register, and Mr. George C. Otto, for Sheriff, all on the Republican ticket, are men of great strength and marked ability for the several offices. We are sure the several opponents on the Democratic ticket have little ability and no experience to justify their claims to the support of the people of Union County.

The Referendum.

The referendum which is so excellent in principle, has never proved satisfactory in practice in any portion of our country, and New Jersey is no exception to this rule. Possibly because the acts upon which we are asked to vote are described on our ballot simply by the title, which in so many cases has failed to explain the real uses and purposes of the law and in not a few cases is misleading.

The case in point is the referendum at the lower high-hand corner of our ballot for the coming election. The real scope and purpose of this referendum is for the voters of Union County to determine whether or not they wish the classified offices in our county to be under the regulation and tenure of the Civil Service Laws of our State. We believe this is a step in the right direction, and consequently recommend most strongly a favorable vote for same, as it puts a premium upon faithful and competent service and takes the offices away from the political spoils system, which is not and never has been a satisfactory practice.

It is unfortunate that Mayor Evans has been criticised and his motives impugned because he has appointed a committee to provide aid for needy citizens this winter if there should be such as to need this assistance. The character of the men who urged the appointment of this committee and the caliber of the men appointed is ample evidence that these citizens would not lend themselves to political chicanery.

It is to be regretted that people who have a well meaning purpose should not be encouraged instead of having ulterior motives charged up against them. There is so little of the "milk of human kindness" evidenced in this practical day that it ought not to be discouraged when it is attempted.

Prince Bismarck's tribute to the Republican Protective Tariff policy—

"The success of the United States in material development is the most illustrious of modern times. It is my deliberate judgment that the prosperity of America is due mainly to her system of protective laws."

PEARSALL DEFENDS MAYOR'S ACTION

In Appointing Committee for Aid of Poor Upon Request of Citizens. No Politics Involved.

To the Editor of The Standard: Westfield, N. J.

Dear Mr. Editor:

The second editorial in the latest issue of the Leader, criticizes Mayor Evans for appointing a committee of citizens to deal with abnormal distress this winter. Such a committee, the Leader states, should occur. The Leader states in part, "The Mayor has undoubtedly been misled by ambitious politicians who are anxious to create the impression that poverty is stalking through the community and the party in power has ruined the entire country."

Now, the facts in the matter are just these: At the September meeting of the Official Board of the Methodist Church, anticipating possible distress in Westfield this coming winter, a motion was unanimously adopted creating a Relief Committee with W. A. Bishop as Chairman. The motion authorized this committee to raise funds in any proper manner and disburse them as might be deemed necessary without further action by the Board. This committee at once formulated extensive plans calculated to afford prompt relief on a liberal scale and had the backing of many of Westfield's most conservative citizens, irrespective of politics and religious creeds.

The Official Board motion contained a clause providing for the securing of the Mayor (whether he might be Mr. Evans or some one else) and other town officials, if possible, to serve in an advisory relation on this committee. When Mr. Bishop approached Mayor Evans on the subject His Honor agreed and suggested it should be under the direct control of citizens, chosen from at large in the town, rather than from any one church organization. His tentative plans demonstrated his grasp of the situation and it was at once recognized by the Methodists that a citizens committee of the Mayor's creation was best suited to handle the matter.

I believe I can truthfully state that Mayor Evans will receive in his relief program the hearty support and backing of all who had so willingly created the Official Board committee. I have known Mayor Evans from boyhood and while I do not always agree with him, I have never yet had reason to question his motives. I believe he has averaged better as Mayor of Westfield than any of his predecessors and that within a few months we shall have reason to appreciate his appointment of a Relief Committee.

I am not given to political statements and my purpose in thus writing you is only to give the facts before election day in fairness to the Mayor. It is my personal opinion that the European war, and not American politics, has so upset business that many persons will be in distress this winter. I believe Westfield, directly or indirectly, will be called upon to give her share of relief. Thankful we shall be if our Relief Committee finds nothing to do. Surely the mere appointing of such a committee can have done no harm. Let us all pray that Mayor Evans' anticipation of human suffering in our community will not be confirmed by realization.

The "ambitious politicians" the Leader speaks of are unknown to me unless they be the members of the Methodist Official Board. I feel honored by membership in that Board and I know whereof I write when I state that if ever there was a conglomeration of political convictions it is in that very Board. I am certain no party politics measure could be unanimously adopted by that Board—yet the Relief Committee motion had the earnest affirmative vote of that body of Westfield citizens. I fear the Leader had election day more in mind than the possible needs of our town this winter when the editorial alluded to was written. I would have preferred making my statement in the paper in which the editorial appeared but the Leader's next issue will be after election day with the Mayor meanwhile unjustly criticised.

Yours very truly,

Gentlemen:

I recently made an accident claim on the Royal Indemnity Co. under my "Royal Maximum Disability Policy," issued through your office. Two days later I received the Company's draft for the full amount.

The average policy holder judges a Company principally by some personal experience of this kind: I think the handling of my claim does the Royal credit.

I have found out also that it pays to insure before an accident.

Yours very truly,

Arthur D. Tuttle.

The large attendance at the first of these entertainments showed the interest of the women of Westfield in this good work and encouraged the B. of M. to think that enough money may be raised in this way to pay the nurse's salary for the winter or until the association is on a firmer financial footing.

FOOTBALL ELEVEN REINSTATED.

The Westfield High School football eleven which was disqualified by the Health Committee of the Board of Education because the eleven violated the instructions and rules of the committee has been re-instated and are now allowed to play again under the name of the Westfield High school. This came about through a petition which was presented to the Health Committee by the members of the team at a meeting of the committee last Saturday night.

The members of the team agreed to do certain things if they were re-instated and acknowledged that they had violated the rules. As the members of the team showed a commendable spirit the Health Committee reconsidered their previous decision and as a result the team will play under the name of the High school and will exercise greater care in the future regarding the violation of the rules.

Flowers in the Alps.

If the snow happens to be very deep in the Alps it is not at all uncommon to find plants which open their flowers before the surface is reached. Thus the flowers blossom in a small cavity of frozen snow. This flowering is not limited to the opening of the petals alone, for in not a few cases the stamens will actually bring their pollen to perfection. All this goes on although the soldanelias have not felt the sun.

Limitations of the Human Eye.

The greatest astronomers, like Sir William Herschel, have made their most valuable discoveries by comparatively low-power telescopes. The eye of man, unless some new laws of optics are discovered, will never be able to see any small object on the moon, no matter how powerful our telescopes are made. We may see mountains and orators—that is about all.

Influence of Moral Good.

Moral good is a practical stimulus; it is no sooner seen than it inspires a desire to practice.—Plutarch.

Westfield—14 Dover—6.

Last Saturday the Westfield High School players, who were at the time awaiting reinstatement by the Board of Education, went to Dover to play the Dover High School team, under the name of Westfield. The local eleven came home from the game victorious by the score of 14—6.

The game was hard played throughout, Westfield putting up the scrappiest game they have played this season. The line showed more promise in this game than in any previous game, while the backfield put more ginger in their rushing. Forward passes were much more successful than they have been previously.

The first score came almost at the end of the first quarter when Randall broke through the line for ten yards. Gilmartin kicked the goal. This score came after Westfield had received the kick, rushed the ball to Dover's one yard line, been held for downs, and forced Dover to kick.

There were no more scores until the last period when Dover sprang a forward pass, while the Westfield team was arguing with the referee. The touchdown was made at the side of the field and, although there was a perfect kick-out, Lynch failed to kick the goal. Westfield scored on the last play, Randall carrying the ball for fifty yards through a broken field. Gilmartin kicked the goal.

The lineup:

WESTFIELD	DOVER H. S.
Elliott	Church
Martin-Trimble	Johnson
Bourne	Right Guard
Marengi	Right Tackle
Bush-Brower	Blanchard
Miller-Bush	Buckley
Randall	Quarter Back
Cruttenden-Miller	Lynch
	Right Half Back
	Jennings
	Full Back

Referee—Wilder (Harvard); Umpire—Beard (Dickerson). Periods 8 min. Touchdowns—Randall (2), Lynch 1. Goals—Gilmartin (2).

SCHOOL NOTES.

Additional books have been added to the school library consisting of volumes on ancient history, national history, American history, and an encyclopedia of political parties, men and events. Several books from the State Library at Trenton are to be added and some congressional records.

Public speaking at the Washington school has been in progress during the past two weeks under the direction of Miss Dodd and Miss Tatal. The speaking takes place every Friday during the assembly period. The speakers are on the poets. Today is being devoted to original productions by other than the Freshmen students but will be given by them.

On Monday night the teachers of the high school and the instruction committee of the Board of Education met the teachers of the seventh and eighth grades of the Washington school and discussed the work of their grades. On Monday of next week the teachers and instruction committee will meet the teachers of the fifth and sixth grades and will continue down the line of grades until Christmas.

The vocational committee of the Board of Education will hold a meeting in the Washington school tonight to hear several topics discussed by prominent local men. After the meeting the members of the domestic science class will serve refreshments.

Miss Edmond, of the Cranford schools, with two of her teachers, and Principal Deyo, of the Roselle Park school, were visitors at the Washington school this week.

Donald Pearsall represented the high school at the Older Boys Conference held at Morristown last week.

Miss Robinson, teacher of Latin, is having a Latin play rehearsed by her pupils which she will give some time this winter as a part of her work.

Some Lower Than Cannibals.

A prisoner before Mr. Hedderwick at the North London (Eng.) police court protested that he had not bitten the prosecutor's ear. He said he was not a cannibal. Mr. Hedderwick—"Cannibals are condemned by people who have little knowledge of their ways. They eat other people in order to acquire their virtues. I think that cannibals are a noble race of men compared with so-called civilized people who resort to backbiting."

BUSY SUNDAY SESSION

Recorder Springstead had a busy session in the police court Sunday morning when he disposed of three cases which came before him. The first one was that of William Perrine, who was arrested for being drunk. Perrine, who is an old offender, was sent to the county jail for sixty days. The Recorder told Perrine that if he ever came before him again he would have him sent to some institution, where he would be taken care of.

Lewis Vella was the next victim. Vella was charged with trying to break up a meeting of the Socialists which was being held at the corner of Broad and Elm streets on Saturday night. Several witnesses testified that Vella was acting in a disorderly manner. He was given the choice of paying a $10 fine or going to the county jail for ten days. He chose the former.

Charles Lance was the last one to come before the Recorder. Lance was charged with disorderly conduct and resisting an officer. After hearing both sides of the case the Recorder gave Lance the choice of paying a $20 fine or spending thirty days in the county jail. Lance paid the fine. All three of the men were arrested by Lieutenant Caulfield.

Small Crowd Hears Democratic Candidates.

The county candidates of the Democratic party paid a visit to this town on Monday night for the purpose of holding a mass meeting at the corner of Broad and Elm streets. Whether their coming had been advertised or not something was wrong, for when the candidates arrived in their automobiles the crowd was missing. After waiting a little while some of the members of the party began to whoop it up for Wilson and Fielder and soon had a few men gathered to address.

The candidates who spoke to the corporal's guard were Percy A. Stewart, Mayor of Plainfield and candidate for State Senator; assembly candidates Callahan and Dobbins and county clerk candidate William A. Leonard. All the candidates urged those who heard them to uphold the policies of President Wilson and Governor Fielder by voting the Democratic ticket and sending back to Congress and the State Legislature men who would be in accord with the work of both the President and the Governor.

Burning Mattress Calls Out Fire Department.

A burning mattress at the home of Frank Mack on West Broad street, called out the fire department on Tuesday morning. The mattress had been dragged out of the house before the firemen arrived and there was no need for their services.

It is thought that one of the men in the house had lain down on the mattress while smoking a cigarette and that a spark from it set the mattress on fire. Aside from burning the mattress and filling the house with smoke no damage was done.

Humorous Childish Errors.

The literary mistakes of children are perennial and perennially amusing in character. A public school teacher who recently has compiled a book of "first aid" information in behalf of her pupils says, for example, that the allusion "Dan to Beersheba" brought forth the amazing misinformation that Dan was a man who was confined in a lion's den for mistreating his wife, Beersheba, and that another eager if inaccurate student described Canaan as the mother of Cain.

MISS ALICE HANFORD TO WED TOMORROW

MISS JOHNSON BECOMES AN OCTOBER BRIDE.

The wedding of Miss Margery Foster Johnson, daughter of Mrs. Wilfred Johnson, of 224 Ross place, and Charles E. Cummings, took place in the Congregational church on Saturday night, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Dr. S. L. Loomis, the pastor of the church. The bride wore a gown of white satin trimmed with old family lace and wore a veil caught up with orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley. The bridesmaid wore a white chiffon gown and carried a bouquet of pink roses and jasmine.

The church was prettily decorated with palms and white chrysanthemums and the house with pink snap dragons and white chrysanthemums. Late in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Cummings left for a wedding trip and upon their return will reside at 224 Ross Place.

Hensel—Ditzel.

Hensel, son of William Hensel, of the Boulevard. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Percy Pemberton, pastor of the Branch Mills and Mountain-side chapels. The bridesmaid was Miss Frances Hensel, a sister of the groom. The best man was Charles Ditzel, a brother of the bride.

Miss Gertrude B. O'Brien, daughter of John O'Brien, of South Walnut street, and Benjamin A. Polhemus, were quietly married on Monday afternoon at the residence of Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, pastor of the First Methodist church, Plainfield. The attendants were Mr. and Mrs. Russell I. Hoff, the latter a sister of the bride, and John O'Brien, the father of the bride.

After a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Polhemus will reside in this town.

Tendered Farewell Party.

A number of the friends of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Clements tendered them a farewell surprise party at their home on Rahway avenue on Monday night. Mr. and Mrs. Clements moved to Brooklyn on Wednesday, where they will make their home. Mr. and Mrs. Clements were in the midst of packing their furniture, but when their friends arrived the packing ceased.

The evening was pleasantly passed with games, vocal and instrumental music, after which refreshments were served. At a late hour the company separated for their homes after singing "God Be With You Until We Meet Again" and wishing the host and hostess God speed and good luck in their new home.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Stranded.

Mr. Thomas Barcus picked himself up from the bottom of the lifeboat, where he had been violently precipitated by the impact of grounding, blinked and wiped tears of pain from his eyes, solicitously tested his nose and seemed to derive little if any comfort from the discovery that it was not broken, opened his mouth . . . and remembered the presence of a lady.

"Poor Mr. Barcus!" she said gently. "I'm so sorry. Do forget I'm here—and say it out loud!"

Mr. Barcus dropped his hands and dropped his head at the same time. "It can't be did," he complained in embittered resignation; "the words have never been invented . . ."

In the bows Mr. Law (who had barely saved himself a headlong plunge overboard when the boat took fast hold of the keel) felt tenderly of his excoriated shins, then, rising, compassed the sea, sky and shore with an anxious gaze.

In the offing there was nothing but the flat, limitless expanse of the night-bound tide, near at hand vaguely silvered with the moonlight, in the distances blending into shadows; never a light or shadow, stealing sail in that quarter to indicate pursuit.

"Where are we?" he wondered aloud. "Ask me an easy one," Barcus replied; "somewhere on the south shore of the cape—unless somebody's been tampering with the lay of this land. That's a lighthouse over yonder."

Alan took soundings from the bows. "Barely two feet," he announced, withdrawing the oar from the water, "and eel-grass no end."

"Oh!" Barcus ejaculated with the accent of enlightenment; and leaving the motor, turned to the stern, over which he draped himself in highly undecorative fashion while groping under water for the propeller.

"That's the answer," he repeated; "there's a young bale of the said eel-grass wrapped round the wheel. Which, I suppose, means I've got to go overboard and clear it away."

Like Mr. Law, he wore neither shoes nor other garments that could be more damaged by salt water than they had been—but only shirt, trousers and a belt.

"If you've nothing better to do, my critical friend," he observed as he stooped to hack and tear at the mass of weed embarrassing the propeller, "you might step out and give us a trial shove. Don't strain yourself—just see if you can move her."

The boat budged not an inch—but Mr. Law's feet did, slipping on the treacherous mud bottom with the upshot of his downfall; with a mighty splash he disappeared momentarily beneath the surface—and left his temper behind him when he emerged.

As for Mr. Barcus, he suffered like loss within five minutes, when, with much pains and patience having freed the wheel, he climbed aboard and sought to restart the motor. After a few affecting coughs it relapsed into stubborn silence.

Stolid examination at length brought out the fact that the gasoline tank was empty.

"Not so much as a smell left," Barcus reported.

Dug Into His Money Belt.

"It's no use," he conceded at length. "We're here for keeps."

"Why not wade ashore?" Rose Trine suggested mildly from the place she had taken in the stern in order to lighten the bows. "It isn't far—and what's one more wetting?"

"That's the only sensible remark that's been uttered by any party to this lunatic enterprise since you hove within earshot of me, Mr. Law," said Mr. Barcus. "Respectfully submitted."

"The verdict of the lower court stands approved," Alan responded gravely.

"But there's no sense in Miss Trine wading," Barcus suggested. "We're web-footed as it is, and she's too tired."

"Well, what then?"

"We can carry her, can't we?"

CHAPTER XIX.

"Geel!" he grunted frankly, when after a foilsome progress from the boat, Rose at length slipped from the seat formed by the clasped hands of the two men. "And it was me who suggested this!"

The girl responded with a quiet laugh of the most natural effect imaginable—until it ended in a sigh, and without the least warning she crumpled upon herself, and would have fallen heavily, in a dead faint, but for Alan's quickness.

"Good Lord!" Barcus exclaimed, as Alan gently lowered the inert body of the girl to the sands. "And to think I didn't understand she was so nearly all in—chaffing her like that! I'd like to kick myself!"

"Don't be impatient," Alan advised grimly; "I'm busy just at present, but meantime, you might fetch some water to revive her."

It was an order by no means easy to fill; Barcus had only his cupped hands for a vessel, and little water remained in them by the time he had dashed from the shallows back to the spot where Rose lay unconscious, while the few drops he did manage to sprinkle into her face availed nothing toward rousing her from the trance-like slumbers of exhaustion into which she passed from her fainting fit.

In the end Alan gave up the effort. "She's all right," he reported, releasing the wrist whose pulse he had been timing. "She fainted, right enough, but now she's just asleep—and needs it, God knows! It would be kinder to let her rest, at least until I see what sort of a reception that lighthouse is inclined to offer us."

"You'll go, then?" Barcus inquired. "I'd just as lief, myself."

"No; let me," Alan insisted. "It's not far—not more than a quarter of a mile. And she'll be safe enough here, in your care, the little time I'm gone." Barcus nodded. His face was drawn and gray in the moon-glare. "Thank God!" he breathed brokenly, "you're able. I'm not."

He sat down suddenly and rested his head on his knees. "Don't be longer than you can help," he muttered thickly.

He had come to the headland of the lighthouse itself before the ground began to shelve more gently to the beach; and was on the point of addressing himself to the dark and silent cottage of the lightkeeper when he paused, struck by sight of what till then had been hidden from him.

The promontory, he found, formed the eastern extremity of a wide-armed if shallow harbor where rode at moorings a considerable number of small craft—pleasure vessels assorted about equally with fishing boats. And barely an eighth of a mile on, long-legged wharves stood knee-deep in the water, like tentacles flung out from the sleepy little fishing village that dotted the rising ground—a community of perhaps two hundred dwellings.

Nor was this all—even as Alan hove in view of the village he heard a series of staccato snorts, the harsh tolling of a brazen bell, the rumble of a train pulling out from a station. And then he saw its jewel-string of lights flash athwart the landscape and vanish as its noise died away dimly.

Where one train ran another must. He need only now secure something to revive Rose, help her somehow up the beach, and in another hour or two, of a certainty, they would be speeding northward, up the cape, toward Boston and the land of law and order.

Such thoughts as these, at least, made up the texture of his hopes; the outcome proved them somewhat too presumptuous. He jogged down a quiet village street and into the railroad station just as the agent was closing up for the night.

A surly citizen, this agent, ill-pleased to have his plans disordered by chance-flying strangers. He greeted Alan's breathless query with a grunt of ingrained churlishness.

"Nah," he averred, "they ain't no more trains till mornin'. Can't y' see I'm shuttin' up?"

"But surely there must be a telegraph station—"

"You bet your life they is—right here in this depot. An' I'm shuttin' it up, too."

"Has the operator gone for the night?"

"He's going. I'm the op'rator. No business transacted after office hours. Call around at eight o'clock tomorrow mornin'. Now if you'll jest step out of that door, I'll say g'd-night to you."

"But I must send a telegram," Alan protested. "I tell you, I must. It's a matter of life and death."

"Sure, young feller. It always is—after business hours."

"Won't you open up again—"

"I tell you, no!"

In desperation Alan rammed a hand into his trousers pocket. "Will a dollar influence your better judgment?" he suggested shrewdly.

"Let's see your dollar," the other returned with no less craft—open incredulity informing his countenance. And, surely enough, Alan brought forth an empty hand.

"Make a light," he said sharply. "My money's in a belt round my waist. Open your office. You'll get your dollar, all right."

"All right," he grumbled, reopening the door of the telegraph booth and making a second light inside. "There's blanks and a pencil. Write your message. It ain't often I do this—but I'll make an exception for you."

Alan delayed long enough only to make a few inquiries, drawing out the information that, for one who had not patience to wait the morning train northbound, the quickest way to any city of importance was by boat across Buzzard's bay to New Bedford.

Bonus, it was implied, were plentiful, readily to be chartered.

A time-table supplied all other needful advice. Alan wrote his message swiftly.

Addressed to Digby, his man of business in New York, it required that gentleman to arrange for a motor-car to be held in waiting on the waterfront of New Bedford from 8:00 a. m. until called for in the name of Mr. Law, as well as for a special train at Providence, on similar provisions.

But now, though he was all unconscious of the fact, he went no more alone.

His shadow in the moonlight kept him company upon the sands; and above, on the edge of the bluffs, another shadow moved on parallel course and at a pace sedulously patterned after his.

He found his sweetheart and his friend much as he had left them, with this difference—that Mr. Barcus now lay flat on his back and snoring lustily.

He was awakened quickly enough, however, by Alan's news.

But when it was the turn of Rose—they faltered. She lay so still, betrayed her exhaustion so patently in every line of her unconscious posture, as well as in the sharp pallor of her face upturned to the moon, that it seemed scarcely less than downright inhumanity to disturb her.

None the less, it had to be done. Alan hardened his heart with the reminder of their urgent necessity, and eventually brought her to with the aid of a few drops of brandy.

Between them, they helped her up the beach, past the point, and at length to the door of the hotel, where—reanimated by the mere promise of food—Rose disengaged their arms and entered without more assistance; while Barcus was deterred from treading her heels in his own famished eagerness, by the hand of Alan falling heavily upon his arm.

"Wait!" the latter admonished in a half-whisper. "Look there!"

Barcus followed the direction of his gesture—and was transfixed by the sight of a rocket spearing into the night-draped sky from a point invisible beyond the headland of the lighthouse.

The two consulted one another with startled and fearful eyes.

As with one voice they murmured one word: "Judith!" To this Alan added gravely: "Or some spy of hers!"

Then rousing, Alan released his friend, with a smart shove urging him across the threshold of the hotel.

"Go on," he insisted, "join Rose and get your supper. I'll be with you as soon as I can arrange for a boat. Tell her nothing more than that—that I thought it unwise to wait until everybody was abed before looking round."

He turned to find his landlord approaching from the direction of the hotel barroom. And for the time it seemed that the wind of their luck must have veered to a favoring quarter; for the question was barely uttered before the landlord lifted a willing voice and hailed a fellow townsman idling nearby.

"Hey, Jake—come here!"

Introduced as Mr. Breed, Jake pleaded guilty to ownership of the fastest and stanchest power-cruiser in the adjacent waters, which he was avaciously keen to charter.

They observed haste religiously; within ten minutes they stood upon a float at the foot of a flight of wooden steps down the side of the town wharf, while the promised rowboat of Mr. Breed drew in, at most leisurely pace, to meet them.

Aboard and away from the wharf, the burden of Alan's solitude seemed to grow lighter with every squeal of the groansome oarlocks, with every dip and splash of the blades which, welded by a crew of villainous countenance, brought them nearer the handsome motorboat which Mr. Breed designated as his own. It was not until Alan looked up suddenly to find Mr. Breed covering him with a revolver of most vicious character that he had the least apprehension of any danger nearer than the offing, where Judith's schooner might be lurking, waiting for its prey to come out and be devoured.

"I'll take that money-belt of yours, young feller," Mr. Breed announced, "and be quick about it—not forgetting what's in your trousers pocket!"

In the passion of his indignation Alan neglected entirely to play the game by the rules. The indifference he displayed toward the weapon was positively unprofessional—for he knocked it aside as if it had been nothing more dangerous than a straw.

And in the same flutter of an eyelash he launched himself like a wildcat at the throat of Mr. Breed.

Before that one knew what was happening, he had gone over the stern and had involuntarily disarmed himself as well.

The other two men made a sad business of attempting to overpower Mr. Barcus. In less than a minute they were both overboard.

"And just for this," Alan said before getting out of earshot—"I'm going to treat my party to a joy-ride in your pretty powerboat."

He concluded this speech abruptly as Barcus brought them up under the quarter of the power cruiser.

Within two minutes the motor was spinning contentedly, the mooring had been slipped, and the motorboat was heading out of the harbor.

Within five minutes she had left it well astern and was shooting rapidly westward, making nothing of the buffets of a very tolerable sea kicked up by the freshening southwesterly wind.

"My friend," observed Alan, "as our acquaintance ripens I am more and more impressed that neither of us was born to die a natural death."

But soon, disarmed, his case was desperate—and there were two already safe upon the dock and others ready scrambling up to reinforce them.

Wildly he cast about for some substitute weapon, he leaped toward a small pyramid of little but heavy kegs, and seizing one, swung it overhead and cast it full force into the midriff of his nearest enemy; so that this one doubled up convulsively, with a sickish grunt, and vanished in turn over the end of the wharf.

His fellow followed with less injury. But Alan had no time to wonder whether the man had tripped and thrown himself; his effort to escape a second hurtling keg, or had turned coward and fled. It was enough that he had returned, precipitately and heavily, to the schooner.

The keg, meeting with no resistance, pursued him even to the deck, where the force of its impact split its seams.

None of the combatants, however, Alan least of all, noticed that the powder that filtered out was black and coarse. Alan, indeed, had only the haziest notion that they were powder-kegs he used as ammunition. That they were heavy and hurt when they collided with human flesh and bone was all that interested him.

In the same breath he heard a friendly voice shout warning far up the dock, and knew that Barcus was coming to his aid.

A glance over-shoulder, too, discovered the cause of the warning; two men who had thus far escaped his attentions were maneuvering to fall upon him from behind. The bound required to evade them brought him face to face with Judith as she landed on the dock.

"Oh," she cried; "I hate you, I hate you—"

"So you've said, my dear, but—"

His final words were not audible even to himself. In his confidence (now that Barcus was taking care of the others) and his impatience with the woman, and in his perhaps unworthy wish to demonstrate conclusively how cheap he held her, Alan had tossed the pistol over the end of the wharf.

It was an old-fashioned weapon, and the force with which it struck the deck released the hammer.

Instantly the .44 cartridge blazed into the open head of a broken powder keg.

And with a roar like the tramp of doom and a mighty gust of flame and smoke the decks of the schooner were riven and shattered; her masts tottered and fell . . .

CHAPTER XXI.

Anticlimax.

Alan came to himself supported by Barcus—his senses still reeling from the concussion of that thunderbolt which he had so unwittingly loosed—the cloud of sulphurous smoke and yet dissipated by the wind.

Judith lay at his feet, stunned; and round about other figures of men insensible, if not, for all he could say, dead.

And then Barcus was hustling him unceremoniously down the wharf.

"Come! Come!" he rallied Alan. "Pull yourself together and keep a stiff upper lip. Rose is waiting in the car, and if you don't want to be arrested you'll stir your stumps, my son! That explosion is going to bring the worthy burghers of New Bedford buzzing round our ears like a swarm of hornets!"

His prediction was justified even before it was made; already the nearby dwellings were vomiting half-clothed humanity; already a score of people were galloping down toward the head of the wharf; and in their number a policeman appeared as if by magic.

And while the man hesitated Alan grabbed him by the shoulder, threw him bodily from the car, dropped into his seat, cried a warning to Rose, and threw in the clutch. The machine responded without a jar; they were a hundred feet distant from the scene of the accident before Alan was fairly settled in his place.

As he grew more and more calm, he congratulated himself on having drawn an excellent card in the lottery of chance. It was light, but the motor ran famously, and if not capable of a racing pace it would serve his ends as speedily as was consistent with reasonable care for the life of the woman he loved.

Yet his congratulations were premature; they were not ten minutes out of the environs of the city when Rose left her seat and knelt behind him, to communicate the intelligence that they were already being pursued.

A heavy touring car, she said it was, driven by a man, a woman in the seat by his side—Judith the latter, the man an old employe of her father's by the name of Marrophat.

Marrophat!

Alan remembered that one. He could only trust in his skill as a driver, and skill is the lesser factor in such a race.

They could overtake the fugitives practically when they would.

But for some weird, incomprehensible reason they chose to hang a certain distance in the rear, a distance that could readily be bridged by two minutes of furious driving.

Why?

In the succeeding quarter-hour the calmness of fatalism became Alan's. They were biding their time for some secret and fatal purpose. The blow was predestined to fall, but cruelly deferred.

For his own part, he drove like an exceptionally cunning madman.

And then, quite clearly, he realized the time and the place and seats by a member of the entertainment committee of the club the doxology was sung and a blessing was asked by Rev. James A. Smith, rector of St. Paul's Church. After the blessing the banqueters took their seats and from then on until the singing of "Home Sweet Home" there was not a dull moment the entire evening.

After the dinner A. McRowland, the president of the club, made a few remarks in which he announced the program of the club for the coming winter. He then turned the rest of the program over to the toastmaster, C. R. Pitcher. Mr. Pitcher proved an admirable toastmaster. Several toasts were given by various members of the entertainment committee when called on by the toastmaster. These included toasts to the ministers, to the women; to the club; to the press; to the American flag and peace flags; to the music. These were given by Dr. W. I. Stearns, John C. Morrow, W. J. Anderson, M. B. Dutcher and Walter R. Darby. After the toasts Mr. Pitcher introduced the speaker of the evening, Anthony Flala, an explorer of some note and who was with Col. Roosevelt when he made his famous trip to South America and passed down the River of Doubt. Mr. Flala gave an interesting talk, telling of his experiences in the Spanish-American war; his trip with Col. Roosevelt and to the regions of the North. Mr. Flala had a fund of wit and humor and kept his hearers in boisterous laughter a good part of the time he was talking. At the close of his address he was given a rising vote of thanks. On Friday evening, November 20, Mr. Flala will give a lecture in the Playhouse under the auspices of the club. His subject will be, "With Col. Roosevelt in South America." The lecture will be illustrated with stereopticon and motion pictures.

After Mr. Flala's address Dr. W. I. Stearns, pastor of the church, made a short address which was full of good points and truths. This was followed by the singing of "Home Sweet Home" and the banqueters then separated for their homes, expressing themselves as having had a most enjoyable evening with the Men's Club of the Presbyterian Church.

During the banquet many popular songs were sung to the music furnished by the church orchestra. Altogether it was a great night for the Men's Club and was considered by those who attended as one of the best ever given by this popular organization.

The committee who made the arrangements for the banquet were C. S. Warner, W. J. Anderson, W. L. Bunnell, A. B. Hutchinson, W. R. Lynde, J. C. Morrow and E. W. Witke.

GOOD NEWS.

Many Westfield Readers Have Heard It and Profited Thereby.

"Good news travels fast," and the thousands of bad back sufferers in Westfield are glad to learn where relief may be found. Many a lame, weak and aching back is bad no more, thanks to Doan's Kidney Pills. Our citizens are telling the good news of their experience with this tested remedy. Here is an example worth reading:

Miss Kate Brady, 543 Downer St., Westfield, N. J., says: "Backaches and headaches troubled me for a long time and there seemed to be no relief for me. Whenever I caught the least cold, it settled on my kidneys and at these times, the kidney secretions were a source of annoyance. When I stooped, I felt dizzy and there was a blurring before my eyes. I learned of Doan's Kidney Pills through reading of them and I began their use. My back was soon strengthened and the pains were removed, together with the other symptoms of kidney complaint. I have not had backache or kidney trouble since. I gladly confirm my former public endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills."

Price 50 cents, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Miss Brady had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

If any, to the work done and materials used and in the following improvements, to wit:

1. Improving Kimball Avenue, from Euclid Avenue, to Harrison Avenue, under the provisions of Special Ordinance No. 380, passed and adopted July 26th, 1914.

THE TREY O'HEARTS.

character of the road that lay before him, as the car sped like a dragon-fly down a slight grade.

From the bottom of the grade it swung away in a wide, graceful curve, bordered for some distance by railroad tracks on a slightly lower level.

He had guessed the fateful plan of the other driver only too truly.

As they approached at express speed the stretch where the road paralleled the tracks Alan sought to hug the left-hand side of the road, but in vain.

Roaring, with its muffler cut out, the pursuing car swept up and baffled him, bringing its right forward wheel up beside the left rear wheel of his car, then more slowly forging up until, with its weight, bulk and superior power, it forced him inch by inch to the right, toward the tracks, until his right-hand wheels left the road and ran on uneven turf, until the left-hand wheels as well lost grip on the road metal, until the car began to dip on the slope to the tracks.

He heard the far hoot-toot of a freight locomotive.

There followed a maniac moment, when the world was upside down. Alan's car slipped and skidded, swung sideways with frightful momentum toward the railroad tracks, caught its wheels against the ties, and . . .

The sun swung in the heavens like a ball on a string. There was a crash, a roar . . . There was nothing—oblivion . . .

The car had turned turtle, pinning Rose and Alan beneath it.

"Alan!"

Robert E. Perry.

Robert E. Perry, the candidate on the Republican ticket in the first ward for councilman to succeed himself, is well known among the older residents of the town. He is a loyal Republican. He is unopposed in his ward and it is expected that he will poll a large vote. Mr. Perry is the chairman of the town property and street lighting committee of the council.

STATE FINANCES.

The Democratic platform of 1911 called attention to the free balance of $2,500,000 in the State Treasury. Today the leaders of that same party, after two years of control of the State finances, are admonishing their legislators that the Treasury is empty and a State tax imminent, and at the last session of the Legislature made an effort to divert the school funds from the school districts to the general expenses of the State. To prove these statements only a consideration of the Democratic platform and the record of the Legislature is necessary. While talking economy and efficiency, they increased State expenses and defeated the recommendations of the Economy and Efficiency Commission when they came before the House of Assembly. How inconsistent have been the practices of the party since it has come into power!

THE TARIFF.

"Made in America" is a new way of expressing the Republican doctrine of prosperity. If we use foreign-made goods we have the goods and they have the money; if we use American-made goods we have the goods and the money, too. Prince Bismarck endorsed the protective tariff policy of the Republican party with the following statement: "The success of the United States in material development is the most illustrious of modern times. It is my deliberate judgment that the prosperity of America is due mainly to the system of protective laws." "The safety and interest of the people require that they should promote such manufactures as tend to render them independent of others."—George Washington. It is true, as Peter Cooper said; "No goods purchased abroad are cheap that take the place of our own labor and our own raw material."

and ward was born in Brooklyn but has lived in the Second ward for the past forty years. He has been a Republican all his life. He finished his education in the German and English Academy, in Milwaukee, Wis. He was formerly a traveling salesman for a wholesale women house in New York but is now in business for himself in erecting his patent porch screens. He has traveled through the east extensively. He is conversant with the needs of the town and if elected will serve his constituents in the ward and the town to the best of his ability.

William R. Davis.

William R. Davis, the Republican candidate for councilman in the third ward to succeed himself, has been a member of the council for the past two years and has made a very efficient member of the council. For the past year he has been chairman of the finance committee. He is a lawyer with a practice in New York. He is a member of the Westfield Golf Club and is interested in all things pertaining to the betterment and advancement of the town.

George F. Brown.

George F. Brown, the Republican candidate for councilman in the Fourth ward, has been a resident of the ward for the past ten years. He is a property owner and a taxpayer. Mr. Brown is a business man holding a responsible position with one of the largest rubber companies in the United States. He is a Past Regent of

The World's Greatest Improvement in Underwear

It is practically a double garment—consisting of two light weight fabrics—an inner lining of soft cotton—an outer covering of warm wool—strongly held together by stitches wide enough apart to leave an air space between the two fabrics.

The wool absorbs the moisture of the body, keeps the cold out and the natural heat in—but it does not touch the skin. The air space ventilates the garment and keeps it fresh and dry.

Duofold has all the warmth of an all-wool garment without any of its irritating "scratchiness"—all the softness of a cotton garment without any of its sticky "chilliness."

Ready today in all sizes and several different grades.
